Webb battle plans mapped in Washington

Local group drums up support

By J. TOM GRAHAM
WASHINGTON — "There will be a fight."

That is what U.S. Senator John Tower told the delegation from Big Spring Thursday morning about the Air Force's proposed closing of Webb AFB.

Tower reiterated a promise made Wednesday that he would fight the closing of Webb to the last "bloody ditch."

The Big Spring delegation led by Mayor Wade Choate, was able to sandwich a conference with Tower in between meetings of the executive committee of the Senate Armed Forces Committee, of which Tower is ranking member.

This committee Thursday was considering an overall recommendation of the defense budget. The Big Spring delegation arrived in Washington at 10 p.m., Wednesday and Thursday morning began pounding the halls of Congress to seek out support for Webb AFB.

Also in the delegation from Big Spring were Ralph Brooks, retired Air Force colonel and former Thunderbird pilot who now owns Blum's Jewelry; Winston Wrinkle, owner of KBST radio; and J. Tom Graham, publisher of the Big Spring Herald.

Mayor Dan Hemphill, Odessa, and Ernest Angelo, Midland mayor, accompanied the group.

The delegation first met with Cong. Omar Burleson. Burleson of Anson represents Big Spring in Congress as part of the 17th Congressional District.

The proposed changes in the role of Air Force bases which are being announced by the Pentagon would close Webb in the western part of Burleson's district, but proposes that the 12th Air Division (SAC) be moved to Dyess AFB in Abilene in the eastern end of Burleson's district by September 1976.

Observers say this could add between 50 and 200 men to Dyess as the headquarters shifts from Davis Monthan AFB, Arizona.

Burleson made this comment to the Big Spring delegation:

"All I can honestly say is that this thing (the closing of Webb) came at this moment as a surprise."

Burleson said that he had been aware that there was a threat to Webb but he had been assured that he would be given the opportunity of presenting the case for Webb to a decision-making level, even the president before the announcement was made.

When asked if he thinks Webb can be saved, Burleson said, "Yes. We've got a case and we will make that case."

The official announcement of the closing of three Air Force bases nationwide and cutbacks for 20 others was to have been made by the Air Force today.

The Washington Post reported in its Thursday morning edition that the decision had been made to close the bases.

However, the Big Spring delegation was told in the offices of the lawmakers that the decision was not at this time a final one. The Post said that the Defense Department was working on the list of about 165 Army, Navy and Air Force bases proposed for closure, reduction or other action about two months ago. There have been changes in the list as officials considered political and other factors.

The Post said "it appeared that the Pentagon hoped to soften a possible political impact from a new round of base actions this election year by making its announcement in stages, with the Air Force first."

The Big Spring delegation was to meet with congressmen Dick White, El Paso; Congressman George Mahon, Lubbock; and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Houston this evening.

The delegation expects to meet with other congressmen on Friday before returning home Friday night.

One lawmaker's aide indicated that strictly from a bureaucratic budgeting point of view, keeping Webb open will be 'tough' and that Big Spring's best hope lies in political action at a high level and in a public clamor to keep the base.

Indications to the Big Spring delegation were that a public hearing might be held in Big Spring on the environmental impact that any possible closing of Webb might have. This hearing would be held sometime between now and the end of the year.

Wife of Civil Service employe: 'We'll probably starve'

Webb AFB report sparks mixed emotions

By JAMES WERRELL

The Herald took an informal survey Wednesday to try to determine Big Springers' reactions to the potential closing of Webb AFB. Citizens in the downtown area of the city were asked the question, "What impact would Webb's closing have on the community and would it affect you personally?"

There was general agreement among all those asked that Webb's closing would be tough on business in Big Spring. On a more personal level, almost all those questioned have good friends at Webb they would hate to lose.

"We'll probably starve," said Mrs. Mildred Shaw, whose husband is a Civil Service employe on the flight line at Webb. "What do you do when you're 40 years old?" she asked.

She and her friend, Jeanette Nichols, concurred that Webb's closing would be bad for business.

"It would not only be bad for Big Spring, but also for all of Howard County," said Mrs. Nichols.

Ismael Lujan feels that the drop in population would be a large factor if Webb folds.

"That big a drop in the population would hurt us quite a bit economically," said Lujan. "Losing the Webb people would hurt the school system and all parts of the community."

"I have quite a few friends out there, and I will hate to see them go," Lujan said.

Mrs. Daphna Smith, a Cosden employe also spoke of friends.

"I really don't want my friends out there to leave," she said. "But look on the bright side, maybe now I'll be able to buy a house I want," she added.

Mrs. Smith smiled as she said this. Her friend, Mrs. Harla Johnson, whose husband is a T-38 instructor at Webb, was standing nearby.

"I don't want to leave. I like this town," said Mrs. Johnson. "It would be bad for the town with all the civil service and military jobs at stake. Big Spring will really miss the relationship it had with the base," she added.

Jake Hancock, an independent oil producer, was one who was not so upset with the potential closing.

"People ask for economy in government from top to bottom and when it happens here they get all upset," he said. "If closing Webb will help to cut the high costs in Washington, I'm all for it. I do hate that it will do to the merchants here, though. Real estate business will be hurt. But we'll survive," Hancock added.

Merchants reacted strongly to the possibility of Webb's closing.

"I would definitely affect business," said Roy Scarbrough, an employe of Zales Jewelry Store. "We have a lot of accounts at Webb. With the drop in population we will need new industry and new stores to make up for it," he said.

"It would be quite a blow to the community. I have worked at Anthony's for 24 years and we have counted a lot on Webb for business," said Mrs. Bernice Wash.

"I certainly hope the base doesn't close. This town needs any payroll it can get. I have seen too many places close already," said Miss Winnie Dell Rhoton, 78, and a lifelong Big Spring resident. "I remember before the bombardier school came here and I saw the change. There were only about 6,500 people here then. We need Webb," she added.

Another who has spent quite a few years in Big Spring is Floyd McIntyre.

"I came here 40 years ago during a terrible depression. I hate to see what unemployment can do. With unemployment comes unrest, followed by lots of problems. People will leave this town," he said. "Things changed when the bombardier school came here. Webb represented great progress in the population and economy of Big Spring," he added.

Bombardier school

Shutdown recalled

The economic repercussions from closing the Big Spring Bombardier School were "not too pronounced," Joe Pickle, then editor of the Big Spring Herald, said today.

The pause in activity was momentary, Pickle said. "Of course, this may not be entirely comparable," Pickle added. He was referring to news the Air Force may close Webb Air Force Base.

At the time the bombardier school closed, the area economy was expanding, Pickle recalled. Oil exploration and production were bringing in money.

The refinery was being expanded. And highways were being constructed.

Demand for housing rebounded before long, Pickle said.

The base became Municipal Airport and the first home for Howard College.

Buildings from the base were sold and still stand in many places in Big Spring, Pickle said.

Most structures at the base now are permanent, the retired editor noted.

A. J. Prager, owner of Prager's Men and Boys' Wear, is one of the few Big Spring businessmen still active who was in business when the bombardier school closed in 1946.

"There's no way you can take that much money out of Big Spring's economy and not have it hurt each and every one of us, particularly the businessman," Prager said.

He recalled that Big Spring was hurt at the first closing, but soon bounced back.

Prager predicted that his particular business would drop 10 to 20 per cent initially if the base is closed, but would eventually increase again.

Action/reaction: Owens St. connection

Q. Where will the Owens Street overpass connect with town on the south side of the railroad tracks? I have looked at this several times, and I just cannot tell.

A. In about one year, the Owens Street overpass is expected to be complete. Joe Smoot, resident engineer for the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation, said. The project will connect Fourth Street in the frontage road of IS-20 with a four-lane street, Smoot said.

While the bridge itself will start halfway between First and Second Streets, the south approach will begin at the north side of Second Street, Smoot said.

Colonel explains planned closing

By JAMES WERRELL

Col. Robert A. Owens, wing commander at Webb AFB, held a brief news briefing in the Webb Officers' Club, 10 a.m. today. Owens read an announcement from Secretary of the Air Force Thomas C. Reed explaining plans to cut back on certain military cost areas in order to come up with a more effective and economical combat capability.

In announcing plans to undertake formal study of a number of base reduction and realignment actions, Secretary Reed said, "Proposed actions to streamline our organization and reduce overhead will permit allocation of additional resources to force modernization and investment in added combat capabilities for future security needs."

According to the Air Force secretary, these candidate studies could lead to actions, that if completely implemented, would result in support cost savings of approximately $150 million per year. Secretary Reed stated that these savings could allow us to accelerate actions toward modernizing and maintaining our qualitative technological edge. "For example, the $150 million annual savings equates to the annual cost of operating nine F-16 fighter squadrons or thirteen A-10 squadrons. In general terms, the realignment and reduction actions proposed will contribute significantly to overall Air Force objectives and priorities."

The announcement initiates a detailed study process to analyze the effects of closing or reducing the status of five major bases. Three of the bases, Craig AFB, Ala., Kincheloe AFB, Mich., and Webb, will be examined to determine the impact of closure. Richard-Gebaur AFB, Mo., and Loring AFB, Maine, will also be examined to determine the impact of major activity reductions.

Owens further explained that the decision to study the possible closing of Webb is based on a declining requirement for new pilots. Officials claim that efficiency and good management practices dictate that the training capacity in the Air Force be brought into balance with production requirements.

It was also explained that closing Webb would eliminate one of the two remaining undergraduate pilot training bases with only two runways. It is felt that Webb's two-runway capacity inhibits further production and restricts operations and safe air traffic flow.

In addition, Webb has a high percentage of substandard facilities which would eventually require substantial military construction. Closing Webb would permit reallocation of scarce construction dollars to other Air Force bases.

Owens stated that the projected environmental impact study of Webb and Big Spring could take as long as nine months. During this time concerned government officials and citizens may contribute to the study.

"Taking the almost 3,000 employes at Webb along with their families, we come up with about a quarter of the population of Big Spring. Webb's closing would obviously have a major impact on the environment of Big Spring," Owens said.

STANTON'S KEVIN NEWMAN WITH CHAMPION HEREFORD

Stanton youth's 'Honey' named Houston champ

HOUSTON — The Junior Hereford Breeding Beef Show concluded this week with the champion and reserve champion females being chosen by Judge John McNeill.

"V Bar Miss T 414", known to her owner as "Honey," is a 15-month-old heifer shown by Kevin Newman, 11, of Stanton, Tex. Kevin's heifer won the championship at Dallas and Abilene and took the reserve championship at the National Register of Merit Show in Fort Worth this year. His heifer has not been beaten in her class in any show.

Kevin, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Newman, is a member of the Martin County 4-H Club.

The Reserve Champion Female is

"DDF Vera", a 22-month-old heifer owned by Robbie Russell, 16, a sophomore at Panhandle High School in Panhandle, Tex. Her heifer has only been beaten twice in her class in twelve shows this season. She was Champion of the Hereford Females in San Antonio, Fort Worth, Denver, Colorado and Guyman, Okla., in competition this year and last fall.

Robbie, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Russell, is a member of the Carson County 4-H. She likes to show because, "people are great and really friendly." Robbie added, "I was mad at my dad at the time he bought this calf because she was so skinny, so I nicknamed her 'Bag of Bones' but now she means more to me than that and I'm proud of her."

