KNEELING IN PRAYER — Britain's Queen Elizabeth II and her husband Prince Philip kneel in prayer today at St. Paul's Cathedral in London during a thanksgiving service in honor of the Queen's Silver Jubilee, the 25th year of her reign.

Britain marks queen's anniversary

LONDON (AP) — Throngs of jubilant Britons marked the Silver Jubilee of Queen Elizabeth II's reign today with the greatest outpouring of patriotic fervor in a quarter century, and she in turn thanked her subjects for 25 years of "loyalty and friendship."

Halfway through the long-awaited day of pomp, ceremony, parades, trumpet fanfares, prayers and gun salutes, the queen addressed her subjects and the world at a jubilee luncheon in the historic Guildhall. "At this moment of my Silver Jubilee I want to thank all those in Britain and the Commonwealth who through their loyalty and friendship have given me strength and encouragement during these last 25 years," she said.

Appearing relaxed and happy, the monarch recalled that in her "salad days" as a 21-year-old heir to the British throne she pledged her life to the service of the British people.

"I do not regret nor retract one word of it," she said.

Millions of Britons and foreign visitors, withstanding intermittent showers and many waiting since Monday night, lined the streets of London as the queen and her husband, Prince Philip, embarked on their day of joyous celebration.

Millions more participated in celebrations in every village and hamlet across England. Hundreds of millions around the world watched on television.

For the royal couple the festive day opened with a ride in the golden state coach from Buckingham Palace to a thanksgiving service in St. Paul's Cathedral.

Prince Charles, the popular heir to the throne, rode behind on horseback. A procession of open carriages followed, carrying the queen mother, the queen's children and her sister, Princess Margaret. They were accompanied by more than 3,000 troops

Before selling home

Homeowners must insulate?

WASHINGTON (AP) — An energy plan approved by a congressional panel would require homeowners to install insulation and meet federal guidelines for energy efficiency before they could sell their homes.

Despite Republican objections that the plan would constitute government intrusion on the privacy of homeowners, the House energy and power subcommittee gave its approval to the mandatory energy proposal Monday.

A spokesman for President Carter told the energy subcommittee the administration would not oppose such mandatory legislation.

Under the bill approved by the panel and sent to the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, a set of federal home heating and insulation standards would be drafted by 1980. The standards could be put into effect as early as 1982, but the government would have the discretion to delay making them mandatory as a condition of the sale of a home until 1985.

A key provision of the legislation says no home that fails to meet federal energy-saving standards could be sold if the sale involved loans or loan guarantees backed by the government or loans from any bank or savings and loan that receives federal financial assistance.

The provision would not apply to homes of people considered too poor to finance insulation, to homes to be sold for business purposes and homes that have little remaining useful value. Another standard would exclude houses where home insulation could not be justified economically.

It was estimated that as many as 10 million of some 74 million homes are sold each year.

As part of his energy proposal, President Carter asked for a voluntary approach to making American homes more energy efficient.

The President urged Congress to give homeowners incentive to voluntarily insulate their homes.

Carter wants legislation that would allow a homeowner to deduct part of the costs of such improvements from his taxes. That proposal is before the Ways and Means Committee.

Amin trying to crash queen's big party

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Ugandan President Idi Amin, barred from entry by at least two European countries, was reported airborne somewhere over Europe today as he sought to make his way to the Commonwealth summit in London in defiance of British wishes.

Irish officials at first said Amin's flight, a military plane on loan from Libya, was circling Dublin airport. But officials later said they had neither radio nor radar contact with the flight and it was not clear how close the plane had come to Dublin.

Hours after Rome air traffic authorities said Amin had crossed into Europe, there was no firm word of his whereabouts. The European air control organization Eurocontrol said it had no record of his flight plan.

The Irish government said it had been alerted that Amin's plane was approaching Ireland and ordered that it not be permitted to land except to take on fuel. Belgian government sources said Brussels officials had made the same decision.

In Paris, the French General

Secretariat for Civil Aviation said that Amin's plane would be permitted to land in France. But it added that no such request had been made and left unclear whether Amin would be allowed to disembark.

A French Foreign Ministry spokesman said, however, there was nothing to prevent Amin from making a private visit to France.

Observers noted that refusing to allow the landing of an airplane carrying a head of state was highly unusual in international relations.

Amin took off for London despite clear indications from the British and other Commonwealth governments that he was not welcome because of reports of mass murders and oppression in his East African nation.

The official Radio Uganda, monitored in Kenya, said today Amin was planning to arrive in London on Wednesday or Thursday for the Commonwealth summit. The radio said Amin had stopped off in an Arab country on his way to Europe. Since the plane was Libyan, it was thought he may have refueled in Libya.

Could go as high as $8 million

Water cleanup cost high

At least $300,000 will be spent to clean up Big Spring's sewer water, and the figure could go as high as $8 million, estimated Roy Crim, consulting engineer for the city.

Crim appeared before the city council today in a special meeting to help set a date for a public hearing covering sewer plant improvements in the city.

"We are facing a 1978 deadline on these improvements. And once the EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) accepts our plan, we are obligated, no matter what," Crim told the council.

The problem the city faces is to clean up the discharge from the sewer plant which goes into Beals Creek to such a degree that it meets standards set by the EPA.

These standards revolve around two requirements: a low biochemical oxygen demand (BOD), and a low amount of suspended solids in the discharge. The BOD must be 30 or less, and the amount of suspended solids in the fluid must be no more than 30 grams per milliliter, according to Crim.

"We are not now able to consistently meet either of these requirements; less so in the area of suspended solids," explained Crim. "I estimate that it will take a minimum of $300,000 to correct this."

A variety of possible methods of meeting the EPA requirements are available. All must be studied, claimed Crim.

The $300,000 minimum plan would involve improvements to the existing facilities in the form of aeration ponds. Ponds to hold sewage would be constructed, and mechanical aerators would pump oxygen into the fluid, solidifying the waste and clarifying the water.

"The maximum cost could range from six to eight million dollars," said Crim. "This would mean a new sewage plant altogether, about five miles from town on Beals Creek."

Where will the money for the project come from? "That is hard to say at this point, but I am doubtful that we can get any state money in 1978," said the engineer.

Crim explained that $200 million had been planned for funding such projects in the entire state through the EPA.

Texas cities have been rated for priority of receiving funds for projects, with Houston rated sixth. Big Spring is rated seventeenth.

"If Houston's project is approved, that will account for a full 90 per cent of the 200 million. Since we (Big Spring) are seventeenth on the list, the chances of our getting any money in '78 are slim," said Crim.

The problem is that once the EPA gives its approval of Big Spring's plan, the city is obligated to go ahead with the project whether it receives funds or not. If funds dry up before Big Spring receives its share, the sewage cleanup will have to be funded through a bond election, guesSED Crim.

Bill Albright, manager of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, was also present at the meeting, and addressed this problem.

"Webb (AFB) will have industrial sewage requirements down the road that we can't ever imagine now. We must look to the future. Considering our potential for growth, a $6-to-$8 million project is not unreasonable," he said.

"I am as optimistic as Mr. Albright. But we are taking a risk when it comes to funding no matter what type of project we decide upon," said Crim.

The public hearing on the sewer improvements will be held on July 26. A facility plan and impact statement will be displayed for public perusal 14 days before the public hearings.

Air base and state park annexed by Big Spring

The first reading of an ordinance annexing Webb AFB by the city was passed unanimously in today's special meeting of the city council.

"This annexation takes in only what property is owned now by the Air Force, and the Big Spring State Park," said Jim Gregg, city attorney.

Bruce Grosshaus, state park superintendent, was present at the meeting and asked how the annexation would affect operations in the park.

"The park would be within the city limits, so any building or construction there would have to comply with city codes. Because it is state property, permit fees would be waived. Other than that there would be no other regulations from the city. The park would receive fire and police protection of course," said Gregg.

The next and final reading of the annexation ordinance will be held on June 28.

Civilians at Webb told to take initial offers

"The dust still hasn't settled among the civilian employees at Webb Air Force Base," according to Dick Egan, head of the civilian employee's union.

"Most of them are accepting the preliminary offers for transfers in order to keep their present priorities," Egan added.

He warned the employees that if they turn down the initial transfer, they might be changed from a 60-day notice for termination to a 30-day notice.

"Most of the employees have been assigned Laughlin at Del Rio or Reese at Lubbock. Probably third high in assignments is locations in Arizona and there are a few assigned to Columbus in Mississippi," Egan added.

He noted, "All of this is preliminary. We're not even sure yet that there are jobs for all of them at those locations."

The telephones were ringing off the wall this morning at the civilian personnel office, where many questions were being answered following the reduction in force meetings held on Monday.

Pay problems on police force aired by Bogart

When asked about the rising crime problem in Big Spring, Police Chief Stanley Bogart took the opportunity to discuss some problems at today's meeting of the city council.

"Our (the department's) problem is that there are not enough men on the street. Four men have quit in the last 30 days because of pay," said the Chief. "My detectives are overworked. They carry 40 to 50 cases apiece a month, and one just had a heart attack, and another got pregnant."

Mayor Wade Choate asked what the situation was like in area cities.

"My senior officers are leaving for surrounding cities. They leave $820 a month jobs to take $1,000 to $1,200 a month jobs. A rookie with no experience at all starts out at $716 (a month) in Midland, and in a year he's making $1,100 (a month). Here we start a rookie at $600, and top salary is $820," said Bogart.

The mayor instructed Bogart to instigate a study of manpower and money needs in the police department, and turn the results over to City Attorney James Gregg. Choate also advised that a similar study to the Big Spring Fire Department be conducted.

Nagel recovers from surgery

Harry Nagel, city manager, is in intensive care at Lubbock Methodist Hospital where he underwent two bypass operations Monday.

He will be transferred to the cardiac care section of the hospital some time today, according to James Gregg, city attorney.

Following several days in that unit, he will be placed in a regular hospital room. He is recovering as well as can be expected, according to Gregg.

Focalpoint

Action/reaction: Still lives here

Q. Why has Delnor Poss not resigned as a member of the school board when he has accepted a position teaching at Midland College? Has he missed many of the important board meetings?

A. Delnor Poss still resides in the Big Spring School District. His son, Del, has been elected vice president of the student council next year in Big Spring High by his fellow students. Whenever Poss feels that he can no longer be a representative of the people who backed him and elected him, he says he will resign. He has missed no regular board meetings because he planned his schedule around them. He has missed some call meetings with which he had conflicts.

Offbeat: Rescuer electrocuted

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — A man who died here trying to save his dog was an escapee from a Maryland prison, authorities say.

George Forster, 25, was electrocuted Sunday when he and a woman companion dove into Lake Travis, after the dog had gone under trying to fetch a rubber ball Forster had thrown.

