She is expected to reach Cisco this evening.

Completion of Jury in Case of F. S. Hyden, First of 2 Alleged Bank Raiders, Expected Today

Five jurors had been accepted by both the state and defense in the Carbon bank robbery case at 2 o'clock this afternoon, which went to trial in the 63rd district court at Eastland before Judge Elmer Ben F. S. Hyden, who is indicted for this robbery with E. V. Allen, was the first to go to trial. The special venire of 75 men summoned from which to select the jury had been half consumed when the fifth juror was accepted. The defense is represented by J. L. Corley, of Cisco, who was counsel for the defendants in the Carbon bank raid. He is associated in the defense by an attorney from Oklahoma City, whose name could not be learned. Sheriff Hart stated that the jury would likely be secured before court adjourned this evening.

PUBLIC OFFICIALS.

In no presidential year has there been less unananimity on the part of the general public as to "what is going to happen to the country."

From the standpoint of being investors and drawing interest on stocks, bonds or savings bank accounts, the majority of our citizens are "capitalists," that is, they have money that is earning them money.

Both candidates for president fully realize this fact as do most candidates for other public offices.

Political bushwhacking is less popular than ever because every blow that is given industry is a direct attack upon the life savings of many small investors. The capital for our basic lines of industry no longer comes from a few wealthy men but from millions of men, women and children.

Business in the United States has to be conducted upon such a large scale today that no man or group of men have enough money to conduct it alone as in the past.

For that reason most of our business is owned by the great mass of the people who share in the profits and the losses.

It is for this reason that all government, local and national must be the most stable.

Our public officials who have the law-making and regulating power in their hands are virtually the custodians of the nation's wealth. Just as the executives of an industry are responsible to the stockholders for profits and losses, so are the officials of government responsible for the laws and policies which encourage or discourage industrial stability with resulting profit or loss to the citizens of this nation.

Men qualifying to hold public offices realize this fact today more clearly than ever before and for this reason do not make as many business disturbing proposals as in the past. They appreciate more fully their duty toward all citizens rather than special service to any particular group or class.

THE THOUSAND VETERANS

The Grand Army of the Republic, holding its annual reunion in Denver, indignantly gives the lie to the rumor that this gathering was to be the last. There may be only 1,000 veterans attending this year's convention, instead of the tens of thousands that used to swarm from all the states of the Union. There may be no representation at all of many a famous company, brigade and regiment. But the veterans are going to keep right on gathering for memorial and fellowship as long as any of them are left. It is 63 years since the close of the Civil War. Will our World War veterans be still gathering for reunions after such an interval, long after the last Grand Army man has gone to his eternal rest? And will they be equally honored? Probably they will. But may there be no new and still more numerous series of war veterans ready to take their place as they pass from the scene. Such sacrifices as these commemorate should no longer be necessary.

WINDING UP REPARATIONS.

The effort of Germany to dislodge allied troops from the Rhineland is spreading to a bigger movement. The inquiry into this question opens up the whole problem of German reparation and may lead to remarkable results. Recent news from Paris indicates that there may be an international move to get Germany out of her financial troubles and settle the whole question of inter-allied debts, at one stroke. Then Germany, if the feat were possible, would raise the money by domestic and foreign loans and pay everything off, thus liquidating the entire reparation business. The total would have to be pretty low, compared with the past expectations of France and some other creditors of Germany. But those expectations have steadily waned. War animosities also have softened, there is better appreciation of economic facts, and probably all of the parties concerned would like to get the problem off their minds and make a fresh start with a clean slate, though taking enormous losses. Five years ago, or four, or three, such a solution would have been considered absurd. Now many statesmen are ready to consider it seriously, and public sentiment generally seems in a tolerant mood. The mood is Missourian, but not hostile or vindictive. The world is willing to be shown. The nations have come far in international understanding since 1918.

DRUNKEN DRIVERS.

The vehicle commissioner of New Jersey says drunken automobile drivers in that state have increased 1,800 per cent since the beginning of federal prohibition. He bases the figures on arrests for this offense. The increase is not really so bad as it looks at first glance, because there is another factor. There are far more people driving cars now than there were before the prohibition era. Still, there are not 18 times as many drivers. Drunkenness on the road has been gaining, at least in New Jersey. And drunkenness on the road is so perilous, not only to the persons immediately concerned but to everybody else on the road, that it offers the most serious of all traffic problems. Whatever may be one's attitude toward prohibition, there is growing realization that this evil must be stamped out. Irresponsible persons must not be permitted on the highways in charge of machines having such great potential menace as motor cars. If drivers will not stop drinking, then drinkers must stop driving.

