Inflation Will Sap Defense

No economic expert believes the inflation threat is ended in this country. On the contrary, the feeling is widespread that as defense orders swell in the months ahead the inflation spiral will soar to new heights.

The evidence pointing that way is available to all. including every member of Congress. No important economic factors lead in the opposite direction.

Yet in the face of this evidence, what is Congress doing or planning to do to curb inflation?

President Truman asked for a minimum of $10,000, 000,000 in new taxes, partly to put the defense program on a pay-as-you-go basis and partly as an anti-inflation weapon. Reports emerging from the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee indicate he'll be fortunate to get a bill calling for a half or two-thirds of that sum.

It's well known that the existing farm parity price law is one of the biggest bars to adequate control of the price structure. But again, sounds emanating from Capitol Hill make it plain little will be done to clamp a tight ceiling on food prices.

Government spending is a topic dear to the hearts of many lawmakers. Some of them have been harping on it almost two decades. But the trouble is they never do anything about it except talk. The economists agree that here, again, is a field where inflation could be affected through reduction of outlays.

Congress each year plays a little game in the name of economy. The House Appropriations Committee reports

Should a new inflation gnaw away at the hard substance of our defense, the thoughts of the American people well may go back to the casual attitude their lawmakers exhibited in this Spring of 1951, while there was still a chance to do something about it.

IF Lucilla had met a friend, or even a friendly enemy, on the street that afternoon after leaving Charlotte, and been asked, "Where are you headed for?" she would have said, "Bohwit Teller," without batting an eye. As it happened, she met no one.

And if by an amusing coincidence she happened to pass the Beautiful-You School in the block above Bonwit's, there was no earthly reason why she shouldn't glance at the lavish poster display around the entrance. Merely of friendly curiosity, of course.

The first set of before and afte photographs was in the glass display case beside the door. Before -she's drab! - after - she's daz-zling! The blown-up snapshot accompanying she's drab! was of a dumpy, smiling little woman whom the caption described with cheerful candor as: "Mrs. Beppinger, a dowdy suburban matron who even looked suburban." The after creature was a tall, pinch-nostrilled young woman with high, sculp-tured hairdo, wearing a white-sheathed dinner dress. Anybody with a head for figures would almost have sworn that Mrs. Bep-pinger, no matter how done over couldn't have grown so tall, and must be on stilts under the white

IT began to sound solider and sol ider. By now, Lucilla had been drawn into a corridor, like the corridor of any small office building, except that it was delicately per fumed. Yet the very largeness of the figure made one realize this was no fly-by-night, send-$3-in-check-or-money-order scheme. And there was no such sleazy postscript as "If Not Satis fied in Thirty Days, Return Your Body and Money Will Be Refunded." No, it was a cut-and-dried business proposition, stating, by inference, that if one wanted such highly negotiable, gold-edged securities as Health, Beauty and Happiness, one would do well to pay for them. - The elevator nearest her whirred and the door slid open. Lucilla stepped back, feeling as if she'd been caught naked, until astonishment at the vision emerging from the elevator blotted out everything else. If anyone had been caught rather naked, it was the new comer, yet she couldn't have looked calmer. Lucilla was silent, digesting this. "My name is Miss Willit, if you'd like to ask for me."

"Miss Willit," Lucilla repeated

"How did you happen to hear of us?" Miss Willit asked genteelly Put on the defensive, and need ing references to establish herself Lucilla glommed onto Clarice Miraculously, she even remem-bered Clarice's last name—Tompkitts.

The girl first looked blank, then radiated pleasure. She clasped her hands between the protruberant portions of her satin panty-waist and exclaimed, "Oh, Miss Tompkitts! She was one of my star pu pils. I got an announcement of her wedding, and the dearest photograph of her and her husband." Lucilla felt the necessity of roving she too was in touch. "He's big oil man.' Miss Willit beamed "Im so glad Miss Tompkitts worked so hard in Body Molding. She got one of the top prizes at graduation for the Javanese Beauty Walk." Her listener was impressed

"She used to walk like a cr-uhsort of sideways."
"You're telling me," Miss Willit muttered. Then she laughed mu-sically. "Well, we all of us have our little faults, don't we?"

