

Confident Living

How To Handle A Handicap

ELIZABETH, MY TEN-YEAR-old daughter, always has been a fan of the motion picture and television cowboy, Roy Rogers, and his lovely wife, Dale Evans. It was she who first attracted my attention to their movies and TV shows and I must confess that I soon began to enjoy them as much as she did.

Then, when they came to New York to appear in the rodeos at Madison Square Garden, I was pleased to see them in my congregation on Sunday mornings. Both Elizabeth and I enjoyed meeting them and were impressed by their durable personalities. Then we went to see them at the Garden and were thrilled to hear Roy sing his favorite song, "Peace in the Valley," half ballad and half hymn, and to listen to him tell the children in his audience: "I hear some kid says it isissy stuff to go to Sunday School. Don't you believe him. Sunday School is for he-men." This cowboy seemed to be a more effective preacher than most of us whose profession it is.

THIS FALL, WHEN THEY WERE in New York, Roy and Dale came to see me and told me a true story of their own lives which was both moving and tragic. And now Dale Evans Rogers has put this story into a little book which seems to be reaching the hearts of people everywhere just as it touched mine. More than 10,000 copies have been sold to date and I am sure that many more will be.

The book is "Angel Unaware" and it is the story of Robin Elizabeth Rogers, daughter of Roy Rogers and Dale Evans, who came into this world with a tragic handicap and left it after a brief stay of only two years. But it is more than the story of just one handicapped child and her parents. It is the story of how love and faith and religious belief enabled this set of parents to meet a problem which faces many mothers and fathers each year.

I DO NOT KNOW HOW MANY handicapped children are born annually, but I am sure that each one of us knows of such cases in our own circle of friends and acquaintances. If not in our own families, why a loving God should permit innocent children to suffer twisted bodies and warped minds is hard for most of us to understand, but when we must face the problem personally, it becomes even more difficult.

Because many people not only have faced the problem but have been able to summon the courage to write about it, we can, from their experience, assemble a set of rules about handling the problem of a handicapped child. Dale Evans Rogers is the most recent of these authors; others include the novelist, Pearl Buck; the famous "inside" man, John Gunther; and Marie Killilea, one of the founders of the movement to help victims of cerebral palsy.

IF THIS IS YOUR PROBLEM, these are things you should remember:

1. Resolve to accept the child and give it the tender, loving care to which every child is entitled. No institution can substitute for a parent's love.
 2. Remember that God does not visit the sins of the parents on their children. If YOU have a sense of guilt about such a situation, go to your pastor, priest or rabbi and work out your problem with him. Free yourself from the sense of guilt by acknowledging your past errors and resolving to start over with a clean slate.
 3. Faith and prayer CAN improve your situation and, if necessary, prepare you to accept the loss of your loved one. Read books such as "Angel Unaware" and Marie Killilea's "Karen" and see how other parents have found in their religious faith the only sure courage and confidence in handling a handicap.
- The Bible says "the greatest of these is love." Keep this love in your heart and you can meet any problem as patient need face.

British Comet Jet Liner Crashes

Raging Storm Conceals Fate Of 42 Aboard

CALCUTTA, INDIA —(P)—A Comet jet airliner with three Americans and a party of rubber-tin operators from Malaya reported aboard crashed in a violent storm late Saturday within minutes after takeoff from Calcutta. The plane carried 40 to 42 persons.

The Singapore-to-London plane was lost for hours until village police reported Sunday it had crashed 20 miles southeast of Calcutta. There were no other details immediately.

Since it was enroute to New Delhi, to the northeast, indications were that it was forced off course by a near hurricane which swept the Calcutta city area Saturday night in the onset of the Summer monsoon.

The plane's British operators and the U. S. Consulate in Singapore reported the three Americans had booked passage for New Delhi in the plane. It stopped enroute at Bangkok, Rangoon and Calcutta, and there was no immediately available list of passengers aboard of the Calcutta-New Delhi hop.

The three, with no home addresses available, were identified in Singapore as Jean S. Cohen and Anita Whistler, on a round-the-world tour, and the Rev. Paul Sneed, Methodist missionary.

Worst Jet Disaster
The girls visited the U. S. consulate in Singapore Friday and asked that their mail be forwarded to the U. S. Embassy, Tel Aviv, Israel.

Sneed, head of the Anglo-Chinese school at Ipoh, Malaya, was enroute to visit his two children in school at New Delhi and planned later to visit his wife at Colombo, Ceylon.

Saturday was the first anniversary of Britain's profitable jet passenger service and the start of the season for violent Summer rainstorms. Officials feared the crash might be the worst disaster of jet air travel.

The Comet left Dum Dum Airport here at 4:30 p.m. on the scheduled three-hour flight to New Delhi. Six minutes later it made the routine report: "Climbing on track." Then there was silence.

Government Ups Interest Rates On GI, FHA Loans

WASHINGTON —(P)—The government Saturday upped the interest rates on most government-guaranteed and insured home loans to four and one-half per cent.

For World War II and Korean War veterans who have not yet used their GI home loan benefits, this means a jump of one-half per cent in the interest rate they will have to pay.

For families who plan to finance their home purchases with the aid of loans insured by the Federal Housing Administration the increase is only one-fourth cent—from the present four and one-half per cent rate. FHA loans also carry a charge of one-half per cent as a mortgage insurance premium. Thus the total carrying charge will be five per cent.

The increases do not apply to mortgages already in effect. They permit the lenders to charge the higher interest rates on new loans. The FHA increase is effective immediately. The VA raise takes effect Wednesday.

Officials said the move was needed to increase the supply of mortgage money. Many lenders were reported reluctant to lend at the old rate.

The move also appeared to be in line with the new Administration's anti-inflation, or "hard money," policy.

A veteran who gets a typical $9,000, 20-year, home loan now will have to pay $2.43 more each month in carrying charges.

A family which obtains a 20-year $10,000 FHA loan now must pay $1.30 a month more than it would at the four and one-fourth per cent rate.

A spokesman for the National Association of Home Builders said:

"We believe, and certainly hope, that the change will bring out more credit for veterans and other prospective home buyers."

In Chicago, Charles L. Clements, president of the United States Savings and Loan League, called the increase "a courageous step" which he said would "automatically" place thousands of veterans in the "effective home buying market."

He predicted the rise in the GI interest rate would "revitalize" the housing industry and bolster the entire economy. As a result, "1953 may well turn out to be the second biggest residential home building year in history," he said.

Veterans Administrator Carl R. Gray, Jr., said "The action was taken reluctantly and only as a last resort."

The VA said the four and one-half per cent rate will apply to GI farm and business loans, as well as home loans.

Rig Accident Kills Midland Roughneck

R. J. Tipton, 24-year-old Midland roughneck, died in a hospital here after he had been struck on the head by falling pipe while working on a rig in the Spraberry Trend area. He was picking up a joint of pipe when the accident occurred.

Tipton was employed by the Superior Oil Company, moving to Midland a week ago from Big Lake. The family resides here at 810 West Fort Worth Street.

Survivors include the widow, three children, Alice Marie, four, Ronnie Joe, three, and Michael Wayland, two; the parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil R. Tipton of Crane; a brother, John William Tipton of Snyder, and a sister, Mrs. Reta Mae Munn of Midland.

The body was forwarded to Satherwhite Funeral Home at Breckenridge for funeral services and interment.

Reeves Memorial YMCA was set up as an emergency hospital.

America Speeds Aid To Laos Defenders

WASHINGTON —(P)—Secretary of State Dulles Saturday announced the United States has "taken steps" to speed delivery of military supplies critically needed by the defenders of Laos in Indochina.

Dulles said in a statement that this government considers the Communist attack on the State of Laos "ruthless and unprovoked."

He himself did not specify the nature of the military items being supplied, but it was learned the rush aid consists mainly of two or three dozen big cargo planes suitable for speeding troops and supplies to the Laotian front.

The aircraft are understood to be moving into Indochina from American bases in the Pacific area.

Returnee Learns Hard Way You Can't Have Everything

TRAVIS AIR FORCE BASE, CALIF.—(P)—Cpl. Tibor Rubin of Long Beach, Calif., lost a $10 bet on the plane bringing repatriated POW's here Saturday—but he had a wonderful time doing it.

Blonde and beautiful Lt. Margaret Rieken of Everett, Wash., an air evacuation nurse, told of the bet.

She said Rubin wagered another exchanged POW that he would get a kiss either from her or the other nurse, Lt. Joyce Shepherd, a delicious looking brunette from Baggett, Mich.

Corporal Rubin begged and pleaded most of the trip, saying please nurse, won't one of you give me a kiss so I can be happy and also make 10 bucks? Lieutenant Rieken told newsmen.

Both nurses said they held out to the very last.

"But it must have been worth many times that $10 to Cpl. Rubin because he kept the other men roaring with laughter all the way over," Lieutenant Rieken commented.

County To Use 10 Precincts In Saturday's Bond Election

Midland County's revised election precincts—with 10 precincts replacing the former seven—will be used for the first time next Saturday in a special election on a proposed $350,000 Midland County road bond issue.

The revised precincts were authorized by the Commissioners Court last year and Saturday will provide the first county election since the revision could become effective on January 1.

There should be little confusion, however, among the county's voting taxpayers, who will participate in Saturday's balloting.

The only ones which will be affected are those who have been living in what, until this year, were election Precinct 1 and Precinct 7.

Precinct 1 formerly was bounded on the south by Street, on the north by the county line, on the west by a line one mile east of the Fair Grounds road and on the west by Big Spring Street.

A new precinct—Precinct 10—was carved out of the northwestern corner of this area. Precinct 10 will be bordered on the north by the county line, on the east by the Fair Grounds road, on the south by Maiden Lane and on the west by Big Spring Street.

The rest of the area included in the old Precinct 1 constitutes the new Precinct 1.

The heavily populated Precinct 7 has been carved into three precincts.

The old Precinct 7 was bounded on the north by the county line, on the south by Wall Street, on the east by Big Spring Street and on the west by a north-south line running just east of Midland Air Terminal.

The new Precinct 7 is bounded on the north by Louisiana Street, on the south by Wall Street, on the east by Big Spring Street and on the west by the Andrews Highway.

A newly-created Precinct 8 will have the same east and west and north boundaries as the old Precinct 7. But it will be bounded on the south by Louisiana Street and the Andrews Highway.

The newly-created Precinct 9 will be a triangle formed by the Andrews Highway on the northeast and Wall Street on the south and southeast. The west boundary line

Governors To Get Two-Day Look Behind World Scenes

WASHINGTON —(P)—Governors of 46 states and five territories meet here Monday for a two-day look behind the scenes of world affairs.

President Eisenhower, who arranged the almost unprecedented conference to give the state and territorial executives a picture of the foreign problems facing this country and what is being done to cope with them, will greet the visitors personally at 9 a.m.

Then he'll call on top figures of his Administration to outline the military, diplomatic, financial and other phases of the cold war in closed sessions ending at noon Tuesday.

The White House said Saturday all the state governors have promised to attend with the exception of three —Dan McCarthy of Florida and William B. Umstead of North Carolina, who are ill, and Gordon Persons of Alabama, who must present his executive budget to his state's Legislature Tuesday.

This will be the first White House conference of governors since Franklin D. Roosevelt met with the state chiefs to map plans for coping with the depression shortly after he took office in 1933.

Eisenhower's intention reportedly is to give the governors a sense of closer contact with the federal government as part of his announced program of improving federal-state relations. A general discussion of this program, led by Gov. Allan Shivers of Texas, will wind up the conference.

Newsboy's Bike Hits, Kills Palestine Woman

PALESTINE —(P)—Mrs. E. J. Tergarden, Sr., 74, died Saturday shortly after she was knocked down by a bicycle ridden by a 13-year-old newsboy.

Several witnesses said the accident was unavoidable.

Midland Shoe Salesman Wins Top Award In Second Week Of Community Ad Survey

A Midland shoe salesman found the shoe that fit last week and tucked away $40 as second-week winner in The Reporter-Telegram's Community Survey.

Dick Cappell, 806 North Big Spring Street, a salesman in a ladies' shoe department here, kept Midland on the winning side by picking the top ads for the week. He joins Mrs. William L. Liles, 404 West George Street, who was the first week's winner.

And his stage action has not been confined to legitimate theater. He lists at least six movies in which he has had parts.

Most recent was "Atomic City," which played in Midland a short time ago. In this film he is seen as an FBI agent. Other movies to his credit are "Life of Father," "Barretts of Wimpole Street," "Two Blind Mice," "Mad Woman of Chailot," and "The Lady's Not for Burning."

Cappell was born in Alaska, but calls Chicago "home."

"At least," he quipped, "Chicago's where I leave from."

No Change Forecast In Basin Weather

Sunday was expected to record a repeat performance of Saturday's weather in the Permian Basin.

A few broken clouds may dot Sunday's skies but generally it will be clear in the Midland sector. Temperatures are due to stay within Saturday's extremes, 46 and 79 degrees.

Blowing sand cut El Paso's visibility to one-fourth mile late Saturday night and an hour-long blow forecast for Midland. However, the activity was due to be abbreviated, the weatherman said.

May's $Dollar Day$ Monday To Feature Unusual Values

$DOLLAR DAYS—Spring $DOLLAR DAYS—will be observed Monday in Midland, with practically all merchants of the city participating.

Spring and Summer merchandise will be featured by the stores, all of which are offering outstanding $DOLLAR DAYS specials. Many of the dollar-saving values are advertised in this issue of The Reporter-Telegram.

Again this month, free bus transportation is offered women shoppers through the courtesy of the Midland Transportation Company and The Reporter-Telegram. A bus ride coupon appears elsewhere in this issue.

A larger than usual crowd of Midland and area shoppers is anticipated for the May $DOLLAR DAYS and merchants are "all set" to handle the rush. It is expected to be one of Midland's busiest shopping days in recent months.

Monday is the day—$DOLLAR DAYS—in Midland.

THE SHOE FITS—Dick Cappell, second week winner in The Reporter-Telegram advertising survey, finds his $40 first-place check fits nicely into milady's shoe. More likely, though, he'll probably find it fits better into his own pocket—after, of course, conversion to greenbacks. Cappell is a salesman in a ladies' shoe department.

YOU'RE JUST IN LOVE—Opening of "Call Me Madam" at the Yucca Theater Sunday will find Ethel Merman of the original stage cast and Donald O'Connor teaming voices in "You're Just in Love," one of the sparkling highlights of the Twentieth Century-Fox technical musical. The movie will play through Tuesday night.

Pecos Joins Nation Sunday In Operation Pray Services

Pecos—Operation Pray is scheduled in Pecos Sunday. Pecos Junior Chamber of Commerce members will join Sunday with over six million members of the nation's largest civic and veterans organizations to offer a united prayer for world peace.

Operation Pray program, with many of the Pecos ministers cooperating, is scheduled over Radio Station KJUN from 10 to 10:15 a.m. Bill Right project chairman, said Saturday.

Firemen Smother Blazing Gas Well

WHITE DEER—A gas well fire near here was put out Saturday after burning all night.

Firemen smothered the 40-foot flames with water and chemicals. The gaser was a Cabot Carbon Company well four miles southeast of White Deer.

Workers employed by Hills and Hills of Pampa, owners of the clearing rig said they did not know the cause of the fire.

Iron was almost a precious metal in early times and Egyptian ladies of 900 B. C. carried vanity cases made of it.

★ JOHNSON IN HOLLYWOOD ★ 'New Face' Hits Nail On Head For Role Of 'Mike Hammer'

By ERSKINE JOHNSON
NEA Staff Correspondent
Behind the Screen: Signing of New York television actor Bill Elliot to act the role of Mike Hammer in the first of the Mickey Spillane detective films, "I, the Jury," was accompanied by the groans of exactly 28 Hollywood male stars who were after the role. Explaining why he missed a star name, Producer Victor Saville told me:

"Everyone has his own ideas of what Mike looks like. All of the movies are written in the first person so Mike's never been described. If I had cast a star in the part, some people would have growled, 'But Mike doesn't look like that.' With a new film face in the role, there's a better chance of people thinking, 'Oh, so that's what Mike looks like.'"

"Twenty-nine-year-old Bill has appeared on 300 Manhattan video shows, including "Lights Out," and is the brother of Win Elliot, the radio and TV sports announcer."

Vivian Vance, who plays Lucille Ball's gal pal in "I Love Lucy," is seeing medical about a serious back ailment. . . Donald O'Connor and his Green are going around and round over a property settlement. Donald's telling pals he'll be lucky to have his dancing shoes left.

Fox's remake of "I Wake Up Screaming" under the new title of "Vicki" has a shudder note. Jean Peters and Richard Boone are playing the roles created by Carol Landis and Laird Creger. Carol and Laird died following the film's completion!

Of all the "inside" stories explaining why June Haver is becoming a nun, the best is in a current movie magazine. It was written by June's closest friend, Jerry Lee O'Neil, who explains:

"Nothing had made her do this—she is not disillusioned with Hollywood; she is not heartbroken; it is not because the church's attitude toward divorce makes it impossible for her ever to marry again. She came to her decision through a genuine joy that rose in her—a love and understanding."

Sign-of-the-times note: Photographs of television stars have replaced all the movie-star photos on the walls of the coffee shop at General Service Studio.

If movie screens get wider and wider, as announcements indicate, theaters will have to install swivel chairs.

I'm still waiting, by the way, for Silymascop Productions to announce a new film process requiring no screen.

Susan Cobot and U-I are calling it a day. . . Joy Lansing will establish residence in Las Vegas for her divorce, from Lance Fuller.