HAY-FEVER FROM FOOD.

The breathing of certain substances, that is their contact with the mucous membrane of the nose and throat, is a well-known cause of hay-fever. That it can also be caused by eating certain foods, that is by their contact with the mucous membrane of the digestive passages, would appear from cases cited by Dr. Charles H. Ebermann, of St. Louis, in The Journal of the American Medical Association.

It is at present generally conceded that the group of nasal symptoms classified as vasomotor rhinitis, perennial hay-fever, non-seasonal hay-fever or atopic coryza may be included in the manifestations of human hypersensitiveness.

As causative agents, these substances which are acquired by inhalation have naturally received first and indeed almost exclusive consideration. Consequently, it has been shown that the inhalation of animal emanation, vegetable powders, dust, and drugs will produce these symptoms in certain susceptible persons. More recent clinical observations and would seem to show that similar nasal symptoms may also be induced by ingestion. This is not surprising since it has been noted that, in sensitization, the site of absorption does not necessarily correspond to the point of reaction. This is seen in the general reaction following the subcutaneous injection of an extract during pollen therapy. Although the portal of entry is a small area in the skin, there may follow nasal symptoms, bronchospasm, or gastro-intestinal symptoms.

Again following the ingestion of foods or drugs there may be the asthmatic manifestations of the pulmonary manifestation of bronchial asthma. In the light of the foregoing it is not unreasonable to anticipate that in the hypersensitive person the ingestion of food may produce nasal symptoms.

That ingestion may be followed by nasal symptoms has been noted clinically. Haines, in studying the vasomotor rhinitis, found that, of three-hundred patients reacting positively to a sensitization test, eleven reacted to foods alone, one to foods and bacteria and one to foods and animal emanations.

Some of the foods that produced these reactions were milk, eggs, cereals, fish, chicken, nuts, mustard, and chocolate. It followed in some persons by nasal symptoms. He also mentioned one case of chronic coryza which was due to the ingestion of chocolate, although the skin test was persistently negative. Vaughan states that he had a series of cases in which sneezing followed the ingestion of food to which the patient was sensitive. He mentioned two instances of vasomotor rhinitis due to the eating of corn. He also records two instances of definite ragweed pollenosis, completely relieved by avoiding certain foods.

Among the food substances quoted as bringing on hay-fever attacks are berries, chocolate, beans, peanuts, pork, Indian corn, potatoes, cantaloupes, tomatoes, and eggs. In every case avoidance of the irritating food stopped the hay-fever.

PAROLED TEXAS CONVICT DIES OF GUN WOUNDS

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 24.—James Smith of Austin, Texas, who was shot by a detective while in the back of the crowd attracted by the visit of Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York here last Thursday, died at a hospital here late Saturday night. The detective was called to a hotel where the manager said Smith was tampering with some baggage. Smith fired at the detective, Charles Egan, who then shot him. The dead man was sentenced for robbery in Houston several years ago, but later was pardoned by Governor Miriam A. Ferguson.

Copyright 1927, Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc. POWDER MY BACK, starring Irene Rich, is a Warner Bros. picture.

ADOLE, famous musical comedy star playing in "Powder My Back," has had numerous photographs made of titled men powdering her back, to be used for publicity purposes. One of these photographs appears in her home town in Brooklyn, Iowa. Marie, her married sister, with whom she is not corresponded for years, sees a photograph and is sorely pained. She writes to Adele, begging her to visit Brooklyn, saying that the picture is leading "poisonous" life and that she needs the purifying country air. The station amuses Adele, and she writes: "On the way to Brooklyn—"

CHAPTER V—Continued. Here and there on the horizon, near the roadway appeared a litany house, surrounded by huge trees and cow-yards. Blinds were drawn to protect the occupants of the houses from the intense warmth. Dogs, lured by the hot sun, lounged in the shade of bare arches, their tongues hanging listlessly. Children stuck their heads around doorways to wave to the passing train, and then return whatever coolness there was to them.

Sometimes the train paralleled the dusty roadway, and an occasional truck or small car whizzed alongside for a few moments and then passed on or fell behind. Little clouds of smoke whirled up and then settled down again on the dark green of dark foliage, blowing in spite of all hindrance.

