

Confident Living

By NORMAN VINCENT PEALE

How To Handle Hostile Persons

"How can I handle a person who dislikes me?" This question comes from a high school boy who, obviously, is very troubled.

A similar question came from one of the most impressive appearing women I have ever met. She was dressed exquisitely and styled in the latest fashion.

Still a third person has brought up the same matter, an officer of a large company who was suffering from distress because one of his fellow officers had taken an acute dislike to him.

"What Shall I Do?" "And," he said, "it is very difficult because we have no choice but to work together. I don't dislike the man. I am hurt by him. But yet he dislikes me, and I just don't know what to do about it."

These three questions came at about the same time and I gather that this must be a very common problem. I suppose it is hard for any of us, in the course of our lives, to avoid running into the problem of dislike.

The three people I have mentioned had one reaction in common. They were wrought up, indignant, nervous, on edge. As I talked about their problem, I came to a helpful statement in a letter sent to me by a friendly reader.

This particular reader wrote that a verse had meant a great deal to her and she wondered why she never had heard a sermon on it. Well, I must confess that, although I have read the Bible many times over, this particular passage never caught my attention.

That is a very wise observation. Obviously, the verse means that, in handling people who dislike you, the first step is to get quiet inwardly. When you are quiet inwardly, you are in position where no one can make trouble for you.

Acquire the inner quietness the Bible teaches. Learn to know yourself. And practice loving people. Then you'll be able to handle people who dislike you. You will change enemies into friends.

New Soviet Jet Bombers Hover Close To Japan

A U. S. AIR BASE, NORTHERN JAPAN — (P) — Russian jet bombers which travel at almost the speed of sound are based in strength within easy striking distance of every major Japanese city, it was learned Sunday on highly qualified authority.

High Ranking Diplomat Dies By Own Hand

WASHINGTON — (P) — John C. Montgomery, 41, a State Department official known to his friends as a happy, church-going man, was found hanged in a fashionable Georgetown home Saturday.

The nude body was found by A. Marvin Braverman, Washington attorney and frequent social escort of former President Truman's daughter, Margaret.

Montgomery had hanged himself from the third floor railing by a bathrobe sash and a hempen cord. The body tumbled down a flight, they theorized, when the cord broke.

An engagement book in Montgomery's neat third-floor room indicated he expected to attend a party Saturday night and to usher at church Sunday.

Jim Skipworth, 76, Ranch Pioneer, Dies

PLAINVIEW — (P) — Jim Skipworth, 76, pioneer Texas rancher and banker, died here Friday. Funeral services will be held Sunday in Dimmit.

Skipworth moved to Swisher County in 1900. As a youth he worked for the XIT, A.J. and J.A. ranches. He was a banker at Kress from 1910 to 1923. In 1928 he moved to Dimmit where he was city secretary from 1937 until his retirement in 1952.

Insurance Firm Blueprints 16-Story Headquarters Here

Another office building loomed Saturday on the impressive Midland skyline.

President R. W. Pullen disclosed that the Western States Mutual Life Insurance Company of Dallas planned a 16-story structure at a cost of $2,500,000 on the southeast corner of Wall Street and Marienfeld Streets.

The IL-28's have a speed of about 650 miles an hour and are capable of carrying the atomic bomb.

These medium bombers are regarded as the real Soviet threat by Japan's air defenders.

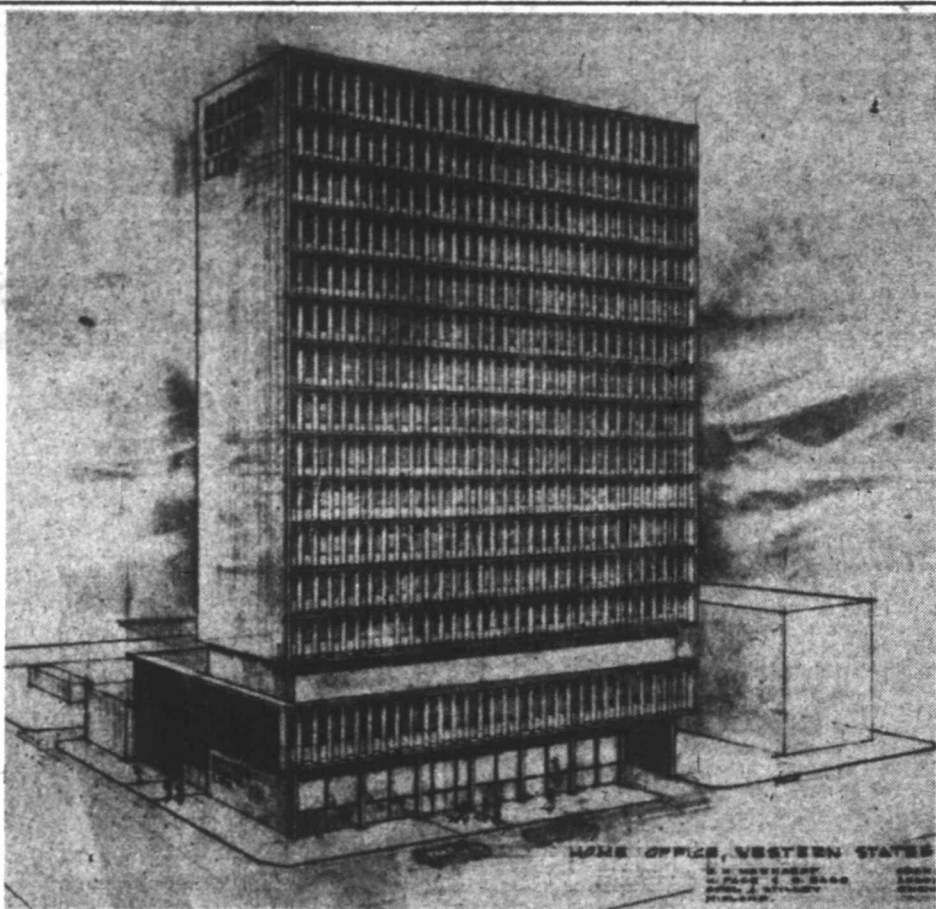

Hundreds of MIG-15 fighters also based on the Russian-held islands would be only the screening force for this bomber fleet were Russia to strike this empire.

The Reds have been parading the IL-28's back and forth between Sakhalin Island, 30 miles north of Hokkaido and the Kurile Island Russian bases, just a step northeast of Hokkaido, the source said.

Martin Bid To Talk Water May End Long Court Battle

The Colorado River Municipal Water District appeared ready Saturday to accept an offer by Martin County Judge James McMorris to "talk over in a friendly fashion" their dispute over Martin County water.

"We hope that regulations can be adjusted to better meet the situation for all interests and to spare both districts the expense and unpleasantness of litigation," said Piner.

PROPOSED MIDLAND OFFICE BUILDING—This is the architect's drawing of the 16-story office building planned in Midland by the Western States Mutual Life Insurance Company of Dallas.

heating and air-conditioning units planned on the roof. The patio of the main lobby will be a scenic panorama with trees and plants, Pullen said.

"I believe in the future of Midland," the insurance executive assured. "I think its population will reach 100,000 in the foreseeable future."

This company would be the first insurance firm to locate its headquarters here. It is a Texas-operating business now.

Hot Foot Has Vigor

BOISE, IDAHO — (P) — A Boise ditchmaster was in the hospital Saturday because his shoes exploded.

Clarence Martin said he put sodium chlorate in some ditches about three weeks ago. The weather was wet and his shoes apparently soaked up some of the explosive chemical.

Sum Proposed For Enlarging Public Library

A petition asking for a $500,000 bond issue election to provide funds for the expansion of Midland County's public library facilities will be presented Monday at the regular meeting of Commissioners Court.

The proposed enlargement of the library facilities has been endorsed by numerous civic groups, including the West Texas Geological Society, the Wednesday Study Club and other organizations.

The library presently is located in the southeast corner of the first floor of the courthouse and is badly overcrowded.

"The geological society," said Hill, "is particularly interested in this project since we have in the library one of the country's outstanding technical collections."

The preliminary plans have been completed. They call for a library on the first two floors, extending the length of the courthouse.

Preliminary estimates of this project had placed the cost at almost $1,000,000. The $500,000 would finance the construction of the library portion of the plans with some of the other additions which would house county offices.

Eighteen-year-old Johnny Lee Music came to Midland Saturday to look for a job and he wound up with his old one back.

Before he had been here more than an hour, agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation picked him up in downtown Midland and held him for military authorities.