The life story of Sister West, the Los Angeles woman who works with unmarried mothers, will be brought to the screen by Producer Edward Golden. . . Gregory Peck's Greta, distributed by all the rumors from Europe, tells friends she'll join him in London for the coronation.

Beatrice Kay's fame as a singer of Gay Nineties songs dates back only to a late 1930 radio show, although, she wined. . . Some people think I was around in Diamond Jim Brady's day. Spiking rumors of retirement because she's purchased a Reno ranch, Beatrice told me:

"No, honey, I'm not retiring. I'm not the rocking-chair type. I'll go on forever even if I wind up as Golden Nugget Kay, a character who will be pointed out to the tourists in Reno along with Harold's Club."

Ann Robinson and auto executive Bob Turner are talking about a June wedding. . . You've seen the last of the Liz Taylor baby photos. MGM just rang down the curtain on the family stuff in favor of ye old glamor. . . Dean Martin's now wearing glasses and telling everyone: "I'm using 'em to hold my eyes in."

Press-agents-think-of-everything note: The 6 a.m. showing of "The House of Wax" in LA for Warner's 24-hour marathon premier had electric razors in the lobby for gents who had just rolled out of bed.

Dialog that never gets on the screen: Three dozen movie stunt men were dunked in war paint and outfitted with braided hair for an Indian sequence in U-I's western, "Brady's Bunch." As the sun began to sink behind the studio back lot, Director George Sherman told assistant Phil Bowles to dress them: "Okay, fellows, that's all." Bowles shouted, "Ride down to the corral and turn in your hair."

'Joan Of Lorraine' Called Season's Best Production

By TESS MARTIN
Reporter-Telegram Staff
Many who see it will declare "Joan of Lorraine" the best production of the Midland Community Theater's current season.

The play opened to a disappointingly small audience Friday night and was presented for a larger second-night crowd Saturday.

Written by Maxwell Anderson, the play is not merely a record of Joan's story, but seeks to compare her problems with those faced by people living in the modern age.

As a device for the comparison, Anderson has written the story of a troupe of actors rehearsing a play about Joan of Aro. The audience alternately sees scenes from Joan's drama and scenes of modern people trying to understand Joan.

This presentation of the universal search for a faith to live by is one of the play's strongest appeals. It touches some corresponding problem in the life of everyone who sees it.

Logical dialogue helps make the story convincing. The studied barrenness of the rehearsal stage and few costume changes avoid a distraction from the story, but put a greater responsibility on the actors in creating the illusion of two periods and situations.

The casting committee for the Midland production made a happy choice in the selection of actors for the lead roles that carry the burden of the play.

Becky Huff plays the dual role of actress and Joan with simple naturalness. Jim Fanning is cast as the play director and as the inquisitor who examines Joan, and Arthur Nations, remembered as the rapscallion in "The Madwoman of Blackford," plays the actor who is to portray the Dauphin.

Others in the cast are Bill Shaner, Billy Boutinghouse, Sue Belcher, Randall Gibson, Bill Adam, Dick Cappell, Bruce Vincent, Bill Robitsek, Dave Collis, Sarah Ward Connolly, Alice Swift, Bill Heck, Claude Neely, Charles Dixon, Bill Key, C. G. Cooper, David Jameson, Dick Connolly and Walt Sharp.

Two more performances are scheduled—at 8:30 p.m. Monday and Tuesday and Wednesday in the City-County Auditorium.

Two Lawyers Shot By Crazed Banker

MILLEDGEVILLE, GA. — A banker and two lawyers were shot dead Saturday in two swift bursts of gunfire in the downtown area of this Central Georgia city.

Sheriff Dennis Cox said Marion Rembridge, wealthy banker recently convicted on federal bribery charges, ran amok and killed Marjorie Ennis, Baldwin County attorney and former state legislator.

Minutes later, Stenbridge and Stephens Bivens, another attorney, were found shot to death in a hallway of an office building.

Joan Of Lorraine' Called Season's Best Production

By TESS MARTIN
Reporter-Telegram Staff
Many who see it will declare "Joan of Lorraine" the best production of the Midland Community Theater's current season.

The play opened to a disappointingly small audience Friday night and was presented for a larger second-night crowd Saturday.

Written by Maxwell Anderson, the play is not merely a record of Joan's story, but seeks to compare her problems with those faced by people living in the modern age.

As a device for the comparison, Anderson has written the story of a troupe of actors rehearsing a play about Joan of Aro. The audience alternately sees scenes from Joan's drama and scenes of modern people trying to understand Joan.

This presentation of the universal search for a faith to live by is one of the play's strongest appeals. It touches some corresponding problem in the life of everyone who sees it.

Logical dialogue helps make the story convincing. The studied barrenness of the rehearsal stage and few costume changes avoid a distraction from the story, but put a greater responsibility on the actors in creating the illusion of two periods and situations.

The casting committee for the Midland production made a happy choice in the selection of actors for the lead roles that carry the burden of the play.

Becky Huff plays the dual role of actress and Joan with simple naturalness. Jim Fanning is cast as the play director and as the inquisitor who examines Joan, and Arthur Nations, remembered as the rapscallion in "The Madwoman of Blackford," plays the actor who is to portray the Dauphin.

Others in the cast are Bill Shaner, Billy Boutinghouse, Sue Belcher, Randall Gibson, Bill Adam, Dick Cappell, Bruce Vincent, Bill Robitsek, Dave Collis, Sarah Ward Connolly, Alice Swift, Bill Heck, Claude Neely, Charles Dixon, Bill Key, C. G. Cooper, David Jameson, Dick Connolly and Walt Sharp.

Two more performances are scheduled—at 8:30 p.m. Monday and Tuesday and Wednesday in the City-County Auditorium.

Rangers Put Axe To Harvey Gaming Layout Near Odessa

By COPE ROUTE
Reporter-Telegram Staff

The luxurious ranch-style home of Odessa gambler Paul Harvey was silent Saturday, its game room stripped of all furnishings and its customers chased away in an early-morning raid by Texas Rangers.

Its handsome dice tables, battered by hammers, were knocked down and stored in Midland, and other paraphernalia was stashed away in other spots by the Thursday morning raiding party.

Fines had been paid by eight of the customers, including five Midlanders, and three persons working at the famed West Texas casino had been assessed even stiffer fines for operating a gambling house.

The raid, carried out on orders direct from Austin, was led by Ranger Capt. Raymond Waters of Lubbock and not even Ector County Sheriff Ernest Broughton was aware of what happened until the last gambling table had been hauled off and the last light turned out.

The Rangers themselves didn't even say anything about the raid until Friday afternoon.

"But it was a success," said Ranger John Wood of Midland, one of the five participating officers.

"We have raided the place before, but this was the first time we were able to catch them while gambling was going on.

"In our previous raids, they always got a warning and by the time we get back to the game room, everyone has rushed into the adjoining bar.

"I remember the last time. When we got there the bar was real crowded and three men, who hadn't had time to order their drinks, were trying to drink out of the same glass."

The automobile carrying the five officers rolled up to the Harvey place shortly after midnight.

All but Ranger Wood, who is known to the operators, got out of the car and a negro attendant slid into the driver's seat to park the vehicle.

His eyes widened as Wood told him to keep quiet.

The other Rangers, using a key, quickly opened the front door and rushed in, pushing aside Charles Reddell, who was manning the peephole-equipped door.

"He never had a chance to punch the warning buzzer," said Wood.

"I let the negro go then and the last I saw of him he was romping across the open pasture, trying to get out of the neighborhood as fast as he could."

Wood joined the other officers as they quickly crossed the entrance room and the patio to a large oak door guarding the bar, which adjoins the game room.

With a large hammer, they pounded down the door and strode into the room.

"They were running around in circles," said Wood, "but nobody was real excited."

J. P. Long, who, officers said, was operating the dice table, quickly telephoned Harvey, who was in Odessa at the time.

Harvey quickly arrived as the officers began dismantling the equipment.

"We had orders to clean out the room completely and we did," reported Wood. "We took everything but the rug off the floor and the light fixtures off the ceiling."

"Mr. Harvey was real nice. He had the waiter bring us coffee while we were knocking the tables down and offered to have his cook fix us some steaks."

The names of the eight persons in the game rooms were recorded, and all then were released as Harvey promised to pay their fines.

Harvey, Long and Redell paid fines and costs of $109 each before Justice of the Peace Marvin Newman in Odessa while fines of $50 each were paid for the eight persons, listed as Lyle Lowe Kelly, Mr. and Mrs. James Grady Harper, Jr., Charles Donald Sloan, Mr. and Mrs. Neville Alfrey and Mr. and Mrs. R. I. Eden.

Joining Captain Waters and Ranger Wood in the raid were Rangers Jesse Hellum and Razz Renfrow of Lubbock and Jim Paulk of Abilene.

Southern Baptists Gather In Houston

HOUSTON—(AP)—Southern Baptists begin a busy eight-day schedule of activities Sunday, giving Houston its largest convention in history.

Almost 30,000 members from 26,865 churches are expected here for the Southern Baptist Convention. The convention proper opens Wednesday but 8,000 members of the Woman's Missionary Union begins a three-day meeting Sunday. Some 4,000 ministers will be in a pastor's conference Monday night and Tuesday.

The Southern Baptist Convention is not a lawmaking body for its 7,634,469 members but its churches normally abide by its decisions. Messengers will vote as individuals and not as representatives of their respective churches.

Major Topics

Most important business matters are expected to reach the convention floor Thursday and Friday. These include:

1. A recommendation that the executive committee's membership be increased from 31 to 48.
2. A proposal to limit the term of the Convention president to one year instead of two years.
3. A request from the radio commission for authorization to continue to seek contributions from individuals, irrespective of denomination.
4. A constitutional amendment which would prevent a retiring board member returning to that board for three years. The restriction now is one year.
5. A controversial issue on establishment of Southern Baptist requirements for the God and country award of the Boy Scouts of America. Action was postponed from last year's Miami convention.
6. An expected recommendation for discontinuance of a committee on relations with other religious bodies.
7. An expected proposal for affiliation with the National Council of Churches, a proposal which previous conventions have rejected. The convention will select a new president.

Dr. J. D. Grey of New Orleans is completing his second year as head of the convention.

Not only is the ash a relative of the Mediterranean olive, but it is a cousin to lilacs, privets, and Forsythias.

Antenna Service Franchise Granted Pecos TV Company

PECOS—Franchise for a television antenna service has been granted by the Pecos City Council, for 10 years to the Community Television Company.

Bill Yates and Perry Colwell are co-owners of this unique service. The nearest such service in operation at the present time is at Tyler.

The Community Television Company is to be operated the same as any other utility company. The City Council has jurisdiction over the rates and will be able to keep an eye on the services rendered by the company.

Yates and Colwell, through their company, propose to build a tower approximately 200 feet high, pick up television signals and channel them into the homes. Midland and Odessa are to be served by similar facilities.

The antenna service will be hooked directly into the set and will come into the house like a telephone or an electric line. This service will eliminate the installation of individual antennas and the cost of their upkeep by the owners. However, it is voluntary on the part of the owner.

Antenna service will cost a certain installation fee plus monthly rental. Yates said that rates would be set by the City Council at a reasonable rate, comparing favorable with other cities.

The company will provide this service as soon as a station is available in this area. Yates said that several tests will be made in the next two months to determine if anything is available to Pecos at this time. Midland's station is to go on the air this fall.

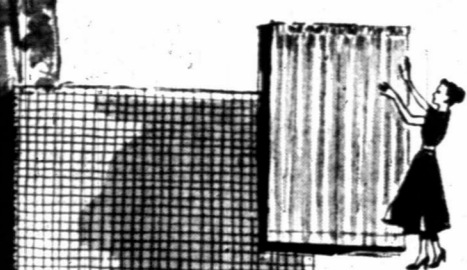

Yates said he and Colwell intend to establish a sales and service organization with a complete line of television equipment in conjunction with the antenna service.

Proposed facilities call for service to 900 subscribers, Yates said. And if the demand exceeds that when the service is installed, the company will be able to provide service to additional customers.

State Department Asks Halt On Bill To Cut Wool Imports

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The State Department asked Congress Saturday to halt action on a bill by 14 Western senators to curb the increasing flow of foreign agricultural imports, particularly wool.

Morton wrote to a Senate Agriculture Committee hearing that a "parity protection" bill would have a "most unfortunate effect on our international relations."

Foreign nations, he said, would regard the move to increase import duties "as evidence that the United States was adopting a policy of non-cooperation in working out our economic problems in the free world."

Virginian Charges New Deal Sabotage Of GOP's Program

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Representative Brophy (R-Va.) said Saturday he will seek an investigation to determine whether holdover executives from the Truman Administration are "deliberately firing career federal employees to embarrass the Eisenhower Administration."

Brophy, elected to Congress in last November's Republican victory in normally Democratic Virginia, said he would offer a resolution within the next few days seeking a House investigation.

Wool spokesmen followed up their appearance before the committee with a conference to consider means of offsetting the threat of low-priced foreign wools and expanding synthetic fiber.

Midlanders Plan Trip To Houston For Baptist Meet

Midland will be represented by a large delegation at the 96th meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention in Houston this week. More than 25,000 Southern Baptists are expected for the ninth Texas meeting since the organization of the convention in 1845.

Wiley Discovers Loopholes In Nation's Espionage Laws

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Senator Wiley (R-Wis.) said Saturday an analysis by the Library of Congress shows "some wide open loopholes" in the laws to safeguard the nation against treason, espionage, sabotage and sedition.

State Department Asks Halt On Bill To Cut Wool Imports

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The State Department asked Congress Saturday to halt action on a bill by 14 Western senators to curb the increasing flow of foreign agricultural imports, particularly wool.

Speaking for the State Department, Assistant Secretary Thurston Morton wrote to a Senate Agriculture Committee hearing that a "parity protection" bill would have a "most unfortunate effect on our international relations."

Foreign nations, he said, would regard the move to increase import duties "as evidence that the United States was adopting a policy of non-cooperation in working out our economic problems in the free world."

Virginian Charges New Deal Sabotage Of GOP's Program

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Representative Broyles (R-Va.) said Saturday he will seek an investigation to determine whether holdover executives from the Truman Administration are "deliberately firing career federal employees to embarrass the Eisenhower Administration."

Broyles, elected to Congress in last November's Republican victory in normally Democratic Virginia, said he would offer a resolution within the next few days seeking a House investigation.

Meanwhile, Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey's personal office announced payroll reductions in the Treasury totaling $317,600 a year are being made between now and July 1. Seventy-nine jobs are being abolished, ranging from $3,000-a-year stenographers to $13,800-a-year top civil service jobs.

Separated from their jobs without valid reason and in defiance of the Eisenhower policy of reducing federal employment by retirement and resignation.

Broyles, elected to Congress in last November's Republican victory in normally Democratic Virginia, said he would offer a resolution within the next few days seeking a House investigation.

Midlanders Plan Trip To Houston For Baptist Meet

Midland will be represented by a large delegation at the 96th meeting of the Southern Baptist Convention in Houston this week. More than 25,000 Southern Baptists are expected for the ninth Texas meeting since the organization of the convention in 1845.

Midlanders joining other West Texans in convention attendance include the Rev. and Mrs. Vernon Yearby, the Rev. and Mrs. A. B. Lightfoot, the Rev. and Mrs. Jim Goins, Mrs. C. C. Mason, the Rev. and Mrs. Leon Woods, the Rev. and Mrs. Jimmy Stovall and son, and the Rev. O. N. Reed.

VACATIONER DROWNS

Midlanders joining other West Texans in convention attendance include the Rev. and Mrs. Vernon Yearby, the Rev. and Mrs. A. B. Lightfoot, the Rev. and Mrs. Jim Goins, Mrs. C. C. Mason, the Rev. and Mrs. Leon Woods, the Rev. and Mrs. Jimmy Stovall and son, and the Rev. O. N. Reed.

States was adopting a policy of non-cooperation in working out our economic problems in the free world.

Such an attitude on the part of these countries could hurt our national well-being and our security.

The bill by Senator Mundt and 13 others would provide that whenever a domestic farm product is under government price-supports, the Treasury would be required to collect a duty on imports of that product "so that the duty paid price in United States dollars is not less than the parity price."

Sponsors contended the bill would "strengthen American agriculture and reduce the cost of price-support operations."

The State Department said it would tend to exclude foreign agricultural imports most of the time, unless domestic prices were above the full parity level.

Wool spokesmen followed up their appearance before the committee with a conference to consider means of offsetting the threat of low-priced foreign wools and expanding synthetic fiber.

One of the main topics was a proposed privately-operated corporation to take over the wool price support program now handled by the Commodity Credit Corporation.

He made the statement in an introduction to a study made by the library at the request of a Senate foreign relations subcommittee on Security Affairs, of which Wiley is chairman.

Wiley said "Soviet Russia has demonstrated that techniques of internal destruction are integral parts of its foreign policy" and that the subcommittee is concerned with foreign policy aspects of this menace to free world nations.

He said he hoped the study, dealing with the adequacy of U. S. laws to cope with offenses against national security, would prove useful not only to this country but to other governments.

The study was prepared by Mary Louise Ramsey of the library's American law division and said that, because of a number of factors, hostile acts against the United States may escape punishment entirely in many instances.

Among the factors listed were short statutes of limitation, constitutional guarantees of a public trial and due process of law, restrictions on the admissibility of evidence, such as that obtained by wire-tapping, the immunity of diplomatic representatives, the limited scope of extradition treaties, and the strict requirements for proof of treason.

