City Shakeup Looms—

 department of Public Safety last year and the appointment of Colonel Plavie 10 months ago to head it. "The administration of both departments," said the city manager, "was not what people should be getting out of it."
 He said the elimination of both the fire chief and police chief positions had been considered at one time with the idea of putting both under the director of public safety. "But both men," he said, "had capabilities we wanted to continue using."
 He added there is even a trend now toward using the same personnel in both jobs.
 "He said he knew nothing about the reported low morale of the police force."
Some Friction Down There
 "Let me suggest I have the opportunity to look into this thing in detail," Oswald said.
 "Then we can resume our discussions."
 The city manager not only talked with Colonel Plavie, Ellington and Walker Thursday night, but he also called in several police officers for questioning.
 There followed the special meeting Friday morning of the council in his office.
 He reported he had questioned the three principals along with several men and had found "there is some friction down there."
 "It seems," he said, "that the colonel is not very popular with the men and that Ellington is popular."
 The director and the two chiefs then were called in separately before the full council for questioning.
 Ellington said the trouble first became noticeable about six months ago.
 "I tried to do everything I could to work it out with the men," he said, "but it has not been possible."

 at least contact the state's Board of Water Engineers and the Ground Water Division of the U. S. Geological Service.
 He said he had been told they had a "wealth of information" concerning the water situation in West Texas.
 "The information they have," said the city manager, "is very spotty."
 "We at least ought to get what information they have," said Pickett.
 "Well, we've gotten some information and it is only of a general nature," replied Oswald.
 Oswald said the information the Austin office has is based on logs furnished by oil companies in this area. He added that the West Texas Geological Society now has a committee assembling the same kind of data for the city.
Deer Still Open
 The city manager, in answer to questions about the fall of the water table at Cloverdale and Rosedale, said "very spotty records had been kept on the effect of pumping" at these two waterfields used by the city.
 Pickett then suggested that the city should study the possibility of going into the Colorado River Municipal Water District for its water supply.
 "Well," answered Oswald, "the door is still open to us."
 He then reviewed briefly the history of the district, which already has launched a program for constructing a dam in Scurry County to impound waters of the Colorado River.
 This water, he said, will not be available for about five years. In the meantime, the district already has contracted for water rights in Martin County and ground water will be used until the surface supply can be developed.
 In joining the district, Midland would retain its own distribution system but purchase its water supply from the district.
 The city also would have to construct a treatment plant for the water at an estimated cost of $500,000.
 Oswald said the engineering firm of Forrest and Cootan had submitted a report on the district as it would affect Midland.
 The council agreed to devote its meeting next Thursday to a detailed study and discussion of this report.

Clear Skies—

 The bureau's rainfall reports, for the 24 hours ended at 6:30 a. m., included Wichita Falls 3.61 inches, Lubbock 1.89, Amarillo .84 and Big Spring .82. Skies were clear to partly cloudy—with the clouds rising and thinning—in the Panhandle, upper Pecos Valley and in West Texas.
 At Plainview, flood waters from Running Water Draw fell about four inches during the night. There still was water in some houses in a residential section about 12 blocks long and varying from a few hundred feet to three-fourths of a mile wide. Most of the homes in this area are modest, renter-occupied dwellings.
Highways Still Closed
 Of the estimated 25 families homeless at Plainview, all were able to find shelter with relatives or friends. An earlier report that the Red Cross had declared the city a disaster area was erroneous.
 Several highways in the Panhandle still were closed. The Amarillo Globe-News said these included U. S. Highway 60 from Pampa to Panhandle; State Highway 152 west and east of Pampa; Highway 117 between Panhandle and Borger; Highway 70 south of Pampa. The Amarillo-Fort Worth highway (No. 297) was opened Friday morning.
 Panhandle and Plains cattle ranges, burned by months of severe drought, began to blossom. A bit of drying weather will put the ground in fine shape for planting row crops in the abandoned wheat fields. South Plains cotton prospects got a tremendous boost.
 The sun was beginning to break through leaden skies over Wichita Falls. Despite the heavy rain there, and 4.64 inches at Vernon to the west, highways were open, most buses on schedule, and little damage anticipated. The Red River was up about three feet.
Rail Lines Damaged
 The Katy Railroad reported two spans of its bridge south of Carter, Okla., over the north fork of the Red River, were washed out. A few scattered thundershowers still were expected in the Panhandle, South Plains and east of the Pecos Valley through Friday night.
 There was no mention of rain in the forecast for those areas Saturday.
 The deluges left considerable damage in the Panhandle and South Plains. The Santa Fe's main line tracks near White Deer were under four inches of water Thursday night. The small town of Alarred in Gray County was cut off from power after power poles went down in the flood. Emergency power equipment was moved in.
 New rain and spectacular electrical storms swept along the Caprock area and beyond—around Meador, Dickens, Snyder, Sweetwater and toward Big Spring—as the storm moved southward.
 Total rainfall at Plainview during the recent downpours totaled 8.28 inches.