Mexico Teaches Socialism Alone Can't Solve Riddles

By PETER EDSON
NEA Staff Correspondent
MEXICO CITY—A month's travel through modern old Mexico offers many striking proofs that the country below the Rio Grande has found out the hard way it can't develop by nationalism and socialism alone.
That is the one big lesson Mexico offers, not only to the rest of Latin America but to the under-developed countries all over the world.
Mexico's new president, Dr. Adolfo Ruiz Cortines, has not tipped his hand on all his policies. But Mexicans and resident American businessmen all expect a more conservative administration—and a more honest one.

pressure has begun to be applied through government attempts to allocate scrap iron.
Mexico is still to be regarded as a socialist country in which nationalization plays a big part. But the Mexican Party of Revolutionary Institutions (PRI), which has ruled the roost since 1930, has found out that government can't do everything.

The petroleum industry was nationalized in the 1930's by seizing 17 British and American companies. But since then, the Mexican oil monopoly has learned it could not explore and develop its resources as fast as needed, so today two advantageous types of drilling contracts are being given American companies.

MEXICO'S CORTINES: A more conservative future?

GM Biggest Industry
A year ago Mexico completed acquisition of all its railroads from foreign capital. This was done by purchasing the old west coast Southern Pacific line, a losing operation, for $12,000,000—a junk value far below the cost of the roadbed. But the government, which took over all the other railroads, allowed private Mexican capital to acquire this one.

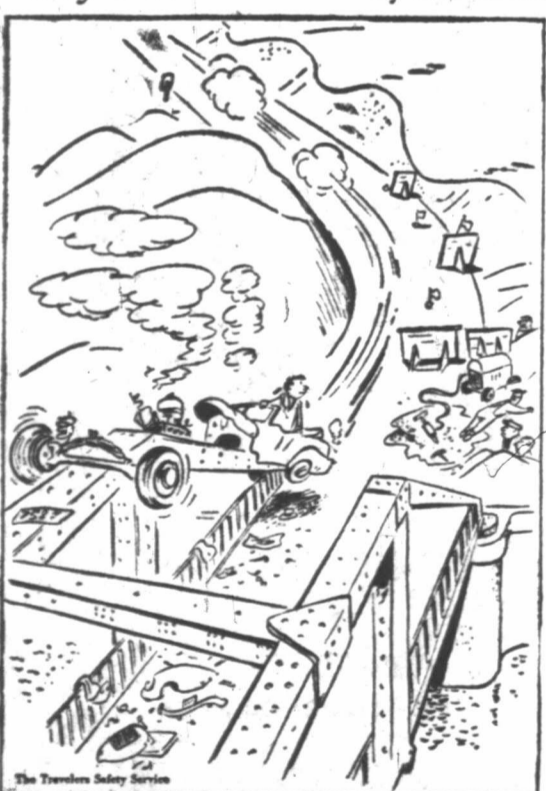

FINGERPRINTS ARE DETACHED

NEW YORK—If the owner of a $100 gold watch and a pair of kidskin gloves will call at the Liberty Avenue police station, he can have them. But the police expect no claimants.

Krupp Sues British For Art Collections

BONN, GERMANY—(P)—Alfried Krupp, former German munitions magnate, is suing the British authorities in Germany for compensation for the loss of art treasures from the family mansion.
British officials say the claim has been lodged in the Control Commission Claims Court at Herford in the British Zone. They declined to say what sum was involved, but official estimates put it at more than $500,000.
It is alleged that valuable paintings, Dresden china, Ming vases, rare books and Oriental carpets were looted from the gloomy, old-fashioned Villa Huegel at Essen, family mansion of the armaments dynasty.

Two State Agencies Marked For Death In Pearson's Bill

AUSTIN—(P)—Two state agencies were threatened with death in bills filed by Rep. O. P. Pearson of Navasota Friday.
Pearson proposed abolition of the Legislative Budget Board and the Legislative Council to save the quarter-million dollars recommended by Governor Shivers for their operation the next two years.
The two agencies were set up by the 51st Legislature in 1949 for the announced purpose of helping the state to operate more efficiently.

WASHINGTON OIL—Congress May Act Soon On Tidelands

By JOSEPH HUTTLINGER
Reporter-Telegram Washington Oil Correspondent
WASHINGTON—The Congress gets moving soon—perhaps, next week—on legislation giving the states title to the tidelands with President Eisenhower on the sidelines.
Reports to the contrary, the President has decided to let stand President Truman's "last ditch" executive order transferring the lands from the Interior to the Navy Department.
The "let it stand" decision is based, White House intimates say, on the belief that President Truman's order, despite the fanfare about it, actually changes the situation little.
While the Navy has broad powers, including power to operate naval oil reserves, the Navy is not expected to use them in this case. Eisenhower is expected to ask R. B. Anderson of Vernon, Texas, new Secretary of the Navy, to do little until the Congress acts.
Politically, Eisenhower faces a hazard in openly disagreeing with President Truman that the tidelands oil is headed as a naval reserve. Thus, his advisers say, let Congress handle the matter.
President Eisenhower stands ready to sign a state title bill—settling 15 years of disputed ownership—once the Congress has acted and sent it to him. A substantial majority of both House and Senate were for state title last year and probably still are. President Truman, however, blocked action by a veto.
Hearings Planned
Just when Congress will act, is to be seen. Chairman Hugh Butler, (R-Neb.), of the Senate Interior Committee, wants to begin hearings soon, and one committee source said it could be within a week. Senator Butler says he will operate through subcommittees. Senator Price Daniel of Texas is a member of the committee.
Chairman Chauncey Reed, (R-Ill.), of the House Judiciary Committee, to which has been referred tidelands bills, may let the Senate move first, since the House acted first in the last Congress. He said this week he has no firm plans yet.
The briefest sort of hearings may suffice, in view of the volume of testimony from previous hearings on tidelands.
Two types of quiet claim bills have been introduced in Congress. One simply affirms state title within three - mile limit (10.3 miles in the case of Texas) while the other provides for leases of outer limits of the continental shelf.
One of the "package" bills with the states to receive 37.5 per cent of revenue from rentals, royalties, etc., beyond the state-title areas, by Senator Daniel, provides for state leasing of the outer area, subject to confirmation by the Secretary of the Interior. Another by Representative Wilson (D-Texas) provides for federal leasing by the Interior Department.
A series of legal questions plague the tidelands issue.
Some question whether the Congress can set aside President Truman's executive order giving the lands to the Navy, and just how. Others wonder if President Eisenhower can set it aside by another executive order.
Whether President Truman had the authority to turn over the off-

TEXAS PILOT HANGS TO CHUTE BY BARE HANDS, DIES IN FALL

By WILLIAM C. BARNARD
AN AMERICAN BASE ON HOK-KAIDO—(P)—The tragic, agonizing story of a U. S. Fighter pilot who clung to his parachute harness with bare hands and finally dropped to his death was pieced together Saturday.
The pilot was Capt. Jesse C. O'Brien, San Antonio, Texas, an easygoing, blond, blue-eyed six-footer whose body was recovered this week from the snow-frosted slope of the highest volcano, in Northern Japan.
Lt. Col. John W. Lasko, Austin, Texas, commanding officer of the 52nd Strategic Squadron of F-84 Thunderjets defending Japan, told Saturday of grim evidence of O'Brien's last terrific struggle to hang on to the parachute. He lost the struggle perhaps within only seconds of safety.
O'Brien was a member of one of three squadrons of the 27th Strategic Fighter Wing, once based at Bergstrom Field, Austin, which flew the Pacific in October for temporary duty with Japan's Air Defense Force. The popular Texan was a veteran of 100 combat missions on a former tour in Korea.
It was October 19, Lasko said, that O'Brien and a buddy, Lt. Clarence W. Harris, Jr., Austin and San Antonio, took off from a Northern Japanese base on an emergency patrol into Northern Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost island.
Russian air bases are on islands adjoining Hokkaido. When Russian planes approach Japanese territory, American radar sights them and triggers off a defense system. U. S. jets immediately take to the air. It was this sort of alarm which sent O'Brien on his last mission.

G-Men Investigate South Texas Area For 'Rights' Data

SAN DIEGO, TEXAS—(P)—Possible violations of civil rights in politically-torn Duval County are being probed by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, a newspaper says.
The Corpus Christi Caller-Times said Friday at least four FBI agents have been working in Duval County—home base of Political Boss George Parr—for the last week or 10 days.
The paper added the line of questioning followed by the agents indicates they seek to find out if there have been violations of civil rights as guaranteed under the 14th Amendment.
So far, however, there has been no official confirmation of the reported investigation. A. F. Lorton, Jr., Houston, district FBI agent, declined comment. He said it was the bureau's policy not to comment on cases under investigation. He would not say an investigation was underway nor would he deny it.

