Coaches, like people who stand at New York's 42nd and Broadway eventually could see everyone they know if they stood at the door of the Arkansas coaches office. Especially at the turnover rate Razorback mentors paraded through this year!

Not counting assistants, scouts and friendly advisers, three big men-track Coach Johnny Morriss, cage Coach Presley Askew and football Coach Otis Douglas-all took a slow train out of Arkansas. The latter two resigned-at the end of poor seasons.

Morriss, it will be remembered, was at the Texas Relays at Austin last Spring when an Associated Press writer tapped him on the shoulder and said. "Have you heard that you were fired today?" He hadn't, but he was.

Arkansas now has its cage situation settled with Glen Rose at the post, its track coach to be taken from the staff; and Paul (Bear) Bryant on the hook as a possible football headmaster.

"We'll announce something definite in 10 days or two weeks," nsas officials said last week. They added, "We'd like to contact e other name coaches also," The job, however, seems to be Bryant's the asking. Or his wife's asking either. She looked over the Fayetteville campus while Bryant talked with officials.

Bryant also is a great public relations man for whatever college he serves. Always in demand as a speaker, he's forever here and there—one of the reasons Kentucky's Wildcats are a much better known football

As a friend of the press, which likes bizarre things or at least something colorful to write about. Bryant has a flair for "giving them something."

It was a surprise, therefore, to Texas sports writers when they couldn't enter the 'Cats' dressing room for a while following the Kentucky Cotton Bowl victory over TCU last New Year's Day. Eventually the doors swung open and the scribblers shoved in at once to see about seven husky linesmen on a pedestal, a trainer's table. On bended knees and with arms in praise-Allah fashionwere the others on the team.

Bryant quickly barked, "Ready?" and waved his hands like a maestro; his boys on knees began to sing:

"Because of you," the exhausted bassos drummed, "there's a song in my heart . . ." Those linemen, Bryant said, had won the game.

The Apartments All Midland Is Talking About!

Yes, the new, modern Yucca-Tan Apartments are the "talk of the town". The many families who came out to inspect the new rental units Sunday are telling their friends about the numerous desirable features, including the very attractive brick construction . . . the softtone interiors, finished in washable, rubber-base paints . . . the central heat . . . hardwood floors . . . venetian blinds . . . tile baths . . . Youngstown kitchens . . . tremendous closets with ultra-modern sliding doors . . . and all the other things that most people want in their place of residence.

Another thing that our Sunday callers said they liked was the very nice address that may now be theirs at such a moderate cost. Kansas and Storey Streets, just west of the Andrews Highway. In this very nice northwest part of the city, the new residents of Yucca-Tan will be within six blocks of two elementary schools, four blocks from the Permian Village shopping center and four blocks from the proposed shopping center in Permian Estates, three blocks from the new Furr's super market, and six churches are being built within four blocks from the apartments. Come out today and look these new apartments over . . . we know you'll like them, too!

Rare Whoopers Losing In Battle Against Extinction

AUSTWELL-P-Fear that the whooping cranes have lost ground in their battle against extinction was expressed Tuesday by Julian Howard, manager of Aransas Wildlife Refuge.

Only 20 whoopers have been counted on ground tours of the refuge in the last four weeks, but it is possible others are on Matagorda Island, where no count yet has been made, Howard said.

Twenty-eight cranes, the only olony of whoopers in the world, took off last April in their Summer migration to the Far North, some-where in Arctic Canada where they breed and hatch their young. This was the smallest flock in several years. There had been 34 wild birds and two captives at Aransas Refuge previously.

The return migration to Aransas Refuge on Blackjack Peninsula began in October and it is believed that all have arrived by now at the

Public-Spirited Leaders

When General Eisenhower underwent the ordeal of his first political press conference last June, he was asked what use, if any, he would make of General MacArthur's

Eisenhower replied that he would feel free to call upon MacArthur when and as problems arose with which the latter might have special experience or competence. There was the faintest hint MacArthur might even be put to work in an Eisenhower Administration.

In the ensuing months, however, no signs developed that the two generals, who once had worked together, were in contact at all. Rumors flew thick about proposed meetings and the like, but nothing ever came of them. Overtures may have been made, although it is difficult to nail down the facts.

There were stories that Ike was hurt because his old chief never congratulated him on his nomination. After the election, MacArthur hailed the result as a "Republican" triumph but pointedly refrained from mentioning the winner's name.

On the other hand, MacArthur made it plain he felt slighted that nobody had asked his help on Asiatic questions, especially the knotty Korean dilemma.

The whole matter entered a new phase when Mac-Arthur recently declared in a speech that he has a plan for settling Korea which involves neither pulling out nor risking general war.

Eisenhower, fresh from his own visit there and toiling hard to put new life into American and UN policy in Korea, plainly wishes nothing to stand in the way of a satisfactory war settlement. Whatever their differences, Eisenhower chose to ignore them in the interest of deeper considerations. He cabled MacArthur that he would like to meet informally with him and have the "full benefit of than one evening." your thinking and experience." He wants to learn Mac-Arthur's plan.

Scholar, Politician Now Agree Campaigners Spend Too Much

By DOUGLAS LARSEN

WASHINGTON - There's now complete agreement between the political scientists and the practical politicians the subject of excess campaign expenditures.

Too much money is spent over and above the present limit. It's not all spent properly and efficiently. And there's not much that present law can do about it.

SYNOPSIS: Captain Longhair wants the elves from Santa Land to walk a plank into the sea. But Santa makes a deal, He exchanges the Merry Christmas for the pirate's ship. The 48 hours are almost up and he knows it will turn back into a toy soon. All the Santa Land elves are on the pirate's ship except Jonathan. The Pirate Captain won't let him go. Pirate Captain won't let him go.

As Santa and the elves watch, the Merry Christmas turns back into a toy and Jonathan, the pirates and the treasure go down

CHAPTER XIII THE BATTLE

WHAT confusion there was! The W Merry Christmas was now nothing but a toy ship. The sea was filled with screaming pirates. The treasure was at the bottom of the water.

Aboard the pirate ship the brownies clustered anxiously at the rail. If they stayed where they were the pirates would board the ship. If they sailed, away they would leave the Prince behind. "We must stay and fight!" said

The submarine in the cow pasture is also another historic milestone in the atomic age. Just 10 worked out satisfactorily in the laboratory ago, Dr. Enrico Fermi touched to be finally built and tested. The test site will be ready for the scientists and some engineers to take over by some time early next year. Still In Infancy

The land-locked submarine hull itself is still in its infancy. A large yellow cylinder, it looks about 120 feet long and 30 feet in diameter. It will never have a bow or stern, but will be otherwise complete to the tiniest detail.

"In fact." says one of the scien tists working on it, "when we're finished, all you'd have to do would be to tack a head and tail on it nd you could sail-it right away. But when it has served its purpose as a guinea pig. it will be taken apart and abandoned.

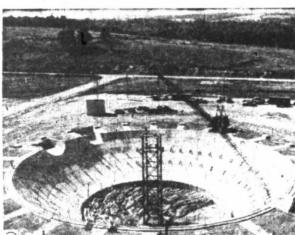

The building for the test will be like a mammoth ball, some 225 feet in diameter. A visiting newsman already has come up with a name for it: the "Atom's Apple." Building In Building

The ball shape is for safety reasons. Any nuclear reactor, like a munitions plant, is somewhat dangerous. And while GE is confident that the safeguards of the reactor off the first self-sustained nuclear itself will be sufficient if anything chain reaction in a uranium-gra- goes wrong, it was decyted to take phite pile at Stagg Field Stadium extra precautions because of the