VFW SPEAKER—J. T. Rutherford, Odessa, Texas, department commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, will be one of the principal speakers at the annual two-day encampment of District 26 opening Saturday in McCamey.

 Red commanders had a pool of 1,141,000 available troops in Korea and Manchuria, the UN command said. And they were reckless in the way they spent them.
 Van Fleet confident
 The great Red assault is doomed to failure, Lt. Gen. James A. Van Fleet confidently told his Allied ground forces.
 UN massed artillery fired at record speed to cut attacking waves to pieces. Allied airmen complained that they couldn't find many Red targets.
 Field dispatches said the Chinese blowing, horn-tooting Chinese fell by the thousands under geysering artillery explosions.
 Barbed wire, strung extensively before UN positions in Korea for the first time, was hung with gruesome garlands of Chinese. Two thousand miles of wire were stretched in front of one unit.
 Dispatches gave this picture Friday night, looking across the front from west to east:
 American forces pulled back from Uijongbu, 11 miles north of Seoul. Red screening forces within 10 miles of the old South Korean capital.
 An armored UN patrol was stopped 10 miles east of Seoul by a Red mine field covered by automatic weapons fire. Red attacks failed to break UN lines in the west-central front Friday.
 Heavy fighting raged across the central front. The Allied line pulled back before waves of attacking Chinese.
 Chinese poured through a break in South Korean lines. They streamed down the Inje-Hongchon road on the central front.
 A veteran American division was fighting attacks on three sides. AP Correspondent Nate Polowatsky said it was in "great trouble."
 Americans were rushed up to plug the gap cut in two South Korean divisions. South Koreans units were hurt badly.
 AP Correspondent George McCormick reported all UN troops had pulled back out of Red Korea. South Koreans held a 25-mile line from the Inje area to the Sea of Japan.

MacArthur—

 once Thursday afternoon the Republicans are trying to overthrow the foreign policy of the United States.
 This brought a retort from Senator Brewster (R-Maine), a Foreign Relations Committee member. He told a reporter, "We can't overthrow it when we don't know what it is."
 The President said he decided he needed a new general in the Far East when MacArthur called on the Chinese Communists in Korea on March 24 to negotiate a truce, in advance of a proposed presidential peace proposal.
 MacArthur replied to this, too, in a statement issued by his chief aide, Maj. Gen. Courtney Whitney.
 The deposed general said he twice previously had tried to obtain a cease-fire agreement, both times "without conferring with higher authority and without the slightest exception being taken thereto."
 As for the March 24 offer to the Chinese Red commander, MacArthur said:
 "Such action on my part could only be regarded as supplementary to and in full support of any political move toward peace unless an agreement was in contemplation of the enemy's own terms."
 In an expansive mood at his news conference, The President also said that:
 1. Secretary of State Acheson cautioned at an April 6 White House conference against MacArthur's removal on grounds it would stir up a political fuss. And it did, he was right, the President added with a grin.
 2. He was happy the Senate Armed Forces and Foreign Relations Committees upheld a ruling that Gen. Omar Bradley did not have to divulge what was said by whom at the April 6 White House meeting.

Taft, an ex-president, swore Herbert Hoover into office as president.

