In January President Truman belatedly named a special commission to survey federal loyalty and security programs. Fleet Adm. Chester Nimitz was picked to lead the group, which was hailed as a hopeful thing even at that late date.

It was felt the commission's ultimate recommendations would afford us badly needed guidance on the delicate question of balancing security requirements with wise protection of individual rights.

Unfortunately the Nimitz group has been stalled on dead center from the moment of its appointment. Finally, in desperation at ever getting under way, it resigned in a body. Truman has refused to accept the members' resignations, but the issue actually must be decided in the

Here's what has stymied the Nimitz commission: It ran afoul of the so-called conflict-of-interest laws. These laws serve the useful function of barring federal workers from engaging in business with the government and from representing private clients against the government for two years after they leave a federal job.

As a consequence of these statutes, the commission has been unable to hire needed counsel, since no lawyer of in order to provide better coopera- ally. He just ernment business for the stipulated two-year period.

Furthermore, the law makes Nimitz ineligible for the commission chairmanship, because it forbids an officer drawing military pay from taking another federal job.

While the conflict-of-interest laws are of real value in preventing the sort of abuses brought to light in the RFC set-up, it's questionable whether restraints are wise against citizens merely asked to advise the President in some ton of Connecticut and Pastore of far side. The House accepted the President's view and approved the exemptions for the Nimitz commission.

Over in the Senate it has been a different story. Chairman McCarran of the Judiciary Committee, who has a maid brought in some ham and his own ideas about how to deal with subversion and se- cheese sandwiches and coffee curity, has declined to act on the question. His committee publicly takes the view that no exceptions to the law should Truman And MacArthur be permitted, though McCarran himself took the opposite tack on an exemption he happened to favor.

One of the bidding problems of the good player is what to do with a good hand in which there is no clear-cut partnership fit. Ordinarily you have to bid such hands tentatively. You may bid a suit or two of your own, then try no-trump, and perhaps show a delayed prefer ence for partner's suit.

When an opponent steps into the auction, the situation changes. You can't safely bid no-trump without strength in the opponent's suit. If you have that strength, however, why not double for penalties?

As a matter of fact, the penalty double may be in order even if you have very little in the opponent's

Graduation Day

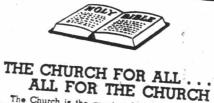

It's an exciting moment not soon to be forgotten—the strange feel of the cap and gown, the presence of family and friends with eyes on you, and finally, the receipt of the diploma and the handshakes.

Excitement, yes, a great deal of it, but there is mixed with it a sort of melancholy for the graduate. He knows that a happy era has just ended, and there is uncertainty ahead in the life that he has not yet tried.

But there are fewer doubts, fewer misgivings in the mind of a young person if he has had proper religious training. If he can enter his career equipped with strong moral and religious convictions, A the road ahead will much more likely lead to success and happiness.

This offers a challenge to every parent and patriotic citizen. For every child should have the opportunity to acquire the spiritual stamina so needed to meet the responsibilities of life. Let's make every child in the community a "child of the Church," and thus a better citizen.

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.