Wiley, who is chairman of the full Foreign Relations Committee as well as its Security Affairs subcommittee, said the senators were not expressing their own views in making the document public.

He said, however, that even a cursory review of its contents "will amply demonstrate that there is indeed much to be desired in making more effective our security statutes."

The nation's legal protections against enemy agents, he said, have developed rather haphazardly and as a result there are many ambiguities as well as "some wide open loopholes" in existing law.

Wiley said that Russia "has placed espionage on an assembly-line basis," seeking to subvert other governments, and added:

"The very nature of communism, with its perpetual drive for global domination, its rapid change of pace through periods of peace offensives and then bold belligerence, would seem to require an adaptation of present statutes to clearly define acts endangering national security in these new circumstances."

SIGNS OF GALLANTRY—Showing signs of gallantry in his young life, Prince Charles of England, left, sees a "lady in distress" and starts to rush to her rescue. The situation involves his mother, Queen Elizabeth II, who is having difficulty helping tiny Princess Anne through a window at Balmoral Castle. Like Sir Galahad, the prince lends a gallant hand, center, to the problem of lifting his sister through the window. Now that the problem is taken care of, right, the gallant starts climbing through the window all by himself.

Just Work, Not Romance

NAPLES — (AP)— On a recent Neapolitan night Tiberio Sibracchio, a Naples wrestler, clamored up a ladder to the bedroom window of Ermine Ottaviani, 54. Then he carried her down to the garden in his arms, all 204 pounds of her. The father, a retired general, awoke and came roaring into the garden with shouts for police. He accused Sibracchio of attempted elopement without consent. "Elopement nothing," the wrestler told the court Saturday. "I made a bet I could carry her down a ladder to the garden—and I claim I won that bet." Ermine said that was correct. "Don't know about the bet," ruled the court. "But you've won your case. Dismissed."

$800 Fine Assessed Odessa Truck Driver In Fatal Area Crash

STANTON—Lee Odell, an Odessa truck driver, Saturday faced an $800 fine in Martin County Court after being convicted Wednesday on a charge of second-degree negligent homicide in the traffic death March 17 of three Midland residents.

Odell waived a jury and was tried before County Judge James McMorris.

He was charged following an automobile crash 11 miles north of Stanton, which claimed the life of Mrs. James Cantrell, wife of a Midland fireman; Joyce Maxine Cantrell, their three-year-old daughter, and Louie A. Burris, 22, Cantrell's cousin.

Odell himself escaped injury in the accident, which occurred at the intersection of the Stanton-Lamesa and Big Springs-Andrews highways.

Bumper Cotton Crop Forecast For 1953

MEMPHIS — (AP)— The Cotton Trade Journal Saturday gave the results of a survey which indicated the 1953 cotton crop would be better than that of last year by more than a million bales.

The publication said its survey showed 27,049,000 acres would be planted to cotton this year compared with 26,460,000 last year.

Basing its figures on average acreage yields for the last five years, the Journal estimated a 1953 crop of 16,023,500 bales. Last year's crop totaled 15,038,000.

Planters expect acreage controls in 1954 because of a probable cotton surplus. Many are planting more cotton this year, hoping to increase their chances for future higher cotton acreage allotments.

Cousins, 18, Attain Thrones In Capitals Of Iraq And Jordan

BAGHDAD, IRAQ — (AP)— Two 18-year-old cousins of the Hasemite dynasty, King Faisal II of Iraq and King Hussein I of Jordan, were enthroned Saturday in ceremonies 600 miles apart and took up the royal duties regents have handled for them in the past.

This was Faisal's eighteenth birthday, signaling his arrival at manhood in the Moslem world. He took the throne in Baghdad, the Arabian Nights capital of this nation of five million.

Hussein, 18 last month, became the reigning King of Jordan in a ceremony at Amman, across deserts and mountains to the west.

Each claims descent from the Prophet Mohammed. Each succeeds his father as sovereign. Each has been educated in British schools.

Branniff Restores Suspended Service

AUSTIN — (AP)— Braniff Airways said Saturday it would restore morning air service between Austin and Houston Monday.

The Senate two days ago had accused the Civil Aeronautics Board of discriminating against Texas air service.

"Schedules temporarily suspended are being restored as rapidly as possible," said R. H. Burck, Jr., Braniff regional sales manager, in a telegram to Lt. Gov. Ben Ramsey.

Names In Sergeant's 'Little Book' Mean Much To Families In Texas

By The Associated Press
Four more Texans, prisoners of the Communists, have been reported "in good shape" by a repatriated Army sergeant.

Sgt. Harry Cutting of Kansas City said Saturday in Tokyo the four Texans are among 75 POW's he listed in a small Chinese notebook he smuggled past the Reds. They are: Leonard E. Sijder, Joaquin, Carlton E. Sijder, Jacksonville. Horace Broussard, Orange. Henry Lyman, Gonzales.

H. A. Lyman of Gonzales said he had heard from his son three times recently. "But we sure are glad to hear from somebody else that he's in good shape," Lyman said. His son joined the National Guard when he was 15, was in the 36th Division when it was called up in World War II, and was in the bloody Salerno landing in Italy. The soldier now is 30.

Lyman said his son's wife, Martha, lived at Olympia, Wash. He said he had received one letter from the career soldier since January and that a sister, Mrs. Mary Lee Burt of Cuero had received two letters recently. One received two weeks ago, he said, was written last December.

Surprise For Mother
Asked if Lyman's mother was living, the elder Lyman answered. "Yes, she's right here and wait till I wake her up and tell her the news."

Sijder's sister lives in Jacksonville. She is Bonnie Sijder, 22, a telephone operator with a pretty East Texas accent.

"Oh, this is wonderful," Bonnie sighed and added: "We had about four letters from him last week, three written in December and one in January."

Bonnie said her parents are farmers but that Carlton was a truck driver, single and had been a prisoner of the Reds just over two years. "He was captured April 25, 1951," she said.

"I'll get in touch with our mother and dad just as soon as daylight gets here," she said.

An attendant at an all-night service station in Joaquin went into the country to tell a sister of Leonard Scott he had news of her brother.

The sister, Mrs. Myrtle Ritter and her husband, Snap, hurried into town. "Didn't mind it a bit for this kind of news," said Mrs. Ritter. "Why it's time to get up, anyway, and, my land, we're glad to hear from Leonard."

Has Young Daughter
Mrs. Ritter said she had had two letters from her brother since he was taken prisoner, Jan. 1, 1950, the last came in February. At the time, she said, Scott also sent his young daughter, Lynn, aged six, a Christmas card.

Mrs. Ritter said her brother, 35, had been in the Army 15 years and was a First Cavalry veteran of World War II. She said he had never been wounded and that his present imprisonment was his first.

The soldier's daughter lives in Joaquin, an East Texas hamlet near Center, with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Rains. The parents of Mrs. Ritter and Scott are both dead.

Two Additional Texas Homes Hear Of Sons Seen In Korea

By The Associated Press
At least two Texans—one reported killed by the Communists and the other reported missing in action—may be alive and well.

In Austin, the wife of Lt. Thomas Eyres received a telegram in Austin from the Air Force saying an exchanged prisoner had reported that he had seen a man believed to be Lieutenant Eyres.

Eyres, missing in Korea since January, 1952, was a war veteran recalled to duty late in 1950. He was sent overseas in August, 1951. He may be alive and a prisoner of war, the Air Force said.

In Huntsville, Dr. and Mrs. Chester Shaw, Jr. reported a similar message from the Air Force about their son, Capt. Chester Shaw, Jr. Shaw previously had been reported killed by the Reds in Korea May 17, 1952.

Shaw had been shot down while flying a jet on his 55th mission. "His plane was attacked and severely damaged," the Air Force said in its 1952 report. "Seconds later, his aircraft crashed to the ground and exploded. Capt. Shaw probably perished in enemy territory."

But Friday, the Shaws received this from the Air Force: "A report that your son x x x is being held by the North Korean and Chinese Communists has just been received. This information was given by one of the prisoners who recently was repatriated.

"Regrettably, no information concerning his health and welfare was furnished. Because this information is unofficial and unconfirmed, no action can be taken to make any change in his status at this time."

Dr. Shaw, psychiatrist for the prison system, said he would make every effort to verify the report.

"If it is true," he said, "it will be the answer to our prayers." Captain Shaw is a native of Rusk.

He was called back to active duty June 1, 1951, as a member of the Air Reserve. His wife, Mrs. Martha Gamble Shaw, and his daughter, two and one-half, also live in Huntsville.

HE'S OF SAME OPINION STILL

TOKYO — (AP)— Donald Rose of Redlands, Calif., said Saturday treatment was "passable" in the Communist prison camp where he spent six and one-half months, but not the food!

"Before I left the States I thought rice was only for weddings—and I still believe it!"

Vietminh Invasion Vanguard Regroups Near Laotian Capital

HANOI, INDOCHINA — (AP)— Vietminh invasion vanguards from the north and east regrouped within 10 miles of Luangprabang Saturday, apparently awaiting the arrival of more troops before attempting an assault on the palm-lined royal capital of Laos.

French and Laotian patrols ranging across the hills and mountains immediately surrounding the once beautiful home of King Sisavang Vong found none of the enemy in shooting range.

Heavy rains stymied French fighters and bombers which have been strafing and bombing Vietminh troop concentrations. But despite the bad weather, French transport planes poured still more troops and war supplies into Luangprabang from Hanoi, 275 miles to the northeast.

And in the royal seat the 6,000 civilians worked ceaselessly with French and Laotian soldiers, digging more and deeper trenches and stringing barbed wire entanglements against the Communist-led rebels who, when they strike, may outnumber the defenders four to one.

The enemy assault could come Sunday, but indications are the Red leaders will hold up the attack until all available forces have pushed in through jungles and coconut groves to reach their strongest offensive positions.

SAN ANGELO — (AP)— One of the most inquisitive men in Southwest Texas wrote his last article Friday and closed an active newspaper career that spanned 54 years, 51 of them in Texas and 37 in San Antonio and Southwest Texas.

A. W. Grant, one of the editors of San Antonio Express and Evening News, called it a career and went into retirement. He was 72 April 18.

During his 37 years with the Express Publishing Company, Grant became probably the best known newsman in Southwest Texas. For years he has been identified closely with the development of the area. His general information on San Antonio and Southwest Texas is staggering.

Freighter, String Of Barges Collide In Galveston Fog

GALVESTON — (AP)— The Coast Guard said a 3,000-ton Norwegian freighter and a 90-foot tug towing two barges collided in a murky, pre-dawn fog about 15 miles north of here Saturday.

No injuries were reported. The freighter Loveland, outbound from Houston, had two plates opened in her bow about 10 feet above the water line.

The tug Lone Star had considerable damage to her starboard side but was able to proceed under her own power with the barges, one of which also was damaged. The tug is owned by the Commercial Petroleum and Transportation Company of Houston.

Dixiecrats' Support Of GOP Poses Problem For President

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON — (AP)— Dixie Democratic support for President Eisenhower's foreign and domestic programs has posed a new political problem for the Republicans in the South.

The President's party has declared its intention to build a strong GOP organization below the Mason and Dixie Line. But will it attempt to drive out of office those Democrats who have gone down the line for it in Congress?

Vote checks in the first four months of the 83rd Congress indicate Eisenhower is likely to have to depend on Southern Democrats to provide the winning margin for legislation he wants.

No 'Civil Rights'
He apparently is assured of that margin so long as he continues the foreign program he has outlined in speeches since he took office.

He will get similar Dixie Democratic support for most of the domestic plans he has advanced thus far and will hold it so long as he avoids such highly controversial fields as civil rights legislation.

The President's dependence on Southern Democrats for backing in the pinches was demonstrated last week in a test Senate vote on the submerged lands bill. The vote came on a motion by Senator Taft of Ohio, the Republican leader, to kill a proposal by Senator Anderson (D-NM) to establish federal title to oil-rich off-shore lands.

Sparkman Opposes
The issue clearly involved expected Senate approval next Tuesday of the pending measure to establish state title to such lands within the states' traditional boundaries.

This was a campaign issue in last year's presidential election. Senator Sparkman of Alabama, the 1952 Democratic vice presidential nominee, said he credits Eisenhower's endorsement of the state ownership principle — plus the Republican candidate's personal popularity — for the GOP victories in Texas and Florida.

Taft was so determined to make good on the Eisenhower campaign promise that he threatened continuous Senate sessions to break a filibuster. Opponents finally agreed to a showdown vote next Tuesday.

15 Back Taft
But Taft would have been helpless to enforce the Administration will if he had had to depend alone on Senate Republicans and had not been assured Southern Democratic backing.

Fifteen Dixie senators stood with Taft—despite their annual reluctance to approve a "tabling" motion which cuts off debate—to provide the 56 to 33 vote by which the motion carried. Only three Democrats from outside the old South voted with the Ohioan, Clements of Kentucky, Hunt of Wyoming and McCarran of Nevada.

In this case seven Republicans strayed off the GOP reservation—Aiken of Vermont, Case of South Dakota, Cooper of Kentucky, Griswold of Nebraska, Langer of North Dakota, Tobey of New Hampshire and Young of North Dakota.

On Other Measures
Eisenhower's side didn't get all of the Southern Democrats because Fulbright and McClellan of Arkansas, Gore and Kefauver of Tennessee and Hill and Sparkman of Alabama went against the Taft motion.

The submerged lands bill motion had some Southern support that other domestic issues may not command. On the other hand, some Dixie Democrats who are against it will be for other Eisenhower proposals, particularly in the field of foreign relations.

Six of the Democrats who voted with Taft—and may be expected to go along with other major Eisenhower proposals—are up for reelection next year in states where the Republicans believe they have a good chance of building permanent party organizations.

Six On Bandwagon
The six are Ellender of Louisiana, Lyndon Johnson of Texas, the Democratic leader, Maybank of South Carolina, Robertson of Virginia, Russell of Georgia and Willis Smith of North Carolina. Of these Eisenhower carried Texas and Virginia.

As the situation stands, some of these Democrats may be running on platforms contending that they have furnished more consistent support for the President than their Republican colleagues in the Senate.

Just how the Republicans would meet such a campaign with candidates of their own remains to be seen.

Price-Pegged Cotton Is Major Headache For Harassed Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO—(AP)—Brazil's main economic headache may be how to dispose of its over-priced cotton. It has 275,000 metric tons from 1951-52 still on hand, and the 1952-53 crop is moving to market. It is estimated at 450,000 tons. The total of 725,000 tons is worth an estimated 540 million dollars at world prices. If the exportable total of this—525,000 tons worth an estimated 393 million dollars—could be sold, it would go a long way toward restoring Brazil's normal trading position. In the past, cotton has provided 20 to 25 per cent of all Brazil's foreign earnings. Cotton trade circles say there is little possibility of bulk shipments abroad of this cotton at existing Brazilian prices. The government-fixed support price, they say, means that they would have to sell the cotton abroad at the equivalent of 40 1/2 cents a pound, just to break even. World price for an average grade of cotton is 34 cents a pound.

Lattimore Freed On One Charge; Still Faces Three

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Charges that Owen Lattimore lied when he denied Communist sympathies were thrown out Saturday by a federal judge who declared America must not destroy freedom of belief while fighting Red infiltration. But District Judge Luther W. Youngdahl ordered Lattimore to trial October 8 on three lesser perjury charges. Even those three may not "pass the test of materiality so as to present a jury issue," he said, adding: "But this must await the trial." Lattimore, a Johns Hopkins University lecturer and one-time occasional consultant to the State Department, was indicted by a federal grand jury last December 18. "Pure Moonshine" The charges, seven in all, grew out of his stormy 12 days of testimony last Spring before the Senate Internal Security subcommittee headed by Senator McCarran (D-Nev.). The committee questioned Lattimore about alleged Communist connections and what influence he wielded in U. S. postwar policy in the Orient, then recommended that a grand jury decide whether he had committed perjury. Lattimore, who declined comment on Judge Youngdahl's ruling, has denied all the charges against him. "Pure moonshine," he said of a statement by Senator McCarthy (R-Wis) that he was the top Soviet spy in the U. S. Judge Youngdahl, a Republican former governor of Minnesota, said the indictment's first and basic count, that Lattimore lied when

Owen Lattimore

He declared a jury trying to decide an issue about sympathies and beliefs could reach its verdict only by "conjecture." "Communism's fallacy and viciousness can be demonstrated without striking down the protection of the first amendment of discourse, discussion and debate," the judge said. "When public excitement runs high as to alien ideologies, it is the time when we must be particularly alert not to impair the ancient landmarks set up in the Bill of Rights." The judge said the Supreme Court has recognized Congress' broad powers to investigate and sometimes take hearsay evidence. But, in a perjury case, he said, "The element of materiality must be present or the charges fall." He rejected 10 motions. Judge Youngdahl rejected 10 defense motions to kill the indictment or postpone the trial and move it out of Washington. The judge said he found no indication or proof that Lattimore could not have as fair and impartial a trial in Washington as anywhere else. He ordered the government to show more specifically the basis for the three counts remaining against Lattimore. He expressed "serious doubt" that these three can be shown to be material. The three other counts which Judge Youngdahl rejected were those which said Lattimore lied when he swore: 1. That until the late 1930's he did not know that "Asiaticus," the pen-name of a contributor to a magazine Lattimore edited, was a Communist. 2. That, aside from Russian contributors, he never published articles from known Reds in this magazine, "Pacific Affairs." 3. That he visited Chinese Communist headquarters at Yenan in 1937 without making advance arrangements. Three Trials Counts The three counts on which Lattimore was ordered to trial were that he testified falsely: 1. That he did not know until 1950 that Dr. Ch'ao Ting Chi, with whom he worked at the Institute of Pacific Relations, was a Communist. 2. That he lunched in 1941 with the Soviet ambassador in Washington after Hitler's invasion of Russia and not prior to that when Nazi Germany and the Soviet were allies. 3. That he never handled the mail of Leuchlin Currie, an aide of the late President Roosevelt, when Currie was away from Washington.

