

Warrants out for two men

Shot seven times, Big Spring man dies

By JAMES WERRELL

A local man was shot seven times during an argument in the parking lot of Fina's Cafe, 200 N. Gregg, and died after running eight blocks to the home of a relative.

According to reports, Gregory Salazar, 40, Knott, was shot seven times with .25 cal. slugs during the argument. The mortally wounded man then ran to the home of Adolph Salazar, 615 N.E. 8th, where he was found lying dead on the floor by officer David Caudle.

The incident occurred around 1 a.m. Sunday as Salazar sat in his car talking to his daughter Anita Salazar. According to reports, a middle-aged man walked out of the cafe, argued with Salazar, and grabbed the daughter by the wrist.

The exact chain of events following the argument has not been determined, but investigators have pieced together a probable account of the shooting with the help of Anita Salazar and another witness.

According to Lt. Claude Morris, as the assailant stepped back from the car, shielding himself with Salazar's daughter, the father emerged from the auto. One witness claims that Salazar carried a pistol as he stepped from the car, but officers could find only two spent .22 cal. shells at the scene.

Investigators believe that the assailant and another man then opened fire on Salazar hitting him three times in the left chest, once in the right arm, once in the right thigh, and twice in the left thigh.

The two men then sped from the scene. No weapons were found by police.

Warrants were issued 3 p.m. Sunday for Ascencion Yanez, 32, 1009 W. 8th, and his brother Clarence Yanez Jr., 33, 704 N.W. 5th.

Ascencion Yanez turned himself in to the Howard County Sheriff's Department this morning accompanied by local attorney Wayne Basden. Also this morning, Sheriff A.N. Standard was notified by another local attorney, George Thomas, that Clarence Yanez Jr. would surrender sometime today.

Retirement complex rite moved back to Dec. 29

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the Episcopal Retirement Center, which will be built at 17th and Lancaster Streets, will be held at 11:30 a.m. Thursday, Dec. 29, Guil Jones III, chairman of the St. Mary building committee, announced today.

Originally scheduled for this week, the ceremony has been delayed because of additional dealings between the church and the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

St. Mary's has obtained approval for a government loan totaling $3.1 million to build the L-shaped structure. One wing of the building will be six stories, the other five.

Construction on the building will get under way a few days after the groundbreaking ritual. J.W. Cooper Construction Co., Odessa, is the contractor.

Original estimate on the retirement complex's cost was slightly in excess of $1.8 million but more units were added and that, coupled with inflation, pushed the cost above the $3 million mark. The church board first obtained approval for the structure in September 1975.

The complex will embrace 120 units. Several dignitaries of the Episcopal church will be in attendance.

Vance arrives in Jordan for talks with Hussein

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance arrived in Jordan today to try to persuade King Hussein to send a representative to the Cairo talks between Israel and Egypt.

Vance said his talks in Israel showed the Jewish state was dedicated to peace and "working energetically toward that goal." His aides exuded optimism after their visits to Cairo and Jerusalem.

"Hussein is a true and valued friend and his advice and counsel at this time is particularly important to us," Vance said in an arrival statement.

In other developments: —Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam said in Damascus that President Hafez Assad will refuse to receive Vance on Tuesday if he is carrying a message from Israel.

Baghdad radio in Iraq reported that Vance was carrying two letters: from Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin, one for Hussein and one for Assad. But the U.S. State Department denied Vance was carrying such letters.

—Israeli Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said Egyptian President Anwar Sadat expects to make serious progress at the Cairo talks within a week to 10 days. Dayan said if Sadat cannot "deliver something" within that time on the overall Mideast conflict, he may agree to negotiate a separate peace settlement with Israel — something he repeatedly has said he does not want to do.

Potton House crowds stun two who planned event

People poured through the Potton House Sunday afternoon all during the open house hours with the project collecting over $400 toward upkeep and improvements.

Mrs. Carol Hunter and Mrs. Polly Mays, who were in charge of the open house, were appreciative and stunned at the response.

"I never expected this big a turnout," Mrs. Mays said Sunday "but it shows that people here really do care about restoring some of their history their way through the house and yard, purchased pictures and souvenir teqir way through the house and yard, purchased pictures and souvenir bricks, and enjoyed refreshments served in the dining room, included every segment of the community.

Mrs. Hunter stated, "I was especially pleased that people from all walks of life took time out to visit the Potton House."

Members of the Hayden family and the Read family who had both lived there at one time were among the hosts and visitors.

Mrs. Lillie Mae Lomax and Mrs. Helen Acuff wore special corsages for the occasion.

R.H. Weaver, who had done the legal work in obtaining the home, helped greet people at the door along with Mrs. Mays.

Other members of the Potton House committee served at points of interest throughout the home.

Tulsa firm lands $40 million job

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Williams Brothers Engineering Co. announced today it has received a contract for the engineering, design and construction management of the $40 million Palo Duro pipeline in West Texas.

Perry Gas Transmission Inc. of Midland, Texas, is building the pipeline.

The 227-mile, 20-inch natural gas pipeline will extend from the Wheeler area in the Texas Panhandle to near Sweetwater. Initial capacity of the line is expected to be 130 million cubic feet daily with an ultimate capacity of 225 million cubic feet.

Williams brothers has established offices in Childress, Texas, and construction will begin in the first quarter of next year.

CRASH SCENE ON ANDREW HIGHWAY Two Hobbs, N.M., men suffer grave injuries

Two injured on SH 176

Two Hobbs, New Mexico men are in the intensive care unit at Malone-Hogan Hospital after the gravel truck in which they were traveling slammed into a parked hay truck on the Andrews Highway SW 176 around 6 a.m. today.

Elias Maldonado, Jr., 315 N. Cecil in Hobbs, was driver of the truck. His passenger was Raul Maldonado.

The driver suffered severe facial lacerations and reportedly had his nose severed. The passenger had a slash on the forehead and a severe blow to the back of the head.

The gravel truck was traveling east on 176 headed eastward with the accident occurring about 12 miles from Big Spring.

State Troopers from Martin and Howard counties investigated the accident.

One of the two men was trapped inside the cab until workers could pry the two trucks apart.

Inspection date is moved back

The date for the inspection of Webb facilities by a military team from Ogden, Utah, and Lockheed officials has been postponed until Jan. 12-14, according to Clyde McMahon, member of the local Industrial Team.

The proposal for the bid for a contract to service F-4Cs by Lockheed is to be submitted to the government by Tuesday, Dec. 13. This was a week later than originally set.

In the meantime, Harry Nagel, city manager, and Harry Spannaus, airport director, are in Washington, D.C. attempting to speed up the process of officially turning the base over to the City of Big Spring for use as an industrial park.

Age discrimination ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court ruled today that the federal law prohibiting age discrimination does not protect some 11 million workers from being forced to retire before they reach the age of 65.

In a 7-2 decision, the court said the law was primarily designed to encourage the hiring of older workers, not to prevent them from being retired under pension plans adopted before the statute was passed.

The dissenting justices, Thurgood Marshall and William J. Brennan, said the majority decision has "deprived many older workers of the protection which Congress sought to afford."

But they noted that the House and Senate recently passed amendments specifically prohibiting forced retirement of under-65 employees simply because of their age. Thus, they said, "the mischief the court fashions today may be short-lived."

The decision came in a case involving Harris McMann of Alexandria, Va., who brought suit contending that United Airlines had no right to force him to retire when he reached age 60 in 1973. He was a technical specialist in aircraft systems and had worked for the firm since 1944.

On other matters today, its last scheduled day of business until Jan. 9, the Supreme Court:

—Let stand a lower court's decision dismissing a libel suit against The New York Times and the National Audubon Society. That court had ruled that the press should not be required to suppress newsworthy statements merely because of doubts about their truth.

—Turned aside an attempt by Maryland authorities to water down the protection against self-incrimination afforded criminal suspects by the so-called Miranda rule.

—Refused a request by California inheritance-tax authorities to order a halt in a Texas trial over Howard Hughes' estate until the high court tries to decide which state the reclusive millionaire considered his legal residence at his death.

—Let stand an Oregon law barring most lawsuits by persons injured in a motor vehicle accident if the victims are guests in the vehicle.

McMann based his argument on the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, which took effect in 1968 and prohibited employers from firing workers or otherwise discriminating against them because of age. The act covered persons between the ages of 40 and 65. It extended no protection to those 65 and older.

The statute says it "shall not be unlawful for an employer" to observe a bona fide retirement plan as long as the plan was not a subterfuge to circumvent the age discrimination ban.

Writing for the majority, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger said the act "does not prohibit all enforced retirements prior to age 65."

United's retirement plan was adopted in 1941, long before Congress even considered outlawing age discrimination, and the plan could not be considered a subterfuge, the court said.

Burger stressed that the court was concerned only with retirement plans established before 1968.

But he suggested that company policies established after 1968 and mandating retirement before the age of 65 might also be permissible.

The U.S. Circuit Court in Richmond, Va., had ruled in the McMann case that no pre-65 retirement provision was lawful unless there was "some economic or business purpose other than arbitrary age discrimination."

Overruling the circuit court, Burger wrote: "We reject any such per se rule requiring an employer to show an economic or business purpose in order to satisfy the subterfuge language of the act."

Focalpoint

Action/reaction: Why Dalmatians?

Q. Why do fire departments traditionally have Dalmatian dogs? Does the Big Spring fire department have any?

A. Dalmatian dogs, which are black and white spotted, were used in Dalmatia as coach dogs to run alongside the coaches of the landowners and gentry. Some fire departments in America then began the tradition of having them run alongside the early horsedrawn fire buggies. Later they were kept as a tradition. No, Big Spring firemen do not have any.

Offbeat: Airborne wedding

GREENVILLE, Texas (AP) — Newlyweds Jim and Jeanne Jackson had their heads in the clouds — literally — when they got married Sunday in a small private plane exactly one mile over Hunt County.

"We wanted a small wedding and we had one," said Jackson, 42, an avid pilot.

"Jim didn't want to interrupt his flying or his golf game and the golf cart was just too small," said Mrs. Jackson, 38.

The double-ring ceremony, performed by Hunt County Court-at-law Judge Phil Fugitt, was broadcast simultaneously to a chase plane loaded with family and friends and back to the airport.

"It was perfect," Mrs. Jackson said, "a lot of fun."

SALVAGE OPERATION — A man helps a woman carry her already-wrapped Christmas gifts down the icy stairs of the Wenonah Park apartment hotel Sunday in the wake of a fire which killed nine persons in the 70-year-old structure Saturday at Bay City, Mich. Forty-five other persons were hospitalized, and several others were listed as missing. The State Police arson squad is investigating.