WILFRID M. CALNAN

REV. H. B. BIRDWELL

Calnan named Social Worker of the Year

Wilfrid M. Calnan, Director of Howard County Family Service Center, has been named Social Worker of the Year by the West Texas Non-Metropolitan Unit of the National Association of Social Workers. Calnan was one of five candidates for this honor from the Big Spring, San Angelo and Abilene area, and was selected by members throughout a thirty-county area in West Texas.

Calnan came to Big Spring in February of 1975 to become director when the Family Service Center was established.

Also honored by the West Texas Non-Metropolitan Unit is the Rev. Harland B. Birdwell, Rector of the St. Mary's Episcopal Church. Father Birdwell was named Outstanding Citizen of the Year by this group. He was nominated as one who has represented best the ideals of the National Association of Social Workers in Howard County and West Texas during 1975. The National Association of Social Workers promotes the well-being of all individuals in their adjustment to life in their society without regard to race, ethnic group and age.

Not only is Father Birdwell outstanding as a pastor of his church, but he has actively promoted a wide variety of community endeavors designed to enhance the quality of life in our community. Some time ago, he served on the Board of Directors and as a volunteer counselor for "Firehouse 6," a crisis intervention enterprise which helped, primarily, troubled youths.

Steak tough, suit claims

A suit was filed in 118th District Court Tuesday afternoon alleging a local man bit into a steak and found a foreign substance.

The substance was hard and metallic, the petition stated. Hugh Hale, Big Spring, is suing Furr's Inc., which operates a grocery at 900 11th Place, for $10,000.

The beef was purchased Dec. 2, 1975, the petition claimed.

Saudi Arabian Oil Minister Sheik Ahmed Yamani and four U.S. oil-company executives have been here since Saturday, hammering out details for Arabian purchase of the American-owned 40 per cent of the Arabian-American Oil Co. An official of the Bay Point Yacht and Country Club, the plush resort complex where the talks are being held, said the meeting had been due to end Wednesday but was extended.

He said, "Things are kind of complicated and it just looks like it can't be wrapped up as quickly as they had hoped."

Aramco spokesman Ted Phillips said there is no way of knowing how long the meeting of Yamani and executives of Mobil, Texaco, Exxon and Standard Oil of California would continue. "I have no idea when it will end and I don't think anyone else does," Phillips said in New York.

News reporters, who have been refused entrance to the heavily guarded Bay Point area, kept watch at the Panama City Airport, where some of the corporate jets that were used by the participants to reach this Florida Panhandle city are parked.

A Bay Point employee said some of the officials met into the predawn hours Wednesday.

The four Americans and Yamani were trying to reach agreement on a final price for the remaining U.S.-owned share of Aramco plus agreements on guaranteeing continued oil supplies after the takeover.

Security has been tight because of a terrorist attack at an oil ministers' meeting in Vienna in December. Yamani was briefly held hostage after three persons were killed.

CIVIL WAR WIDOW — For 16 years the State of Tennessee has paid a Confederate widow's pension to a woman whose husband may have served in the Union Army. Texanna Whitfield, 85, Memphis, said she thinks her husband Robert was a Confederate soldier — but she is not sure. State officials say they don't know how to stop the payments of $175 a month even if it is shown the husband fought with federal forces. The state board that determined Civil War pensions was abolished five years ago.

Booze in metric bottles to make October debut

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are going to be some changes on the shelves of your friendly neighborhood liquor store and they may be enough to drive you to drink.

But you'd better be cold sober when you stock up on your favorite spirits because beginning in October there will be 16 different sizes of liquor bottles to choose from.

It's all part of the government's plan for converting the country to the metric system.

The Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms issued regulations Wednesday to allow distillers to begin in October a three-year program changing their bottles to metric measures.

But the changeover will be gradual and until 1980 distillers will be able to dispense their products in the 10 conventional bottles familiar to the liquor store patron as well as in the six designated metric size bottles. By 1980 all bottles will be in the metric sizes.

That means the drinker will have to make a choice during the transition period from 16 basic bottle sizes. The difference between some bottle sizes will be practically indistinguishable.

Rex D. Davis, director of the alcohol bureau, said the new container sizes "should result in positive benefits for consumers as well as for industry and government."

Duval County 'milked dry'

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Comptroller Bob Bullock says his auditors have found Duval County finances in such bad shape that "there won't be anything left for the payroll about Aug. 1."

"They will have to borrow to meet their payroll until tax revenue rolls in around October," Bullock said Wednesday after receiving a report from his auditors who checked Duval County books.

"And they're going to find it pretty hard to sell bonds. Much of their debt has already been refinanced."

Bullock said his auditors found things in Duval County "that would make your eyes pop out. That county has been about milked dry ... I have asked these auditors to write a full report on what they found. I want to know how public funds could be systematically looted and what this office can do to discourage it in the future."

Enforcement effort shackled

Sunday's front page contained a story by Big Spring Herald reporter John Edwards about the "communications gap" which exists between the District Attorney's Office and the primary local law enforcement agencies.

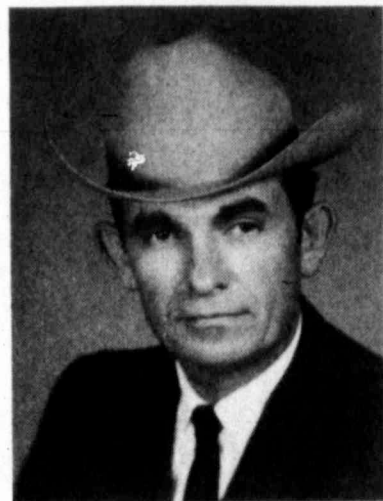

The particular case cited may have been a little hard for the reader to follow. What it showed was an example of the lack of cooperation between the DA's Office and the Big Spring Police Department and Howard County Sheriff's Office.

TO THOSE WHO are close to the law enforcement effort in Big Spring, this problem is not news. Calling the problem a "communications gap" is charitable. Apparently it reaches proportions of antagonism at times, and it is a prime example of how a power struggle can shackle the local law enforcement effort.

During the past two weeks, I have had the opportunity to talk to both sides in this controversy. Both point the finger at the other guys.

I think I am too new to Big Spring to attempt the attaching of any right or wrong labels to either side of this issue, but I have been here long enough to see that the squabble hampers the overall Howard County law enforcement picture to a serious extent.

A little animosity between the public prosecutor and the police is probably unavoidable. It is built into the system.

AUBREY STANDARD

In most every town I've seen, the police quietly feel like the District Attorney's Office is soft on criminals, that the DA is not tough enough or aggressive enough in taking cases to trial, that he is more concerned about batting a 99 per cent conviction rate than he is getting criminals behind bars.

ON THE OTHER HAND, the DA almost always feels that the local police and sheriff's office personnel bring him half-baked cases that the world's greatest prosecutor couldn't win. DAs often complain that police are sloppy about handling cases from a legal point of view, and this leaves lots of holes for defense attorneys. And they say recent court rulings have given the defense the upper hand these days anyway.

But in most towns, these differences are resolved — at least to the point where the wheels of justice can keep turning.

From what I can see, however, the differences in Big Spring are almost to the point of bringing the justice process to a halt.

The police and sheriff contend that the DA will not take a complaint unless the officer goes into the DA's Office, hat-in-hand, gets down on his knees and begs.

The DA points to several instances where he says he told the police and sheriff how the cases should be made, yet they brought him the exact kind he said wouldn't wash.

To me it appears that there is a great deal of petty jealousy over who gets credit for law enforcement successes.

And there is also the old "pleader" problem. District Attorney Robert H. (Bob) Moore III is a fellow inclined to prosecute by urging defendants to plead guilty on lesser charges. This is his style, and it has merit. The district court is not swimming in a backlog of cases, and those charged have their cases dispensed with quickly.

However, it's frustrating to the primary law enforcement agencies because this approach, turns even serious offenders back on the street very soon.

Dist. Atty. Moore claims that the problem between the DA's Office and the police and sheriff's offices was going on before he came and will most likely continue after he is gone. Moore is not running for reelection.

Sheriff A. N. Standard and Police Chief Stanley Bogard claim that the police and sheriff's office have gotten along fine with previous DAs.

Whichever, it's time for these two sides to bury the hatchet and get together.

Law enforcement is tough enough as it is, and it's almost impossible if they are not.

Some are good

Around the rim

The busiest weeks are often the ones with the most wonderful surprises. The reason I enjoy news business so much is not the hours, pay, or security, but the fact that every day is different. And most days you meet a new friend.

LAST WEEK was particularly rewarding. At Steer Field at a Lubbock Coronado baseball game with the wind blowing and the chill factor below zero (I'm sure), I sat with the huddled masses up near the press box area.

And I met a Mrs. Burke, a native of Denmark, who is really delightful. She is quite a sports fan. She had been to the Hawks' game in Abilene the night before.

Her husband has been transferred and the family will soon be moving to Austin. But what impressed me was that she said longingly, "I wish we could have retired in Big Spring."

Big Spring has something going for it when a family like this that has lived in some really beautiful places, such as the green valley near Salt Lake City, and beautiful northern California on Highway 101 would want to retire in Big Spring. We hope the Burkes come back here some day.

To the people of Big Spring, I would say you do great to make people like this feel welcome.

At the Rock and Mineral Show, I had a wonderful visit with the Farmers from Valley Mills. It turned out that Dolly Farmer had been post-mistress at Armstrong. She knows Annie Armstrong, the new ambassador to Great Britain personally, and had lots of really nice things to say about her. But what turned out to really be fun was that everybody in a group of six of us talking had lived in the same area of South Texas around Kingsville at one time or another.

As a matter of fact, it turns out, I taught one local couple's daughter-in-law back when she was in the high school choir in Kingsville. Yes, I've taught choir. I have a music degree and that was my first job out of college. And it was a sweepstakes-winning choir. But journalism is my true love and I worked my way through college by journalism and served as the only non-journalism major to ever be editor of the college paper at A&I.

AND YES, there is an A&I. I took a lot of ribbing around the newsroom back in the fall when I kept rooting for A&I. Then when Gil Steinke was named national coach of the year — even above the coaches from the big colleges — I had to throw in that I knew him personally.

"Yeah, I'll bet you do," was the attitude around here until I wrote him and congratulated him. He wrote back a letter sharing information about old mutual friends that left no doubt that I really do know Gil. And there really is an A&I.

I took my oldest child there trying to encourage her to attend A&I in 1967. The dean, the business manager, the coach and many more all assured her they would keep an eye on her because they were my old, good friends.

But I didn't raise a stupid kid. She went back to the car and said, "There's too many people going to keep an eye on me, so I think I'll go to Texas University."

She did and the other two followed. Advice to parents that want their chilluns to go their alma maters: Don't introduce them to any old friends that are going to watch over 'em.

One more comment — the most unusual thing I learned last week is that with the hiring of Tom Roy as the industrial manager, we now have a completely left-handed situation at the Chamber of Commerce office.

William F. Buckley, Jr.

