It's Still A Battle

General Eisenhower's victory in New Jersey will do nothing to destroy the conviction of his supporters that he can get votes.

To be sure, his triumph was no surprise. He had the backing of Governor Driscoll and many top leaders in the New Jersey Republican organization.

Furthermore, the general is presumed to have his greatest strength along the Atlantic seaboard, and particularly in heavily industrialized sectors.

By contrast, Eisenhower garnered just 50 per cent of the GOP vote in New Hampshire, where his performance was hailed as a notable beginning back in March.

Taking all circumstances into consideration, Taft did not figure to win this one any more than Eisenhower figured to capture Illinois.

The least surprising of all the postmortem statements was the claim of Taft backers that he scored a "moral victory."

The setup for such a claim was perfect. Taft earlier had pulled out of the New Jersey race, closing his state headquarters and canceling speaking dates.

Taft's men in the state say they did nothing thereafter to drum up votes and that therefore his 228,000 votes were a spontaneous expression of Taft sentiment in New Jersey.

It was the consensus of seasoned observers within the state, however, that the senator's friends were very busy gentlemen in the days before the primary.

Of course, extravagant claims on both sides are all part of the political war of nerves. New Jersey did not nominate Eisenhower, nor did Illinois give the crown to Taft.

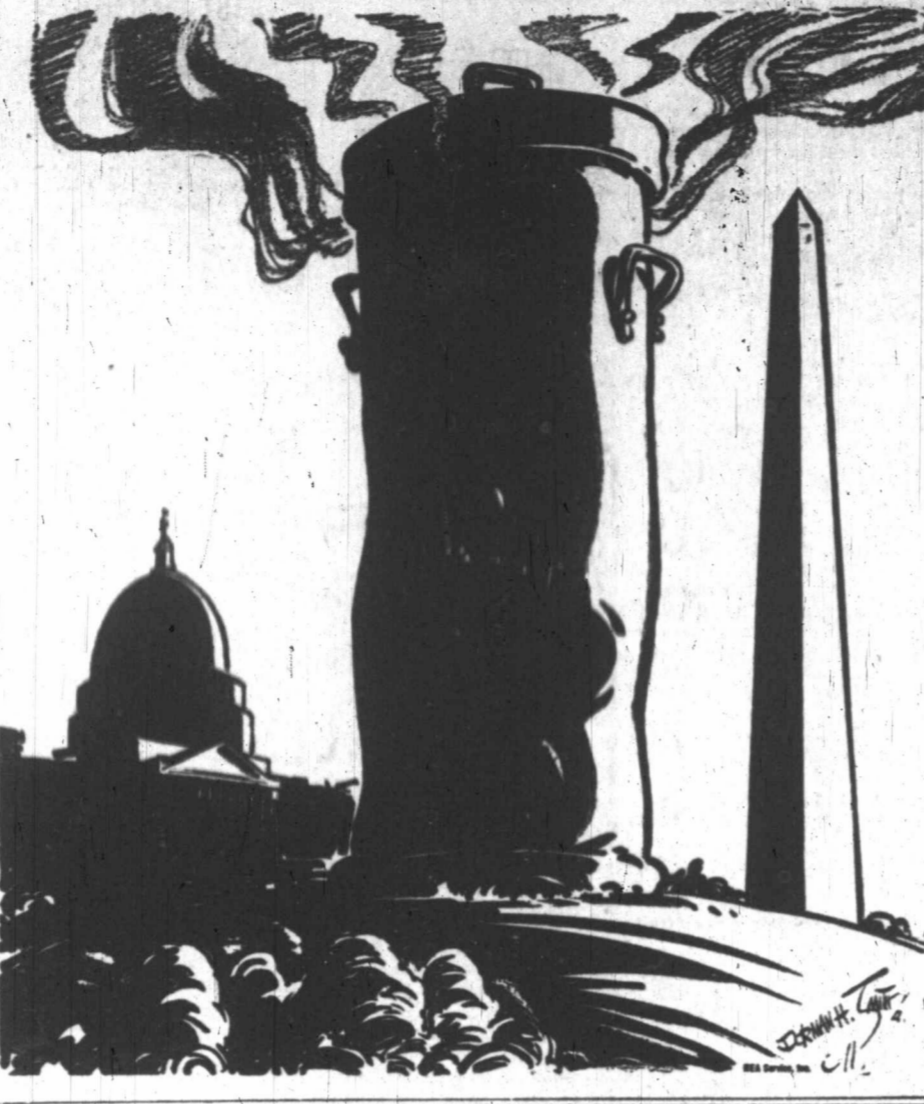

Lots of folk who jump at conclusions do it when reading an exciting novel.

Solid GOP Old Guard In South Alarmed By Eisenhower Boom

WASHINGTON—The Taft-Eisenhower battle for the Republican presidential nomination is developing a beautiful preliminary bout for control of the Grand Old Party's machinery in the South.

Up until the Eisenhower boom got hot, this entrenched, stand-pat organization had been conceded to be Senator Taft's private domain.