Mexican jail raid appeal

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court was asked today to set aside the convictions of two men in connection with a commando-style raid on a Mexican jail which freed 14 American prisoners in 1976.

The court was told that the men were found guilty only of an obscure little law which forbids the carrying of a sawed off shotgun across the Mexican-American border. Such a crime should be a crime only if the person knows it is illegal in the first place, defense attorneys said.

Appealing were William McCoy Hill, 32, and Sterling Lake Davis Sr., both of Dallas. At the trial, Donald Fielden, 29, a burly ex-Marine, testified he masterminded the raid with the financing of Davis who wanted to get his son out of the Piedras Negras jail, across the border from Eagle Pass, Tex.

Fielden said he, Hill and Billy Jack Blackwell held Mexican guards at gunpoint and released the prisoners, who crossed the Rio Grande into Eagle Pass and turned themselves in to U.S. authorities.

Mexico has asked for the extradition of the men in the raid — giving the case added impetus in light of last week's exchange of Mexican and American prisoners.

Fielden said he was paid $5,000 by Davis and also collected several thousand dollars from other prisoners who were released.

Fielden pleaded guilty and was sentenced to four years in prison and a $10,000 fine. Hill was found guilty of conspiring to export and import the shotgun, but was acquitted on two other charges. He was sentenced to six years in prison and $10,000 fine.

Davis was found guilty of conspiracy to export the gun and was sentenced to five years on top of a 10-year sentence he is serving for violation of parole.

Police squabble heats up

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — The Fort Worth Police Association, which had 359 of 432 members vote recently to oust Police Chief A.J. Brown, is expected to present its demands to the city council Tuesday.

But the association, which has 670 members, will be going up against Fort Worth Mayor Hugh Parmer, who supports Brown.

"Some people are engaged in political ploys to select their own police chief," said Parmer. "We've got a bunch of people running around acting irresponsibly."

He said the people are acting under the premise they are going to win.

"That's not going to happen," the mayor said. An association member, D.W. Branson, said the balloting showed the public and the city council that they are dissatisfied with Brown. He pointed to the grievance procedures, a seniority system and also arbitrary action toward some officers.

"I think most members of the council are still firmly behind Brown," Parmer said. "When the unrest first surfaced in the form of a petition against Brown, it was my understanding officers were upset by team policing and that Brown in some way had contributed to the death of two officers."

During a two-week period this past summer, two Fort Worth policemen were killed. One officer, who was attempting to help a stranded motorist, was struck by a drunken driver and another was shot and killed while answering a disturbance call.

Brown had been police chief at Norfolk, Va., until he was hired by Fort Worth in 1976. At that time, the department was plagued with bad publicity about a five-year scandal in the auto theft division and allegations of a cover-up by authorities.

Parmer adds, "The chief is the chief."

Ex-Big Springer held lease

Famed dance hall burns

CISCO — The famed Lake Cisco dance pavilion and clubhouse, leased by a former Big Spring resident, was destroyed by fire Sunday.

"There was not another place like it in all the state in the 30s and early 40s. Now, it's gone forever," said Truman Kirk, who held a lease on the clubhouse and grounds. Kirk was circulation manager of the Big Spring Herald years ago.

Such internationally known musicians as Guy Lombardo, Henry Busse and others of the big-band era played to hundreds dancing on the smooth hardwood floor during the 30s.

"It's the end of a period that brought statewide attention to Cisco," Kirk said. "I don't know what will happen to the area now."

The empty clubhouse and pavilion caught fire about 2:30 a.m. Sunday, creating a blaze so large it could be seen 30 miles away.

Despite the efforts of volunteer firemen from the Cisco Fire Department, the two-story all-wooden structure, which measured 50 feet by 100 feet was a total loss according to Kirk.

One booster and three fire engines arrived within minutes after being contacted by teenagers who spotted the blaze. There was only one fire hydrant in the area, however, and it was situated too close to the building to be put into use. Firemen retreated from the intense heat and watched helplessly as the building caved in.

The skating ring was built around 1929 by the Cisco Amusement Corp. It had been shuttered since 1975.

Kirk said, however, he was making plans to reopen the rink and the adjoining swimming pool. The pool itself was advertised as the largest of its kind in the world.

The pool was empty, having been abandoned after the city built a new swimming facility.

The pool, located adjacent to Lake Cisco Dam, had an enclosed island where July 4 beauty contests used to be held. At one time, the recreational area also had a zoo, a miniature golf course and cabins for overnight visitors.

Kirk estimated the loss at between $300,008 and $400,000. Authorities said they had no idea what started the fire.

Kirk said he was in a complete state of shock.

LUBBOCK — As the harvest and ginning of a record three million bale plus cotton crop on the High Plains draws to a close, farmers are asking questions about use of the Commodity Credit Corporation loan program.

Answers to those questions from officials at Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., Lubbock, come in the form of "mostly information, very little advice."

For those producers who decide not to sell now at these low prices, says PCG Executive Vice President Donald Johnson, "the loan is probably the most economical choice, but the sell-or-hold decision itself is a decision for each individual."

Plains producers can now sell into the current market at from 100 to 400 points over loan values, depending on quality. The average available price is probably about 200 points or $10 per bale "premium." But should the market rise more than enough to cover carrying charges before the term of the loan expires, the farmer can realize a greater return.

One thing farmers should keep in mind, Johnson says. "At the end of the initial ten-month loan period on 1977 crop cotton, if prices are still low, farmers will have the option to extend the loan for an additional eight months."

Under the previous loan program, all cotton loans expired ten months from the first day of the month in which they were written.

This new option to carry cotton in the loan for a maximum 18 months, the PCG executive explains, "means the farmer can retain title to his crop long enough for the size of the 1978 crop to exert its full influence on the market."

It means also that changes in world cotton consumption over the next year and a half will come into play, he adds.

These factors may turn out to be either bullish or bearish, Johnson cautions, "but longer term loans do improve chances that use of the loan may be profitable."

As for advice, PCG officials only suggest that producers might be wise, where feasible, to delay final market decisions two or three months. During this period, they note, final cotton program regulations for 1978 will be issued, USDA will publish its January planting intentions report and the outcome of ongoing multifiber trade negotiations will become known, "all of which will have an effect on market prospects for next year."

Jail standards

to be discussed

The Howard County Commissioners met with Joe Slater, representative of the Texas Jail Commission, shortly before noon today at the Regular Commissioner's Court.

Slater told the commissioners that there were standards made by the commission for new jails and existing jails. He explained that the standards for existing jails, such as the Howard County Jail were different than those standards required for new jails, and often a request for variance from the stand would be accepted by the Jail Commission.

Slater is expected to stay through the afternoon with the commissioners discussing the different standards which the Howard County facility would be required to meet.

Burglars kicked open the front door of the home of Dorothy Davis, 1500 A. Virginia, around midnight Friday, and stole a black-and-white television set, a small calculator, a stereo with two speakers, five eight-track tapes and a bottle of liquor.

Loss was estimated at $495.

'I married and lived happily ever after'

LONDON (AP) — Lady Spencer Churchill, widow of Britain's wartime leader Sir Winston Churchill, died today at her home in London after a heart attack. She was 92.

Her grandson, Winston Churchill, announced her death. He said she was lunching with her secretary when she was stricken.

Lady Spencer Churchill, named Clementine but nicknamed "Clemmie" by Sir Winston, began auctioning off his paintings and other family heirlooms quietly this year to help meet expenses.

She had been in failing health for several years and progressively had retreated into seclusion since the death in 1965 of her husband of 57 years. He was 90 at his death.

Last July she underwent abdominal surgery at King Edward VII hospital in London. The reasons for the operation was never made public.

Shocked Britons had suggested special legislation or an appeal to provide for her needs, but she said she deplored any such idea and it was dropped.

Lady Spencer Churchill was born April 1, 1885 to Sir

Henry Hozier and Lady Blanche Hozier. Her mother was descended from a long line of British earls, as was Sir Winston — a grandson of the Duke of Marlborough.

By all accounts, it was love at first sight when Clementine Ogilvy Hozier, the 23-year-old daughter of a Dragoon Guards colonel, and Sir Winston met at a fashionable dinner party in 1908. He was a 34-year-old cabinet minister.

Churchill proposed soon after in the gardens of Blenheim Palace, his family's 16th-century estate. They wed on Sept. 12, 1908 at St. Margaret's church, London, within sight and sound of Big Ben.

"I married and lived happily ever after," Sir Winston recalled 22 years later in his autobiography.

Their marriage produced one son and four daughters; Randolph Churchill, a politician and writer who died in 1968, aged 57; Diana Churchill, twice-married, who died in 1963 from an overdose of sleeping pills; Sarah Churchill, an actress; Mary Churchill, who married prominent British politician Sir Christopher Soames, and Marigold Frances Churchill, who died at age 2.

$1 billion refund ordered

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Railroad Commission today ordered Coastal States Gas Corp. and two subsidiaries, including LoVaca Gathering Co., to refund more than $1 billion in extra natural gas charges over the past four years.

In addition to the refunds — which would go to such customers as Austin, San Antonio, Corpus Christi and the Lower Colorado River Authority — Coastal-LoVaca was ordered to live up to its original contracts.

Those contracts, many negotiated in the early 1960s, called for much lower prices for gas than Coastal-LoVaca's 400 customers are now paying.

The commission order was proposed by Jon Newton, and chairman Mack Wallace joined with him on the vote.

Commissioner Jim Langdon, going off the commission at the end of the month, dissented.

He urged the other two commissioners to delay a vote, predicting that the order would bankrupt LoVaca and cut off its service to customers.

He said an "almost horror show" could be projected in the social and economic life of South Texas.

Newton said Dallas and Fort Worth, as well as Austin, San Antonio and Corpus Christi, supported his position.

"No lights are going to go out" as a result of the order, he said.

Rangers check on shooting

Two Texas Rangers, Charlie Hodges of Midland and W.D. Vickers of Snyder questioned Sgt. Leroy Spires today in connection with the investigation of a shooting death Thursday night.

Juan Galaviz was shot when he apparently reached for his pocket instead of surrendering to the arresting officer, according to witnesses at a roadblock.

The arrest was made after Galaviz had attempted to abduct a woman outside the Hawk gymnasium, attacked her with a knife and stole her billfold and car, fleeing from officers in a wild chase.

'Now that are so few of us, anything can happen'

Ten American women prisoners fear harassment

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The 10 American women still held at the Los Reyes Womens' Prison following the weekend prisoner exchange say they fear harassment from other inmates now that they are so few.