ADOLE, however, looked the person along the roadside. Tall, long-looking growths of weeds, with a sort of blue cornflower springing out on the hairy stem, lent color to the landscape to the scenery. In the last coach, because it was furthest from the engine, and, therefore, the smoke and sifting leaders sat Adele Bayton, now on her last lap of her journey homeward. The car was oppressively hot, and the red plush seats, full of dust that rose and fell each time the occupant moved, lent no air of coolness to the car. The aisle was cluttered with bits of paper and peanut shells, and the odor of bananas hung heavy over all. At the actress stared out the window, lazily watching the scenery slip by and trying to pay as little attention as possible to her surroundings.

The few travelers on the train stared openly at this unusual looking person, taking in the carefully powdered black-satin travelling outfit, the tight black hat with the nose-length veil that half concealed the eyes of the woman. All around Adele were piled her suitcases, her boxes, her overnight bag, and most of them stuck over with foreign labels and stamps. The marmoset, Jounou, perched on her arm and gazed wearily about as though tired of this unceasing rattle. He did not even chatter, or demand food, but stared quietly in the most convenient spot he could find. Down the car two children began to scream lustily, each adding and abetting the other. The mother traveling with them, a tired-looking woman with a rasping voice, tried to keep them quiet, but the children refused to be hushed. They were hot and tired, and didn't want to look at any more pictures; neither would they be consoled by bananas. Adele looked pitifully at the woman, but she felt that if the children were not soon hushed she would have to scream herself. It was all getting a bit on her nerves—the entire trip, and now she almost regretted making it. Two girls across the aisle kept

RECORD CROWDS AT UNION SERVICES SUNDAY

Two Gripping Messages from Dr. Hogg; Family Altars to Be Established in 135 Homes

With record crowds in attendance despite the cooler weather and the open tabernacle, the final week of the Hogg union evangelistic campaign was inaugurated yesterday with two great services exceeding in inspiration and gripping effectiveness any services of the campaign. Sunday afternoon the tabernacle was practically filled, the largest Sunday afternoon attendance of the series, to hear Dr. Hogg's great inspirational sermon on "The Christian Home," a message that swept his hearers along with him from start to finish and stirred every finer emotion. Churches of the city sat in special delegations with a large representation of the membership from each church present.

Dr. Hogg emphasized in his sermon the importance of the family home and the church home and closed his message with a stirring appeal for a return to the old-fashioned altar. In response to his brief invitation in this connection 75 came forward in a public covenant to establish a family altar in their homes. These were in addition to some 60 others which had come at a preceding service which makes a total of family altars erected as a result of the tabernacle services of around 135. Scores of others lifted their hands yesterday afternoon as already having family altars in their homes.

With the tabernacle packed last night and following a most appropriate and spiritually impressive song service by the big choir Dr. Hogg brought the most gripping message of the series speaking on "The Crucifixion of Jesus Christ." The message was free from any maudlin sentiment, but was delivered in a quiet, impressive manner which gripped the audience spellbound from the first word to the last. The evangelist with true dramatic instinct pictured the stirring and special scenes of the arrest and trial of Jesus before Pontius Pilate, pausing in his running study to deliver telling applications of modern life and his heart gripping picture of the condemned Barabbas awaiting crucifixion followed by his thrilling question of the emotion which had gripped Barabbas when he learned of his release reached a height of dramatic effectiveness worthy of the most talented emotional actor and served to lead up most effectively to the climax of the message which pictured Barabbas at the foot of the cross which had held the body of his Savior. The message was abruptly closed at this point and Dr. Hogg had left the tabernacle and the choir was softly singing "There is a Fountain Filled With Blood" before the audience realized that the service was over and so effective and so different was the impressive climax that the audience did not stir in its seats until Chorister Rodgers broke the spell of the moment with the announcement that the service was dismissed. No invitation of any kind was given.

Large groups of out-of-town visitors were present as usual in both the afternoon and night services. Churches of the city report largely attended and effective morning worship services yesterday with some 75 additions estimated to have been made to the churches at that hour. At both services yesterday special emphasis was placed on clearing up the balance of the financial budget covering the expense of the campaign and the revival workers with the exception of Dr. Hogg. At the afternoon service Chorister Rodgers took the special offering and at night Rev. P. T. Stanford represented the local committee in clearing up the balance. Announcement was made at this morning's service that the balance was now card for and no further collections will be taken for this purpose. Dr. Hogg will be remunerated for his services with a free-will love offering to be taken at the close of the campaign.