Job of the Eisenhower backers in the South has been to gain a voice and at least an equal break in Republican state organizations.

In Florida, so alarmed was the GOP Old Guard machine under C. C. Spades that the state convention was held several weeks ahead of the scheduled date.

District of Columbia now rates six delegates to the Republican national convention, although District of Columbia citizens rate no vote in the November election.

The members kept control largely as a matter of prestige, and ran things to suit themselves. Some pre-

Just a dream anyhow. But at least it was no dream, and George had to go on.

Anything is fair in love and war and this was a little of both. An unorthodox girl called for unorthodox methods.

George came around to the front of the stand. Marilyn was a few feet away. He could have reached out and touched her, he thought.

George paused and tried to remember everything he had read in the Jude manual that afternoon.

George lifted the girl up over his shoulder and turned. In the next instant, he was scrambling back between the concession stand and the side-show tent.

Texan Protests Proposed Cotton Sale Rules Change

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Protests to two federal agencies against steps he said would be detrimental to cotton farmers were made Wednesday by Representative Poage (D-Tex.).

Poage asked the Production and Marketing Administration to make no change in existing regulations which permit farmers to sell the warehouse receipts showing they have cotton in storage under the government loan program. The Waco representative is acting chairman of the House Agriculture Committee.

Poage said he understood an order to be issued later this week would require that the farmer redeem his cotton by paying off the loan before selling it to a prospective purchaser.

Any such change, he said, "would require a lot of time and in the last analysis could only cost the farmer money."

In a letter to the National Production Authority, Poage protested a proposal that tax amortization certificates be approved for the construction of some synthetic fiber plants.

He declared the NPA more than a year ago assured the committee that unless the world fiber supply situation worsened there would be no fast tax write-off certificates granted for the synthetic fiber plants.

The supply of both cotton and wool have improved to the point there has been a sharp decline in prices of both these commodities, Poage added.

Civilians Assist In Capture Of Fleeing Burglary Suspect

The story of how Midland police and civilians combined forces to run down a suspect in a car burglary was unraveled here Wednesday.

The suspect, a parolee from the West Virginia State Penitentiary, according to the story he told police, finally was flushed into the arms of waiting police.

Officers reconstructed the story this way:

Sometime Tuesday morning an attorney from Fort Worth, Cecil C. Cannack, parked his car near the county courthouse and went inside.

When he returned approximately 30 minutes later, he discovered that a suit and a suitcase had been stolen from his car.

Cannack told police he had left the side vent of his car window unlocked, which permitted the suspect to gain entry to the vehicle.

After reporting the theft to the police, Cannack, along with city and county police, started a search.

Cannack spotted the suspect first and saw the missing suitcase in his possession.

The attorney stopped the car and asked the man if he could give him a lift somewhere. Cannack's object was to drive the man to police headquarters.

But the suspect balked.

"No," he said. "I know what you're up to."

He then tossed the suitcase and a suit in a car and hot footed it away with City Policeman Herb Runyan in rapid pursuit.

Cowart Convicted Of Accepting Fee As PMA Assistant

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A Federal court jury early Thursday found Jack Cowart guilty of violating the law in accepting a $1,347 payment from a friend whom he helped collect a claim against the government.

Cowart had insisted the payment was made on a debt which he said the friend, Charles D. Bridgman of Brownsville, had owed him for a long time. The jury recommended leniency in Cowart's sentencing later this week.

Cowart was fired last August from a $10,500 job as assistant to the Production and Marketing Administrator.

He was charged with violating a law which forbids federal employees from accepting payment for services in a case in which the government is involved. Conviction would carry a maximum penalty of two years in jail and a fine up to $10,000.

At issue was a payment made by Bridgman, a long-time friend of Cowart and president of Capital Prefabricators, Tyler, Texas. Cowart said he helped Bridgman collect a claim against the government in connection with freight charges on grain storage facilities.

Bridgman testified he made the payment—supposedly to an attorney—for expediting his claim, under arrangements made by Cowart at his request.

America was called Vineland by the Vikings and others because of the abundance of wild grapevines in many areas.

American Museum Mounts Huge Texas Dinosaur Tracks

NEW YORK—(AP)—Huge footprints a dinosaur left in a Texas river bed millions of years before man walked the earth are being mounted at the American Museum of Natural History.

The museum reported Wednesday the great blocks of stone containing the dinosaur tracks are being fitted together, like a jig-saw puzzle under the skeleton of the giant lizard, brontosaurus.

Twelve footprints—some measuring 54 inches long and 41 inches wide—were brought to the museum from Texas.

The museum, in collaboration with the Texas Museum at the University of Texas, removed 40 tons of rock and more tons of soil covering the huge footprints.

Incense Adds Dramatic Touch To Personality In Your Home

Something old has been added to the home scene. Incense is again winning popularity. And no wonder. It lends such a delightful fragrance to your home (right) and personal belongings (left).

