Ford's veto slapped down

House revives Webb hopes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House today overrode Ford's veto of a $3.3 billion military construction bill, which included a rider which gives Congress the right to review prospective base closing and cut-backs. The bill now goes to the Senate.

Earlier today, the House took final action on the override of Ford's veto of a $3.95 billion public works jobs bill, enacting it into law.

The House vote on the military construction bill was 270 to 131, or two more than the required two-thirds. The bill now goes to the Senate for a consideration of an override attempt. Congress has overridden the President nine times and sustained him 14 times.

Final action on the jobs bill came in the House, which overrode Ford's veto by a vote of 310 to 96, or 39 more than the required two-thirds. Fifty-seven Republicans joined 253 Democrats in voting to override. Voting to sustain were 15 Democrats and 81 Republicans.

The issue on the military construction bill was Ford's objection to a provision strengthening congressional ability to review Pentagon decisions to close or greatly reduce military installations that are a major source of civilian employment. The President said this was an excessive limitation on his powers.

The Democratic-controlled Congress and the Democratic candidates for president and vice president have made an assault on joblessness a major election-year issue.

The Senate voted 73 to 24 Wednesday to override Ford's veto of the public works bill.

House Majority Leader Thomas O'Neill and other Democratic leaders had predicted they would have no difficulty winning the jobs bill override.

Supporters of the public works bill say it would create 200,000 construction and other jobs while protecting another 90,000 state and local government jobs.

Sen. Walter Mondale, the Democrats' vice presidential nominee, said he couldn't understand Ford's veto because "the worst thing you can do is deny people work. This country needs work."

An aide in Sen. John Tower's office said he felt the major struggle to have the President's veto overridden would come in the House of Representatives. He said the Pentagon had been working "feverishly" this week to prevent the House from overriding.

The action in Congress followed on the heels of a rumor from a high placed source Wednesday that one possible mission being considered for Webb Air Force Base could be to move the Pilot Instructor Training (PIT) program from Randolph Air Force Base.

In checking on the rumor Wednesday, Big Spring news organizations were unable to confirm it.

An aide to Cong. Omar Burleson said that there is no indication that the Air Force is actively considering that alternative at this moment.

The PIT program was one suggestion made by Big Spring Mayor Wade Choate in March for a mission change. The suggestion was conveyed to the Pentagon by Cong. Burleson, who requested a thorough study of the possibility.

Burleson's aide said that environmental impact statement on Webb, when it is finally released, must deal with alternatives to closing Webb, and so the impact statement should deal with the PIT possibility.

An aide in Sen. Tower's office had said earlier that he could get no feel on the PIT suggestion. Some in the Pentagon seemed to think it was a workable idea, he said, while others said it would not be.

Aides have noted that the idea would no doubt be strongly opposed by Randolph Air Force Base, the headquarters for the Air Training Command.

Winston Wrinkle, owner of KBST Radio and a member of the Legislative Affairs Committee of the Century Club, talked Wednesday afternoon with Lt. Gen. John Roberts, commander of ATC in San Antonio.

Wrinkle said Gen. Roberts stated that he did not feel that moving the PIT program to Webb was a feasible idea. Roberts said the basic problem was that there are seven ATC bases, too many for the number of pilots being trained.

Wrinkle quizzed the lieutenant general closely about the planned expansion at Reese Air Force Base and the necessity for spending $10 million for a clear-zone at Randolph when the expense would be much less at Webb, but Gen. Roberts said the ATC needed the projects done at the other bases, even though creating a clear-zone at Webb would be much cheaper.

The Pentagon Thursday still was unable to give any idea of when the environmental impact statement on Webb might be released. Congressional aides have suggested that sometime in August was probably the best guess at this point.

Tower will vote for veto override

WASHINGTON — Sen. John Tower, R-Tex., said Wednesday he will vote to override President Ford's veto of a $3.3 billion military construction authorization bill which would provide $36.7 million for construction projects at nine Army and Air Force Bases in Texas.

The President vetoed the bill July 2 because of a provision in it which would give Congress the right to review prospective base closings or reductions. This would take in Webb AFB at Big Spring.

Congress voted to override the veto 270 to 131 today and sent the bill to the Senate for its vote.

Tower was one of nine senators to sign a letter urging their Senate colleagues to vote to override the President's veto.

"I believe it is essential that Congress has a right to review base closings," Tower said. "The impact of base closings on the national security and on the local economy of the affected areas is too hard to have the decision made by the executive branch alone."

The President objected to section 612 of the military construction bill which would require the Department of Defense to give Congress notice one year prior to implementing a decision to close or substantially reduce a military base.

Sens. Stuart Symington and Thomas Eagleton of Missouri, Edward Brooke and Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, James Buckley and Jacob Javits of New York and William Hathaway of Maine also signed the letter urging a vote to override.

RESULTS OF THE BLAZE — This aerial photograph clearly shows the portion of Cosden Refinery damaged during the blazes Sunday night. It also includes the portion saved by valiant fire fighting efforts. If you look closely, you can see four tanks near the top of the photograph, two on the right, and one in the center that probably were the seven explosions heard Sunday night, during the first three hours of the fire. No damage estimate has yet been released.

Kids split over punishment

CHOWCHILLA, Calif. (AP) — "At first I was a little scared to talk about it," admitted Jennifer Brown.

But then words starting spilling out of the 8-year-old girl's mouth as she and her brother described how they and 24 other school children were kidnaped from their bus last Thursday and buried alive in a dirt-covered moving van.

"We saw a van in the middle of the road. A guy got on. He had a gun. My brother thought it was a joke. He got up on his seat with his hands up and shouted, "We didn't do it." Jennifer told the San Francisco Examiner Wednesday.

Her 10-year-old brother, Jeffrey, added, "Everybody laughed. I crack a lot of jokes in school. Then the guy said, 'Everyone get in back.' Everybody said, 'Really funny, Jeff.' "Then another guy came on. He put on white gloves and drove the bus. They all wore white gloves," Jeffrey said.

Jennifer continued, "As soon as we saw the guy's gun everybody got scared ... he drove the bus down into the slough. There was a green van waiting for us.

"We thought they were going to take us and scare us, then take us home. We asked if they were going to hurt us. They said they weren't going to hurt us. We asked if they were going to take us home. They said, 'In a little while.' We were all crying. We screamed our heads off.

"The guns were all I looked at. Two guys were standing on the side with the guns," Jennifer added.

"They drove around. We were just sitting there singing. Everyone was still scared. ... I thought we were going to die, die at a young age."

Her brother picked up the tale with the vans stopping at the quarry in Livermore.

"When they backed up to the hole our van hit a tree. ... When I saw the hole I first thought it was a tent. They were going to lock us in it and zip it up. Then I found out it was a hole. I missed a couple of steps on the ladder and came down the hard way.

"We heard them shoveling out there, like they were putting dirt on top of the box. They were just shoveling us in."

The brother and sister said that bus driver Ed Ray and 14-year-old Mike Marshall then starting trying to get out of the buried van.

"We thought there might be two guys standing up there with shotguns looking down on us, saying, 'Ha, ha, ha. You're trying to get out,'" Jennifer said.

Jeffrey said one boy cried, "We're never going to see our folks again." I said, "Think of Christmas or something good."

"After a while I went up and helped dig dirt back. Then Robert stuck his fingers through a hole in the roof and pulled back. A crack opened."

Jennifer said, "He told us he could see mountains and trees."

"There wasn't enough room to get out," Jeffrey said. "Then Mike just pushed up through it. His hair was all dirty. His face was dirty. ...

"Then Edward stayed inside. Mike and Robert stood just outside the hole and I stood on top of the dirt mounds around it and helped the girls out.

"When we got out we thought, 'Wow, we aren't in the Chowchilla slough.'"

The children and Ray discovered they were in a rock quarry near Livermore, 95 miles north of their small hometown.

Looking back on their ordeal, Jennifer and Jeffrey had different ideas of what should be done to their kidnapers.

"Kill 'em," said Jennifer.

"I think they should punish them badly, but I don't want them killed," said Jeffrey. "That's like throwing a frog against a wall to watch the blood spatter. It's not nice. It's cruel. Life imprisonment, that's what I think."

Focalpoint

Action/reaction: Thorny TV image

Q. How does either KOSA TV or KMID TV get the following information when neither our paper or radio stations got it. This was about the status on Webb Air Force Base. The television stations heard from somewhere that the foreign governments that send pilots here want Webb to stay open. Is there anything to this statement?

A. The reason that the local news media have not carried this prominently is that it is strictly rumor at this time. As stated in last Friday's issue of the Herald, this rumor has been floating around for several days. There are many different versions of the rumor. The television station ran only one version, and, unfortunately it appeared more like fact than rumor. (See today's publisher corner on Page 4A.)

The Herald has tried to confirm this rumor. We cannot. We asked the Associated Press to look into it. They can come up with nothing. Mike Miller, an aide to U.S. Senator Lloyd Bentsen, spent two days looking into the rumor. He reported that the Iranian Embassy in Washington knew nothing of the matter, and he could find no substance in it.

As the Herald has said before, it is true that pilot production at Webb has been outstanding, and the Iranian country liaison officer has stated his support for Webb.

But rumors that a $3.5 (or $2.5) million check is being withheld from the Pentagon unless Webb remains open cannot be in any way confirmed.

Offbeat: Watch those pots

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — Police say they are fighting a baffling new crime wave — thefts of potted plants.

They say the thefts have been averaging six per week.

Most of the time, police say, people leave the plants on their porches at night "and when they get up, they're gone."

The loss of a plant is "an emotional thing," an officer said, and high values are put on them by their owners. For instance, one victim valued two stolen ferns at more than $100 each.

Police haven't dismissed the possibility the plants are being resold, but they say they suspect the thieves are merely frustrated "green thumbs" who are keeping the plants for themselves.

Martian weather report

Clear pink skies, high of -1 22

PASADENA (AP) — The first Martian weather report shows nippy morning temperatures of 122 degrees below zero on the Red Planet, under skies not blue but pink. Dust particles floating in the thin atmosphere scatter sunlight to paint the sky pink, scientists explained today, even though it looked an earthly blue in Viking 1's first color picture. "It is red, but not as red as the surface," said Dr. Carl Sagan. The color was false in the first picture because Viking's cameras have not yet been adjusted to reproduce colors on Mars with perfect accuracy, said project officials. A more serious problem was also revealed late Wednesday. The seismometer designed to detect marsquakes did not turn on properly after Tuesday's landing. Unless it can be fixed by radio commands from earth, the instrument will not be able to carry out its work of recording quakes and probing the interior of the planet, said Deputy Mission Director Lou Kingsland. Scientists had hoped to have the use of seismometers aboard both Viking 1 and its twin, Viking 2 — due for a landing later this summer — in order to determine the location of any marsquakes. If only one seismometer works properly, only the number, not the direction of the quakes can be registered. Dr. Seymour Hess, meteorology investigation team leader, said the weather station aboard the robot lander recorded temperatures ranging from 122 below zero Fahrenheit to 22 below, although the latter was not the highest temperature of the day. He said there were light winds shifting from the east to the southwest during Viking's first Martian night. The highest wind speed was 15 miles per hour, far gentler than the winds of several hundred miles per hour known to blow on the planet. Sagan, a member of Viking's lander photography team, said another scientist, Dr. James Pollack, had determined the pinkish hue of the Martian sky. It had appeared much brighter than expected in Viking's first black-and-white photos, and had appeared blue in the color picture until further analysis revealed the sky's true color. The robot lander's camera snapped a pair of photos Tuesday of the spot where, a week from now, a telescoping arm has been preprogrammed to scoop up a sample of Martian soil. That will mark the beginning of biological tests in the hunt for Martian life. Meanwhile, with one Viking experiment station on Mars working well, officials have decided to be bolder with the second Viking and aim it for a northerly site riskier but more likely to harbor Martian life. The decision to target Viking 2 for a landing in the north — rather than at an alternate site near the Martian equator — came after more than two dozen meetings at which officials and scientists weighed a multitude of factors. The northern site, on a vast rolling plain called Cydonia after a town on the Greek island of Crete, is of great interest to scientists. There is believed to be at least five times more water vapor in the air than there is near Mars' equator. Also, because the area is not far from where the north polar ice cap extends in the winter, some residual water or slush might remain at times to nurture life on the otherwise dry planet. Scientists studying Martian weather also were enthusiastic about the northern territory because the changes in weather conditions from summer to winter could be observed.

IRS exam data listed

DALLAS — The Internal Revenue Service said today that application for the IRS Special Enrollment Examination must be in the mail and postmarked by Aug. 15. The exam qualifies tax practitioners who are neither Certified Public Accountants nor accredited attorneys to represent clients before the federal tax agency. It is not a test for IRS employment. The test will be given Sept. 27 and 28 in Dallas, Austin, Houston and Lubbock. A $25 examination fee, payable to the IRS, must accompany the application. Persons desiring an application or additional information about the examinations in Dallas and Lubbock should contact the Chief, Training Branch, Internal Revenue Service, 1100 Commerce Street, Room 13B12, Mail Code 405, Dallas, Texas 75242. Ex-Big Spring woman hit with capital murder rap

Former operator of night clubs Margaret Chvojka, 33, spent most of her life in Big Spring, and had been a resident at 1704 Yucca as late as 1974 before moving to San Angelo. While living here, she is known to have been involved in the operation of several night clubs, including the Americana and the It'll Do Number Two. She still has several relatives residing in Big Spring. William Lawrence Sharkey, 51, was shot about 10:30 p.m. Monday in the kitchen of his home while he was reporting a street disturbance to the Tom Green County Sheriff's Office. Sharkey was killed by a single gunshot wound in the middle of his chest. San Angelo Police are holding a $22 cal., over-and-under .22 caliber, believed to be the murder weapon. Bascom Hughes, Tom Green County Sheriff's Dispatcher, said that he received a call from Sharkey about 10:25 p.m. Monday. Sharkey told Hughes on the phone that a woman was driving up and down the street, pulling a horse trailer behind her car, and was running over lawns in the neighborhood, according to the dispatcher. At the time of the call the trailer had overturned in the street. "In the process of speaking with Sharkey, he became very excited and started screaming into the phone that the female was trying to break into his home. He screamed that she was going to kill him," Hughes report stated. Sharkey then dropped the phone and Hughes said he heard several "banging noises." A female then picked up the phone and identified herself as Mrs. Sharkey. She said her husband had been shot and was dying, and she needed an ambulance. Mrs. Sharkey filed a statement later Monday night stating that her husband had gone into the street to talk to a woman, who, she said, was reportedly screaming obscenities. When the woman wouldn't calm down, Sharkey told her he was going to call the Sheriff's Department. He was talking on the phone in front of two windows in the front part of his home when the woman reportedly pried off the screen and shot Sharkey. He turned to his wife and said, "I'm shot," and fell face up on the floor. Mrs. Sharkey told Sheriff's deputies.

