Edgar D. Sloat, 53. Sloat, a real estate broker, was found dead in his garage Saturday night. Sheriff's deputies said he had been shot four times.

The officers said his mother-inlaw, Mrs. Marian Wright, had an empty 38 caliber revolver in her apron pocket when they arrived at the Sloat ranch, Both Mrs. Wright and Soat's widow, Helen, 30, said he had threatened to kill them.

Mrs. Wright said she was holding her two-year-old grandson in her lap when Sloat hit her on the head with a whiskey bottle. Then officers quoted Mrs. Wright, she put the baby in his room, closed the door and "I went to the drawer where he (Sloat) kept his gun and I just started to shoot.

'Big' President

Ecuador is not a very big country. But the little South merican nation has a big president, both in size and bility. When he was elected in 1947 after there had een five presidents in 11 months, Galo Plaza-Lasso estabshed a democratic regime that has lasted ever since.

President Plaza, who was born in Brooklyn when his ather was minister to the U. S., is back in this country for state visit. A graying, six-feet-two man who once sold pples on Wall Street, he is trying to modernize Ecuador ne way he modernized his family's rundown estate. He iped out political revolution in his country, but he is gog all out for agricultural and industrial revolution.

In a speech in Washington the other day, he echoed ome North American ideals: We must be alert, he said, to efend freedom "through the printed word, in the classoom, in the workshop and the public square; and, if need e, if all else fails . . . then on the battlefield."

Like most other visitors of state, President Plaza yould like to arrange a little help for his country from the . S. That's to be expected, perhaps.

But he more than deserves the welcome mat the U.S. as rolled out in his honor. After the disheartening blows eing struck against free speech and free press in the rgentine, President Plaza's views on the subject, coming rom a South American, make encouraging reading.

Proximity Fuse, A Top Weapon Long Neglected In Korean War

By PETER EDSON

NEA Washington Correspondent WASHINGTON-One of the main causes for high casualties inflicted on Chinese and North Korean troops in recent fighting has been the proximity fuse. This was a World War II development. It was hailed by Gen. George S. Patton as the most effective weapon of the war against Germany. But for a variety of reasons or excuses, it was

The proximity fuse can be used on either artillery shells or on bombs dropped by airplanes. It employs a small radio set built into the nose small radio set built into the nose of the shell or bomb.

This radio sends out waves from its tiny transmitter. When these waves strike some target object, they bounce back. They then are picked And by means of electronic controls, the shell or bomb is "triggered" to explode at the split second when shell or bomb reaches closest to the target.

The proximity fuse replaces the time fuse in shells and bombs previously employed. By means of a watch mechanism in the nose of the time-fused shell or bomb, it can be set to explode at a given time in-

The proximity fuses in these were set to explode them 50 feet above ground. At this distance they spread their inch-and-a-half fragments over a maximum area to inflict heaviest casualties. In December, the Far Eastern command did ask that an ordnance team be sent to Korea with all technical data and tactical training proup by the radio receiver in the shell grams for use of the proximity fuse. A team of four Air Force and four Army officers under Col. C. H. M Roberts, an ordnance officer, was sent to Korea. All had World War II experience in use of proximity

Artillerymen wanted to use the shells only when on long range, high trajectory fire. On flatter trajectories, it was claimed the shells skimmed over the tops of the Korean mountains. This exploded them prematurely, often on friendly

It's 'Ladies Night' At Ball Park Here Monday

Possibly the largest crowd of the 1951 baseball seas hand Monday night, when Midland and San Angelo meet in a Longhorn League baseball encounter.

The reason for the expected clicking of the turnstiles is a "Ladies Night" at the park. Fem fans will be admitted for the 13-cent federal tax, if accompanied by a paid admission,

Baseball officials Monday estimated a "capacity crowd" would on hand. Indian Park seats approximately 2,000 fans. Manager Zeke Benura has nominted young Jim Haggard to oppose the league-leading Colts on the mound. Bonura and other officials Monday urged Midlanders to attend the game, in special tribute to the ladies. The ladies night is the first

Several different causes are recognized and the disease may develop rapidly and acutely or slowly appears inflamed and becomes hard to the touch. What happens From Automobile is that there is a blockage to the free flow of eye fluids so that they gather in the eye instead of drain ing out normally. Unless treated early all this leads to a progressive loss of vision The Committee on Glaucoma of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness has adopted a number of rules for glaucoma suf ferers which eye physicians often give out. It is not enough to use general measures since there are medicines and other advice which can only be given after the eyes have been examined carefully and are watched from time to time. Some of these rules, however, would not hurt any of us whether we have glaucoma or not. Take It Easy