By ALICIA HART
NEA Beauty Editor

Happy shades of days gone by. Gracious living is with us again in the form of perfumed incense burning. And this is good news. For not only is a sweet-smelling home a restful, inviting place to be, but it offers a subtle welcome to guests, a grand-mannered gesture of hospitality.

If you're tempted to try the delights of incense, investigation may reveal that you even own an incense burner that's been in the family for years. There's no better time than right now to take it out of the ornamental category and put it to good use.

Give the burner a place of honor on a foyer table, mantel, coffee table or radio. If you haven't an incense burner, you'll find charming and inexpensive ones in the shops. In many different, fascinating and decorative shapes. But although a burner adds to the enchantment of burning incense, it isn't necessary. You can burn the little cones in an ashtray or dish, and still get a delightful effect.

Surprise and please your guests by anticipating their arrival with incense fragrance. Burn several cones in advance, and at intervals during the evening light fresh ones. To release the fragrance, all you have to do is hold the tiny cone over a match flame.

You can choose from seven different intriguing fragrances to suit your mood or the occasion. There's sandalwood, wisteria, pine, rose, pashin, orange blossom and violet. But don't save your incense for company evenings. Enjoy fragrant surroundings every evening.

A nice way to keep a supply "on hand," is to use a box of incense cones as sachets to tuck in your stockings, handkerchiefs or lingerie cases, or in the corners of dresser drawers and linen shelves.

To burn or not to burn is not the question. You can do both, and thereby keep your personal things and your household pleasingly fragrant.

Casualties in Korea

WASHINGTON—Korean casualty list No. 548, released Wednesday night by the Defense Department, lists one Texan killed in action and five wounded. They are:

Wounded, Marine Corps: Cpl. Leo Stroman, Corpus Christi; Cpl. Herbert E. Williams, Joinerville.

Citrus fruits and tomatoes are our main-stay sources of Vitamin C. Besides these foods, a few other fruits and vegetables are outstandingly rich in this vitamin: Raw cabbage, raw strawberries, and salad greens are among these.

CHEF OF MAXIMS IN PARIS shows our representative a step-by-step method of glorifying a plump chicken.

By GAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Food and Markets Editor
For a deluxe chicken that has French flavor, try this exclusive recipe. It was originated at Maxim's in Paris, one of the world's greatest restaurants.

The chef, using an American pressure cooker, showed our representatives how to prepare it, step by step. Here are his instructions in a language every American home cook can understand.

Chicken Maxim With Vegetables

One (3 or 4 pound) plump chicken, 1/2 lemon, 1 teaspoon dry ginger, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 1/8 teaspoon pepper, 1/4 cup butter (or other shortening), 1 cup dry white wine (or 1 cup water with juice 1/2 lemon), 1 tablespoon soy sauce or meat glaze, 1 cup carrots, Julienne (cut in matchlike strips), 1 cup young white turnips, Julienne, 1 cup green string beans, Julienne, 1 tomato, sliced.

Rinse inside and out with the cut surface of the lemon and ginger. Truss. Dredge in flour seasoned with salt and pepper.

Heat pressure cooker, add butter and brown chicken on all sides. Pour combined wine and soy sauce over chicken. Place cover on cooker. Allow steam to flow from vent pipe to release all air from cooker. Place indicator weight on vent pipe and cook 30 to 45 minutes, depending upon age of chicken, with stem at Cook position. Cool cooker at once. Place chicken under broiler to crisp, turning as necessary.

Place vegetables in stock remaining in cooker and following above procedure, cook one minute at Cook position—cool cooker at once.

Serve chicken surrounded with Julienne vegetables. If the party is super deluxe and you want to splurge, then add the Maxim touch by garnishing with truffles, if you can get them, or halved, pitted jumbo ripe olives.

Bursitis Is Inflamed Tissue Traced To One Or More Hurts

By EDWIN F. JORDAN, M. D.,
Written for NEA Service

Two readers have recently asked for another discussion of bursitis, and want to know whether there is a cure for this painful condition, and, if not, whether bursitis will disappear by itself. To answer the last question first, sometimes bursitis will disappear of itself and sometimes not. The first question is more difficult and can only be answered by a general discussion of the subject.

Bursitis often starts suddenly and in such cases the involved cavity is likely to be swollen and to contain a fluid, the nature of which depends on the cause. Acute or subacute bursitis brings tenderness and pain. In the more chronic conditions in which the fluid develops gradually and lasts for a long time, discomfort may be entirely absent. Diagnosis is not always easy.

The most common causes of inflammation of a bursa or bursitis are single severe injuries or lesser but repeated ones. Kneeling for a long time may effect a bursa just above the knee. In "tennis elbow" a bursa around the elbow is involved.

What can be done for an inflamed bursa depends partly on the cause and partly on the degree and type of inflammation. In the more acute conditions, complete rest by means of a splint, bandage, or cast is generally advised. In those cases in which the swelling is great and the pressure causes considerable pain, the physician may have to remove some of the excess fluid. Since the fluid may return, such removal is likely to have to be repeated several times.