The examining trial for Mrs. Chvojka began 2 p.m. Wednesday. The complaint filed Tuesday by 119th District Attorney Royal Hart alleges that she killed Sharkey while in the course of burglarizing his home, an offense which constitutes capital murder. Mrs. Chvojka reportedly opened the window in Sharkey's home and stuck her head and arms into the window before the alleged shooting. According to the Texas Penal Code, a murder becomes capital murder, punishable by death, if a person commits a murder while committing or attempting to commit a kidnapping, burglary, robbery, aggravated rape or arson. At an examining trial, the magistrate determines whether there is enough evidence in a case for the grand jury to consider. Mrs. Chvojka was represented Wednesday by Tom Webb and Jerry Johnson, who were assisted by Melvin Gray. The only two witnesses called to the stand were Gray and Mrs. Taiko Sharkey, the wife of the victim. Gray, who said he was a close friend of the

WHERE THE SEARCH IS CENTERED — This is the estate of Fred N. Woods III in Portola Valley where the search for clues in the kidnaping of 26 Chowchilla school children and their bus driver is centered. Sheriff's officers and the FBI are combing the Woods estate, who also owns the rock quarry in Livermore where the captives were held.

Wealthy youths sought Kidnapers gun and drug cult?

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP) — A heavily armed force of deputies swooped down on a lavish 100-acre estate near here early today, searching for evidence in the Chowchilla school bus hijacking. The estate, six miles south of here, is owned by Frederick N. Woods III, who also owns the rock quarry in Livermore where 26 schoolchildren and their bus driver were buried in a makeshift, underground prison for 18 hours before digging their way out. Alameda County Sheriff Tom Houchins said officials also wanted to talk to Woods' son, 24-year-old Frederick N. Woods IV. The elder Woods had told an interviewer on Wednesday that he didn't know the whereabouts of his son. "I was told by the sheriff's office not to say whether I have one son or 10 sons," Woods said. Houchins said he also was interested in talking to two of young Woods' friends — Richard Schoenfeld, 22, and James Schoenfeld, 24, sons of J.B. Schoenfeld, a podiatrist in nearby Atherton. A highly placed source in the Alameda County sheriff's office told The Associated Press Wednesday that one young man being sought in connection with the kidnaping was connected to the rock quarry. The source said the other two were sons of a prominent San Francisco area physician. Houchins emphasized at a news conference late Wednesday night that the younger Woods and the Schoenfeld brothers had not been named in any arrest warrant. Officials also emphasized early today that no arrest warrants had been issued in the case.

The three are subjects of the investigation" into the kidnaping, Houchins said. "I would be interested in talking to them. I would not arrest them." Alameda County sheriff's officials had said earlier Wednesday that Woods "and his boy are being investigated routinely." Houchins said more than 100 vehicles were found on the estate, including one which he said authorities were interested in, a tractor usually used to pull trailer trucks. The children and the driver were imprisoned in a moving van trailer. Under the command of sheriffs from Alameda, San Mateo and Madera counties, the caravan of sheriff's deputies left the San Mateo sheriff's office Wednesday night and was accompanied to the Woods estate by Charles Bates, FBI agent in charge of the San Francisco office. The elder Woods was served with a search warrant signed by a San Mateo County judge. His house was searched and he and his wife were the only people at home, Houchins said. Some 60 law enforcement officers then scattered about the property on a fine-comb search of 15 buildings on the estate in Portola Valley on the San Francisco Peninsula. Standing by as backup

Police beat No 'big' crimes, officers 'busy'

Johnny Mendoza, 17, 708 Main, reported to officers that five Mexican males had followed him in a black and white car as he drove south on Gregg. At the 1300 block of South Gregg, one of the occupants of the vehicle pointed a gun at Mendoza. Mendoza immediately made a U-turn to avoid the ensuing shot. Mendoza or his car was not hit by the gunfire, and police are investigating the incident. Bessie Lankford, 601 N. San Antonio, advised police that a juvenile was walking by her residence and picked up rocks and threw them through two of the windows. Damage was placed at $25. In a major accident on Highway 87 Wednesday, cars driven by Carmen Gonzales, 632 NW 3rd, and Laurence Wilkinson, 1920 Monticello, collided. The injuries were minor, and an ambulance was not needed. In the lone fender-bender Wednesday, a parked car owned by Glenn W. Rorschach, Southland Apts. 31, was in collision with a vehicle that left the scene. At first glance, the previous 24-hour-period appears rather uneventful for local lawmen. However, that was not the case. Numerous routine and not so routine calls from citizens kept city police hopping. They responded to: —Eight "request officer" calls, (citizens needing information of one kind or another). —Five "hot rodder" reports. —Five "disturbance" calls. —Four "proowler" cases. —Three "welfare con-

World

Fire ant counters

GULFPORT, Miss. (AP) — The spread of fire ants has caused federal officials to expand areas in seven states covered by regulations controlling movement of soil and used soil-moving equipment, a U.S. Department of Agriculture spokesman said today.

"All the states were already under federal quarantine, but this latest action puts restrictions on moving certain items out of the infested areas," said Harvey Ford, southeastern director of plant protection programs for the USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service.

"Pest-risk articles — such as soil and used soil-moving equipment — must be inspected, treated if necessary and certified free of pests," Ford said.

B1 production delayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Just as Pentagon chief Donald Rumsfeld was exhorting Congress not to "inhibit" defense spending, opponents of the B1 bomber won another victory in their fight to delay production of the aircraft. By a one-vote margin, the Senate Appropriations Committee voted Wednesday to hold up funds for the bomber until Feb. 1 to give whoever is elected president in November a chance to decide whether to go ahead with the plane.

Merchant back in uniform

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nancy Donnelly, who left the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy after allegedly being caught in bed with her fiancé, is being reinstated, and her lawyer says the 20-year-old cadet is "anxious to go back and be a regular midshipman."

A spokesman for Maritime Administration, which runs the Kings Point, N.Y., academy, said Wednesday the Oxon Hill, Md., woman still must face normal disciplinary action for the incident that took place last March.

Judge says Feds failed in duty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saying federal officials have "failed in their duties" to monitor desegregation, a U.S. District Court judge is ordering the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to take action against 46 school districts in every section of the country except the South.

Judge John Sirica, in an order issued Wednesday, told HEW officials to move against the school districts in the next 60 to 120 days, saying there had been enough delays.

The order could lead to withholding of federal funds from school districts that are not in compliance with federal desegregation laws.

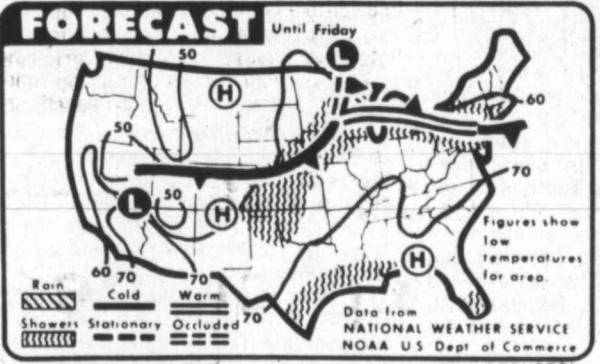

Included in Sirica's order were school districts in New York City; Los Angeles; Chicago; Tucson, Ariz.

Omaha, Neb.; and Hartford, Conn.

Plaintiffs in the case had argued that HEW officials failed to enforce the desegregation regulations throughout the country with as much enthusiasm as in the South.

None of the school districts listed by Sirica was in the South. A similar court order involving schools only in the South was directed at HEW officials several years ago, and a government study released last month said fewer students attend "intensely segregated" schools in the South than in any other section of the country.

In response to Sirica's order, Martin H. Gerry, director of HEW's Office of Civil Rights, said the government has already taken proper actions against the 46 school districts.

Widow sues

after fatal labor crash

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP) — The widow of a construction worker slain in a labor clash filed a $7.75 million damage suit today in federal court.

Ina Marie Wallace Hooper asked damages in the death of her husband, Joe Hooper, in the Jan. 15 violence.

Mrs. Hooper said that a conspiracy to help local unions gain the right to represent workers at the Jupiter Chemical Co. construction site led to the mob attack on the site in which her husband, who had just reported for work, was shot to death.

Hearing may prohibit clear cutting forest

TYLER, Tex. (AP) — The practice of clear cutting forests, the alleged endangering of a rare bird species and eradication of a forest pest were the focal points of controversy in a marathon federal court hearing.

The controversy figured in a hearing Wednesday on a proposed permanent injunction prohibiting tree cutting and sale of timber from Sam Houston National Forest in East Texas.

A string of witnesses testified on behalf of the Texas Committee on Natural Resources, which seeks the injunction, the U.S. Forestry Service, the defendant, the Texas Forestry Service and individual timber and sawmill operators.

The session lasted well into the night.

U.S. District Court Judge William Wayne Justice said the night session was due to "inexorable time pressures." The courtroom remained crowded with observers despite the late hour.

Dallas lawyer Edward Fritz, who heads the conservation organization, attacked the federal agency's practice of clear cutting forests and the pine beetle control program.

Fritz also alleged foresters failed to file an environmental impact statement before logging and accused the forest service of leaving inadequate cover to sustain colonies of rare red cockaded woodpeckers.

However, John Courtenay, supervisor of the four national forests in Texas, countered Fritz's charges, calling the practice of clear cutting sound forestry and contending that the rare woodpecker is adequately protected. Clear cutting involves cutting all of the "mer-chantable" timber, clearing the land with a bulldozer and replanting it with a new crop of pines.

Fritz also testified about several letters he had sent to Courtenay asking that they abandon clear cutting.

More pressure on GOP uncommitteds

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's campaign forces are stepping up the political pressure on Mississippi's uncommitted Republican convention delegates, state politicians say.

Ford strategists say the delegation may swing to Ford this week, delivering a psychological shock to challenger Ronald Reagan.

Reagan supporters and uncommitted delegates in Jackson, Miss., said the Ford camp has been using high-pressure tactics in discussions with delegates. They believe Reagan still will win the delegation. Mississippi Republicans have elected to maintain the unit rule, under which the candidate favored by a majority of the 60 regular and alternate delegates will receive all 30 delegate votes.

Ford aides are confident that a decisive shift in the now uncommitted delegation will occur within a week, and Mississippi GOP Chairman Clarke Reed told The Associated Press early today that he is surprised by the strength of Ford partisans in Mississippi.

PUBLIC SHOWING OF NEW HEARING AID SET FOR FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

(Big Spring) — Ralph O. Wilkes, local Belton hearing aid specialist, has scheduled showings of the tiny new Belton Minuet for Friday and Saturday, July 23 and 24.

According to Mr. Wilkes, the Minuet is the smallest hearing aid of its kind ever made by Belton Electronics Corporation — so tiny, in fact, it can easily be slipped through a lady's wedding ring. The new aid will be shown at the Belton Hearing Aid Service Office, 805 East Third Street, Big Spring, Texas, from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. on Friday, and from 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. on Saturday.

Everyone who has trouble hearing is invited to stop in to see the new aid. Refreshments will be served and free electronic hearing test given to anyone who wishes to have one. Some of the causes of hearing loss will also be explained and diagrams of how the ear works will be shown.

At-home showings of the new Belton Minuet are offered to those unable to attend the Friday or Saturday showings. Appointments for an in-home showing or an in-home hearing test can be made by: Calling 263-6181

TV covering Webb (trying to, that is)

I simply cannot believe that television newsmen can really be so dense as they sometimes act. I expect to hear one of them announce that he has just bought the Brooklyn Bridge any evening now.

ONE AREA television station picked up one version (there are several) of a particular Webb Air Force Base rumor last week and aired it as something like truth. It might have caused considerable confusion in the community, but fortunately very few people seemed to be listening.

Then somebody seeks a comment from Cong. Dick White. This newsman calls the congressman and presents what we know to be a rumor as fact. The congressman reacts in a very lapidary and positive way, saying something that may have no more meat than a stick of cotton candy.

I talked to Cong. White of the House Armed Services Committee and an important friend for Webb and Big Spring. While his congressional district doesn't include Big Spring, Cong. White has vowed to work for Webb, and he will repeat that promise to me on Saturday, saying he will assist our congressman, Omar Burleson of Anson, in any way possible.

THE WAY the question was phrased to Cong. White, he thought he was reacting to a news story that was public fact, no rumor. Nothing was wrong with Cong.

White's statement, but I think it was unfair of the Odessa broadcast newsman to not make clear that the rumor may be nothing but film-flam.

Unfortunately, I don't think the newsman knew himself. LET ME conclude with one piece of advice for anyone who may wind up doing any business with a television newsman.

Better check his change carefully for he's likely to have a whole pocket full of wooden nickels. — J. TOM GRAHAM

Agony in water

Around the rim

James Werrell

Those who have never swum long distance cannot realize the gut-wrenching, mind boggling agony of the event.

I swam for my high school team and spent enough time in the water to find out I was not Olympic material. I was an adequate freestyler who joined the team mostly because it came in handy in conversations with the fairer sex.

I DID, however, manage to make most of the workouts. There were two a day, one at 6 a.m. before classes, and one after school. And I have never experienced anything more ex-cruciating than the four 400-yard swims, we stroked each afternoon.

No doubt every sport has its unique brand of agony, probably each as nightmarish as the other, but swimmer's pain is what I know about. The swimmer is completely alone with most outside sounds muted by the water. His view of life (unless he is a backstroke) consists of the lines on the bottom of the pool and a watered-down picture of an irate coach, screaming from the side of the pool.

THE PAIN begins slowly at first in the shoulders. Then it creeps into the legs and arms, and eventually encompasses the whole body. Thankfully the pain itself can't be remembered later, just the concept. But that is bad enough.

The only reason I dredge up this unpleasant account is that I was dumbfounded by the feats of the Olympic swimmers in the 1,500-meter race Tuesday. It was absolutely incredible.

Those guys swam for 1,500 meters (over a mile) in barely more than 15 minutes. In order to conceptualize this, I thought of having to be pulled from my high school pool after swimming 100 yards in 59.6 seconds (a slow time for present day junior-high schoolers), after which I went into the locker room and lost lunch.

THE TWO Americans and one Australian made a mockery of my feat Tuesday night, 15 times in a row. And they weren't even breathing hard. I'll say it again, it was absolutely incredible. I have this picture in my mind of records toppling, over and over again, in future Olympic games until athletes have evolved into a group of supermen (and superwomen), unimaginable by today's standards.

OLYMPIC CHAMP Mark Spitz mentioned in passing that the last 200 yards of the women's 400 freestyle event would have qualified for a silver medal in the men's 200 freestyle sprint of four years ago. How can this be possible?

I guess I should cut this out, and save some of my enthusiasm for four years from now when the 13-year-old girls and other varieties of "wunderkind" lop further chunks off of standing records. Don't ask me where it will end.

Carter justice

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — Jimmy Carter will advocate a new form of law and order, with more emphasis on prosecuting crooked business executives and corrupt government officials.

The Democratic presidential candidate has asked a task force to prepare a position paper incorporating his views on criminal justice. It is now in draft form, labeled "Not for Dissemination," with a final version weeks away.

EIGHT YEARS AGO, Richard Nixon made law and order the main theme of his campaign. He subsequently put John Mitchell and Richard Kleindienst in charge of law and order at the Justice Dept. Both have now been convicted of violating the laws they had sworn to uphold.

From the first, they were more enthusiastic about enforcing the laws against malefaction than maleficance. They were quick, for example, to prosecute overzealous protesters who, in the name of peace, violated the peace.