"It's really scary," said one woman who asked not to be named because she fears reprisals.

"I'm scared to death," said another.

A third said prison officials told her not to talk to anyone "from the outside if you want to go home."

The women, interviewed at the prison, said there have been no outright threats since 27 other American women inmates left Friday and Saturday on chartered flights to San Diego along with 100 men from other Mexico City jail.

But the women said they feel unsafe now that the prison's foreign population has dropped to 10 Americans, one Canadian and two Britons.

"We felt before that no one would try anything because there were so many of us," one said. "But now that there are so few of us, anything can happen."

Some said they fear they'll be robbed of personal possessions, and one said she was afraid of being beaten "because I am prettier than a lot of them."

"We used to support a lot of them," one American said. "We had the money. Now that most are gone, this prison is going to go into a deep economic depression. We bought the food for many girls, and the clothes. I was helping support a woman who has 10 children."

There are still about 445 American men and women in Mexican jails. Some will be returned to the United States either later this month or early next year under the exchange treaty. Others are ineligible for return under terms of the prisoner swap. Most of the Americans were jailed on drug charges.

Peggy Pratt, 28, and Jane Rusk Monroe, 30, sisters from Houston, Tex., feel they'll be going home before Christmas. Both say they've "earned" their freedom through credits achieved by extra work in the prison during the past four years. They are serving six-year sentences for importing cocaine.

Joan Karen Beck, 27, of San Diego, thinks she's still got a long way to go. Jailed since July 2, 1975, Miss Beck says she has not yet been sentenced although Mexican law requires sentencing within one year. She says she was charged with importing drugs.

Some Americans are confident they'll be released soon because of a new government policy of deporting persons caught with small amounts of marijuana for personal use.

Curtis quits $48,000 job

Nice politicians don't win pennants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Kenneth M. Curtis is a nice guy with a lousy $48,000-a-year job. He's quitting.

Which may show that nice politicians don't win pennants, even when they work for presidents who preach the politics of loving kindness.

Curtis is pleasant, soft-spoken, open, a former governor of Maine and an early supporter of Jimmy Carter for the Democratic presidential nomination.

And so he was installed as chairman of the Democratic National Committee on the day after Carter's inauguration. That's the way it always works. The president is the boss of his party, and the national chairman is his man at headquarters.

On Friday, two months after telling Carter that he wasn't happy in his party post, Curtis announced that he's had it, although he said he would stay on to help find a successor and get him started.

It all sounded like a divorce made in heaven.

Curtis said Hamilton Jordan, the real heavy hitter in the White House political lineup, never evidenced any unhappiness about his management of the committee. Nor, he said, were there any complaints from Tim Kraft, the appointments secretary.

Curtis said those two, and the president himself, were his main contacts at the White House.

But it was no secret that Mark A. Siegel, a Jordan deputy and a former executive director of the Democratic National Committee, didn't think much of Curtis' performance.

Siegel was supposed to be a liaison man between the White House and party headquarters. "I was frankly never informed that he had a role," said Curtis.

Carter himself doesn't seem to have been very dismayed at the prospect of losing Curtis' services. Curtis told him about it on Oct. 13, and said he couldn't recall whether the president had asked why he was going to resign. Nor, by the chairman's account, did Carter try to dissuade him.

Curtis said the president remarked that the chairman seemed to have given his decision a lot of thought. "He said 'Do you think that you might reconsider?' and I said 'I doubt it.'"

That's hardly the message of a president interested in keeping a man on the job.

"Is this just a lousy job?" Curtis was asked Friday.

"That's one way you could put it," he said.

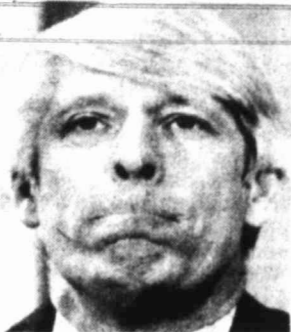

He said it wasn't much fun trying to meet the payroll in a bankrupt operation — the Democrats are still $2.5 million in the red — or answering to 364 bosses.

That includes the state politicians who make up the national committee and who had taken to complaining that they were not getting enough support or service from headquarters in preparation for the 1978 campaign. Curtis said that was for lack of money and added that he didn't think the dissatisfaction was very widespread.

Then there were the rest of the bosses — the real ones, at the White House. There are few more promising paths to obscurity than service as the national chairman of the president's party.

"The president is the political leader of our party," Curtis said. "I think in the final analysis it's the president who has to give direction to the party."

The job carries some clout when the White House is in opposition control. That's when people like Republican Ray C. Bliss and Democrats Robert S. Stauss and Lawrence F. O'Brien came on to take charge of parties in need of rebuilding.

Hellish marathon

'Black like me'

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — After 15 years, the hate letters — and the accompanying nightmares — still turn nights into a hellish marathon.

The last one nearly killed John Howard Griffin, who darkened his skin through medical treatments in 1959 and journeyed through the South as a black man, recording his thoughts in the classic "Black Like Me."

Griffin, who has lived quietly here for 11 years, awoke from the nightmare last Tuesday in the dark morning hours with "a devastating attack" from his beleaguered heart, chronically weak from a major attack last year and plagued by diabetes and a bone disease that has kept him in a wheelchair for several years.

The nightmare had not visited Griffin for many years. But the horror, triggered by the letter, returned — the dream of being overtaken and lynched by a mob.

Even though the threats, hate mail and chilled friendships had long since passed, the letter — "one of the most vicious I have ever received" — inexplicably had come.

"I guess those things are still too close to the surface," said Griffin, 57, in the plant-choked living room of his small brick home near the Texas Christian University campus.

Even more painful than the ravages of disease is Griffin's belief that the tentative "understanding" he witnessed between whites and blacks in the 1960s is sinking back into the swamp of prejudice.

"What we've got now is a turn-around," said Griffin in his thin, reedy voice. "And you don't know how incredibly disheartening that is to people who struggled so hard for civil rights."

Certainly blacks can eat at any restaurant and ride on any bus.

"But those physical things are not the most dangerous things," said the author, scholar, civil rights activist, theologian, photographer and lecturer. "It's the psychological damage that is so utterly killing. The soul-killing, energy-killing frustration is still there."

A tape recorder sits by Griffin's bed, the repository of thoughts for several works in progress. "There are weeks when I can do no work at all," he said with a helpless smile.

Life, he said, has become a contest of getting through each day without upsetting his heart.

It was in 1959 that Griffin left his wife and two children, had his skin darkened with the drug oxoralen, and for six weeks traveled through the South as a Negro.

"I went into it thinking it would be a highly educational experience, but I never thought it would be such a transforming experience," said Griffin, who says he never regretted the book despite the threats.

"I was living in a land where there were so many myths and racial stereotypes, it sinks into the blood. And I would never have gotten them out of my blood unless I lived them."

It was in the small town of Mansfield, Texas, where Griffin lived when he wrote the book, that an effigy, half-black, half-white with Griffin's name scrawled on it, was hung from a downtown signal light shortly after the first installments appeared.

A cross was also set afire near the home where his wife's mother still lives.

He said he moved to Mexico after the book's publication to escape ill will in the town, but returned to Mansfield to live for several years before moving to Fort Worth in the late 1960s.

Today, his feelings about Mansfield are tentative, melancholy ones. "It's very difficult to express," he said.

"I felt my presence there was a great embarrassment to a lot of people. Sometimes I go back just for dinner. Otherwise I don't go. I just feel that way, you know. All the people who were really friends of mine have pretty well died or moved away."

"I have no reason to go there anymore."

Winners named in contest

ACKERLY — A Christmas Door contest was held at Sands Schools, sponsored by the Future Farmers of America and the Future Homemakers.

The winning door, featuring a cowboy in the star-filled prairie, was prepared by the Junior Class, sponsored by Mrs. Carlene Gibbs.

Of the 26 entries, ten prizes were awarded. Others included 6th grade, second, Travis Mulonox; Freshmen, third, Charles Jones; 4th grade, fourth, Mrs. Gladys Fryar; Beta Club, fifth, Jack Cobb; FFA, sixth, Lon McDonald; seniors, 7th, Mrs. Kathy Blagrove and Mrs. Thelma Murphy; Migrant Class eighth, Mrs. Janis Cope; Title I, ninth, Mrs. Jane Phillips and Spanish Club, 10th, Mrs. Murphy.

CRMWD November sales up; so are expenses

More production, more revenue, more expense — this was the story of the operations of Colorado River Municipal Water District through November.

Billings for the 11-month period amounted to 18,796,729,000 gallons, up 1.02 billion gallons. Oil company and industrial sales dropped off slightly, but municipal sales were up 1.12 billion gallons. Bulk of the production, or 13.7 billion gallons, came from Lakes J.B. Thomas and E.V. Spence. Another 3.12 billion gallons came from district well fields, 1.5 billion from brine wells and diversion of unpotable water from streams feeding the lakes.

Revenues were up $854,986, due partly to rate adjustments to meet heavier debt service requirements. Revenues from municipalities amounted to $4,410,000, up $642,000, and payments by oil and industrial users amounted to $2,332,000, up $127,000. Recreational returns of $78,586, were up by $9,000, and miscellaneous revenues of $7,974 were down $1,000.

Operating expenses were $2,545,000 for the 11 months, up $413,000. This left $4,284,018 for transfer to debt service and other indebted funds, a gain of $441,000. Biggest factor in operating expenses was $1,336,863 for energy, or up $256,000. In general labor costs were higher, along with supplies. Administration and general labor costs were higher, along with supplies. Administration and general expenses of $364,781 were up $64,000, due in part to $11,000 more for employee retirement and benefits, $15,000 for salaries and wages, and $19,000 more for bond handling charges.

Crowds are big at museum

The Heritage Museum reported a successful graphic show and sale over the weekend.

Mrs. Gerri Atwell, curator, said the museum had a large crowd Sunday afternoon which poured through the museum after and before visiting the Potton House.

"Actually we had the most sales on Saturday," she added, "but it was a good weekend for us. We had a lot of people through the museum who had not visited it before and we also had a successful graphic sale with part of the profit going to the museum."

Santa planning Coahoma visit

COAHOMA — Santa Claus is coming to Coahoma at 7:30 p.m. Thursday and is due to arrive at City Hall in a firetruck.

Candy for the children and a chance to visit with Santa Claus will be featured at the event.

Four from here win top honors

Angie Fugham won first place in both persuasive speaking and informative speaking. Chris Smith was first in humorous speaking and Donny Knight and Hardy Wilkinson placed first in debate at the Sul Ross Big Bend Fall Forensic Tournament Saturday.