Hot, wet bandages may bring relief and heat in the form of diathermy is frequently extremely helpful. Deep X-ray treatments have also been used in some cases with success.

Injections Sometimes Help

Unfortunately, some cases of chronic bursitis are resistant to all forms of treatment. Injection of a local anesthetic into the bursa itself is often useful but may not bring lasting effects. The injection of some irritating fluid, called a sclerosing solution, has been reported to be successful occasionally. In the most resistant cases an operation involving removal of the entire lining of the bursa may have to be employed, but this more or less of a last resort. The sufferer from a severe bursitis usually feels quite sorry for himself—and with good reason.

Any small pocket lined by delicate tissue lying near one of the movable joints of the body is called a bursa. Typical bursae are those above the knees, and around the elbows and shoulders and any of them can become inflamed.

Communal Living Is Not For The Birds

AP Newsfeatures
NEW YORK—Birds are a convincing argument against the practicability of communism, says ornithologist Roger Tory Peterson. They demonstrate that the community state is biologically unsound.

Peterson, painter, illustrator and author of that bird-lover's bible, "A Field Guide to the Birds," has spent most of his lifetime studying, painting and photographing American wildlife.

"Birds," he explained, "operate on the basis of territorial claims, bird song is not a joyous expression, it is not made for art's sake. It is a male challenge: 'This is my property, and you keep the hell off.'"

Other males respect the challenge—and females understand it as an invitation into the area. Occasionally, however, a non-conformist bird crosses the line, and the bird with the priority brushes with him in token warfare—rarely resulting in fatalities.

Nature and the birds themselves have an effective birth-control, Peterson pointed out. If they had not, the world would soon be overcrowded with them. The robin, for instance, lives as long as 10 years, breeds the first year, and has two broods annually of four eggs each. However, only 35 per cent of a bird's offspring reach the flying stage, and accidents, food problems and natural enemies combine to control the bird population—most of them males—never mate, and form a sort of floating population which gives the established bird population a little trouble.

Cats No Problem
The ornithologist said he may be considered heretical, but "I can't get too upset about cats hunting birds. Most country cats don't bother with them and are more interested in mice and insects." A fairly recent survey showed, he said, that only 2 per cent of country cats were bird hunters, while 6 per cent of city cats were.

On the other hand, Peterson is upset by man's continuing efforts to upset the balance of nature, particularly by the indiscriminate use of chemical insect killers. "Anything over 2 pounds of DDT to an acre is at or beyond the danger point," he commented, "and three-tenths of a pound per acre will kill mosquitoes."
Fears 'Biological Desert'
"Things like that must be very carefully supervised or man is going to make a biological desert of the world. Many birds feed on insects. Birds are important as pollinators. If we destroy the insects—good and bad—we are removing birds' food source, then removing the birds by starvation—and ultimately man may starve."

"I say, let's put up with a few mosquitoes—unless there can be the most careful supervision of their construction. Otherwise, we are taking part in spreading one of the most dangerous and deplorable conditions imaginable."
Man, he said, is part of the world and as subject as birds and animals to the earth's resources.
"The troubles of Europe and Asia today are based on natural resources and the struggle to control them," he said. "We should use these as an object lesson."
Bird-Watching More Popular
Peterson, now a resident of Maryland but a native of Jamestown, N. Y., says bird-watching is gaining in popularity by leaps and bounds. It's almost a national institution in England and is fast approaching that status here.

"Interest in birds has come later here," he said, "because our frontier days are still close behind us. You don't find pioneers particularly interested in such things. I believe this modern interest in birds is a way for people to return to natural things, to escape from a frightening synthetic world which has almost mastered them. It is not a flight from reality—it's an escape and a return back to it."
As society becomes more restricted, there is more interest in birds—but bird-watching is not popular in an irresponsible society. England, he said, saw a huge rise in interest as its long austerity program set in.

DADDY RINGTAIL

Daddy Ringtail And Striped And The Bug

Striped Dog was dreaming a dream that a bug was holding him fast by the end of his nose. Daddy Ringtail, your monkey friend, could see and hear it happen in the dream, because Striped was wearing an audio-dream-visor-hat on his head. In the dog dream Striped was dreaming, Striped shook his head to try to shake off the bug that was holding the end of his nose. The bug just wouldn't shake off.

Striped stood up on his feet and shook his head again. Again, the bug just wouldn't shake off. Striped looked with both his eyes on down to the end of his nose where the bug was, holding on. The bug laughed out loud with a bug laugh. He wiggled and kicked with some of his legs, but he wouldn't—oh no, he wouldn't—turn loose of the end of Striped's nose.

(The bug was a cousin of Easy Meany who is also a bug with wiggly and kicked legs. Easy Meany is the easiest, and the meanest, somebody in the whole forest.) Striped Dog began to talk with dog talk, talking in his dream you know. Striped said: "See here, you—you—Easy Meany Cousin, you Turn loose of the end of my nose before I bite you." When the bug didn't turn loose, Striped tried to bite him. Oh, but a dog can't bite a bug who is holding fast to the end of the dog's nose. Can't reach him.

