Thirtieth Chief Executive of United States Takes Office With Plea for Better Law Observance

By PAUL R. MALLON. WASHINGTON, March 4.—A boy who first saw daylight in a humble Iowa house assumed the nation's most powerful office today when Herbert Hoover became America's thirtieth president.

Mr. Hoover changed his plans at the last moment, and decided to kiss the Bible as he took the oath, at the 29th chapter, 18th verse of the book Proverbs which read:

Where there is no vision the people perish but he that keepeth the law, happy is he. While the oath was being read, however, the Bible was open at the Sermon on the Mount as originally planned with Mr. Hoover's hand resting upon that inspiring passage.

Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Hoover entered the senate chamber shortly after twelve amid thundering cheers from the assembled throng. Senator Curtis took the oath as vice president at 12:12 p. m. The clock having been turned back ten minutes to enable the president to complete signing bills.

Eyes of the World Upon Another Farm Boy as He Assumes Duties of Highest Office in Gift of People

By WILLIAM L. STOKES. WASHINGTON, March 4.—Another man who began his life on a farm entered the white house today.

But eager, quaking free, a restless spirit, and the lure of big ventures took him early from a Quaker community in Iowa, and Herbert Hoover becomes president of the United States with the most cosmopolitan background of any man who has held the office.

THE WEATHER

West Texas — Fair, colder in southwest tonight; Tuesday fair, warmer north portion. East Texas — Fair, colder tonight with frost in north and west portions; Tuesday fair, warmer in north portion.

concluded his address at 1:40 p. m. In a clear voice which radio experts believed would be heard around the world, Mr. Hoover pointed out the danger of our times in disobedience of the law, not only the prohibition law but all laws. He promised to appoint a national commission for a searching investigation of the whole structure of federal jurisprudence, to include the method of enforcement of the 18th amendment and the cases of abuse under it.

The new president pledged with citizens to help him enforce the law by observing it. He spoke of the problems of world peace, cooperation of the government with business, education, public health and party responsibilities, announcing he would call a special session of his new congress soon to deal with farm relief and tariff revision.

"It appears to me," he said in summing up his own address, "that the more important further mandates from the recent election, where the maintenance of the integrity of the constitution; the vigorous enforcement of the laws; the continuance of economy in public expenditure; the continued regulation of business to prevent domination in the community; the denial of ownership or operation in business by the government in competition with its citizens; the avoidance of policies which would involve us in controversies of foreign nations; the more effective reorganization of the departments of the federal government; the expansion of public works; and the promotion of welfare activities affecting education and the home."

The assemblage in the inaugural stands included the retiring President Coolidge, his cabinet, nearly all the members of the new Hoover cabinet, the old congress which peacefully expired at noon, the new congress which soon is to be called into special session, members of the diplomatic corps, the national defense representatives in uniform and all government officials who could get tickets.

and eggs toast and coffee was served him as usual, at eight. He was ready at 10:30 in formal morning attire for the ceremonial ride to the white house, where he and Mrs. Hoover were due at 10:30; the departure from the white house for the capitol at 11 o'clock, the ride down Pennsylvania avenue with President Coolidge; his taking of the oath of office there before throngs; his inaugural address; the ride back to the white house, his review of the parade; his retirement to his new home, there to gather his family about him tonight in celebration of the big event.

Despite his cosmopolitan background, it is the farm boy, and Quaker simplicity of character that was uppermost as Herbert Hoover today went through the elaborate ceremonies the nation witnesses every four years. He learned on the farm and in a life of tireless activity to rise early. He was up today at seven o'clock. His usual hour, his breakfast of grape fruit and ham

LAW ENFORCEMENT KEYNOTE OF HOOVER INAUGURAL ADDRESS

President Tells Nation That Disrespect for and Disobedience of Law Most Malign Danger Today

Hoover, thirtieth president of the United States, told the nation in his inaugural address that the most malignant danger to the American commonwealth is the disrespect for and disobedience of the law.

It is only in part due to the additional burdens imposed upon our judicial system by the Eighteenth amendment. The problem is much wider than that. Many influences had increasingly complicated and weakened our law-enforcement organization long before the adoption of the Eighteenth amendment.

To re-establish the vigor and effectiveness of law enforcement we must critically consider the entire federal machinery of justice, the redistribution of its functions, the simplification of its procedure, the provision of additional special tribunals, the better selection of judges and the more effective organization of our agencies of investigation and prosecution that justice may be sure and that it may be swift.

What America has given renewed hope and to all who have faith in the view, we have reached a degree of comfort that ever before in the history of our nation we have reached a higher degree of individual freedom and concern of our in-terests are deep and sincere, and steadily building a new civilization—great in its attainments. The in-terests of our people are respected among the nations of the world by our confidence in the world based upon confidence in the sense of justice, as well as our accomplishments within our borders and in our own lives.