She and four others entered from Big Spring and they collected second in sweepstakes behind Midland Lee who took 26 team members to the event.

Joe Edwards placed second in dramatic presentation with Jan Whittington placing fifth.

Knight and Wilkinson placed first in Cross X debate and Wilkinson also had second in persuasive speaking with Knight placing fourth.

Angie was fourth in original oratory in addition to her two first places. Chris Smith and Edwards placed sixth in duet acting. Coach Janet Cook accompanied the team.

Wind pumps moist air over Texas

By the Associated Press

A southerly wind pumped moist gulf air over Texas during the night, producing cloudy skies and some light drizzle and fog.

Patches of dense fog cut visibility to less than one-half mile from the hill country to the Pecos River Valley, while skies were clear over the Panhandle and extreme southwest Texas.

Texas first and getting 'firster'

The State Comptroller's Office has put together an informative little booklet entitled, "Texas Means Business."

In a cover letter, Comptroller Bob Bullock says that the booklet is the result of a research report by his office which shows graphically that Texas is Number One among the states in both business climate, good job potential and the good life for all Texans.

The booklet begins with the now well-known 1975 Fantus Co. industrial relocation report which ranked Texas as the undisputed best of all 50 states in which to locate a business.

The reasons are many. The industrial relocation consulting firm noted that Texas has no personal income tax, which means workers get to keep a higher portion of their earnings than in most states.

The same is true of the corporate income tax.

ONLY NEW Hampshire citizens pay less state taxes than Texans. Texans each pay $273, against a U.S. average of $408 and Alaska's high of $1,494.

Texas also ranks very high in many other areas of state taxes with the nation's lowest gasoline tax, the lowest unemployment tax, and property taxes that are $50 below the national average.

Another amazing thing is that Texas ranks a clear first among the other fast-growing sunbelt states with which the Lone Star State is so often compared.

Maybe you knew all of that. If so, Bullock put in another section to his booklet just to bring some surprise cheer.

He predicts that Texas will remain Number One because of the state's fiscal responsibility. An example of this is the constitutional requirement that the state's revenues must always equal its debts, or a "pay as we go" basis.

Texas ranks 48th in per capita expenditures by state governments; yet, the services the Texas government offers would rank much higher.

GROWTH IS obviously a factor. The booklet says that at current growth rates, the state's economic output will double every 18 years.

Texas rank fifth in effective buying income, and its cost of living in urban areas ranks among the nation's lowest. For example, Austin has the lowest cost of living of major metropolitan areas in the U.S. Dallas ranks fourth lowest, and booming Houston is seventh.

If Texans continue to show both growth and fiscal restraint, Bullock obviously thinks the state will remain first and be getting "firster."

—J. TOM GRAHAM

Carter, Graham

Evans, Novak

WASHINGTON — An ecumenical link with political overtones between the powerful evangelical Christian movement and the American Jewish community has caused President Carter to seek guidance from the Rev. Billy Graham.

He privately sought out the nation's foremost evangelist because his administration's Mideast policy has angered not only Jews but Mr. Carter's hardcore base of born-again Christians. Asking advice from Dr. Graham after some reluctance, the President was counseled to go slow. The role thus played by Billy Graham stems from an interaction of religion and politics, directly affecting American foreign policy.

GRAHAM HAS been courted by leading Jewish activists for several years in a successful effort to bind Jews and Christian evangelists together as a new pro-Israel political force. Unifying 5 million American Jews and 50 million evangelicals (who include Jimmy Carter, a twice-born Christian) is the mutual, anti-Communist fear of Soviet influence in the Middle East.

Those in position to know are loath to talk specifics about what one insider calls the "growing communication" between the President and Billy Graham. This much is known: Mr. Carter has personally sought Graham's counsel on evangelical reactions to his Mideast policies, especially since the joint U.S.-Soviet Mideast statement of Oct. 1, which solved both the Jews and the evangelicals.

Graham's response was a clear word of warning, fortifying a cascade of angry criticisms from Jewish activists across the nation about bringing Moscow back into the Middle East equation. It is Graham's conviction that Mr. Carter dare not take his evangelical base for granted.

The slow building of the Jewish-evangelical coalition reached a climax Oct. 30 when Rabbi Marc H. Tanenbaum, the articulate, imaginative director of the American Jewish Committee's National Interreligious Affairs division, shared the stage with Graham in Atlanta. Graham was there as keynote speaker at the AJC's national executive council meeting.

DESCRIBED LATER by Tanenbaum as "a message intended for the White House," Graham's emotion-packed address attacked Palestinian terrorists and called for America's rededication to the existence and safety of Israel. Two weeks later, Tanenbaum notified all AJC area directors about Graham's speech, citing it as one more example of "deep and widespread (evangelical) support of Israel and opposition to PLO (Palestine Liberation Organization) terrorism."

"In view of public statements by some members of the Carter administration to 'bring leverage' one-sidedly on Israel and to 'baptize' the PLO as legitimate," Tanenbaum said, Graham's opposition to Palestinian "terrorism" was notable. It was also evidence of deep support for Israel "among the some 50 million evangelical Christians." This support assumed particular value since it comes from 'born-again' Christians who were the first power base of President Carter's candidacy.

What one year ago might have seemed an inevitable connection between Jimmy Carter and Billy Graham was in fact aborted by Mr. Carter's concern over Richard Nixon's courtship of Graham. The President felt that would make the evangelist suspect to liberals.

"Really, Jimmy, ol' pal... why (bah! humbug!) do they call us the 'ODD COUPLE?'"

Suppository not always good 'route'

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: When I was abroad, a doctor gave me a choice of taking medicine by suppositories or by injection. I chose the suppositories because it was cheaper. Why isn't this method used in the U.S.? A medical student told me that medicine by suppository gets into the system more quickly than if taken orally. Is this true? —J.E.

This depends on the kind of medicine, how much, and how soon you want it to be absorbed into the bloodstream. Rectal tissue is slower than other routes, as injection or by mouth. An enema can be an effective method. Medicine can be absorbed more readily higher in the intestinal tract than by suppository, and some medicine may be absorbed efficiently only higher up.

Medicine that cannot be given by injection and which upsets a patient's stomach if given by mouth can be given rectally. Some times it's a poor alternative. Aspirin, for example, is poorly absorbed by suppository.

No blanket statement can be made, like the one by your medical student friend. Suppositories would be cheaper if you are considering the cost of office visits needed for injections.

I doubt that esthetics have much to do with the matter, although it's generally agreed that oral or injection routes are less cumbersome besides being more reliable. I don't think there's any great difference of opinion over this matter from one side of the ocean to the other.

In some instances suppositories are preferred for infants because it's easier to administer medicine that way, also less upsetting to the stomach.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Every time my husband visits his doctor he has to have earwax removed. Is there anything he can do between visits to keep it from forming? —Mrs. W.J.

He can't. That is controlled by the glands (ceruminous) in the ear canals. Some people have more active glands than others.

Your husband may be able to help speed up the removal process between visits. A light mineral oil can be applied to keep the wax soft. The normal state of things is for this wax to sludge itself and drop out, often without a person realizing it. If wax hardens this may not happen and the ear drum can be blocked, resulting in diminished hearing.

A word about removal. Such liquids as the oil, or even water, should not be put into the ear if there is any sign of perforated ear drum because of the danger of infecting the middle ear (beyond the drum). If there is no perforation (which his doctor can confirm) your husband might try standing in a shower and cupping a hand so that warm water flows into the canal gently. This should be done before the wax hardens.

Besides that, keep in mind the "Thosteson" rule about the ears —

WASHINGTON — Just as he has dedicated 66 zesty years of living to the betterment of the American people, Hubert Humphrey is devoting the days of his cancer treatment to the medical benefit of mankind.

The undaunted "Happy Warrior" is quietly permitting cancer experts to use experimental therapy techniques on his incurable ailment.

The ultimate story of courage has gone modestly unmentioned by the Minnesotan and discreetly withheld from the public by his doctors.

Humphrey makes the rounds of public tribute, drawing tears and affectionate admiration with the trademarks of his career — ebullience, humor, optimism and courage.

But out of the public limelight the former vice president is quietly reporting to the National Cancer Institute to undergo uncomfortable and novel therapy.

AFTER REMOVAL of a cancerous bladder in October 1976, Humphrey could have opted for a plush VIP suite at Walter Reed Army Medical Center or Bethesda Naval Hospital and been spared anguish by shots of morphine and similar pain-killers.

Instead, Humphrey deliberately chose to become a sort of guinea pig for researchers at the National Cancer Institute. He was aware that his form of bladder cancer and how it spreads is far less understood than the more prevalent lung and prostate cancers.

The primary purpose of the doctors at the institute is assuredly to prolong Humphrey's life. But they can also study the course of bladder cancer in a living victim and how the disease responds to two innovative chemotherapy treatments. Both treatments are still highly experimental.

One requires the taking of an oral chemotherapy agent, Hexamethylmelamine. As a side effect, it causes fatigue, nausea and severe loss of appetite but Humphrey gamely reports for his treatments. The treatment has been more widely used in Europe than in the United States.

By an unusual coincidence, Humphrey once sponsored and helped get through the Senate an aid program to

"don't put anything in the ear smaller than your foot. No poking around with bobby pins, etc. For more people ear wax takes care of itself without tampering. Since your husband's doctor has not suggested self-removal, there may be a good reason such as an eardrum perforation. Ask him.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

allow Hexamethylmelamine to be tested in Egypt.

Humphrey also takes another experimental drug known in the laboratories as "5-FU." It must be injected directly into an artery and one researcher told us "it hurts." The unpleasant and painful treatment has rarely been used in cancer cases such as Humphrey's and one scientist predicted the data he is providing unquestionably will be useful in helping future victims of bladder cancer.

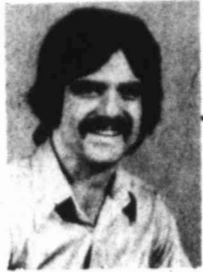

AT A DINNER in his honor recently, Humphrey made a fleeting reference to the physical toll the chemotherapy has taken. He mentioned having gone through 10 days of "intensive chemotherapy which has just about knocked me for a loop" but cheerfully added it helped him "get enough strength to be with you tonight."

Members of the institute research team working with Humphrey speak of his valiant fight in awe and poignant respect. Some compare his willingness to be a guinea pig to the tradition of Major Walter Reed's volunteers who allowed themselves to be infected with yellow fever to prove that the killer disease was carried by the anopheles mosquito.