Striped next drew back one of his ears like a swatter. He swatted out at the bug with his ear. Oh, but the bug dropped down to Striped's chin and held on there. He didn't get swatted at all. But Striped had swatted the end of his nose very hard with his very own ear. Striped yelped to show that he had hurt himself. What oh what was he going to do? Daddy Ringtail told him. Daddy Ringtail was watching him and listening to the dream, remember, because Striped was wearing the audio-dream-visor-hat on his head. Daddy Ringtail said: "Wake up, Striped! Wake up! It is only a dream that you are dreaming!"

Striped woke up to hear the words. He saw that he had only been dreaming the dream about the bug, and that there really wasn't a bug at all.

Striped yawned a sleepy yawn, happy as happy could be that everything was all right. Then he lay back down to sleep some more, and maybe to dream another dream where he shows that bug in his dream just who is who and what is what. Happy day!

VALUABLE PLUMAGE

The quetzal, a bird of Central America, became a symbol of the Maya "god of the air," and its plumes were adopted as the emblem for all rulers, whether gods, kings, or high priests. As a result, tail feathers of the quetzal became more valuable than gold.

Sin is the name of a Sumerian moon god.

Midland Eagles Receive Runyon Fund Recognition

The Damon Runyon Memorial Fund for Cancer research has presented to Midland Aerie and Auxiliary No. 2982, Fraternal Order of Eagles, a "certificate of recognition" for contributions to the fund. The local Eagles donated $500 to the fund as a result of a Charity Frolic December 22.

The certificate was received from Walter Winchell, treasurer of the Runyon Fund, and presented to the Aerie by Charity Frolic Chairman Erle Robertson. Officers of the fund are composed of friends of the late newspaper columnist and author, Damon Runyon, who died of cancer in 1946. New York "Daily Mirror" Sports Editor Dan Parker is president, New York restaurant owner

Leo Lindy is vice-president, and Arthur Godfrey, secretary.

Robertson said the Eagles have aided the Runyon Fund for two years, during which time more than a quarter of a million dollars was raised and turned over to Winchell.

As a result of the Eagles' work for the fund, Winchell referred to the fraternity as "The Runyon Fund's 'Santa Claus'."

"We have staged special Charity Frolics for the Runyon Fund and we are making plans now for more fund-raising activities," Robertson said. "There still is no cure for cancer and consequently there must be still more money for further research."

Midland Boy, Polio Victim Leaves Gonzales Foundation

GONZALES—Three-year-old Charles David Capps, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Calvin Capps, of 807 W. Louisiana Street, Midland, and formerly a patient at the Gonzales Warm Springs Foundation for Crippled Children, has been discharged from the Gonzales treatment center and returned home.

Young Charles was stricken with polio in 1951. Admitted to the Gonzales Warm Springs hospital last November, he received treatment here for five months.

Although Charles has been discharged from the hospital, his treatment program will not end there. A series of periodic check-backs at the Gonzales Foundation has been scheduled in order that the hospital may record his progress and check the fit and condition of braces and other appliances. A course of home treatments has also been prescribed to stimulate continued advancement.

The MATURE PARENT

Parents Shouldn't Dwell On Own Self-Reproach

By MURIEL LAWRENCE
A mother whose boy has just been inducted into the armed service writes:

"I have just begun to realize how many mistakes I made in bringing him up, how often I failed him, how often I blamed and punished when I should have looked to myself. It is terrible to love a child and know that you have not been as good a mother as you could have been."

"I remember how I went to the hospital, for example, when his little sister was born without explaining that I was coming home to him again. How could I have expected him to understand things like this? How could I have been so blind? If I could only live the years again, how differently I would do things! But you can never recall the past or correct the wrongs you have done."

My first impulse on reading this letter was to feel great sympathy for this mother. But as I began to consider her problem of self-reproach, I thought, "None of the mistakes will matter if she can only forgive herself for making them."

I am writing about her because so many of us, as we begin to experience real love for our children, pass through the stage of self-reproach. As we gain more light on their goodness, our former blindness to it seems shocking to us.

We begin to recall the nights we allowed our little son to cry out his fear of the dark alone. We remember the Summer we went to Mexico and left a little daughter, too young, in camp among strangers.

We remember the night we bullied and harassed our child to confess a lie he had told until, instead of making the truth healing and welcoming to him, we made it hateful and threatening.

We remember how often we said "You're a bad boy"; the times we passed judgment without understanding our evidence; the time we failed to discern the desperate bid for comfort in a defiant, "What do I care?"