LONDON — Mr. Denis Healey, who is Chancellor of the Exchequer in the socialist cabinet of Mr. Wilson, is plagued by the awful seductions of common sense, which are fatal to the fantasies of ideology. As a faithful advocate of socialism, he manages a fine performance when on duty, and you can sit back and relax in professional admiration, much as you might in hearing Lee Bailey make the case for the Boston Strangler. But when Mr. Healey is engaged in formulating policy, he is required to yield to the vector of forces: England is going broke, her inflation is wild, the morale of the merchant class is shot, the taxation schedule is sadistic and unprofitable.

IN A RECENT seizure of exasperation against ideologues on his left who clamored for more taxation of the "rich" Mr. Healey, pointed out that if he were to confiscate a hundred per cent of the income of every Englishman earning more than 12,000 pounds ($24,000) it would not raise money sufficient to pay one per cent of the national budget.

More and more Mr. Healey sounds like the man who justifies the necessity for setting fire to the house while doing everything he can discreetly, to put it out. It is a juggler's act, from which the poor British can take only the consolation that nowadays most of the rhetoric is left-oriented while the deeds are conservative-minded. The trades unions have been forced to ask for only moderate pay increases, there is talk of diminished taxation, and there are high hopes that by letting the pound suffer the discipline of the float, the trade deficit will reverse.

By contrast with Healey, the singular emotional event of the week was Lord George-Brown's statement that he had had it with the Labor Party. A proximate cause of Brown's defection was a single broadcast by Solzhenitsyn, said to have been the most stirring forensic experience by a foreigner since Garibaldi mobilized England on the side of Italian "aggravamento." George-Brown has always been an interesting man, in part because of the purity of both his virtues and his vices. It was in the tradition of Ernest Bevin, a child of the labor movement whose eyes were trained on socialism as the instrument for the liberation of the individual.

Brown was made Foreign Minister by Harold Wilson on two separate occasions, but lost his post because he could not, after a while, manage to win even the safest seat. This was in part owing to his unabashed devotion to the grape, which he is frank in considering to be, even ahead of the dog, man's very best friend.

What has happened to housing?

John Cunniff

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 60 per cent of all American households own their homes, but that level is in danger, despite a gradual improvement in the outlook for the industry.

Last year the number of housing starts totaled about 1.1 million. This year the number is expected to grow to 1.5 million or 1.6 million — possibly more, but still hundreds of thousands below the need.

Good housing, sociologists agree, is a requirement of a sound society. Without it, a variety of other social ills manifest themselves, always in financially wasteful ways.

What in the world has happened to housing? As described by John C. Hart, it would seem that society has somehow declared war against homeowners, which in a nation of homeowners is a form of fratricide.

Hart, president of the National Association of Home Builders, said in a statement this week that taxes and inflation have increased maintenance costs 303 per cent in the past 20 years, pricing 80 per cent of potential homeowners out of the market.

From 1955 to 1975, he said, real estate taxes have soared 341 per cent, insurance 321 per cent, maintenance and repairs 269 per cent, utilities 199 per cent and mortgage interest from 4.8 per cent to 9 per cent.

At the very time earnings actually decreased, in terms of spending power, the prices of new and existing housing soared. In 1965, only 3 per cent of new single-family homes cost more than $40,000; now that's a typical price.

Not all of this has been caused by inflation, unless you include in that definition the inflated dreams of many builders and homebuyers. A few facts from the "Savings and Loan Fact Book" shows what happened between 1966 and 1973:

"The average floor space of a new home increased by 8.1 per cent. The percentage of new homes having two or more stories rose from 18 per cent to 23 per cent.

"The percentage of homes with two or more bathrooms increased from 50 per cent to 60 per cent.

"The percentage of new homes having central air conditioning grew from 25 per cent to 49 per cent."

These trends are correctible. Many home-seekers and builders have lowered their sights; they are cutting out the frills and shrinking prices a bit without, they say, reducing the basic quality of the product.

Those efforts often are hampered, however, by another holdover from another day: Restrictive zoning and building codes seek to maintain standards that some critics say is unrealistic. They prevent a return of the basic house.

Other critics say the tax system must be changed.

Meanwhile, the thrift industry — made up of savings and loan associations and mutual savings banks that are the chief mortgage lenders — fears a diminution of its ability to finance future housing needs. Because of competition for funds from commercial banks, they say they need expanded powers, such as checking accounts.

WASHINGTON — Panic spreading through the left wing of the Democratic party the morning after Sen. Henry M. Jackson's smashing victory in Massachusetts can be directly traced to blue-collar voters in working-class neighborhoods such as Precinct 66 in Lynn.

THESE VOTERS oppose forced racial busing but, unlike their brothers in Boston neighborhoods torn apart by the issue, they are not obsessed with it. That enabled Jackson to overwhelm Gov. George C. Wallace, 139 to 86, in Precinct 66. But of more concern to the liberal left was its new champion, Rep. Morris Udall, running fifth in the precinct with only 46 votes.

Thus, liberal operatives are asking themselves this question: Can Mo Udall, the early winner of the elimination contest on the party's left by capturing the upper-income suburbs and college campuses, also capture the all-important blue-collar vote? If so, can he do it soon enough to help his candidacy — say, in Pennsylvania April 27? The nature of Jackson's win in Massachusetts suggests the answer to both questions may be no.

It is not difficult to see why Jackson, picked for fourth place or lower by Massachusetts politicians, finished a strong first. While losing to Wallace in South Boston and other busing crisis spots, he dominated most other blue-collar areas. Outside the busing zone, Wallace was somewhat weaker and Sen. Birch Bayh, billed as the left's blue-collar champion, was breathtakingly impotent.

MORE DIFFICULT to explain is why non-charismatic, old-shoe Scoop Jackson ran so well. His own explanation of better organization (phone banks), high spending and labor backing begs the question of his vivid distinctiveness among all those Democratic candidates decrying unemployment: his opposition to busing and, perhaps more important, his advocacy of hard-line national security stands. The 11th hour endorsement of Jackson by Ambassador Daniel Patrick Moynihan, now a symbol of renescent nationalism, called attention to this distinctiveness on foreign policy.

WASHINGTON — Down on the corporate farms of Florida are found some of the nation's most oppressed workers, bent over the tomatoes which they pick for a penny a pound.

Often they wind up a week's work with barely enough money to pay for the food, rent and booze which sustain them for the week. Some don't earn enough to pay what they owe the straw boss who holds them in virtual bondage.

WE SENT our reporter Hal Bernton to Florida to investigate complaints of peonage. Posing as a drifter, he infiltrated migrant worker camps and spent nearly a week in the fields. We published his first installment in an earlier column. Here is the rest of his stark story:

He picked tomatoes with miserable, ragtag men and women who were resigned to the hardships they endured. The sun blistered the backs of their necks. The constant stooping left them with excruciating back pains. The pesticides from the tomato leaves got on their hands and arms, sometimes causing bad rashes.

For their labor, they received three poor meals a day, a bottle of wine to kill the pain and a cot in a tiny compartment that reeked of wine and urine. The charges were deducted from their paychecks, leaving them with $10 to $15 to last the rest of the week. Some never got out of debt and started the next cycle by borrowing $5 from the straw boss on payday.

Some workers skipped meals in a pitiful attempt to keep from sinking deeper into debt. One old fellow, who left Pennsylvania years ago after his wife left him, had worked on the same farm since April. It was long enough for him to slide $400 into debt for food and wine.

We are withholding the names of the victims to spare them from retaliation. For the straw boss, a tough customer with a ferocious Doberman Pincher, rules the fields with an iron hand. He roars around the farm in a sporty blue Jeep, keeping a sharp lookout.

THIS IS WHAT life is like on one farm of the great Duda and Sons agriculture empire, which stretches from Australia to Europe. The Florida laborers usually put in a back-breaking day. In the evenings, they huddle around camp fires, seated on empty oil cans, to talk and to drink wine.

They were a motley group. One man had a freak foot with eight toes. He slit his tennis shoes to accommodate the extra toes. Another had one eye closed in a perpetual blind squint. A third wore filthy rags for clothes.

The women around the camp fires were prematurely aged, teeth missing, hair cropped. The fields were no place for cosmetics and long hair.

As the dusk deepened, the people around the camp fires talked. They told of the terrible cold spell earlier in the season. They wrappled themselves in their rags in a futile attempt to keep warm. One old man spent every frigid night huddled next to an all-night bonfire, afraid that if he went to bed he might freeze to death.

The Florida Rural Legal Services finally forced Duda to install electric heaters in the minuscule living compartments. Bernton saw check stubs which showed the cost of the cheap heaters had been deducted from the workers' pay.

Nixon denies knowledge of CIA conspiracy in South America

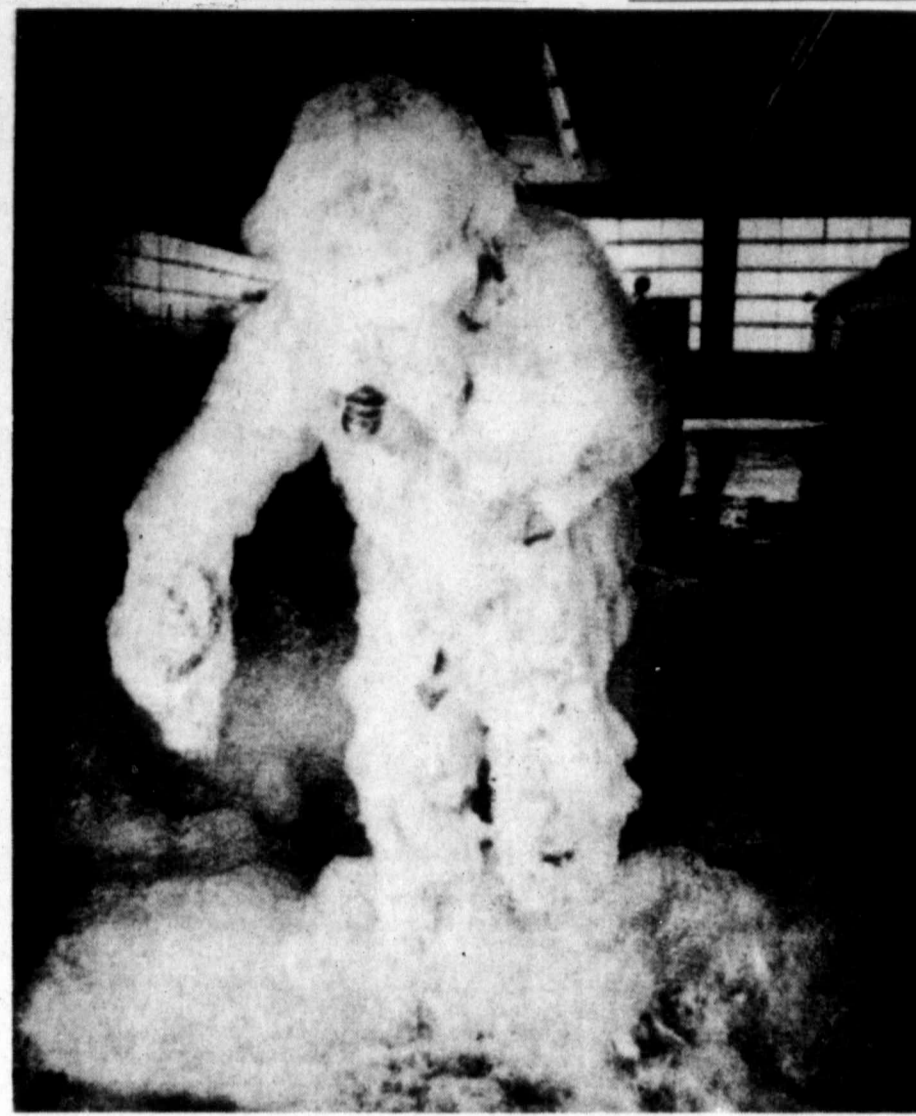

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon swears he did not know about CIA efforts to foment a military coup in Chile and that he approved "possible illegal" intelligence gathering techniques in the United States because they had been used by previous administrations.

