(A Modern Fable – With Apologies To Aesop)

This is the story of a young veteran named "John Smith" . . . and his wife . . . and two little children . . . and a clock that doesn't walt. It seems that John had a pretty good job . . . nothing fabulous, but one that provided plenty of money for immediate needs and a little left over for saving, or investment, or whatever. The rent they paid made up a sizable portion of their regular budget, and John commented from on the fact that renting a place to live seemed a bit silly when the same amount of money could be applied on the purchase of their own home. He also mentioned occasionally that, being a veteran, he could get a nice home that exactly met their needs without making a down payment. But for two years after he . . . and his wife . . . and their two little children . . . decided that they ought to be buying home, they went on paying rent. And all this time the clock ticked on . . . because nobody can stop if. Finally one day (maybe the ticking of the clock was beginning to bother him), John took a spell of figuring. And he added up all the rent receipts he had been saving. And he threw them in the waste basket-because he suddenly realized they weren't worth anything at all! And in about three ticks and a tock of the clock, he dialed 4-6377 on his telephone and made an appointment to see some new homes. Within a few weeks, "John Smith" . . . and his wife . . . and their two little children . . . moved into their new House Beautiful Home. And the receipts that began to pile up represented an investment that didn't get thrown into the waste basket.

And the clock that ticks and tocks for all of us seemed to have a merrier sound to "John Smith" . . . and his wife . . . and their two little

Tanker Transporting Oil From Iran Docks; Court Seizure Asked

VENICE, ITALY -(A)- The little Italian tanker Miriella docked here mediately asked an Italian court to seize the disputed cargo.

The president of the Venice tribunal took no immediate action. The tanker's entry into port climaxed the second Italian attempt to cash in on Iran's nationalized oil since the British threatened legal action last year against anyone trying to market the oil before AIOC claims against Iran are settled. The first Italian attempt ended at Aden, a British protectorate. A British court there ruled that 800 tons of oil aboard the tanker Rose Mary belonged to the AIOC.

It is estimated that 10,700 children were born in the United States on New Year's Day. John Crone tells me each child born on this first day of the year is eligible to receive a three-piece feeding set consisting of a long-handled spoon and a learn-to-eat fork and spoon. To get this, parents of the children born on January 1 have only to send their names and address, plus the name of the attending doctor and hospital to 1847 Rogers Brothers, Meriden, Conn.

This state should be proud of the interesting booklet by B. Arp Low-rance, "Seeing New York—and I Want to Go Back Again." The Charlotte, N. C., publisher has written a sprightly account of his visit during the NEA convention tour that makes one more glad to live here. Yet from the reference to his friends. Lowrance shows how good it is to be back in his home country too. In fact, the booklet won a prize from New York State. Ed Anderson and Mr. and Mrs. John Harris were other distinguished North Carolinians who were present at this particular gathering, and all were warmly welcomed.

Eleanor Kairalla who should know says the average American while in France where fashions once originated, the women get only one blouse a year. Not being too well versed on female apparel, I did not argue with Eleanor. She says the Judy Bond collection of ses this year shows that this particular piece of feminine frills is more popular than since the famous Gibson girl. Eleanor, a youngish advertising executive with office on Fifth Avenue, has a commendable hobby of helping young people get jobs. After a long hard day, she often spends hours showing ambitious neophytes how to crack this big city's crust-and all she gets for it is lots of gratitude.

Martin Rocklin plays the piano beautifully in a New York night club. You might not think to look at him that he is a graduate of Juillard School of Music and has his MA from Columbia University But besides these accomplishments he has planned far enough ahead in life to have found the girl he wants to marry. There's only one problem, so far. The little matter of money. So Martin now plans to desert the glamor of evening shows teach music to youngsters, and settle down.

A Freer National Economy

With all wage controls and many price curbs removed, President Eisenhower has begun what he hopes will be an orderly transition to a freer national economy. He believes the balance of natural market forces is sufficiently good to prevent any strong new inflationary currents.

The only issue now is whether Congress simply will let the outmoded controls law die April 30, or follow the suggested lead of Senate Banking Committee Chairman Capehart and vote standby controls for the President to have in an emergency.

Eisenhower didn't request such authority. He thinks he can meet an emergency even if he must seek a new controls law from scratch. Capehart says Congress can't produce one in less than three months and it takes another four to get controls working.

Congress must decide where the greater wisdom lies. The President acted because he believes direct controls should apply only in all-out war, not in peace or the semi-war we have now.

This feeling is founded on two factors. One is his conviction that "the character of our people resists artificial and arbitrary controls of any kind." The other is his belief that direct controls deal with the symptoms rather vate session last week that he has munity, and believed the only way than the causes of inflation, and hence are only partially put our European Allies on notice effective.

The record of the war and postwar years, as told by economists, supports the argument that direct controls don't go to the root of the matter. They don't cure inflation; they merely defer its effects until a later date.

You are reading a substitute advertisement. This ad was not originally scheduled for today's paper. We had prepared a large announcement listing more than 50 actual examples of the tremendous mark-downs you could expect to find at SELRITE FURNITURE tomorrow. Frankly, buying was so fast and furious that more than half of these items were sold before we could get the list to the printer. We were afraid the remaining examples would be sold before you even had a chance to read the advertisement. So we are substituting this makeshift . . . but sincere . . . invitation to you. Come on down tomorrow. Compare SELRITE'S CUT-RATE prices with any furniture prices you've ever seen anywhere. We guarantee you won't be disapstrong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the each of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support.