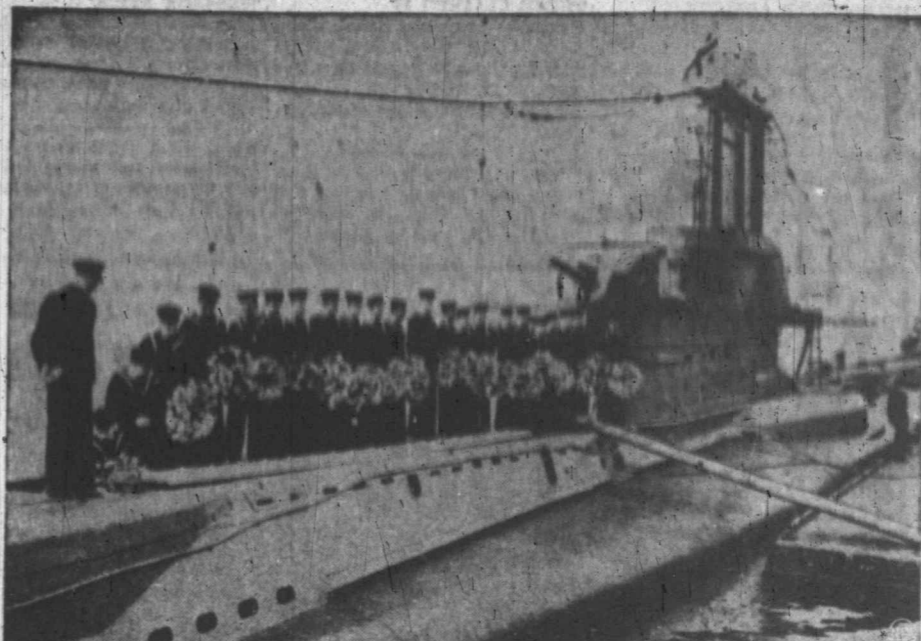

Then the full import of our failures in love strikes home to us so that we wonder how life dared to entrust new life to anyone so ignorant, so frightened, so driven and pompous as we. Like my reader we think, "If only God would let me relive the years again."

This self-reproach, wise people say, is necessary to experience our true love for children; it is also a stage of growth in which we should not linger too long. To be fruitful, our awakened recognition of our child's loveliness should begin to awaken our awareness of our own loveliness.

REAL REASON

The tremendous increase in the world's population in recent years is not the result of a rising birth rate, but of a falling death rate.

HONOR THEIR DEAD—A Royal Navy honor detail holds wreaths aboard the British submarine Alliance at Gosport, preparing to drop them over the spot in the English Channel where the Alliance's sister ship, H.M.S. Affray submerged and never resurfaced just a year ago. Affray's crew of 75 officers and men perished in the disaster.

Children's Health Day Set Throughout Nation

AUSTIN—Children's Health Day will be observed throughout the nation on May 1, in the hope of insuring that tomorrow's children will be sturdier than were those of yesterday.

In Texas, the state health officials are shooting for a record of benefitting an even greater number of handicapped children than the 4,250 which were cared for under the state's crippled children program in 1951.

It will mean new hope for the child with a club foot, a cleft palate or harelip, a crippling burn, bow legs, or a curved spine.

State Health Officer George W. Cox, whose department has administered the program since 1945, said many people "don't realize they can get state financial assistance for the physical restoration of many crippling conditions."

Eligibility for help is set by legislative statute. The law says any person of normal mentality under 21 years old whose physical functions or movements are impaired by reason of a joint, bone, or muscle defect . . . is eligible for care, providing the county judge where the child resides certifies that the parents cannot finance the needed care and treatment.

Physical restoration is the purpose of the program. Some of the conditions which are accepted for treatment are infantile paralysis, osteomyelitis, club feet, harelip, cleft palate, arthritis, rickets, tuberculosis of the bone, flat feet, congenitally dislocated hip, muscular atrophy, supernumerary fingers and toes, webbed fingers, amputation, Pott's disease, and many others. If the attending physician recommends prosthetics, the appliances are supplied.

The program does not include such handicapping ailments as rheumatic fever, hearing and visual deficiencies, or epilepsy.

Crippled children of indigent parents have been available for state aid since 1933. Formed first under the Department of Education, the program was transferred to the State Department of Health in May, 1945. Since the transfer, a total of 12,589 handicapped children have been returned to normalcy or near normalcy.

UNCLE EF

An idea to organize a club of 10 members to buy that five-dollar book, "Mr. President," on shares collapsed here because Old Man Hobbs couldn't find 10 people with 50 cents to spare after having paid their taxes. Then the book store wouldn't give him credit on a ten-cent raffle because they didn't think there were 50 people with a dime to gamble.

HOW ADVERTISING AFFECTS YOUR JOB

Raises, Cuts, Promotions, Layoffs Often Depend on How Much the Firm Sells

NEXT time you hear or read advertising, just stop and analyze how it affects you.

Its purpose is to sell goods or services. More sales mean more work to be done. That means more jobs in the firm that advertises . . . and more jobs in the hundred and one firms with which it does business. It's a never-ending chain.

Now when more jobs open up, that means more security for everyone. It means promotion to many, with wage increases. It means opportunity—particularly for friends and sons and daughters of present employees.

Whether or not you work for a firm that advertises, remember that this modern method of mass personal selling affects your company's business and its future. Hence it affects your job and your future.