Forster, 25, had been living here under the alias of Steven Whitehead, authorities said. He was a plumber and was staying on a houseboat owned by his boss.

Maryland state police told the Austin American-Statesman Forster was serving an eight-year sentence at Jessup, Md., for possession of a deadly weapon and robbery with a deadly weapon when he escaped Jan. 24, 1976. Maryland Sgt. Otis Trout said Forster's "rap sheet" dated back to 1972 and included three armed robbery convictions.

Officials investigating the drowning said a live electrical wire was dangling in the lake from the houseboat, resulting in Forster's electrocution.

The woman — who also said she blacked out when she dove in with Forster — recovered and dragged Forster to shore.

He had burns from his ankles to his knees.
Justice of the Peace Jon Wisser ruled Forster's death accidental.

Married women discharged?

FT. RUCKER, Ala. (AP) — The Army says Spec 4 Marie Sode has exhibited "homosexual tendencies" — and should be discharged — because she is married to another woman. Ms. Sode says she considers her "husband" a man.

The marriage came to light when the "husband," Kristian von Hoffburg, applied for a military dependent identification card. Someone recognized von Hoffburg as a former WAC known as Spec 4 Linda Bowers.

Von Hoffburg, 30, was discharged from the Army in 1975 and is now an honor student at George C. Wallace Community College near Dothan.

Probate Judge James Sawyer, who married the couple in November, said later he had no idea they were of the same sex. They were dressed in Army fatigues, he said, and von Hoffburg's hair was short.

Ms. Sode said the couple had been saving money for a sex-change operation for von Hoffburg, but that the fund is dwindling because of legal costs for her fight to stay in the military.

Four drowned

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Despite warnings of a thunderstorm, a 42-foot charter fishing boat ventured out onto Chesapeake Bay and was dumped on its starboard side by a 10-to-13-foot wave, the Coast Guard said. At least four persons drowned and nine were missing.

The remaining 14 persons aboard the charter Dixie Lee II were rescued by another charter boat during a storm in which winds gusted to 98 miles per hour, according to the National Weather Service.

The Coast Guard resumed a search for the missing today with helicopters and patrol boats covering an eight-mile-square area of choppy water, with waves reported at about five feet.

The dead were identified as Audrey Stiff, 36, Portsmouth, Va.; Evelyn B. Lee, 43, Norfolk; Capt. William H. Lewis, 70, Norfolk; and Polly Clark, 57, Baltimore.

Mayoral election today

CHICAGO (AP) — Acting Mayor Michael A. Bilandic, backed by the Democratic machine, was the overwhelming favorite over Republican Dennis Block as Chicago voters elected a successor to the late Richard J. Daley.

Political leaders forecast a record low turnout following a dull campaign pushed into the background in its final days by burning, looting and gunfire in the Puerto Rican community.

Two men were killed during the weekend violence in the Humboldt Park area. At least 133 persons, including 57 policemen, were hurt and 154 persons were arrested.

Bilandic, 54, a former alderman and Daley family friend, put up only a show of campaigning over the last few weeks. On Monday he met with Puerto Rican leaders to seek an end to tension in their neighborhood of Humboldt Park about three miles northwest of the Loop.

Ex hostages in school

BOVENSMILDE, The Netherlands (AP) — Dutch children held hostage for four days by South Moluccan terrorists went back to class today, but not to their own school, 11 days after they were freed.

With terrorists still holding four teachers hostage in the Bovensmilde elementary school, the parents of the children held a meeting and decided to send them to the little town's other school, which is operated by the Dutch Reformed Church.

They will attend half-day sessions until June 25, when the summer holiday begins.

The classes today included none of the 15 South Moluccan students who attended the Bovensmilde elementary school and were allowed to leave when the terrorists took control.

"The parents say that for the special program, they don't want the South Moluccan children put in because they fear their children might become disturbed and it would cause unrest," a spokesman for the Justice Ministry said.

Carter puts off B1 bomber decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter, who has said the B1 bomber is wasteful and should not be funded, told its congressional supporters today he wants to learn all he can about the advanced bomber before deciding whether it should be built.

At a meeting in the White House Cabinet room this morning with Carter, six senators and six House members who support the bomber made another attempt to sway Carter from the opposition to the plane he stated during the presidential campaign.

A decision on whether to move ahead with the bomber is due by the end of the month, and the President said he would meet that deadline. He also indicated during the meeting that his options included not only full production or termination of the program but also "several options in between."

Carter told the group that he had devoted a "considerable amount of time" to thinking about the bomber, weighing the United States' over-all defense capabilities, defense purchases, the role of the B52 bomber currently in use, the effectiveness of the cruise missile, and the "general image of whether we are aggressive enough on defense."

"I'm eager to learn all I can about this before I make my own decision," the President said.

Congressional opponents of the B1 were scheduled to meet with Carter on Friday.

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said Monday that "nothing has changed" since Carter expressed opposition during the 1976 presidential campaign to production of the bomber.

"His basic inclination is not to build," Powell said. "He's got to be convinced, but I'm not saying he couldn't be convinced."

A year ago, Carter left little doubt that he opposed production, saying: "Exotic weapons which serve no real functions do not contribute to the defense of this country. The B1 bomber is an example of a proposed system which should not be funded and would be wasteful of taxpayers' dollars."

Carter's other appointments in a busy day of 10 meetings included an afternoon session in the Oval Office with Andrew Young, whose description of former Presidents Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford as "racists" touched off another storm of controversy around the U.N. ambassador.

Rosalynn's Brazil visit a success

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Rosalynn Carter is steering clear of student opponents of Brazil's military regime and scoring a personal success with the generals and civilian politicians.

The U.S. First Lady arrived in the Brazilian capital as students at universities throughout the country were organizing strikes and demonstrations.

Striking students at the University of Brasilia appealed for the Carter Administration's support in an open letter in English to the President's wife. They distributed copies of it in the lobby of the U.S. Embassy Monday afternoon as she was shaking hands there with members of the embassy staff. But she told reporters later she had not seen the letter.

Earlier Monday, police invaded the university campus for the second time in two weeks and took some of the students away for questioning. The government closed the university for three days.

Mrs. Carter and Foreign Minister Antonio Azeredo da Silveira had a 75-minute meeting which he told reporters was "very agreeable ... very constructive." But the high point of her first day in Brazil was a reception at the home of U.S. Ambassador John Crimmins that brought out an unusually large number of military and political leaders.

The session will be held at Howard College Cafeteria beginning at 7 p.m.

Both the local and state associations are part of the 130,000-member National Association of Life Underwriters.

Bob Watlington, CLU, president of the Big Spring Association, said, "The visit of the state president to our association is a highlight of the year, an opportunity for all life underwriters to learn more about the organization and its objectives, and we invite all agents in this area to hear Mr. Murtha's message."

The president of the largest life insurance trade organization in Texas, John L. Murtha, CLU, will speak Thursday night, June 9, 7 p.m. at the Ladies Night Installation of New Officers meeting of the Big Spring Association of Life Underwriters.

'Bagman' only following orders of George Parr

BROWNSVILLE, Tex. (AP) — The self-professed "quarterback" of the former scandal-plagued Duval County political team says he was only following the "coach's orders" when he delivered more than $800,000 in public funds to county politicians.

In a presentencing report made part of the court record Monday, Sylvestre D. Gonzalez, former Duval County assistant treasurer, said he served as a "bagman" for the late George Parr, the famed "Duke of Duval."

Gonzalez, who pled guilty Monday to felony theft, said he delivered $5,000 a month from San Diego's First State Bank to then County Judge Archer Parr, $4,000 a month to then county commissioner Dan Tobin and "for a while $500 a month to Juanita Valerio, a former county commissioner."

The report, dated Valentine's Day of this year, was incorporated into the record by State District Court Judge Darrell Hester, who accepted Gonzalez' guilty plea and sentenced the 47-year-old man to a five-year prison term probated over eight years.

Gonzalez compared his Duval County activities with football. The written report, with Gonzalez' parenthetical notations stated the following:

"I was the quarterback receiving the plays from the coach (George Parr). My job was to hand-off (the money) to the fullback (Archer Parr) and the halfback (Dan Tobin)."

"The plays were always called from the bench with either the fullback or halfback alternating numbers.

Agnew watches

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — It seems that time has run out on the Spiro Agnew watch.

A family firm which copyrighted the watch stopped making it about four years ago. No more will be made.

In early 1970, Dr. and Mrs. Hale Dougherty and their 10 children hired a graduate art student to draw a caricature of the former vice president. They copyrighted the design and were soon boxing and shipping Agnew watches.

The Doughertys have kept sales figures secret but a published estimate reported sales of 100,000 in the first year. Demand spurted again in 1973 when Agnew resigned.

No automatic death sentence, court says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Convicted "cop killers" cannot automatically be condemned to death by states trying to give police officers an extra layer of legal protection, the Supreme Court says.

A sympathetic but firm court said in a 5-4 decision Monday that such mandatory death sentence laws are unconstitutionally "cruel and unusual punishment" because they prohibit judges and juries from considering the particular circumstances of a case.

The decision does not mean that persons convicted of murdering a police officer cannot be sentenced to die, but rather that judges and juries must have a chance to choose between capital punishment and life in prison for the murderer.

The ruling drew heavy criticism from law enforcement groups.

"We don't need to make things less dangerous for criminals," said William Ellingsworth, a spokesman for the International Association of Chiefs of Police in Gaithersburg, Md.

"Police officers are the last line of protection between law abiding citizens and the criminal element. We felt it (the mandatory death sentence) was a sound law based on reality," he said.

The court's ruling, on a Louisiana law, will spare the life of Harry Roberts, a death row inmate from New Orleans. Roberts, convicted and sentenced to die for the 1974 murder of a New Orleans policeman, had challenged the state law.

Two other death row inmates, both from New York, appear to have had their lives spared by the ruling. New York has a law similar to the stricken Louisiana statute, and it presumably is invalid.

Ellis McGee, an assistant Louisiana attorney general, said other capital cases in the state would be unaffected by the ruling because the 1974 law struck down had been replaced last year by new death penalty laws in an effort by the Louisiana legislature to meet court guidelines on capital punishment.

The unsigned Supreme Court opinion won the endorsement of Justices William Brennan, Lewis Powell Jr., Thurgood Marshall, Potter Stewart and John Paul Stevens.

Chief Justice Warren Burger and Justices William Rehnquist, Harry Blackmun and Byron White dissented.

In his dissent, Rehnquist called police officers "the root soldiers of society's defense of ordered liberty," and said states should be allowed to enact special laws for their protection.

In other decisions Monday, the court:

—Split 5-4 in ruling that persons may be prosecuted for obscenity violations if they exploit the sexual nature of films or books even if they don't openly advertise or promote the material's contents.

