NATO'S Record Warns Reds

The career of NATO has been beset by differences among the Western nations, by setbacks, downward revisions of goals, confusions and dire predictions of final

But despite all, the organization was effectively put in being and latest reports indicate it is not far from achieving the reasonable goals set for it last Winter at Lisbon.

U. S. officials at the Pentagon say the objective of 4,000 combat-ready aircraft by December 31 will be missed by only five or six per cent.

The aim of 50 land divisions, 25 fit for combat and 25 in reserve, will be "comfortably close" to fulfillment. By this Pentagon men mean the 25 combat-ready units will be fully manned and equipped and the 25 reserve units will be well on the way.

These figures are somewhat tentative. The complete and exact state of readiness achieved this year will not be known until NATO holds a meeting December 15 to set fresh goals for 1953 and 1954.