More Voters Rush To Pay Poll Taxes

Midland County voters began moving in on the Court House in ever-increasing numbers Saturday as the last-minute poll tax rush began.
For the first time, lines began forming within the deadline for the payment of the tax only one week away.
County Tax Assessor-Collector J. M. Speed said 2,150 poll tax receipts and 365 exemption certificates had been issued through Saturday noon. Next Saturday is the last day for payment of the poll tax.
Speed pointed out there will be city and school elections this year, along with at least one bond election.
Fourteen thousand persons qualified last year for participation in the various elections.

DREW PEARSON ON THE WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Copyright, 1953, By The Bell Syndicate, Inc.
Drew Pearson says: CIO-AFL breach may widen under Eisenhower; Taft would abolish present Small Business Committee; CIO steelworkers offer $250,000 for Truman library.

WASHINGTON—Two quiet Eisenhower moves have made it clear that the new President is not planning to heal the breach between the CIO and the Republican Party. Instead, it looks like a wedge is being driven between the AFL and CIO.

Move No. 1 was Eisenhower's refusal to see Walter Reuther, new CIO president, shortly before his inauguration. It has been almost automatic in past administrations that the head of either of the big labor groups gets in to see the President.

Move No. 2 was refusal to fill the office of undersecretary of Labor with a CIO man. Since the secretary of Labor is an A. F. of L. official it was taken for granted in labor circles that the No. 2 post, undersecretary, would go to the CIO. But when Reuther asked for a conference with Eisenhower to discuss this matter, he was told to talk to Secretary Durkin.

To tell a CIO president to go hat-in-hand to ask favors of an AFL man is like waving a red flag at a bull. However, Reuther did send his two top aides, Allan Haywood and James Carey, to confer with Durkin. But before Haywood and Carey could open their mouths, Durkin reported he already had made his choice for undersecretary.

Durkin declined even to identify the man, who later turned out to be another AFL man, Lloyd A. Masburn, California labor commissioner. However, he did offer to "talk over" the appointment of a CIO man to be one of the assistant secretaries of Labor.

"That isn't what we're interested in," exploded Haywood. "Walter Reuther wrote Eisenhower about the undersecretaryship, to which we are entitled by all rights. Our organization represents almost 6,000,000 American workers. The AFL got the top post here when you were appointed secretary and we didn't object. But we're entitled to the Number Two job."

"I'm already committed to the man I've recommended to General Eisenhower," replied Durkin, almost apologetically. "There's nothing I can do about it."

"I've known and liked you for years, Martin, but I never expected this kind of treatment from you," shot back Haywood. "All I can say is, it's a mighty raw deal."

Fellow GOP horseman, the Republicans have asked almost no favors from rebel Sen. Wayne Morse of Oregon since he bolted the GOP. Shortly before the inauguration, however, they made an exception.

Morse got a long-distance telephone call from ex-Sen. Harry Darby, who is Republican national committeeman for Kansas and one of Eisenhower's original boosters.

"Wayne," said Darby, "do you remember that stable where you keep your horses? We have two prize stallions coming from Kansas and we want a good place for them to stay. Will you arrange it?"

"If it's to help horses rather than the Republican Party, I sure will," replied Morse.

The two horses are owned by Barney Lamar, the Kansas hotel man. One of them, Ancho Empire, is valued at $10,000. Barney and his son rode them proudly at the head of the Kansas division down Pennsylvania Avenue on Inauguration Day. They were one of the hits of the parade.

Small Business Champion It's supposed to be a political secret, but Senator Taft is planning to put the Senate Small Business Committee under the thumb of a friend of big business.

Taft's plan, if he can get away with it, is to abolish the present small business committee and set up a brand new committee under the leadership of Sen. Homer Capehart of Indiana, the juke box manufacturer, who has consistently championed big business.

Otherwise, under the Senate's anti-rules, the Small Business Committee would fall into the hands of New Hampshire's Bible-quoting Sen. Charles Tobey, a genuine friend of little business. Tobey has a habit of embarrassing big GOP contributors, and, to get around seniority rules, Taft has proposed simply doing away with the committee and forming a new one.

When Tobey got wind of this he flew into a rage, shouted for his secretary to get Taft on the phone. "Bob, what's this I hear about changing the Small Business Committee and putting it under Capehart?" Tobey blurted angrily.

"Why," flustered Taft, "that's pure gossip."

"I heard about it from three reputable sources," Tobey shot back. "Let me tell you, if this is done, it will be considered a repudiation of the present committee."

"You will be chairman of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee; you can't be chairman

LAST OF PROP-DRIVEN FIGHTERS— Rugged Corsairs Check Out After Full Decade Of Glory

By JOHN KAY ADAMS

DALLAS —(AP)—If airplanes could speak, the indomitable old F4U Corsair Navy fighter really would be able to tell an adventure story.

The 13-year-old battler, veteran of two wars, never would have a better chance to sound off than at its imminent "going out" party at the Chance Vought Aircraft Division of United Aircraft Corporation here. The Navy is about to take delivery on the last of the gull-winged fighters that starred in World War II and still are going strong in Korea.

The occasion marks the end of an era, because Corsair No. 12,571 will be the last propeller-driven fighter plane built in the country. From now on, it's all jets.

Tales Of Heroism The F4U could tell some hair-raising battle stories. The men who told it have heard their brain child has flown "without wings," taken off from water without pontoons, downed an enemy plane without a shot and even bagged one of the newest Russian-built MIG-15 jets.

Seven versions of the plane are in use in Korea, where Corsairs handled 82 per cent of all close air support sorties flown by Navy and Marine pilots in the first 10 months of that war. The relatively inexpensive Corsairs have one great advantage over jets. The old-propeller planes can hang around longer in a battle zone.

Long range was one of the startling assets of the Corsairs when the first ones went into combat Feb. 12, 1943, in the dark days of the battle for Guadalcanal. The day the planes arrived their pilots logged nine hours of patrol—unheard of then for a fighter.

Whistling Death Next day the Japanese at Bougainville, 300 miles away, were startled to see the gull-wings protecting the bombers. On the third day of combat, February 14, a motley collection of Allied planes was jumped by 50 Zeros. The U. S. lost two bombers, two P-40s, four P-38s and two Corsairs. It was the first and last time the Zero ever beat the Corsairs.

Japanese came to call it "Whistling Death." By the end of the war the score was 2,140 Japanese planes to 189 Corsairs shot down.

It was in Corsairs that Lt. Col. Gregory ("Pappy") Boyington developed the "fighter sweep." That simply was barging in over an enemy base with enough fighters to shoot down anything flying. Pappy got 23 victories before he was shot down. He sat out the war in prison.

MIG Learns Lesson The Corsair first flew on May 29, 1940. It is so old now as fighter planes go, its performance data is no secret. Everybody knows it will make about 450 miles an hour. But who cares? In this age of jet speeds, 450 miles an hour won't catch much of anything. That's what one careless MIG pilot thought. But a Corsair pilot turned into him, caught the MIG in his sights and scattered the shiny new jet over the Korean landscape.

The newest planes have undergone some 961 major engineering changes and a total of 21,000 production changes. There have been seven basic model changes and the cannon-packing planes now going to the French Navy under the mutual defense program are called the F4U-7.

The "Big Inch" is a pipe line carrying crude oil from Texas to Pennsylvania. It is 24 inches in diameter and 1,252 miles long.

The touch system of typewriting was little used before 1890, but since 1900, instruction in typewriting has almost universally used the touch system.

It is estimated that about three-quarters of human twins are the result of two fertile eggs, and only one-quarter the result of a single split egg.

FRIGID HOME FOR SHRINE FOR WATER GOD—The Japanese children, above, have built this igloo-like shrine to honor their God of Water, and will perform a centuries-old ritual before the representation of the god. The tradition still adhered to principally in the northeastern prefecture of Niigata and Akita, is that the God of Water appears in the winter in the form of snow.

Tread Lightly—Proud Foot!

That's a mighty proud foot you see there. It's resting on the accelerator of a 1953 Cadillac.

But we have a serious and timely warning for that proud and happy foot: Tread lightly!

Down under that accelerator is a dynamic 210-horsepower engine—coupled with the smoothest, quickest-acting Hydra-Matic Drive in history.

That great power was put there for the driver's safety in an emergency—and to provide that smooth, effortless, steady ride which is the essence of luxurious motoring.