"He's just a fighter," one worker said of Humphrey. "He's a fighter in every aspect of his character, even including this one."

COMPUTER SECURITY: The U.S. government is finally getting around to safeguarding its 10,000 computers which handle billions of dollars in federal funds.

A SENATE INVESTIGATION a year ago showed that there were no security precautions to prevent a criminal mastermind from getting access to the computers. The electronic brains blink out orders for Treasury payments to farmers, welfare and Social Security recipients, colleges and government projects of every description. The Senate probe found only the CIA and the Defense Department ran background checks on people hired as computer programmers. It was "open sesame" in every other department and agency.

Sharing blame

Around the rim

Danny Reagan

In our aquarium, we have an eel named "Squiggly." He's about four inches long, he has four black dots on the end of his tail and his nose comes to needle point at the end of a skinny head.

He's as rubbery as a piece of jello.

Every night, about 10:30, he darts back and forth across the bottom of the aquarium, banging his head against the sides of the glass, as if he was desperately trying to get out, not knowing that if he did, it would kill him.

I identify a lot with "Squiggly." He knows what he wants to do, but he doesn't have any idea that what he wants to do is impossible.

DID THAT TUG AT your heart strings a bit? If it did, then you're a sentimental slob. You should be reading "Dear Abby," not this. This is about my miserably cat "Buck," and I just said all that other garbage about the eel to get rid of Norman Mailer and his cronies. They always read my riffs, but they hate eels.

As a wedding present a year and a half ago, my wife wanted "a little white kitty." No one bothered to tell me at the time that he would grow to the size of a strapping Wolfhound, with the disposition of a half-starved tapeworm.

As parents, Pearl and I must share part of the blame. When he was a kitten, he discovered quickly how to manipulate us to do his bidding. One day, back then, when he was still cute, I accidentally stepped on his head in the dark.

He wasn't hurt or anything, except his right eye was ground into the carpet and he blinked it pitifully for days afterwards. And when ever he did, mommy or daddy would always pick him up, talk nice to him and feed him that expensive catfood as penance.

Boy, was that a mistake. After that, whenever he wanted something, like expensive catfood or our guilt, he would blink the eye. Just the other day, I walked into the kitchen to find him chowing down on some thawing chicken left out on the cabinet.

"Buck! You son of a (insert your favorite word here)! Get down from there!" I yelled. Immediately he rolled over on his side and started blinking the eye at 50 blinks per minute. I wanted to beat the (insert your second favorite word here) out of him.

NEEDLESS TO SAY, the old "blinking the eye" trick doesn't grease the pan anymore, and he knows it. We've tried everything to discipline him. One method that was effective for a short period of time was the tying of his tail around the trailer hitch of my car and dragging him around the Sonic parking lot 20 times at a very high rate of speed. But after it was over, all he did was look up at me as if to say, "Hey sucker, what was that? A merry-go-round?"

Another trick he learned early led to a pre-middle age pot belly, and a decline in his friends at the apartment complex. After he would eat his fill at home, he would go down to the Werrells, scratch on their door, blink his eye and run into the kitchen, flopping down in feigned starvation next to the canned goods.

Then, after he had eaten his fill there, he would go down to the Burtons, beat up their two cats, eat all their food and leave a note saying the cat next door did it. Slowly, everyone in the complex has gone from "My isn't that a beautiful, big white cat" to "Keep that (an assortment of favorite words) away from our food."

The only one who still falls prey to him is kind-hearted, purple-auraed Mrs. Miller next door. He's still got her fooled.

About the only thing he's good for anymore is an occasional rim. Sorry, I just have to let it all out from time to time.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I read an article recently about Christians in some countries who are persecuted for their faith. Do you think that might ever happen in this country? —P.I.

DEAR P.I.: It certainly is possible. I am very thankful for the freedom we have in this country for religious worship, and we should do all we can to preserve it. But the time could possibly come when Christians might not have their present situation and might even be persecuted. No one can say whether such a thing could happen in our lifetime, but we should all strive for enough strength in our Christian lives so that physical persecution would not defeat us if it did come.

You should remember that the Bible says, "yea, and all that will love godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution" (1 Timothy 3:12). We are engaged in a tremendous spiritual battle, and we should not be surprised if persecution does arise. "For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places" (Ephesians 6:12).

There are, however, different kinds of persecution. Physical persecution is the most obvious, but many Christians know the mental and spiritual strain of such things as scorn, ridicule, or even rejection by some who may be near to them. Such persecution may be more indirect, but it is also sometimes more dangerous because we are easily tempted to compromise.

Pray for those in the world who face harsh persecution. Pray also that you will grow in Christ. You do not know what the future holds, but you know it is God's will for you to "be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might" (Ephesians 6:10).

Dear Editor: On behalf of all the people in our service area, West Texas Blood Service wishes to thank you for your outstanding support of the community blood program during the past year.

Once again, we need your help during a critical season for area blood supplies. The period between Dec. 23, 1977 and Jan. 8, 1978 will be an especially difficult time for motivating people to donate blood. Like you and me, regular blood donors and bloodmobile sponsors get extra busy during the holidays. They forget that the need for blood is acute, and never takes a holiday.

My staff and I have planned a public information campaign to help carry us through this critical period. In advance, we're asking people to pledge to donate during this time interval. And during the most difficult period, we'll be reminding people about the need for blood and how a good donation fits in perfectly with the spirit of giving. To meet the needs of the 25 county-40 hospital area served, your assistance is sincerely needed.

Dear Editor: I am not a police officer, don't have any friends on the police force, nor am I a super-active supporter. I don't hesitate to criticize when I believe they are legitimately in the wrong. Yet, at the same time, I feel the need to present a point of view about recent police actions on a positive note.

I do not know the details about the two recent police shootings. From my knowledge of people, though, its reasonable to assume a reaction from some people attempting to link these incidents to racial prejudice or police brutality.

In the first instance, a man was arrested drunk in public. Had he not been creating trouble no complaint would have been filed and, most likely, he wouldn't have been arrested. However, he did show hostile, aggressive actions, was arrested, and being transported.

At this point, he drew a concealed weapon and attacked two armed men from behind. To disarm a knife fighter in the open, with room to maneuver, is difficult for anyone. Kung Fu fighter or not, defense from an attack from behind, in the close confines of a moving automobile, is all but impossible. Had the extra man not been in the car, quite likely (Sheriff) Royce Pruitt would have been dead by now. Why? Because one individual decided he did not want to go through the procedures of due process of law. The man attacked did not deny him due process; with his actions Tiburcio Santome refused the right to trial.

In the other instance, a woman was threatened with a weapon, assaulted with that weapon, injured. The man (and any individual old enough to intentionally physically endanger another person takes on the responsibilities of a man), then stole her vehicle and started riding around in it. As in the first case, his hostile aggressive actions are that drew attentions to him. On seeing police, he ran. A stupid thing, possibly the actions of a frightened person. But at any time, through the very last moment, he had the option to cease his hostile actions against others. His final action, when covered by a handgun, surrounded by police, commanded to stay still, was overly hostile — reaching for an unknown article in a swift, abrupt motion. He was not denied due process by the other people involved, nor because of his age or his race, nor because of police brutality; but in his own decisions and actions.

Any individual trained in the use of weapons learns above all to respect them. This is regardless of it being a gun, knife, baseball bat, a large rock, weapons not to be taken lightly, neither are they to be picked up without the intent of being used.

I ask you, the one reading this, as an individual. If you are approached in a hostile, aggressive manner by a person with a knife, gun or big rock, are you prepared to assume he's kidding? Or is it not much saner to assume that his intention is to kill, or even worse, cripple you?

New fringe benefit: Legal services

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

More and more Americans are getting a new fringe benefit with their jobs: legal advice.

Prepaid legal plans, similar in operation to health insurance programs, are growing in popularity and experts say they will continue to increase in the years ahead.

"It's inevitable," said Philip Murphy, a Santa Barbara, Calif., lawyer and the American Bar Association's expert on prepaid legal insurance. "The programs are designed to provide legal advice for middle-income Americans who cannot afford high lawyers' fees but have too much money to qualify for public defender services. The existing system, the "one-to-one approach," has not helped these people, Murphy said.

Murphy describes group legal insurance as "a plan in which there is payment in advance, by the individual or by someone in his behalf, for legal services that he may need or use in the future."

There are two types of group legal arrangements — those providing a minimum of service, such as advice and consultation, and those offering comprehensive and substantial benefits in both civil and criminal cases.

Murphy estimated that there are several thousand group legal arrangements, but only about 300 comprehensive, prepaid plans. These plans cover about 3 million people, including employees and their dependents. Participants include construction and auto workers, teamsters and public service workers.

Because most of the plans are relatively new — the oldest one still operating did not start until 1971 — there are no complete statistics available on legal insurance, who uses it and what it costs.

In an effort to get some specific figures, the American Prepaid Legal Services Institute, an arm of the ABA, is working on an actuarial study of major prepaid legal plans. Murphy said the results are expected early in 1978.

Murphy said about 90 percent of the plans are linked to labor unions and have been negotiated as part of collective bargaining agreements. Surveys have shown that about 15 or 20 per cent of those covered by the plans use some legal service during the year, Murphy said.

The amount of coverage provided, the type and the cost varies from plan to plan. Some include only "civil cases; others provide legal services in criminal cases as well. Some provide a specific dollar amount on the value of services that an individual can get in a year; others do not. And some allow a participant to pick his or her own lawyer while others restrict the choice to a selected panel.

Group legal plans not only provide people with services they otherwise could not afford, they also offer them access to a service they otherwise might not be able to find.

Murphy said that many people simply do not know how to go about finding and choosing a lawyer and added the legal profession itself has not worked out a way to help.

ALL IN THE FAMILY — Mark Goodman, 20, of Los Angeles, hugs his fiancée, 77-year-old Mrs. Ray Goodman in her London home Thursday night. The couple announced their plans to wed despite legal complications. Mrs. Goodman is the second wife of Mark's grandfather.

Not for money and sex is out

Youth will marry step-granny despite family's objections

LONDON (AP) — Twenty-year-old American Mark Goodman and his 77-year-old step-grandmother appeared determined today to go ahead with their wedding plans despite British law and family objections.

Their latest announced plan is to get married in California Jan. 25 — Mark's 21st birthday.

If that proves impossible — as it is in Britain where a man cannot marry his grandfather's widow even if there is no blood relationship with her — they will try to get married elsewhere in the United States or in Europe.