The statement was delivered to the committee today and at the same time was made public by Nixon's attorneys. In response to the committee's questions, which were not made public, Nixon said: "I do not remember learning, while President that the U.S. intercepted telephonic communications to, or from, the Israeli embassy," but "it is possible that at some time I may have learned..." The existence of these intercepts was first revealed publicly in 1972 by a former FBI agent.

which the CIA read the outside of letters to and from the Soviet Union and China, "I do not remember being informed that such mail covers included unauthorized mail openings." Nixon indicated that former White House aide John D. Ehrlichman apparently had told investigators that he once informed Nixon that some of the information received by the White House was derived from mail openings. But the former President said "I do not recall John Ehrlichman ever informing me that he knew, or suspected, that some of the information in intelligence reports received by the White House was derived by means of mail opening." "It is 'quite likely' he was aware of electronic eavesdropping by the National Security Agency, but did not know that private cable companies were turning over copies of overseas telegrams to the government." "He did not know about CIA or FBI break-ins and did not learn about the 1971 burglary of the offices of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist by the White House 'plumbers' until 1973."

—He authorized wiretaps on his brother Donald Nixon to determine if his brother "was the target of attempts by individuals to compromise him or myself." He also said he authorized wiretaps in connection with investigations of news leaks and the unauthorized distribution of secret documents to the Pentagon.

Arizona kidnap suspect nabbed

HOUSTON (AP) — FBI agents have taken into custody Eric Van Eberhardt, 35, charged with the 1975 kidnaping of an Arizona man. The agents arrested Eberhardt Wednesday at a roadblock near Porter, Tex., in neighboring Montgomery County. He was brought to the Harris County jail here. An FBI spokesman said Eberhardt was indicted by a federal grand jury in Arizona on a charge of kidnaping Patrick L. Gonzales 33, of Winslow, Ariz., July 10, 1975. The spokesman said Gonzales, a service station attendant, was kidnaped at gunpoint when he became suspicious of a credit card man was using.

Rock death ruled homicide

AUSTIN (AP) — Peace Justice Jon Wisser made a homicide ruling late Wednesday in the death of Kathy Drake, 12, struck in the head by a rock thrown by a 13-year-old girl.

The victim died Saturday in city-owned Brackenridge Hospital. Relatives said Kathy was released from the hospital last Thursday despite family protests that she was not well enough to leave. She was readmitted the day before her death.

Police Sgt. Dooyne Bailey said records showed the girl was struck in the right temple March 3 with a rock the size of a ping pong ball. He said officers will confer with the district attorney's office concerning possible action against the rock thrower.

The three incumbents who are running for re-election at large are Jack Cook, a filling station owner and operator; Howard Jenkins, a mechanic for an auto dealer; and Bill Coggins, grocery store owner and manager.

Dr. Emmett McKenzie, superintendent of schools, Roy Watkins, president of the school board of the Big Spring Independent School District and Guilford Jones, school attorney, are in Dallas today to confer with officials from the department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The school officials are trying to obtain additional information on the recent two ruling by HEW in connection with local schools.

The first ruling apparently told the district that their appeal from a two year old hearing had been denied and that Bauer and Lake View Elementary schools must be desegregated.

The second ruling, which arrived a few days later, apparently negated the first

Officials have not taken action on the second ruling, since it's meaning was not completely clear to educators.

School officials have sent an appeal on the first ruling to the national secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

Club representatives discuss details of proposed club room

Twenty-five women met with city representatives Wednesday in the Council Room to discuss guidelines for the proposed rental of the Dora Roberts Community Center as a meeting center for local clubs.

Women voiced their questions to Harry Nagel, city manager; Jerry Foresyth, parks and recreation director; Jim Greg, city attorney; and Barry Stephens, manager of the community center and tennis pro.

The women attending the session represented 25 clubs interested in organizing a women's club alliance. Member clubs would have use of the building for meetings and special club functions.

Nagel informed the women that the building was being redecorated with scheduled completion in June. A gift of $60,000 will provide funds to install refrigerated air and heat throughout the building. Other improvements planned will include replacement of several ceilings, interior repainting of the entire club, replacement of the ballroom floor and new drapes.

Mrs. R. G. B. Cowper said, "We need at least ten clubs to kickoff this project."

Clubs would pay an initiation fee of $100 each plus yearly dues.

The city would be paid $200 from the combined initiation fees. This money would be used to pay for a portion of the utilities fees of the center.

The remainder of the money would be used to purchase china, silverware and other supplies to be used in common by the member clubs. Nagel informed the women that the city would not assume liability for the supplies or furnishings kept at the center. He pointed out that Stephens was in charge of security for the center. Stephens stated that the gates are closed at night.

Nagel said the clubs would be responsible for cleaning the room or rooms used after each meeting. He said that the women could clean the room themselves or hire someone to clean it. The individual clubs could negotiate with Stephens on this matter, Nagel said.

Nagel stated that the center would have to remain available for public use. He said that the building was occasionally rented for an evening, but that the ballroom was usually the only room in demand.

Nagel pointed out that the city would have the right to schedule city meetings and conventions at the center. He said that city functions would be scheduled far in advance of the date so that the clubs and the city would work out any conflicts.

Nagel and other city representatives agreed that the alliance should elect one representative to work with the city council in dealing with complaints and scheduling conflicts.

Several women expressed interest in developing a luncheon buffet at the center. Nagel explained that Stephens has exclusive rights to provide food concessions at the center. The women would negotiate with Stephens to provide a noon buffet. Stephens said, "If it is feasible, we will provide the service."

Women suggested that a simple buffet consisting of a soup, salad and sandwich might be prepared several days during the week.

Mrs. Cowper stated that women could bring in refreshments for club meetings.

meetings. The meeting ended with women giving Mrs. Cowper information about the clubs they represented.

Nagel pointed out that the City Council will have to give the final approval for rental of the community center to the women's club alliance when the necessary number of clubs agree to join the organization.

One unwed mother writes that she wants her baby

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter, a 21-year-old working girl, is pregnant. She isn't going with anyone steady and doesn't want to get married right now. But she is thrilled because she really wants a baby. My husband and I are also thrilled because this will be our first grandchild.

We will do everything we can for her and the baby. We'll even adopt it if she wants us to.

She wants to keep the baby and take care of it herself. She doesn't want to tell the baby's father about her condition because although he's single, he isn't ready to settle down yet. She doesn't see him anymore.

What should she tell people who ask who the father is? If he doesn't pay anything toward the delivery and support, he doesn't get any visiting rights, does he?

Our daughter will be getting help from welfare. Does that mean she has to tell them who the father is? She would rather not. Also, does she have to put the father's name on the baby's birth certificate?

GRANNY-TO-BE

DEAR GRANNY: Since the laws differ from state to state, have your daughter ask her case worker to answer her questions. And tell her to ignore the people who ask who the baby's father is. That's her business. And her secret.

DEAR ABBY: I have been married for 42 years, and two years ago my husband told me that he wanted to have his left ear pierced so that he could wear a little gold earring in it. I asked why. No answer. Then I told him that his wedding ring was enough rings for a man. Still no answer. Soon I noticed that he had his left ear pierced and was wearing a tiny gold earring in it. We haven't had a happy day since.

I am 59 and he is 63. When friends ask me why my husband wears that earring, I don't know what to tell them. Even our priest has asked me.

If you or any of your readers has a clue, please let me know.

STUMPED IN MONTANA

DEAR STUMPED: The only person who can answer your question is your husband. If wearing a tiny gold earring in his left ear has special significance for him, ask him what it is. And if he tells you, please tell me.

DEAR ABBY: My husband grew up in a family of kissers. They were constantly giving each other (and everybody else) long, enthusiastic kisses on the mouth whenever the occasion arose.

I have asked my husband not to kiss our preteen daughters this way, and he thinks I am strange for feeling as I do. Abby, I have absolutely no objection to kissing friends and relatives on the cheek, but I save my mouth-to-mouth kisses for my husband.

When he kissed a young woman friend of mine on the lips last evening as a friendly greeting, she looked embarrassed. When I mentioned it to him later, he said, "Nonsense! It's time you shook your Victorian morals and joined the modern world."

Where do you stand, Abby?

STIFF UPPER LIP

DEAR STIFF: With you. The mouth is an erogenous zone, reserved for one's lover—or for mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

Senator's aide spied for Soviets?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI investigated espionage charges in 1968 against one of Sen. James O. Eastland's aides who subsequently admitted furnishing information to Soviet agents and was fired, according to two knowledgeable sources. The FBI tried to use the man as a double agent who would maintain his contacts with the Soviets in order to gather information for the FBI, the sources said Wednesday.

But that plan was abandoned because FBI agents concluded the man was unreliable, said the sources. He was never prosecuted. Both sources are familiar with the case; one is a former FBI intelligence official.

The FBI also investigated two of its own agents suspected of passing secret information to hostile foreign spies in the 1950s, the former official said.

The "hush-hush" probes produced circumstantial evidence against the two agents but neither was ever prosecuted, the source said.

In the Eastland case, the suspected Soviet spy was described as a "staff aide" to the powerful Mississippi Democrat. He worked for Eastland from May 1966 to May 1968, when the senator fired him.

Eastland was in Mississippi and could not be reached for comment. The FBI had no immediate comment.

The conservative Southerner is the dean of the Senate and for years has been one of its most influential members, particularly in matters concerning the Justice Department and the FBI.

His position as chairman of the Judiciary Committee and its internal security subcommittee gives him and his staff access to law enforcement information which the Soviets might consider valuable.

One of the sources said the FBI learned in about March 1968 that the Eastland aide had been feeding information to Soviet agents. The sources could not provide the aide's name or a description of the information he allegedly provided the Soviets.

Eastland learned of the man's activities and fired him in May 1968. FBI agents interviewed the man the following month, one source said.

The sources said investigators had no conclusive proof the man was either guilty or innocent of espionage activities he had confessed.

The cases against the FBI agents suspected of espionage ended with a similar lack of solid evidence that would hold up in court.

But investigators gathered "fairly strong circumstantial evidence" that an agent in the FBI's Washington field office was selling information to the Soviets in the middle to late 1950s, the former official said.

At one point, the FBI received an anonymous letter "in obviously disguised handwriting" alleging that "somebody from the FBI was furnishing information to the foreign embassy," the official said.