Former San Angelo Officer Kills Wife, Daughter, Then Self

EL PASO—(AP)—The last of a family of three involved in a family shooting late Friday died Saturday. Mrs. Wanda Rae Fowler, 27, died Saturday, a few hours after her two-year-old daughter, Janis Lynn, and her husband, Raymond Fowler, 32, former San Angelo policeman and truck driver, died. Detective Capt. R. H. Lessor said Fowler fatally wounded his wife and daughter and then killed himself. "Fowler knew exactly what he was going to do when he picked up his child and drove to a freight lines office where his wife worked," Lessor said. "He had a suicide note in his pocket." Lessor said Mrs. Fowler had filed for divorce at San Angelo, their former home.

23 Bills Scheduled For Public Airing; Tax Measure Leads

AUSTIN—(AP)—Only 23 bills are scheduled for public hearing next week. Another bill taxing natural gas is scheduled by the House Revenue and Taxation Committee at 2:30 p.m. Monday. By Rep. Charles Hughes of Sherman, it would place an occupation levy of 11/20 of one per cent per 1,000 cubic feet on gas processed in Texas. Hughes would levy an additional 9/20 if the present gathering tax of 9/20 of one cent finally is ruled invalid by the courts. The ultimate objective is to secure 40 million dollars a year in taxes now available to the state. Two bills, one providing for a presidential primary, the other for minimum price-fixing in the Panhandle gas field, are supposed to be heard by House committees Monday night, but the House has scheduled a session for the same time. The hearing probably will be postponed. STANTONITES VISIT Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Barnes of Stanton were in Midland Saturday on business.

HE'S NOT THROUGH WITH THE --- GI's Trail Etched In Blood On March Through Red Hell

Sgt. Orville Mullins of Covington, Ky., was a prisoner of the Communists in North Korea for 30 months. He is only 36, but looks older. Bad food and bad treatment have left their mark. He walks with a limp. His legs are still weak from the machine-gun slugs that riddled them when he was captured on the Eastern Front near Heartbreak Ridge, Aug. 27, 1951. He was a member of the 38th Regiment of the U. S. 2nd Division. Today, Mullins is enroute to a hospital in the United States after being repatriated at Panmunjom with other sick or wounded Allied soldiers. He wanted to tell his story, and the story of his buddies, to the people of the United States. "You can't play it up too much," he said. "It's the way those prison camps were. It's the way my buddies died." This is his story.

who were cruel. The Chinese were, too. Conditions were a little better when I was turned over to the Chinese but they still weren't much good. I'll tell you that. "I'm not very religious, but I used to sit in Camp No. 3 and watch the Chinese carry the men who had died during the night over the hill, and I used to pray for them. It was Aug. 27, 1951, when I was captured. I'll remember that date forever. It was just south of what they call Heartbreak Ridge now. We had two companies in blocking position to the north and east of our main lines. We were on a hill, and the North Koreans cut behind us, between us and the main lines. We fought until we ran out of ammunition. Then we tried to run, but we couldn't run fast enough. They caught us. They caught 26 of us, and they killed the rest. They stopped me with machine-gun bullets in my legs. It rained for four days and four nights. The North Koreans marched us 20 days to get to Pyongyang (North Korean capital). We doubled back along the front. I had to walk. It hurt. I lost so much blood in my legs I left a bloody streak on the ground. The blood would clot up in the bullet holes, but then the rain would dissolve the clot and I would start bleeding again. My legs were all swollen up. Little spots on my legs would swell up and then they couldn't swell any more, so they would burst open. We rode one half of one night, on a little truck just big enough to hold about 10 men. There were 40 of us, with the guards. There wasn't any room for one guard to sit. He ordered us all to get out. I couldn't move on account of my legs. They were stretched out in front of me. He got mad at me for not moving and jumped up and down on my legs. All of us got to Pyongyang on the energy we had stored up before we were captured. But it was beginning to wear out by the time we got there. We met more prisoners in Pyongyang, and 162 of us started out from Pyongyang for the Yalu River. A year ago, I figured it up. There were 61 of us left alive out of the 162 that started that trip. A lot of them died at the side of the road. Some didn't die until they got to camp. But they died because of the things they went through on that trip. One place we stopped on the way up, they threw 12 men with dysentery into a little room in a mud shack. They were so weak they couldn't leave the room. The guards brought a bowl of maize to the door. They wouldn't go inside, it was so dirty. Four of those 12 men died the first night we were there. The day we left, we found the eight others dead. I couldn't walk after we left Pyongyang. I went about 500 yards and fell down. The guards pulled me up, and prodded me on with their rifles. But I kept falling down. Finally they put me in an ox cart. One man would drop at the side of the road one night, and the next day, two or three would drop. I guess the civilians buried them. The guards wouldn't let us stop. We said a silent prayer for them as we went on. At the prison camp, the Chinese Communists told us: "You are a student—not a prisoner." They told us we weren't captured, but liberated. They spent most of their time trying to make us Communists. I guess they succeeded with a few. They kept drumming this Communism business into our heads. But most of us didn't listen to them. I don't remember the number of men that died. One day one would drop. The next day it would be three more. After two months the food got better, and the deaths dropped to maybe one a week. In our camp, they wouldn't let us bury our own men. The Chinese took their clothes off, and carried them to a cemetery over the hill. Now, the Communists let the boys have religious services in camp. Before, it was against the rules. Some of the guys had bootleg services. There were one or two Testaments in camp, that guys had brought with them when they were captured. Somebody who felt he was qualified would lead the services. The Chinese broke up a few of the services. In six weeks that first winter, 40

Americans died in the hospital at Camp 3. Later, though, it got better. The Chinese got orders from somewhere to keep us alive. The lice were so bad I used to wake up in the mornings grabbing at my hair. Handfuls would come out by the roots. Malnutrition caused it, I suppose. I weighed 180 pounds when I was captured. In two months I dropped to 80 pounds. I was a living skeleton. They fattened me up on rice and I was back up to 150 when I was liberated. But it was a rice diet. I've been in the Army seven years. I'm going to stay in. I'm not through with those ---

RIGHT BACK WHERE THEY STARTED—Teachers Asked $600 Hike Or Nothing; They Got Both

AUSTIN—(AP)—Texas teachers who asked the state to boost their base pay are right back where they started January 21 when the $600-a-year salary raise bill was introduced. A wisecrack was making the rounds of the Capitol corridors about it this weekend: "The teachers asked for $600 or nothing and got both." But it wasn't funny for teachers who wanted the money or for legislators whose political futures might hinge on how they voted. No Compromise Stand The wisecrack stemmed from the teachers' "no compromise" stand on the $600 raise. Opponents had offered $300 on the basis it would be easier to raise 33 million dollars in new taxes than $6 million. The comptroller red-tagged the pay bill and sent it back to the Senate, where it started. He said no money was in sight to pay for it. Here's what could happen to the bill now: 1. The Legislature could adjourn and do nothing. 2. The bill could be passed on a required four-fifths vote in both houses, a remote possibility. No Sign Of Tax Bill 3. The House could get busy on a tax bill but there were few signs of that. 4. There could be a compromise involving a lower annual base pay figure. A drive to end the session May 12 was gathering steam. Both houses were busy clearing their calendars of pet local bills. Activity was stepped up on some of the governor's proposals, such as judicial restricting. Election code revision was in the debate stage, but the constitutional amendment to finance local water savings projects was blocked again in the Senate. Governor Shivers signed the general appropriations bill, noting that funds for operating new state mental hospitals had been left out. That would call for something between $600,000 and one million dollars more but no suggestions had been made on where to get it. A lobbyist control act was killed in House committee and the House refused to revive it. A constitutional amendment to channel surplus Confederate pension money into a state building fund was put up to the voters in 1954. Backers of bills to curb loan sharks said they would put on a whirlwind fight to get their measure up for debate before time ran out.

Guerrillas Keep GI's Alive After Captors Leave Them

TOKYO—(AP)—Wounded and helpless, five American soldiers were abandoned by their Chinese captors in a Korean hut behind the Red lines. But other Chinese soldiers, Korean civilians, and a band of South Korean guerrillas kept the five men alive the next 25 days by sharing their own meager food supplies. Opl. John King, 29, one of the five who lay helpless in the little hut during bitter fighting on the western front two years ago, related the story Saturday at Tokyo Army Hospital. He didn't name the other four men. King learned April 18 he would be repatriated with other sick and wounded. "They took about 100 of us to Pyongyang and feasted us with good food, beer and wine," King said. "They were trying to make up for what they did wrong before—the things that happened in 1950 and '51. They tried to make the men forget about the past. But they won't forget. A lot of men died in '50 and '51." A member of the 24th Division, King was near a tank when a Chinese rocket hit the ground five feet away, driving pieces of metal into his body and blowing him "maybe 15 maybe 20 feet" into the air.

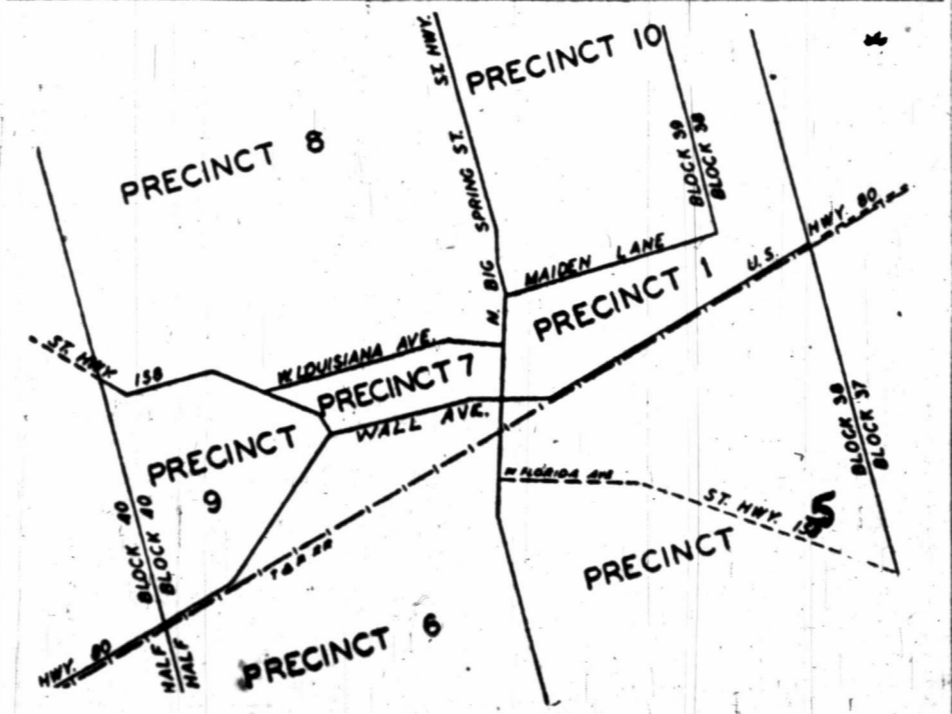

"I remember saying, 'Save me Opl.' Those are the last words I remember. Then when I was coming down I let out a big scream. I was unconscious when I hit the ground," King said. "King stayed at a hospital seven months. He walked with a cane until August, when he threw the cane away. He still has a bad limp. King was born and reared in San Antonio. Dallas Editor Gets 'Oil Woman' Title TULSA—(AP)—Miss Ernestine Adams, Dallas oil trade magazine editor, was named "Oil Woman of the Year" Saturday by the Desk and Derrick Clubs. She is managing editor of "Petroleum Engineer" and will be presented an award May 17 at the International Petroleum Exposition in recognition of the mounting contributions of women in the many phases of petroleum industry operations. FIRE LOSS SMALL Loss was described as small in the Saturday afternoon fire at Oriental Cleaners, 104 North Mainfield Street. Firemen reported welding near gasoline as the cause.

'Treated Us Like Dogs,' Says Vet Of Nazi, Red PW Camps

TRAVIS AIR FORCE BASE, CALIF.—(AP)—Forty more released U.S. prisoners of war arrived Saturday from Korea and one of them declared they were "treated like dogs" by the Communists. Another said they had received little if any medical care. "When the peace talks started, we were just skin and bones," said Cpl. Tibur Rubin of Long Beach, Calif., who was liberated just eight years ago from a Nazi concentration camp in Austria. "The treatment got better, but we did not live like kings. We were treated like dogs." Cpl. Wendell H. Trefery of Terryville, Conn., told reporters that from a Yalu River prison camp he saw UN planes shoot down seven enemy MIG's and "three of them had Russian pilots." A newsman asked him how he knew they were Russian. Trefery said "they parachuted and walked through our village. I never saw a North Korean with blond hair." Corporal Rubin said he lost more than 2,500 American "buddies" in Korean prison camps between September, 1950, and May, 1951. He spoke of all Americans as "buddies," whether he knew them or not, and said he hoped soon to be naturalized. "The trouble mostly was bad food, dysentery, pneumonia and beriberi," he said. "If you have pneumonia, you just lie there and die or get better. One man who reported sick with dysentery was told to 'drink plenty of hot water.'" Rubin would not compare Red or Nazi concentration camps. But he said that as an American soldier he had expected better treatment. In a Nazi camp he said he did not expect any better treatment than he got. He said he lost his mother, father and a sister in German camps. Opl. Jiminez-Ooari Nicolas of Puerto Rico declared he had no medical treatment whatever during 25 long months of captivity. When captured he had a bullet wound in his left arm, which still was stiff and sore. A second plane with 20 aboard came through here Friday night after a secrecy-shrouded flight from Tokyo. One former POW was taken to Letterman General Hospital at San Francisco, and the rest were flown to Valley Forge Military Hospital at Phoenixville, Pa. At the Pentagon an Air Force spokesman said security conditions had been placed on the flight because the men had been "victims of Communist propaganda."

SPORTS PARLEY

By CHARLEY ESKEW

Apparently no one likes an umpire. Even in the Longhorn League games here so far, he's definitely been a "blind blanket-blank," a "meathead" and "a goof ball," according to Midland fans.

But the ump's are thick-skinned and can take it when you consider "you can't beat them hours." Consequently, no one feels sorry for them—or didn't—until Sports Editor Harold Ratliff of The Associated Press dug up a recent item.

Did you know that the ump's have to suffer the injury of remembering all those insults hurled at him?

But let Ratliff take it from here:

Filed away in the Texas League office is a record of some of the vilest language known to man. These are the reports made by the umpires on the doings of players and managers—down to the last case word.

But the profanity doesn't hurt the umpires so much as one little epithet—"home." That implies crookedness, bias in favor of the home team.

Homer Hammond, who once owned the San Antonio club, had an answer for that but it was tongue-in-cheek. One of Hammond's players had been penalized for calling an umpire a homer. Said Hammond: "What's so bad about that? Why, my name's Homer."

The profanity and abuse an umpire must take in his work should embitter him against mankind. The umpire can't hit back. If he flares back or strikes a player or fan, he is liable to a severe penalty, most likely he will be fired.

One Texas League umpire pulled a knife one night. Actually, he had been knocked goofy by a player who swung around to protest a decision at the plate. The player hadn't crashed into the umpire purposely, but the result was the same. The umpire, instinctively, pulled a knife. He didn't know exactly what he was doing but was responding to the call of nature—to protect himself. That umpire was suspended for 90 days.

Milt Steengraef had thumbed Mickey Livingston, manager of Shreveport, out of the game for some derogatory remarks. Mickey fumed: "What gets me is that you alone have put me out of a game three times." The inference was that Milt was picking on Livingston. Said Steengraef with a grin: "Don't worry, Mickey; there are more games to play."

There was the time Charley Grimm, managing Dallas, protested when Umpire Louis Smith called a man out at second base with his back to the play. Louis had gotten the sign from the base umpire. Grimm knew the man was out but he rushed out and yelled: "How can you call a man out with your back to the play?" "Radar," replied Louis airily.

The umpire in the Texas League makes from $500 to $700 a month from which he must pay his expenses. The players make as high as $1,000 a month and get their expenses paid while on the road. The managers make several times as much.

So the umpire is the lowest paid but the most maligned man in the league.

Oh, the players and managers are imaginative about it. You can increase your vocabulary by reading the reports. For instance, one acting manager called an umpire a "hard-nosed-so-and-so."

Some statements are unique. "Gutless" is the usual epithet when the umpire has ruled against him. But think of this situation that actually arose. The umpire forfeited a game against the home club. It took courage to do that, because not only was the umpire subjected to the ire of the players but the home fans, too. Yet the manager stormed: "You are gutless."

The shoe often is on the other foot when the stands ride a player. He seldom can take it; fumes and fuses. Some even charge up into the stands for a crack at their tormentor. Bobby Bragan, managing Fort Worth, pulled a protest he knew wouldn't be popular with the Dallas fans.

As he strode over to the third-base coaching line he put cotton in his ears.

Louisiana Ace Edges North Texas' Mosel

ATHENS, GA.—Steady Eddie Merrins, the sawed-off shotmaker from LSU, sank a 15-inch putt on the last hole to win the sixteenth Southern Interscholastic Golf Championship by one stroke Saturday.