However, in Los Angeles the supervisor of the county clerk's marriage license bureau said such a marriage would be legal under California law because the couple are not related by blood.

British newspapers gave big space to the romance, and quoted Mrs. Ira Goodman, who uses the stage name Ray Goodman from her chorus girl days, as saying: "We will marry somehow — it's love."

Goodman, who proposed to his aged sweetheart Wednesday, told reporters who quizzed the pair about the difference in their ages: "To hell with what anyone thinks. We are going to be married."

Mrs. Goodman, who looks frail but still has distinct traces of the beauty she must have had as a girl, made one thing clear: "It won't be for money. I don't have any. And I don't expect to have a sexual married life. I look upon it as a pure relationship. I have not thought of the other."

"The other" is an English colloquial term for sexual intercourse.

Mark, whose parents live in Los Angeles, agreed that sex was out.

Mark's mother, Mrs. Selma Goodman, in a telephone conversation with a reporter in London, said: "The whole thing is ridiculous and stupid. I am shocked. He just wants to be mothered. He wants to marry me. We are very close. He cannot marry me so he is trying to marry his step-grandmother."

Mark, a handsome six-footer, lives with Mrs. Ray Goodman in Maida Vale in northwest London.

Their friendship blossomed when London-born Mrs. Goodman went in 1975 to Mark's parents' home in California after the death of her husband, Mark's grandfather. She had been his second wife.

Toy safety laws not always obeyed

Protect youngsters from dangerous toys

By EILEEN McGUIRE
Nothing delights a youngster more than waking up on Christmas morning to a new supply of playthings. But if those toys are not selected with care, your child's delight could soon become a family tragedy.

Each year, 5,000 new toys enter the marketplace. This Christmas, over 150,000 different kinds of toys are being sold in an estimated one million retail outlets, according to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission.

There are laws forbidding the sale of potentially dangerous toys such as rattles containing rigid wires, sharp points, or small loose objects that could become exposed, caps for toy guns with a noise level that could deafen a child, and "baby bouncers" and other infant apparatus that could cause injury to the infant.

Unfortunately, the laws are not always obeyed. Last year alone, 150,000 children and adults were treated in emergency rooms for toy-associated injuries.

The best way to protect a child from dangerous toys is to check out every new toy that you buy and examine all toys given to your child by others.

Read the label. Look for age recommendations, such as "Not recommended for children under four". Other safety labels will tell you whether the paint is non-toxic, the material flame-retardant or resistant, and whether stuffed dolls and animals are washable or made from hygienic materials.

Toys of brittle plastic or glass can be easily broken and become dangerous weapons in the hands of very young children.

For tiny tots, avoid toys with pieces small enough to be put into the mouth. Check squeakers on squeeze toys to make sure they can't come loose and make sure stuffed animals and dolls have well-constructed seams so as to prevent the young child from swallowing stuffing or pellets. If you want to buy your infant a stuffed animal, a smooth material is safer than one which might shed fuzz.

If you buy your child a capgun, make sure he obeys the following warning that the law requires be printed on the label: "Warning-Do not fire closer than one foot to the ear. Do not use indoors."

If Santa brings your little girl a doll or doll clothes for Christmas, check for pins and needles that may have been overlooked during manufacturing.

When you select toys, make sure they appeal to the age level and skills of the child and if he doesn't know how to use them properly, take the time to show him.

Be certain to discard any plastic wrap, a potentially deadly plaything, immediately. If you're the parent of an exploring toddler, it's probably a good idea to tie several knots in a large-size piece of plastic before you discard it.

With Christmas looming, it makes sense to inventory your child's present playthings. Weed out what he's outgrown or is no longer interested in, repair what safely can be and discard anything that can't. If the toy is still in good shape, you might consider passing it on to a child who would enjoy it. The local Foster Parents Association would welcome such a contribution.

While you're sorting through your child's toys, you may be surprised to find that he has mountains of toys but nothing to play with. If the toy is too advanced for him, put it away until he's of an age to appreciate it. If he's bored with some of the toys, you might consider putting them away for awhile and surprising him later with an entire box of "new" old toys.

Every single toy in the house should be examined periodically to insure that the toy is still safe.

Edges on wooden toys that might have become sharp or covered with splinters should be sanded smooth. If a toy or toy box needs repainting, use only paint that is labeled non-toxic. And don't forget outside toys. Examine for rust and weak or sharp parts that could be hazardous.

To prevent accidents, teach your children to put their toys away on shelves or in a toy chest when their finished playing with them.

If you're in the market for a toybox, buy one that has a lightweight lid that can be easily opened from within if the child should climb inside. For extra safety, be sure that there are ventilation holes for fresh air. Check for sharp edges and hinges that could pinch little fingers.

It's also a good idea to have children store outdoor toys away from damaging weather.

If you are considering buying an electrical toy for an older child this Christmas, be sure that he is mature enough to handle the product. A label that says "Not recommended for children under eight years of age" does not mean that every eight-year-old is mature enough to obey safety rules. Never give such a toy to a child beneath the recommended age level no matter how mature he is.

Make sure that the child knows how to operate electrical toys properly and that he is aware of possible dangers. Read the instructions with your child and stress safety rules. Use the toy with him the first couple of times and make sure he understands how it is to be used.

Use common sense about supervision. A 12 year old with an electric train may not need supervision, but an eight year old with an electric toy oven will need a great deal.

Make sure children know how to unplug outlets properly and that they come to you if they are having difficulty.

The older an electrical toy becomes, the more you should check it for frayed cords and damage to compartments that enclose wiring. Make sure all electrical toys are stored in a dry area and kept out of reach of younger children.

If a light bulb needs replacing on an electrical toy, only an adult or responsible older child should be permitted to do it.

Whatever you do, don't take chances with a child's life. You may have to pay a little more, but the quality of his playthings is much more important than the quantity. Make this a safe Christmas and then see to it that toys remain safe all year long.

Stockings shock some Eighteenth-century English moralists were continually shocked at the new women's fashions. Hoop skirts were bad enough, but white stockings were an outrage. This combination was an "indecent display of apparently bare limb," they screamed — from the Virginia Slims' Book of Days.

Abby's Christmas Gift Suggestions

DEAR READERS: Christmas will soon be here, so take a tip from me and do your Christmas shopping early. If you're wondering what to give Aunt Matilda or Great Grandpa, who don't get out much, let me tell you what NOT to give them: no dusting powder, after-shave or cologne. (They probably have several unopened boxes gathering dust on their closet shelves.)

Grandpa doesn't need another necktie, and Grandma doesn't really want any more brooches, necklaces or bracelets.

With the price of groceries up so high, folks who live alone on a fixed income would probably be delighted to receive a basket of assorted groceries. Include small cans of salmon, chicken, ham, tuna, vegetables, fruit, instant coffee, tea bags, crackers, cookies and instant soup mix. Old folks can always use lined stationery with envelopes and a generous supply of postage stamps. (And enclose some new felt-tip pens, too.)

Shut-ins would appreciate a box of greeting cards for all occasions so they can send birthday, anniversary, graduation, get-well and condolence cards to others. (And be a sport and stamp some envelopes.)

Don't give anyone a gift of clothing unless you're absolutely sure the size is right. And that goes for the color and style, too.

If you're tempted to pass along a scarf, purse, wallet or some useless little doodad you received for Christmas three years ago, please don't. It's a pretty fair bet the recipient will find it just as useless as you did. (Besides, YOU might get it back the year after next.)

If someone on your gift list is living on a pension, a check for any amount would be much more appreciated than a frivolous little trinket. Or give someone who's counting his pennies a year's subscription to the daily newspaper or to a magazine you know he'll enjoy.

Don't give anyone a pet unless you're absolutely sure he wants one and is able to care for it properly.

Don't give gifts of wine or liquor unless you're sure the recipients imbibe. Candy, nuts and fruitcake make wonderful gifts for those who aren't counting their calories, but have compassion for those who are, and lead them not into temptation.

Resist giving toddlers stuffed animals and dolls that are bigger than THEY are. And parents will thank you for not sending their children horns, drums, sirens or whistles. If you give a child a game or book, be sure it's in the right age range.

Instead of giving someone a gift with permission to "take it back and exchange it if it's not what you want," why not save yourself (and them) much time and effort by giving them a gift certificate in the first place.

If Santa brings your little girl a doll or doll clothes for Christmas, check for pins and needles that may have been overlooked during manufacturing.

When you select toys, make sure they appeal to the age level and skills of the child and if he doesn't know how to use them properly, take the time to show him.

Be certain to discard any plastic wrap, a potentially deadly plaything, immediately. If you're the parent of an exploring toddler, it's probably a good idea to tie several knots in a large-size piece of plastic before you discard it.

With Christmas looming, it makes sense to inventory your child's present playthings. Weed out what he's outgrown or is no longer interested in, repair what safely can be and discard anything that can't. If the toy is still in good shape, you might consider passing it on to a child who would enjoy it. The local Foster Parents Association would welcome such a contribution.

Legend still inspires

Sarah Bernhardt was a woman of great courage and determination. Overcoming horrible attacks of stage fright and, later, the amputation of her leg, she thrilled audiences around the world to become one of the greatest actresses of all time. Her motto was "In spite of everything." Her legend still lives today. — from the Virginia Slims' Book of Days.

Clubhouse

Members enjoy dinner, bridge

The 1970 Hyperions had their annual Progressive Christmas Dinner Dec. 6.

Members were treated to appetizers at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Hedges, then on to the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Latham for the main course. Dessert followed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Ivie.

After dinner, members enjoyed an evening of bridge.

The next meeting is slated for Jan. 5.

Flower slides presented

A Christmas coffee and meeting was attended by the Big Spring Garden Club Dec. 7 in the home of Mrs. J.C. Pickle with Mrs. Lucy Knox acting as co-hostess.

The program was a slide presentation of the beautiful flower gardens of Alabama. Shown were slides of poinsettias, begonias and geraniums which grow outdoors year-round in Alabama.

Each member of the club brought a door decoration for the V.A. Hospital and after the meeting, members took their donations to the hospital and hung them.

The club made plans to tour the Potton House during its Grand Opening yesterday.

Two guests were present at the meeting, Mrs. James Reba and Mrs. C.B. Parham, Sr., both from Grand Junction, Tenn.

The next meeting is scheduled for Jan. 4.

Local man is in hospital

Paul Davis, Route 1, owner of the A-OK Campgrounds, was transferred to the Veterans Administration Hospital today for treatment of a serious illness.

According to friends, Davis will be unable to return to Big Spring for the Christmas holidays, and those wishing to send him cards should do so in care of the VA Hospital in Dallas.