Banquet to honor local U.N. delegate

A banquet honoring the United Nations delegate from Big Spring High School, Ray Abelar, will be held at the Odd Fellows Mullins Lodge hall, 9th and San Antonio streets, at 8 o'clock this evening.

A Kidney Foundation film, entitled "Gift of Life," will be screened following the banquet. The movie runs about 20 minutes.

In a move to make the public more aware of the Kidney Foundation's aims and objectives, the Grand Master of the Grand Lodge IOOF of Texas, James Duncan, designated May and June as "Kidney Foundation Month."

Duncan has urged Odd Fellow and Rebekah members within the state to sign Kidney Foundation donor pledge cards.

The public is invited to attend the banquet and view the film. There will be no charge although there will be a kettle near the door for those who would like to donate toward a fund to send Abelar to New York.

Abelar was chosen to represent the Big Spring lodge in an essay contest conducted in the local high school the past school term. In all, 17 persons submitted essays for consideration.

Abelar will be one of about 42 young people from throughout Texas who will board a charter bus in Irving about July 1 to make the trip to the United Nations headquarters in New York where they will closely observe the workings of the UN over a period of about two weeks.

Last year, Sandra Booth represented the Big Spring lodge at the UN. James Norwood is Noble Grand of the local lodge.

Kidney donor cards will be passed out to those attending the banquet tonight.

Lamesa City Council copes with growth

LAMESA—The City of Lamesa continued to show indications of growth as the council approved the final reading on one annexation ordinance and had a first reading on another in its meeting Monday.

It gave final reading to the annexation of three acres on South 8th Street and gave approval to the first reading of the addition of three small plots on the northwest side of the city with one on the north side.

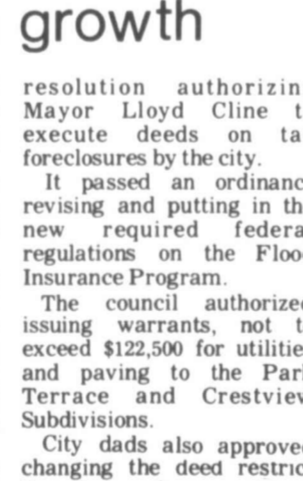

The council also passed a resolution authorizing Mayor Lloyd Cline to execute deeds on tax foreclosures by the city.

It passed an ordinance revising and putting in the new required federal regulations on the Flood Insurance Program.

The council authorized issuing warrants, not to exceed $122,500 for utilities and paving to the Park Terrace and Crestview Subdivisions.

City dads also approved changing the deed restrictions for one home owner as to house size.

The council approved the Jaycees use of the local ball parks for a slow pitch tournament Aug. 5, 6 and 7 to be worked around the schedules of other baseball leagues.

'Fiddlin' Frenchman at rodeo

Fiddlin' Frenchy Burke has been brought back as a star for the Big Spring Rodeo by popular demand.

The fiddling Frenchman was one of the favorites at last year's show and will perform on the third night, Friday, June 24.

The favorite quotation about Fiddlin' Frenchy Burke is "A fiddle is like a woman — treat her bad and she squeaks and squawks. Treat her with love and she'll play beautiful music."

Frenchy Burke plays beautiful music and some of his most popular records include "The Fiddlin' of Jacques Pierre Bordaquex". Other popular recordings include his "Frenchie's Cotton-eyed Joe."

The star will perform at dance following the performance at the rodeo.

Burglars hit store again

LAMESA—Burglars broke into White's Supermarket Monday night and made off with approximately $600.

This was the second burglary in two days. Entry was gained by bending over a piece of tin in the back.

The burglars went straight to the money box in the office, according to Police Chief Lee Bartlett. Bartlett said the two burglaries were definitely related.

Publisher's corner

Why not a senior citizens' event?

Big Spring needs some kind of annual event or attraction which would put the city on the statewide map.

That was a contention which came out of a May meeting of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce's Cultural Affairs Committee. I mentioned this need in a recent "Publisher's corner."

THE WEEKEND mail brought to my office a response to that editorial. The person who wrote in the suggestion did not sign his or her name, so I don't know whom to thank. But this is a portion of the letter containing an idea for a "senior citizens' event." I read as follows:

Dear Sir: I have an idea that might merit some consideration. It would be an annual "senior citizen's event." Most towns have senior citizens' clubs. Some large towns have quite a few enter events which would be of interest to them. Perhaps April would be a good month since the weather is generally best then.

Some such events (tournaments) could be dominoes, 42, checkers, hobbies, crafts, art, whittling, watermelon, tobacco spitting, horseshoes, washer pitching, golf, bowling, barbershop singing, kitchen bands, tall-tale telling, and fiddle playing.

Local senior citizens should be consulted to determine what would be of the greatest interest.

Why would they want to hold it here? Our nice weather, clean air, quiet town and our respect for older people, something along the lines of "we love our town, come enjoy it with us."

Transportation might be a problem for some. They could be encouraged to charter a bus which could conceivably make stops along the way and pick up those needing a ride. For example, it might start in Fort Worth and make stops in Weatherford, Cisco, Abilene, Sweetwater, etc.

MAYBE THE TOWN could host a picnic one night for them. The band and chorus might entertain with a program of 1920s, 1930s and 1940s music. The Explorer Scout Medical and Law troops might assist. The CBers, the Jaycees, service clubs, women's clubs and Chamber of Commerce members could all probably be counted on to furnish judges, fetch and carry and assist in general. Prizes could be furnished by clubs, merchants, the city, county and the chamber.

The possibilities for locations include the fairbarn complex, the coliseum and the Cosden lake facilities.

This group of people, while organized in their own towns, would no doubt enjoy getting together with those who would attend from other places. As far as I know, nothing like this is being held anywhere. We could be the first.

I frankly don't know much about our own senior citizen clubs. I can only hope we treat them nicely enough they would recommend our town to their peers for an event of this kind.

I'm sure there are problems and disadvantages to this idea I haven't thought of. Hopefully, there may be advantages to it that haven't occurred to me also.

I hope this suggestion may be of some value.

Sincerely yours,
Big Springer

The idea does deserve some community consideration. Big Spring has attracted a number of persons as a place to retire (it had more retired military persons living around it by far than any of the other five Air Training Command bases which were considered as possible closures), and this city will have housing available at prices which might draw retirees.

An event of this kind would show off our town to senior citizens. What do you think?

Troy Bryant

If you caught the mistake in my baseball quiz column last week, you qualify as either a baseball expert or a Brooklyn Dodger fan.

UNDER THE QUESTION where I asked what were the present-day teams once named, I inadvertently listed the predecessor for the San Francisco Giants as the Brooklyn Giants. However, the answer should have been the New York Giants.

But, that was not a hard mistake to make since the whole New York baseball scene used to be so confusing, especially to those of us who are not old enough to know firsthand.

You see, in the beginning (in the late 1800s) there were only two major league baseball teams in New York, the New York Giants and the Brooklyn Dodgers. Both were in the National League.

Then in 1903, the New York Yankees were established as the American League club in New York.

These three clubs kept the fans in New York happy, but divided.

Three teams in one city made for some interesting World Series, though.

There were 13 series in which two of the three New York teams played for the world championship. The Yankees won ten of those encounters while the Giants won two and the Dodgers won one.

Then in 1957, only two years after the Dodgers won their world championship and 25 years after the Giants won theirs, the Brooklyn Dodgers became the Los Angeles Dodgers and the New York Giants became the San Francisco Giants.

So, that sets the record straight. Thanks to all you folks who called my attention to the mistake. That leaves me with no runs, no hits, and one error.

One woman, who left before I could get her name, came in and said that my column was an insult to Brooklyn Dodger fans — and it probably was.

I JUST NEVER thought there would be so many Dodger fans in Big Spring — a town which used to have a baseball team with an agreement with the Yankees to serve as an informal farm club. That was back when the Big Spring club was playing in the West Texas-New Mexico League.

One more thing about the New York Giants (if you can stomach one more thing): I am told that the greatest pitcher of all times played for the Giants in the late 30's. He was Carl Hubbell, who just happens to hail from Meeker, Okla.

Books for fall

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — I went out to San Francisco last week to the American Bookseller's Convention to flog a new book I have coming out in the fall. (Modesty prevents me from telling the title.) At least 15,000 book buyers, bookstore owners, publishers, editors and promotion people were there, and I would estimate at least 10,000 new being pushed.

I can't remember all of the titles, but as I went from booth to booth I got some idea of what awaits the book reader this fall.

The first booth I stopped at, the salesman said:

"HERE IS A FREE copy of the book of the year, 'How to Perform Your Own Heart Transplant Operation.' You save $3,000 by cutting out the middleman."

"You mean the doctor?"
"Doctor, heart surgeon — whatever you call him. The book tells you everything from where to find a donor to how to deal with vascular rejection."

I went to the next booth and was handed a book entitled, "How to Make a Million Dollars in Real Estate and Have Sex at the Same Time."

"This is a racy title," I said.
"It's a self-help book. Many real estate agents make a lot of money, but they're very shy about sex."

"This book helps them overcome their inhibitions, particularly when they're showing an unfurnished house. As you notice it's chock-full of illustrations. The authors feel real estate people have to come out of the closet."

A FEW BOOTHS down a man was autographing books. He was apparently a psychologist because the title of his work was "Releasing Inner Energy by Biting Your Fingernails." When he saw I was a reporter he explained his theory. "All life-giving energy starts in the fingernails. Most people have pent-up energy, really electric charges, that has to be released before they explode. By biting your fingernails you make it possible for the energy to escape out through your hands, which relaxes the joints in your knuckles and gets you through the day." He gave me an autographed copy, which I read on the plane — and much to my amazement it worked.

Two aisles down I found a publisher's rep pushing a book entitled "How to Have Fun When a Tanker Goes Aground off their Beach. It shows you how to build tar castles out of oil and sand, how to swim through an oil spill and still breathe and how to organize a fish fry from all the fish that have rolled up on the beach."

A few booths down I found "The Idi Amin Book of Etiquette," "Confessions of an Oral Surgeon," "The Last Chance Food Stamp Diet Book," "Dating Jackie Onassis on $5 a Day" and "Is There an IRS After Death?"

Christmas shoppers can expect many supernatural books this fall. One that caught my eye was entitled "Anita's Baby." The plot concerned a child who drank nothing but Florida orange juice and found himself wanting to be a woman. He has a transsexual operation and winds up winning the women's tennis singles at Wimbledon.

The stars... and stripes, forever!

Calcium can cause gout problem

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My brother has been down for two months with what the doctors call "sudeo" gout. They say it is the worst kind. It's in his knees and shoulders. They inject cortisone. He doesn't have the pain now, but feels sore all over. One doctor advises surgery.

What do you advise in the way of treatment for this kind of gout? Does diet help? — Mrs. C.D.