Law Enforcement. The most malignant of all dangers today is the disrespect for and disobedience of the law. Crime is increasing. Confidence in rigid and justice is decreasing. I am not prepared to believe that the Federal government to enforce its laws.

It is only in part due to the additional burdens imposed upon our judicial system by the Eighteenth amendment. The problem is much wider than that. Many influences had increasingly complicated and weakened our law-enforcement organization long before the adoption of the Eighteenth amendment.

Reform, reorganization and strengthening of our whole judicial and enforcement system both in civil and criminal sides have been advocated for years by statesmen, judges and bar associations. First steps toward that end should not longer be delayed. Rigid and expeditious justice is the first safeguard of freedom, the basis of all ordered liberty, the vital force of progress. It must not come to be in our republic that it can be defeated by the indifference of the citizen, by exploitation of the delays and entanglements of the law or by combinations of criminals.

Justice must not fail because the agencies of enforcement are either delinquent or inefficiently organized. To consider these evils, to find their remedy, is the most serious necessity of our times.

The election has again confirmed the determination of the American people that regulation of private enterprise and not government ownership or operation is the course rightly to be pursued in our relation to business. In recent years we have established a differentiation in the whole method of business regulation between the industries which produce and distribute commodities on the one hand and public utilities on the other. In the latter, because we substantially confer a monopoly by limiting competition, we must regulate their services and rates. The rigid enforcement of the laws applicable to both groups is the very base of equal opportunity and freedom from domination for all our people, and it is just as essential for the stability and prosperity of business itself as for the protection of the public at large.

Cooperation By the Government.
The large purpose of our economic thought should be to establish more firmly stability and security of business and employment and thereby remove poverty still further from our borders.

Education.
Although education is primarily a responsibility of the states and local communities and rightly so, yet the nation as a whole is vitally concerned in its development everywhere to the highest standards and to complete universality. Self-government can succeed only through an instructed electorate.

World Peace.
The United States fully accepts the profound truth that our own progress, prosperity and peace are interlocked with the progress, prosperity and peace of all humanity. The world whole is at peace. The dangers to a continuation of this peace today are largely the fear and suspicion which still haunt the world. No suspicion or fear can be rightly directed to our country.

Party Responsibilities.
In our form of democracy the expression of the popular will can be effected only through the instrumentality of political parties. We maintain party government not to promote intolerant partisanship, but because opportunity must be given for expression of the popular will, and organization provided for the execution of its mandates and for accountability of government to the people.

Special Session of the Congress.
Action upon some of the proposals upon which the Republican party was returned to power, particularly further agricultural relief and limited changes in the tariff, can not, in justice to our farmers, our labor and our manufacturers, be postponed. I shall, therefore, request a special session of congress for the consideration of these two questions. I shall deal with each of them upon the assembly of congress.

Other Mandates From the Election.
It appears to me that the more important further mandates from the recent election were in the maintenance of the integrity of the constitution, the vigorous enforcement of the laws, the continuance of economy in public expenditures, the continued regulation of business to prevent domination in the community, the denial of ownership or operation of business by the government in competition with its citizens, the avoidance of policies which would involve us in the controversies of foreign nations, the more effective reorganization of the departments of the federal government, the expansion of public works and the promotion of welfare activities affecting education and the home.

There is no short road to the realization of these aspirations. Ours is a progressive people, but with a determination that progress must be based upon the foundation of experience. Ill-considered remedies for our faults bring only penury after them. But if we have faith of the men in our mighty past, who created these ideals, we shall leave them heightened and strengthened for our children.

PIONEER DEAD.
CROSS PLAINS, March 4.—G. J. Steele, aged 70 years, eleven months and four days, one of the prominent pioneer citizens of Caddo county, died at his home near Caddo Peak last Thursday, and was buried in the Dressy cemetery Friday. Funeral services being conducted by Rev. Ollie Dennis and Rev. G. C. Williams. Burial was conducted with Woodmen of the World rites. Deceased is survived by his wife, two sons and three daughters, Raymond and Lane Steele of Dressy, Mrs. Ollie Odum of Station, Mrs. Dave Ingram of Cottonwood, and Miss Imogene Steele, who lived at the family home.

CAPITAL AND LABOR FIGHT DEPRESSION

LONDON, March 4.—British labor and capital have agreed on a joint effort to remedy the grave depression in British industry.

The movement was regarded today as one of the most significant in recent social history, and a possible forerunner to extensive future co-operation between capital and labor.

Acceptance by the traders union congress of an invitation to meet with representatives of the Federation of British Industries and the Confederation of Employers' Organizations was considered a step nearer realization of Lord Meichett's project for some sort of a joint board to study the industrial problems.

The industrial depression and employment have become so bound up in each other that solution of one almost necessarily calls for selection of the other. Labor's action in accepting the conference invitation yesterday indicated a fuller realization of that fact.