Going home was an anti-climax In the foyer of the apartment she stopped to glance at the telephone pad, which was blank unless Gretel had used invisible ink, an act Lucilla wouldn't have put past her. "No messages for me?" she With her short curly hair and called, bending to scratch Sniffles, young, sweetly wholesome face, the sad-eared spaniel, under his the effect was a startling blend of chin, Gretel came out of the kitchquate cook, an overadequate housekeeper, and Hoopy, for some affling reason, adored her. Hoopy, said Gretel, had been invited to spend the afternoon at a schoolmate's.

GRETEL followed Lucilla into the bedroom to complain. "Everybody in the school's got telvvishun except poor Hoopy, and it's got so she don't hardly come home at all," the implication being that if the Webbs cared for their child, and for the sanctity of the vishun. She forebore saying that she herself would be happy to sit indoors and watch prize fights and roller derbies seven days a week. Lucilla, who had spent an exhaust ingly emotional day being a widow, grandmother, schoolmate, potential beauty, and finally a mere housewife, cut Gretel off with, "I'll be in the tub, if anyone wants me. "Not that you've told me what we'll be having for dinner," Gretel said darkly. Lucilla was shocked. or at least felt she ought to be shocked, by her remissness. Goading herself, she managed to suggest salmon loaf. Gretel listened, then announced she'd already bought veal for wiener schnitzel

'Mr. Webb likes wiener schnitzel." Lucilla was so annoyed she said, "Even Mr. Webb might get sick of it." This was a dig at nationalist pride, and at Gretel's best dish,

When Gretel was mad, her face didn't flush, but only looked flatter and more doughy, ready to be crimped around the edges and stuck in a hot fire. Lucilla said hurriedly, "How nice the furniture looks! Did you just polish it?" It was a pointless question, in that no such sop ever appeased Gretel, and besides, the whole place

HERE'S PROOF!

"More Miles for Tomorrow in the Used Nash of Today!" Mr. W. C. Voss, 2715 Roosevelt St., Midland, says: "I bought a used 1950 Nash Statesman from Ace Motors. The car far exceeds my expectations, and is better than it was represented to me. I have owned several cars of other makes, but none have had the driving and riding qualities, or the roominess that my Nash has. My car has 38,000 miles, averages town and road driving 21 miles to the gallon, and NO oil consumption."

Plastic Surfaces Are Good For Living Room Furniture

Easier living is invited by new mar-proof furniture surfaces. Young woman (left), in midst of hand care routine, has no fear spilled lemon juice will damage table top of plastic laminate which combines fabric, wood and paper for textured effect. CLEVELAND —(P)— Hey Pop. you knew this long ago: Babies don't sleep as much as science once

But they probably snooze a lot nore than some mothers would be willing to admit, declare Physiologists Nathaniel Kleitman and Theodore G. Engelmann, of the University of Chicago.

Reporting on "the first conclusive study ever made," of the hours Junior spends in dreamland, the scientists came up with this tally

Four-week-olds get about 15 hours sleep in every 24—more than half of it at night. Some previous surveys have rated snoozability at that age as high as 20 hours.

Other findings, based on a study of 19 infants, 10 of them boys: 1. The hours from one to three a.m. are most likely to find all babies asleep; and between 6 and 8 p.m. they're probably awake.

Crying Spells Vary 2. Crying spells vary in number. Some kids howl as often as twice a night; others have only one crying spell every 10 nights.

Night sleep steadily increases, until at six months, day sleeping is less than a third that of the night run Some kids do the 24-hour course on as little as 14 hours sleep. Boys and girls differ little in length of sleeping time, but boys tend to eat more often Giving a baby pureed meat does not affect his sleeping habits nor does it make a child cry more at night than babies fed a meatless diet.

The doctors made it clear that they themselves did not picket the nurseries constantly. They got some of their information by attaching a recording device to the mattresses of babies' cribs. Their survey was unveiled before the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology.

Oh yes, about diaper changings. . Driest babies, five changes: wettest, 11; average, eight and one-