But the Nixon prosecutors were slower to enforce the laws against white collar crimes. They ignored the laws against perjury, for example, when their own people found it expedient to fib.

This left the impression that there was a different justice for the rich and the poor, for the powerful and the weak. Carter will offer to put criminal justice back in balance by prosecuting businessmen and bureaucrats, congressmen and judges who violate the laws.

HE WOULD divert millions of dollars to cracking down on crimes "which cause great harm and property loss but which are pursued inadequately." The confidential draft adds pointedly: "These crimes would include business crimes and government corruption."

The draft, prepared by Washington attorney Arnold Sagalyn, accuses both the Johnson and Nixon administrations of wasting much of the money the federal government spent to fight crime.

"Anyone who promises to banish crime with a few federal dollars dooms such a program to failure," the paper declares. "The goal is misleading, naive and unrealistic."

A staggering $4.4 billion has been spent by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA) to help local police forces. We have shown in a series of columns how most of this money has gone for such wasteful items as Dick Tracy weapons that don't work and luxury limousines for deputy sheriffs.

CARTER would divert at least half of the LEAA funds to coping with crime in "our most dense living areas and . . . other areas where violent crimes and burglary present the most danger to citizens."

Some anticrime funds should go into welfare, jobs, schooling, mental health and other programs that can prevent crime, the study urges. It adds: "both the revenue-sharing funds and the federally controlled funds should be devoted primarily to underfunded portions of criminal justice, for example, prosecution, defense and court systems."

The study cautions, "The finest research products of recent years tell us much more about what does not work than what does work." To study the crime problem, the Carter task force recommends establishing novel semi-public, semi-private "Corporations for crime and criminal research."

Footnote: Similar task forces are studying everything from agriculture to zoology for the Democratic candidate. Aides say they will be used in his campaign and, as they become more refined, as guidelines in his Administration if he should be elected President.

WASHINGTON WHIRL: President Ford must take Ronald Reagan more seriously and treat him with more dignity if the White House wants Reagan's support in the future. Sources close to Reagan say he is bitter because the President "has treated him like a second-class citizen, like a second cousin." Reagan feels Ford has talked down to him in the campaign, regarding him with scorn and contempt. Nevertheless, Reagan could actively support Ford if the President wins the GOP nomination, provided Ford changes his tone and his tune.

— Ronald Reagan, the hero of the Republican right, is regarded as a left-winger in some quarters. A radical outfit known as the "Washington Observer," located oddly enough in Torrance, Calif., thinks Reagan is a Communist dupe. It is peddling a book called "The Counterfeit Candidate," which portrays the conservative Reagan as a dangerous leftist.

— Jimmy Carter isn't the only candidate to inject that old-time religion into the presidential campaign. At President Ford's campaign headquarters in Washington hangs a photo of the President, with the caption: "There is a higher power, by whatever means we honor him, who ordains not only righteousness but love, not only justice but mercy."

— Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N.Y., has given up hope of winning the Democratic nomination to run for the Senate in New York. She has told friends privately that "the game is up," that ex-United Nations Ambassador Pat Moynihan appears to have the nomination sewn up.

My answer Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Are churches and Christians permitted to sit on their hands like freeloaders and not do a thing in the running of this government? John 18:36 seems to say this, but perhaps I don't understand it. — E. W. D.

DEAR E. W. D.: Nowhere in the Bible is it suggested that followers of Christ have an immunity from participation in self-government. In fact, if you read Bible passages like 1 Peter 2 and Romans 13, you'll see our involvement in the democratic process as a duty.

The Bible reference you mention draws a distinction between the nature of Christ's Kingdom and the nature of the world. The Lord's is spiritual, the other physical. God's Kingdom is eternal, man's is temporal. The rule of Christ's kingship is love, the world's method is force. Pilate found it hard then to understand this — and so do many now.

But if it were ever important for Christians to have an active voice in government affairs, it's now in this Bicentennial year. Otherwise, recalling our forefathers' fight for liberty and self-rule in a travesty. The election this fall will have momentous consequences.

I believe God can still bless America, but it's going to involve repentance of national and personal sins. Beyond that, as 2 Chronicles 7:14 indicates, it will mean a new dedication of commitment to the spiritual purposes of Christ's Kingdom.

Ruptured navel won't heal itself

C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been having pain around my navel for some time. The doctor said it was a ruptured navel. He said it is caused by being overweight. He said he could do an 44 and weigh 200 pounds. I am 5 feet, 3 inches tall.

Will the hernia heal itself? I am B. M. An umbilical hernia, which is most often found in a child or young adult, where it usually heals itself by the second or third year. However, it must be watched and treated if it persists.

Yours is something entirely different. Women sometimes develop one as a result of childbearing, a common cause. Likewise, obesity can be a cause.

Your weight loss alone would not repair the defect. It would help, but it is less obvious, perhaps prevented it from becoming worse. You have lost considerable weight, although you can obviously lose much more. It is not surprising that you have not had better results. Surgery would be advisable in any event.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Could you please describe the surgery that is done to repair a hiatal hernia? I have many different versions, and they all sound frightening. I am a controlled diabetic but am still overweight.

There are two types of surgery to repair a hiatal hernia. One is to do a bulging of a part of the stomach through the diaphragm into the chest. The goal of surgery is to re-close the opening, which, because it has become enlarged, allows the bulging to occur. It is a common ailment and several techniques have been developed to handle specific kinds of hiatal hernias. Some operations are closed from behind, the patient is some from in front, some from the sides.

Unless such a hernia is causing great distress, conservative treatment is usually tried. Weight reduction, ulcer-type diets, sleeping positions that elevate the upper trunk, etc. My booklet on hiatal hernias suggests things you can do to adjust to one, should your doctor decide against surgery. For a copy send 25 cents to me in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for headline and mailing.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a diabetic with high blood pressure and arthritis.

I am currently being treated for both these diseases.

My problem is that when I come home from work at 3 p.m., I have fatigue, weakness, hunger, and blurring of vision. I have to sit down at a desk until these symptoms go away. It happens daily. The only medicine I take is a tablet of Tolimase before leaving for work in the morning. Can you tell me why this happens and what I can do about it? — R. V. I

It sounds much as though you are having episodes of low blood sugar, possibly related to the strength of the medicine. The same symptoms can occur with diabetes taking insulin. The oral medicines are not insulin, but the effect is the same — lowering of blood sugar. If either works too fast, and dosage adjustments have to be made, you should be checked carefully to see how your control program is working. There are other oral medicines that are not quite so strong as the Tolimase.

Are you holding to your diet program? It's a long time between breakfast and 3 p.m. Is your lunch adequate? You might try a light snack of cheese and crackers or some orange juice before leaving work. A soft drink (not sugar-free) might help tide you over.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a simple question that you probably won't want to answer. Is there anything to analysis of one's handwriting, connecting it to one's personality? Is it a "human factor"? — E. A.

A lot of people think there is some connection. But it's not an exact science. I favor a simpler explanation of handwriting. If a person was taught (or took time to learn) to write properly he will have a nice orderly hand. If he wasn't, he'll have a sloppy one.

Low blood sugar is often the cause of faintness, headaches, visual and emotional disturbances. To learn how it can be identified and brought under control, write to Dr. Thosteson, in care of the Big Spring Herald, for a copy of "Help for Hypoglycemia," enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in this column whenever possible.

Big Spring Herald Mailbag

Dear Editor: At the risk of ruining your whole day I am enclosing a copy of a letter from a very valuing customer who has a few good things to say, for a change, about Big Spring Aircraft, Inc.

The recent campaign of programmed and conditioned criticism of Big Spring Aircraft, Inc., appearing in your newspaper prompts me to write this letter. It is worthy to note that there are still many fine people such as the Cox and Rankin families.

Enclosed was a letter which thanked Big Spring Aircraft for the "great service" rendered in making a midnight emergency flight to Fort Worth upon 15 minutes notice. The letter said, "The cooperation of Big Spring Aircraft in this emergency will not be forgotten."

J. S. (Bill) McClendon, Manager Big Spring Aircraft

Dear Editor: My subject is the lack of job security among employees of the State of Texas. In particular the status of employees of State Comptroller, Bob Bullock should be brought to the attention of all.

To the employees who have been terminated or forced to resign since Mr. Bullock took office January 1, 1973 — please join me in the comforting truth of Psalms 118-6: "The Lord is on my side; I will not fear: What can man do unto me?" It has been said that "Absolute power corrupts absolutely and completely." Those who have abused their power over others will be brought to account by God as indicated in Revelations 20-12. Meanwhile it is hard to understand how the employees of Texas are without Civil Service, a union, or for that matter any real job security. The only recourse they have is a grievance committee, who are likely to be in sympathy with management, and

Ari Buchwald

New York had a love fest at the Democratic National Convention. Despite dire predictions that the city could not handle a national political convention, almost everyone agreed the people were hospitable, the cops were friendly and New Yorkers went out of their way to make the visitors feel at home.

"What the hell happened? I'll tell you what happened! Mayor Abe Beame pulled off one of the neatest tricks in modern American history. The people of New York and deal with in Manhattan last week weren't New Yorkers.

THIS IS THE TRUE story of this remarkable week.

A month ago Mayor Beame met with his staff to deal with the problem of the convention. Beame and his aides were very nervous that the Democratic Convention could turn into a debacle. People would get raped and groped and assaulted and, what was worse, be ignored on the streets.

Beame's people, a veteran of Huey Proudhon suggested, "Why don't we do what Cambodia did in Phnom Penh?"

The mayor asked, "What was that?"

"Why don't we evaluate everyone from Manhattan for the week and then move them to the countryside?"

"Where would we put them?"

"We could build relocation camps on Staten Island and ring the place with barbed wire."

THE COMPTROLLER whistled that about 2 million people. How could you move 2 million people?"

"We could make all the streets one way, south to the Battery. There are 500 streets that run that way. I could have a sign that says 'No Left Turn' when they get to Staten Island. When they get there, they can make them drive directly to the camps."

"What about the people who take the subway?"

"All the trains will go directly to the airport, and when the people exit from the subway, they'll find themselves in a ferry boat which will take them across the harbor."

"It could work," the commissioner of public transportation said. "But I'll have to pay my people overtime."

"It will be worth it if New York gets a good name," the mayor said.

"What will we have the New York City government do with all these people?"

"We announce there is going to be a public meeting to discuss their problems on Staten Island. They'll all go there without a squawk."

BUT WE CAN'T leave New York City empty. The out-of-towners and the press will get very suspicious. A staff member said, "I've got that figured out. We bring in friendly, smiling people from the Midwest and the South on buses and have them pretend they're New Yorkers."

"How do we pay for them to come to New York?"

"I've made a deal with movie producer Dino De Laurentiis. If he pays to bring in 2 million people to replace the 2 million New Yorkers, he can use them as extras in the shooting of his film 'King Kong.'"

"And the cops?"

"We get them from central casting. I've hired the director of 'Police Woman' to teach them how to smile and be friendly to everyone they come in contact with."

"What a fantastic plan!" someone said. Everyone looked at the mayor.

HE FINALLY SAID, "I don't like relocation camps any better than you do, but the city comes first. Put it into action!"

And so the week before the convention "Operation Big Apple" was put into effect. Two million New Yorkers were locked up on Staten Island and their places were taken by 2 million friendly faces from out of town.

SIDEWALK OLYMPICS — The spirit of the Olympic Games spread to the Ohio state — house lawn in Columbus this week, as several lunch-time judges rated

Energy First rate hike in 64 years

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Southwestern Electric Power Co. has told its municipal customers in Texas, Arkansas and Louisiana that for the first time in its 64-year history it will have to seek a rate increase.

SWEPCO Wednesday told the 49 East Texas cities it serves that it needs a 16.7 per cent rate hike.

The company has 300,000 customers in a 25,000 square mile area made up of 19 East Texas counties, 13 West Arkansas counties and 3 Northwest Louisiana parishes.

The 19 Texas counties are

Bowie, Camp, Cass, Franklin, Gregg, Harrison, Hopkins, Marion, Morris, Panola, Rains, Red River, Rusk, Shelby, Smith, Titus, Upshur, Van Zandt and Wood.

Under Texas law, we have to file a 'statement of intent' in each incorporated municipality," a spokesman said. "We have not yet filed applications in Louisiana and Arkansas."

As an example, he said the proposed new rate would amount to about 12.5 per cent to residential users, boosting a monthly bill of $20 to be $22.50.

Southwestern expects to file similar rate pleas during the fall in Arkansas and Louisiana. Each has a state Public Service Commission to fix utility rates, rather than doing it by individual areas.

"We asked that the Texas increase be effective as of Aug. 25 but I believe the law says there's an additional 30 days that each incorporated municipality would have in which to study the application before making a final determination," the spokesman said.

"Actually, we have never been through this before, a lot of it is a little hazy."

Though Southwestern hasn't sought a rate increase in its 64 years, that doesn't mean power bills haven't gone up in the area. Like other utilities, the company adds on "fuel adjustment" costs to cover the rising price of natural gas and oil burned by the generating plants.

"We are in the process of converting to coal," the spokesman said. "We open a new $100 million coal-burning 530-kilowatt power plant in January in Titus County, Tex."

The Texas increase of 16.68 per cent was based on total gross revenues during a test year ending last March 31.

Oil panel considers

Lo-Vaca lawsuits

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The Texas Railroad Commission scheduled a meeting Wednesday with Coastal States Gas Corp. and customers of its troubled subsidiary, Lo-Vaca Gathering Co., to consider a proposal to settle more than $1.4 billion in lawsuits involving Lo-Vaca.

Major customers include Austin, San Antonio, Corpus Christi, Brownsville and the Lower Colorado River Authority.

The commission voted July 10 to require Lo-Vaca to report Wednesday on the status of out-of-court negotiations over the lawsuits, and a general plan was made public Monday.

Coastal States proposed to convert Lo-Vaca into a totally independent company and to carry out a natural gas search program costing as much as $230 million over 15 years.

The plan calls for Oscar Wyatt Jr., Coastal States chairman, to dispose of the new company stock to which he would be entitled.

Coastal States would assume existing debts of about $108 million and would insure unsecured promissory notes of an estimated $120 million during the next 15 years.

The new company would issue $115 million in preferred stock to be placed in trust for the benefit of Lo-Vaca customers.

The stock would have a dividend rate of 8½ per cent and, initially, have 20 per cent of the voting rights in the new company.

All of the common stock of the new company would be spun off of Coastal States shareholders.

Pipeline exec vows to x-ray each weld

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of a consortium building the trans-Alaska oil pipeline told Congress today that X-ray inspections will be made on every weld on the line requiring one.

"All of them will be reconciled even if it means exposing a weld in the field and re-X-raying it," said Edward Patton, chief executive officer of the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co.

He testified before a House subcommittee trying to find out what went wrong with the pipeline welding program.

Chairman John Melcher, D-Mont., called the hearing after learning from the Interior Department that the Arthur Andersen auditing firm has been unable to verify the validity of X rays required to confirm the integrity of the welds.

Patton said the number of discrepancies has been reduced to 61 and that Alyeska is continuing to work on the problem.

Most of the pipeline is buried, and Patton was asked if federal inspectors will be reluctant to give it final approval for use.