Midland Theater To Stage Play At Vet Hospital

The Midland laugh production, "See How They Run," will be staged Sunday night at the Veterans Hospital in Big Spring.
 Art Cole, Community Theater director, Friday said several Midland men had offered to pay the cost of costume rental and other expenses in producing the rollicking play for the veterans. Another man offered to transport the props to the hospital.
 Cole said the production by the nine-member cast will be presented in the hospital dining hall at 7:30 p. m. Sunday.
 It completed a seven-night run here Wednesday to sell-out audiences.
 "This will be the largest production staged at the hospital," Cole said, "and we know it will be a big boost to the veterans, for it's a screamingly funny play."

DADDY RINGTAIL

Daddy Ringtail And Watch Dog Watch

Daddy Ringtail, your monkey friend, was visiting with Old MacDonald who has a farm. They were sitting on the porch in the moonlight. Old MacDonald was explaining why he had bought the watchdog from the man in the city.

"See that little house over there?" said Old MacDonald. He pointed with his hand in the moonlight. "Well, that is the little house where I keep all my hams and bacon to eat. Why, if a robber got in there, he would steal away all my meat."

watch my watchdog!" Old MacDonald jumped up and began to run. Daddy Ringtail ran along with him. They ran in a hurry to the little house with the ham and bacon inside it.

"Oh me, and oh, my my!" said Old Donald in a great worry. His hands were shaking so he could hardly unlock the door, but there! The lock now was undone, and the door was open, and what do you think was happening inside?

Well, I wish I could say that the dog was fast asleep on his back with his hand beneath his head and a leg across his knee. Oh, I wish I could say it, but I can't. He was gobbling up meat as fast as he could, because he was only a dog, you know, and the meat was much too much temptation.

Tch! Tch! Tch! because people should never leave too much temptation for others to see, and Old MacDonald said he would never do it again. Happy day!

English Aids Expression, Teachers Say

It is the task of teachers of English in Midland High School to teach students to express themselves both orally and in writing, assuring employers of Midland and other cities of future employees who can express themselves.

These teachers listed the following as some of their purposes in the teaching of grammar:

1. To help the pupil to see his need of English skills in his other classes and in his life outside the school.
2. To help them acquire the English skills, speaking, reading and writing.
3. To teach the student to spell and to broaden his vocabulary.
4. The organization of written work, including personal and business letters.

Since the student's reading may be the only form of furthering his education after he leaves high school, the English teachers said it is important that he have good reading habits and that his reading habits be directed in constructive channels.

For this reason, Miss Gordon listed as one of her objectives, "to encourage the pupil to read in his leisure time and to read discriminately."

Some of the objectives in literature are:

1. To help the pupil better understand the problems and ideals of the people of this and other countries.
2. To help students appreciate the various types of literatures.

2. To increase skills in understanding what they read, in oral reading, in use of words and in the use of the library.

Mrs. Cotton suggested that in reading a person may "acquire the ability to solve the problems he meets in everyday life."

English is not a dry subject, anyone. It has been enlivened by films, opaque projection machines, phonograph records and radio dramas. Dorothy Perkins said: "It has been my policy to give extra points to pupils who see and can answer questions about such movies as 'Hamlet,' 'Macbeth' and 'Oliver Twist.'"

★ THE DOCTOR ANSWERS ★

Physical Defects, Blemishes Are Not Uncommon—No Cause For Anxiety

life without developing some physical defect or blemish. But some take these things harder than others and indeed may alter their whole lives unnecessarily.

Q—I have a bright red birthmark on my upper legs and live in constant fear of having to go to a doctor for an examination. Now I expect a baby and would sooner die than show a doctor my body. What shall I do?

A—This modesty is both unnecessary and foolish. The physician's whole training is such that he is used to unusual things. Stop worrying about what the doctor will think and get good medical care for the sake of the baby as well as yourself.

Q—About three weeks ago one of my dear friends started to swell up all over the face. She was terribly worried and about 10 days ago it happened again. She was unable to talk for several hours. What should she do?

A—The description fits an attack of hives or urticaria. If this should turn out to be the cause, an effort should be made to find out what she is sensitive to. It could be something she comes in contact with or a food.

Q—Can a large, sharp piece of glass passed by a baby cause internal injury?