It was not put there to enable a Cadillac to dominate the highway—or to dash into the lead when the traffic light turns green—or to outmaneuver the other cars on the road.

So don't ever exhaust that accelerator—unless you're in an emergency, and must do so for reasons of safety.

If other drivers covet the honors at the stop light—just smile and let them go. They are first away by your courtesy—and that should be satisfaction enough for anybody.

Just be happy and satisfied with the great luxury this powerful engine brings you—the infinitely smooth performance... the quick "lift" that comes when you nudge the throttle... the great reserve for a burst ahead in case of necessity.

And be happy, as you can't help being, with the scores and scores of other wonderful things about this magnificent car—its easy, relaxing ride, for instance... its distinguished and inspiring beauty... its rich, luxurious interiors... its honored and respected name... and its truly amazing economy.

Yes—there is so much about a Cadillac to inspire and delight its owner that he doesn't need the additional thrill of unleashing its spectacular performance when it isn't necessary.

So that's why we're sure he'll "Tread lightly!" He isn't in competition with anyone.

Seal Finds Home In Seattle's Zoo

SEATTLE (AP)—(P)—The children and some of the nearby residents loved the friendly seal who had been flipping around in Lake Sammamish for about a year. But irate fishermen wanted the seal eliminated because they felt it was downing too many lake trout. When the Fisheries Department decided to shoot the seal, it was discovered the lake was closed to shooting. The impasse was resolved when the Fisheries Department arranged to have the seal placed in the Woodland Park Zoo. There it will discover a playmate, a two-year-old seal.

HONG KONG (AP)—The Chinese Communist government is making over the nation's educational system, with emphasis on subjects dealing with heavy industry, reports the New China News Agency. Chinese colleges and college teachers were subjected to an intensive course in "ideological remoulding" in 1952, to get them on the Communist path. Teachers not pliable or adjustable to the Red ideas were weeded out. The Communists converted most institutions into technical schools and also built more technical schools.

If you go into the old bakery which advertises, "we have flipper dough today," and ask what it is, you'll be told "It's dough to fry; you fry it in a pan; regular bread dough." It turns out to be the "fried dough" of New England tradition—served in cruller-shaped bits—piping hot with maybe a sprinkling of sugar. But why do they call it "flipper dough?" Maybe because it's flipped over like a pancake in frying, but nobody is quite sure.

Crime Rate Skyrockets In Great Britain Because Of Acute Nail, Lumber Shortage

LONDON—Largely for want of some nails—and some lumber to put between them—Britain slowly is losing her battle against lawlessness.

A shortage of nails, lumber and other building materials has led to an acute lack of housing. Experts claim the housing problem is a big factor in England's growing crime rate.

It's partly to blame, for instance, for a shortage of 10,000 policemen. Sir Harold Scott, London police commissioner, says the lack of homes is an obstacle to recruiting.

Too Few Men

"I can't get enough men," he complains. "Indeed, I even lose a lot of men I already have. All because there are no homes for themselves and their families."

Aside from its effect on police forces, the housing shortage has helped hike the divorce rate. And with so many "broken homes," there has come the usual rise in juvenile delinquency.

Law-breakers meet the housing problem again when they're caught and sent to prison. British prisons are more crowded today than they've been for 75 years. More than 4,500 inmates are sleeping three to a cell for lack of space.

Many Are Repeaters

The annual report of the Prison Commissioners lists 24,000 inmates, the most since 1877. The number has been rising steadily for three years, sometimes at the rate of 300 or more a month.

Three-fourths are "repeaters," with one or more previous convictions. They're in and out of custody so often that some observers have facetiously suggested that the prisons use revolving doors. The governors of the Stafford and Lewes reformatories report a continued drop in the quality of young first offenders.

Bottomless Coffers

At Lewes, they're "less alert . . . less reliable." At Stafford, the governor says: "A number of lads to whom I've spoken about their futures have said, 'I hope I don't come back,' almost as if they had no power of decision as to whether they would or not."

The director of a regional training prison chimes in by branding the attitude of young prisoners "appalling."

"They regard the State as apparently possessing an unlimited number of bottomless coffers," he says, "which are there to supply their financial needs whenever they feel like it."

New Program

The prisons can't handle the influx. All available rooms and huts in 23 prisons are being used for sleeping purposes. But the commissioners report a need for at least six new 500-man institutions to siphon off the excess.

Restrictions on capital expenditures and staffs, however, have ruled out much expansion. The first new prison under the building program will be started this year, but may not be ready for use until sometime in 1957.

Until then, the Prison Commissioners say the situation stands to get worse, not better. All for the want of some nails.

The only animals remaining to be sold are several hundred registered range bulls. They will be offered privately.

The top price, $80 per 100 pounds, in the auctioning was paid for the reserve champion fat steer in the junior show divisions.

The 930-pound Hereford named George was sold by Marie Semler, 16-year-old 4-H Club member from Haigler, Neb., to George Ott, manager of the Aviation Country Club here. The junior show champion steer was sold earlier in the week.

At another auction Friday, 15 thoroughbred horses sold for an average of $392 per animal.

The top price, $1,150, was paid for Jinniyeh, a bay filly consigned by Stephen B. Strang, Golden, Colo., and purchased by Godley and Shephard of Elizabeth, Colo., for $1,150.

Britain To Give Grain Trade Back To Private Enterprises Next Harvest

By MICHAEL NEWMARCH

LONDON —(P)—Britain's grain trade will go back to private enterprise at the next harvest in the biggest and most bonfire of government controls since World War II.

It also is the most fundamental change Winston Churchill's Conservative government has made thus far in the socialist welfare state it inherited in October, 1951.

At one blow, the government decision will back down the present complex farm support program and build up another on a new pattern.

Full details of the new program are not yet known. But this much has been announced:

One day next Fall—price controls, rationing and government bulk purchasing of grain will come to an end and private traders will again become responsible for feeding Britain after 14 years. Government grain subsidies also will end April 1.

Grains Staple In Diet

Ever since 1939, the British government has had the direct responsibility of finding the bread grains and animal feed which keep starvation away from this overcrowded little island of 50,000,000.

The bread grains are one basic staple in the nation's diet. The other, livestock feed, is converted into about one-half of the animal proteins needed to keep Britons alive.

Much of British agriculture is a processing industry, not primary production. Thousands of farms operate by turning imported feed into eggs, poultry, pork and beef.

The grain trade is so big it accounts for a quarter of the huge food import bill of $3,640,000 a year.

Grain is important in other ways. It has colored this nation's cold war policy.

Buys From Russia

For Britain can find all the grain she needs from only two sources and taps both—the Soviet Union and North America.

Short of dollars, Britain seeks as much coarse grain as she can from Russia, and in spots with the U. S. over trade with the Reds always insists she must take no step that would upset Soviet grain deliveries. The alternative might be starvation or paying out so many dollars that a brutal new economic crisis would hit the island.

Thus it is of administrative detail to return the grain trade to private enterprise. It is a statement of faith that directly concerns the nation's stomachs, prosperity and foreign policy. Conservatives generally maintain private traders can deliver the goods more cheaply and more efficiently than the government has been doing since the war.

Farmers Cautious

Immediate reaction was cautious. But the new agricultural regime is bound to raise controversy.

Socialists likely will object that food prices will rise and that farmers, faced with an uncertain future, may let output drop.

The National Farmers Union—representing farmers, not farmhands—said it enters "strong reservations" about the plan, and pointed out that the withdrawal of government grain subsidies means a farmer will no longer know in advance how much he will have to pay for animal feed.

But, the union added, production probably will increase under the new regime of more freedom on the farms.

The biggest change for townsmen will be to their bread. Britons soon will be able to buy whiter bread than any time since 1939. But it will cost much more, as it will be unsubsidized.

In the longer term, the government obviously hopes the end of agricultural rationing and the scrapping of controls will speed the flow of meat and poultry products to the towns.

Theodore Roosevelt was the first U. S. President to use motor cars extensively, although William Howard Taft was the first to have a fleet of cars attached to the White House.

Ample Water Wells Put Indian Village Back In Business

GANDHIDHAM, INDIA —(P)—Wells reaching deep into this arid land plus the energetic work of 15,000 Hindu refugees from Pakistan are fast putting this brand new West Indian town on the map.

Gandhidham enthusiasts—the name means "Gandhi's Town"—claim this is the only Asian community with electricity and running water in every house.

The abundant water has been made possible by 16 new wells yielding 1,500,000 gallons daily. Planned by Hindu refugees from the Sind area surrounding Moselem Pakistan's capital city of Karachi, Gandhidham has enjoyed the backing of the Indian government Refugee Rehabilitation Ministry.