The letter said the agent would talk with his Soviet contact at a telephone booth near a bowling alley in suburban Maryland in late afternoon on a specific date, the source recalled.

FBI agents staked out the phone booth at the time given and "sure enough, this fellow from the Washington field office did show up and make a phone call," the source said. The agent was confronted with this and other evidence, "but I heard he denied everything and claimed the phone call was innocent," the source said.

The agent's spying activities were "nipped in the bud" and he subsequently resigned from the FBI, the source said.

The other investigation, also in the 1950s, "was a very hushhush case in New York," the source said. "As I recall, it was never resolved one way or the other," despite years of investigation.

The former official declined to elaborate on grounds that disclosure of

County judges in West Texas to join Big Spring's battle

By MARJ CARPENTER
An appeal at the end of the meeting of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Council board of directors brought support of the county judges in West Texas to Big Spring's attempts to keep Webb Air Force.

Harold Hall, chairman of the board, asked for the support of the other counties and received unanimous support with most of the judges indicating that they would contact their respective Congressmen in a 17-county area.

Webb Air Force Base is the only military installation in the entire Permian Basin region.

In other action Wednesday, the board approved funding from the state highway department for ramps off IS 20 into Pecos in Reeves County of $133,200. Directors also approved Midland County's preapplication for community development funds for $54,000.

The city of Goldsmith, needing to replace gas lines and Ector County needing to get gas service out to an area now using expensive butane outside Odessa, both applied for the same HUD funds. Rather than side with either group, the board agreed to leave the decision in the matter to the federal government.

The board also gave its stamp of approval to an FHA project for 120 units of the Hyde Park Apartments in Midland, and a grant for $323,000 for the Mental Health and Mental Retardation project in the Odessa area.

The board gave approval to a second year of funding for the Emergency Medical Service which is in the process of obtaining ambulances for various areas. It will also set up television monitoring stations at several hospital emergency rooms in the Permian Basin.

The board also set priorities for the law enforcement projects in the Permian Basin next year. This includes funds for the regional law academy, equipment for the teletype system and approved projects in Odessa, Andrews and Dawson County.

Dawson County was approved for $10,000 for a pre-delinquent project. The board discussed approving $85,000 for jail improvements in Lamesa but it must be matched by the county. Judge Leslie Pratt told the group that the county did not have the matching $85,000 at this time. This was placed ninth on the priority list and may come up again at a later date.

Four more people were appointed to the EMS Advisory Committee. They include Bill Kilgore, Odessa, Frank Russell, Andrews; Fred Faulkner, Fort Stockton and Fred Worsley, Seagraves.

At the end of the meeting,

Judge Chester Taggart from Monahans asked for a study of industrial waste in the Permian Basin.

He claimed that Ward County had been notified by the Water Quality Board that cement from several of their oil-related industries could not be dumped in the county landfill.

They were told that it must be dumped at an industrial waste site and that there was no industrial dump site in the region. "Ward County is left holding the cement," Judge Taggart added.

'There's no way to go now but to settle,' Tom Seaver

TAMPA (AP) — As usual at this time of the baseball year, the pitchers are ahead of the hitters.

"There's no way to go now but to settle," said Tom Seaver of the New York Mets as the players savored a pair of court decisions that upheld an arbitrator's ruling granting free agent status to pitchers Andy Messersmith and Dave McNally.

The owners told us they had only a 30 per cent chance of winning in the appeals court. They were right. They lost, and now the players have what you might call the ultimate weapon," Seaver said.

The latest court ruling left the owners with an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court as their last resort.

"Do they want to try going to the Supreme Court and meanwhile not play ball or pay salaries for two years?" Seaver wondered.

Snyder JV netters thump Forsan 14-10

SNYDER — Despite Weldon Nichols 8-2 upset of Snyder JV's Darrell Calvert Tuesday the Forsan Buffaloes lost the dual tennis match 14-10.

Except for Nichols' upset of Calvert in the boys' first singles match, the only other points registered by the boys' squad were won by Greg Ward over Gary Atwood 8-6 in the seventh singles match, and Steve Cowley and Alan Hollandsworth in the fourth doubles, 8-4 over Shawn Ragland and Robert Bartlett.

Even with that upset, though, the Forsan girls' team more than held its own. In singles they won four of seven matches and in doubles they won two of three.

Martha Womack, of Snyder, won the second singles match, 8-4 over Elena de los Reyes. Shelly Grosshans picked up Snyder's only other point in singles beating Kim Daniels in the fourth match.

Forsan won the other four: Lisa Day beat Norman Garcia 9-7 in the third, Luisa de los Reyes beat Billie Owens 8-3 in the fifth, Melissa Frank beat Marla Jones 8-5 in the sixth and Deirda Fuller nipped Lori Wafer 9-8.

Nichols and E. de los Reyes lost the first doubles 8-3 to Weber and Womack. Forsan won the next two, Day and L. de los Reyes beating Grosshans and Stevens 8-6. After their number one man was beaten the Tigers won the next five matches in singles. Rodney Babcock beat Steve Cowley 8-6, Bryan Vincent over John Wright 8-3, Jeff Wesson over Gary Martin 8-6, Ragland over Hollandsworth 8-5 and Bartlett over Ricky Davis 8-3. They also won the eighth match 8-6, Kyle Short beating Vance Stevens.

Defending champ and No. 1 team out

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A quarterfinals field from which the defending champion was eliminated begins play tonight in the basketball championships of the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics.

Fifteenth-seeded Newberry of South Carolina bumped defending champion Grand Canyon of Arizona out of the tournament 65-58 in Wednesday night's second round.

Grand Canyon's all-NAIA center, Bayard Forrest, kept the Antelopes alive with 18 rebounds and 19 points. Clyde Agnew starred for Newberry with 25 points.

Another big second round surprise was an 82-75 upset pinned by 16th-seeded Texas Southern on previously unbeaten Fairmont State of West Virginia, seeded first in the tournament.

But Texas Southern didn't convince its coach, Charles Moreland. "Every game we play we get worse," he said.

Joe Retton, the Fairmont State coach, agreed. "I'm sure they didn't play their best game and, obviously, we didn't play ours. But it was a pretty good game to watch."

In other second round games, Alabama-Huntsville ran away from Doane of Nebraska 70-59, Marymount of Kansas warmed up in the second half to whip Central Washington 83-72, Joe Pace sank two free throws with 16 seconds left to give Coppin State of Maryland a 68-67 edge over Wisconsin Parkside, Henderson State of Arkansas staved off Illinois Wesleyan 68-66, guard Kevin Potter led Lincoln Memorial past 10th-seeded California Baptist 107-78, and forwards Gary Fors and Jim Kjolhede combined for 57 points as Lake Superior upset Edinboro State 76-73.

Tonight's quarterfinals schedule: 5:15 p.m. Lake Superior vs. Henderson State. 7 p.m. Lincoln Memorial vs. Newberry. 8:45 p.m. Texas Southern vs. Coppin State. 10:30 p.m. Alabama-Huntsville vs. Marymount.

that there will be hundreds of unsigned players who will play out their option this year," says Marvin Miller, executive director of the players' association. "I predict that there will be less than two dozen who will do it. My proposal is that we put the reserve clause issue aside and find out just how many players will play out their option."

Chair kicking, towel ripping affair — NCAA

You can look for Lou Carnesecca to kick a chair into the seats and for Bobby Knight to tear up a towel. In other words, it's time for the NCAA basketball playoffs.

Those two highly excitable coaches will be on the sidelines — and probably all over the court — as Carnesecca's 17-ranked St. John's team meets No. 1 Indiana in a first-round Midwest Regional game at South Bend, Ind., Saturday.

The St. John's-Indiana matchup is one of 16 first-round games from coast to coast and could be one of the most interesting.

The Redmen and Hoosiers met earlier this season in the Holiday Festival at Madison Square Garden and the brawny Hoosiers defeated New York's finest 76-69 in a game that wasn't decided until the end.

Carnesecca's players won't have the hometown crowd to buoy them this time, but they're a self-sustaining emotional team — a key factor for Saturday's game. George Johnson is the high scorer and Frank Alagia the catalyst.

The Hoosiers, led by Scott match shots, 30 other clubs will be trying to make it past the first round of the NCAA playoffs.

In the other Midwest Regional game at South Bend, Western Michigan will face Virginia Tech. The Midwest Regionals will also be held at Dayton, Ohio, where Alabama plays North Carolina and Marquette takes on Western Kentucky.

One of the East Regionals at Charlotte, N.C., it's Virginia against DePaul and VMI vs. Tennessee. In the other at Providence, R.I., Princeton meets Rutgers while Hofstra plays Connecticut.

In the Midwest at Denton, Tex., it's Syracuse against Texas Tech and Michigan against Wichita State. At Lawrence, Kan., Missouri meets Washington and Cincinnati plays Notre Dame.

The first-round West Regional at Tempe, Ariz., pits Pepperdine against Memphis State and Arizona vs. Georgetown.

Midland netters zap the Hawks

Midland's women also won all four doubles' matches by six-love scores. Diepraan and Reger beat Wood and Watson and Sawyer and Draper beat Wood and McWhorter.

Howard's men made it a little more interesting — but not much. In singles Dennis McKeown beat James Easterling 6-0, 6-2; Derrick Edwards beat Tim Brown 6-0, 6-1; Scott Mueller beat Marcellino Chavez 6-2, 6-1 and Steve Hall beat Alan Roman 6-2, 6-1. In doubles Edwards and McKeown beat Brown and Easterling 6-0, 6-1 and Hall and Mueller beat Chavez and Roman 6-1, 6-0.

Webb AFB experiencing urban encroachments

(Special to The Herald) WASHINGTON — The following is a complete text of a briefing given by the Air Force liaison officer to Cong. Omar Burleson Wednesday on the proposed closing of Webb AFB:

Declining forecast requirements for new pilots have reduced the rate for undergraduate training (UPT) which, in turn, have resulted in excess capacity at seven Air Training Command bases devoted to the UPT mission. Efficiency and good management practices dictate that the training capacity be brought into balance with production requirements. Closure of two UPT bases is one alternative for bringing these factors into balance. Recognition that closure of UPT bases may be necessary, a review of relative utility of each UPT base was conducted. This preliminary review indicated that Webb may be closed with relatively low adverse impact on productivity and would not generate substantial costs which would offset potential savings.

On the other hand, Webb has operational limitations because of two-runway configuration which inhibits UPT production capacity and requires operational restrictions to insure safe air traffic flow. Other UPT bases have three runways. The closure of Webb, along with other proposed UPT base actions, would eliminate the remaining two UPT bases with only two runways.

Webb is also experiencing increased urban encroachments which dictate operational restrictions and inefficient traffic patterns. In addition, Webb has a high percentage of sub-standard facilities which would eventually require substantial military construction and closure of Webb would permit reallocation of scarce construction dollars to other Air Force requirements.

Therefore, to achieve maximum savings, it is proposed that Webb be studied for closure.

Impact of proposed action: Currently, Webb has approximately 1,850 military, 700 civilian personnel and 300 students. Should the study result in a decision to close Webb, there would be a reduction to a caretaker force of approximately 320 military and civilian personnel.