A—During its course down the intestinal passageways it can. Usually there will be bleeding.

Q—My 15-month-old granddaughter picks the wool from carpets, sweaters, and even the blankets on her bed, and eats it. I am at my wits end to know what to do.

A—This seems to be another example of pica or an appetite for abnormal things. There is probably a good chance that one so young will stop by herself in time. In the meanwhile perhaps she can be kept away from wool most of the time.

Q—Is it safe to get a permanent wave during pregnancy?

A—Unless the doctor in charge has some reason why he considers it inadvisable for a particular patient there seems to be no harm.

Q—What do the new drugs (streptomycin, aureomycin, and chloromycetin) come from? Are these drugs in the experimental stage?

A—These substances were obtained from molds and have the power of preventing the growth of certain germs. They are not experimental in the sense that they have known and proved value in the treating of certain diseases. However, more is being learned about them all the time.

DADDY RINGTAIL

Daddy Ringtail And Watch Dog Watch

Daddy Ringtail, your monkey friend, was visiting with Old MacDonald who has a farm. They were sitting on the porch in the moonlight. Old MacDonald was explaining why he had bought the watchdog from the man in the city.

"See that little house over there?" said Old MacDonald. He pointed with his hand in the moonlight. "Well, that is the little house where I keep all my hams and bacon to eat. Why, if a robber got in there, he would steal away all my meat."

But Old MacDonald now was laughing at how very smart he was. Why, now if a robber came to break in the house where the meat was, the watchdog watching would grab the robber by the pants and hold him fast with watchdog teeth.

"Oh, MacDonald," said Daddy Ringtail, "you mean you have locked a watchdog up in the house where you keep your hams and bacon?"

"That I did," said Old MacDonald. "Do you think I shouldn't have done it?"

Oh, and of course Daddy Ringtail thought that Old MacDonald shouldn't have done it. Why, a dog is very fond of meat to eat. And while the watchdog was watching the meat, who would watch the watchdog?

watch my watchdog!"

Old MacDonald jumped up and began to run. Daddy Ringtail ran along with him. They ran in a hurry to the little house with the ham and bacon inside it.

"Oh me, and oh, my my!" said Old MacDonald in a great worry. His hands were shaking so he could hardly unlock the door, but there! The lock now was undone, and the door was open, and what do you think was happening inside?

Well, I wish I could say that the dog was fast asleep on his back with his hand beneath his head and a leg across his knee. Oh, I wish I could say it, but I can't. He was gobbling up meat as fast as he could, because he was only a dog, you know, and the meat was much too much temptation.

Tch! Tch! Tch! because people should never leave too much temptation for others to see, and Old MacDonald said he would never do it again. Happy day!

English Aids Expression, Teachers Say

It is the task of teachers of English in Midland High School to teach students to express themselves both orally and in writing, assuring employers of Midland and other cities of future employees who can express themselves.

These teachers listed the following as some of their purposes in the teaching of grammar:

1. To help the pupil to see his need of English skills in his other classes and in his life outside the school.
2. To help them acquire the English skills, speaking, reading and writing.
3. To teach the student to spell and to broaden his vocabulary.
4. The organization of written work, including personal and business letters.

Since the student's reading may be the only form of furthering his education after he leaves high school, the English teachers said it is important that he have good reading habits and that his reading habits be directed in constructive channels.

For this reason, Miss Gordon listed as one of her objectives, "to encourage the pupil to read in his leisure time and to read discriminatingly."

Some of the objectives in literature are:

1. To help the pupil better understand the problems, and ideals of the people of this and other countries.
2. To help students appreciate the various types of literatures.
3. To increase skills in understanding what they read, in oral reading, in use of words and in the use of the library.

Mrs. Cotton suggested that in reading a person may "acquire the ability to solve the problems he meets in everyday life."

English is not a dry subject, anymore. It has been enlivened by films, opaque projection machines, phonograph records and radio dramas. Dorothy Perkins said: "It has been my policy to give extra points to pupils who see and can answer questions about such movies as 'Hamlet,' 'Macbeth' and 'Oliver Twist!'"