The five-foot, six-inch junior from Meridian, Miss., had to keep fighting back to stay even with the 36-72 par course. He edged out North Texas State's Stan Mosel and Memphis State's Hillman Robbins. Robbins also tied for runner-up here last year.

Merrins, the National Intercollegiate runner-up for 1952, had a 72-70-72-72-286, two under par. Mosel had 70-72-74-71-287. Robbins had 71-77-70-69-287.

LSU's Cecil Calhoun shot rounds of 72 and 71 in Saturday's 36-hole finals to finish fourth at 288.

Gay Brewer, Kentucky, Southern Amateur champion, had 74-70 for 291 and a tie for fifth with Tom Morrow, another LSU ace, and Mason Rudolph, Tennessee. Morrow had 72-74. Rudolph had 72-73.

Next came Joe Conrad of NTSC at 292. Don January, NTSC, shot 294.

Dark Star—The Darkhorse—Captures Derby

LOUISVILLE.—Dark Star from the Cain Hoy Stable pulled one of racing's greatest upsets Saturday, by winning the seventy-ninth Kentucky Derby in a slam-bang finish that ended the unbeaten record of Native Dancer.

Jockey Henry Moreno put Dark Star on the front end soon after the colorful mile and one-quarter racing class got under way. He held it to the end as Native Dancer closed with a steady drive in the stretch, only to be beaten by the margin of the winner's sleek brown head.

It was a tremendous victory for Dark Star and his owner, Harry F. Guggenheim of New York, former ambassador to Cuba, and a stunning reversal for the big grey Alfred Vanderbilt depended upon for his first Derby victory.

Dark Star, a brown son of the Australian sire, Royal Gem II, was one of the long shots in the field of 11 three-year-olds. A roar went up when they posted the price of $51.80 for each $2 in the upset victory. He paid $13.60 to place and $7.00 to show.

NATIVE DANCER WAS five lengths ahead of the third horse, the Saxon Stable's Invigorator, but that was no solace to the Dancer backers.

Native Dancer had won all nine of his races last year as a juvenile, and took both his starts this season, the Gotham Stakes and Wood Memorial, the latter a week ago at Jamaica.

But he reached the crossroads this warm, sunny afternoon at ancient Churchill Downs, and Vanderbilt's dreams of years went down the drain in the span of just a little over two minutes.

Dark Star won the Derby Trial here last Tuesday by four lengths in one minute, 36 seconds flat—close to the track record. Native Dancer wasn't in that race, but his reputation had shoved most of the other horses out of consideration for the Derby run.

TIME FOR THE WINNER, a son of the mare Isold, 2:02. This compares with the Derby and track record of 2:01 2/5 for Whirlaway, winner of the race in 1941. Whirlaway died recently in France where he was in the stud.

Native Dancer, who went to the post the odds-on favorite at 4 to 5 with his stablemate, Social Outcast, returned $2.20 and $2.80. Invigorator paid $9.40 to show.

Dark Star had finished third to Native Dancer when the latter colt won the rich Futurity at Belmont Park last fall. But this time he had his number.

CORRESPONDENT, the California contender owned by Mrs. Gordon Gubberson of La Jolla and second choice in the mutuels at 3 to 1, ran second for the first mile, then tired under Eddie Arcaro and finished fifth.

Royal Bay Gem, the Texas colt owned by Eugene Constantine, Jr. of Dallas, third choice at almost 7 to 1, finished fourth, two lengths behind Invigorator.

Behind Correspondent came the Greentree Stable's Straight Face in sixth place, followed by Social Outcast, the G. and G. Stable's Money Broker, Bruce S. Campbell's Ham O' War, Edward M. Goodman's Curragh King, and T. M. Daniel's Ace Destroyer.

Gross value of the race was $118,100, with Dark Star's share $90,050. The record purse of $98,050 was banked by Count Turf in 1951.

MORENO, A NATIVE OF CHICAGO where he was born May 12, 1929, was rather surprised as he smiled in the winner's circle where the blanket of red roses was draped over the perspiring neck of his horse.

"I had hoped to run third," said the boy who was riding in his first Derby.

"When did I think I had it won?"

"When I got under the wire the second time," he said.

"I HAD PLANNED to lay third behind Native Dancer and Correspondent, but I had so much horse under me I changed my mind going under the wire the first time."

Eric Guerin, who rode Native Dancer and won the Derby with Jet Pilot in 1947, said the Dancer was bumped by Money Broker on the first or clubhouse turn.

"We got bumped on the first turn, but we lost in the stretch," said Guerin. "Native Dancer just didn't run in the stretch like he can. He didn't seem to like the track."

Arcaro, who has won the Derby five times—more than any other jockey—couldn't explain the showing of Correspondent, who broke the Keeneland track record last week when he won the Blugrass Stakes in 1:49 for the mile and one-eighth.

"My horse didn't run very much. Don't know why. It was the only time he ever ran bad for me."

END OF THE RAINBOW—Abe Beckman, left, and H. L. Winkler admire the trophies which will go to the winner of the City Championship Golf Tournament. Beckman, tourney director, is holding the smaller trophy which the winner gets as a permanent possession. The 29-inch permanent trophy on the table by Winkler, tourney starter, will be retired only when one golfer has won the crown three times. Until then, it will rotate with each year's winner.

Wortman Leads Four Into City Semi-Finals

Former club champion Bob Wortman, one of the early favorites, overcame his second hard-pressing opponent Saturday to pace three other topflight players into the semi-finals of the first Annual Reporter-Telegram City Championship Golf Tournament.

Wortman put down A. T. Pierce, 2-up, recording his second straight day of even-par golf against strong and active winds. None of the other three remaining contenders has approached his pace—even Pierce's 73 against Wortman equaled that of semi-finalist Ford Sturdivant.

Sunday Wortman, the 1950 Ranchland Hill titlist, tackles the 1953 club champion, Red Watkins, who fired a 75 in beating Johnny Sherrad, 2 and 1, Saturday, while Medalist Pearl A. Ward and Sturdivant battle in the upper bracket pairings.

The championship foursome tees off at the 6,624-yard Ranchland Hill layout at 8:37 a.m. and the victors in each duel will meet in the finals at 1 p.m.

While that foursome won out in matches Saturday, 11 other flights in the 184-man field also trimmed down at least to semi-final size. One group, the eleventh fighters, made up of only eight at the start, worked into its finals—pitting Raymond Jenkins against Bob Johnson in the winner's bracket and Raymond Armstrong against K. C. Slough in the consolation bracket.

All of the groups—although some have reached the finals stage because of dog-eat dog pairings Saturday—are scheduled to decide their champions by 6 p.m.

Besides Wortman's and Watkins' Saturday victories, Ward, who fired a 71 in qualifying to lead the scorers, protected his favorite's role with an impressive 4 and 3 triumph over Kit Carson, the tourney's longest hitter. Sturdivant, scoring one-under par golf for the first nine, made his 85 good for coasting past W. Bill Barker, 7 and 6, Friday. Wortman was forced to par golf in whipping J. T. Jamison, 3 and 2. Ward put out Bill Hightower, 1-up. Sturdivant beat Evans Dunn by default, and Watkins eliminated Vann Ligon, 6 and 4.

In chalking up a 74 Saturday, Ward, a former Midland High golfer, dropped two birdies, on the four-par, 345-yard, No. 5, and the five-par, 308-yard No. 15.

Wortman matched strokes with par through the first nine holes before slipping in a birdie three on No. 10, a 335-yard water hole. His even-par outgoing nine earned him a one up lead, his birdie made the difference. Pierce, though, got even with pars, three and four, on Nos. 11 and 13. But Wortman copped 14, 16 and 18 to overcome the birdie-two Pierce netted up on the 160-yard No. 17.

John Sherrad, in losing to Watkins, won only two holes and had to whip par on both of them, getting a duce on No. 3 and an eagle three on No. 15. Watkins came in second best with his only birdie, that a four after Sherrad eagled No. 15.

The second flight consolation matches open Sunday's duels at 8 a.m., with the last of the final rounds expected to be completed at about 6 p.m.

President John Mills of Ranchland and Jim Lindsey, managing editor of The Reporter-Telegram, will make presentation of awards.

12 State Records Expected To Fall

More than 800 high school athletes swarm into Austin next week for the Interscholastic League meet. The three-division track meet is the main show.

There will be tennis and golf but the track meet will draw 811 athletes. There will be 117 in golf and 94 in tennis, half of the latter being girls. Tennis is the only sport in which the girls participate.

Ben Quintana Halts Broncs On Four Hits

The Midland Indians, looking for two more starting pitchers to go along with Ralph Blair and Eddie Jacome, considered the problem half solved when Ben Quintana hurled them to 6-0 victory over Big Spring Friday night.

Quintana turned in a four-hitter. And only Odessa's three-hit hurling against Blair's Quintana's stinkiness for the 1953 Indians.

Midland found Bronco Pitcher Oscar Reguera for eight hits, well timed. The third of three, a single by Jim Prince, opened the scoring in Midland's one-run first.

Quintana's shutout was endangered only once, in the eighth inning when Mickey Diaz singled and made third on a walk and fly-out, Indian Shortstop Scooter Hughes then turned in the night's top fielding gem to curtail the threat, taking Reguera's slow bouncer behind second base and throwing out the runner to retire the side.

In other Friday Longhorn League games, Lamesa tripped Carlsbad, 8-5. Artesia walloped Roswell, 24-9, and Odessa bopped San Angelo, 22-8.

PECOS-The Pecos Eagles shut out Fort Stockton, 5-0, Friday behind the masterful one-hit pitching of Nick Highnojoz, who also rapped a two-run homer in the second inning.

The Eagles picked up the District 5-A triumph by scoring four times in the second on two errors and on Highnojoz' homer. In the sixth, Catcher Walter Mueller hit a triple and scored on an error.

Highnojoz struck out six and got good support—including a double play. He faced only 23 men.

The Midland Colts hope to rebound from their only loss of the current season when they entertain the Odessa All-Stars at 3 p.m. Sunday in Cole Park.

Rutledge Stars As Bulldogs Nudge Past Lamesa By 9-8
Rusty Rutledge slammed out a bases-loaded triple in the bottom of the sixth to give the Midland Bulldogs a 9-8 District 3-AA victory over the Lamesa Tornados at Indian Park Saturday.

Rutledge's blast featured an uphill struggle the Bulldogs had waged all day and enabled Midland to pull into a tie with Lamesa for fifth place in the league race. Both teams have a 2-6 record.

The Tornados climbed all over Jesse Hatfield, Bulldog Starter, in the first inning as the Midland left fielder-turned-pitcher threw three wild pitches. Boyce McKnight took

Max Jones Named Kermit High Coach

KERMIT—Max Jones, who comes from a famous athletic family which includes the fabulous T. James Carroll, Jones of Childress High School and University of Texas fame, was named athletic director and head football coach at Kermit High School Friday night, Superintendent G. E. Thompson announced Saturday.

The 29-year-old Max gained renown for himself at Childress and is well known as the coach who molded the careers of Bud McFadin, All-America guard for the Texas Longhorns, and Billy Joe Huddleston, the dandy trackman and football player for Iran in 1951.

He succeeds Neal Dillman, who resigned to take the Pampa coaching position and took with him Assistant I. D. Russell and Arthur Sweet.

Jones will be free to pick his own assistants, Thompson said. Terms of the contract were not announced, but Jones was given two-year tenure on his new job. He also will coach the track team.

After gaining Little All-America fame while at Southwestern University, Jones went to Clarendon as an assistant and then drifted to Iran, where he spent two more years apprenticeship before taking over the head track and football duties. His football record there was 17 wins and three losses.

Besides T. Jones, Max has a brother currently playing at Baylor. He is Charles Jones, a halfback who is older than T. but spent several years in the service while T. was performing for Texas. Max played at SMU during the war years until he broke a leg as a sophomore.

Another of the famous family—a cousin, that is—Red Barfield, the star baseball and trackman for Texas in the 1930's.

Trudell, Funk Head Odessa Grapple Card
ODESSA—Benny Trudell and Dory Funk head the wrestling card here Monday night. John Henning and Roger Mackey lead off the program at 8:15 p.m., followed by Bob Cummings and Jack O'Reilly. The feature is scheduled for the best of three falls with a one-hour time limit.

Tickets may be obtained at Model Shop, Appliances or by calling 7-0901 in Odessa before 8 p.m. Monday and 7-9316 after 8 p.m.

Over, but before he could doze the rally, Lamesa had scored five runs on three hits, two walks and a pair of errors.

After Lamesa had scored again in the second, Midland had its inning in the third when Hatfield singled, went to second on a balk.

White Sox Tip Yanks; Bosox Trip Tribe, 5-1

—Red Sox-Indians—
CLEVELAND—(P)—Boston's Red Sox won their fifth straight game Saturday, a 5-1 victory over Cleveland. Hector Brown's bid for his first major league shut-out was ruined by Dale Mitchell's homer with two out in the ninth.

Brown held the Indians to seven hits, while the Sox hammered Bob Feller and Bob Hooper for 12. One of Dick Gerner's three hits was a two-run single which turned the tide in the eighth. It was Feller's second defeat against one win.

After Gerner's single in the fifth, Sam White's bunt went for a hit as Feller slipped and fell. Gene Stephens bunted, and this time it was First Baseman Bill Glynn who slipped. Gerner scored as Tom Umpsett hit into a double play.

The Red Sox' last two runs were scored off Hooper in the ninth on a walk and singles by Milt Bolling, Brown and Jim Piersall.

Allie Clark gave Martin all the runs he needed in the first inning with a three-run homer into the left field stands. Clark's 360-foot smash followed two walks and sent Ted Gray, another southpaw, down to his second straight defeat.

CHICAGO—(P)—Ferris Fain, American League batting champion the last two seasons, slammed one of his rare homers for three runs and a New York fielding farce produced a winning fourth run in a hectic ninth inning for an 8-7 Chicago White Sox victory over the first-place New York Yankees Saturday.

The triumph which moved the Sox into second place only a game behind the Yankees was a pitching carnival which included five Chicago and four Yankee hurlers. Earl Harriet was the winner and Ray Scarborough the loser.

After Fain's dramatic ninth-inning three-run shot into the right field stands tied the score at 7-7, Scarborough came in and walked two batters. Sox Center Fielder Jim Rivera then slashed a grounder to Gil McDougald at third. It appeared to be a potential inning-ending double-play ball.

But after McDougald whipped the ball to Billy Martin at second for a force-out of Sam Mele, Martin's throw to first went wide. Yantlin's throw to first went wide. Yantlin's throw to first went wide. Yantlin's throw to first went wide.

Pirates Rap Redlegs, 12-4

PITTSBURGH—(P)—Carlos Bernier, fleet-footed rookie, crashed three triples and Ralph Kiner and Danny O'Connell belted two-run homers to power the Pittsburgh Pirates to an easy, 12-4 victory over Cincinnati Saturday. The Bucs pushed their winning streak to four straight, longest in almost two years.

Bernier's three consecutive triples in the fourth, sixth and seventh tied a major league record of 1939 and sent the Redlegs reeling to their seventh straight loss in 11 games.

The Puerto Rican, voted the Pacific Coast League's most outstanding player in 1952, also singled in the first, stole second and scampered home on Cal Abrams' single.

Soto Turns In Five-Hitter For 8 To 1 Victory

Tribe Closes With Steers Here Sunday

By ARE WEINER
Reporter-Telegram Sports Staff
Just when help arrives, you don't need it. At least that's the way it turned out Saturday night when the Midland Indians added two pitchers to their meager staff only to see Romario Soto come through with a masterful five-hitter as the Jay Haymen defeated the Big Spring Bronchos, 8-1.

Haynes was in good spirits as the Indians left the clubhouse to take the field against Big Spring, boasting that he could put Bud Sisk and Eddie Jacome in the bullpen for duty as necessary.

As it turned out, it wasn't necessary. Soto was in rare form as he kept the Bronchos batsmen off stride with pitches on the outer corners just within reach. This kept the Bronchos peeping up and grounding out the entire game.

Meanwhile, the Indians bunched their hits in two three-run innings and scraped together single runs in the third and seventh on a total of three hits.

New Arrivals In Reserve
Thus, new arrivals Earl Winn, bought outright from Austin of the Big State League, and Dan Dailey on option from Yakima, Wash., won't be seen in Midland until Sunday, May 10, when the Indians return from six days on the road—that is, they won't be seen unless disaster strikes Sunday when Ralph Blair puts his perfect 2-0 mark on the line against the Bronchos in the series wrap-up game time for the last Midland home tilt of the current stand at 3 p.m.

Winn and Dailey are left-handers and limited service men, but the third newcomer in camp, Catcher Jim Harford, is a rookie. He, too, is an option from Yakima.

Losses Shutout
Soto lost his shutout in the seventh inning on an error committed himself. With the bases loaded via singles by Jerry Fetrow and Al Valdes and Roger Dalia Betta's error on Glenn Groome's double play ball, Soto fumbled Al Costa's grounder, slipped, and fumbled again while Fetrow raced home.

He retired the side by forcing Armando Diaz to hit to Jim Prince, who caught Valdes at the plate, and getting Jess Jacinto to hit into a double play.

Groome, the starting and losing pitcher, got into trouble in the second when he gave up singles to Tex Stephenson and Julio de la Torre, saw Diaz drop Dalias's fly ball in between and then yielded a bases-clearing double by Hayden Whit.

Scooter Hughes and Art Bowland singled in succession in the third and Hughes' scored as Prince grounded out, as the Indians made it 4-0.