All facilities at Webb would be declared excess to Air Force requirements and made available for use by the agencies. The caretaker manpower positions after the initial reductions would be eliminated upon completion of excess actions. Prior to the final decision, the Air Force will conduct a detailed study of technical, operational, economic and other pertinent factors related to the proposed action, including preparation and filing of environmental impact statement.

Midland, Odessa mayors stress economic impact

WASHINGTON — The possible closing of Webb AFB would have a negative economic impact on Midland and Odessa and the Permian Basin as a whole, the mayors of those two cities told congressmen here today.

Odessa mayor Dan Hemphill and Midland mayor Ernest Angelo, on very short notice, joined the Big Spring delegation which flew to Washington Wednesday afternoon to protest the possible closing of Webb.

Included in the Big Spring group were Mayor Wade Choate, J. Tom Graham, Winston Wrinkle and Ralph Brooks.

"I am concerned about the impact of closing the base on Big Spring, Midland, Odessa and the Permian Basin as a whole," Angelo told Cong. Omar Burleson. "From my knowledge of the situation, it doesn't make good sense from the stand-

Local man shooting victim

Andrew Edmonson, 38, drove up to the side parking lot south of St. Mary's Episcopal Church at 2:52 p.m. Wednesday and shot himself in the head, according to the police report.

The man was inside a 1974 Volkswagen which was locked and he was sitting in the driver's seat.

Two women and a child, Mrs. Linda Murphree and her child and Mrs. Zandra Basham, had just arrived to attend a funeral at the church.

Edmonson was reported to have waved a revolver at them and then put the gun to the right side of his forehead and pulled the trigger.

Police Detective Leroy Spires said that there was an empty gun box and 48 shells and a Bible on the front seat of the car. His sister is secretary of the church.

Mrs. Murphree, a registered nurse, administered aid until the ambulance arrived. He was taken to Malone-Hogan Hospital where he died in the emergency room at 4:50 p.m. Wednesday.

Good news for street backers

District Highway Engineer Roger Welch, Abilene, told Harry Nagel, city manager, here today that the 11th Place Extension project will go forward as planned.

The fear that it might be among the cutbacks in the state highway programs had been expressed in recent weeks.

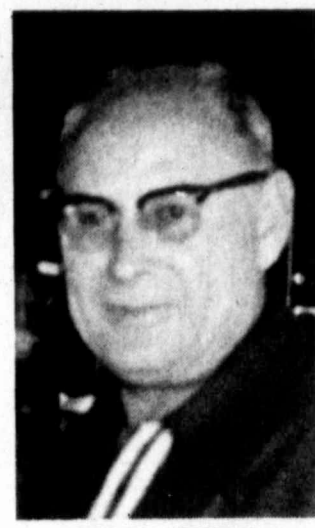

Big Spring has obtained funding for the paving of Scurry Street as well as the 11th Place extension to Gregg Street through the highway department.

Judge Bill Tule and Nagel also helped obtain rurally designated highway department funds for the Moss Creek bridge project, which is still scheduled.

The overpass at Owens Street now being constructed over the railroad complex is also a long-awaited highway department project in Big Spring.

Body of truck dispatcher found, sheriff suspects 'foul play'

By JOHN EDWARDS Sheriff A. N. Standard said he and a deputy found the body of a man missing since Jan. 10 near a metal culvert in a county road about 20 miles north of Big Spring Wednesday afternoon.

WILTON PYBUS

Wilton Dorris Pybus, 55, was lying on his stomach under a tree with a broken limb, Justice of the Peace Gus Ochotorena Jr. said.

There was about a four-foot drop from the unpaved road surface, Sheriff A. N. Standard said.

The employee of Tesoro Transport was 6 feet 2 tall and weighed about 200 pounds, Standard said.

Standard suspected "foul play" in the truck dispatcher's death.

But law enforcement officers were unable to determine immediately whether Pybus had been stabbed, shot or died from another cause.

The sheriff found $14 in cash, credit cards and a $129 check in a billfold on the body.

Pybus was in the same clothes he was last seen wearing, Standard said.

Standard said identification will be verified when the Texas Department of Public Safety (DPS) takes the victim's prints. Alert Ambulance took the body here for an autopsy, which Ochotorena expects a report on Friday.

The body was in rubble and difficult to see, officials said.

"You could step right in front of the body," Ochotorena said, "and you couldn't tell the body was there."

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Simpson, who ranch nearby, called the sheriff's office when a dog was seen in their front yard with a bone believed to be human, Standard said.

The couple was helping the sheriff's office search when Standard and Deputy Sheriff Eddie Owen discovered the body, the sheriff said.

The death scene is by the Howard-Borden County line on a road leading from the Gail Highway to the Vealmoor Community, Standard said.

The sheriff's office has spoken to two persons who told of seeing Pybus alive during daylight at a local restaurant Jan. 10, Standard said. Pybus was trying to obtain additional citizen band radio equipment, the sheriff added.

His car was left parked by the restaurant, Standard explained. Channel 13 Chers spent a weekend searching for the man who used the CB "handle" of "Tree Top." Standard said missing person reports were dispatched nationwide.

In addition to the police investigation, Standard said his office had researched Pybus' background looking for a clue in the man's disappearance. Police helped investigation at the scene.

The investigation is being renewed in hopes of establishing who might have had a motive and the opportunity to kill Pybus.

While transportation for the autopsy may be expensive, Ochotorena said the DPS will conduct the autopsy at no cost to the county.

PATMAN BURIED — Rep. Wright Patman, D-Tex., was buried in Texarkana Wednesday as old friends, Rep. Carl Albert, Speaker of the House, and Mrs. Lyndon Johnson attended graveside services. An Honor Guard folds the flag before the casket is lowered into the grave. Patman, 82, died Sunday in Washington from pneumonia.

Big Spring hosts vocational administrators, supervisors

Vocational administrators and supervisors from the West Texas area public schools are in attendance this week at the second of a series of nine leadership training conferences to be held in this area of Texas during the next few years.

The theme of this year's spring conference is Supervisory Procedures and Techniques which is being conducted by Perry Thompson, training specialist, engineering extension service, Texas A&M University System.

Thompson is a 1962 graduate of Big Spring High School and the son of Mr. & Mrs. D. P. Thompson of 1107 E. Fourth Street, Big Spring.

The training conferences are sponsored by the Texas Education Agency Department of Occupational Education and Technology to assist in the development of capabilities of vocational administrators and supervisors so that they may better serve in the public school vocational programs.

Participants are from Abilene, Big Spring, El Paso,

Midland, San Angelo and Ysleta School Districts. John Bagnall, vocational administrator for the Big Spring public schools, is the local school representative participating in the conference.

Patty 'sobbed' at probe SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A psychiatrist whom Patricia Hearst once accused of bullying her to tears says she "quivered and half-sobbed" when he bluntly inquired into her motives for joining terrorists in a bank holdup. Dr. Harry Kozol, who was embroiled in a dispute with Miss Hearst in January, began his testimony for the prosecution Wednesday at her trial for bank robbery. U.S. Atty. James L. Browning Jr. said Kozol, who interviewed the defendant five times, will challenge her contention that she was still a frightened kidnap victim when she joined her Symbionese Liberation Army captors in crime.

Help offered by governor

Gov. Dolph Briscoe's office called Harry Nagel, city manager, here this morning and offered assistance in the fight to keep Webb Air Force Base.

Money woes hit industrial unit

BALLINGER — Members of the Ballinger Industrial Foundation were told here Monday that the Ballinger Memorial Hospital is facing a financial crisis and will not be able to continue operations under present conditions.

Colonel Owens explains plans process. Under the Federal Property and Administration Services Act of 1949, officials will determine what of the base's property is excess. The property will then be disposed of by officials of the General Services Administration. Distribution will be based on considerations of the local economic situations in which several options are possible. These options will all be contingent on factors such as the amount of total community housing, the number of schools, and whether a revenue producing venture using base property would be advisable.

Many work to 'save' base in Big Spring

Civic leaders and governmental leaders are working hand in hand to try to help save Webb Air Force Base. However, in case the worst comes and there is no saving of the base, community leaders then plan to take a good hard look at replacing the base's influence in the community and economy of the area. One of the possibilities is, of course, that the air base area could eventually be used as an industrial park. This has been done in Laredo, Mineral Wells and Denison-Sherman, which are all Texas cities which have undergone the impact in recent years of losing an air base. "For a year or two, these communities had to work really hard. However, in the long run they are all three now larger cities than they were at the time the bases closed," Ed Foreman, chairman of the Southwest Federal Regional Council in Dallas for a five-state area. Tom Roy, new industrial director for the community, said today, "Of course we are hoping to save the base and are directing all of our energies in that direction. However, if worst comes to worst, yes, the base is tailor-made for an industrial park." Terry Hanson, chamber manager, added, "It has everything needed such as utilities, streets, warehouses, rails and housing." Foreman said in a telephone conversation Wednesday, "We'll try to help you save the base if possible, but if this becomes impossible, we can probably help with many other things that will help the growth of Big Spring."

Worse than last year

College job market bleak

WASHINGTON (AP) — The job market for this year's male college graduate is bleaker than it was for last year's but the picture is brighter for women expecting degrees, college placement services report.

Reports from 159 colleges and universities, compared with March 1975, show job offers over-all are down 16 per cent for bachelor's degree candidates, 25 per cent for master's candidates and 32 per cent for doctoral students, the College Placement Council said Wednesday.

Although still on the negative side," it said, "these figures are a marked improvement over the picture in January when bachelor's volume was down 37 per cent, master's 33 per cent and doctoral 51 per cent."

The brightest spot in the survey was an increased demand for female graduates on the job market, although women represent only 16 per cent of all new job takers at the bachelor's level and 15 per cent at the master's level.

Women who plan to get a bachelor's degree have received 27 per cent more job offers in March than a year ago, while offers to men have dropped 20 per cent. At the master's level, the volume for women is up 36 per cent while for men it is down 13 per cent.

On the over-all decline in offers for March, the council, based in Bethlehem, Pa., speculated that companies may be making job offers later this year than in the past.

"There are reports from Hurt woman runs for Wallace

HYATTSVILLE, Md. (AP) — Dora Thompson, the woman wounded in the 1972 assassination attempt on George C. Wallace, is running this year as a national convention delegate for the Alabama governor.

Mrs. Thompson was campaigning for Wallace in a Laurel, Md., shopping center May 15, 1972, when shots felled Wallace, a Secret Service agent and the 38-year-old housewife.

The .38-caliber bullet fired by Arthur Bremer, the convicted assailant, fractured Mrs. Thompson's lower right leg. After 29 weeks in a cast, her leg now aches only in damp weather, she said.

Guard disappears with $500,000

SAN MATEO, Calif. (AP) — On Feb. 11, a Brinks guard named Richard C. Rees disappeared with half a million dollars. Not a trace of him has been found, despite a wide-ranging investigation, and a police sergeant says, "He may be the greatest rip-off artist of all time."

Rees, 26, was last seen wheeling a handtruck loaded with a champagne case from his armored car into a restaurant here. There were no bottles inside. The box was crammed with more than $500,000 in cash and securities.