Armed Forces Day, 1951

The nation Saturday will pause to salute its fighting men on their day—Armed Forces Day. It is fitting that the Armed Forces of this great nation should be honored on this one day, but our fighting men also are due the respect and admiration of a grateful nation on all other days of the year as well.

Open house programs and celebrations are scheduled in cities and communities having military installations. Here in Midland, reserve and National Guard units are sponsoring a public observance. Participating citizens well might consider just what our fighting men mean to us while joining in the nationwide salute to our Armed Forces.

The General's Views

Before General MacArthur took the witness chair in Washington, the wider aspects of the controversy surrounding his dismissal were sometimes being referred to as the "Europe vs. Asia" debate. The inference was that MacArthur represented a policy which would put Asia first as a theater of combat against Russian communism, while the Administration stood for "Europe first."

MacArthur is for combatting the Reds in all theaters, simultaneously if necessary. To those who argue the free nations cannot thus divide their strength, he replies that the Communists likewise must divide their strength on more than one front. If they can do it, why not we?

There is plainly no comfort in MacArthur's views for those who feel that Europe should be left largely to its own devices. Nor is there solace for the believers in a sort of "fortress America" which would retire within its own outposts and rely on sea and air power to fend off a hostile world.

MacArthur does not believe we now are prepared to fight a war on many fronts. But he is confident we have the potential, and should not therefore flinch from facing communism down at all points.

By his testimony on this broad problem, the general made clear that the issue is not Europe vs. Asia. As far as he is concerned, the issue is how to fight the war in Korea to produce the military victory he believes must be won to justify our fighting.

When the answering testimony of the Joint Chiefs of Staff is all in, then the time will have arrived to weigh that issue with the utmost care and perception. Meantime, it is enough to observe that the general's differences with the Administration are on a much narrower front than was first imagined by many.

Regarding our boys overseas, to keep on your right side, WRITE!

Success or failure is the difference between minding or undermining your own business.

By Drew Pearson

(Copyright, 1951, By The Bell Syndicate, Inc.) Drew Pearson says: American firms ship war materials behind Iron Curtain; Seafarers' Harry Lundberg flees from Paul Herzog; Income-tax boost riles congressmen.

WASHINGTON — For some time this column has called attention to the shipment of war materials behind the Iron Curtain by European nations. It is only fair, however, to point out that some American businessmen also have been guilty of the same practice. Most people don't realize that a steady trickle of strategic materials has been reaching Communist China.

Rep. Dan Reed of New York, the committee's No. 1 Republican, said he was willing to "go along" by not raising individual taxes at all. While Democrats pinched themselves to be sure they weren't dreaming, Reed hastened to explain: "If we cut non-essential government spending to the bone, maybe we wouldn't need a tax bill."

Q—Why is it that all the editions of "Joan of Arc" do not have Mark Twain's name on them? A—Some critics say it is due to his desire to add to the illusion that the book was the record of another man. It is also stated that the author had spent many years of preparation on this work and thought that it would never be accepted seriously over his own signature.

Q—How long have spoons been used? A—The spoon is one of the oldest implements. Spoons have been found in Egyptian tombs of 4,000 years ago.

Q—Of what ancestry is the palomino horse? A—Palominos stem largely from Arabian stock. This horse is a lighter-legged, short-coupled, of a slender tan or cream color, with lighter-colored mane and tail.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

By OSWALD JACOBY, Editor for NEA Service

"The race is not always to the swift," said Peter, "nor is the battle always to the strong. Also, the hand is quicker than the eye." Peter Leventritt's advanced class at the Card-School grinned expectantly. They knew he was going to pull another rabbit out of the hat for their amusement and instruction.

When West opens a spade dummy plays the nine, and East discards the deuce of clubs. The first lesson, Peter warned, was to keep your eyes open. Otherwise you might carelessly mistake that club for a spade.

Bridge hand diagram showing North, South, West, and East cards and their suits.

The next question is how to play the hand. Most players try to cash three top clubs and three top hearts, expecting to eke out the game with four trump tricks. Those players find themselves in the awkward position of trumping the third round of hearts and the defenders are bound to get three diamond tricks no matter what happens.