That's a good phonetic spelling of it. It's correctly spelled "pseudogout." That means it resembles regular gout in symptoms, but is caused by other factors. As you may know, regular gout is caused by the formation of urate crystals in joint spaces. For some reason that's unclear, the body forms these crystals by the way it deals with certain food substances — purines, which are plentiful in such foods as organ meats and certain others.

In pseudo-gout a similar process occurs, but the resulting joint deposits are made up of calcium-phosphates. This is often caused by overactivity of the thyroid or parathyroid glands. They regulate how much calcium and phosphorus is removed from bones, where the minerals are stored. When they are overactive, excess appears in the blood and may settle in joints and other tissues.

It is harder to treat than regular gout, where diet and medicine can interrupt the process. Occasionally, pseudo-gout will correct itself spontaneously. A diet as low as possible in calcium is sometimes helpful. Vitamin D in excess is to be avoided because that vitamin has a role in removal of calcium from the bones.

If all else fails gland surgery is considered. Removal of the parathyroids usually ends the problem. This may be the kind of the surgery the one doctor advises. Only your brother's personal physician can advise, based on the progress or lack of progress with conservative treatment. The cortisone is to relieve inflammation caused by the deposits. For a copy of my booklet on gout, send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me in care of the Big Spring Herald.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Could news of the critical illness of an only daughter shock a woman into three months of continuing constipation? I normally have had regular bowel movements. My doctor attributes the constipation calls it "obstipation") to the shock. His instructions include a high residue diet and lots of fluids. — J.F.M.

Yes, shock of such news and the resulting fatigue can cause a spastic condition that might constrict the bowels and bring constipation. "Obstipation" is obstinate constipation. It is best to try to handle such problems conservatively, as your doctor is doing. If your constipation continues other medicines can be helpful.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: If mumps did affect the sex glands, what would the symptoms be? How would you know if the glands were affected? — R.R.

If the testes are involved, they would be smaller and softer than normal. Infertility might result only if both testes were involved, not just one. Ovaries can also be affected by mumps, but less commonly than testes.

You did not identify yourself by sex, and you're not the only one to neglect this important point. I hesitate to make this observation, because the last time I did I was taken to task by a woman's group. Would you believe it?

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Explain to me what Hunter's ulcer of the bladder is and if anything can be done for it besides extension of the bladder? — Mrs. D.S.

The term is "Hunner's ulcer." It begins with certain changes in the bladder wall, resulting in splitting of membranes and forming of tiny ulcers that bleed. An end result is reduced bladder capacity, and, of course, pain.

Unfortunately there is no specific treatment, and medication doesn't help. The usual treatment is periodic distention of the bladder under anesthesia, which helps relieve the symptoms of urinary frequency and pain. It's a most difficult type of ulcer to handle.

What about constipation? Many can be relieved of it, both mentally and physically, by reading Dr. Thosteson's booklet, "The Way To Stop Constipation." For a copy write to him in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is there a birth control pill for men? — F.K.

Not yet, but they're working on it. "You Can Stop Sinus Trouble!" is the title of Dr. Thosteson's booklet, explaining what sinus trouble really is and what can be done about it. For a copy write to him in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Does the fruit of the tree of knowledge in Genesis 2:17 refer to scientific knowledge? — E.P.

DEAR E.P.: The knowledge referred to is not scientific but rather the knowledge of good and evil, as is stated in the verse to which you refer: "Of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die" (Genesis 2:17). It was not the knowledge of good and evil that destroyed man but his disobedience, as we see in Romans 5:19 where it says, "As by one man's disobedience many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one shall many be made righteous."

The death that Adam earned as a result of his disobedience to God, and passed on to the rest of the human race, was a three-dimensional death. First, it was instant spiritual death; second, it was a gradual physical death; and third, it was ultimate eternal death.

But God had a plan. In His own time He would send His own Son, who would die for the sins of the world, and "whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

Pardon revisited

Jack Anderson, Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — The controversial pardoning of Richard Nixon aborted the trial of the century. Had it not been for the pardon, according to inside sources, the Special Prosecutor definitely would have indicted the former president for obstruction of justice.

Instead of the epic court drama, Nixon has now presented his case to the nation via television. He told interviewer David Frost that he considered himself under oath. If Nixon had really sworn to tell the truth, he could be indicted for perjury. We counted at least a dozen misstatements.

PERHAPS THE most dramatic was Nixon's account of the pardon itself. From the private notes and recollections of the man who negotiated the pardon on President Ford's behalf, we can now cite the discrepancies.

Ford's personal lawyer, Benton Becker, kept a careful record of his visit to San Clemente in September, 1974, to discuss the pardon and the disposition of the Nixon tapes. Becker flew to California with the president's attorney Herbert J. Miller. Although they arrived shortly before midnight, they immediately went into a three-hour huddle with Nixon aide Ronald Ziegler.

The talks resumed the following morning in Ziegler's office. Frequently, Ziegler and Miller slipped out of the room for whispered consultations.

Nixon later told David Frost that a pardon "isn't, of course, ...

necessarily an admission of guilt." This idea, he said, was "legalistic pettifoggery."

On the contrary, Becker made plain to Nixon's negotiators before the pardon was granted that it would constitute an admission of guilt. He even provided Miller with the leading Supreme Court decision on the question — a 1915 case involving a newsman who refused to testify.

TO GUARANTEE him immunity, the prosecutor got President Woodrow Wilson to sign a pardon for the reporter. But the newsman rejected it as an admission of guilt. The Supreme Court, agreeing with the newsman, declared that a presidential pardon "carries with it an imputation of guilt" and acceptance of a pardon amounts to "a confession of guilt." Nixon told David Frost of his agony as he debated whether to sign the pardon. "When you receive a pardon," explained the former president, "you have to sign a piece of paper that says, 'I accept the pardon.'"

He related, with pain in his voice, that he almost turned down the pardon to stand trial on criminal charges. "It was a terribly difficult decision for me," he said. "I sat for an hour in the chair by myself. I asked Miller to leave the room." After this hour of agonizing, said Nixon, he told Miller: "Well, okay, I'll do it. And I signed it."

In fact, Nixon never signed a pardon at all. The only paper he signed at San Clemente was an agreement with the government, establishing dual ownership of his papers and tapes.

Brock goes solo

Evans, Novak

WASHINGTON — After more than four months of ineffective collaboration with party leaders in the House and Senate, Republican national chairman William Brock has quietly decided to go it alone as party spokesman trying to respond to the effective political tactics of Jimmy Carter.

Brock wants to minimize joint public appearances with House minority leader John Rhodes and Senate minority leader Howard Baker. What's more, Brock plans national committee task forces to plot policy positions on the economy, energy, taxes, foreign policy and other questions without clearance from Rhodes and Baker.

BROCK IS consciously emulating Democrat Paul Butler (1955-60) instead of Republican Ray C. Bliss (1965-68) as the model for the national chairman of a party out of power. Butler's Democratic Advisory Council (DAC) ignored — and often infuriated — the Johnson-Rayburn leadership in Congress in taking policy positions. Bliss's Republican Coordinating Council (RCC) deferred to — and was usually dominated by — the Dirksen-Ford congressional leadership.

Actually, Brock's move will get strong support from congressional Republicans, particularly conservatives who feel Baker is preoccupied by presidential ambitions and Rhodes lacks dynamism. These conservatives, disappointed by Brock's relative silence, eagerly await the change.

A footnote: Baker has not been all that eager for togetherness with his fellow leaders. He has politely put off Rhodes's frequent suggestions for joint press conferences. Baker strategists fear such sessions would recall without fondness the old Everett Dirksen and Rep. Charles (Halleck) and as such damage Baker's national image.

ANGRY SENATORS

AN EXTRAORDINARY edict by the Defense Department's congressional liaison office barring Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub from discussing Korea with a group of conservative Senators has backfired on the Pentagon in an angry senatorial outburst.

Sen. James A. McClure of Idaho, chairman of a conservative Republican group called the Steering Committee, wrote Maj. Gen. James M. Lee he was "profoundly disturbed" by Lee's veto of Singlaub's appearance before any "loose group" of Senators. Singlaub could appear only before regular committees, Lee ruled.

Lee, under orders, has told the Steering Committee his veto was based on "long-standing policy." McClure shot back a letter May 26 that he could accept forthright refusal to allow Singlaub to appear based on concern over stimulating more political controversy about the general's transfer from Korea.

But, wrote McClure, "Both you and I know there is no such 'long-standing policy,' nor should there be! Not only do military officers meet regularly with individuals and informal groups ... they sometimes solicit such meetings."

Beef, pork will cost more

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says consumers will pay more for beef and pork this summer than they did a year ago and the price surge probably will continue moderately next fall.

Higher meat prices have been predicted for months by USDA and other livestock experts. However, they are not predicting that meat prices will skyrocket immediately or that they will soar to record levels.

Much will depend on the weather, and how farmers and ranchers adjust their inventories of cattle, hogs and poultry. As always, grain prices and the size of the harvests will be important factors.

But cattle producers, particularly, have trimmed herds sharply to offset financial losses, and this will mean less beef, the main item in the American meat diet.

Following stable prices in the first half of the year, consumers will face higher retail meat prices during the second half, the Department's Outlook and Situation Board said Monday.

"Smaller beef supplies, improved consumer demand, and higher marketing costs will more than offset continued large pork and broiler supplies," the report said.

The supermarket price of choice-grade beef from grain fed cattle, which is used as a standard by USDA in comparing prices, is expected to average 3 to 4 per cent higher during the summer quarter than this spring, officials said.

"Hamburger prices could advance more than those of choice beef, if slaughter of cows and forage-fed steers and heifers declines this summer as expected," a report said.

"Further moderate retail price increases for choice beef and hamburger are expected this fall."

The main sources of hamburger are cows and other cattle which are not "finished" for the slaughtermarket in feedlots. If farmers and ranchers send fewer of those animals to market there will be less hamburger and prices will go up.

But producers have sharply boosted the supply of pork and broiler chickens the past year, meaning more competition for beef. Total meat output for 1977 is expected to be about the same as last year.

MITCHELL AND HALDEMAN TO PRISON — John Mitchell, left, is escorted from the U.S. District Building by a U.S. Marshall Monday. H.R. Haldeman talks to newsmen outside court. The two had just appeared before Federal Judge John Sirica who ordered them to begin serving sentences no later than noon June 22. Sirica had sentenced Mitchell and Haldeman on February 21, 1975 for their roles in the Watergate cover-up.

Ag Department buying barrels of cheese soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department expects to begin buying barrels of cheese soon to help raise the farm price of milk to the government's price support level.