The driver of the armored car said later the restaurant was one of several stops on an afternoon money pickup route. He said Rees told him he had to deliver the champagne to someone inside.

Rees vanished, along with handtruck and box.

In an effort to locate him,

Chaplin gets brass mask

LONDON (AP) — Charlie Chaplin has paid, an unheralded visit to London to receive a brass mask — symbol of fellowship in the British Academy of Film and Television — from Princess Anne.

The daughter of Queen Elizabeth II is president of the academy. On Wednesday, she enrolled the 86-year-old legend of silent films into the academy, which bestows fellowships upon persons of distinction in the film and television world.

authorities are conducting intensive research into his past.

"We're trying to compile a sophisticated profile of all known acquaintances, information from his youth to his military record, analysis of his conversations," said San Mateo Police Sgt. Ed Trucco.

"We're trying to find out how he thinks. When we're finished, we should have a fairly good idea about Mr. Rees."

Information compiled so far shows Rees went to work for Brinks in October 1972 after a series of other jobs and two years in the Marine Corps, during which he earned a Purple Heart in Vietnam.

Rees left his wife of 2½ months behind when he fled. He had no criminal record. He maintained a "low profile" and did his job unobtrusively, Trucco said.

In a radio interview after the theft, a tearful Mrs. Rees said her husband was a "laughing, happy person" who kept regular hours and never acted strangely.

"We can't think of another case where a single man, using no violence or weapons, escaped with such a large amount of untraceable cash," Trucco said.

Despite his haul, says Trucco, Rees may find it hard to flee the country or remain undercover indefinitely.

"It's darn hard to get through customs anywhere with a suitcase full of money," he said. "Besides, we have good photos of him and Interpol has them."

Lions sponsoring blood donor day

The Downtown Lions Club is pushing for a large turnout next Wednesday (March 17) when it is sponsoring the blood donor day.

West Texas Blood Service Center will be at Malone Hogan Hospital Wednesday from 12 noon to 5 p.m. for its weekly collection for the blood bank. There will be no regular program at the weekly meeting at the Settles — instead many Lions are expected to go to the hospital to give blood.

The weekly collection here has been running considerably below the 20-unit level necessary to justify it.

Also, there is a pressing demand for more units in the blood bank so that individuals in need of blood will not be denied access to it, said Dick Klein, chairman of the club's effort.

At Wednesday's meeting, Sherri Snodgrass was selected as the club's queen nominee, with Cindy Smith as runnerup. Sherri will represent the club at the district convention in Brownwood April 23-24. The winner there goes to the State meeting in Denton May 28-29. Paige Little, retiring queen, and Mrs. Freida Hoover, sponsor, were presented with corsages.

Despite protests

Rotarians pick ex-Nazi for president

CHICAGO (AP) — Rotary International has nominated as its next president an Austrian ex-Nazi despite protests against the move from Dutch Rotarians, an official of the worldwide service organization says.

Dr. Wolfgang Wick, vice chairman of the board of directors of the Austro-American Magensite Co. in Radenthein, Austria, was the sole candidate picked earlier this year by an 11-member Rotary nominating committee.

Simon Wiesenthal, an Austrian Jew who since the end of World War II has made a career of hunting ex-Nazis-in-hiding, said Wick held an important economic post from 1938 until early 1945 in Austria.

Wiesenthal said Wick became a Nazi member in 1933, five years before the German occupation of Austria, and in February 1945 was called into the Waffen SS, the Nazi elite army corps, because of his position.

The New York Times carried a similar report in its Thursday editions.

Wiesenthal also said that Wick spent more than a year in a British internment camp in Austria after the war.

The governors of the 8,000 Rotarians in The Netherlands issued a formal protest against the nomination, as did Israeli Rotary officials, said Wiesenthal.

In a telephone interview Wednesday night in Chicago, where he is on a speaking tour, Wiesenthal said he knew of no war crimes that Wick allegedly might have committed. "It is not my business. He didn't commit any crimes. People only ask me if he was a Nazi."

Harry A. Stewart, general secretary of Rotary International at its Evanston headquarters in suburban Chicago, said Wick "resigned the nomination for personal reasons as he stated it," after a protest by The Netherlands Rotarians. The nominating committee, however, comprised of persons from six regions of the world, once again chose him.

Under Rotary rules, any of the 16,705 chapters worldwide may place in nomination any other qualified nominee before an April 16 deadline. But if no other candidate is offered, after a 10-day withdrawal period, Wick automatically would be elected at the organization's June 13 convention in New Orleans to serve from July 1977 through June 1978.

Stewart said Rotary International has not issued any statement over Wick's alleged affiliation nor is one intended.

"As to whether or not Mr. Wick has issued a statement, I don't know," he said.

There are an estimated 775,000 Rotarians throughout the world.

PATRIOTIC IMMIGRANT FIGHTS 'CITY HALL' — Carlo Bocci, 63, an Italian immigrant who wants to say "Happy Birthday America" during the bicentennial, is at odds with City Hall over the red, white and blue decoration (above) he's placed on the sides of a building he owns at San Clemente, Calif. Officials made him get a city permit and ordered removal of the designs by the end of July. Bocci says he won't remove it.

Some local governments quitting social security

WASHINGTON (AP) — Growing numbers of local governments are pulling out of the Social Security program at a time when the big federal benefits system is being buffeted by inflation and unemployment.

While alarmed that the defections may snowball, federal officials say there is no indication now of any noticeable impact on the solvency of the Social Security trust funds.

They point out that, despite the dropouts, the over-all number of state, county and city employees covered by Social Security and paying contributions is steadily increasing and has been since they became eligible in 1950.

Under federal law, state and local governments that have had Social Security for at least five years can pull out by giving the federal government two years' advance written notice. They can't join again.

Since 1959, a total of 322 local governments with 44,667 employees have dropped out of Social Security, most of them in California, Louisiana and Texas. And 207 other governments with 53,187 employees have given the required two years' advance notice of intention to terminate.

Alaska, with 12,649 state workers, is the first state to file notice of intent to pull out, but Social Security officials believe that notice was merely protective while the state weighs a decision.

Financially troubled New York City also is exploring the possibility of pulling its 230,000 employees out of Social Security to save the city about $200 million annually.

The Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments in the District of Columbia found that, by pulling out of Social Security and spending the same amount of money on a private plan, it could:

- Allow workers to retire at age 60 with 25 years of service as opposed to age 65 with 30 years service under Social Security;
- Pay retirement benefits at 80 per cent of the highest consecutive five years salary rather than 55 per cent under Social Security;
- Reduce payments from its 166 employees by a total of $20,000 annually with an additional $22,000 agency saving, and maintain survivor benefits.

Social Security officials said in interviews that local governments sometimes consider defecting when they get into money trouble, especially if a hard sell is made by a profit-motivated insurance company hoping to write a private retirement plan.

"Some of these plans are no sounder than Social Security and some are worse," a spokesman said.

For example, federal sources said, a local government's new private pension plan may offer higher retirement payments but smaller or even no payments in lieu of some benefits found in Social Security, such as coverage of a deceased worker's widow and children, disability payments if the worker is unable to earn an income, Medicare health benefits and payments to students up to the age of 22 years. Some private plans also have less desirable provisions for vesting and portability — or carrying a private pension plan to a new job.

Former employes say

CIA protection not adequate

WASHINGTON (AP) — A number of former CIA employes say the Ford administration has not acted effectively to protect undercover agents overseas despite its outrage over the murder of one CIA man and the public identification of others.

But in a series of interviews the former employes, from a street-level undercover "case worker" to senior officials once in the agency's highest echelon, applauded Ford's proposal to make unauthorized disclosure of secret information a federal crime.

More than a year of public discussion of intelligence issues without resolution has brought CIA morale to a low point, left potential sources, including those from the Soviet Union, fearful of offering information to the Central Intelligence Agency and may have damaged agency recruiting for new officers, these men say.

They also reported some current and former CIA employes are bitter and upset by what they see as Ford's failure to defend the agency; others by the use to which past presidents put the agency, and most by what they see as lack of support from Congress and the public.

One former high-ranking official who insisted on anonymity said Ford should have refused to cooperate with congressional investigations.

"Ford should have forced this to a constitutional issue and taken it to the Supreme Court or resigned," he said. "It broke down the separation of powers. Our agents have been exposed and our officials humiliated. We'll pay a heavy price for it."

On Feb. 18, more than one year after initial news reports of CIA abuses, Ford issued an executive order setting guidelines for covert operations and establishing executive review boards. He also proposed that Congress enact legislation making illegal the unauthorized release of secret information by a current or former federal employe.

"The issues of leaks and 'cover,' or disguises for CIA men abroad, were sharpened by the murder last December of Richard C. Welch, CIA station chief in Athens, after he and others were publicly identified over several years as agency employes.

Ford's attack on "leaks" was hailed as vital.

"If you're going to have an intelligence service, the bedrock has to be criminalization of disclosure of sources and methods," Mike Ackerman, a former agent, said.

A former official who asked not to be identified said: "Gentlemen's agreements are not worth anything in this kind of business."

These former officials said public disclosure of intelligence operations has weakened CIA information links around the world.

"If you were the head of a Dutch intelligence agency, for example, you might want to take your secrets somewhere else," said John Bross, who retired in 1971 from the post of deputy to the director.

"A good percentage of our sources have told us to go fly a kite," said Ackerman, who left the agency last May 30 at the age of 34 to publicly defend the CIA and because he feared that the spate of criticism and disclosures would keep him from doing his job properly.

Bentsen is endorsed by state labor group

GALVESTON, Tex. (AP) — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., heads a list of statewide candidates endorsed by the Texas AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education (COPE).

Some 700 delegates attending a convention of COPE, the labor union's political arm, endorsed Bentsen for re-election Wednesday and called him a "respected Congressional leader" with a strong labor voting record.

The list of endorsements recommended by COPE officials contained few surprises and was approved without opposition. The action came at the final session of the two-day convention.

Also endorsed by the group were Texas Railroad Commission candidate Lane Denton of Waco, Texas Supreme Court Justice candidate Charles Barrow of San Antonio, Court of Criminal Appeals candidate Truman Roberts of Austin, and Congressional candidates Welby Parish of Gilmer, District 1; George McAlmon of El Paso, District 16; and Bob Gamme of Houston, District 22.

The report by the group said it would leave to local unions and central labor councils establishment of support for Texas state Senate and House positions.

COPE also endorsed Lee Riedel, an Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers union leader in Texas City, for one of seven seats from Texas on the National Democratic Committee.

AFL-CIO state secretary-treasurer Sherman Fricks noted Bentsen has voted "right" in the eyes of labor 67 per cent of his time in the Senate while his "chief Democratic opponent, Phillip Gramm" has a platform that "reads like something out of the early 19th century."

Fricks told delegates their best efforts should be to register pro-union voters and get out the vote in the presidential election. "Our number one political goal, this year, remains the election of a new president," Fricks said. "We are confident that many of the problems of union members and their unions, including unemployment, and loss of real income, would be solved very quickly with a new Democratic leadership."

Delegates also approved resolutions urging Congress to set stiff penalties for employers who knowingly hire illegal aliens; and asking President Ford to sign the Hatch Act reform bill allowing federal employes and postal workers to participate in political activities.