The Tribe picked up three more in the seventh with two down on singles by Bowland and Prince and Stephenson's home run just to the right of the scoreboard.

They added the final tally in the eighth when De la Torre was hit by a pitched ball, moved to third on White's hit-and-run single through shortstop and scored as Soto hit into a double play.

Hogan Goes Wild In Pan American

MEXICO CITY—(AP)—Ben Hogan hurtled to first place in Saturday's third round of the $15,000 Pan American Open Golf Tournament with a blistering four-under-par 68—his best day yet.

His improvement—he had trouble with the fast greens—made him a strong favorite to clinch first prize money as he enters Sunday's finale with a sub-par 212, four points better than his closest rival.

The United Nations Command insisted again that the Reds still hold more than 375 sick and wounded Allied prisoners who are able to be moved and hotly demanded that they also be returned.

The demand, made by Rear Adm. John C. Daniel at the end of Saturday's truce conference, was rejected by the Reds, who retorted that the information obtained from returned Allied prisoners was "groundless."

The Indians—Second to None!
 The Midland Indians proved to us last season that they were SECOND TO NONE. We feel like they are going all the way for the people of Midland again this year by giving us "repeat performance." Let's back them to the limit!

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

And speaking of "second to none" . . . that is naturally the way a man thinks of his family . . . they're tops! Why not back your family all the way by selecting a builder who will consider the importance of you and your family, having the quality, consideration and assistance in helping you achieve the goal of a home that is second to none . . . for a family that is second to none. The short time you spend in talking to us before you make a deal will be well invested!

☆ In Grafaland ☆

The atmosphere and breath-takingly simple beauty of the past are combined with modern refinements and tomorrow's conveniences in this harmonious home, just completed by Mr. R. J. Stong.

Unadorned statistics would make this merely a 4-bedroom home with 3 1/2 baths, enormous den or family room, large living room with fireplace, separate dining room, breakfast room, utility room, double garage with tool and equipment storage room attached.

But among the things that will delight you are ... touch-plate lighting system throughout, very tasteful combination of paneling, plaster and exclusive wallpaper room interiors, select hardware, artistic lighting fixtures, and even such small but important touches as magnetic-controlled cabinet doors. From the balcony that extends across the full length of the front of the house, an unobstructed view of Grafaland and the Midland skyline is offered. Truly, this home was built for a discerning family who will enjoy living in surroundings of graciousness and beauty.

We would be delighted to have you as our guests today.

Outlet For Spraberry Gas Is Getting Closer To Reality

An outlet for a possible 200,000,000 cubic feet per day of Spraberry Trend Area gas came closer to reality Friday as the Federal Power Commission authorized three natural gas pipeline companies to construct a system to carry the gas.

The gas is scheduled to move from the Midland Basin area to the Northern Natural Gas Company for distribution in the Omaha, Neb., area.

The construction authority to Northern, Permian Basin Pipeline Company of Chicago and El Paso Natural Gas Company was conditioned by the FPC upon requirements that the companies submit further data.

Permian was authorized to build a system from the Spraberry fields to deliver the gas to El Paso Natural at Wason, and El Paso would deliver an equal amount to Northern at Dumas for Permian's account.

Estimated costs of construction are: Permian $42,530,000, El Paso $2,900,000 and Northern $33,273,000 in the first year and $22,643,000 in the second year.

The 300,000,000 cubic feet per day capacity should be realized by the second year of operations.

Informed sources reveal that Permian's facilities for the system to deliver the gas should be in operation six months after actual construction is started.

Schlumberger Will Open New Houston Plant On Monday

HOUSTON—The Schlumberger Well Surveying Corporation, whose 25 highly technical services are utilized by more than 4,000 separate oil clients each year will formally open its new $6,000,000 Houston plant Monday.

In the words of P. Schlumberger, corporation president, the seven modern structures are "a symbol not only of the firm's expansion, but also of the oil industry's ever-increasing growth and development."

"In 1952 the corporation performed more than 100,000 service operations," Schlumberger said. "We will continue to grow and to serve as an integral part of the oil industry."

The new plant has a combined floor area of 241,564 square feet. It is located on a 36.4 acre tract at 5000 Gulf Freeway east of the Houston Belt and Terminal Railroad.

Many facilities included in its facilities are an administration building, engineering building, warehouse, truck shop, winch house, electrical production and machine shop, and an engineering testing and power building.

Each unit of the project is large enough to accommodate present operations. Most of the buildings are planned and arranged so that they can be expanded without interfering with plant operations. The buildings will accommodate approximately 1,000 employees. Construction began more than two years ago.

Commenting on the enlarged facilities, W. J. Gillingham, executive vice president, said: "In the oil business, a company goes forward or backward; but it can't stand still. Schlumberger has moved forward because the Corporation consistently has created new and better ways to serve the industry."

Four Counties In West Texas Are Given Wildcat Projects

Locations for four wildcats in West Texas were reported Saturday. They are to be in Glasscock, Pecos, Garza and Tom Green Counties.

Drilling on each of those prospects is to be started in the near future.

The deepest of the quartet is to be in Central-North Glasscock County, 11 miles north and slightly west of Garden City.

It is slated to dig to at least 11,000 feet to test the Ellenburger. The prospector will be drilled as C. L. Norworthy, Jr., of Dallas No. 1 L. E. Dowell.

Location Given
Location is 600 feet from south and 1,980 feet from west lines of section 29, block 34, T-2-S, T&P survey. Drilling is to be started in the near future.

C. L. Hay of Midland, trustee for William Stoll will drill No. 1 Alexander as a 4,500-foot wildcat in North Pecos County.

It is scheduled to be an Ellenburger exploration. Location is five miles south of Imperial and 600 feet from north and west lines of section 86, block 10, H&G survey. Operators are to start immediately.

Persons who plan to attend and who have not registered and who have not made hotel or motel reservations should do so at once.

W-C Lea Wildcat Is To Test Big Gas Show In Deep Sand

Humble Oil & Refining Company No. 1-AC State, West-Central Lea County deep wildcat, nine miles southwest of Lovington and the same distance south of the Townsend field is bottomed at 12,018 feet in an unidentified Pennsylvanian sand and is conditioning the hole.

As soon as that work is completed operator will try to take a drillstem test.

The prospector has encountered a strong gas blow at the present bottom. So far as had been determined the development has not logged any appreciable show of oil in the section which is making the gas.

Location is 1,980 feet from north and 600 feet from east lines of section 22-17s-35e. It is just outside the proven area, on the northeast side of the shallow Vacuum field.

Scurry Reef Fields Are Highlight Of BM Report

AMARILLO—A comprehensive investigation of reservoir conditions in the Scurry Reef oil fields of Texas, as listed as a highlight in a report of last year's petroleum and natural gas research by the Bureau of Mines.

The report was released Saturday by J. J. Forbes, director of the Bureau of Mines, an agency within the Department of the Interior.

Dr. C. W. Seibel, regional director of the Bureau's Region VI with headquarters in Amarillo, said that the Scurry Reef project has materially increased the amount of petroleum that can be recovered from one of the largest reservoirs in the United States.

Outlining the varied oil-and-gas research carried on by the Bureau in the 1952 fiscal year, the report was prepared by R. A. Cattell, chief, and other members of the Bureau's Petroleum and Natural Gas Branch. It is available in mimeograph form as Information Circular 7659.

The Scurry Reef investigations indicated that injecting gas or water underground to maintain pressure will increase ultimate recovery from this large reservoir. Exhaustive tests on carefully selected wells through-out the fields and an engineering study of the reservoir provided basic information which helped the operators in deciding to work the fields as a unit to obtain maximum conservation and recovery.

In making this investigation, requested by the Petroleum Adminis-

Lyons To Be Main Speaker For Tulsa Oil Show Opening

TULSA, OKLA.—Chariton H. Lyons, Shreveport, La., president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, will deliver the principal address at ceremonies which will open the thirtieth Anniversary International Petroleum Exposition here May 14.

W. G. Skelly, president of the exposition, announced Lyons' acceptance to officially welcome oil men from throughout the United States and some 40 foreign countries to the 10-day "World's Fair of the Petroleum Industry."

Introductory remarks will be made by Skelly and Gov. Johnston Murray.

Chariton H. Lyons

Lyons' organization, representing thousands of independent producers and companies throughout the United States, will be honored by the oil show on May 20 which has been designated "IPAA Day."

Lyons' talk will follow colorful ceremonies which will include the raising of a giant, 40 by 60-foot United States flag which will be unfurled between two 140-foot rotary drilling masts on the exposition grounds.

Five marching bands will escort a parade of flags representing all oil producing nations of the world. These flags will fly on standards above the oil show headquarters of the NOMADS, international organization of oil equipment and service firms.

Presiding at the opening day observances will be Carl Flynn, advertising manager of Newspaper Printing Corp., Tulsa.

Schlumberger Plans New Directory For WT-NW Engineers

Schlumberger Well Surveying Corporation has announced plans to publish a directory to include all engineers associated with the exploration, development, production and reservoir work in the oil industry of the Permian Basin.

This directory, which will include engineers in West Texas and Southeast New Mexico, will be compiled and printed at the expense of Schlumberger. Copies will be made available at no cost to all personnel listed in the directory and to other interested parties.

A form has been mailed to oil industry offices in cities of West Texas and Southeast New Mexico with a request to forward particulars concerning engineers of the area.

The forms, with the information asked for included, should be mailed to Schlumberger by May 15 so as to allow an early printing of the directory, according to G. J. Decker, of Schlumberger.

A busy program has been arranged for the marketers, according to R. M. Bartlett, API vice president for the Division of Marketing, and John Frey, division director.

At a general session on Monday they will hear addresses by a conservation expert, a jobber and the president of an oil company. At the regular business session on Tuesday they will hear another address on jet fuels, and will take up a series of proposals and other matters of considerable significance to oil marketers.

Speakers for Monday Speakers for the general session on Monday are Lieut. Gen. Ernest O. Thompson, chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission—the state regulatory body for the oil and gas industry; Roy J. Thompson, of Chicago, chairman of the National Oil Jobbers Council and vice president of Apex Motor Fuel Co., and L. F. McCollum, president of Continental Oil Company, Houston.

Gen. Thompson's subject will be "Conservation Means Good Stewardship of Oil and Gas Resources." Roy Thompson will discuss "Industry Relations" and McCollum will speak on "Public Relations Begins At Home."

Frank M. Porter, API president, will attend the general session and will make some brief comments on the industry.

A late addition to the program is the address of S. S. Smith, manager of the products pipe line department of Shell Oil Company, New York. He will speak at the business session Tuesday on the subject, "The Dangers and Safe Handling of Jet Fuel Loading and Unloading."

New Group To Meet Another added starter is the meeting of the newly-approved service station advisory committee. This will be held Sunday afternoon, according to Charles Z. Harwick, vice president of The Ohio Oil Company, Findlay, Ohio, and chairman of the committee.

On the agenda for the Tuesday business session are recommendations or reports covering new lubrication proposals, an accounting manual for jobbers, ways and means for jobbers to perpetuate their franchises in the event of death or incapacity, and selection of service station sites and construction suggestions.

The new lubrication proposals make these recommendations for Oil drain intervals: on dusty or cold weather driving, every 500 miles; on state and national officials, West Texas civic leaders, and newspaper, radio, and magazine representatives.

Included in these are representatives of Gulf Refining Company, Sun Pipe Line Company, Cities Service Oil Company, Standard Oil Company (Ohio), and The Pure Oil Company, the five companies who jointly own West Texas Gulf Pipe Line.

The new pipe line is 36 inches in diameter and 578 miles long, including a 112-mile, 20-inch spur extending from Wortham, Texas, to Longview. Its capacity is 440,000 barrels of crude daily.

SE Mitchell Field Gets Fourth Oiler

Sun Oil Company has completed its No. 1-A Beatrice Anderson as the fourth producer and a south offset to the Jameson, North (Strawn) field of Southeast Mitchell County.

The well flowed 24 hours through an 11 5/8-inch casing to make an initial production of 216 barrels of 43.6-gravity oil and no water. Gas-oil ratio was 1,260-1. Tubing pressure was 890 pounds and pressure on the casing was 700 pounds.

Production is coming from perforations in the Strawn between 6,008 and 6,000 feet. This section had been treated with 2,000 gallons of fracture fluid.

Location of the No. 1-A Anderson is at the center of the northwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section 230, block 1-A, H&TC survey and 20 miles southeast of Colorado City.

How To Do Business Without A Boom

(Editor's Note—The following is an editorial from the April 27, 1953 issue of The Oil and Gas Journal. It very aptly describes present conditions in the oil industry. For that reason we are reproducing it with the permission of the editors of The Oil and Gas Journal.)

Costs keep rising but profits are easing off—that seems to be the common complaint throughout the oil industry these days. It is reflected in the annual reports of many oil companies, in speeches at industry meetings, and in private conversations.

This condition is normal and to be expected following a period of rapid expansion such as the oil business and most of the nation's economy have gone through during the last two or three years. That knowledge, of course, doesn't make the condition any pleasanter or easier to cope with, but it should allay fears that the industry is going to pot in a handbasket.

The American businessman, accustomed to an environment of general expansion, always finds it difficult to learn how to do business on a falling market. In our case it is not that bad—only a decline in the rate of market expansion—but much the same problems arise.

For quite some time in the future, if forecasts are borne out, oil operators will have to do business under a condition of ample supplies for a slowly expanding market. There is nothing so bad about this except the contrast with the former hectic rush to fill an apparently insatiable demand. This condition calls for such courses as:

A close rein on operating schedules, holding them to realistic levels in the light of industry conditions and the operator's own situation. This restraint should not be tinged with pessimism, and it should be flexible enough to meet, if not anticipate, changes in conditions.

A rounding out of expansion programs—not a halt, but a re-appraisal to insure maximum efficiency and close tailoring to the needs of the immediate future.

Close attention to all possible means of reducing operating costs. Although the oil industry is noted for efficiency, careless practices have a way of slipping in during periods of rapid expansion and there is probably not an operator who has been able to prevent this entirely. A general internal streamlining and tightening up can do a lot for the profit-and-loss statement during a period of static demand.

Stimulation of technological improvements through more research and better application of present knowledge, all to the end of increasing efficiency and reducing costs. This is a field in which the petroleum industry has been outstanding, but even greater endeavors are in order now.

Almost anybody can make money during a boom. But a period of relative stability and keen competition calls for real business skill. Operators who can pare their costs and increase efficiency should have no serious difficulty.

RETIRE AFTER 33 YEARS—E. L. Kimrey, seated, manager of Shell Oil Company's Southern Production division in Odessa, retired on May 1 after spending the last 26 years of his service with Shell in West Texas and New Mexico. Here Kimrey discusses plans with his successor, J. E. R. Sheeler, formerly Shell's division exploitation engineer in Odessa.

Kimrey Retirement From Shell Is Announced After 33 Years

Announcement of the retirement of E. L. Kimrey, manager of Shell Oil Company's southern production division with headquarters in Odessa, was made by Joe T. Dickerson, vice president of Kimrey, a veteran of almost 33 years with Shell, will be succeeded by J. E. R. Sheeler, former Division Exploitation Engineer in Odessa.

Kimrey's career has paralleled the progress of the oil industry throughout Oklahoma, Louisiana and East Texas, and for the last 26 years he has been associated with the West Texas-New Mexico production operations of the company. He often comments that he "spanked mules" all over Oklahoma and Kansas before trucks were available with enough power to get "off the roads and out into the mud."

His Shell career began in August 1920 as a roustabout in Jennings, Okla., after serving three years in the Navy. He later held field supervisory positions in Louisiana and Arkansas before being transferred to Olney in 1925.

Two years later he became acquainted with West Texas as district foreman in McCamey where he saw the famous Yates and McCamey fields develop. Kimrey still is fascinated by the cable tool operations so extensively used during that period. Except for a brief assignment at Kilgore in 1931 he never again worked outside the West Texas-New Mexico area.

Worked in Hobbs
Kimrey later served as district superintendent in Hobbs during the 1930's and in 1946 was made general production superintendent for Shell's Midland Area. Later he was division production manager in Odessa.

Magnolia To Cement Casing In Discovery Offset In NW Lynn

Magnolia Petroleum Company was making preparations to set casing in No. 1 Timmons, south offset to Hassie Hunt Trust Estate and Dan Auld No. 1 Timmons, recently completed Pennsylvania lime discovery in Northwest Lynn County.

The project, which flowed oil from the upper section of the Pennsylvania reef, is bottomed at 9,914 feet.

Last drillem test was taken in the section from 9,877 to 9,914 feet. Tool was open 46 minutes. Recovery was 30 feet of drilling mud with no shows of oil, gas or water. All pressures were zero.

At last report, electric log surveys were being run.

Had Oil Show
The offset flowed oil on a drillem test from 9,827 to 9,887 feet. Tool was open two hours and five minutes. Gas surfaced in five minutes, no gauge or estimate made on volume. Mud in 20 minutes and oil in 35 minutes. It was flowed to pits five minutes to clean and then turned to tanks where it made 19.3 barrels of 46-gravity oil in one and one-half hours.

Gas-oil ratio was 2,211-1. Free oil was recovered on a drillem test from 9,802 to 9,827 feet. Tool was open two hours and 10 minutes. Gas surfaced in one hour and 20 minutes.

No Water
Recovery was 300 feet of 42-gravity free oil and 85 feet of oil-cut drilling mud.

There were no signs of formation water. The Pennsylvania reef lime was topped at 9,788 feet on a minus datum point of 6,530 feet.

