

GERMANY COULD HAVE WON WORLD WAR, SAYS MARSHAL FOCH

Weakening of Right Wing Proved Teutons' Undoing; Battle Plans Well Laid But Poorly Executed

BERLIN Aug. 28. — How Germany could have won the world war has been revealed to her by a host who defeated her, Marshal Foch, commander-in-chief of the Allied armies during the latter part of the war.

This revelation is made in an interview printed in the newspaper "Nouvelles Presse," at Vienna, in which Marshal Foch is quoted as follows:

"You ask me whether Germany could have won the war. I would admit that I did not expect this question, but I will answer it frankly."

"He thought for a moment and then continued:

"I say yes. This statement is the former commander-in-chief of the Allied troops will be doubtless a surprise to you.

"The German could have won the war, not only at the beginning but even as late as the spring of 1918. It could have won the war if its offensive plans had been carried through in a better fashion.

Plans Failed

"Then today I cannot understand how Germany, after long preparations for the war, could so completely fail in the execution of its offensive plans. I believe it was wholly incompetent to do so, how it was possible that the German general staff so completely neglected its right wing. I know that General Schlieffen who planned the invasion into France through Belgium had always insisted a decisive strike in the right wing was to be carried out by the German army and was to be supported by the German navy at sea.

"The right wing which carried out the invasion from Belgium was the Northern Prussian front. It was the only constant reinforcement and even on his death had General Schlieffen insisted always provided that the right wing was strong enough.

"The supreme army command, in contrast, committed the enormous, irreparable mistake of weakening the right wing considerably at the decisive moment in favor of the left wing in Alsace-Lorraine and also directed several divisions to the Russian front in East Prussia where the battle between Hindenburg and Brusilov had already been won for Germany. The right wing was therefore too weak to spread out to the sea. As it did not receive sufficient reinforcements it was driven back.

Failed at Ypres

"This was the fate of the Elend Masses where they had almost reached Paris. Several months later the German tried to repeat their mistake and occupied the coast. But they were defeated at Ypres. This defeat was the direct consequence of their original mistake. The right wing was too weak."

"To the question as to whether the German retreat in the first battle of the Marne had not been unnecessary and then had not been too late, Marshal Foch replied:

"It was both unnecessary and late. The German army before Paris was in a precarious position on account of the mistake previously mentioned. We had driven back to right wing as a result of which a considerable hole had been formed in the front between the first army of Kluck and the second army of Baulow. On the other hand, the Germans could have maintained their position instead of retreating precipitately. The war was only a prolongation of the death agony.

"That's all true," Marshal Foch replied, "and yet I believe that a people which does not want to be defeated cannot be defeated. In November, 1918, of course, Germany had no prospects of victory. But if no army had held behind the Rhine many things would have taken a different turn.

"I speak naturally always from a military point of view. I know, of course, that Germany was devoted by her allies, cut off from the rest of the world and did not possess sufficient food to hold out any longer, and that the exhausted German people cried loudly for an immediate cessation of the war. We must have things at that. Such a retrospective over the events of the past is of little use, however interesting as it may be. It is the old military question: What would happen if—?"

NEWS AND DOINGS IN CISCO TRADE TERRITORY

HARPERSVILLE

Another good rain fell last Thursday night doing much good to growing fruit and the pasture.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lambert, of Fort Worth, are visiting the week with Mr. and Mrs. N. M. White, side parents of Mrs. Lambert.

Miss Curry was the creator of quite an excitement in our community last night, for she was out on the street at night last week, leaving her car with the harness on it mounted on the saddle horse and told his wife he would be back in a short time as he was going out to the pasture to see about some cows. The cows were seen after and Bruno started home. In getting a gate his master broke away and left his master alone. It took Bruno until it was dark that night to catch his horse. During the time Mrs. Curry and her neighbors to look for the missing horse. We were all excited and tried to get Bruno a hearty welcome when he came riding in.

We have a strange story that is working on the section. A person who had been the job had been sent out in our field and was supposed to be a bull dog.

John Brown of Texas is visiting at the H. L. Brown home.

One Brown and Elmer Dean Brown came home last Friday from Lubbock where they had been at school.