In two years, the population has jumped from zero to 15,000. Italian and American town planners, who have had a hand in the project, predict the figure will reach 100,000 within three years.

Coffee Given As First In Series Of Parties For Miss Butcher

As the first in a series of pre-nuptial compliments for Carol Patricia Butcher, Mrs. D. A. Bliven and her mother, Mrs. W. P. Knight, entertained with a coffee Thursday in the Knight home at 1201 West Missouri Street.

Miss Butcher, daughter of Mrs. Cary Preston Butcher, will become bride of Randolph Macon Richardson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Junius F. Richardson of Henderson on February 14.

In the receiving line for the coffee were the hostesses, the honoree and her mother, Mrs. Jack Kelsey and Mrs. O. C. Arnold alternated at the coffee service and others in the houseparty were Mrs. Harvey Conger, Mrs. James Binford, Mrs. A. E. Culbertson, Mrs. R. W. Hamilton, Mrs. Eleanor Wheeler and Mrs. Bruce McKague.

Decorations throughout the Knight home were in the bride's chosen colors, yellow and white. An arrangement of yellow roses and white candytuft in a cut glass bowl centered the refreshment table, which was laid with an heirloom crocheted cloth. Silver and cut glass appointments completed the setting.

Continuing the featured theme, an arrangement of yellow gladioli, white carnations and lemon leaves was used on the buffet in the dining room. Other floral arrangements included white gladioli and yellow ranunculus on the piano, yellow ranunculus and pussywillow in the guest bedroom and yellow jonquils and acacia in the den. All arrangements were in cut glass containers.

The honoree wore a corsage of yellow roses and others in the houseparty had corsages of white carnations with yellow ribbons and illusion.

Hostess gift to the honoree was a cut glass butter tub.

One-hundred and fifty were included on the guest list.

Fastidious Grooming Is Clue To Charm

Icy wind blows away your beauty in winter if you don't take extra care. This girl is sorry now that she never bothered with hand cream. Her hands are rough and red from constant dipping in water. But she finds comfort in using a rich cream (left) that she applies thickly before drawing on a pair of old cotton gloves to wear to bed. Henceforth she'll keep a bottle of hand lotion at both kitchen sink and bathroom basin and use them, and she'll make sure always to dry her hands thoroughly after washing. Her feet suffer, too, if she doesn't care for them. After a pedicure in which she files her nails straight across and softens and removes old cuticle, she applies nail cream to keep her toenails flexible and smooth (center). Back of the heels get regular creaming and occasionally she applies plenty of rich cream all over her feet and wears white socks to bed. Coming into a warm room out of the cold air can make your legs prickly and red so it's wise in winter to apply a good hand and body lotion to your legs before putting on your nylons (right).

By ALICIA HART
NEA Beauty Editor

Let your hands and feet say only nice things about you. Hands, of course, are direct tattle-tales, telling everyone you meet the kind of care you give yourself. Feet gossip about you in a more subtle way. If you neglect them, they put a careworn look on your face, a frown between your eyes, and give you lines before your time. People can think what they like about you then. Your feet don't care so long as they've paid you back.

If your hands are rough and lobster red, use a rich cream on them at night and cover them with a pair of old cotton gloves. By morning they will have drunk up all the cream.

Keep a bottle of hand lotion at the kitchen sink and beauty-coat your hands before dunking them in water. Cream them again when your dish-washing is finished. Before tackling housework, use your hand lotion and draw off fabric or rubber work gloves. This protects them from grime that takes so much scrubbing to get rid of. Blisters that form on tender palms will be guarded against also when you use gloves.

Before you go out in winter weather, use your protective lotion and don't think of making even a quick trip around the corner without your gloves on.

Do you dry your hands thoroughly after every washing? Girls wash their hands so many times during the day that sometimes they are chapped. If they still feel cool when they are supposedly dry, keep on patting them with the towel. Then use your hand lotion.

Your feet should get the same babying. If yours are in a rough, calloused condition, apply a rich cream to them at night and draw on a pair of white cotton socks. Give regular cream care to the backs of heels. Scrub them well with brush and soapy lather at bath time.

After a day of shopping, pick up your feet with a five-minute walk about the room on bare tip-toes. Then turn on both hot and cold water taps in the bathtub and alternate hot and cold on your feet.

Over-Thorough Explanations May Simply Bore Children

By MURIEL LAWRENCE
Harvey is five years old. His mother tells me that he won't mind her.
"I can get nothing through his head unless I holler at him," she writes. "Yesterday, I spent 15 minutes explaining nicely why he had to stop playing and take his bath. Not till I started yelling did he start to get undressed. He's a very stubborn child."
He's not stubborn at all. He's just bored. If his mother will quit trying to get things "through his head" that don't belong there, she'll discover this for herself.

Children of this age do not share our enthusiasm for physical cleanliness. They figure that if we think a bath is important, we'd act upon our conviction instead of talking about it. They think that if we want them bathed, we should escort them to the bathroom and put them in the water.

Last year was an outstanding year for the Permian Basin Agency of the American General Life Insurance Company, according to information released last week by Billy Curry of Midland, district manager.

Burke Baker, president of the company which has its home office in Houston, notified Curry in a congratulatory telegram the Midland office showed a total of $1,400,000 in new business paid and issued, and a gain of $1,152,000 in life insurance in force.

Public Works Abuses

Most people are pretty well aware that today flood-control and river and harbor projects do for the nation's lawmakers what post offices used to do.

Over the last decade or so, a good many abuses have grown up to aggravate a basically questionable waterways policy. The coming to power of a new administration next month provides a fitting excuse for reviewing this entire program with the intent of putting it on a sound, economical footing.

Such a review wisely has been suggested by a congressional subcommittee that has spent 15 months studying the country's public works program.

The investigators discovered that Congress has a backlog of 949 separate projects which have been authorized but not even started. It would take about 25 years to complete these, at steadily increasing cost.

Undoubtedly dozens of these projects could well be scrapped. Lawmakers play a little game. They sell their congressional brethren on the idea of merely authorizing a particular project, saying they don't intend to ask for funds right off.

Their plan actually is to follow up this step by getting a small "token" appropriation "just to get the project started." Again, the object is to impress the home folk. And also to commit Congress so it will feel compelled to keep on voting money.

The whole list ought to be scanned with a cold eye by men concepned first with the national well-being and security, not with buttering up a lawmaker's constituents. Only the most essential should be kept on.

Around $4,000,000,000 will be needed to finish waterways jobs now under actual construction. If the whole 949-item backlog were to be undertaken as well, its completion would cost at least another $8,000,000,000. We ought to be able to shave at least $3,000,000,000 off that total.

The absolutely indispensable costs of government are so steep nowadays that we no longer can afford the luxury of this kind of mutual congressional back-scratching.

The trouble with a lot of sound arguments is that people get too noisy about them.

Why not check up on your government bonds—and make the check as large as you possibly can.

Make it a point to steer clear of brain storms and things won't look so dark.

How To Lose Friends And Disgust People

Written for NEA Service

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

Drew Pearson says: Death of battlefield promotions traced to appropriations rider; Senator Johnson fails to explain suppression of GM report; Executives enjoyed favors from outside contractors.

WASHINGTON—Hundreds of servicemen write this column each week, some reporting injustice, some asking questions about service problems. Here are some of the answers which may also interest the general public: An Army captain on the Korean front—'We can crouch over here in the below-zero cold, laying low through enemy shrapnel showers, wiggling on our bellies on patrol through enemy mine field, straining our eyes at night for shadows that might infiltrate our lines and plant cold steel in our backs. We can face misery and death all right, but for all this, we can't even get a battlefield promotion and a few measly extra bucks a month pay raise.'

Answer—It is true that battlefield promotions have just about come to a standstill. The reason is Congressman Glenn Davis, Republican of Wisconsin. He slipped a rider into the appropriations bill, clamping a ceiling on rank. Under the Davis rider, the Army is allowed only 32,456 majors. Since the Army already has 33,008 majors, you can see why the Army can't promote you or anyone else to be a major.

Less than 2,000 officers have been promoted in Korea since last August, and practically no more officers can be promoted until the Davis rider runs out June 30. It hasn't been quite so bad for enlisted men. They have received more than 86,900 promotions in Korea since August. In order to hold promotions under the legal limit, the Army demands lengthy service even for battlefield promotions—one year as first lieutenant, two years as captain, four years as major, five years as lieutenant colonel, and seven years as colonel.

The trouble with a lot of sound arguments is that people get too noisy about them.

