Midland Rodeo Looks Ahead

Midland Fair, Inc., Sunday night closed its 18th Annual World Championship Midland Rodeo-the largest, best and most successful ever held in this headquarters city of the Permian Basin Empire.

New records were established in entertainment, interest, enthusiasm and attendance, as Midland Rodeo further established its claim of being one of the top rodeos of the nation.

Midland Fair, of course, is due the credit for presenting the fine Western entertainment, but it is to the thousands of loval and faithful rodeo fans of Midland and other area cities that credit should go for the overall success of the celebration. It takes capacity crowds to assure the complete success of such an event, and the 1952 Midland Rodeo was blessed with record crowds at each of the five performances.

Officials of the fair association have expressed thanks and appreciation to the crowds and to all firms, organizations and individuals who had parts in making the annual show a grand success

Never before has such fine support from so many persons been accorded Midland Rodeo, and surely this fine cooperation was responsible for the success of the at-river and its tributaries grows more pressing every day that development progresses in a half dozen different directions.

This control apparently has come only through an inter-state com-pact. A commission to study and promote this agreement now is at work under the chairmanship of Frank Banks, the man generally credited with having built Grand Coulee Dam. But final agreement is perhaps years away.

Meantime, many rivalries from special interest groups complicate the whole business. Irrigation versus power. Private power vs. public power. And in a few instances where local public utility districts think the federal government agencies are moving too slowly these little "authorities" propose building their

Grand Coulee Dam itself, the world's largest concrete structure and the central project of the Coluhbia system, still is a number-one tourist attraction, although it has been operating more than 10 years.

It is the world's largest power producer-almost 2,000,000 kilowatts. But it is capable of being made bigger. The site for a third Coulee powerhouse now is being investigated.

Grand Coulee has cost about $750,000,000 thus far. That is about what New York City has spent for its water supply system. Yet or one of Grand Coulee's 12 water pumps could supply as much water as New York uses every day.

These Grand Coulee pumps raise the water from Lake Roosevelt, behind the dam, for 280 feet to an equalizing reservoir. From this flows the water that will, in time, irrigate a million acres of new farmland in Central Washington.

break, and realtors are getting a shot in the arm. That's Midland's consensus on the relaxing of Regulation X, effective Wednesday.

The Federal Reserve Board eased that regulation in an announcement Monday and thereby permits smaller down payments on the purchase of homes.

One firm, the Midland Realeteria, reported that it had received seven calls within the first hour after the announcement of the cut was made. The concern is developing the new Trueland Addition in Northeast Midland.

A spokesman for C. L. Cunningham, who has announced the opening of his Permian Estates in Western Midland, said that while it still is too early to report the