TEXAS COTTON CROP PUT AT 5,025,208 BALES

AUSTIN, Aug. 28. — Texas probably will produce 5,025,208 bales of cotton this year, according to the estimate of the state department of commerce reported by Commissioner George B. Truell as of August 18. The average was placed at 50 percent and the maximum at 60 percent. The estimated harvest was an increase of 700,000 bales over 1921.

EASTLAND CO. PIONEER, W. J. FRANKLIN, DEAD

NECESSITY, August 28. — W. J. Harrington, 74, pioneer Eastland county citizen, died at his home near Frankell Sunday morning. Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock at Necessity. Burial was in the Necessity cemetery. Harrington was a retired farmer and was well known in Eastland and Stephens counties. He had made his home near Frankell for a number of years. He is survived by three sons, K. F. Harrington, Roy Harrington and Fred Harrington.

GEORGE WALKER, EASTLAND OIL MAN, DIES SUDDENLY

EASTLAND, Aug. 28. — George Cary Walker, 56 years of age, died suddenly about midnight Friday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. Woods. Funeral services were conducted Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Baptist church by Rev. W. T. Turner, pastor.

Mr. Walker was an oil field operator and had made his home in Eastland for some time. He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. J. Woods of Eastland and Mrs. Rona Edgewood of Lockhart; by one son, Edward Walker of Eastland; by one brother, J. P. Walker of Lockney, and by four sisters, Mrs. Lila Hall of Temple, Mrs. G. G. Knight of Dallas, Mrs. W. A. Ross of Dallas and Miss Blanche Walker, a missionary in China.

RANGER HEADQUARTERS CHANGE UNCONFIRMED

AUSTIN, Aug. 28. — A report that headquarters of State Ranger Capt. W. W. Sterling and his company will be transferred from Miranda City to Palfurrias could not be confirmed here Monday in the absence of Governor Moody and Adj. Gen. R. L. Robertson, who are at the Texarkana American Legion convention. Robertson's department said the change had been contemplated for some time because Palfurrias is more suitably located for quick access to the Rio Grande valley region.

W. W. REEVES, 77, DIES AT HOME OF SON IN RANGER

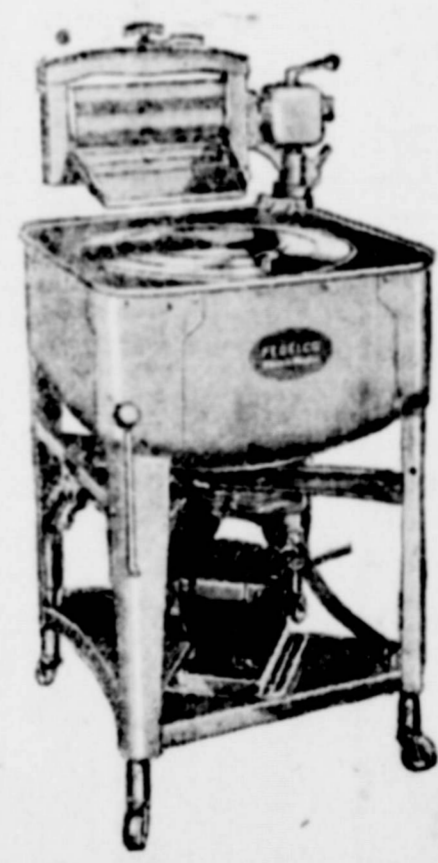

RANGER, Aug. 28. — W. W. Reeves, 77, died at the home of his son, W. T. Reeves, Monday afternoon after an illness that extended a period of three months.

The aged man was brought to Ranger about three months ago. His home was in Missouri. Funeral services were held Tuesday morning, Rev. H. Johnson, pastor of the First Christian church, officiating. The vice was in charge of the I. O. O. F. of which he was a member. He is survived by six sons, one daughter, as follows: W. J. Reeves, Chickasha, Okla.; Lee Reeves, Duncan, Okla.; Leonard Reeves, Lowrance, Okla.; W. T. Reeves, Okla.; Russell Reeves, St. Louis, Mo.; and Mrs. S. S. Smith of Okla.

KLEIMAN'S

PROHIBITION DOMINANT ISSUE IN PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN

With Thousands Bolting Party Lines Smith Hopes to Stampede Normal G. O. P. States for Him

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—The Democratic candidate, or the Republican, may win the presidency in the United States on November 5, but the issue that will determine the result is a question that knows no party lines.