Why not check up on your government bonds—and make the check as large as you possibly can.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

By OSWALD JACOBY

I am informed reliably that the way to excite a bull is to wave a red flag under its nose. Whether or not this is true, I can assure the doubting world that the way to excite a bridge player is to wave a trump under his nose.

When today's hand was played, West opened the queen of clubs, and dummy won at once with the ace. South tried to get rid of his losing clubs by running three top hearts, but East cleverly tolled the plot by ruffing dummy's third heart with the nine of spades.

This was a brilliant play, and we should give East credit for fine defense. If East discards instead of ruffing, South can discard his club and can then afford to give up two trumps and one diamond. If East ruffs with the jack, South naturally discards his losing clubs, and then loses still only two trump tricks and one diamond.

When East ruffed with the nine of spades, South didn't stop to reason. He automatically overruffed with the ten of spades. Declarer next went after the trumps, properly enough, using dummy's queen to force out East's ace.

East now continued his magnificent defense by underleading his king of clubs to let his partner win the second round of that suit with the ten.

It wasn't very hard for West to figure out what was expected of him. He led a fourth heart, and East was able to ruff with the Jack of spades, thus making a "second trump trick. The defenders now had three tricks altogether, and West was bound to win his king of diamonds eventually to set the contract.

South would have made his contract if he had not become excited by the possibility of overruffing. When East ruffed with the nine of spades, South should have discarded his losing club. South would then need to guess how to play the trumps, but at least he would have a chance to make his contract instead of being defeated automatically.

Pleasant Personal Profits Here are further quotations from the report which has been tucked safely in committee files until other senators demanded that Johnson show them a copy:

"It appears that in numerous instances the firm of Huber, Hunt, and Nichols (one of the biggest contractors doing business with G.M.) has performed valuable services for various executives and supervisory employees of the Allison Division (of General Motors) at cost. In 1949 Huber, Hunt, and Nichols constructed at cost a home for Daniel Babcock, then chief engineer of all the Allison plants. Babcock mortgaged his house for $15,000 and used the proceeds to pay Huber, Hunt, and Nichols $15,800 for building it.

"Babcock stated that he still owns the firm approximately $2,200 for plastering but that no attempt has been made since 1949 to collect this bill," the report, written two years later, continues. "The House was apprised at the time of construction at approximately $31,000."

Babcock admitted he was consulted with respect to the awarding of General Motors contracts to Huber, Hunt, and Nichols. He further stated that the firm was not engaged in the construction of private homes.

"In the latter part of 1949," the report adds, Huber, Hunt, and Nichols installed an air conditioning system at cost in the home of Edward B. Newell, vice president of General Motors and general manager of the Allison Division, at a cost of $3,990.18. It also appears that Huber, Hunt and Nichols built at cost a barn for I. E. Settle, maintenance supervisor.

The Senate report also charges that "Hilton McBroom Company, a firm engaged in repairing motors for the Allison Division, 'loaned' a television set for a period of two years to Walter Storer, who was instrumental in sending Allison business to McBroom."

Truman Bowed Out Confident That His Record Was Good

By PETER EDSON

WASHINGTON—The little man from Missouri bowed out with a smile on his face, his chin up and his chest out. No matter what others may have thought, the white-haired little man in the glasses himself thought he had done good.

The manner in which he bowed out—at his final press conference, in his fireside chat—was far different from the exits of other Presidents.

Perhaps only Calvin Coolidge quit the White House with a feeling of greater self-satisfaction. This is the end of an era. It will take years to get the proper perspective on whether it was good, bad or indifferent.

A White House staff report on Harry Truman's record is worth reviewing now for two reasons. It shows the Republicans what they are going to have to repeal if they carry out Senator Robert A. Taft's promise to put the country back on the road it abandoned 20 years ago.

His record will be judged as much by failures as success. Five Points Rejected In September, 1945, Truman announced his 21-point program. It was a strange mixture of big and little things. The final score was 16 recommendations approved by Congress, in whole or in part, and five rejected.

Among the major successes were: Increasing the minimum wage, passage of a full-employment law, reorganization of government, extension of federal aid to farmers, strengthening of veterans' benefits, raising of government pay.

Federal housing, the stockpiling program, aid to small business, and increased public works were approved, but on a more limited scale than Truman recommended.

He was defeated completely on his efforts to revise the unemployment insurance law, enact a permanent FEPC, continue federal employment service and raise taxes. The Taft-Hartley labor law was passed over his veto.

A box score on Truman's second term shows 99 of his major recommendations to Congress were approved, while 44 were not. The foreign-policy measures loom large on this list: North Atlantic Treaty, Marshall Plan, Point Four aid to Korea, Yugoslavia, Palestine, the Truman Doctrine for aid to behind her. She leaned her back against the glass panel and panted slightly. Her eyes were wide and brightly shining.

"Mr. Wilde, I must talk to you," she said swiftly. "It is very important, truly."

"All right," I said. I pulled a chair around for her and went back to my swivel seat. "Sit down, Mrs. Jonas. I said in my best soothing voice. "What's wrong?"

She perched tensely on the reclining end of the chair, not relaxing. Both hands clenched a wide leather handbag on her lap. She was wearing the sort of clothes that Jonas's money could buy. The silk suit, the fine linen blouse, the lizard shoes, all exactly the same shade of dull gray.

"Rudi and . . . and Jack," she said haltingly. "They are in trouble!"

"It seemed to be a question and I answered it by shaking my head. "But, didn't Jack bring you to find . . ." Her voice dwindled away and her eyes dropped down to stare at her clenched hands.

"Look, Mrs. Jonas," I said softly, "I'm working for your husband. You know exactly what I've been hired to do."

"And . . . and there is nothing else? You are not . . ." Her eyes still had the fixed intensity of a woman who is afraid she might hear something unpleasant any moment.

"You had the wrong idea about me," I said gently. "I'm not a policeman. I'm employed by your husband to do a job for him. I gave her a moment to tighten up her chin."

A woman may put on a riding habit and never go riding. She may put on a swim suit and never go swimming. But when a woman puts on a wedding dress, she means business!

THE STORY: Theft of valuable property from the Jonas store has been solved by the apparent suicide of a clerk. Carney Wilde, private detective, now is trying to find stolen records of Future Americans, a group headed by Jack Jonas, son of a prominent business leader.

"Then just keep it all on a hypothetical basis, Mrs. Jonas." "Yes," she said. She pursed her mouth thoughtfully for a moment.

"I had a friend . . . who was for many years an active fighter against both the Nazi and Russian invaders of his homeland. When the war ended, he was outlawed, condemned to death. He had friends. Through them he was brought to America. But he had many compatriots who had fought with him against the partition of his country. And none of them were safe from the Russian puppets. So my friend undertook to bring two of his dearest friends to America. And a third is en route. Without proper permission to enter, she thought back over her statement and added, "That is a criminal act, is it not?"

"Yes," I said. "It's as criminal as you can get. And the missing records? Did they refer to your friend's illegal immigrants?" "Two of them," she whispered hoarsely. "That is why I thought surely that you . . ."

"No!" she said abruptly. Her gloved right hand went to her mouth and she nearly bit it. Then

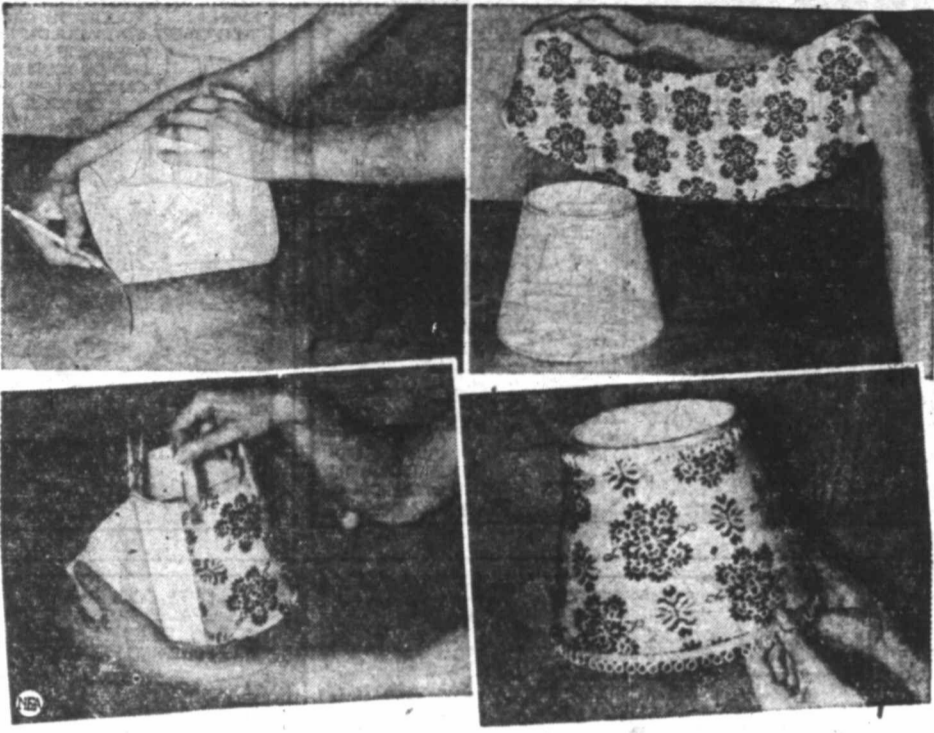

New Lampshade-Making Tricks Save Your Time And Money And Make Interior Decorating A Fun Hobby For The Family

By GAIL DUGAS
NEA Woman's Editor

NEW YORK—Any woman who wants to turn interior decorator on her own will, with a small investment in time and money, be able to produce lampshades with a custom look for her living room.