Watergate reform due passage

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Watergate legislation that is advancing through Congress would force members of Congress and other federal officials to disclose their sources of income for the first time, and reform-minded House Democrats are pressing for quick approval.

The Watergate Reform Act, the first bill to respond to the scandals that brought down the administration of President Richard Nixon two years ago, was approved Wednesday in the Senate 91 to 5.

The measure, sent to the House, would require financial disclosure and create a permanent office of special prosecutor to investigate misdeeds at the top levels of government's executive, judicial and legislative branches.

The financial disclosure requirements would apply to federal judges, high administrators, the president and the vice president, as well as members of Congress.

Although some politicians make their sources of income and tax returns public, no federal law now requires them to do so.

Shortly before the Senate vote, rank and file House Democrats demanded that they be allowed to vote on financial disclosure during this election year.

The House Democratic Caucus approved a resolution making it party policy that such a vote be taken.

The Senate bill also would prohibit presidents from naming top officials of their campaign to serve as attorney general or deputy attorney general.

John Mitchell became attorney general after managing Nixon's 1968 campaign. He resigned to head Nixon's re-election effort in the spring of 1972, but quit shortly after the June 1972 break-in at Democratic National Headquarters in the Watergate office building here. Mitchell was later convicted with other top Nixon aides in the cover-up trial.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., who offered the amendment to bar political operatives from the top Justice Department posts, said "it has become nearly standard practice for presidents to push this important and sensitive office into the partisan political arena by naming their campaign managers attorney general."

President Ford supported the bill creating a permanent special prosecutor. His reaction to Bentsen's amendment was not known.

The special prosecutor would be appointed by the president to a single three-year term and would be authorized to investigate allegations of wrongdoing by the president, vice president, attorney general, other Cabinet members, the director of the FBI, federal judges and members of Congress.

In addition, allegations involving White House and congressional staff members could be referred to him.

Sadat's wife gets honors

Mrs. Sadat, 43, enrolled in the university's faculty of letters in 1974, one and two years behind her two married daughters.

The newspaper said Wednesday that Mrs. Sadat was first in her class in Arabic studies this year.

TV covering Webb (trying to, that is)

I simply cannot believe that television newsmen can really be so dense as they sometimes act.

I expect to hear one of them announce that he has just bought the Brooklyn Bridge any evening now.

ONE AREA television station picked up one version (there are several) of a particular Webb Air Force Base rumor last week and aired it as something like truth.

It might have caused considerable confusion in the community, but fortunately very few people seemed to be listening.

Then somebody seeks a comment from Cong. Dick White. This newsman calls the congressman and presents what we know to be a rumor as fact. The congressman reacts in a very happy and positive way over something that may have no more meat than a stick of cotton candy.

I talked to Cong. White of El Paso by phone last weekend. He is a member of the House Armed Services Committee and an important friend for Webb and Big Spring. While his congressional district doesn't include Big Spring, Cong. White has vowed to work for Webb, and he will. He repeated that promise to me on Saturday, saying he will assist our congressman, Omar Burleson of Anson, in any way possible.

THE WAY the question was phrased to Cong. White, he thought he was reacting to a news story that was public fact, no rumor.

Nothing was wrong with Cong.

White's statement, but I think it was unfair of the Odessa broadcast newsman to not make clear that the rumor may be nothing but film-flam.

Unfortunately, I don't think the newsman knew himself.

LET ME conclude with one piece of advice for anyone who may wind up doing any business with a television newsman.

Better check his change carefully for he's likely to have a whole pocket full of wooden nickels.

Agony in water

James Werrell

Around the rim

Those who have never swum long distance cannot realize the gut-wrenching, mind boggling agony of the event.

I swam for my high school team and spent enough time in the water to find out I was not Olympic material. I was an adequate freestyler who joined the team mostly because it came in handy in conversations with the fairer sex.

Olympic swimmers in the 1,500-meter race Tuesday. It was absolutely incredible.

Those guys swam for 1,500 meters (over a mile) in barely more than 15 minutes. In order to conceptualize this, I thought of having to be pulled from my high school pool after swimming 100 yards in 59.6 seconds (a slow time for present day junior-high-schoolers), after which I went into the locker room and lost lunch.

I DID, however, manage to make most of the workouts. There were two a day, one at 6 a.m. before classes, and one after school. And I have never experienced anything more excruciating than the four 400-yard swims, we stroked each afternoon.

No doubt every sport has its unique brand of agony, probably each as nightmarish as the other, but swimmer's pain is what I know about. The swimmer is completely alone with most outside sounds muted by the water. His view of life (unless he is a backstroker) consists of the lines on the bottom of the pool and a watered-down picture of an irate coach, screaming from the side of the pool.

THE TWO Americans and one Australian made a mockery of my feat Tuesday night, 15 times in a row. And they weren't even breathing hard. I'll say it again, it was absolutely incredible.

I have this picture in my mind of records toppling, over and over again, in future Olympic games until athletes have evolved into a group of supermen (and superwomen), unimaginable by today's standards.

THE PAIN begins slowly at first in the shoulders. Then it creeps into the legs and arms, and eventually encompasses the whole body. Thankfully the pain itself can't be remembered later, just the concept. But that is bad enough.

The only reason I dredge up this unpleasant account is that I was dumbfounded by the feats of the OLYMPIC CHAMP Mark Spitz mentioned in passing that the last 200 yards of the women's 400 freestyle event would have qualified for a silver medal in the men's 200 freestyle sprint of four years ago. How can this be possible?

I guess I should cut this out, and save some of my enthusiasm for four years from now when the 13-year-old girls and other varieties of "wunderkind" lop further chunks off of standing records. Don't ask me where it will end.

Art Buchwald

New York had a love fest at the Democratic National Convention. Despite dire predictions that the city could not handle a national political convention, almost everyone agreed the people were hospitable, the cops were friendly and New Yorkers went out of their way to make the visitors feel at home.

"What the hell happened? I'll tell you what happened. Mayor Abe Beame pulled off one of the neatest tricks in modern American history. The people gave us and dealt with in Manhattan last week weren't New Yorkers.

THIS IS THE TRUE story of this remarkable week.

A month ago Mayor Beame met with his staff to deal with the problem of the convention. Beame and his aides were very nervous that the Democratic Convention could turn into a debacle. People would get raped and mugged and assaulted and, what was worse, be ignored on the streets.

"One of Beame's people, a veteran of Indiana, suggested, 'Why don't we do what Cambodia did in Phnom Penh?'"

The mayor asked, "What was that?"

"Why don't we evacuate everyone from Manhattan for the week and drive them into the countryside?"

"Where would we put them?"

"We could build relocation camps on Staten Island and ring the place with barbed wire."

Ruptured navel won't heal itself

Dr. C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been having pain around my navel. I went to the doctor and he told I have a ruptured navel. He said it is caused by being overweight. He told me to lose 100 lbs. I am 44 and weigh 190 - down from 230. I am 5 feet, 3 inches tall.

Will the hernia heal itself?

B.M.

An umbilical (navel) hernia is most often found as a defect in the muscle wall of the abdomen. It is usually noticed by the second or third year. However, it must be watched and carefully treated.

Yours is something entirely different. Women sometimes can have one as a result of childbirth (and common). Likewise, obesity can be a cause.

Your weight loss alone will not repair the defect. It would only make it less obvious, perhaps prevent it from becoming worse. You have lost considerable weight (although you can obviously lose much more). If you have noticed no improvement, you had better consider surgical repair of the hernia. In fact, it would probably be advisable in any event.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Could you please describe the surgery that is done to repair a hiatal hernia? I hear many different versions, and they all sound frightening. I am a controlled diabetic but am still overweight. — T.V.

I am currently being treated for both these diseases.

My problem is that when I come home from work at 3 p.m., I have fatigue, weakness, hunger, and blurring of vision. I have to sit down at a street curb until these symptoms go away. It happens daily. The only medicine I take is a tablet of Tolimase before leaving for work in the morning. Can you tell me why this happens and what I can do about it? — R. E. L.

It sounds much as though you are having episodes of low blood sugar, possibly related to the strength of the medicine. The same symptoms can occur with diabetics taking insulin. The oral medicines are not insulin, but the effect is the same — lowering of blood sugar. If either works too fast, low blood sugar symptoms will result, and dosage adjustments have to be made. You should be checked carefully to see how your control program is working. There are other oral medicines that are not quite so strong as the Tolimase.

Are you holding to your diet program? It's a long time between breakfast and 3 p.m. Is your lunch adequate? You might try a light snack of cheese and crackers or some orange juice before leaving work. A soft drink (not sugar-free) might help tide you over.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a simple question that you probably won't want to answer. Is there anything to analysis of one's handwriting, connecting it to one's personality? Is it a "human factor"? — E. A.

A lot of people think there is some connection. But it's not an exact science.

I favor a simpler explanation of handwriting. If a person was taught (or took time to learn) to write properly he will have a nice orderly hand. If he wasn't, he'll have a sloppy one.

Low blood sugar is often the cause of faintness, headaches, visual and emotional disturbances. To learn how it can be identified and brought under control, write to Dr. Thosteson, in care of the Big Spring Herald, for a copy of "Help for Hypoglycemia," enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Carter justice

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — Jimmy Carter will advocate a new form of law and order, with more emphasis on prosecuting crooked business executives and corrupt government officials.

The Democratic presidential candidate has asked a task force to prepare a position paper incorporating his views on criminal justice. It is now in draft form, labeled "Not for Dissemination," with a final version weeks away.

didate. Aides say they will be used in his campaign and, as they become more refined, as guidelines in his Administration if he should be elected President.

WASHINGTON WHIRL: President Ford must take Ronald Reagan more seriously and treat him with more dignity if the White House wants Reagan's support in the future. Sources close to Reagan say he is bitter because the President "has treated him like a second-class citizen, like a second cousin." Reagan feels Ford has talked down to him in the campaign, regarding him with scorn and contempt. Nevertheless, Reagan could actively support Ford if the President wins the GOP nomination, provided Ford changes his tone and his tune.

— Ronald Reagan, the hero of the Republican right, is regarded as a left-winger in some quarters. A radical outfit known as the "Washington Observer," located oddly enough in Torrance, Calif., thinks Reagan is a Communist dupe. It is peddling a book called "The Counterfeit Candidate," which portrays the conservative Reagan as a dangerous leftist.

— Jimmy Carter isn't the only candidate to inject that old-time religion into the presidential campaign. At President Ford's campaign headquarters in Washington hangs a photo of the President, with the caption: "There is a higher power, by whatever means we honor him, who ordains not only righteousness but love, not only justice but mercy."

— Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N.Y., has given up hope of winning the Democratic nomination to run for the Senate in New York. She has told friends privately that "the game is up," that ex-United Nations Ambassador Pat Moynihan appears to have the nomination sewn up.

EIGHT YEARS AGO, Richard Nixon made law and order the main theme of his campaign. He subsequently put John Mitchell and Richard Kleindienst in charge of law and order at the Justice Dept. Both have now been convicted of violating the laws they had sworn to uphold.

From the first, they were more enthusiastic about enforcing the laws against malfeasance than against lawlessness. They were quick, for example, to prosecute overzealous protesters who, in the name of peace, violated the peace.

But the Nixon prosecutors were slower to enforce the laws against white collar crimes. They ignored the laws against perjury, for example, when their own people found it expedient to fib.

This left the impression that there was a different justice for the rich and the poor, for the powerful and the weak. Carter will offer to put criminal justice back in balance by prosecuting businessmen and bureaucrats, congressmen and judges who violate the laws.

HE WOULD divert millions of dollars to cracking down on crimes "which cause great harm and property loss but which are pursued inadequately." The confidential draft adds pointedly: "These crimes would include business crimes and government corruption."

The draft, prepared by Washington attorney Arnold Sagaly, accuse both the Johnson and Nixon administrations of wasting much of the money the federal government spent to right crime.

"Anyone who promises to banish crime with a few federal dollars dooms such a program to failure," the paper declares. "The goal is misleading, naive and unrealistic."

A staggering $4.4 billion has been spent by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration (LEAA) to help local police forces. We have shown in a series of columns how most of this money has gone for such wasteful items as Dick Tracy weapons that don't work and luxury limousines for deputy sheriffs.

Dear Editor:

At the risk of ruining your whole day I am enclosing a copy of a letter from a very valued customer who has a few good things to say, for a change, about Big Spring Aircraft, Inc.

The recent campaign of programmed and conditioned criticism of Big Spring Aircraft, Inc., appearing in your newspaper prompts me to write this letter.

It is worthy to note that there are still many fine people such as the Cox and Rankin families.

Enclosed was a letter which thanked Big Spring Aircraft for the "great service" rendered in making a midnight emergency flight to Fort Worth upon 15 minutes notice. The letter said, "The cooperation of Big Spring Aircraft in this emergency will not be forgotten."

This should be a matter of more than passing interest to all Texans. I would welcome anyone's thoughts about the situation. In particular, I wish to hear from employees who have been terminated against their will, and without just cause. I would like to have the details of the conditions under which they left their positions.

Democratic presidential nominee Jimmy Carter supports the right of government employees to collective bargaining. A move to unionize Texas State Employees seems to be the logical step — unless an acceptable Civil Service is established.

At this point I'm trying to establish a mailing list and also files on individual cases. Then I will approach our legislators, seek legal advice, and make every effort to correct this unjust situation. Lets do something besides think about it!

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Are churches and Christians permitted to sit on their hands like freeloaders and not do a thing in the running of this government? John 18:36 seems to say this, but perhaps I don't understand it. — E. W. D.

DEAR E. W. D.: Nowhere in the Bible is it suggested that followers of Christ have an immunity from participation in self-government. In fact, if you read Bible passages like 1 Peter 2 and Romans 13, you'll see our involvement in the democratic process as a duty.

The Bible reference you mention draws a distinction between the nature of Christ's Kingdom and the nature of the world. The Lord's is spiritual, the other physical. God's Kingdom is eternal, man's is temporal. The rule of Christ's kingship is love, the world's method is force. Pilate found it hard then to understand this — and so do many now.

But if it were ever important for Christians to have an active voice in government affairs, it's now in this Bicentennial year. Otherwise, recalling our forefathers' fight for liberty and self-rule in a travesty. The election this fall will have momentous consequences.

I believe God can still bless America, but it's going to involve repentance of national and personal sins. Beyond that, as 2 Chronicles 7:14 indicates, it will mean a new dedication of commitment to the spiritual purposes of Christ's Kingdom.

Energy First rate hike in 64 years

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Southwestern Electric Power Co. has told its municipal customers in Texas, Arkansas and Louisiana that for the first time in its 64-year history it will have to seek a rate increase.

SWEPCO Wednesday told the 49 East Texas cities it services that it needs a 16.7 per cent rate hike.

The company has 300,000 customers in a 25,000 square mile area made up of 19 East Texas counties, 13 West Arkansas counties and 3 Northwest Louisiana parishes.

The 19 Texas counties are

Bowie, Camp, Cass, Franklin, Gregg, Harrison, Hopkins, Marion, Morris, Panola, Rains, Red River, Rusk, Shelby, Smith, Titus, Upshur, Van Zandt and Wood.

Under Texas law, we have to file a 'statement of intent' in each incorporated municipality," a spokesman said. "We have not yet filed applications in Louisiana and Arkansas."