Location is 660 feet from south and east lines of section 142, block 12, EL&R survey and two miles southwest of the town of Lakeview and 14 miles northwest of Tahoka.

Railroad Commission Partially Defeated In Latest Move To Prevent Wasting Gas

By BO BYERS
AUSTIN —(P)— The Railroad Commission met partial defeat in court last week in its latest move to prevent wasteful gas flaring, but an industry step-in conservation efforts remains likely.

Irked by failure of oil and gas men to put an end to the daily waste of 220 million cubic feet of casinghead gas in the sprawling Spraberry field in West Texas, the commission cracked the whip March 25.

It ordered an April 1 shutdown of the entire field until steps were taken to halt waste of gas produced incidentally to the flow of oil. The order applied to all operators, regardless of whether they were flaring gas or putting it to beneficial use.

Millions In Air
This was the most far-reaching policy ever announced by the commission in its battle to keep millions of dollars worth of gas from being dissipated into the air.

Judge Charles Betts said the commission went too far. He said he had to agree with past decisions of the state Supreme Court that the commission can shut down flaring operators, but he found no justification for such action against operators who put their gas to beneficial use.

Notice of appeal to the Supreme Court has been given. The prospect that the high court might reverse the trial court and uphold the commission's power to order fieldwide shutdowns may spur industry efforts to install the transmission lines needed to care for the vast gas supply.

Prevent Waste
Though the District Court refused to recognize the extensive authority claimed by the commission, the decision did allow the regulatory agency to close in all flaring wells.

Chairman Ernest Thompson said on the witness stand the reason the commission issued a fieldwide order was twofold: To prevent waste and to protect the right of all operators to recover their preparatory share of the oil.

There was conflicting testimony as to whether complete shut-in would achieve the latter objective of protecting property rights.

Disagreement centered on whether or not some operators might recover more than their share of the oil through the natural underground migration or drainage of oil.

Regardless of the final outcome, the commission has indicated it will put on increasing pressure to close the valve on flaring in all fields.

Conservation Strides
Giant strides in gas conservation have been taken since 1948 when the Supreme Court upheld the commission's right to prohibit wasteful flaring or venting of gas used to bring oil out of the ground.

A cross-examining attorney said last week about one billion cubic feet of gas per day still is being flared in Texas. He wanted to know why the commission was acting to stop flaring only in the Spraberry.

Warnings Ignored
Thompson, a commissioner since 1932, said action was taken in the Spraberry because such tremendous quantities of gas were being wasted there despite repeated warnings to the operators to do something about it.

"I apologize to this court and the people of Texas for allowing 220 million cubic feet of gas to be burned up each day (in the Spraberry)," Thompson told the judge. "I burned that much in front of this courthouse, they would put me in the bughouse."

"We can save the gas until the pipe line gets there," he explained, was attempted because "it's wonderful what cooperation we have when the whole field is shut down."

He pictured the commission order as "a new assault on waste x x x a frontal attack." Past orders shutting in only flaring operators were mere "banking movements."

"I think we go through an evolutionary process of learning how to prevent waste," Thompson said. "Providence put the oil there x x x We can save the gas until the pipe line gets there."

Field-wide curtailment of production was the result.

WASHINGTON OIL—Gas Producers See Better Days Ahead As Kuykendall Becomes New Commissioner

By JOSEPH HUTTLINGER
Reporter-Telegram Washington Oil Correspondent
WASHINGTON—The American natural gas producing industry—numbering thousands of producers—looks for better days with the coming of Jerome K. Kuykendall of Washington State as a member of the Federal Power Commission.

Kuykendall who is 45, is regarded as a "fair" man by the industry, as he steps into the most controversial job in Washington May 15 as a member of the commission.

President Eisenhower may name him as chairman.

He will be one of five men passing on new pipe lines, new gas service gas rates and, perhaps, whether the commission shall take control over the wellhead price of natural gas.

On many issues, the commission is split two and two, with Commissioners Harrington Wimberly and Nelson Lee Smith on the one side, and Commissioners Claude Draper and Dale Doty on the other.

At stake in the decisions are millions of dollars a year for the natural gas industry—perhaps the fastest growing major industry in the country—as well as for consumers and gas producers in the vast Mid-Continent area of Texas and Oklahoma.

The natural gas industry spends $500,000,000 a year for expansion of its interstate facilities, subject to the FPC, and at least this much more for facilities within a state.

Lawyer, Navy Veteran
A lawyer and Navy veteran, Kuykendall comes to Washington with a family tradition of public service "in the public interest." His father was chairman of the Washington State Public Service Commission, a post the new commissioner leaves to come to Washington, D. C.

He will succeed a Truman hold-over, Thomas C. Buchanan, regarded as a New Dealer and a consumers' man.

While many decisions are ahead, two, perhaps, are paramount. One is whether the commission shall control the wellhead price of natural gas. For years this has been the subject of top-level clashes; it is the issue of the so-called Kerr bill.

The commission never has taken control at the wellhead, although it once voted to do so. While many believe there can be little control of gas prices to consumers without control in the field, the commission voted four to one against taking control more than a year ago. The decision, affecting the Phillips Petroleum Company, now is before the U. S. Court of Appeals, Washington, D. C.

Ultimately, it is headed for the U. S. Supreme Court.

During Senate Commerce Committee hearings, Kuykendall explained that, "the more conservation, the more discovery of gas, and the more gas, the cheaper is the price to the consumer." He thought price had a lot to do with conservation. Thus, natural gas men on hand approved the answer.

Hands-Off Policy
The new commissioner indicated he was against "straining and stretching" the law to exercise powers in areas of doubtful jurisdiction. This too seemed to indicate a policy of hands-off wellhead prices of gas.

A second paramount issue is about rates of return for long distance gas pipeline companies. For years, the commission allowed at least six per cent, but last year went below this in two cases: Mississippi River Fuel Corporation and Northern Natural Gas Company. The uproar in financial circles continues today.

On rates, Kuykendall hinted at a generous policy in stating he was for regulation based on original cost with some "flexibility" to allow for inflated costs. Further, he is open to "a new formula," he said.

Magnolia To Cement Casing In Discovery Offset In NW Lynn

Magnolia Petroleum Company was making preparations to set casing in No. 1 Timmons, south offset to Hassie Hunt Trust Estate and Dan Auld No. 1 Timmons, recently completed Pennsylvania lime discovery in Northwest Lynn County.

The project, which flowed oil from the upper section of the Pennsylvania reef, is bottomed at 9,914 feet.

Last drillem test was taken in the section from 9,877 to 9,914 feet. Tool was open 46 minutes. Recovery was 30 feet of drilling mud with no shows of oil, gas or water. All pressures were zero.

At last report, electric log surveys were being run.

Had Oil Show
The offset flowed oil on a drillem test from 9,827 to 9,887 feet. Tool was open two hours and five minutes. Gas surfaced in five minutes, no gauge or estimate made on volume. Mud in 20 minutes and oil in 35 minutes. It was flowed to pits five minutes to clean and then turned to tanks where it made 19.3 barrels of 46-gravity oil in one and one-half hours.

Gas-oil ratio was 2,211-1. Free oil was recovered on a drillem test from 9,802 to 9,827 feet. Tool was open two hours and 10 minutes. Gas surfaced in one hour and 20 minutes.

No Water
Recovery was 300 feet of 42-gravity free oil and 85 feet of oil-cut drilling mud.

There were no signs of formation water. The Pennsylvania reef lime was topped at 9,788 feet on a minus datum point of 6,530 feet.

Location is 660 feet from south and east lines of section 142, block 12, EL&R survey and two miles southwest of the town of Lakeview and 14 miles northwest of Tahoka.

Kuykendall, a family man of 45, was a compromise candidate after a deadlock battle between supporters of Willard A. Gatchall of the commission staff and Jeff Robertson of the Kansas Corporation Commission.

Gatchall, supported by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York and Attorney General Herbert Brownell, is regarded as a consumers' man.

Robertson, supported by Senators Andrew Schoepel of Kansas and others from the Southwest, also had backing of the gas industry.

Peace Is No Peril!

Peace is no peril. So spoke Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey in trying to allay fears that depression is the inescapable alternative to war—or cold war.

The reassurance was timely. Both at home and abroad, there has been too much fear-mongering over the prospect that a serious slackening of tension would plunge America and the free world into a pit.

Another fresh expression of confidence in the U. S. economy came the other day from the nation's big motor-makers in Detroit. Wade Jones, in a dispatch for NEA Service aimed at measuring the possible impact of peace on the automobile capital, reports the top firms are expecting civilian production needs to offset any likely curtailment in defense output.

Worries over readjustment are natural, but to compound these into monumental fears is to reveal either a neurotic outlook toward the world or a weird sense of values.

The logic of this attitude is this: We do not dare slack off our war and defense efforts, for they are maintaining the free world's economy at its present high level, and without them we cannot get along.

This amounts to saying that we have an established, permanent interest in keeping on with war or cold war. It amounts to saying that we are afraid of peace.

No American wants to believe that, or should. If it were true, then Russian propaganda would be justified. For the Russians have been saying for 35 years that free capitalist economies cannot sustain themselves without the external stimuli of war or imperialistic exploitation.

Certainly we did suffer a great depression, and certainly most of the economic growth we have had since then has been tangled up with war, its aftermath, and cold war.

But the whole foundation of this nation's economy, the entire pattern of world trade and industry, has been altered in the 20-year interval since depression struck. Many of the changes are not for the better, but a large number are.

In America, for instance, the population base is vastly greater than in 1933. Industry and the service trades, all aside from defense activity, are on a far broader footing. Thus the national market is greater and the country's ability to sustain a high level likewise enhanced.

That does not mean we are depression-proof. The system we have is so complex, so dependent upon the variables of world conditions, that anyone would be foolish to declare it is invulnerable.

But there is one other important difference between now and the big depression. Today we know in advance that the President will at the first signal of real trouble marshal all the power of government to prevent an economic crisis. Many props and safeguards already exist for certain parts of the economy; the whole would be shored up vigorously if it started to sag.

Humphrey has given a fitting answer to those who talk of peace as if it were something to be chased from under the bed. After all, it is supposed to be the normal state. Things have come to a fine pass if we have to fear normality.

Times Do Change

Remember the days when federal-aid-to-education bills were live congressional fare?

A big argument always raised was that such aid would give the federal government a tight string on the schools, letting it into a field that up to now has been the exclusive bailiwick of state and local authorities. This, said the objecting lawmakers, would be very bad.

Well, some time has passed since this legislation last had active consideration. The spotlight has swung off to a different direction. And what do we find?

Two congressional committees busily probing into the question of communism in American schools at all levels. Now there may be good and sufficient reasons why such inquiries should be conducted. That is not the topic here. But what seems odd is that no lawmaker's voice has been raised in that old argument about federal interference in the schools. That's what we're getting, yet, to judge from the silence, the dark menace has vanished from this situation and no longer troubles anybody on Capitol Hill.

Ah, times change!

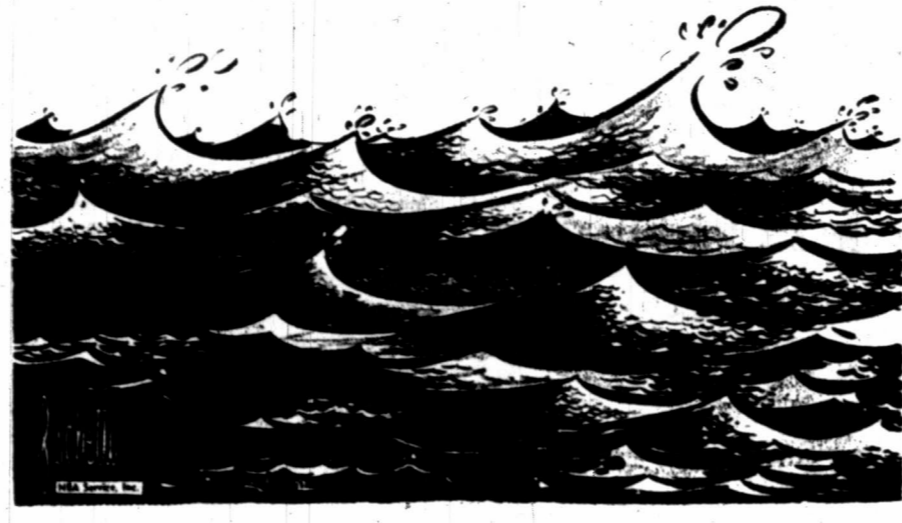

There's One Consolation

It would not be surprising, if one could manage a tour of the State Department building in Washington, to find that in addition to the Far Eastern desk and European desk there now had been established a McCarthy desk.

Reports from the capital indicate that negotiating with the Wisconsin senator is taking just about as much time as dealing with Russia or our various allies.

Well, at least, treaties with the senator don't have to be ratified by the full Senate.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

(Copyright, 1953, By The Bell Syndicate, Inc.) Drew Pearson says: Bradley warns of low officer morale; Unfair attacks on services make military career unattractive; Motion pictures serve valuable purpose abroad.

WASHINGTON—It's a distressing matter to publish, but the joint chiefs of staff are so alarmed over sagging officer morale that Gen. Omar Bradley has written a solemn, secret report on "this worsening situation" to Secretary of Defense Wilson.

"We have been unable to attract and hold the high-type career officer which is needed to maintain the high standards of our Army, Navy and Marine Corps and Air Force," wrote the nation's No. 1 soldier.

He blamed Congress for "changing the rule in the middle of the game" and some congressmen for "habitually slurring" the officer corps.

The primary reason for this growing lack of confidence in the military services as a career stems from the feeling that the government has broken its contract with military personnel and has changed the rules in the middle of the game," Bradley stated.

"Military personnel feel that the government should keep its part of the contract and abide by the rules with the same degree of conscientiousness as it demands from them."

"To support this contention," Bradley's report continued, "military personnel point to the Van Zandt Amendment which denies retirement benefits except when personnel are forced out of the service with the stigma of non-selection; the Davis Amendment, the immediate result of which is to deny earned promotions to thousands of junior officers and to require the reduction of many others to the next lowest grade; and the 'increasingly frequent periods of family separation due to lack of dependent housing in overseas areas.'"

"Aside from the material causes which have reduced the attractiveness of the military services as a career," he added, "the habitual unfair attacks

General Bradley also complained against the "progressive lowering of the standards of living of officer personnel" and the "increasingly frequent periods of family separation due to lack of dependent housing in overseas areas."

"The strength of our motion pictures," Johnston told the senators, "is that they show the bad along with the good. People quickly catch on to propaganda. The Russian pictures are technically excellent productions, but they have never caught on. They show only the good side of Russia. That's why in European cities people stand in line to see American pictures, while Russian film theaters are empty."

Johnston pointed out that some films aren't shown in certain countries, such as "Going My Way," featuring a Catholic priest, which would not be popular in Protestant Scandinavia. Likewise, "Stars in My Crown," featuring a Protestant clergy, would not run well in Southern Italy.

Producers also have to be careful about showing kissing in India, where public love-making is frowned upon.

Money-Go-Round Two Republican congressmen almost got into a flatfight the other day when one accused the other of selling out to private power interests.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

Some of the best bridge players in this country seldom enter a bridge club or a bridge tournament. They do most of their playing at home, or perhaps in a country club. G. G. Money, of Barbados in the British West Indies, is a player of this sort.

West opened the five of diamonds, and my banker friend played low from the dummy and carefully won with the king in his own hand. His next step was to lead the king of hearts and overtake with dummy's ace. Then he continued with the jack of hearts from dummy, forcing out East's queen.

East returned the ten of spades, but Mr. Money's prudence was not a bit strained by this shift. He put up the ace of spades, winning the trick, and returned a low diamond towards dummy's jack.

West could take the queen of diamonds, but he could not prevent declarer from getting to dummy with the jack of diamonds to cash the rest of the heart. South was thus sure of winning four heart tricks, three diamonds, and the two black aces.

Evidently, a difficult contract gives my friend no trouble. He can score it up at the beginning of the hand, just as though it were money in the bank.

Pressure's On To Raise Rates Of Home-Mortgage Interest

By PETER EDSON NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—There is every indication that people buying their own homes and GI's making Veterans' Administration loans to buy houses or set themselves up in business will have to pay slightly higher interest rates in the near future.

Home builders and mortgage bankers now are exerting terrific pressure on Washington to get these interest rates raised. This action comes hard on the heels of the U. S. Treasury's successful offering of a billion-dollar, long-term bond issue at 3 1/4 per cent—roughly one-half of one per cent higher than the average government-loan interest rate in recent years.

Alburt M. Cole, the new Housing and Home Finance administrator, is authorizing no official statement on this interest rate question beyond the fact that it is under study. This is to quiet speculation, and if possible to steady the mortgage banking market until a final decision is reached which will be in harmony with VA, Treasury and other governmental fiscal policy.

As a matter of fact, the future interest rate for government-guaranteed home mortgages is not so much a question for Cole alone to decide. It is more in the field of the Federal Housing Administration under the new commissioner, Guy O. Hollyday.

Hollyday is a former president of the Title Guarantee Company of Baltimore, with long experience in home-mortgage banking.

The mere study of this interest rate question involves some of the trickiest and most delicately balanced business relationships.

Over the last 10 years, the trend of this rate has been gradually upward. Government-insured war housing was financed largely at four per cent, which then was a premium rate. When Congress passed the GI bill, it authorized direct loans to veterans at four per cent. GI mortgage loan rates also were fixed at four per cent, although authorization was given to raise the rate to 4 1/2 per cent if the secretary of the Treasury approved.