Schools count declines by

A drop in school registration figures showed 55 fewer students this year. This included 48 graduates who completed requirements at the second quarter.

The big drop was in school where the count down there were 54. There were two fewer pupils in Runnels Junior High. (Junior High remains same.)

College Heights lost Marcy and Moss two. Other elementary showed gains including more at Boydston, two at Cedar Crest, two at Washington and more at Park Hill.

U.N. conference Monday

World agreement on Law of Sea near UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — After years of stormy pursuit, negotiators from the world over converge here Monday with an unprecedented global Law of the Sea clearly in sight. But they could still run aground on little black rocks scattered on the floor of the sea.

There are probably more than a trillion tons of these potato-sized nodules on the seabed at depths of two miles or more, mostly in the Pacific, and they contain enough nickel, copper, cobalt and manganese to supply an industrialized nation for generations, specialists say. The task before the 150 delegations meeting here for the third session of the U.N. Conference on the Law of the Sea is to slice up these riches in a way acceptable to everyone.

Industrialized nations are hungry to start mining with or without a treaty; developing nations fear their exports of raw materials will be undercut; the poorest nations clamor for a slice of the "common heritage."

The aim is to draft one of the most comprehensive global treaties ever envisioned, ranging in scope from the limits of territorial waters and control over fishing to ocean pollution and scientific research.

But delegates from nearly every country — those with long coasts or no coasts; with long-range or short-range fishing fleets, merchant fleets or naval fleets industrialized, developing or impoverished — believe the odds are with them.

"In the field of international law and politics you must never despair," said Jens Evensen, a Norwegian cabinet minister with a Harvard Ph.D. and a love of sailing ships who is regarded as the most influential behind-the-scenes negotiator.

He and other experts and delegates interviewed in advance of the eight-week session say that some of the toughest issues before the conference have been cracked.

Negotiators have agreed to extend a nation's sovereignty from the traditional three miles to 12 miles, and to guarantee passage through the world's 130 or so straits — including such strategic ones as the straits of Gibraltar off Spain and Malacca, off Singapore.

They have agreed to give coastal states exclusive fishing and mining rights in an "economic zone" stretching 200 miles out to sea. The area within which almost all the world's fishing and oil drilling is done. Coastal states would be solely responsible for conserving fishstocks and allowing other nations to catch what they can't use.

Several countries have already set 200-mile economic limits. The U.S. Congress has approved legislation claiming a 200-mile zone for the United States by July 1, 1977.

Coastal nations would also be given jurisdiction over their continental shelf where it stretches out beyond 200 miles, but they would have to share profits from these margins with the international community.

In questions of marine pollution, coastal states would assume the obligation to protect set and enforce standards and an international authority would be set up to protect the deep seabed.

Agreements are also near on giving archipelagic states, such as the Philippines and Indonesia, control over their interior waters; on spelling out regulations for scientific research; on the general rights of landlocked states to have access to the sea, and on dozens of other complex issues.

The experts stress that these agreements are general and that literally hundreds of specifics need to be threshed out in New York, and probably at subsequent sessions. The major hurdle, they agree, is the nodules.

The basic principle governing these nodules is deceptively simple: the United Nations agreed in 1970 that they, and all other riches of the deep seabed, are mankind's "common heritage."

To administer these riches, the sea-law conference has proposed setting up an "International Seabed Authority" complete with an executive council, a tribunal to settle disputes and its own independent source of income from the nodules.

Industrialized powers, exporters of raw materials, and "have-not" nations with the least resources and technology quickly clashed over who would control the Authority, how much to give it over private firms, how to safeguard metal markets and how to split up the profits from the "common heritage."

Industrialized countries — especially the United States, the Soviet Union, Japan, West Germany, Britain and France — saw in the nodules a way to free themselves from dependence for raw materials on Third World sources.

The industrial powers declared they would not tolerate an Authority dominated by developing countries, and would never agree to give the Authority the exclusive right to mine the seabed.

The prospect of a vast new source of copper, nickel and other minerals sent panic through developing countries whose economies depend on these metals for economic survival — especially Zambia, Zaire, Chile and Peru — and they demanded a strong Authority with power to control prices and production.

Finally the poor and landlocked nations demanded a strong vote in the Authority to guarantee they got a fair share of the seabed riches.

So wide were the gaps that some experts said they began to despair of a solution. But in early February, negotiators gathered in New York in a last-ditch effort to salvage the treaty, and, as one delegate said, they scored a "major conceptual breakthrough."

In broad outlines, the industrial powers accepted the principle that land-based producers would be protected and the have-not nations would be compensated. The Third Worlders agreed that the Authority would have only limited control over deep-sea mining and would work with private corporations in some kind of joint enterprise.

Air conditioning cut off at Dyess AFB in Abilene

Officials at Dyess AFB in Abilene have taken drastic steps to conform with a suggestion that all Air Force installations, for budgetary reasons, save the equivalent of a month's electrical bills in a single fiscal year.

Air conditioning is being cut off in all 999 homes and in 173 of the buildings at Dyess until further notice.

Only in those Dyess homes where occupants with a special medical program be left on, according to a Dyess official.

"The only air conditioning will remain in places with critical electronic gear where heat build-up could damage equipment," the official added.

A Dyess information office spokesman said the cutoff is due entirely to problems with the budget — in short, a lack of money to pay the spiraling cost of electric bills for the base.

Fuel conservation practices are being followed at Webb AFB here but no order has gone out yet to shut off air conditioning in homes or buildings.

Dyess electric bills have run as much as $80,000 a month in the summer. The shutoff could last from two to three months and is expected to result in a reduction in fuel consumption of about three per cent.

CALLING ALL HOMEMAKERS

Brought to you by Ted Hatfield

One of the joys of spring is blaze of color after the drab days of winter ... with the earth springing out in bright fresh greens and the myriad hues of new budding flowers, so the whole world seems to wake up and come alive.

You can bring this springtime freshness into your home as well as your garden with new carpeting. Bright fresh colors are the big story in carpets these days ... either single hues or multicolors.

Because carpeting covers such a large area in any room, the largest color area of any of the room's furnishings (only the walls and ceiling rival its area), that floor covering has more to do with the room's visual color impact than all the upholstered furniture.

The result is that you can make a drab room come alive like a spring garden with one change ... the installation of a large room-size or area rug, or especially with a wall-to-wall installation that covers the whole floor with a fresh glory of style and color.

Make your spring change now ... come in to our showroom and look over the colors blooming in our displays. We'll gladly help you coordinate your new carpet with your decor ... and your budget.

Reduce cooking time, amount of water to preserve vital food nutrients

This is the fifth in a series of six articles prepared to inform you about ways and means to assist you to keep physically fit through proper application of good nutrition principles and through practicing good health habits. The theme for this bicentennial year is "Improving Nutrition For The Nation." It is the aim of the members of the West Texas Dietetic Association and your county extension agent to inform the public regarding the importance of good nutrition. National Nutrition Week is being observed the week of March 7-13; the West Texas Dietetic Association urges everyone to apply the ABC's of good nutrition to their every day life.

vitamins, and some of the mineral compounds are soluble in water. The amount of water used, the length of the cooking period, and the amount of surface area exposed are of special importance in retaining these nutrients. The three Rs of cooking to conserve nutrients are: reduce the amount of water used; reduce the length of cooking period; reduce the amount of surface area exposed. Methods for cooking vegetables to conserve their nutrients are steaming, pressure cooking and cooking quickly in a tightly covered pan with only enough water to prevent scorching. The longer a food is cooked, the greater is the destruction of nutrients in it. For this reason water should be boiling when the vegetable is added. Much of the vitamin and mineral loss can be recovered if the cooking liquid (pot liquor) is used. Since about one-third of the water soluble nutrients in canned vegetables are in the liquid, it is desirable that the liquid be used. This may be done in various ways. The liquid may be boiled down before adding the liquid. Drinking the liquid hot provides a tasty beverage. Save the liquid to use in soups and gravies. Waterless cooking is not necessarily superior to other methods. The term is a misnomer, as the method depends on juice extracted from vegetables or any clinging rinse water. The method does not permit quick cooking, and the advantage of using little or no added water may be canceled by the longer cooking period. Expensive equipment is not essential for cooking foods to conserve their nutrients. Any utensil that has a lid that fits the top and is heavy enough to prevent vapor and steam from escaping to any extent is suitable for cooking with a minimum amount of added water. The material used in the construction of the cooking utensil is not important.

By SHERRY MULLIN
Experience has shown that most foods must be cooked to be acceptable to the human palate. Some foods, mainly from among the fruit and vegetable groups, are highly palatable when eaten raw. Uncooked and unsoaked foods retain a good portion of their nutritive value. But since most foods are cooked, considerable attention has been directed to identifying the reasons for cooking food. The main purposes for cooking food are to make its maximum nutritive value available in a palatable form; to develop, enhance, or alter its flavor; to improve its digestibility; to increase its palatability by improving its color, texture, or flavor; and to destroy pathogenic organisms and injurious substances which may be found in or on the raw food. Cooking speeds the loss of some nutrients. It concentrates others, mainly by removing moisture and fat. Ascorbic acid, all the B-

What about the honeymoon?

HOUSTON (AP) — William Odell Hines, 38, was married Wednesday but he couldn't make it to the ceremony. He was in jail.

R. R. Rainosek, 35, Hines' lawyer, stood in for the groom in a proxy marriage to the former Carrie T. Haydel, 66, in Justice of the Peace Kenneth Pacetti's office.

Hines has been detained in the county jail without bond after escaping from the city jail several weeks ago to get married.

He was arrested the first time about five years ago on a charge of burglary and was put on probation. He failed to report on schedule to his probation officer, authorities said, and was placed in the city jail shortly before last Christmas.

Rainosek said Hines walked away about six weeks ago to marry his bride-to-be but was taken into custody while the couple was taking blood tests.

"I tried to get Hines out of jail for the wedding but he's not on bond," Rainosek said. "The honeymoon may have to wait."

Estoril to plug back

Location is 2,200 feet from the south and 890 feet from the east lines of 27-33-2N-T&P.

The original opener of the Bond field, A. K. Turner Jr. No. 1 J.S. Walker, topped the Clearfork at 4,600 feet and the Spraberry at 6,665 feet on derrick floor elevation of 2,614 feet.

Founder wants to revive Newport jazz

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — George Wein, the father of the Newport jazz festival, says he might try to return the music program to this seaport city for the summer of 1977.

Interviewed by telephone in Cincinnati, Wein said the program would be traditional jazz and would be held at Ft. Adams in Newport.

Wein's Newport festivals ended in 1971 when a riot broke up the second night of the program. The remaining performances and the related folk festival were canceled by the City Council.

In recent years, Wein has staged the festival in New York, calling it the Newport Jazz Festival — New York.

Man saw first world series
VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Percy Durgin is disappointed but not heartbroken that this year's spring training games are delayed, even though he's been a baseball fan since he saw the first World Series.

Durgin, 91, saw the first World Series — the 1903 classic between the Boston Red Sox and Pittsburgh Pirates.

"I'm not heartbroken," Durgin said about the cancellation of Friday's Grapefruit League opener between Boston and Los Angeles.