Ridin' fence

Perhaps a few words should be said about people who have to act as judges.

I was thinking about it Monday at the Glasscock County Pecan Show. There was Mrs. Jimmy Wheeler of Stanton helping Mrs. Kathryn Burch, county agent, by judging the baked goods at that show.

Now that sounds like lots of fun. There are long tables filled with glazed pecans, fudge with pecans, divinity with pecans, cookies with pecans, cakes with pecans, bread with pecans and pecan pies.

The judge tastes each one. At first they taste good. Soon they all begin to taste alike. Last year, Kathryn took along a bowl of frijole beans to eat in between pecan goodies.

This year, Mrs. Wheeler took a box of crackers. Eat one candy, then a bite of cracker, then a bite of candy, then a bite of cracker. She was very serious about the whole thing, trying to be fair; but she was getting a little grim about it.

I had to laugh to myself. Mrs. Wheeler is one of these civic minded people that get picked as judges. Bless her heart.

They often select people at the paper as judges and I was thinking about different things you get to judge.

At Halloween, Danny Reagan and I went to one of the local elementary schools to judge Halloween costumes. We were doing pretty good and agreeing with each other rather well, but it unnerved both of us, when a little boy that we failed to select, sat down right at our feet and began to cry.

Parades are lots of fun. Recent parades I've helped judge included the Coahoma Homecoming and the Old Settlers in Stanton. The choices are always difficult.

Salute to judges

with Marj Carpenter

MRS. JIMMY WHEELER, STANTON
.... With Kathryn Burch, county agent

I always want to give everybody a prize. I always kind of felt like eating crackers in between floats because I always got kind of sick trying to decide who ought to win.

Helping judge "Mess Coahoma" was funny. Thankfully it was all in good fun and I knew Charlie Murphy was kidding when he said, "How could you fail to pick me as winner?" You were kidding, weren't you Charlie?

Other fun things I've judged through the years have included debates, journalism contests, amateur shows, and beauty contests.

I remember an amateur show in Pecos called the Junior Sensations back in the early '60s. I insisted the best number was by a group of very musical Blacks headed by a girl named Josie Brooks. That was the year before civil rights and the year of the Freedom Rides coast to coast and I got a couple calls in the night over that decision.

I was afraid I was going to get a burning cross before it was over. But, in my opinion, that group of Blacks, headed by Josie Brooks was the best.

Judging, like refereeing baseball games at Little League or calling lines at tennis and volleyball matches, is really a thankless proposition.

But somebody has to do it, if we are determined to compete. So, hail to the volunteer judges, whoever you may be.

When I think of competition, I think of Mike Gordon who graduated at Andrews in 1969. Mike worked on hurdling from elementary school to graduation. He was good.

At regional meet in Odessa, he picked up a first place and made it to state meet. He was sitting down behind the official tent on the track looking into space and I stopped to talk to him.

I said, "You look mighty serious for somebody who has just won." And he said, "I was just thinking how dumb we are... running in a circle jumping over fences."

But as long as there are fences, somebody will jump. So here's to the judges of pecan shows and parades and beauty contests and masquerades. I salute you — while I'm out ridin' fence.

Sought in killings

Two escapees seized

PRICE, Utah (AP) — Two Oklahoma jail escapees await extradition back to Oklahoma today following their capture here Sunday after a hitchhiker heard a description of them on their own radio.

The two men were being sought in the killings of an Oklahoma sheriff's officer and a Kansas man.

Carbon County Sheriff Albert Passic said James Earl Lewis, 29, and David W. Richardson, 21, were captured after a Price couple was briefly held hostage.

More than 90 highway patrolmen were in the Price area, sent by the governor last week to quell disturbances during the coal strike.

Passic said Sunday night both men indicated they would waive extradition proceedings. He said they may be turned over to Oklahoma authorities today.

They escaped from a county jail in Wagoner, Okla., Nov. 24 and were the subjects of a ground and air search after the slayings Saturday.

Passic said the hitchhiker, Bryant Graham, who said he was from Texas, was picked up by the pair near Green River, 62 miles southeast of Price.

He said Graham heard over the radio a story about the search for the two men. They stopped the pickup and let him out, saying "You'd better get out of here."

Graham was let out near

Green River about 11 a.m. He contacted the highway patrol there and the vehicle's description was broadcast. Graham also reported seeing rifles in the car.

The two were sought after the bodies of Beaver County Undersheriff Kenny Miller, 50, and Danny Cambren of Liberal, Kan., were found beside a highway near the Kansas-Oklahoma border.

Exercise extreme care

'Tis' the season to be careful!

It's awfully easy to get so involved in shopping and in planning for seasonal festivities and all the happy, warm activities that go with the "Holiday Spirit," that we sometimes forget to "be careful."

In the home, be sure that Christmas lights are working properly, that insulation is not frayed or damaged and that you don't use a cord that has an apparent short (you know — you can wiggle it or twist it a certain way and the lights come on!) and be sure to turn lights off when unattended — like when you leave the house and before retiring for the night.

Be extra careful with candles — insuring that as they burn down the flame doesn't come into contact with decorative material or that pets and youngsters can accidentally knock them over. Keep the accumulation of wrapping paper under control when opening presents. You can imagine how quickly a flash fire can develop in a pile of wrappings from a cigarette or an open flame.

Of course, fireplaces are always a potential source of hazard. Be sure you use a screen and glass doors are even better to keep sparks from popping out onto the carpet or any flammable material outside the fireplace — never leave a fire unattended.

In the kitchen where we often have some extra help in baking and concocting various specialties at this time of the year we need to pay particular attention to turning pot handles away from the edge of the stove and be sure that all cooking is monitored and supervised.

And outside the home — There's always a tendency to hurry — particularly under pressure of many tasks — often left to the last minute. So let's review some traffic safety for the holidays. First rule — if you drink — get someone else to do the driving — that is someone who hasn't been drinking. Also, be sure to turn your car lights on early — before it gets dark — it's the "other guy" who needs to see your car) and use your turn signals. Texas law requires a driver to signal his turn at least 100 feet before the turn. And when you do turn — stay in the proper lane — Don't make a left turn into the right lane or a right turn into the left lane.

Have you noticed all the joggers and walkers early in the morning and after dark? Watch out for them and if you do walk or jog, be sure to wear some kind of light colored clothing so you can be more easily seen by a driver; also stay on the side facing oncoming traffic.

Drivers need to be on the watch for dogs and cats running loose. They sometimes create a driving Hazard — but the real culprit is the owner who lets the animal run unattended. It's inconsiderate as well as illegal. Courtesy goes a long way in helping to prevent accidents and consideration for others will help decrease the chances of an UN happy holiday.

So — 'Tis' the season, to be careful, considerate and courteous and to use an extra measure of Hustle! Hustle! Hustle!

Christmas road death toll could be high

AUSTIN — Colonel Wilson E. Speir, director of the Texas Department of Public Safety, has estimated that traffic accidents in Texas during the combined Christmas and New Year weekends will claim 71 lives.

He noted, however, that some of the deaths could be prevented if motorists would drive carefully and participate in the state's "Light the Way for a Safe Holiday" program.

Speir said 41 deaths are likely to occur in the Christmas period from 6 p.m. Friday, Dec. 23, through midnight Monday, Dec. 26.

Another 30 traffic fatalities are estimated for the New Year holiday which extends from 6 p.m. Friday, December 30, through midnight Monday, January 2, 1978.

The "Light the Way for a Safe Holiday" program calls on all motorists in Texas to drive with their low-beam headlights turned on in the daytime, as well as night, during the Christmas and New Year weekends.

"We feel this 'Light the Way' program, particularly with widespread participation on the part of drivers, will serve as a very meaningful reminder to others to drive safely," Speir said.

The DPS director observed that traffic deaths in Texas are currently running about 11 per cent over 1976, with much of this increase caused by the fact that three out of four motorists are violating the 55 miles speed limit.

Hook 'em Darrell

I'm not sure just how newsworthy this is. It may be a scoop, I don't know. I just maybe trying to fool Monday. But since the University of Texas is currently rated number one in the nation, and anything burnt orange is popular, here goes.

My favorite spotter and myself had just finished trimming our Christmas tree Saturday night, after the latter had returned from a hard evening at the office.

Ironically, I had just said to Pearl: "Sunday's paper doesn't have enough about the University of Texas. AP just didn't send much. Keep the phone off the hook."

So there we were — sitting on the sofa, drinking eggnog from our Texas Tech mugs, trying to get rid of the "Saturday Night, just got in from work, why'd there have to be a Sunday paper, wish I felt like Boogie Woogie" blues.

Were we bored? Can Dolly Parton breathe well? And then, just like Santa Claus bringing a train set, we heard Don Pardo announce on TV that Willie Nelson was going to be on "Saturday Night Live."

So, we watched the show, and slowly, the sports-saturated brain began to lose its numbness and start to flow with the holiday spirit. I'm not sure, but the eggnog might have helped just a little.

Willie was good. He was the best thing in what was an otherwise uncharacteristically slow show. At the end of the program, everyone was milling about on the stage, shaking hands and shooting the breeze as the credits rolled across the screen.

"Look!" I yelled to Pearl. "You know who that looks like?"

She looked up with interest and said "Who?" "Darrell Royal!" I shouted, incredulously. Pearl immediately lost interest and went back to rescuing the lower ornaments on the tree from our cat.

"I don't believe it," I said, more to myself than to anyone else. And then, as if in slow motion, the guy who looked like Royal turned towards the camera. With an elfish grin, he raised his hand up and shot a "Hook 'em horns" sign at the national television audience. There was no mistaking it then. It was him.

Darrell Royal on "Saturday Night Live!" For the first time in my life, I liked the guy. I think I'll yell for the Horns to defeat the Irish in the Cotton Bowl, now.

ON A COLLISION COURSE — Roger Staubach, left, of the Dallas Cowboys, and Ken Stabler, of the Oakland Raiders, are the quarterbacks for the two teams headed on a collision course toward football's Super bowl. As different as night and day, the two quarterbacks reflect the images of the men who pull the strings behind the curtains on their teams.

Oilers win 'bleepball'

CLEVELAND (AP) — Houston Coach Bum Phillips called it "miserable" and quarterback Dan Pastorini called it "bleepball," but the Oilers ignored the frigid Ohio weather long enough to beat the Cleveland Browns 19-15 Sunday in a ragged National Football League game.

With huge piles of snow surrounding the frozen field, the Browns outgained the Oilers 400-167. But they continually blunted their own attack by losing four of six fumbles and throwing four interceptions.