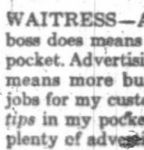

Advertising, by selling goods, starts businesses humming, makes them bigger. That's how advertising affects your job. For tomorrow, it creates opportunity . . . for today, it makes your job more secure.

Other Ways Advertising Helps You:

1. Brings you better goods for less money.
2. Makes shopping more pleasant and easier.
3. Has given us the world's highest standard of living.

MECHANIC—I like advertising. It sells goods. And when sales go up, our shop is plenty busy. My wife and I can then have real peace of mind.

WAITRESS—Advertising my boss does means more tips in my pocket. Advertising other firms does means more business, steadier jobs for my customers and bigger tips in my pocket. So I'm all for plenty of advertising.

BOOKKEEPER—I know what a difference advertising made in my firm . . . made our volume four times as big in five years. Now instead of just being a clerk, I have seven people working for me.

Advertising . . . BY SELLING MORE GOODS TO MORE PEOPLE
Makes your job more secure

Sports Car Has Three Wheels; Another Sports A Phonograph

NEW YORK (AP)—The most amazing automobile in a collection of amazing automobiles—the International Motor Sports Show—is a three-wheeler job called the Jetmobile. It's either a genuine peek into the future or a one-way ticket to a bad dream.

The Jetmobile is the creation of a young Boonsboro, Md., designer, Richard Harp. The model on display is the second one he built; the first was destroyed by fire after it won first prize as the most unusual design in a Washington, D. C., show. His friends chipped in to help him build the new one for $2,500. It was finished four hours before the New York show deadline.

"I think conventional cars are too blunt," says Harp, "so I borrowed aerodynamic lines for my car."

The Jetmobile is decidedly unblunt.

It has a long nose, housing the Plexiglas-enclosed driver's seat, which looks more like a cockpit. The engine is in the rear and a whole creation is low and sleek. Harp says he could design a family car on that style if he had the money.

More Than 100

The show includes more than 100 cars, ranging from stock sports cars—like Jaguars, Bugattis, MGs and Biatas—through conventional Fords and Kaisers and Naahs and Cadillacs with custom bodies and on to one-of-a-kind custom cars.

There are old cars in and among the jet-inspired designs of today. Many powerful Packards and Duennbergs and Rolls-Royces of the '30s are still handsome travel for sports-car fanatics.

But the major portion of the show is given over to the real sports cars. These are usually low convertibles with unusual features and strange designs. Some have chain drive. Some have right-hand controls. Some have the instrument panel on the floor. There are gear shifts on the wheel, on the floor and on the dashboard. Some look like mobile peanuts and others seem two blocks long.

Most of them are imported, and it isn't hard to tell which. There was a warning sticker on one Italian-made Biatas, which read: "In the limit 1,000 miles NO EXCEED the limit of 3,000 RPM."

But America is producing some new sports cars. Packard unveiled its new Pan-American which is a long, sparkling creation. The convertible top, when folded, is covered with a metal lid, decorated with the radio serial which juts toward the rear at just the right angle for spearing flying pedestrians. The instrument panel and steering wheel are trimmed in white leather.

The luxurious custom-made jobs have some fabulous touches. One has an electric phonograph built in. Many are air conditioned. A few have bags concealed in arm rests and other likely places.

Includes Desk

One custom car was big enough to include a desk for the traveling executive. Another car on display was the Phantom Corsair, originally built as "The Car of Tomorrow" for the New York World's Fair in 1939 at a cost of $7,000. Tomorrow hasn't come yet for that car; it's still too futuristic for today's tastes.

It is practically a hide-out, because glass is minimized. The headlights are almost concealed and so would be any passengers riding in the car. When you open the door, part of the roof lifts up so you can enter it.

Also on view is the chassis of a sports car first exhibited in New York in 1918. It was made in Ireland. Many of its features are just now coming into general use. Some are still considered advanced by car designers.

There were no samples distributed.

WOMEN IN ARMED FORCES—A Unified Team of Women in the Armed Forces will present special programs Friday at the JayCee luncheon at noon and at a dinner meeting sponsored by the B&PW and Altrusa Clubs at 7:30 p.m. in Hotel Scharbauer. Three of the six members of the team are pictured. Left to right, they are: 1st Lt. Helen Mannion, AFNC, San Antonio; Lt. Eugenia Moseley, NC, USN, Dallas, and Capt. Lillian Dunlap, ANC, Fort Sam Houston.

AUTOMOTIVE HINT

One way to free sticky valves is to insert the disconnected end of the windshield wiper hose into a can of valve oil. Suction will draw the oil to the valve stems, although there will be plenty of smoke because of the oil going through the engine, no harm will be done. When the valves are free, the windshield wiper may be connected again.

ILLEGAL USE

It is very commonly believed that a person may freely make any patented article, providing it is only for his own use. This, however, is not correct, and unauthorized construction or use of a patented article may constitute infringement, even if it is not sold.