"This action was taken because such purchases have failed to maintain the market price for cheese and the farm price for the milk from which it is manufactured," the department said.

by USDA for specific products sold to the government by processors. In that way, the handlers and processors are supposed to pay farmers at least the minimum price set under the supports.

As a step toward the purchase of so-called barrel cheese, USDA said Monday it has discontinued buying "process" cheese, the kind familiar to consumers in two-pound blocks and in slices, as part of the price support program.

Since last fall, the average market price for manufacturing-grade milk was $8.72 per 100 pounds, compared with the price support of $9 per 100 pounds.

Also, 1977 beef output will be relatively large in comparison with most previous years.

seasonal work.

Last year about 59 per cent of the hired farm labor force was in the 14 to 25-year age group, about the same as it was in 1975, the department's Economic Research Service said Monday.

"The importance of people under 25 to the seasonal agricultural labor force has been steadily increasing," the agency said. "In 1962, only about 45 per cent of all people doing hired farm work were under 25 and 26 per cent were students."

About 40 per cent of the under-25 workers in 1976 were students who performed summer and other Officials said the information was gathered in an annual survey of the U.S. farm labor market. A full report will be available later this year, a spokesman said.

Federal officials aren't saying yet where former attorney general and Nixon campaign chief Mitchell will be incarcerated. But indications are that he probably won't be sent to the minimum security institution at Allenwood, Pa.,

U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica, in signing the committal order for the two men Monday, failed to recommend an institution to the Justice Department.

HOME GROWN — Nevertheless not a typical home vegetable garden Mr. and Mrs. Gary Stretcher are growing black-eyed peas, potatoes, corn, green beans, okra, beets, sweet peas, cantaloupe, tomatoes, cucumbers, squash and Chinese peas. The garden is located near the men's dormitory at Howard College where the couple lives. Stretcher is the student activities director at the college and he and his wife are dorm supervisors. The garden was originally planted as part of a class under the direction of James Owens and the Stretchers have been caring for it since the middle of May. They agreed the garden has done really well in Big Spring.

Home gardening suited to area climate, agent says

By SUSAN HAMPTON
Home gardening has become nothing short of a "craze" in recent years, according to W. Bruce Griffith, Howard County agriculture extension agent. The "craze," as Griffith describes the interest persons have shown in the past three to four years in growing home vegetables, is as abundant here in Big Spring as is sunshine. And, Griffith added, Big Spring and area residents are blessed with a good climate to grow just about any vegetable. The first decision to make before a person begins his gardening, Griffith said, is to make a list of all the vegetables he would like to grow. This can be done as a family project, where all the members "vote" on their favorites. What to grow would also depend on how big the garden will be. Some crops are suitable for small gardens and some are more suited to larger gardens, Griffith said. The next decision to make would be to determine the size of the family the garden is for. Each crop of vegetables yields different amounts of food, so the person or family planting a garden should depend on charts as well as common sense in deciding how much of each vegetable to grow, he said. Types of vegetables to be grown in a garden would depend on the size and location of the garden, according to a Texas Agricultural Extension Service booklet on home gardening.

Area oldest celebrates birthday

An area woman, Mrs. Bertie Kirkland, celebrated her 74th birthday here Friday with a party given for her by two of her daughters, Mrs. Henry Paige and Mrs. Steve Gay, at the home of Mrs. Paige. Several guests were at the party in which another daughter of Mrs. Kirkland, Mrs. Bill Lee and her daughter Kathy, both from Midland, attended. One of Mrs. Kirkland's presents from her daughters included three red roses. Cake, punch and coffee were served at the party and bingo was played.

Miss Marcy Tettleton shower honoree

Miss Marcy Tettleton was the honoree at a bridal shower recently in the home of Mrs. Bob Carlile, 2200 Cindy. Miss Tettleton is the bride-elect of Kent Rainey. The couple will be married June 18 at the College Baptist Church. Corsages of yellow daisies were presented to the honoree, her mother, Mrs. William J. Walker, and Rainey's mother, Mrs. Gorman Rainey. The serving table was covered with a yellow lace-edged cloth. Crystal appointments were used. A centerpiece of assorted spring flowers in a brass candelabrum was on the table. Serving were Mrs. Bill Blalack and Mrs. Noel Hull. Mrs. Bill Draper presided at the guest registry. Mrs. Buford Hull and Mrs. Horace Blackshear displayed gifts. Other hostesses included Mrs. Robert Blessingame, Mrs. Preston Adams, Mrs. Harold Hicks, Mrs. Paul Warren, Mrs. Cecil Suttles and Mrs. Ernest Welch.

Uses Blackmail To Carry On Affair

DEAR ABBY: After 16 years of marriage, I discovered that my husband was having an affair with a young woman he works with. I carried on like a mad woman, told him I wouldn't put up with it and gave him a choice—her or me! He chose me, but our relationship has been miserable ever since. He spends all his evenings and spare time with me, but there is no physical contact between us. His conversation deals with superficial things, and he refuses to talk about what's really bothering him. Meanwhile the tension within me is building. Should I tell him to go ahead and continue the affair in order to improve the atmosphere at home? (I'm sure that's what he's trying to accomplish.) We have three children to raise. Perhaps if you print this it will initiate some dialogue between us. I feel as though I'm...
LIVING WITH A ROBOT

DEAR LIVING: Don't let your husband blackmail you. He is saying, "Either you let me come and go as I please with no questions asked, or I'll sit around like a zombie and sulk in my matrydam." There is a third choice. Get some counseling—both of you, and try to put your marriage back on the track. If he refuses, you'd be ahead to sweep up the debris while you're still young enough and make a life without him.

DEAR ABBY: I see so many letters in your column from people complaining because some of their friends or relatives don't have good table manners. I once read that when Albert Einstein wanted a good laugh, he'd curl up with an etiquette book and go into hysterics. He thought the "rules of etiquette" were the funniest things ever written. So do I. Why should there be only one "proper" way to eat a spear of asparagus? How ridiculous to judge a person by his table manners. My husband is the kindest, most gentleman in all this world, and if he wants to butter a dinner roll without breaking it into three pieces first, or eat peas with a spoon instead of a fork, I say, who cares? He paid for it himself, which is more than you can say for a lot of society moochers.
JOHANNA

DEAR JOHANNA: Some rules of etiquette are indeed ridiculous. If we would concern ourselves more with how we treat our fellow human beings and less with which fork to use, society would be better served.

DEAR ABBY: I foolishly married for a second time, thinking I would have companionship for the rest of my life, but I was wrong. All Abe wanted was a cook and housekeeper. He only wants to go to visit HIS children and grandchildren. Never mine. Not only that, he is very close with a dollar. He has a lot more than I have, but he doesn't spend any of his. Only mine. We live in MY house, and I pay the taxes and upkeep while he hangs on to his money, which he will leave to HIS children. At age 64 would you advise a separation?
SARAH

DEAR SARAH: I would advise a separation—of money, first. If Abe has money, let him spend it. Talk in money syllables. If he isn't any happier with this arrangement than you are, separate everything else.

Prime land war waged in Big D

DALLAS (AP) — The serene, grassy 120-acre homestead sits in bustling North Dallas, a pioneer fantasyland amidst the choking fumes of traffic on the two four-lane highways that border it.

Late each spring, a man and his machine can be seen cutting and baling the hay that grows for the horses on the Caruth Estate — located across the highways from a sprawling concrete shopping center and glass and steel high-rise office buildings.

Only minutes away is the heart of the nation's eighth largest city.

The Caruths once held 30,000 acres of the rolling pastureland that became Dallas. The homestead is the only portion that has not been commercially developed.

In the center of the acreage stands a century-old mansion with six white columns adorning the front. When the west was still wild, travelers were allowed to stay in a guest room for the night.

But a zoning change application scheduled for consideration by the Dallas City Council Wednesday may open the way for changes in the land on which property taxes amount up to $45,966 annually, or $126 a day, on just 76.8 acres.

The 76.8 acres is owned by a trust administered by W.W. Caruth Jr., whose grandfather, William Caruth, arrived in Dallas from Kentucky in 1848.

And the tax burden, the 65-year-old Caruth said, is "getting onerous."

The beneficiaries of the trust, Caruth said, "are entitled to proper administration, and I see the administration of the estate as my main responsibility today."

With that, Caruth, a wealthy land developer, has agreed to plans that would see all but 5.8 acres — the homestead itself — of "the choicest piece of undeveloped land in North Texas" turned into single-family homes and a retail shopping center.

That proposal is expected to meet only minimal opposition. But the plan proposed by real estate developer Raymond Nasher to zone the northern acres to allow construction of a hotel, a retail shopping center and twin office towers is headed for a showdown.

The opposition, headed by the Dallas Homeowners League, is expected to claim at a June 22 hearing that the area can't handle the extra traffic that will be generated by the development of Nasher's plan.

The 36.9-acre tract that is the target of Nasher's plans was leased to him in the late 1960s by Harold Byrd Jr. and Caruth Byrd, sons of Mattie Byrd, a direct descendant of the Caruth family.

Several years ago, W.W. Caruth Jr. opposed Nasher's plans.

Kitchen detective uncovers 'secrets'

ALGONAC, Mich. (AP) — Gloria Pitzer, a homemaker and self-proclaimed "junk food junkie," claims to have uncovered some of the world's most closely guarded culinary secrets.

She says she can duplicate the creamy, white stuff inside an Oreo cookie, the special sauce on the Big Mac hamburger, Kentucky Fried Chicken's "11 secret spices" and its extra crispy batter.

In her kitchen in the tiny community of Pearl Beach (population 800) just west of here, the kitchen sleuth uses her college background in food chemistry to pick apart popular fast foods, track down their basic components and recreate the recipes.

The results, sometimes following years of trial and error, are tested on her five children and then printed in cookbooks and her weekly newsletter, "The National Homemaker."

It isn't always easy.

She "fooled around" for a year before coming up with her version of Kentucky Fried Chicken's 11 Secret Spices. She used rosemary, oregano, sage, ginger, marjoram, thyme, paprika, garlic salt, onion salt, parsley and pepper, with a little chicken bouillon and brown sugar thrown in.

Most fast-food executives scoff at the idea of a homemaker duplicating their formulas, which they insist take thousands of dollars and years of experiments to develop.

"Imitation's the sincerest form of flattery," an Arthur Treacher's spokesman said, "but frankly, we don't think she imitates our batter very well."

Mrs. Pitzer sold 20,000 copies of her first cookbook, containing 200 facsimile recipes. Her next, "Second Helping," is due out next month with 175 new recipes.

There are legal tangles, too. To avoid hassles over corporate trademarks, Mrs. Pitzer gives her recipes names like Gloreos, Big Match, Kernel Censor's Chicken, and Hopeless Twinkles.

Is there any formula she hasn't duplicated?

"I'd love to crack Coca-Cola," she said. "It seems almost impossible to figure out their secret."