Most women, at some time, eye the lampshades that can be ordered made up in a fabric matched to their own drapes, upholstery material, or even slipcovers. But since these shades are necessarily expensive, the average woman forgets about them and settles for plain old vellum.

Tips on transforming this very vellum shade into the fabric-covered type with a custom look come from interior decorator Harriet Sherry. To get the right results, you'll need these things: fabric, lampshade, wrapping paper, piece of cord, clothespins clips, milliners' glue, and braid or ruffles for finishing.

Start by marking off equal halves of the shade. You do this by holding a piece of cord at the bottom of the seam, bringing the cord straight up along the seam and straight down the opposite side of the shade and back to the beginning of the cord at the bottom of the seam.

Now, using the cord as a guide, mark a straight line from top to bottom opposite the seam.

Next, divide an uncreased piece of wrapping paper in half, vertically, and place the paper flat on a table. At this halfway mark on the paper, hold the bottom of the shade horizontally, seam upward and perpendicular to the edge of the paper. (The portion of the shade containing the bisecting line you just drew will be face down on the paper.)

Starting at this bisecting line, draw short, straight lines on the paper along the top and bottom edges of the shade. Without lifting about half an inch beyond this point. Connect the two arcs with a straight line.

To make your own fabric lampshades with a custom look, you've only to follow simple directions. Make a pattern (upper left), using wrapping paper and with seam of the shade facing up. Next, cut the fabric after the pattern (upper right), making sure that the center fold of the pattern is straight up and down on the fabric as you cut it. Now, use clothespin clips (lower left) to fit the fabric along the top of the shade. This is the way the finished shade looks (lower right) in a meditation pattern, a hand-printed over-all design on antique satin.

Now then, remove the wrapping paper from the table. Fold the left half under the right and cut a pattern after the lines you just drew. Then, holding the pattern across the fabric, selvages at the sides,

Use the center fold of the pattern as a guide to be sure it's straight up and down on the fabric (parallel to selvages) as you cut it.

With clothespin clips, fit the fabric to the base of the shade. Adjust the fabric to fit the top. If the top fits correctly, any slight deviation at the other edges can be corrected when you overlap the fabric to finish the shade.

You're almost through. Starting at the seam of the shade, glue the fabric to the vellum base with milliners' glue. Be sure that the fabric is perfectly smooth as you go. Glue the beginning of the fabric flush to the shade, overlap the end, and glue to the first part of the fabric.

Trim the raveled threads at the top and bottom edges. Finish with braid, ruffles or bias binding.

NEW YORK—What do you do with the glass bottles and jars that accumulate in your household in the course of a week? Put them out in a basket for the trash collection, most likely.

These discarded can be turned into hours of fun and profit. Not direct profit, perhaps, but certainly an aid in trimming down the sum you allow for gifts of all kinds during the year. These bottles can become ashtrays, vases, sewing shelves, lamps, planters. As gifts, they'll be both useful and smart.

You'd probably like to start with a fairly easy project, one that you can do with little fear of mistakes. In that case, try making a vase. The shape of the bottle is up to you, but you might use a coffee jar, a Mason jar, a wine or vinegar bottle or even a mayonnaise jar.

As tools, you'll need some small tubes of unmix'd oil paints, a couple of small brushes and some turpentine to clean them, soft cloths and your own fingers.

Start by covering the bottle with a solid-color oil paint, spreading the paint with your fingers. Use a toothpick to scribble curly marks in the wet paint, reversing the motion now and then. This will create a jacy, delicate design in the paint.

To make a handy sewing shelf, begin by cutting a three-quarter-inch wood board to the length wanted. Attach this to a piece of plywood the same length, which will serve as the back.

Next, you'll need two pieces of dowel (one-fourth inch cut two inches long), two pieces three-and-one-half inches long and one piece one-and-one-fourth inches long. These are for the thread and thimble holders.

Drill holes and insert the pieces of dowel after application of furniture glue. Glue a pin cushion to the back. Fasten the lids of three cheese jars underneath the shelf by drilling holes in each lid and fastening them to the shelf with short screws. These handy containers for sewing odds and ends then are screwed to the lids. Finish with paint or enamel.

Another method for vases produces a textured effect, using both flat and raised oil paint designs. First, completely cover a glass container with pale green oil paint. Use a toothpick to make tiny swirl marks over the surface.

To form the rosebuds and leaves down the center of the bottle, use a fine, pointed brush and a toothpick. You'll need a brush for the branches and leaves, their thickness making a texture raised somewhat higher than the swirl background.

A bit of red paint is mixed with white to make the pink for small rosebuds. Pick up little blobs of this paint with a toothpick and set it among the green leaves. Now, dip a toothpick into red paint and swirl it through each rosebud several times to give the buds a realistic appearance. This will raise them higher than the leaves and stems.

There are many other ideas for making glass bottles and jars into bird houses, candle scones and holders, beverage holders, salt and pepper shakers, storm lamps, toy banks and humidors.

Cost Of Treating Polio Too Expensive For Most Families

Ray Gwyn, chairman of the Midland County March of Dimes, Saturday said the cost of polio treatment is staggering to the average family. Without March of Dimes aid, many families hit by polio would be unable to secure proper treatment for their loved ones.

"During the last year," Gwyn said, "our biggest single expense was for hospitalization. A total of $17,149.60 was paid by the Midland County Chapter for care of county polio victims. This was about 84 per cent of our expenditures. Hospital care averages about $14 a day in the West Texas area. During 1952, we had more than 27 cases of polio in Midland County. The March of Dimes gave assistance to 13 of these victims in one way or another, mainly through payment of hospital bills.

"Our second greatest expense last year was for braces and appliances. A total of $1,363.17 was spent for these items. One wheel chair alone, purchased by the Midland County Chapter, cost $349.50. We furnished crutches, iron lungs and special beds during 'the year.'

Gwyn said that the third largest expenditure was for the payment of doctor bills which amounted to $1,138. "All told we spent $20,776.82 during 1952. This amount was spent on residents of Midland County only. We received $14,400 from the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis to aid in our efforts."

In addition to giving financial assistance to 13 polio victims in 1952, Gwyn said the Midland County Chapter gave assistance to 23 patients who contacted polio in 1951 or before. "Our assistance continues from year to year," he said, "not just the year in which the patient contracts polio."

"All residents of Midland County who contract polio or who move into the county after suffering from polio elsewhere are entitled to assistance from the Midland County Chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis. A Midland resident suffering from polio who moves out of the county immediately becomes eligible for assistance from the county chapter at his new residence."

JACOBY ON CANASTA

By OSWALD JACOBY
Written for NEA Service

Today we have more questions on Samba and Canasta, sent in from several different parts of the country.

I must state, as I so often have done in the past, that I can answer only on the basis of the official rules of the game. Any group is at liberty to make up its own rules, and many players prefer to do so.

But if you are one of those independent souls you cannot expect an official ruling from an outside authority—since no outsider can feel sure that he fully understands all your "local" variations.

Q—Do you meld red threes at your first turn to play, or does each player put his red threes on the table and replace them before the top card of the stock is turned up at the beginning of a hand?

A—Each player puts down and replaces his red threes at his first turn to play. This is the procedure that you follow in Canasta and also in Samba. The method of putting down and replacing all the red threes before you turn the top card of the stock at the beginning of a hand sometimes is followed in South America, but has never been favored by American players.