Dr. Hogg spoke to a large crowd this morning all stores being closed for the service and tonight he is to speak on "Five Kinds of Hearts."

PITHY PARAGRAPHS FROM HOGG

The most horrible thing I can conceive of this side of hell is dying without a Savior. I do pray to God that when you come down to the valley you will have somebody to hold your hand. No one is prepared to meet God who has not professed faith in Him. I have seen people move the old cook stove and leave their church letter back home. When you come to die the last thing you are going to think of

HOGG REVIVAL PROGRAM FINAL WEEK

Tonight 7:30 p. m.—Tabernacle service. Dr. Hogg's subject: "Five Kinds of Hearts." 10 a. m.—Regular morning service. Sermon subject: "The Parting of the Ways." 7:30 p. m.—Tabernacle service. Sermon subject: "The Gamble With Death." Wednesday 10 a. m.—Sermon subject: "The Christian's Source of Supply." 4 p. m.—Women's prayer services in sections throughout the city. 7:30 p. m.—Sermon subject: "The Invitation of Jesus." Thursday 10 a. m.—Sermon subject: "Paul's Goodbye to the World." 7:30 p. m.—Sermon subject: "The Unpardonable Sin." Friday 10 a. m.—Sermon subject: "Message to Young Converts." 4 p. m.—Ladies' sectional prayer meetings. 7:30 p. m.—Sermon subject: "Paul Before Felix." Saturday No day services. 7:30 p. m.—Sermon subject: "The Great Salvation." Sunday—Closing Day 11 a. m.—Union tabernacle service. Sermon subject: "Heaven." 2 p. m.—Mass meeting at tabernacle. Subject: "Appreciation." 7:30 p. m.—Closing service. Subject: "Tomorrow."

Some 75 responded to Dr. Hogg's invitation to set up family altars in their homes at the close of his message on "The Christian Home." Sixty had previously responded to a similar proposition which brings the total of family altars established in the campaign to in excess of 125.

The financial budget of the campaign was read to the audience yesterday afternoon by Chorister Rodgers. The total expense of the campaign was $2,180.95 which covered all campaign expense including the compensation of Dr. Hogg's helpers, Messrs. Williams, Rodgers and Tredway together with their expenses and entertainment, the expense of the tabernacle, advertising, janitor and all incidental expense. Mr. Rodgers took a special offering yesterday afternoon and Rev. P. T. Stanford last night to clear off the small remaining deficit of $150.00 and E. J. Poe, campaign treasurer, this morning reported practically all funds in hand. Mr. Rodgers yesterday stated that as soon as the small balance was cleared off the tin pans which have served as collecting instruments will be hung up and no further offerings taken until the close of the campaign when Dr. Hogg's free-will offering, which will be his only remuneration for his services here, will be taken.

Rayley Tredway, the accomplished accompanist and chorister who has been an efficient factor in the success of the campaign at 4 o'clock in two sections as follows: District No. 3, Mrs. E. J. really not worthy of the name. Modern looms are producing shades, pressed and brocaded velvets that shine in all colors of the rainbow. Others show moiré-of-pearl tones in their lustreless down of a glossy, felt texture because the velvet pile is made of that newest of textile fabrics, artificial silk. Madame Gerliour is showing a delicious looking velvet that makes one think of the freshest-moss-green branch in tanned, rose-tinted and delicate green tint of new leaves beneath.

A lovely truck of black chiffon velvets that pushes up into a handsome has an elliptical design in pale-green and is made with a full skirt, a bit shorter in front, a full bodice with bands of pale-green georgette at the neck and wrists and forming an interesting little drape at one side of the front held by two round pale-green buttons.

Women's sectional prayer services are announced for Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock as follows: District 1—Mrs. I. W. Lawrence, 406 First St., hostess; Mrs. Robert Maple, leader. District 2—Mrs. M. W. Brennan, 402 W. 17th street, hostess; Mrs. H. I. Kunkle, leader. District 3—Mrs. P. P. Berter, hostess; leader not announced. District 4—Mrs. H. F. Poe, 907 W. 6th St., hostess; Mrs. J. B. Farmer, leader. District 5—Mrs. W. W. Moore, 612 W. 10th St., hostess; Mrs. C. H. West, leader. District 6—Mrs. P. P. Yarrow, 302 West 2nd St., hostess; Mrs. Kunkle, leader. District 7—Mrs. H. H. Davis, 1491 N. Ave., hostess; Mrs. H. H. Ashbury, leader.