Millionaire Davis not quite as lonely

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — Fort Worth millionaire Cullen Davis, who is charged with the slaying of his 12-year-old stepdaughter, has found a new home at the Potter County jail while waiting for his June 27 capital murder trial.

The new surroundings aren't quite as lonely as the solitary cell Davis occupied at the Tarrant county jail.

Davis has a cellmate, William Craig, who was returned to the Potter County jail two weeks ago for an evidentiary hearing on a writ of habeas corpus. The two-man cell on the top floor contains two bunks, a shower and a commode.

Davis also has a portable television set that he brought with him from his cell in the Tarrant County jail.

Potter County Sheriff T.L. Baker said Monday that each cell in the county jail is allowed one television set and one radio, if they are furnished by the prisoners.

Davis, 43, was transferred to the Potter County jail from Fort Worth Sunday night. His trial was moved to this Panhandle city following a mistrial in Fort Worth.

He is charged with the slaying of Andrea Wilborn — the charge on which he will be tried — and the slaying of Stan Farr, a boyfriend of his estranged wife, in the lavish Davis mansion in Fort Worth last Aug. 3. He also faces charges in connection with the wounding of Gus Gavrel Jr. and of his wife, Priscilla Davis.

Deputy Gary Butler, who brought Davis from Tarrant County, said "there were no problems at all."

Davis was met at the Amarillo jail by defense attorneys Phil Burleson and Dee Miller.

Baker labeled as "a bunch of baloney" reports that Davis had received preferential treatment at the Tarrant County jail.

"I talked to the chief deputy down there and he said it wasn't true. I think it was based on inmates' relatives writing letters, and they didn't know what was going on. It was just a bunch of baloney," Baker said.

Judge George Dowden, who will preside over the trial, said Monday the defense filed "some 20" new motions with him Saturday.

Boob tube blues

Super Bowl XII will be played in Jan. of 1978 at 5 p.m. Big Spring time, and some people, including yours truly, are upset over the change.

The clash of football's top two teams was becoming an American institution. Families would meet on Super Bowl Sunday and have a meal at the noon hour which would rival that of Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Immediately after the meal, completely satiated and ready to lie back in a favorite chair, the typical football fanatic found the arrangement as close to sports heaven here on Earth as is humanly possible.

But television, the big brother of us all, (you don't watch it, it watches you), has changed all of that for next year. I guess it's certainly their prerogative, but their reasoning is what burns me up.

The TV big shots have decided, in their infinite wisdom, that by kicking off the already most-watched sporting event in history later, closer to "prime time", they can garner even a larger viewing audience than by starting at the normal afternoon time.

Forget that the later time is a pain in the backfield to those who buy tickets to the Big Game. Oh, they'll have to eat hotdogs or some other healthy meal during the game, because they'll be seated among thousands of others as the dinner hour flies past.

And so what if thousands of them will now be prevented from leaving New Orleans right after the game because of the late hour at which the main event will end.

So they'll get stuck for another hotel night they didn't want, which sports writer Melvin Durslag calls "back-to-back sticking", because they already have been overcharged for a football ticket.

But, for one who has never attended a Super Bowl live before, I can't hold much sympathy for those who have or will this year. And not for just envious purposes either.

It is estimated that 80 per cent of the season and Super Bowl tickets that are purchased every season are written off. If corporations buy the tickets and give them to customers, the customers can't gripe, because they are getting something for nothing, and they docilely go along with the TV-dictated times for more and more sporting events to begin.

Durslag 1984ishly predicts that it will just be a matter of time before football will substitute for "The Tonight Show" at 10:30 p.m.

So the only ones who find themselves creamed time and time again are the small minority who pay their own way to the games, and those of us who have to stay at home and watch sporting events at increasingly weirder and weirder times.

The NFL and networks know of us, but they know we have a small or completely non-existent voice in the matter.

What will they do to us next?

Rangers, Yanks put on a show

ARLINGTON, Tex. (AP) — It's a heady, volatile brew — New York Yankees and Texas Rangers — and Monday night's televised version was no exception.

In no particular order, the episode, on and off the television screen, included:

—Moody slugger Reggie Jackson rapping two homers, driving in four runs to spark the Yankees to a 9-2 victory and dismissing it all as "luck."

—Catfish Hunter, the Yankees ace but ailing hurler, tossing a superb six-hitter, recording his first victory since opening day and saying, "It's the most concerned I've ever been about my arm."

—Yankee Manager Billy Martin, who formerly guided the Rangers' fortunes, admitting that he is not at all reluctant to return to Ranger owner Brad Corbett's fold.

—A bizarre slur against Howard Cosell, heard nationally and triggering an apology by Corbett.

—Cosell serenading a lovely blond in the press room bar with hoarse version of "I've Grown Accustomed to Your Face."

Other than that, it was a quiet night at Arlington Stadium.

Jackson, booed lustily by Ranger fans, muzzled them quickly with a solo homer into the left field stands, then belted a two-run clout over the right field wall in the sixth.

"I don't really consider this a home run park," said Jackson, who has torpedooed the Rangers with 19 homers during his career, including 11 in Arlington.

"I'm just lucky, I guess," he shrugged.

Ranger starter Doyle Alexander, himself a former Yankee, dished up both homers and departed during a four-run outburst in the seventh, leaving his record at 6-3.

Hunter was jubilant. It was his first triumph since beating Milwaukee 3-0 in the first game of the season and he was surprised that he stayed around for the whole game.

Baseball draft today

NEW YORK (AP) — If Floyd Bannister could sit down today and talk with the No. 1 choice in baseball's amateur free-agent draft, he'd have plenty to say.

"The first thing I'd tell him would be 'congratulations,' because it's quite an honor," said Bannister, who was the No. 1 choice in the draft a year ago. "Then I'd tell him to work hard and do the best you can. Don't worry about what people say. Hold your head up high and don't worry about the pressure."

Bannister, however, won't be available for that little talk. He is otherwise occupied as the Houston Astros' probable pitcher tonight in Philadelphia.

A left-hander out of Arizona State, Bannister is one of a half dozen former No. 1 selections currently playing in the major leagues. The others are Rick Monday, Tim Lincecum, Jeff Burroughs, Mike Ivie and Bill Almon. Another, Ron Blomberg, is on the disabled list.

"I was drafted right before the College World Series," said Bannister. "It really was a thrill. I knew I would go high but you can't really expect to be No. 1."

Pitching with the added burden of being the top amateur selection in the nation, Bannister beat Arizona in the first round of the College Series but then lost to Eastern Michigan. Arizona State finished third in the tournament.

"After it was over, I was tired, mentally and physically," said Bannister. "I took about a month off before I signed."

His early experiences as a professional were a melange of towns and teams in baseball's minor-league network. Today's No. 1 choice might be interested in the play-by-play.

Canadiens lead All-Star picks

MONTREAL (AP) — During the 47 seasons in which the National Hockey League has named all-star teams, the Montreal Canadiens have had 70 players selected to the first team and 59 to the second, a total of 129 players of a possible 567.

The Canadiens added five to their total Monday night, placing four on this the 1976-77 first team and one on the second in the voting conducted by the Professional Hockey Writers' Association.

Dionne's selection was the first for a Los Angeles player to the first team while Salming was the first Toronto player to be named to the first team since the late Tim Horton gained a defense berth during the 1968-69 season.

REJOICING IN PORTLAND — Trail Blazers' Bill Walton pours a beer on his teammates during celebration ceremonies for the NBA champs Monday in Portland. Portland became the NBA winners by defeating Philadelphia 109-107 Sunday.

MVP Walton out of woodwork

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — It was the Trail Blazers' big day and 50,000 people jammed the streets of Portland to pay honor to their heroes. They even let superstar Bill Walton douse the mayor with beer.

Portland's enthusiasm knew no bounds as the city honored the players who won the National Basketball Association championship by beating the Philadelphia 76ers 109-107 Sunday.

"This is as much fun as I've ever had in any sport since I started playing when I was eight years old," Walton told thousands of basketball fans gathered at the end of a parade route that took the championship Blazers through confetti-strewn streets packed with cheering Portlanders. "I can't imagine it getting any better, but I'm sure you folks will find a way to make it that way."

Then someone stole his bicycle.

Walton, chosen most valuable player in the series, has a reputation of being quiet and shy. But he showed up at Monday's parade and rally wearing cutoffs and a sweat shirt and with a big lipstick kiss on his cheek.

He started the parade on a 10-speed bicycle, but managed to lose it somewhere along the route.

He asked whoever wound up with it to "please bring it back. It's the only bike I've got."

Police said the bike still was missing by late Monday. Walton charmed spectators at the rally and made several requests for cold beer, some of which ended up going down the shirt collar of Mayor Neil Goldschmidt. As the mayor was at the microphone, Walton doused him twice from behind. The crowd loved it.

The parade followed Broadway, the city's main downtown artery. It was jammed with people for at least 10 blocks.

"The only problem I saw was getting a hole in the crowd big enough to get the parade through," said city police Sgt. Roy Kendricks. "I've never seen that many people in one stretch of roadway."

Goldschmidt proclaimed Monday "Trail Blazer Day" in Portland and Gov. Bob Straub declared it "Trail Blazer Fan Week" in Oregon.

"This is such an exciting event we ought to do it again next year," Straub said.

76ers still feel like champs tho'

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — "I still think we have a championship team," said Philadelphia superstar Julius Erving, the consummate court artisan. "We have a better team than Portland. We have more talent and more depth."

But the Portland Trail Blazers — not the Philadelphia 76ers — are the National Basketball Association champions, and Erving knows why.

"They are cohesive," he said. "They help each other out better than we do. Their consistency enabled them to win."

"They have mental conditioning that they've developed in practices all year. They stuck with their basic game plan, the one they had been successful with all year."

"We attack defenses and try to create things. It was a matchup of opposing styles, and theirs won out."

The Blazers won because, for all his individual brilliance, Erving could not offset the spotty play of his teammates.

George McGinnis was in a woeful slump which did not end until Sunday's final game of the best-of-seven series, won by Portland 109-107 to give the Blazers the title four games to two.

Doug Collins played well until the last two games, when he tailed off badly.

Centers Caldwell Jones and Darryl Dawkins were inconsistent, key reserves Lloyd Free and Steve Mix were hampered by injuries and playmaker Henry Bibby had trouble keeping pace with Portland's speedier guards.

So, the team which had been conceded the championship by some people back in October, when Erving was purchased from the New York Nets, came up two victories short.

And the man who will take most of the heat for that shortcoming is Coach Gene Shue, who all along warned against expecting too much too soon.

"It takes time and hard work to mold a winning team," said Shue over and over. "The players have to know each other's moves and styles. It doesn't happen overnight."