Q—Suppose you are playing Samba and have a closed canasta of kings and with an additional pair of kings in your hand. The player at your right discards a king, and you promptly take the discard pile with the pair of kings in your hand. Must you add this group to the closed canasta, or should a new meld be started?

A—You must start a new meld of kings? In the game of Samba you would not be allowed to use a closed canasta for the purpose of taking the discard pile. Therefore you are obliged to start a new meld in this situation.

If you are not taking the discard pile you would be allowed to add natural kings from your own hand to a closed canasta of kings. This would be both foolish and unnecessary if you had three or more natural kings in your hand, for then you could start a new meld anyway.

If you had only one or two natural kings in your hand, however, you might wish to get rid of those in order to meld out, and you would add those natural kings to your closed canasta of kings.

Players of the parent game of Canasta will do well to notice this difference between the two games. In the game of Canasta you are not allowed to have more than one meld in the same rank.

Daddy Ringtail

Daddy Ringtail And Wherever You Go

Uncle Bunkum was hurrying along the Elephant Path, on his way to Daddy Ringtail's house. He laughed his mischief laugh.

What a wonderful day for mischief it was! Uncle Bunkum had left the zoo in a hurry while his Conscience was still asleep. Oh, that Conscience always was telling Uncle Bunkum what to do and what not to do. If a something was mischief that Conscience always said not to do it. Again Uncle Bunkum laughed over his mischief laugh. His Conscience would never interfere today. Never would it say to stay out of mischief. Uncle Bunkum had run away fast and left his Conscience asleep, he thought.

Uncle Bunkum stopped in a hurry. "Humph!" said Uncle Bunkum to himself. "That looks like a lion asleep over there."

Uncle Bunkum tiptoed over through the grass. Yes, a lion was fast asleep, all right. Uncle Bunkum began to think of the mischief that he might do about the lion. Why, he could tie a knot in the lion's tail, if he wanted to.

What fun it would be to do it! And then a serious voice said suddenly: "Uncle Bunkum! Don't do it!"

The voice was sounding much like the Conscience who belonged to Uncle Bunkum, the Conscience who had been left asleep at the zoo. And yet, the voice sounded different too. It sounded all out of breath from running.

But the voice said: "Of course I've been running. Uncle Bunkum, I had to run to catch up with you." The voice was Uncle Bunkum's Conscience, all right, all right. "Oh, you can't see me," said the Conscience, "but, Uncle Bunkum, I try to keep out of mischief. It's a whole lot of work to do it, too."

By Wesley Davis
"Sorry to keep you so busy, Mr. Conscience," Uncle Bunkum said. But the Conscience said he was glad to stay busy, if only he could do his job of keeping mischief away.
"Well, Uncle Bunkum listened to his Conscience, and he didn't tie a knot in the lion's tail. Uncle Bunkum was happy all over with the thing he hadn't done, especially when he heard that the lion asleep was really a savage lion who was going back to Africa. Happy day!

Elegant Legs Are Bare Of Fuzz; Look Pretty Under Sheer Nylons

By ALICIA HART
NEA Beauty Editor

You want your legs to be elegant-looking even when they are bare and, of course, who wants sheer nylons spoiled by hair showing through? This practically prescribes a weekly defuzzing program.

The type and frequency of hair removal varies entirely with the individual. There are three choices

Use any method for your defuzzing that agrees with your skin but do as the girl above does and powder afterwards.

of methods: shaving, abrasion, and depilatory. You may have to try all three before you discover which gives you the longest-lasting, smoothest result.

Shaving has the advantage of being quickly and cleanly done and no matter what method you regularly use, it might be a good idea to have a sharp razor always in your bathroom. You may want to wear evening nylons unexpectedly and without time for your regular method.

Never shave a dry leg. Use either a special shaving lotion or soap-type shaving cream. If you use the cream, have you water very hot and use plenty of lather. Your blade must be very sharp. When you are finished, dust with fragrant bath powder to prevent irritation. Rub some oil or lotion into your legs every day to keep new hair growth soft.

Some girls find that shaving produces coarse, bristly stubble on their legs no matter how often they oil them. These girls can try a depilatory from a firm of good reputation and follow the directions on the package to the letter. The newer ones are fragrant, creamy and easy to apply and remove.

Be sure to make a trial as the package suggests before doing your legs, because you may possibly be sensitive to the ingredients. If the method is for you, you will be pleased with the no-stubble result.

Abrasion with fine sandpaper-like discs is a clean, tidy method that can be used in a very relaxed way, in any part of the house. It requires no water. Results are excellent, but it takes far more time and patience than other methods.

Unless you care for your legs with plenty of soap and water and oil, any defuzzing method may produce coarse stubble. Care plus experiment with all three methods should find one to fit your beauty needs.

NEW YORK—Ed Howe, the famous newspaper editor, author and "Saga of Potato Hill" in Atchison, Kansas, was once a guest lecturer in Journalism here at New York University. "News," he explained to his class, "is anything that makes a woman throw up her hands and exclaim 'For Heaven's Sake!'" A young student in the class named Henry F. Wood, Jr., was so impressed that right after class he rushed down to the old New York World and asked the city editor to let him write a story about Howe's definition of news. Next morning the World used the story on page one. This was the first break-in print—Henry Woods ever had. Now he is a successful advertising executive here and recently wrote a book on "How to Get the Breaks"—but he did not include the one he got from Ed Howe.

A reader sends a copy to another old local paper, The Daily Argus—dated 30 years ago—and a social item shows that New York certainly was different in those days. Here is a bit of the item: The Fortnightly Club met at the home of its charming and accomplished treasurer, Miss C. and had an auspicious evening. Miss V. played the zither most

Scientists Hint Humans Can Inherit Susceptibility To Polio's Paralysis

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE
NEW YORK—(AP)—Science is finding hints that humans inherit susceptibility to paralysis from polio.

Inheritance of one or more strange genes, the units of heredity, may make some people setups for paralytic effects from an invasion by polio virus. By the same token people who lack these genes would have natural resistance to paralysis.

The inheritance angle still is largely a suggestion but one that may explain a major mystery of polio—its unpredictable ways.

Sooner or later almost all of us are invaded by polio virus, but relatively few people develop paralysis. Why are just some affected?

Runs in Families
Scientific sleuths wondered whether inheritance could have something to do with it, with polio paralysis running in families.

Sometimes whole families have shown a high incidence of polio, with paralysis. Last Summer, polio struck four or five children within the same large family.

Another bit of evidence is this: In a 50-year period, there were 29 cases of polio in one remote section of West Virginia. Checking up, investigators found all 29 were related by blood. A recessive gene, showing up now and then in children, could explain this.

Latest Clues
Only last week it was disclosed that two grandchildren of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, himself a polio sufferer, were stricken with mild cases last Summer. Another grandson suffered a light polio attack in 1949.

The newest bit of evidence comes from a study of twins made by Drs. C. Nash Herndon and Royal G. Jennings, medical geneticists of the Bowman Gray School of Medicine at Wake Forest College in North Carolina.

They compared polio in identical twins and in fraternal twins.

Identical or look-alike twins come from a single egg of the mother, which divides to produce two infants. The identical twins have exactly the same genes or inheritance and are alike in all ways.

Have Equal Chance
Fraternal twins, though differ in their inheritance. Such twins result from two eggs fertilized at the same time.

Drs. Herndon and Jennings checked up on 47 sets of twins numbered among polio victims in North Carolina during 1940-48.

Of these 47, one or both twins had a definite diagnosis of paralytic polio. Both twins had been living in the same house at the time of acute chance of being exposed to the virus.

Of 14 pairs of identical twins, both children in five pairs had paralytic polio. Of 33 pairs of fraternal twins, paralytic polio had touched both members in only two cases.

Not Sure Yet
This difference is considered significant. It indicates there is a measurable genetic influence upon susceptibility to paralytic polio, the doctors conclude.

But, they add, inherited susceptibility is by no means the decisive thing in determining whether exposure also must contribute to the

Texas' Official Road-Map Chalks Up Another First

AUSTIN—Texas chalked up another "first" when the 1953 Texas Official Highway Map was released, D. C. Greer, State Highway Engineer, announced Saturday.

An encyclopedia of Texas information in itself, the map side provides current and accurate highway information, while the back side chances of developing paralysis. There is no evidence that twins, whether identical or fraternal, are more susceptible to polio paralysis than single-born children.

Very often, polio paralyzes one twin but leaves his identical brother or sister untouched.

Thirteen enlarged city insets are provided for the convenience of motorists traveling through these major metropolitan areas. Distances are indicated between all points and a special mileage index chart reflects the accumulated official mileage between principal points.