As an example, he said the proposed new rate would amount to about 12.5 per cent to residential users, boosting a monthly bill of $20 to $22.50.

Southwestern expects to file similar rate pleas during the fall in Arkansas and Louisiana. Each has a state Public Service Commission to fix utility rates, rather than doing it by individual areas.

"We asked that the Texas increase be effective as of Aug. 25 but I believe the law says there's an additional 30 days that each incorporated municipality would have in which to study the application before making a final determination," the spokesman said.

"Actually, we have never been through this before, a lot of it is a little hazy."

Though Southwestern hasn't sought a rate increase in its 64 years, that doesn't mean power bills haven't gone up in the area. Like other utilities, the company adds on "fuel adjustment" costs to cover the rising price of natural gas and oil burned by the generating plants.

"We are in the process of converting to coal," the spokesman said. "We open a new $100 million coal-burning 530-kilowatt power plant in January in Titus County, Tex."

The Texas increase of 16.68 per cent was based on total gross revenues during a test year ending last March 31.

Drug-sniffing dog patrols high school

GREENVILLE, Tex. (AP) — The shepherd Schnaps should start sniffing in September.

Schnaps is a drug-sniffing German Shepherd that will be roaming the halls of Greenville's junior and senior high schools this fall in search of illicit drugs.

And if Hunt County commissioners give their approval, the unusual drug-detection program, initiated by a group of 80 Greenville parents, may be extended to any of the county's school districts.

The three-year-old dog was given to the Hunt County Sheriff's Department by the Dallas Police Department. Schnaps, along with Capt. W.T. Wallen of the sheriff's department, is undergoing a 17-week training course in Dallas.

"Our main goal is to remove drugs from around our schools," said Ina Herlocker, organizer of the parent group calling itself Control of Drug Elements (CODE).

"Our dog can already sniff out marijuana," she added, "and we're training it now for the rest of the drugs."

Mrs. Herlocker said Schnaps will be checking the lockers, the grounds and parking lot, where most of the drug traffic occurs.

"What we really think will happen is just the presence of the dog team will discourage students from bringing drugs to school," she said.

At a recent meeting, the Hunt County commissioners delayed endorsing the concept until more information on legal, financial and procedural problems can be obtained.

Mrs. Herlocker said that with the commissioners' permission, Schnaps could be used in those school districts requesting its service.

The organization, generated during a Parent-Teacher Association meeting, already has built a dog run and a dog house equipped with "very sophisticated" protection devices, she explained.

Although there is "little" money, she said when the need for food and veterinary services arises, someone "passes the hat" at a corporation meeting.

Mrs. Herlocker said the Spring Branch School District near Houston had already begun such a program.

Could baffles have saved six lives

HOUSTON (AP) — Baffles placed inside tanker trucks to prevent lateral surge of liquid cargo might have prevented the crash of an ammonia-filled truck at a busy Houston intersection May 11 that killed six persons.

The testimony came Wednesday during the second day of hearings by the National Transportation Safety Board into the causes of the crash and explosion of a tanker owned by transport Co. of Texas.

Lateral surge is a well known problem," said Benjamin Swan, a marine safety engineer with the safety board. "It's well understood." Swan said the mathematics of the problem are the same for trucks and ships. He said a contributing factor to the accident appeared to be the shifting of the ammonia to the right as the driver tried to make the left-hand curve on the elevated freeway ramp.

Tanks such as the ill-fated Transport Co. tanker are equipped with baffles to minimize the forward shift of liquid cargo during the breaking process.

Charles Hoffman, a member of the board's technical staff, said the board may recommend that longitudinal baffles also be installed on the interior of tanks.

Swan used diagrams to illustrate how the shifting of a liquid cargo in a tank changes the center of gravity and increases the overturning forces on the truck.

Other evidence introduced showed the truck driver William Gregory Schmidt, 28, who died in the crash, was traveling at least 12 miles per hour faster than the recommended 40 mph speed posted by the state.

Dale Marvel, a traffic engineer with the Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation, insisted the truck could have made the curve safely despite any shift in cargo, if it had been going the recommended speed.

"About five million trucks have used that ramp since it was first completed in 1961," Marvel said. "This is the only one that's ever gone through the rail."

The hearing was scheduled to continue today.

PEACHES ANYONE? — Peach growers descended on the state Capitol in Sacramento Wednesday to demonstrate their anger that their crops are rotting in the fields during a canners' strike. The growers met with California Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., who told them he would handle the matter if President Ford didn't deal with it by the weekend. Growers gave away free peaches to Capitol workers and people on the street.

Vets may be making unnecessary payment on insurance policies

Jack Coker, Veterans Administration Regional Director in Waco, today reminded veterans that some of them may be making unnecessary payments on their National Service Insurance policies.

"All NSLI policies beginning with World War II provide for a waiver of premium payments if you become totally disabled," Coker said.

"A veteran owning this insurance may not be required to pay premiums if he or she becomes totally disabled before reaching age 65 and the disability has existed for at least six consecutive months," he added.

But Coker pointed out that, under the law, waiver of premium payments for disability is not automatic.

"The veteran must apply for the waiver and refunds of premiums already paid after the onset of disability are usually limited to one year prior to the filing of the claim," he explained.

Coker said "total disability" for insurance purposes means that the veteran is prevented from working because of the disability.

For additional information and application form, veterans should contact the nearest VA office or write to the VA Center which handles their insurance.

Costly strikes idle thousands

By The Associated Press
Labor disputes in the coal, rubber, fruit and grain industries have left tens of thousands of workers idle nationwide.

Federal mediators were trying today to quickly settle a California cannery strike that could result in a $1-billion fruit harvest loss and higher supermarket prices. And Labor Secretary William J. Usery was again trying to end the nation's three-month rubber workers' strike.

Meanwhile, Oregon state officials were coping with a strike by grain inspectors which a state court judge refused to stop. And in West Virginia, one out of five miners was off the job protesting a federal judge's effort to stop one local's strike.

The most dramatic situation was in California, where the Teamsters union struck, close to the peak of harvest time when fruit could rot before a settlement is reached.

James Scarce, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, called representatives of both sides to Washington for negotiations today. The California Farm Bureau had already warned that a six-week strike could mean a crop loss of $1 billion.

After three months of negotiations that did not produce a new contract, some 30,000 workers in 13 Teamster union locals went on strike at 76 California processing plants Tuesday — within two weeks of the peak of the harvest season, which starts Aug. 1.

At stake are 80 to 85 per cent of the nation's canned tomatoes, apricots, peaches and fruit cocktails. To handle the load, the industry normally adds another 30,000 seasonal workers.

The union is seeking, over three years, a $3-an-hour raise over the workers' current average pay of $4.93 an hour plus 73 cents in fringes. The company says the union's proposal would mean a four-cent rise in the price of a regular-size can of peaches or tomatoes. It has offered a pay raise of 95 cents to $1.43 an hour, depending on the cost-of-living.

Usery, meanwhile, made two efforts Wednesday night and was to try again today to reach United Rubber Workers president Peter Bommarito in Akron, Ohio. Some 60,000 members of the URW have been on strike against the nation's four leading tire makers for 93 days.

Talks in the strike have been recessed for two weeks, with the two sides agreeing on general wage increases for the second and third years but differing on the first year. Therubber workers now average $5.50 an hour and want a wage hike of $1.10 in the first year. The bargaining is being conducted with the Firestone Tire & Rubber Co.

In Salem, Ore., meanwhile, state officials failed Wednesday to get a court order halting a strike by 70 state grain inspectors.

The walkout, which began Tuesday, is the first state employees' strike in Oregon history and has stalled all grain shipments through Oregon ports.

In West Virginia, meanwhile, president Edwin Wiles of the West Virginia Coal Association estimated that at least 12,000 of the state's 59,300 coal miners were off the job Wednesday in a wildcat strike spread by roving pickets, and that 225,000 tons of production worth $6.7 million had been lost since the strike began two days before.

Alaska peak named for Rep. Boggs

WASHINGTON (AP) — A mountain in Alaska has been named for the late Rep. Hale Boggs, D-La., his widow says.

Boggs, majority leader of the House, and Rep. Nicholas Begich, D-Alaska, were on a plane which disappeared during a flight over Alaska in 1972 and has never been found.

Rep. Lindy Boggs, elected to the seat after her husband was officially presumed dead, said the U.S. Board of Geographic Names has approved the naming of Boggs Peak, a 4,440-foot mountain in the Chugach Mountains, six miles north-west of Whittier.

A nearby peak, she said, is being named in memory of Begich.

Senate nears guaranteed income?

NOT DIFFICULT — Travis Floyd seems to be pretty happy about donating blood for Shriner Children's Burn Centers. He was one of approximately 100 citizens who gave blood for the project Wednesday. Wanda Harris, certified phlebotomist from West Texas Blood Service, is helping with the donation of blood. There will be donor days for the Shrine Centers again on July 31 and Aug. 15. Call Floyd or Dan Hutchinson to volunteer.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, approving a liberalized day-care tax subsidy for working parents, appears to be moving gradually toward a federal guaranteed income for the poorest Americans.

The Senate plan is not nearly as extensive as the family-assistance plan offered and rejected during the Nixon administration. But some conservatives fear the Senate may be getting there fast.

The latest step came Wednesday when the Senate voted an annual government check for certain working parents with incomes so small they owe less than $800 in federal tax.

This provision, as part of a more generous tax credit for child care, follows enactment last year of a bonus payment for families earning less than $8,000 a year.

The proposal adopted Wednesday and the one that became law in 1975 have one thing in common: each amounts to a negative income tax — meaning that families whose incomes are below specified levels get a government check instead of having to pay a tax.

"I can't support having supposed taxpayers making a profit out of the tax laws," protested Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala. "Don't mix social programs and taxation.... I don't see the logic of that."

But Allen was in the minority as the Senate voted, 71 to 21, to amend the child-care tax subsidy to allow the government payments to the poorest families.

The Senate also approved a new tax credit for the elderly that would replace the complicated retirement-income provisions in current law.

This would allow persons over 65 to subtract directly from taxes owed 15 per cent of their first $2,500 of annual income from any source. The net effect would be a $146 tax saving for a single person and $220 for married couples.

The credits for child care and the elderly would cost the Treasury more than $700 million a year.

This loss would be offset payment of tax to a foreign country.

The expanded child-care credit is aimed especially at helping millions of working mothers. It also would aid mothers who do not work because they cannot afford to hire someone to look after their children.

Meanwhile, the House Ways and Means Committee finished basic work on a proposed package of fundamental changes in federal laws taxing a person's larger gifts during life and his estate at death.

Key parts of the committee bill would:

—Create a unified new rate structure in place of presently separate estate and gift tax rates.

—Provide a unified credit against estate and gift taxes in place of a current lower set of exemptions. This would merge existing exemptions that total $90,000 into a credit ultimately equal to a $153,750 tax exemption.

Ford delegates want Rocky, Reagan for VP

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford's delegates to the Republican National Convention who are expressing their preference name Ronald Reagan and Nelson Rockefeller most often for the No. 2 spot on the GOP ticket.

But both men have said — with varying degrees of firmness — that they would not take the vice presidential nomination at the convention opening in Kansas City in three and half weeks.

Reagan is going all out for the right to recommend the party's vice presidential candidate himself. He lags slightly behind Ford in the tight delegate race for the GOP presidential nomination.

The first choice for vice president of the Reagan delegates with a preference was former Texas governor and Nixon administration official John Connally. On the strength of this Reagan support alone, Connally was the contender most often named for the second spot.

Ford meets today with Rockefeller, and later with the New York GOP convention delegation, which includes a large number of uncommitted delegates who may be a key to Ford's chances to beat Reagan.

The Associated Press delegate survey found only about 40 per cent of the 1,982 delegates interviewed gave a preference for the No. 2 spot.

Of those Ford delegates who said they had a choice, Reagan was at the top of the list. Of the 97 delegates naming the former California governor for the second spot, 78 were Ford backers. Most of the rest were uncommitted delegates.

Just about a week ago, however, Reagan made as strong a statement as anyone could want about the vice presidency.

"Under no circumstances whatsoever will I accept the vice presidential nomination," Reagan said in response to a question in Newark, N.J.

Ford has said he has not ruled anyone out of the vice presidential race if he is nominated, including Reagan and Rockefeller.

Continuing the current line-up with Rockefeller as vice president was the next ranking choice of the Ford delegates with a preference. Rockefeller was named by 66 Ford delegates for vice president, most of the 75 delegates who named him.

But Rockefeller took himself out of consideration for the vice presidency last year, after some Ford supporters said he was a liability in Ford's race with Reagan.

Reagan has ruled Rockefeller out of any position in his administration because of "philosophical differences."

Connally was ranked No. 1 among the delegates, the vice presidential choice of 224 delegates. Most of Connally's support — 71 per cent — came from delegates committed to support Reagan for president.

Only 29 of Ford's delegates said they would like to see Connally as vice president, putting him in fifth place among the President's backers, in contrast to the first place he ranked with Reagan backers.

A Reagan-Ford ticket has far less support than a Ford-

Reagan team that is supported by some Ford backers.

Only 25 delegates — all Reagan supporters — named Ford for vice president. That is about a third of the delegates who said they would like to see a Ford-Reagan ticket.

Reagan has not included Ford on his list of possible vice presidential contenders. Ford has not given any indication he would even consider the second spot.

Following Connally and Reagan in the AP survey results were Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee with 93 delegate mentions and Rockefeller with 75. Secretary of Commerce Elliot Richardson was named by 60 delegates. Ford and Sen. William Brock III of Tennessee were each named by 25 delegates.

Palmer said professional liability insurance is the greatest single professional liability problem. He said joint underwriting associations have set up interim solutions to help physicians get malpractice insurance but they do not represent a permanent answer.

Thirteen IRA members arrested

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Irish police said today they have arrested 13 suspected Irish Republican Army men in the biggest manhunt in Irish history, mounted for the killers of British Ambassador Christopher Ewart-Biggs.

The ambassador was killed by a bomb detonated under his car just after it left his home on the southern outskirts of Dublin Wednesday. The blast seriously injured British diplomat Brian Cubbon, killed Cubbon's secretary, 26-year-old Judith Cooke, and wounded the ambassador's Irish chauffeur, Brian O'Driscoll.

Police spokesmen declined to identify the arrested men or to say what charges they may face.

At Londonderry in Northern Ireland, the British army arrested Rory O'Brady, president of Sinn Fein, the IRA's political wing, and Sean Keenan, a battalion commander of IRA Provisionals. Police said the army had handed the pair over and the men were being questioned.

Police arrested David O'Connell, 39, reputedly a past commander of the IRA Provisional wing, and Joe O'Neill, a political organizer, in a Dublin suburb a few hours after the ambush. Nobody has claimed responsibility for the bombing, but police blamed the IRA's Provisional wing or a splinter group linked to it. The Provisionals are waging a guerrilla war to end British rule in Northern Ireland.

The IRA Provisional wing attacked the homes of a number of British civil officials in Northern Ireland earlier this year. It said they "share as much responsibility for the oppression in our country as the warlords of the British army."

Several thousand Irish troops and police searched for the assassins. Police manned roadblocks outside Dublin 24 hours after the bombing. A reward of $36,000 was offered for the killers.