Professor Thomas Bond of the University of California, Berkeley, featured the effective service last night with a beautiful rendition of the wonderful favorite "The Old Rugged Cross" the choir and congregation joined him in the chorus. The number was a most effective introduction to the message of last night on "The Crucifixion."

Both the truer and bass voices of the big choir won the hearty applause of the crowd last night with their splendid rendition of solo parts in two big choral numbers. The song "Wonderful Cross" in which the bass soloists carried the melody in the responsive chorus is a treat for everybody with the crowd with "The Old Rugged Cross" in which the bass section is featured.

POSTAL DEPARTMENT PLANS FIVE NEW AIR MAIL ROUTES

Three of Proposed Lines Would Run Through Texas; 16,975 Miles Now Served or Under Contract

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—The postal department is extending its tentacles like a young octopus. Encouraged by practically a redoubled use, resulting from the recent cut in postage rates, the postal department has tentative plans for five new routes, in addition to the 16,975 miles now in operation or under contract to start soon.

Routes for which considerable agitation has been made, and which the department will definitely decide on within the next few weeks, are:

Louisville, Nashville, Little Rock, Memphis, Texarkana, Dallas and Fort Worth, with a spur from St. Louis to Memphis.

Birmingham, Ala., to Shreveport, Dallas and Fort Worth.

Pittsburgh, Washington to Baltimore.

Routes contemplated tentatively to be new summer ones:

Los Angeles, St. Paul, San Antonio, Fort Worth and Dallas, with a spur from San Antonio to New Orleans. This would complete a route from Jacksonville to Birmingham, to the east.

Chicago, St. Louis, Memphis, Jacksonville and New Orleans.

On Oct. 1, the proposed New York-Montreal and London-Montreal City lines are expected to start. San Antonio to Laredo will furnish a connection with part of the United States for 25,000 miles.

On or about Nov. 1 the department expects the service will start from Evansville, Ind., to St. Louis, and shortly thereafter the service from Evansville, Nashville, Chattanooga and Atlanta.

About Dec. 1 the Atlanta-Jacksonville-Miami route is expected to start, furnishing one through line from New York to New Orleans, and one from Chicago to Miami and Cuba, which will connect at Atlanta. The route from New Orleans through to San Antonio by way of Houston is also expected to start soon.

On Dec. 1 the department expects the start of mail flying on the Texas-Memphis route.

EAST TEXAS FAIR TOTAL ATTENDANCE IS 110,000

MARSHALL, Sept. 24.—The total attendance during the five days of the Central East Texas fair which closed the most successful exhibition here Saturday night was 110,000. Bryan Baker, fair secretary, announced after the final checkup. This was far the largest attendance in the five years of the fair association. Baker said exceeding last year's attendance by over 10,000. The largest attendance was on Friday day, when over 40,000 people passed through the gates.

Game Long to Be Remembered by Buckaroos When They Defeated Eagles, Favorites, 3-0 in 1925

(By BOYCE HOUSE.)
When a team that is not even conceded an "outside chance" arises in its might and defeats an eleven that is picked in advance to win by a top-heavy score, not only does the team that achieves such a victory gain glory for itself and its school but it contributes a sparkling chapter to the annals of the sport that serves as an inspiration for ever after to teams that enter a game as "under dogs."

Never in the history of Oil Belt football has there been so stirring an upset as the Buckaroos-Aldermen game of 1925.

The Buckaroos entered the season by losing to Ed T. Cox and the Fordland Mavericks 27 to 2. Then they went down before the Coach Lobes and the Banner Bulldogs.

In the meantime the Aldermen Eagles were conducting all prospects and were being hailed as many as destined to bring back the laurels that Cox had taken the year before by defeating Aldermen 2 to 2.

The district race seemed to finish. Cox and Aldermen had not scheduled a game, but if each team remained undefeated, the game would have to be arranged and the winner would be the district champion.