Both nominees make promises on both issues—some of them nationally partisan—their statements on the dry question are held likely by political observers to become the determining factor in the campaign.

The matter is not calculated to help the nation's fight in the long run, chief battleground of the campaign. If Governor Smith's utterances can win him a large part of it from Herbert Hoover and the Republicans, he has a better chance for election than any Democrat since Wilson.

High Moral Pledge. Both candidates know this. Each in campaign speech sought to give the view of the question on a high moral plane. Both opponents would enforce the dry laws, as supposed that others holding such views were entitled to their own. These statements may give the bulk of party registration with their candidates, but they may not.

The "Smart Alecks" who drink and a few others who don't, plan because it would let the dry states be dry and the wet states be wet, with the proposed interstate commerce law to stop smuggling from wet to dry states. They believe legalized sale would not only reduce "smart aleck" drinking among youths, but also that new goes to bootleggers. Agreeing with Smith in this view are the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment and some influential eastern newspapers.

Others, however, while applauding the governor's frankness doubt if his plan would work if tried. Assistant Secretary of Treasury Lawton S. Smith said such an experiment would "produce" since "booze" never recognized state lines. Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, however, opposing the eighteenth amendment in each fashion would make each state a "boon broker" and every state line "a Canadian border."

Temptation to Youth. The Anti-Saloon League professes "Hoover" straightforward statement in Smith's. It says Smith's plan would "force drink into the homes, where it would be a constant temptation to young people." In this waking government control of liquor Smith would be obtaining "higher control of government" the league says, adding that the plan would encourage liquor interests to seek repeal of the whole eighteenth amendment and reopen the prohibition matter as a political issue in every state.

Justice Daniel, ex North Carolina politician, who others say that Hoover, now 70, is not likely to enter the absolute limit in the Volstead act, and that it is even less likely to cost a two-thirds vote for amending the eighteenth amendment as Smith suggests. Three-fourths of the states must vote to amend the constitution so that a bare 13 could block the amendment Smith desires.

SMITH BACKER WINS RACE FOR LEGISLATURE

BRECKENRIDGE, Aug. 28.—Bailey W. Hardy, Breckenridge lawyer and former city attorney will represent the 19th legislative district in the lower house of the Texas congress at its next session.

This was the verdict of the voters of Breckenridge and Palo Pinto counties in the runoff primary Saturday in which the Breckenridge man met victory in a closely contested race with W. F. Nelson of Gordon.

According to news from Palo Pinto county the vote complete in that county gave Nelson 1244 votes and 1297 for Hardy. In Stephens county the vote gave Hardy 1823 votes to Nelson's 950.

The total, Hardy 2917, Nelson 2774. The race was especially interesting since Hardy stood for the Democratic ticket from top to bottom while the Gordon citizen stated on stump and street, that he would not vote for Smith for president.

TWO KILLED WHEN AUTO CRASHES INTO POLE. TENARKANA, Aug. 28.—H. S. Campbell, 25, and Mrs. Louise Nelson, both of Texas, were killed when their automobile crashed into a pole Monday morning when the automobile in which they were riding ran into a telephone pole a mile west of town and was demolished. Mrs. Nelson died instantly. Campbell's first in a hospital two hours later.

LOANS DEFINED

Webster defines "loans" as follows: "Anything furnished for temporary use"

When we pay back what we borrow we make progress . . . we build up . . . we acquire.

When we merely pay interest on what we borrow we mark time. We all have a certain unsound feeling about a loan that runs on and on—never getting any smaller.

Obviously a loan is something that should be repaid . . . otherwise its usefulness has been destroyed.

"Two Stores to Serve You"

To Our Customers - -

In the eye of the purchaser, no store is larger than the article he wishes to buy; especially is this true if you do not have the article in stock. You may have thousands of dollars worth of merchandise in your store, yet the customer who wants a strap of soap, for instance, cannot be given real service if you cannot supply a strap of soap.

Only a few days ago one of our foremost customers said, "Look to the Leader for leadership," and to whom should we look for drugs other than the house that is in the drug business—a house that is trying to maintain a first class drug business.

We try to keep a complete stock of merchandise. By doing this we can better serve your interests and it is the proper consideration of your interests that makes a safe and steady growth possible for ourselves.

We are experienced in the drug business and are in a position to anticipate your requirements. We want your business, we have the merchandise and can deliver the goods.