A police spokesman said they were hunting for three men seen running from the ambush scene. It was not known if any of the men were among the 13 arrested.

Police said the bomb was planted in a drain under the road and was detonated by remote control by at least three men hidden in a thicket about 200 yards away.

Police officials said they suspected the terrorists were after Cubbon and not the ambassador. Cubbon, permanent undersecretary of state in Northern Ireland and the top British civil servant there, was on a visit to the Irish republic from his post in Belfast.

A senior police officer said, "The ambassador had been here for less than two weeks. It's entirely likely the people responsible for his death were after someone else in the car."

"We feel there was no real reason for the IRA to murder the ambassador, even though he was Britain's representative here," another police official said. "We believe there are strong grounds for suspecting he was not the real target of this outrage."

Cubbon and Miss Cooke arrived in Dublin Tuesday night. He and the ambassador were on their way to see Foreign Minister Garrett Fitzgerald when the car was blown up.

St. Vincent's Hospital said Cubbon was in an intensive care unit with a fractured spine and other serious injuries.

AMA chief wants more doctors in politics

HOUSTON (AP) — Dr. Richard E. Palmer, the new president of the American Medical Association, says he hopes more physicians will get involved in politics.

Palmer, a pathologist from Alexandria, Va., cited the recent election of Lake Jackson, Tex., physician Ron Paul to Congress as a good sign because it means he can help interpret medical needs in the most important political groups in the nation.

Since taking office June 30, Palmer has set a goal of uniting the medical profession.

"As long as we're divided as a profession, we are conquerable," Palmer said. "But united we can't be beaten. And we can work to assure the best for our patients, who are our greatest ally and the reason we're working hard today."

Palmer said professional liability insurance is the greatest single problem facing physicians. He said joint underwriting associations have set up interim solutions to help physicians get malpractice insurance but they do not represent a permanent answer.

"Only through state legislation can we see the malpractice mess solved throughout the U.S.," he said.

The doctor pointed to the need for state legislatures to insure that patients wrongfully injured will get money "we all believe they deserve."

Palmer said the AMA is stronger than ever today because it has more members from various facets and ages in the profession.

"We are the one organization in this country that can stand up and fight for all physicians, whether they be private practitioners, academicians, young resident or others," Palmer said. "And we intend to do plenty of fighting this year."

One fight might be with the federal government.

Palmer said the Federal Trade Commission has complained against physicians not being able to advertise in unrestricted ways.

"Such advertising would pad the demand for our services, pad our costs and undermine our professionalism," Palmer said.

CHECKED OUT — Roman fashion designer Roberto Capucci presented this evening outfit made of two shades of green silk satin at the Rome fall and winter fashion collections Wednesday. Model wears a short tunic over the long skirt and on top a flowing cape of the same material.

Threesome hinders chance for romance

DEAR ABBY: I am 26 and Bob is 27. We've been dating for over a year, and I am very much attracted to him, but I don't seem to be making any headway.
You see, whenever we go out, Bob always brings another fellow along. We have never been absolutely alone—just the two of us.
I've become very much upset with having an extra man on all our dates, and I want to do something about it.
Should I confront Bob with my feelings? Or would that be a mistake?

THREE IS A CROWD

DEAR THREE: A confrontation isn't necessary. If Bob were interested in a romantic involvement with you, you wouldn't have to insist on being alone with him. There's a crowd. Lose him.

DEAR ABBY: My ex-wife and I often discuss remarrying, but we always get hung up on the question of money. Her net worth has grown substantially since our divorce, and mine has gone way down.

She feels that in a remarriage, her assets should remain hers as a sort of security, and that I should contribute the same as before.
I feel that if a couple marries, there should be a complete merger. In other words, since I was the sole source of support in our first marriage because I was "up," so to speak, financially, she would be the mainstay now that our situations are reversed.

We are both in our 50s and semi-retired and have no dependents. What do you say?

FOULED UP IN FLA.

DEAR FOULED: Your letter leaves too many questions unanswered. How long were you married? Why were you divorced? You say that her net worth has appreciated substantially since your divorce, and yours has gone "way down." Why? Did you gamble or make risky investments, or were you merely a victim of the times?

She may be justified in her concern about her "security," but knowing so few of the facts, I hesitate to offer any advice.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have two children, 5 and 7. A very good friend of ours comes over about once a week for dinner and because he is such a good storyteller, the children always insist that he tell them a story.

In these stories, the bad guy always wins. I told him to please tell the kids stories in which the good guys win. He did, but the kids didn't like those stories nearly as much as the ones in which the bad guys win, so our friend went back to his old method.

I say it's a bad influence on children, but my husband insists it doesn't matter. I would like to know what you and some of your readers think.

UNSURE IN IDYLLWILD

DEAR UNSURE: I vote with you.

DEAR ABBY: My mother has been in heaven for four years. I was 8 years old when the Lord took her away, but I can never forget a certain happening.

She once asked my sister or myself to do a small chore for her, like carrying out the trash. We argued so much about whose turn it was to do it that Mama sent us both outside and she did it herself.

Please put this in your column for girls who are lucky enough to have their mothers. Love,

Mrs. Sweeney relates her recent trip

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK
AP Business Writer

Cactus Chapter of A.B.W.A. met Monday night at Furr's Cafeteria. Lucille Brown, president, presiding. Mrs. Charles Sweeney was the guest speaker. Mrs. Sweeney gave a humorous account of her recent trip to Europe and displayed souvenirs she purchased in various cities. In telling of the experiences of the tour, she told of the friendly and unfriendly people of the various countries.

Laura Erhardt, who is employed at Big Spring State Hospital, was the vocational speaker. The semi-annual enrollment event will be Sept. 12, with Gloria McComb chairman of the event.

Nine members will be attending National Convention in New Orleans in October. They are, Lucille Brown, Frances Swann, Ruth Manuel, Maurine Hanks, and Esther Trantham, Marie Horton, Eunice Hickson, Naomi Willis, and Louise Proctor. Esther Trantham and Faye Rogers recently visited the National Headquarters in Kansas City, Mo. and gave an interesting report of their tour, saying the building is almost too small to house the growing organization.

Marie Eason gave the benediction.

Mrs. Hamlin gets award for report

The John A. Kee Rebekah Lodge No. 153 met with Terry Vigus, noble grand, presiding. Twenty three members and one guest, Maggie Gillispie of California, were present.

Hazel Lamar presented Juanita Hamlin with a certificate for a perfect semi-annual report. Lavelle Hill, lodge deputy, presented Dee Martin and La Verne Maddox with certificates of perfection and installed Odell La Londe as conductor.

The charter members of the lodge were honored and each presented a small gift by Terry Vigus. Charter members present were Hazel Lamar, Earl and Clea Plew and Beatrice Bonner. A program was presented by Odell La Londe, Lida B. Boland, Alma Pye, Dee Martin and Brookie Martin.

Next Tuesday, July 27, Zora Peddycord, president of the Rebekah Assembly of Texas, will visit the lodge.

The other lodges of district 11 are invited and a salad supper will be held in Mrs. Peddycord's honor. Members are asked to be at the hall at 6:30, to bring salads and to come formal.

Refreshments were served by Elizabeth Beck, Frances Loftis, Jo Byrd, Melba Sutton and Ruth Land.

Getting started in the morning is getting more expensive these days, if coffee is involved. But some just can't do without.

"There is no point when I would stop buying it," Carmen Elera said as she checked prices in the coffee section of a San Francisco supermarket. "I have to have my coffee in the morning."

"I have no choice," echoed Mary Pejirl in Chicago. If we have to cut down somewhere, it won't be coffee."

Shoppers have watched coffee prices rise 50 cents a pound or more in the past year, mostly because of a frost that struck the Brazilian coffee crop last July, the war in Angola and this year's earthquake in Guatemala.

But coffee drinkers are apparently buying just as much as ever, although they are shaving pennies where they can. Others are clipping discount coupons, using instant coffee to avoid brewing a full pot, cutting down to one cup a day, or switching to tea.

"The price increases passed on to consumers over the past year have totaled about 40 per cent, but we are still moving our best sellers or medium-priced brands," said Fred Breaux, a New Orleans grocer.

"There has been absolutely no decline in coffee consumption in restaurants and very little at the retail level," said Edward Jones, who has studied the coffee situation for the Mitchell Hutchins Inc. brokerage firm in New York.

He predicts a "modest drop-off" in sales in the near future if high prices persist, but he won't estimate the size of the drop. "We're in uncharted seas," he said. "There's never been a coffee price increase approaching this magnitude."

Back in 1953 a similar frost in Brazil forced a near doubling of green coffee bean prices at one point, and coffee consumption in the United States fell slightly in 1954. It picked up again the next year.

The current trouble started on July 17 last year, when frost caused by an Antarctic cold wave settled over the delicate coffee trees in Brazil, the world's largest supplier of coffee. Nearly two-thirds of the crop, which was to be harvested this spring, was destroyed.

Brazil was selling green coffee beans for 68 cents a pound then. They're up to $1.53 a pound now.

Yield listed

A three-ounce jar of grated Parmesan or Romano cheese yields about three-quarters cup.

In the United States, the nationwide average retail price for a pound of ground coffee was $1.27. It was up to $1.70 by May of this year, while the average price of six ounces of instant coffee jumped in that period from $1.55 to $1.94.

Large eggs

Test kitchens usually use "large" eggs in developing recipes. That means each egg weighs about 2 ounces.

Jury mulls fate of Attorney General

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Seven women and five men were deliberating the fate of former New Mexico Atty. Gen. David Norvell today.

Norvell was being tried on federal charges of conspiracy, extortion, and filing a false income tax return.

The jury — a machinist, a dental technician, three clerks, an auto mechanic, a nurse, a printer, a maid, an iron worker, a former county treasurer's deputy, and a bead stringer — deliberated more than four hours Wednesday before retiring for the evening.

The jury is not sequestered. There was no hint how long they might be out. This is the 18th day of the trial.

Before handing the case to the jurors, U.S. District Court Judge H. Yearle Payne spent two hours reading instructions to the jury, which were couched in obscure legal language.

The indictment's eight counts centered around three main charges.

One alleged Norvell conspired to extort a large sum of money from Fort Sumner rancher James R. Jenkins in exchange for reversal of a state engineer's decision which prohibited Jenkins from drilling water wells on his property.

Farm 'New' co-ops bilking farmers

The Texas State Securities Board today warned farmers and others in the agriculture business to be on the lookout for a possible swindle in newly-formed farmers' cooperative associations.

The Board asks that this warning be publicized in the hope Texas farmers may be spared the loss of sizeable amounts of money.

Beginning this spring a pattern has emerged, and now farmers — in about 20 states in the central United States are discovering that they have been duped. While details of the swindle vary somewhat from state to state, the main characteristics generally are the same. They are as follows:

A new farmers' cooperative is formed, and one or more prominent local citizens are listed as officers or members. These local citizens usually are not aware a swindle is taking place, but their names are used to draw in other victims.

The farmer is told that if he joins, he'll be able to buy equipment, seed, supplies, etc., at reduced prices. In order to join, he must invest in a 20-year savings certificate or promissory note of the co-op, for which he pays about $350 per year. When the certificate matures in 20 years, he supposedly will get back all the money he's paid in plus a certain rate of interest compounded annually. He's led to believe that his price saving on any big ticket item (such as a tractor or combine) will more than offset the $350 annual payment. He's also promised the use of grain elevators and other cooperative facilities.

The promoters and their employes take at least the full first year payment ($350) as their "commission" for selling the savings certificate to the farmer.

Since the cooperative had no money or assets to begin with, it still has nothing, although $350 has been paid in by hundreds of farmers. Even if a few farmers elect to pay the pull purchase price of the savings certificate in a single payment, the assets of the co-op will still be negligible. The managers of the co-op simply don't have enough money to do anything for the farmers, even if they had intended to do anything in the first place.

Just in case there is any money remaining after the first huge bite for commissions, the promoters usually will have signed, as representatives of the cooperative, a management or consultant contract for some other company to manage the business of the cooperative. The manager-consultant is usually a "sweetheart" company, i.e., it is run by cohorts of the promoters, and its fee is quite large.

The promoters and the "manager" go through the motions (for awhile) of launching the new enterprise. They show a decided preference for buying things on credit, as opposed to paying cash. When they eventually, but inevitably, leave the scene, they try to avoid the appearance of having "skipped out" with the money. The hoped-for appearance is that things just didn't work out — they tried but just couldn't quite put it all together. This makes it more difficult to prosecute them.

Farmers are urged to be very careful about turning over money to strangers purporting to organize a new cooperative. There are, of course, many honest and legitimate cooperative associations serving their members well, and other legitimate ones will be formed in the future. But questionable cooperatives have been set up recently in states adjacent to Texas, and the Texas Securities Commissioner is concerned that attempts to do the same here are quite likely.

Any farmer approached to invest money in a cooperative with the characteristics described above is asked to contact the State Securities Board office in Austin at P. O. Box 13167, Capitol Station, Austin 78711; telephone (512) 475-4661.

(AP WIREPHOTO) STRIKERS BEHIND HIM — Peter Bommarito, 61-year-old president of the United Rubber Workers union, shows no signs of despair while seated in his office as the union's 93-day strike against the major rubber companies drags on. Although the long walkout is draining the savings of many of the 60,000 men who are idled, Bommarito says the union membership is solidly behind him.

Food production items freed from sales tax

COLLEGE STATION — Texas farmers and ranchers no longer have to pay sales taxes on certain purchases to be used in the production of food and fiber.

Effective July 20, the Texas sales tax law will exempt agricultural producers from sales taxes on such items as baling wire, fencing supplies, and machinery and equipment, points out Don Parks, area economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"However, a farmer or rancher does not automatically qualify for exemption for the sales tax," notes Parks. "Producers must file an exemption certificate with each firm or business with which they deal. These certificates are available from the Comptroller of Public Accounts in Austin or from local branch offices of the Comptroller.

"To qualify for an exemption, the item purchased must be used exclusively on a farm or ranch. A farm or ranch is defined as land used entirely or partially in the production of crops, livestock or other agricultural products. Home gardens are not considered a farm," explains the economist.

Certain items are exempt without the use of an exemption certificate. These include feed for farm and ranch animals, fertilizer, seeds and annual plants, and animals.

Items requiring the use of an exemption certificate include fungicides, insecticides, herbicides, defoliants, desiccants, all medications for farm and ranch animals, and machinery and equipment used in food, grass and feed production, including such expendable supplies as hand tools, baling wire, fence wire and posts, gates and storage facilities for bulk commodities.

Natural gas or electricity used on a farm or ranch is also exempt with the appropriate certificate if used for pumps for livestock or irrigation water, dairy barn operations, welding machines, electric fences, and lights for barns, pens and poultry houses.

To request exemption certificates, producers may write or call the Sales Tax Division, Comptroller of Public Accounts, 111 East 7th St., Austin, Texas 78774 (800-292-9687; after Aug. 1, 890-252-5555).

U.S. leads medal race

MONTREAL (AP) — She was the closest thing to perfection the Olympics have ever seen. She was cool and poised beyond her meager 14 years at a massive, jostling international news conference. But Nadia Comaneci was just a little girl, subject to all the human faults, at the presentation ceremonies.