And at least partly because of the undisciplined, free-spirited nature of the players Shue had to work with, the 76ers never did develop the cohesiveness that was so much a part of the Blazers' victory plan.

"My philosophy is to play classic basketball, with great passes and great defense," said Shue, describing concisely the game played by Portland.

"But you have to coach the players you end up with.

Astros help Phils gain confidence

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Richie Hebner hints that the Philadelphia Phillies may be a little overconfident.

Hebner was talking about games he feels the Phillies have given away in recent weeks.

"I don't know how some guys feel, but none of these teams are going to lie down," said Hebner after his two home runs and four RBI helped the Phillies beat the Houston Astros 9-5 in a rain-shortened six-inning game Monday night. The victory ended a three-game losing streak for the Phils.

"We can't afford to get overconfident," Hebner warned. "Just because they (the Phillies) won it last year, you can't go between those white lines and say, 'we got a win.'"

"This club expects to win, but it's not playing the way it should. Some say 'don't worry, things will work out.' The trouble is that you can be saying that in September when you're ten games out and in October, you're watching the playoffs on TV."

Joe Torre's first big job: Discipline

Italian legend has it that at 6:42 p.m. on Tuesday evening, several minutes before the official announcement was made at Shea, a wisp of white smoke curled from the smokestack atop Ponte's restaurant on the lower West Side of Manhattan, signaling the joyous news that Joe Torre had been named manager of the Mets.

There will be miracles now, now that The Godfather has taken control. Frank Sinatra will switch allegiance from Tom Lasorda's Dodgers, or at least will divide it. Runs will appear on the scoreboard. Dave Kingman's bat will make repeated contact with the ball. Tom Seaver will kiss Don Grant on the left earlobe, Mike Vail will get the signs, the Mets will soar from the cellar to the first division to do battle with Herman Franks, the don who runs the North Side of Chicago, and all Mets players will do what the new manager says.

That is putting first things last. What the Mets need above all, next to a .350 hitter, is team discipline.

"This team wasn't badly managed," said a member of the Mets' entourage, "it was unmanaged."

Joe Frazier, caught in the cross-fire between a frustrated front office and a few malcontent ballplayers, had let the team get away from him. Players came and went virtually as they pleased, blurted whatever they pleased. Much too late did Frazier attempt to recapture control by issuing an everybody-travels-together edict.

On his last mile as manager, Joe Frazier shepherded the team from Cincinnati to Pittsburgh, to Philadelphia, from defeat to defeat to defeat, with a stopover in Tidewater for a narrow victory over the farm club.

The Tidewater win was on Wednesday. Thursday was an open date. Friday night, the Mets were to open in Philly. The charter flew from Tidewater to Philly, and the players were told not to slip home to New York on the open date. Several of them did. One was Joe Torre.

When he returned to Philly, Joe Frazier confronted him. "Why didn't you ask for permission to go to New York?" Frazier asked.

"Because you might have refused it, and I would have had to go anyway. I didn't want to put you in that spot," said Torre.

What could Joe Torre say? Could he tell Joe Frazier he had been ordered to New York for a clandestine meeting with Don Grant and Joe McDonald?

"They wanted to know if I'd be interested in your job." That would have sounded just dandy.

The thing Joe Torre must now do is to find a way to get the other Mets to ask for permission, to bring the club back to where it was the world has changed since then, but has it? I have heard so many player yearn for the discipline of other days. Jon Matlack, in the midst of rampant anarchy, burst into Joe Frazier's office and pleaded for a show of authority by the manager who had become so passive.

"You can't threaten players anymore," Joe Torre told his maiden press conference. "It's tough. But I can get along with people. I have a feel. I'm just going to try to let the guys have fun."

It began with a victory, and that always is fun. Then came the drive downtown with pretty Dani Torre for the celebration party, where Joe Torre served his very best tortolini, his most tender veal franchise, his blubbiest champagne.

It lasted til 2:30 yesterday morning, and everybody sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," and went home. He is indeed a jolly good fellow.

When Joe Torre played third base for Atlanta, Phil Niekro once said: "He'd come to the mound when you were pitching, and he'd look at you with those eyes, and you knew you'd better bear down."

They are the deep-burning eyes of Omar Sharif, those make-you-an-offer eyes, sinister eyes that could discourage some players from testing just how much of a jolly good fellow Joe Torre really is.

Austin Texans to rival Longhorns?

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Sixty-three football players — about two-thirds of them wide receivers — showed up for the first tryout for the new Austin Texans.

One of them is the fastest football player in the world. Not Johnny Jones of Texas. He's got three more years with the Longhorns.

The new fastest man in pads is Jim Hines, winner of the Olympic gold medal in the 100 meters in 1968 and holder of the world record, an automatically timed 9.95.

Hines, 29, weighs only eight pounds more than the 180 he carried to fame at Mexico City.

He knocked around the National Football League for several years but says he never really got a good chance.

The other candidates for the minor league franchise included only a handful of overweight linemen.

It looked like a convention of tribal kings, with caps and shorts and jerseys of every color, many of the jerseys bearing numerals or school names: USC, Nebraska, Hawaii.

Several players wore knee-length white socks. Nearly everybody favored white shoes.

First, they gathered around Harry Lander of San Antonio, president of the American Football Association, which is getting teams started in Houston, San Antonio, Wichita Falls, Oklahoma City and possibly other cities.

"I know you love football, and some of you would play for nothing, but you'd like to get paid, too, if you could," Lander told them Saturday morning under a broiling sun in Austin's famed Zilker Park.

The new league is having trouble getting a stadium in Austin, Lander said, but he hopes to persuade the Austin Independent School District that the Austin Texans, playing a 12-game schedule of summer night games, would not compete with the local high schools.

He said those who make the 38-man traveling squad would be paid on a percentage basis. Forty-eight per cent of the gate would go to the coaches and players, he said. Figuring a crowd of 10,000 at $3 a head, and with each player getting, say, one per cent, that's $300 a game, he said.

"I dare say you guys will fill any stadium you play in. You're going to play a more exciting brand of football than the Texas Longhorns," he said.

The first game is June 18 against the league's Houston team, so they got right down to the business of seeing who has the speed and moves to play professional football.

After half an hour, Roger Gill, general manager of the San Antonio Charros (a combination of the old Toros and Wings), stopped a passing drill to say he had cut some of them but he saw them sneaking back into line to go out for passes.

DALLAS COWBOYS THEY AIN'T — Candidates for the new Austin Texans professional football team show their stuff at tryout in Zilker Park.

"You with the curly hair," he shouted at one player. "I told you you were cut."

"How can you cut running backs when you haven't even looked at 'em?" Grover Keeton, the guy with the curly hair, yelled back.

"All right. Run a pattern. Throw him the ball," Gill ordered.

Keeton, who said he played defensive end at Texas Tech in 1965-66, ran a square-out to the right, made a lurching fingertip catch and almost lost his balance but cut upfield and pranced a few strides. After an hour, most of the white receivers had departed. Keeton remained.

"They just have a certain image of a football player," he said. "It's a game of desire. I'm not a trackman, but I want to at least let them get a clock on me. I've worked a long time on my time."

Gill later said he didn't plant to clock the candidates. "I don't think it's necessary. You can tell which ones are football players. Some of them may have good speed for the 40 but not be able to maneuver," he said. Hines may be one of these, he said, but he conceded Hines would sell tickets.

One lineman with a gut that pushed his belt down several inches also had a heavily bandaged left knee. In the agility drill of running sideways and criss-crossing the legs he looked like a hippopotamus on ice. Blowing

"My electric bills are going up the same as yours. Here's one thing I'm doing about it."

"At Texas Electric, where I work, our job is to provide you with the electricity you need.

But higher construction and fuel costs are making it more expensive to do.

I can tell just by looking at my electric bill.

One thing I do at home is to keep a checklist right on my air-conditioning/heating unit. I have the months listed, and every time I clean the filter I check off that month—so I make sure I check it at least once a month. I couldn't remember it otherwise, and it's important.

A dirty filter limits the air flow through there—and that uses more electricity."

Electricity. You count on it today. We're working to keep it that way.

Marines boot KKK

CAMP PENDLETON, Calif. (AP) — The Marine Corps says it will discharge two Marines who assumed leadership of a Ku Klux Klan cell on the nation's biggest Marine base last fall.

A spokesman for the base said administrative discharges will be issued this week to Pfc. Dennis L. Campbell, 22, of Smithcreek, Mich., and Pfc. Ronnie Harper, 19, of Pensacola, Fla.

The Marine Corps last November transferred out most of the men whose names were found on a list of alleged KKK members at the base.

The move followed an incident in which black Marines, who said they were seeking to get even for KKK abuses, attacked a room of white Marines in the mistaken belief they were breaking up a Klan meeting.

Six whites, who were not KKK members but who had been having a beer party, were hospitalized and the Marine Corps arrested 14 black Marines.

Since the transfer of Marine KKK leaders from Pendleton to other bases, Campbell and Harper publicly announced they had become the replacement KKK leaders at Pendleton.

The Corps said a third leader, Pfc. Charles V. Smith, 18, of Houston, Tex., and a fourth man who admitted belonging to the group also will be discharged. They presently are listed as unauthorized absences, a Corps spokesman said.

He said the Marines know of no other KKK members left at Pendleton.

In a related development, an attorney said Monday he was withdrawing from the defense of one of the 10 black Marines still facing general courts-martial in the barracks assault.

Mark Rosenbaum of Los Angeles, representing the American Civil Liberties Union, did not give a reason for dropping out of the case of Cpl. Curtis Jones, 22, of Russell, Ala.

A military judge recessed the hearing for Jones until Wednesday.

Mother to get kids back

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Mary Ann Corsey, who lost custody of her two children because she was dating the black man who became her second husband, expects to have the kids back by next weekend.

The state Supreme Court ruled Monday that a county court had taken the children away solely on racial considerations.

"I just hope other people in our situation don't have to go through what we've had to go through," Mrs. Corsey said in a telephone interview from her home in Clovis. "I hope people will be more open-minded and broad-minded."

Mrs. Corsey, 31, first won custody of Kimberly, now 7, and Darion, 6, when she and Danny Boone were divorced in December 1975. Six months later, Boone went to Curry County District Court, asking for custody of the youngsters because his ex-wife was dating Ben Corsey.

Judge James Compton, now retired, granted Boone custody, saying the relationship between the former Mrs. Boone and Corsey was "immoral, a bad influence on the children and an improper atmosphere to raise minor children."

He also said the children would be better reared with members of their own race. Boone, a truck driver who is frequently away on trips, placed the children in the home of his ex-wife's brother, a farmer.

The New Mexico Supreme Court said that the lower court's decision was based solely on racial considerations and restored the original custody order.