"This wasn't football," explained Houston cornerback Willie Alexander. "It was survival. The team that survived won the football game. Late in the second half, I thought my toes would freeze off."

"I would call this kind of a game bleepball," said Pastorini, who threw just 12 times in the game. "Screens and straight ahead, that's the only way to play in weather like this."

Phillips added, "I only saw Sands' 5's win third tournament"

STERLING CITY — The two explosive varsity football clubs from Sands High School each won their third tournament of the 1977 season over the weekend.

The Mustang boys (16-0) edged host club Sterling City, 52-47, Saturday night in the championship game.

The Mustang girls (17-1) had little trouble in their championship encounter, blasting Sterling City 83-40.

The Fillies advanced to the finals with a second-round 54-36 win over Clint. Floyd scored 32 in that game, and Susan Martin was good for 20.

Both teams travel to Jayton Tuesday for games beginning at 5 p.m.

49ers may try to stop Tony

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry thinks he knows what the San Francisco 49ers will be trying to do tonight in their nationally televised National Football League contest.

"They'll figure with Roger (Staubach) not throwing as well as he normally does, that if they can stop (Tony) Dorsett, then they can have a chance to win the game," says Landry. "That would be my plan against us."

Rookie running back Dorsett is coming off a 206-yard performance last week against Philadelphia, while quarterback Staubach has been in a mild slump since injuring his hip and right thumb several weeks ago.

The 49ers, stumbling through a 5-7 season, could be forgiven if they have bad memories stemming from a game last week and one five years ago against Dallas.

A week ago, the 49ers were coasting along with a 24-7 lead over Minnesota going into the fourth quarter, only to lose 28-27 as rookie quarterback Tommy

Girls win first game

LEVELLAND — The Big Spring Steer girls' basketball team won its first game of the season this past weekend in the Levelland tournament.

The local teams opened with a 71-55 loss to Levelland, as Rose Magers (19), Sherry Byrd (18) and Salina Harris (16) led the Steers. With Magers hitting 22, Big Spring almost beat tough Lubbock High, but fell, 48-46. Byrd (14), Harris (8) and Susie Hernandez (2) were other local scorers.

In the third place game, Big Spring beat Lubbock Dunbar, 84-64, on the strength of Magers' 30 points. Byrd also hit 28. Harris was good for 20 and Hernandez sunk six.

Steer JV's take third in tourney

MIDLAND — The Big Spring Steer junior varsity basketball squad upped its season record to 8-3, after winning two out of three games in the Midland Junior Varsity Tournament held this past weekend.

The Shortorns opened with a 78-66 shellacking of the Midland Sophomores. Five locals hit in double figures: Danny Crosby (18), Luis Rodriguez (17), James Magers (13), Robert Lara (10) and Tony Rubio (10).

Big Spring dropped the second contest to the Midland JV's, 74-59. Crosby was again high-pointer with 16. Billy Johnson and Lara each hit 10.

A weird twist opened the third place game with the Midland Lee JV. The Rebs' manager entered the names and numbers wrong in the official scorebook and Big Spring's Luis Rodriguez sunk nine out of 10 free throws on the ensuing 10 technical fouls, before the game even started.

Big Spring won that contest 67-60, as Crosby sunk 22 markers, Magers hit 20 and Rodriguez finished with 15. Crosby was also named Most Valuable Player in the tournament, an honor heightened by the fact that he was on the third-place team.

The JV's will be in action again tonight, as will the varsity, in Lamesa.

High School classic hosted at Hawk Gym

Howard College of Big Spring is hosting the First Annual Hawk Queens High School Classic basketball tournament involving AAAA and AAA girls' teams.

Big Spring, Odessa, Midland Lee, San Angelo Central, Midland, Odessa Permian, Snyder and Ft. Stockton are all included in the field which begins play this Thursday (Dec. 15), in Hawk Gym.

Midland Lee and Odessa open the competition at 4 p.m., followed by Ft. Stockton vs San Angelo at 5:30; Midland vs Permian at 7 p.m.; and Snyder vs Big Spring at 8:30.

The championship game will be held 8:30 Saturday night, and an awards ceremony will follow immediately after the last game.

Second round games in championship and consolation brackets will be held Friday.

Hawk Queens beat tough SPC

LEVELLAND — "We're for real," said Hawk Queen Coach Don Stevens late Saturday night. "There's no doubt about that now."

Stevens was referring to his charges' 68-59 victory over the South Plains fems — supposedly the toughest team in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference. The first conference game for both teams was an exciting one. The Queens led a 14-point lead with 11 minutes to go in the contest, when the hosting SPC five went into a full-court press, causing Queen turnovers.

With five minutes to play, HC only had a one-point lead, 52-51. "I'm really proud of our team," said Stevens. "They could've collapsed, but they rallied and put them (SPC) away."

Stevens especially wanted to mention the efforts of Letha Strickland, Tami Edwards and Paula St.

Julian Strickland came in off the bench and hit five straight jump shots in the second half at a crucial time. She finished with 12 points.

Edwards and St. Julian completely dominated the backboards, for 15 and 14 rebounds, respectively. "That was one of the major keys in the game," said Stevens.

Another key was the fact that the Queens hit 18 of 23 free throws.

The loss was only the fourth for South Plains — a squad that had given up national teams Panola and Temple fits before losing to them.

The win upped HC's record to 11-1. Other team members hitting in double figure besides Strickland were Edwards (18), Jan Phillips (12), St. Julian (10) and Sherrie Coalsion (10). Brenda Ward and Donnette Marble had 14 each for SPC.

"This game was a big step for us," said Stevens. "We're tickled to death, and will be grinning all the way home."

History made in NFL, Tampa Bay wins first game

By the Associated Press
Undoubtedly, Archie Manning has learned to keep his mouth shut.

The Tampa Bay Buccaneers only wish there were more outspoken players like him in the National Football League.

Manning, the veteran quarterback of the New Orleans Saints, infuriated the hapless Bucs last week by saying that it would be disgraceful to lose to Tampa Bay.

The downtrodden expansion team, which had lost 26 consecutive games since joining the NFL last season, made Manning regret his comments Sunday.

Rising to the greatest heights in their brief history, the aroused Bucs physically blasted the Saints 33-14, then verbally tormented Manning.

"It's disgraceful! It's disgraceful!" the Tampa players jeered at Manning as the clock ticked toward the Bucs' first precious victory.

"We just read the article to them where Archie said it would be disgraceful to lose to Tampa Bay," relieved Coach John McKay said with a smile in the joyous Bucs' dressing room. "Whatever Archie Manning said, I agree with him. He said it would be a disgrace to lose, and it is."

"Archie must have been looking at our offense," McKay added. "Our defense has never been disgraceful."

Tampa Bay had scored only 53 points in 12 games before Sunday. Against the Saints, their defense was outstanding. The Bucs intercepted six New Orleans passes and scored on three of them, with Mike Washington, Richard Wood and Greg Johnson getting the TDs.

"If we can get some more guys to make statements like that..." McKay said. "While the Bucs were reveling in their first victory, the Oakland Raiders, last season's Super Bowl champions, also were celebrating. The Raiders clinched the American Football Conference wild card playoff berth with a 35-13 victory over the Minnesota Vikings, their victims in last January's Super Saturday, the Cincinnati Bengals beat the Pittsburgh Steelers 17-10 and the Washington Redskins defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 26-20.

increased their record to 12-1 — the best in the NFL — by overcoming San Diego on Jim Turner's 36-yard field goal and Rick Upchurch's 19-yard scoring run in the fourth quarter.

Bears 21, Packers 10
The running of Walter Payton and the pass catching of James Scott keyed Chicago's victory over Green Bay, the fifth straight triumph for the Bears. Payton, the NFL rushing leader, ran for 163 yards and two touchdowns and returned two kickoffs for 95 yards. He needs 199 yards rushing in the final game against the Giants to break O.J. Simpson's single-season record of 2,003 yards.

Patriots 14, Dolphins 10
New England's victory over Miami, coupled with Detroit's upset over Baltimore, threw the AFC East race into a three-way tie for first place among the Patriots, Dolphins and Colts, each with 9-4 records. A Baltimore victory over New England Sunday would make the Colts division champions. If the Patriots win and Miami wins, the Dolphins would be champions. And if New England wins and Miami loses, the Patriots would be alone at the top.

Fundamentally, Hogs are making progress

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP) — The Arkansas Razorbacks concluded three days of fundamental work with a grueling 2½ hour practice Sunday, and football coach Lou Holtz was impressed with his team's progress.

"So far we've just tried to get better fundamentally. We've made good progress. We've had three good, hard days," Holtz said.

The Razorbacks haven't yet worked against the offensive and defensive sets of their Orange Bowl opponent, Oklahoma. Holtz said they will begin work against Oklahoma next weekend.

He said the team will take a break for finals, then practice Friday or Saturday.

"It's important we retain what we've accomplished in these three days, and bounce back strong next weekend. We'll need some good work in the four or five days before we send them home for Christmas."

Holtz was pleased with defensive tackles Dan Hampton and Jim Elliott in Sunday's drills and overall thought the team's attitude has been outstanding.

"I can't say enough about how our players have worked and worked and worked," he said.

Underdog Plano still in it

By the Associated Press
Underdog Plano hopes to carry its almost-fictional Cinderella story through the final week of the Texas schoolboy football playoffs Saturday in the Class 4A championship game against rugged Port Neches-Groves.

Plano has yet to be favored but has advanced week after week over such talent as Conroe, Highland Park and Odessa Permian.

The Wildcats weren't even favored in their own district. Sherman was the favorite. The two teams tied and Plano advanced to the playoffs because of a mixup by officials on penetrations.

Port Neches-Groves has been highly ranked all year. The South Texans were knocked off in 1976 in the semifinals by eventual champion San Antonio Churchill.

Plano and Port Neches-Groves will collide at 2:30 p.m. in Texas Stadium.

The other championship games match Wylie against Bellville in Class 2A at 2 p.m. in Waco Stadium and

Fire delays VFD banquet

COLORADO CITY - The volunteer firemen had to delay their annual fireman's banquet due to a fire.

A grass fire on the Forrest Ranch southwest of Iatan was called in at 6:40 p.m. the banquet was due to begin at 7:30 p.m.

Other guests at the banquet had already eaten dinner when the firemen arrived at 8:30 p.m.

During the event, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Henderson and Red Ballard were recognized. They are two retired firemen.

Jack Green was named fireman of the year with DeWayne McGuire, last year's recipient, making the presentation.