The gold medal as the Games' all-around gymnast was around her neck, some incredible marks were in the books and some vanquished Russians were at her sides when Nadia turned to watch the Romanian flag being raised.

Just as the first strains of the Romanian national anthem sounded — while a worldwide television audience of a billion people watched, while thousands of newsmen were proclaiming her the queen of the Games — Nadia turned human.

At that poignant moment, one for which she had trained through most of her life, she screwed up her face in a grimace — a typical teenage effort to stifle an itching nose.

And America's all-conquering male swimmers turned human, too. But not much. They won all the medals they could in Wednesday's events — they still haven't been beaten — but, for the first time in the Games, they failed to break a world record.

Like Nadia's, it wasn't much of a lapse. It came in the men's 100-meter butterfly. To make up for the failure to break Mark Spitz' 4-year-old record, the Americans turned it into another 1-2-3 sweep, their third of the Games.

The sweep by Matt Vogel, Fort Wayne, Ind., Joe

Bottom, Santa Clara, Calif., and Gary Hall, Fayetteville, N.C., along with a winning, world-record time of 7 minutes, 23.22 seconds in the men's 800 freestyle relay, pushed the male swimmers' medal accumulation so far to all seven gold medals awarded, five silver and three bronze in four days.

In all, the American team now has 10 gold, eight silver and four bronze. East Germany is second with seven gold, five silver and four bronze while Russia, also the beneficiary of a women's swimming sweep, is third with six, six and one. No other nation has more than one gold medal.

In addition to the swimmers, the United States also got a gold and a silver from its shooting team. Included was the first Olympic medal ever acquired by a woman in that sport.

Margaret Murdock, 33, who's in nursing training at Topeka, Kan., took the silver in a controversy with officials. It may yet turn out to be a gold, or a piece of a gold. U.S. team manager Joe Berry said he was asking officials to reconsider and award two golds. Miss Murdock was originally named the winner with 1,162 out of a possible 1,200 in the small bore rifle, three positions, with Army Capt. Larry Bassham, Bedford, Tex., one point behind.

After a 3½-hour check, officials discovered a clerical error had been made, giving the two Americans the same score. Under international rules, the last 10 shots from the kneeling position are used to break the tie. And the reluctant Bassham was named the winner.

The Americans also survived another scare in basketball, saw one of their boxers move into prime position for a medal after a decisive victory over his chief opponent, a Russian, and had the first and second gold medalists in the men's three-meter platform diving.

The basketball team, now 3-0 in the round-robin tournament, trailed tough Yugoslavia by four points at halftime and had all three centers in foul trouble before pulling out a 112-93 decision behind Scott May, with 26 points, and Adrian Dantley, with 27.

Russia also remained unbeaten with a 108-85 rout of Canada. The Americans automatically go to 4-0 tonight when they pick up a forfeit against Egypt, which has withdrawn its team from the Games.

Davey Armstrong, Puyallup, Wash., gave a classic performance of boxing and punching in a unanimous decision over Anatoly Volkov, the Russian who stopped him in two rounds in a bout in Moscow early this year.

The attention of the Games, however, was riveted on little Nadia and her flying exhibitions in the finals of the women's all-around gymnastics. And she didn't disappoint anyone — unless it was her Russian challengers, Nellie Kim and Ludmila Tourischev, for years the queen of the world's gymnasts. Miss Kim eventually finished second, Miss Tourischev third.

Nadia, cool and almost forbidding out of the gymnasium, scored her fourth and fifth perfect 10 scores, this time on the balance beam and uneven parallel bars. Before these Games, no score of 10 had been awarded in Olympic competition. She finished with a total score of 79.275 of a possible 80.

Gary Hall, a medical student at Cincinnati, says he's taking a lifetime vacation from competition after his bronze medal finish in the 100 butterfly.

Vogel's winning time was 54.35. The relay team of Mike Bruner, Stockton, Calif., Bruce Furniss, Santa Clara, Calif., John Naber, Menlo Park, Calif., and Jim Montgomery, Madison, Wis., chopped more than seven seconds off its own record.

KEEPING A TIGHT GRIP ON THINGS — U.S. Olympic wrestler Michael Farina, 18, of Elmhurst, Ill., pins down Hungary's Ferenc Seres Tuesday night during Greco-Roman style wrestling tournament. Farina won the match.

ONLY FIFTH — Soviet girl gymnast Olga Korbut, the 1972 Munich Olympic Darling, wipes off tears Wednesday in the Montreal Forum as she leaves the gymnastic area only placing fifth in the women's all-around gymnastic events.

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — A two-run homer in the 12th inning by usually light-hitting Paul Blair of the Baltimore Orioles beat the Texas Rangers 6-4 Wednesday night.

Blair drove in Bobby Grich, who had walked. Reggie Jackson homered in the first inning off Texas starter Bert Blyleven and Ken Singleton hit a two-run single in the seventh for the other Baltimore runs.

Blyleven lasted until the 11th, when Hoerner got him off the hook by pitching out of a one-out, bases-loaded jam.

As the worm turns
Area fishing news

Catfish city

By Danny Reagan

Despite wind and rain and the dark of night, the area lakes have produced some fairly good-size fish, most of them that is. Here's the scoop:

LAKE THOMAS
"It was slower this week, fish-wise," said Mrs. Tidwell, from the lodge on the shores of the now burgeoning waters of the lake.

"We've had an awful lot of people out here catching them," she said, "but they're just not reporting."

She has been some "pretty good" blacks in the two, four and six pound category, and one man brought in 30 total pounds of the popular largemouth bass.

"Since the water came in," she added, "the fishing off the bank has really picked up."

Mrs. Tidwell also told me that on Tuesday, Texas Parks and Wildlife people were at the lake restocking it with "a big pickup full of bass fingerlings." They told her that since the lake had come up so much, the department deemed it necessary to get some more fish in there.

The Tidwells believe that this weekend is going to be "really big," so if you go out there and need any assistance, don't hesitate to drop by Lake Thomas Lodge and ask them.

LAKE COLORADO CITY
Mrs. Luttrull from Luie's Lakeside Lodge had a meager report this week.

"It's just been too rainy," she said, "and people just don't come out in the rain."

She says that it has been very quiet since the Fourth of July when the rains began. She did say that there have been some small channel cat and perch caught, but no one has been out enough to try for bigger ones.

The big carp are still there, if you can brave the weather to go after them, but it looks like other fishing is suffering from the elements of nature.

MOSS CREEK LAKE
"There's lots of wind this week," said Ed McCain from his concession, "in fact, it looks like it'll blow all the water out of the lake."

The news out at this lake is that the junker-size whites are being caught. McCain saw a friend catch a six-pounder.

There are also a lot of channel cat being caught on catfish bait and blood bait on the southeast side of the lake.

"They should be in the deeper water this time of the year," said McCain, referring to the bigger cats, "but they are still feeding in the shallow waters."

The walleyes are still being caught on live bait, and most of them are "keepers," 12 inches or longer.

I'll be going out to the lake this Saturday to talk and fish with Ed, researching a story on the walleye for next week's fishing page. That prized game fish is becoming the talk of most local fishermen, and with luck I hope to get some myself.

LAKE SPENCE
The striper, whites and blacks are all hitting top-water baits at the crack of dawn. They can be found generally scattered over the lake. Channel cats are hitting blood baits and shad at the mouth of the river, and seem to be in abundance at this time.

Total poundage at the lake looked impressive, and this was only the fish reported. No telling how many fish were caught and immediately spirited home without much bragging done.

The total number of channel cat caught this week was 249, with a combined total weight of 551 lbs. Stripers caught were 14, with a total weight of 55 lbs. Whites went 12 for 13 lbs., and blacks were five for seven pounds.

Here's the individual catches:
Marvin Chambliss, Odessa — 83 channel cat from 3/4 lb. to 1 1/4 lb., up river on trotline with blood bait; John Page, Robert Lee — 4 blacks to one lb.; Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Freeman, Odessa — 109 channel cat to 6 pounds; Mr. and Mrs. Y. J. Sherril, Robert Lee — 13 channel cat to 9 pounds; Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Purser, Big Spring — 6 striper to 6 lbs., 14 channel cat to 3 lbs., and 12 whites to 1 1/2 lbs.; Ike and Bernie Bailey, Jal, N.M. — 3 striper at 6 lbs., 2 striper at 5 lbs., 3 striper at 3 lbs., 1 black at 5 lbs., and 30 channel cat to 4 lbs.

And now a word from Kountry Konny Service:

Konny says

"Right now, at Lake Spence, there are lake lots for sale. These lots are divided into two additions called Lakeside Estates and Bayview Estates.

"Lakeside Estates consists of the only waterfront lots available at Lake Spence. These lots range from the highly restricted, to the lesser restricted lots. They, also, range in size. These lots are adjacent to a 4,400-foot paved airstrip, which makes them convenient to flyers.

"Bayview Estates are unrestricted. These lots are off-waterfront lots, and are approximately 50-feet by 140-feet in size. "All the lots have electricity, and within six to eight months, there will be treated city water piped to all the lots. This is under construction now.

"In the near future, there will be several marinas built within the additions that will allow wet-boat storage. Also the marinas will be equipped for launching boats."

Your Kountry Girl,
Konny

It all boils down to sporadic hitting at the various lakes. Thomas and Spence are really putting forth the channel cat presently, while Moss Creek offers winning-size bass to those who can feel them out. Colorado City presents a real challenge now, but carp fishermen can still expect to have some luck.

— D.R.
P.S. If you have any luck with walleyes this week, let me know. Your information will be helpful in compiling the feature on those fighters. Good luck!

State tourney approaching

The Texas State Women's Open Slow Pitch Softball to be held in Big Spring on August 6, 7 and 8 is fast approaching, and teams from as far off as Corpus Christi have entered. It is expected that near 30 teams will enter this year, and all of the games in so far as possible will be played on the two fields at Webb Air Force Base.

Tournament Director Boyce Hall has announced that Sgt. Randy Pringle of the base will be umpire-in-chief, and his staff of ten umpires will work all the games.

It is urged that those teams, team members and other people who are selling "Donation" tickets to the tournament contact Boyce just as soon as possible. His telephone number is 267-6957.

Also local teams are reminded that the deadline for entry is July 24, and they can get entry forms from Boyce or by sending him a money order or certified check. Personal checks will not be accepted.

Anyone desiring to help with the tournament in any capacity should contact Boyce Hale — scorers are needed badly.

END OF A BUNT PLAY — Tommy Olague, third-sacker for the Texas All-Stars, falls on home plate forcing out Cavan McMahon of the National All-Stars after fielding a bunt by Randy Johnson with the bases loaded. Umpire Rocky Cierra makes the call. The Nationals went on to win the contest, 4-3.

Five teams left National All-Stars in major upset

By FRED BREWER

Big Spring National All-Stars rallied to upset Big Spring Texas 4-3 Wednesday night and Midland Northern came from behind to avert an upset to Big Spring International winning 3-1 in the third night of action in the Little League District III Tournament.

The original field of 11 teams has now been whittled down to five, four from Midland and one from Big Spring. The main reason Midland Tower is still in the running is... it has yet to play its first game. Tower goes up against Midland Eastern in tonight's second game (8:00). Midland Northern plays Midland North Central in the opening fray (6:30).

The winner of the Tower-Eastern game will play B.S. National Friday night (8:00) in a semi-final game and the winner of the Northern-North Central game (the other semifinal game) will be waiting for the winner of Friday night's game to settle the championship Saturday night (8:00).

Losing hurlers Jesse Woodruff and Todd Underwood both appeared to have too much velocity last night. In critical situations they had trouble putting the ball where they wanted it and their catchers had trouble holding onto it.

Not that Woodruff and Underwood pitched poorly — in most cases they pitched well enough to win — but Raymond Dominguez and his relief Randy Johnson of National and Jay Motter of Northern were so superb with their control they left little room for error.

Apropos of things to come, the first run of the evening was the result of a walk by Johnson, two passed ball (or two wild pitches if you're related to the catcher) and a ground-out.

The National League All-Stars held on to this lead for three innings as both pitchers mowed down to the opposition. Then, with one out in the fourth, two on and a one and two count on Tony Ontiveros, Dominguez made his first big mistake — he grooved one.

Ontiveros drilled it over the left-center field fence bringing in Oscar Limon and Tommy Olague ahead of him to give Texas a 3-1 lead. National took the lead right back in a wild inning in their half of the fourth. Terry Spears walked, Matt Taylor beat out a bobbie by Ontiveros between first and second, and Cavan McMahon laid down a perfect bunt. At first it appeared two runs would score when Woodruff threw the ball into right field.

However, Spence was detected leaving second too soon and the runners had to go back — loading the bases. Texas did not take advantage of this break. Dominguez walked to drive in one run and an error by left fielder Parnell Parker allowed the typing run to score.

Third baseman Tommy Clague scooped up a Johnson bunt and dove on home plate to force McMahon at the plate. However, Olague's alert play just put off the inevitable one play. Kip McLaughlin brought Dominguez in with the winning run on an infield hit.

Johnson came in to relieve Dominguez and set the Texans down the final two innings without a hit. Midland Northern, shutout through four, began solving Todd Underwood's fast ball in the fifth. Jeff Howes singled and Marc Nolan brought him in with a double. This tied the game at one apiece.

The International League Stars had scored their sole run in the second on a walk by Wayne Hilliard, passed ball, stole base on a throwing error by Motter.

Northern scored the winning run in the last inning on a walk, a passed ball and a single into right by Marc Williams. Jeff Howes also slapped one into right plating

Williams, who had moved up on a passed ball, with an insurance run.

'Deadly little pieces of plastic' The new popularity of the 'wriggle wonder'

By DANNY REAGAN
Fish and Game Editor

At noon, the sun at Lake Spence near Robert Lee can sometimes hang up in the sky, toasting everything that sits, stands or trolls beneath its blinding rays to a consistency ranging from medium-well to black and crispy.

That may be somewhat of an exaggeration, but it looked as if the sun had made melba toast out of my mother-in-law's ("Lunker Lu") better judgment as she placed an ungainly looking enormous purple plastic worm on the end of her line. Her husband, daughter, and myself laughingly told her that there were no whales stocked in the lake.

We were soon to be proven wrong, as many anglers are who disdain the plastic worm when going after the big bass.

THE ABOVE scene has no doubt been repeated countless times, the plug-spinner bait- spoon bass fishermen scoffing at the angler who would stoop to use the unappealing, plain plastic worm.

But the plastic worm is becoming known as one of the top bass catchers in history. Mill Rosko, a nationally known bass fisherman, feels that the "new" worm is the reason for the success.

"Within the past couple of years, a second generation plastic worm has evolved, with a flat, tapered tail and a built-in curvature that one might compare to a coiled spring, causing the worm to vibrate enticingly no matter how you might retrieve it, fast or slow," says Rosko.

Plastic worms are now manufactured in colors that cover the entire spectrum, and some are even scented to effect various flavors. Sizes range from fingerling-length to yard-long mammoth wiggles.

"In spite of all the types, I doubt if one has ever been made that didn't catch fish," stated Rosko, in an article published nationally.

THERE ARE numerous ways in which to rig a plastic worm but there's really nothing very difficult about fishing with one.