Prejudicial influences (the press) outside the courtroom are becoming all too typical of a highly publicized trial... (and are) one of the worst menaces to American justice.

What's RIGHT?

You invite someone to your home and the person seems to you to be making a feeble excuse for not coming. WRONG: Say: "Of course, you can come if you really want to."

Cross-Examination Reveals How Far M'Arthur Would Go

By FREDERICK EDSON, Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Republican Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon probably is the long-windedest man in Washington. He never has conducted a filibuster. But as an ex-professor of law, when he starts out to examine a question or make a speech, you can be sure he'll exhaust the subject.

In the three-day investigation of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, it was Senator Morse who took up the most time—part of a morning and most of an afternoon. His several hundred questions filled 186 pages of transcript. But when he got through, it developed that he had done a most thorough job of cross-examination which may not have received all the attention it deserves.

What it revealed was just how far General MacArthur was prepared to go in risking a war with Soviet Russia. It is pretty far. In summarizing his own questioning and General MacArthur's answers at the end of the long day, Senator Morse found agreement between President Truman and the general on these points:

Resist Communist aggression in Korea; prevent Formosa from falling into Red hands; increase military assistance to Nationalist China; increase assistance to the Philippines and Indo-China; no appeasement of communism in the Korean settlement; use no American troops on the mainland of China; conclude a Japanese peace treaty as soon as possible; negotiate a Pacific Defense Pact similar to the North Atlantic Treaty; assist Western European defense.

Points On Which They Split Where Senator Morse found they differed were on three main points: use 35,000 Nationalist China troops in Korea; blockade the China coast; broaden Korean operations to include bombing of Manchuria.

General MacArthur favors those three proposals. President Truman, Secretary Marshall and the joint chiefs apparently oppose them. This summary narrows down the issues of debate considerably. There are of course a number of additional points of controversy over what has happened in the past.

What effect would complete blockade of the China coast and all-out bombing of Manchuria have on bringing Soviet Russia into the Korean fight as a shooting partner, to start World War III?

These are matters of speculation on which no one outside the Kremlin knows the real answers. Senator Estes Kefauver intervened in Morse's questioning at one point to give the language of the Soviet Russian-Chinese Communist pacts of 1950 as having an important bearing on the subject.

These treaties provide that if either country is attacked "by Japan or any other state which should unite with Japan... the other high contracting party will immediately render military assistance with all the means at its disposal."

Lawyers might argue for weeks without reaching a conclusion on whether an attack by U. S. planes on Manchurian rail lines would be approval. Charlotte had upset her more than he'd realized. He said heartily it sounded like a fine idea.

Lucille lit a cigarette and became very chatty. "It's much better to spend the money on being healthy than to spend it later on doctor bills."

They vied with each other saying how right how sensible then Arthur said the money wouldn't amount to much anyway. "Miss Nitz announced that she was secretary at the office-go to some kind of exercise class at the YWCA. I could ask Miss Nitz to call you and give you the dope."

Johnson was having a house built and he told the carpenter he wanted seven holes cut in the bottom of the kitchen door—one large hole and six small ones. He explained, "It's so the cat and her six kittens can get out."

The FORM DIVINE by HILDEGARDE DOLSON

THE STORY: Lucille Webb, 37, is a beautiful transformation brought by the Beautiful-Yo treatment for beauty culture, and she is now the most beautiful woman in town. Her return home to her husband Arthur quite terrible.

HOOPY never just walked in through a door. On up days, she pounced like a grasshopper, with her anemic little blonde pig-tails, her thin arms and legs and their sweet voice all swinging at once, toward some person or object.

On down days, she moved in shuffling steps, pushing her grievance or sorrow ahead of her as if in a wheelbarrow, darning the beholder to ask, "What is it?" Tonight she kissed Arthur on the first pounce, then hugged Sniffles till he yelped.

Arthur beamed on the modern Madonnas and child. As he opened his mouth to say something, Hoopy leaped up, vibrating the relaxed air. "Do you know what Ollie the dragon was doing tonight?"

Gretel announced dinner, and Ollie the dragon came along. Hoopy's gray-green eyes went from her mother to her father. "You just don't like to hear about television," Hoopy commented shrewdly.