Just one game remained in Aldermen's schedule—and then came a chance at Cox. That one remaining game was a truly momentous affair—the prospect was to be provided by Buckaroos, the designated. This writer did not see the game. He had a "hunch" that morning and started from a point far out in West Texas, but modern mail and delayed buses enabled

Causeway to Connect New Deep Water Harbor at Port Aransas with Mainland Six Miles Away

PORT ARANSAS, Sept. 24.—A causeway six miles long for truck and automobile traffic, joining the new deep water harbor with the mainland will be constructed and ready for use by next spring, according to Major W. H. Swan, representative of the group of Kansas City capitalists who recently acquired the Ocean Beach Drive.

The new causeway will be superimposed on the tracks of the Aransas Harbor Terminal railway which extends from Aransas Point Harbor Island at which latter point the Humble Pipe Line Co. recently completed its oil loading terminals. It is here also that the Menclith cement plant is to build a $2,500,000 plant.

The conversion of the railroad into a causeway will involve planning of the present tracks and widening and paving of the marine fills. The line is approximately half fill and half trestle. Trestles are to be provided with sturdy railings similar to those on the state highway bridges and the roadway will be wide enough to use its full at any point.

Both bridges and fills are to be

PRODUCTION OF 'KING OF KINGS' COST $2,500,000

The total cost of producing Cecil B. De Mille's great picture, "The King of Kings," was $2,500,000. In point of expense for gigantic sets, costumes, properties and the salaries paid more than 5,000 players and extras appearing in the various scenes, no other picture ever produced is comparable to "The King of Kings."

In addition to 900 actors of reputation appearing in the cast, more than 4,000 extras were employed. The task of providing this vast army of men and women with innumerable accessories in addition to the costumes, ranging from beads to phylacteries, was tremendous.

Several enormous sets were built especially for the production. The largest was the Temple of Herod, built at a cost of $180,000. Philip Hall of Jerusalem, a magnificent recreation, cost $170,000. The set depicted a Colosseum cost $70,000. In order to accommodate these big sets, two extra stages, one 300 feet square and the other 150 by 200 feet, were constructed at heavy expense.

Approximately $100,000 was expended for costumes, of which 400 were worn by the principals and the remainder by the extra players. Scores of women were employed in the wardrobe department for maintenance in the preparation of the costumes.

The properties used in the production were prepared at a cost of nearly $200,000. The furniture shown in the various interior sets was made in the De Mille studio from old period paintings at a cost of $50,000. More than 200,000 yards of antique brocade, wools, and the like were manufactured for the production.

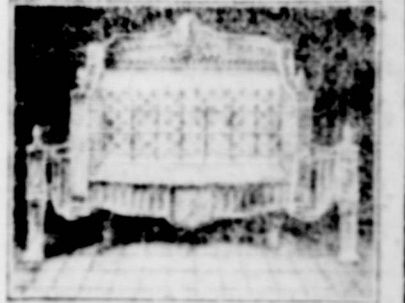

The livestock utilized in the picture included panthers, wolves, camels, leopards, zebras, camels, bulls, sheep and other domestic animals, the cost of maintenance of which was enormous. The maintenance of the temple alone cost $5,000 and approximately $20,000 was spent on preliminary drawings. The lumber, paint, plaster and other building materials used in the various sets cost nearly thousands. The temple set alone cost $14,000.

The place where you live is "Home" even though it belongs to someone else. But when you have a deed to the property there is a vast difference. It becomes a "Real Home."

Why not take advantage of this beautiful fall weather and the wonderful financing plan of the "Standard" and build that home you have dreamed about for these years? Easy payments, low interest and a definite contract. Come in and let's talk it over.

BIG 101 RANCH HERE TOMORROW

Eleven hundred people and 600 animals with show.

They're due with the dawn—the Indians, the cowboys, the Cossacks, the vaqueros, the elephants, the camels, the bronchos, the buffalo and the blooded steeds, for the 101 Ranch Wild West will parade in the forenoon and exhibit at the Cisco grounds on East Sixth street tomorrow afternoon and night.

The performances, affording Cossack and American circus, wild west, spectacles, pageantry, rough riding, novelty displays and a tidal wave of thrilling rodeo action, take place in the largest canvas arena ever carried by any show. Many famous Indian chiefs and warriors will be seen with the young braves, as will be the champion cowboys and cowgirls of the land. The street parade, the largest and the most picturesque in the world, contains gas bands, two eallieps, lanterns, floats, allegorical units, elephants, camels, buffalo, longhorns, and over a mile of horsemen of the wild west and far east. At 2 p. m. and 8 p. m., the performances will be inaugurated with a brilliant new opening spectacle, "Julius Caesar," in which 1,000 people and animals take part.