A popular method used by many local fishermen is to just tie a medium-size claw-style hook into the end of their line, and slip on a plastic worm.

Others prefer to use hooks designed specifically for plastic worms, which hold the worm in place on the hook, and keep it from slipping down on the shank of the hook.

Many fishermen use a slip sinker ahead of their plastic worm to add casting weight. Rattle-headed sinkers are used with a certain degree of effectiveness as well. But the plastic worm may be fished equally effectively when trailing from a leadhead jig or while trailing astern of the twirling spinners or a spinner bait.

Most fishermen like to develop their own technique that works best for them.

But why the great increasing popularity and effectiveness of the wriggle wonder?

Rosko perhaps answers best in this article.

"FIRST, I believe that a plastic worm fished weedless is a lure that is almost impossible to lose. As a result, anglers will cast them into the thickest weed growth, the heaviest clusters of deadfalls and down among the rocks and boulders strewn on the bottom along the edge of a dropoff.

"They're hesitant to cast most lures into these places because they'd wind up losing a lot of lures that often cost a couple of dollars apiece.

"Second, because they're casting these lures in the places most apt to hold fish, the bass that might not see any other lure now has an opportunity to see a slithering enticing plastic worm sliding through the weeds, or snaking along the bottom, or weaving among the dead-falls, or even buzzing across the surface behind a spinner bait."

Plastic worm fishing isn't a miracle cure for instant success, however. The fishermen has to have a certain knowledge of fish and water conditions.

But if there is one rule of thumb for fishing with the deadly little pieces of plastic, it would be "Let it get to the bottom!"

AS THE WORM comes up off the bottom, it swirls small clouds of mud, attracting any nearby fish, and giving it a more natural motion. Also, use the smallest sinker you can possibly cast, as the fish might drop the bait because of the weight.

When the fish takes the worm, it is good practice to hesitate for a split second, allowing him to get it well into his mouth. Then jerk back with authority, never halfheartedly, to set the hook. The worm has done its duty, now it is up to you and your expertise to land the fish.

Use your own methods, but try the plastic worm if you have never used one. Lake Spence and Moss Creek are extremely suited for such fishing, but you can be sure that most any body of water will evidence some sort of success to the angler who properly wields the new wonder.

Oklahoma death penalty near passage

PROTESTING — Some of the estimated 89 inmates who seized a Waupun State Prison building for 12 hours Wednesday peer from third-story windows draped with banners reading: "A time to think" and "Stop treating us like dogs."

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A proposed new Oklahoma death penalty statute was halfway toward enactment today, with legislative leaders confident it would be ready to be signed into law by their Friday deadline.

The Senate passed the measure, drafted by a Senate-House committee before this week's special legislative session convened, by a vote of 45-1 Wednesday.

The House received the bill when it convened Wednesday at 4 p. m., but could take no action. Under legislative rules, it must be read again in the House on Thursday and cannot be brought up for debate and passage until Friday.

Senate approval of the death penalty bill came after several unsuccessful attempts to add amendments which the authors said would place the bill in danger of being declared unconstitutional by the U. S. Supreme Court, as was the state's existing capital punishment law.

Sen. E. Melvin Porter, D-Oklahoma City, cast the lone Senate vote against the bill.

Some other senators said they had reservations about enacting the death penalty and one, Sen. Gene Stipe, D-McAlester, said he fears the proposed new measure is unconstitutional.

The special session was called by Gov. David Boren for the sole purpose of writing a new capital punishment law after the U. S. Supreme Court declared the existing statute unconstitutional.

Stipe said "only time will tell" whether the new bill is any better.

House Speaker Bill Willis, meanwhile, said he anticipates the House will pass the new death penalty measure by a wide margin, with the main battle coming over whether to accept amendments, as was the case in the Senate.

The House passed a resolution Wednesday setting adjournment for 5 p. m. Friday.

Willis said the House would meet at 10 a. m. Friday to begin considering the bill. He said the House leadership plans to relax debate restrictions "to some degree, but we will have some limits."

Asked if he feels the session will end Friday, Willis said, "I believe it will."

Boren, when he called the special session, said he hoped it could be concluded in five days. The session began Monday, so a Friday adjournment would meet that timetable.

The Senate accepted a few

"corrective amendments," as Senate President Pro Tem Gene Howard called them. They were minor amendments designed to clarify, rather than change, the bill's meaning.

Several attempts to attach major amendments were defeated.

Most of them would have made it easier to assess the death penalty, but Senate leaders argued successfully that they might endanger the bill's constitutionality.

Sen. Phil Dawson, D-Seminole, tried to submit the issue to a statewide vote, but his proposed amendment was disallowed because the Senate majority ruled that it was not germane because it called only for a vote to obtain the sentiment of the voters.

The bill's definition of first-degree murder, its two-stage proceeding for determining whether to assess the death penalty and most of its other provisions were patterned after language in capital punishment laws in Georgia and Florida.

The Supreme Court upheld the laws in those two states and in Texas when it rejected Oklahoma's law.

The bill provides that a person can be convicted of first-degree murder only when he "unlawfully and with malice aforethought causes the death of another person," or "when he takes the life of a human being, regardless of malice, in the commission of forcible rape, robbery with a dangerous weapon, kidnaping, escape from lawful custody, first-degree burglary or first-degree arson."

Ridin' fence

This and that

with Marj Carpenter

Today, I'm into one of those columns again in which I want to mention several topics that will not take up the entire column.

For one thing, I'm an old cemetery freak that often is seen going around reading old tombstones. Everybody knows that people like that are slightly off.

I found out this week that information is needed about the old Cumberland Presbyterian Cemetery just off Highway 80 on the East Hill near Colorado City. Efforts are being made to preserve what is left of the cemetery.

IT IS LOCATED off an alley south of Highway 80 just west of an ARCO filling station. It has one tombstone left standing, with the weather having worn off the name of it. Several other tombstones may be found on the ground in the area.

All that is now known of the Cumberland Church is that it existed from about 1900 to 1910, having been unionized in 1908. A news item dated March 28, 1901 signed by W. F. Kerby, pastor stated, "I have been here two months as missionary pastor. I organized a church with 21 members, all adults with R. N. Mitchell, D. G. Fields and John Register as ruling elders and A. H. Webb and M. T. Crawford as deacons."

Anyone with any information on the cemetery should contact First Presbyterian Church in Colorado City.

ON ANOTHER TOPIC entirely, a Mrs. J. K. Michecoby who called in and asked why we objected to President Ford helping the Indians and in the same paper appeared to commend Jimmy Carter for the help of another ethnic group of the National Convention, I can only reiterate what I said on the phone. The stories were both Associated Press stories. Only the headlines were added locally.

Mrs. Michecoby says that she's Indian and that if anybody wants to help the Indians, it's alright with her. I imagine.

On still a third topic, Rud Rimes, the Australian navigator who led to the discovery of several persons on rafts from a sunken ship during World War II, which included Big Spring's Russ Hoover, wrote a letter of appreciation to the mayor recently.

IT SAID, "I wish to thank you and the citizens of Big Spring for the distinct honor you bestowed on me and my wife in the presentation of the key to your city during

SMOKER WALKS OUT ON COLLEAGUES — Charles Pomplin, 55, who says he has been smoking at school board meetings in Point Arena, Calif., for 20 years, is quitting the high school board to protest a ban on smoking in the clean new meeting room. "Smokers," says Charles Pomplin, "have just as much right as nonsmokers."

my visit in June. My visit to Big Spring and my stay with Russ Hoover were the most moving and memorable events of my world tour."

Off on another topic, I saw Coach Tom Koger the other day and asked him what he thought about some of the Texas Football predictions. Said the veteran coach with a smile, "My wife doesn't let me read 'Texas Football.' When I read predictions, I always worry more."

Anyway, the Big Spring Steers don't have to worry about predictions. They need to plan surprises.

I HAVE enjoyed watching the Olympics. But during the swimming, I kept thinking about Chucky Raburn over in Andrews. He was an all-American swimmer in high school. Last year he was inter-Collegiate champion in America in the college freestyle. He had beaten both of the swimmers who won the two top medals in that event in the Olympics.

He was on the Tar Heels swimming team at North Carolina. He was expected to be in the Olympics. During the Christmas holidays, he shattered his leg in a skiing accident. He's still in a cast from hip to ankle.

That's the kind of rotten luck that's hard to understand. Sorry about that Chucky. I was thinking about it while watching the show and know you're not too many fences away from where I'm out ridin' fence.

WATERBORNE TANKER — Salvage crews play out absorbent foam cylinders to contain gasoline that escaped a Lyden Oil Co. tanker that plunged into Meander Reservoir from I-80, west of Youngstown, Ohio, this week. The tanker didn't rupture, but some fuel from its tractor's tank dripped into the reservoir. EPA representative said it posed no threat to Youngstown and environs, which rely on Meander for drinking water. 9,300 gallons of gas were pumped from the tanker before it was retrieved. Driver said a tire blew out.

Grand jury to probe Cameron taxes

BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — District Court Judge Darrell Hester said today he will ask a grand jury to investigate delinquent taxes, tax evaluation and property re-evaluation in Cameron County.

The judge made the remarks as he swore in a new county grand jury. Maria Torres, wife of state Rep. Ruben Torres, was named foreman of the grand jury.

In instructing the newly-impaneled grand jurors, Hester told them he had served for the past 10 months in Duval County in place of now-impeached District Court Judge O.P. Carrillo.

Telling the jurors of the corruption found in Duval County, Hester said, "You can't have a Duval County without a district judge who either actively cooperates or looks the other way."

The July term grand jury will serve until the first week in January.

Large loan 'broke' bank?

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — A $105,000 loan by the defunct Citizens State Bank in Carrizo Springs found its way to the pockets of a prominent South Texas businessman, state banking examiners believed.

The loan was one of many written off by examiners as uncollectable shortly before State Banking Commissioner Robert Stewart declared the bank insolvent and closed it June 28.

Examiners, according to reports filed in state district court at Laredo in connection with the bank closing, said the unsecured and past due loan was made to Fernando G. Verduzco of Cuarto Cienegas, Coahuila, Mexico.

But the investigators added: "It is believed that the proceeds of this note were received by R. C. Harper Sr."

Harper is a prominent Eagle Pass businessman with ranching, banking and real estate interests. He also is a director of the Frontier

State Bank in Eagle Pass.

Harper was indicted in 1972 by a federal grand jury on charges alleging that he conspired to export nearly seven tons of plastic explosives from the United States to Mexico.

A mistrial was later declared in federal court at New Orleans for Harper and four other men, including a man from Brooklyn, N.Y. Prosecutors seeking a new trial were rebuffed by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for attempting to use false evidence in their case.

Harper, contacted at his office in the Hotel Eagle this week, denied he received any money from Verduzco.

as the banking examiners believed.

"Absolutely a bald-faced lie. A total lie," said Harper of the statement. He termed the statement "the biggest bunch of b.s. I ever heard in my life."

Harper said Verduzco is "a lifelong associate and he's a good friend of Juan Salinas. He's a very reputable rancher and would not dream of lending himself to any such thing for me or anybody else."

Juan Salinas was a brother of Enrique Salinas, an Eagle Pass businessman and principal owner of Citizens State Bank. Juan Salinas was reported killed in a plane crash in Mexico last month.

Banking examiners classified as uncollectable a total of $258,000 in loans to Juan Salinas. They were part of more than $1 million in classified Citizens State loans which examiners said the bank made to Enrique Salinas, his wife and family.

Examiners classify loans which they believe to be shaky, dangerous or uncollectable for the bank.

The examiners' reports on Citizens State Bank were entered into court testimony during proceedings to close the bank.

State judge indicted for bribery

HOUSTON (AP) — A Harris County Grand Jury has indicted State District Judge Garth Bates on bribery charges, alleging the 61-year-old jurist took $59,000 to keep a defendant in his court out of jail.

Ed Jay Riklin, 46, an inurance salesman, also was indicted in the case. Riklin is accused of being the go-between in the alleged bribe payment.

The indictment, returned Wednesday, charges that Nukie Fontenot, a defendant in Bates' court, paid the bribe last Friday in return for representations from the judge that he would use influence to keep Fontenot out of prison.

Fontenot, a pawn shop operator, was set for trial before Bates in August on charges of receiving and concealing $90,000 in goods stolen from a jewelry salesman. Fontenot was not charged in the bribery case.

Bates, 61, and Riklin remain free on $118,000 bond each. Conviction on the second-degree felony indictment is punishable by two to 20 years in prison and a fine up to $10,000.

Administrative District Judge Max Rogers of Huntsville named retired Judge John M. Barron of Bryan to preside at the Aug. 2 arraignment for Bates.

Judge Peter Solito originally was scheduled to preside in the case, but he notified Rogers he was stepping aside Wednesday to avoid any conflict questions over the trial of a fellow judge. The case then was assigned to Judge John Barron of Bryan.

C.H. "Chip" Taylor, foreman of the grand jury, said no special pressure was felt in the investigation.

"We are just doing our duty," Taylor said. "We know what our responsibilities are and we reacted to those responsibilities."

Bob Bennett and John Holmes, of the district attorney's special crimes bureau, would not comment on whether their probe is complete.

The bureau reportedly plans to interrogate several more persons in the investigation, although there are no other reported suspects in the case.

The probe started several months ago when a Houston vice officer approached the bureau with information he had received about reported bribe offers to defendants.

The investigation reportedly included tape recorded conversations among Bates, Fontenot and Riklin which were made with the consent of Fontenot.

Grand jurors returned the indictment after hearing one witness, W.S. Bruce, an advertising executive, identified as a former business associate of Bates.

Water purity suit blasted

HOUSTON (AP) — Mayor Fred Hofheinz says a suit brought against the city of Houston by the Texas Water Quality Board and the Clear Creek Basin Authority could slow down the city's progress in solving its sewage problems.

The two organizations filed suit against the city in state district court Wednesday alleging the city dumped tons of raw sewage daily into area bays.

The suit was filed after basin authority members heard a report which alleged that "high concentrations of polio virus" have been detected in sewage waste being discharged from Houston treatment plants.

Hofheinz said the city now is engaged in a $500 million treatment plant expansion program which is the largest public works program in the history of the city.

The suit will not speed up a solution to the problem, Hofheinz said, and could slow it down.

The mayor said the city now is operating under a program approved by the Texas Water Quality Board and the litigation could interfere with the orderly execution of the plan.

Dr. Michael Duke, head of the Clear Creek Basin Authority, said one city sewage treatment plant is dumping 80 tons of concentrated raw sewage daily into Buffalo Bayou which then flows through the Houston Ship Channel into Galveston Bay.

CUMBERSOME E-L-O-N-G-A-T-I-O-N — C. J. Sullivan, 100 NE 9th, holds up what has to be one of the bigger cucumbers produced in this area. The extended vegetable measures 37" long, and a circumference that ranges from 6½" to 13½ inches. The potential prolonged pickle weighs in at 10 pounds, and is just one of the mammoth-measured marvels that Sullivan has grown in his garden. Sullivan is semi-retired, but still spends eight hours a day at the Fina Truck Stop, and he has grown the behemoths for three years as a hobby. "I grow 'em, and my wife pickles 'em," said Sullivan.