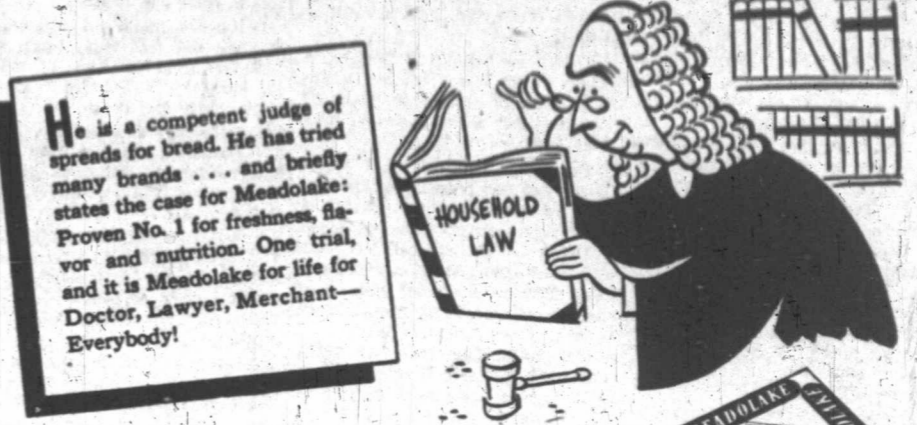

WATER-LOCKED SEA

The famous Sargasso sea, a 2,500,000 square-mile area of floating seaweed in the Atlantic, which was discovered by Christopher Columbus, touches no land.

CIRCULAR FORT

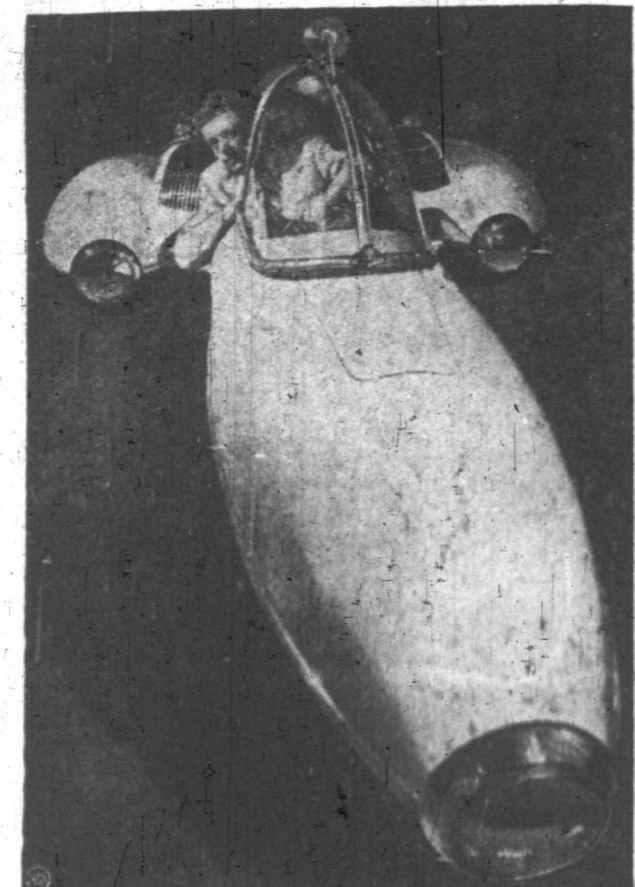

A Martello tower is a circular masonry fort designed to form a part of coastal defense. These forts were popular about 1800, but have been discontinued as they were found to be of little practical value.

Reservists Demand Public Apology For Charges Filed Against Stay-Down Airmen

DALLAS (AP)—A group of reserve officers at Randolph Air Force Base, San Antonio, were reported Wednesday to be demanding a public apology from the Air Force for "illegal charges" brought against men who have refused to fly.

Lacey E. Crain, president of the Conco Chemical Company of Dallas, said he was sent a carbon copy of a letter mailed by the reserve officers.

He said the letter also demanded that the officers who initiated charges against eight "stay-down" fliers be court-martialed themselves for improper use of their positions.

Crain declined to identify reservists who signed the letter "because I don't want to get them into trouble." He said the copy received did not indicate how widely the letter was distributed or to whom it was sent.

"I presume I was sent a copy because of my offer recently to put up $100 toward a fund to give these boys proper legal defense," said Crain.

He said the letters charged that the "Air Force has caused irreparable damages to the reputations of a large group of reserve officers by the illegal charge brought against them, based on prejudice and not reason."

"It is essential," he said the letter continued, "that a public apology be made by the Air Force in order that the officers formally charged with disobedience be cleansed of any stigma that may be attached to them or their families."

The letter cited Air Force Regulation #9-1 to back up their claim that charges against the reservists are illegal. The letter quoted the regulation as saying, "Flying is considered to be a voluntary duty."

Crain, a former enlisted man, said he felt the situation was the result of "West Point and regular officers discriminating against the reservists. That's where the real fight is."