"The record is barren of any evidence" of immorality or other harm to the children because of the interracial marriage, said District Court Judge Maurice Sanchez of Albuquerque, who was designated to sit on the three-judge Supreme Court panel hearing the custody fight appeal.

"The record, in fact, discloses clear and convincing evidence that Mary Ann and Ben have been circumspect in their relationship and at no time have acted in a way harmful to the children's welfare," Sanchez said.

GO DOWN JOHNSON STREET and visit Western Auto

Western Auto Store is top family store

Take a good look at this store. There's a lot of things in there that you are not aware of... and it's time you visited it and learned about the merchandise they have and the services they offer.

For one thing, they sell a lot of parts for the do-it-yourself mechanic — things that are easy for an individual to install at home.

Western Auto Associate Store, located at 504 Johnson is owned by Edward R. Morn.

They sell automotive tires, batteries and accessories.

But they are also a big household item store. They sell household appliances, television and radios, sporting goods and toys.

With the big rush of June brides, they also are a good store to go in and find household appliances, dishes and cookware for the bride.

We get in the habit of thinking of Western Auto as strictly an auto store, but it is definitely a family store.

Drop by today and check out anything from air conditioners to mix masters.

Or if you need tires for your summer trip or parts for your car, definitely go over on Johnson Street and drop in Western Auto.

OUR FRIENDS & NEIGHBORS

SERVING YOU FOR A BETTER HOWARD COUNTY

Captain Jimmie W. McCain has been with Big Spring Police Department for twelve years.

McCain's roots as a law enforcement officer go back a long way.

"My father was a police officer for almost 30 years, and instilled in me a desire for a career in law enforcement," said the Captain. McCain was employed by the Odessa and Lamesa police departments before coming here in 1965.

The 39 year old Captain is a local, and was born in Colorado City. He attended Stanton High School and continued his education at Howard College, Odessa College, Texas A&M and the University of Texas.

He attends the Church of Christ with his wife Bobbie Jo, and they have a 19 year old son, Jimmie Lynn.

His hobbies include fishing, archery, and target shooting.

Lieutenant Melvin Daratt is one of the old hands at the department, having served for 14 years.

Born in Hale, Kan., Daratt attended Elk City High School. He later attended Dague Business College and Howard College.

He served in the Army, and after that as a welder. He entered a law enforcement career to gain "the satisfaction of helping others and being a public servant." Daratt is now warrant officer for the department.

He has a wife, Betty; a son, Ronald; and two daughters, Pamela Bost, and Peggy Craven. He attends the Christian Church.

Daratt lists his hobbies as fishing, golf and football.

Captain Sherrill Farmer has more experience on the Big Spring force than any other man. With 21 years experience, Farmer understates his reason for joining the department when he says "I was interested in some type of public safety vocation."

Farmer is also the graduate of extensive law enforcement training courses. He has attended Howard College, the Southern Police Institute, the University of Louisville, the FBI National Academy, Sul Ross University, Texas Tech, Texas A&M and the University of Virginia.

Farmer was born in Silver Valley. He has a wife, Jane, and a daughter, Shanna. His hobbies are golf, hunting, and fishing.

Jewelry slayings

JACKSBORO, Tenn. (AP) - Tennessee authorities Monday filed charges of first-degree murder against two West Virginia men for the murders of a Madison, W.Va., jeweler and his wife.

Authorities in West Virginia have already charged the two men with the robbery and kidnaping of the couple. Campbell County Sheriff Harry Cureton said the Tennessee warrants accuse Clifford C. Caudill, 38, of Barboursville, W.Va., and William W. York, 23, of Dingress, W.Va., of killing Aubrey Hawkins, 52, and his wife, Alberta, 49.

Hikers found the bullet-riddled bodies of the victims bound together at the arms last Friday in a rural area of Campbell County. The couple had been missing since last Tuesday when police discovered a theft at their jewelry store.

York and Wes Finley, 26, also of Dingress, were held at the Logan County, W.Va., jail Monday on charges of abduction and armed robbery after their arrests there Friday.

Caudill was held Monday in Dallas, Tex., where he was picked up in a routine traffic check. Dallas authorities said Caudill said he would waive proceedings for extradition to West Virginia, where police said he also faces robbery and kidnaping charges.

Cureton said officials have determined the Hawkinses were killed in Campbell County but he would not pinpoint the time. Police said Hawkins had been shot four times in the back of the head and his wife once in the face. The sheriff said Finley faces no Tennessee charges in the incidents.

Police in West Virginia said approximately $176,000 in cash, watches and jewelry were taken in the theft at Hawkins jewelry store. They believe the couple was surprised inside the store when they went there on the night of May 31.

Jeffrey Hall, assistant state attorney general in Jacksboro, said Caudill and York will likely be tried on the robbery and abduction charges in West Virginia before being brought to Tennessee to face the murder charges.

Since writing Ridin' Fence, I have discovered there are two kinds of columns that often draw a lot of laughs. One is funny happenings by your people around Big Spring and out there in six counties. And the other is funny things that often happen to me when I'm traveling, when I am least expecting it.

So it was this weekend. It was noon Friday when I took off from the Midland Airport for Biloxi for the National Press women's meeting. I was thrilled and looking forward to the trip with great expectations.

I was in a pensive mood and kept looking out the window into the sky, like I thought I was going to see something of great significance there to tell my readers. I was thinking how much more you see on the ground, even though the long hours it takes to get places are incomparable.

When sitting in the plane in Austin and watching them load and unload cargo, I really got into deep thoughts watching them take off large boxes of flowers for florists and put a coffin on the plane. I had never seen people load a coffin except once during a fancy ceremony where a Vietnam veteran was brought home with taps and a special military guard.

When two luggage carriers move it into the plane's compartment, it's not exactly like that. One of them kind of shoves with his hip and slides it off the cart to a ramp and away we go.

We took off for Houston and there had an hour's wait. I spent about half of it talking on the telephone to an old friend, Ed Hunter, executive editor of the Houston Post who used to be in West Texas.

Then we got to New Orleans and it began to get funny. I was booked on something called South Central Airlines and it made our local truck line look sharp.

I knew I was in trouble when I finally found their office in the "Amen" corner at the airport and I looked up and the clock on the wall was cracked and stopped. I thought, "Uh-oh, they don't even care what time it is."

I sat down with three other tired looking persons and waited for somebody to appear. We waited and waited. Finally a pretty little thing showed up and told us, "We're a little late." There was a silence. "How late?" said one of the travelers.

"Oh, an hour or so," she said and began to look busy. "Is there anything out earlier?" I asked. One man passenger stood waiting breathlessly. "Southern leaves in 15 minutes," she said, "I'll call over there for you two and put you on stand-by."

Over there was at least a mile and we ran through that terminal, both arriving out of breath and anxious. The gentleman from Southern says, "I can take one—you arrived together, — which will it be?"

We looked at each other and before I could speak, he said mournfully, "My son's getting married tonight. It's a small wedding but I hoped to get there by 9 p.m."

"I can't top that," I said and began running back through the airport. I got back and waited some more.

The plane arrived. I've flown in crop dusters. It was similar. The sweet thing quickly counted eleven heads and said, "Oh there's room for me, and Homer."

We climbed on the plane. She came up the ramp last carrying Homer—a canary in a cage that she placed in the aisle, and we took off. In a few moments, I heard a shrill whistling and I looked in horror out into the dark toward the wing. Then I realized it was Homer who had struck up a shrill tune.

We landed. All was well. But we were lucky. On Sunday, the Airline decided to shut down for the day. Some of the women had to catch a limousine into New Orleans. I was coming back on Southern and was in good shape. This was on Friday night.

Gray rights stressed

PITTSBURGH (AP) - A coalition of 10 million elderly Americans, adopting "Count Us In" as a slogan, is launching an attack on mandatory retirement.

In a keynote address prepared for a combined conference of the nation's two largest groups of retired persons, forced retirement is called "wasteful, degrading, discriminatory, morally wrong and fundamentally un-American."

Harriet Miller, who serves as executive director for both the American Association of Retired Persons and the National Retired Teachers Association, said the groups' combined membership of 10 million would fight for "retirement policies flexible enough to permit people to use their abilities and experience so long as those qualities are present and the desire to work exists."

Her speech was prepared for the first day of working sessions at a three-day joint conference entitled "Count Us In," the third of six being held around the nation as part of a campaign to end age discrimination.

Among other objectives cited by Mrs. Miller were: —A national health insurance program.

—Housing policies which allow older people to remain in their own homes whenever possible.

—Cost-conscious government that recognizes inflation as "the greatest single menace to the security and happiness of the retired American."

—Property tax reform that "stops older people from being forced out of their homes by skyrocketing taxes."

—"And a more positive, realistic image of aging in society."

Mrs. Miller has been active on a variety of federal commissions, including the 1963 White House Conference on Civil Rights and the 1964 and 1965 White House Conferences on Education.

She was especially critical of the earnings ceiling of the Social Security System, which reduces benefits for any recipient who earns more than $3,000 a year.

On Thursday night, somebody in the Biloxi airport forgot to leave on the runway lights and the plane went on to Mobile and one reporter took the bus back from Mobile to Biloxi.

But it was lots of fun and a beautiful historic town on the Gulf of Mexico. And I loved it. Even if I did arrive with a bird in a cage. When me and the canary were out ridin' fence.

Merger battle

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) - A Texas food firm's bid to take over Gerber Products has been delayed because the company refuses to give Gerber information on its foreign payments.

U.S. District Court Judge Noel Fox on Monday ordered the effective date of the takeover offer from Anderson Clayton Co. of Houston to be delayed until 10 days after the Texas firm provides the information Gerber wants.

Fox made the ruling after a 45-minute pretrial hearing. The judge held several such hearings and conferences last week.

But John DeWitt, an attorney for Anderson Clayton, said his client intends to appeal Fox's original order last Thursday requiring the Texas firm to turn over information about the $2.1 million in foreign payments.

Once the takeover offer is effective, Anderson Clayton still must wait 60 days under Michigan law before it can start buying Gerber stock. The Texas firm has offered $40 per share for all Gerber's common stock in a $330 million takeover bid.

But Gerber is battling the takeover effort in both federal and Michigan courts.

Gerber, the nation's largest baby food maker, is arguing in federal court that the takeover would violate anti-trust laws and create a monopoly. The issue in state courts, now on appeal to the Michigan Court of Appeals, is that Gerber is entitled to a hearing before the state Department of Commerce under Michigan's new takeover law.

Anderson Clayton has countered in federal court. It seeks dismissal of Gerber's suit and denies its foreign payments were questionable or illegal, as Gerber claims.

At stake in the legal tangle is creation of a new food industry giant with yearly sales topping $1.1 billion. Gerber, based in Fremont, Mich., had record sales of $404 million last year. Anderson Clayton recorded $759 million worth of sales in 1976.