At the end of the war when FHA returned to normal home-mortgage insurance, the interest rate was set at 4 1/2 per cent, which at that time was a premium rate. In 1950 this was dropped to 4 1/4 per cent.

The argument of the home-builder's industry is that this rate is not high enough to attract capital, in today's relatively tighter money market. The Federal Housing Act authorizes an interest rate as high as five per cent. There is no thought that the rate will be raised that high to attract money into the home-mortgage financing field. That isn't necessary now.

Actually, however, two practices have been developing in the home-mortgage financing which have the same effect as raising interest rates above the 4 1/4 per cent level.

First of these is the discounting of mortgages. When a builder goes in to borrow, say $10,000, it may be discounted at four per cent. The builder then gets $9,600. He has to pay back the other $400. This is the equivalent of having to pay back the $10,000 at a higher interest rate. The banker gets the extra $400 in lieu of more interest, and he gets it in advance.

Borrower Makes Deposit A second step in this business is what is known as warehousing of mortgage loans. In this practice, the mortgage banker, acting as a broker, will agree to loan a builder $10,000, for example, on condition the borrower makes a deposit of four per cent or $400.

The lender agrees to warehouse this loan for six months. If in that time he can sell the mortgage for more than $9,600, the amount over this sum will be returned to the borrower. If the lender can't sell the mortgage for more than this amount, he will throw the deal back on the borrower, who then will be stuck. A lot of builders caught in this squeeze may be in shaky condition.

Mortgage discount rates aren't quoted on any exchange, so there is no way of knowing how prevalent these practices are. In effect, however, the only way the builder can beat this game is to sell his $10,000 home for $10,400 or more, or to reduce the quality of his construction. The home buyer pays for it in the end.

One of the arguments in favor of raising the interest rate on home mortgages is that it would end all these shady practices and put home financing on a more legitimate basis. It is said to be impossible to write regulations which will protect the home buyer by preventing under-the-counter deals.

The effect of raising home-mortgage interest rates as a monthly payment cost of principal and interest on each $1,000 borrowed is shown by this table:

BOOKS FOR THE BARON

by Anthony Morton BARON

HE turned to the last of the downstairs rooms and again found one of Fenner's keys which he wanted. He stepped into a study rather smaller than the ground floor study at Litham Hall, but much like it—the walls were book-lined from floor to ceiling.

The chief difference was that these shelves weren't glazed. Two had cupboards beneath them. These were locked; again Fenner's keys came out.

One cupboard was filled with books—several large ones. He glanced at one, seeing woodcuts of great beauty on the seared pages. There were many much smaller, and about half were really old. He didn't trouble to look at the titles or inspect the binding closely, but put them on a small pedestal desk—on which stood a telephone, a silver inkstand and a blotting pad.

He went to the second cupboard—and found the black door and brass handle of an old-fashioned safe inside. He had no keys for this.

The safe was built into the wall; it wouldn't be possible to take it out and wrench the back of it off—the simplest and most effective way of dealing with old-fashioned safes. There was only one keyhole, and young Kenley's words came to his mind—he'd told the "Old Man" that he ought to get a new one.

Mannerling took a reel of twine from his pocket, crouched down, and began to unwind and push it into the keyhole, and ramming it tightly. It took a long time. Soon most of the twine was inside the keyhole. He rammed it in more tightly, then took a narrow steel tool, and pushed that in. The tool was like a sardine key, with serrated edges, and the edges would catch in the cotton. The cotton would be pressed into the tumbler of the lock, and so, when turned, the tool should act as a key. The method had one weakness; it took time, and he had already been inside Marchant for an hour. "He felt the pressure, as if the "key" had caught in the tumbler, and turned even more gently. If it slipped, he would have to start all over again.

He heard no click, and expected none; but he knew that the lock was drawn. He drew the "key" out, breaking the threads which were attached to it, and then stood up, rubbing his strained legs. He crossed to the door, glad to move his muscles; still welcome silence greeted him.

But he was uneasy. HE stood deliberately to one side, leant forward, gripped the handle and pulled.

He was cautious because he knew Fenner would never trust his valuables to such an old-fashioned safe. Was there another strong-box, which he hadn't found? Or was there a trick to this? Mannerling had known safes with "safety" devices which could kill. The safe door was heavy, but finally it swung open.

Next moment he heard a little sneezing sound, and a cloud of white vapor spewed about him. Tear-gas burned his eyes as he darted back.

He wanted to cough. He stifled it as he went to the door, to gulp in clean, fresh air.

The gas near the safe would take some time to disperse, and unless he opened one of the windows, the room would be untenable for a while.

When at last he returned to the safe, the gas still hung about but was not strong enough to worry him. Still keeping to one side, he pulled the door wide open. Had he been in front of the safe when the gas charge had exploded, he would have been blinded and coughing helplessly by now.

Battle Against Imports Goes Into Congressional Hearings

By CHARLES HASLET
WASHINGTON—(AP)—Independent oil operators carry their fight for curbs on petroleum imports before the House Ways and Means Committee this week. The committee also will hear views of oil importers.

Representatives Vursell (R-Ill) and Simpson (R-Pa) have introduced such bills. Senator Carlson (R-Kan) has offered a similar measure in the Senate.

Conservation Purposes
Russell Brown, general counsel of the IPAA, said he would testify that domestic production is restricted for conservation purposes—to prevent economic waste—but that there is no corresponding restriction on imports and no limitation on production in the exporting countries.

"No one can restrict imports by law except Congress," he said. "We are asking them to assume that responsibility. Otherwise, our program of conservation in this country is completely destroyed."

Venezuela Fears
Among the importers, Standard Oil of New Jersey contended in a recently released study that any move to curb oil imports by legislative action would have adverse effects on the economies of other oil-producing nations, such as Venezuela, and that adequate defense of the U. S. and the free world depends "importantly" on access to sources of oil outside U. S. borders.

Development of such sources, the company said, is dependent to a considerable degree on keeping markets open to them and the largest single market is the United States. Oil imports also come before the conference of governors with President Eisenhower next week. Oil is produced in about 30 states.

The Petroleum Administration for Defense has taken the position that, if possible, the import problem should be solved by the oil companies themselves, without legislative action.

The Interstate Oil Compact Commission now has 22 member states and four associate members. The Alaska Legislature has authorized Alaska's participation as an associate member.

Recent fluctuations in oil prices should demonstrate there is no company or group of companies with the power to determine oil prices in any area. A. W. Scott, president of the National Petroleum Association, said in a recent speech in Cleveland.

McGrew And Coates Given Promotions By Cities Service

Appointment of Gerald McGrew as manager of the crude oil division of Cities Service Oil Company, and Jack O. Coates as assistant manager has been announced.

McGrew was first employed by Cities Service in June of 1940 as valuation engineer and entered the armed forces the next year. He returned to Cities Service in 1947 as a member of the company's engineering department and was transferred to the purchasing department the following year as buyer.

He served in the parent company's Washington office for one year, returned to Bartlesville in the Spring of 1952, and was appointed assistant to the manager of the crude oil supply and transportation division.

Coates joined the company's training school in June, 1937, and took a permanent assignment in the evaluation department. He served in this capacity until June of 1942, when he entered military service.

After his discharge in February of 1946, he rejoined the company. He spent two years in the company's treasurer's division, then was transferred to Midland as buyer for the crude oil supply division. He returned to Bartlesville in March of 1950 as assistant manager in the crude oil purchase and sales department.

Russell Appointed New Supervisor In Midland By Dowell

Maynard W. Russell has been made service supervisor for Dowell Incorporated in the Permian Basin. Russell has been with Dowell since early in 1948. He was first a service engineer at El Reno, Okla., and until his recent promotion has been at the company's general offices at Tulsa.

Russell's experience with Dowell has included three years as a development engineer during which his principal assignment was the development and field testing of Dowell's expendable Glass Gun. He also has had much experience on Dowell's various Electric Pilot services both at the laboratories at Tulsa and in the field.

Bills To Embarrass Tidelands Measure Thrown Into Senate

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The Senate, nearing the end of a marathon debate over state ownership of the tidelands, has before it a proposal to console with cash states which have no undersea oil.

Senator Green (D-Rt) introduced it Friday as an amendment to the bill to establish state title to the sea bottoms within the states' historic boundaries. The amendment faced defeat when it comes up Monday.

Green, who opposes state ownership, would have the states with offshore oil or other minerals report to the government the revenue derived from them. Then, under his proposal, the Treasury would calculate compensating allocations for the other states, based on population, and pay them out of general federal revenues.

The Rhode Islander said he thought the country as a whole needed and should keep the offshore oil, "but if it is to be given away, I want Rhode Island to get its fair share of the assets belonging to the nation."

Green figured Rhode Island's share would be $259,000,000. Opponents of state ownership have said that if the bill is enacted, Rhode Island and other states will challenge its constitutionality.

Another amendment was proposed by Senator Morse (Ind-Ore) to remove what he said was a possible severe limitation on the powers of the U. S. government. Without the amendment, Morse asserted the bill might imperil, for example, the federal power to construct dams on inland waterways.

Morse, who set a Senate record for continuous talking when he spoke 22 1/2 hours against the bill last week, threatened to "give the administration a debate that'll take them into the Fall" if there are efforts "to turn over our natural resources to selfish economic interests."

Ritter Made Chief Of Conoco Gasoline And Gas Division

HOUSTON—Carl L. Ritter, Houston, has been promoted from assistant director to director of Continental Oil Company's natural gasoline and gas division. It was announced Saturday by E. W. Webb, vice president. He will continue to make his headquarters in Houston.

Ritter succeeds J. R. Bailey, who has resigned from Conoco to accept a position with the Mene Grande Oil Company in Venezuela. A native of La Junta, Colo., Ritter received his bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering at Colorado A&M College at Ft. Collins in 1935 and joined Continental that year at Lance Creek, Wyo.

He was promoted in 1937 to foreman of the company's Billings, Okla., natural gasoline plant and the following year was named an assistant district superintendent at Tepeate, La.

He transferred to Houston in 1940 as a sales engineer for the marketing department and two years later moved to Ponca City, Okla., where he subsequently became superintendent of natural gasoline and gas operations. He returned to Houston in 1950 as assistant director of Conoco's natural gasoline and gas division.

Midlander Struck By Auto Escapes With Minor Hurts

A Midlander escaped serious injury Friday when he was struck by a car about two miles east of Midland on U. S. Highway 80.

F. E. Thomasson, 32, Route 2, was struck and released from Western Clinic-Hospital after he was hit by an auto driven by William Pickney Spredlin, 27, attendant at the B&B Texaco Service Station. Thomasson told Jack Whitson, state patrolman, who investigated, that he was crossing the road with the intention of hitchhiking a ride back into Midland while his wife, who was in the car with him drove on.

"I apparently misjudged the distance and speed of Spredlin's car when I was crossing," he told the officer, "and just didn't have enough time."

Spredlin said he had slowed to around 15 miles an hour when the accident happened.

Whitson said Saturday no charges were planned.

Pecos Murder Trial Venire Due Monday

PECOS—A special venire of 96 men has been summoned by District Judge G. C. Olson to appear at 9:30 a. m. Monday in district court. From the venire a jury will be selected for the trial of Frank B. Vasquez, charged with murder with malice in the shooting of Gilberto Demingo in Ward County in July, 1952.

The list included Alton Reid, Glenn McCurley, C. T. Mount, Howard Davis, R. K. Arnold, O. H. Benichamp, Perry Waggon, David Hess, Doyle Jayroe, Donald Kerley, H. H. Midlanders At UT Top Overall Texas Grade Point Mark

Midlanders who enrolled as freshmen at the University of Texas in the Fall of 1952 closed the year with a 1.472 grade point average—topping the 1.235 average for all freshmen entering from Texas high schools.

The average is computed by dividing the number of grade points earned by the number of hours of work carried to completion, either passed or failed.

Grade points are awarded for each hour of credit on a basis of three points for A, two points for B and one point for C. Thus a three-hour course with a grade of C is assigned three credit points while the same course with a grade of A would assigned nine credit points.

Daddy Ringtail And Muscle Monkey

Muscle Monkey is the name of a monkey who is very strong. I don't know where he came from, but one day he came walking along the Elephant Path with his great big hands a-hanging down to his knees almost.

"Happy day, stranger!" Daddy Ringtail, your monkey friend, said when he saw him.

"Huh?" said Muscle Monkey.

"Happy day, stranger!" Daddy Ringtail said it again.

Muscle Monkey picked up a big rock. The rock was about as big as an elephant. Muscle Monkey carried it over to the side of the Elephant Path where the shade was. Muscle Monkey sat down on the rock for a seat. Daddy Ringtail sat down beside him.

"My name's Daddy Ringtail," Daddy Ringtail said.

"Ohuh," Muscle Monkey said,

"but where is the stranger you were talking about?"

"You are," Daddy Ringtail explained, "because I've never seen you before."

But Muscle Monkey didn't understand. He had seen himself before, and so he didn't think he was a stranger at all. "Daddy Ringtail," said Muscle Monkey, "you must be the stranger, because I have never seen you before."

And so there the two of them sat on the rock. Muscle Monkey

Dirt, Squirt and Quirt

— FARM, DAIRY AND RANCH NEWS —

The market was more active and stronger on stockers, and steady on cattle going to packers at Thursday's Midland Livestock Auction.

Fat calves and yearlings, good to choice, brought $18 to $22; medium to good, $15 to $18; cull to common, $10 to $15.

Cows, medium to choice, went for $12 to $13.50; canners and cutters, $9 to $12; old shells, $7. Bulls went at $12.50 to $13.50.

Stocker steer calves brought $16 to $18.50; stocker heifer calves, $14.50 to $16. Mixed breed and Brahman stocker calves and yearlings brought $10 to $14.50.

The City of Midland has signed conservation agreements with the Martin-Howard Soil Conservation District on four of the city's farms operated by Joe Heideberg. These are the Rosedale water plant farm of 180 acres, the Cloverdale farm of 320 acres, the new sewage plant farm of 320 acres, and the sewage disposal farm of 320 acres. Heideberg already was a conservation cooperater on the sewage disposal farm, and joined in the three-way agreement on the others. A field on the Cloverdale farm with a good feed stubble left on the surface was one of the few in the area which suffered little or no wind damage from Wednesday's sandstorm.

R. E. O'Neal lost no time after the recent cover crop field day on his farm south of Midland in putting the green manure crops on his cotton land to use. He already has cotton planted on the four plots in his irrigated cotton field, where Austrian winter pea, vetch, and rye were grown. He first went over the field with a rotary stalk shredder, then cut the top growth into the ground with a tandem disk and plowed with a moldboard plow. He listed the land as he planted, putting the seed in the furrows.

DSQ has no comment to offer on the weather. After all, comment really is unnecessary.

That slicker surely has caught a lot of sand during the last week. Podner!

Ben Osborn, soil conservationist, said he thought about stopping by last Wednesday to take DSQ on a trip through the Midland County farm and ranch country. It was just as well that he didn't. We couldn't see from the office any better than we couldn't have seen from the field. Ho-Hum!

The Sul Ross Rodeo Team was bucked off into second place following the N. I. R. A. rodeo held in Las Cruces, N. M., last weekend, produced by the New Mexico A&M Rodeo Club.

Sul Ross now is setting 22 points behind the Hardin-Simmons cowboys, who picked up 620 points to Sul Ross' 590.

Tex Martin of Port Arthur, who is leading in the N. I. R. A. for the All-Around Champion, was runner up for this title at the rodeo with 270 points. Tex placed in every event in which he was entered. He won second place in the saddle-bronc riding, second in the bareback riding, second in the steer-dogging, fifth in the bull-riding, and fourth place in the first go-round of the ribbon-roping.

Ira Akers from San Antonio won first place in the bareback riding and a beautiful trophy buckle. He also placed fourth in the bull riding, an event in which he is now sitting in second place for the world's champion, and finished fourth in the saddle-bronc riding for a total of 187 points.

Jimmy Calvert from Marysvale, who has been very consistent in the college shows this Spring, picked up a hundred points for second place

Grass Seedlings Promise Recovery For Area Ranges

An abundance of new grass seedlings on ranges in the Midland area offer promise of good recovery from the drought if pastures are deferred this Summer to give the new plants a chance to become established.

This was the conclusion reached by vegetation specialists of the Soil Conservation Service during a recent field examination of ranges in the Martin-Howard Soil Conservation district south and west of Midland with Ben Osborn, local work unit conservationist.

C. A. Rechenbach, soil conservationist from the regional office in Fort Worth, and J. C. Ebersole, agronomist from Abilene, spent a day studying current range conditions with Osborn. Ebersole has devoted several years to the work of revegetating range lands and old fields in West and South Texas.

At almost every stop they made, Osborn said, the trio found an abundance of young grass plants which apparently germinated from native seed following the rains of last Fall.

Most abundant species of seedlings were sand dropseed and slim tridolia. In a few places black grama seedlings were found.

Although the dropseed and tridolia grasses are not the best forage grasses, they will, if given a chance, serve to provide a cover for range lands made barren by the drought, Osborn pointed out. This will stop shifting of topsoil, aid in the storage of rainfall, and make soil conditions more favorable for the natural establishment of better grasses. Continued resting of pastures valued during the drought, or special deferments during the growing season, are needed to take advantage of the natural recovery of the vegetation already started, Osborn said. Weeds and other growth resulting from this Spring's showers need to be left on the ground to help restore the range cover.

While natural reseeding is taking place on most of the range land, it may be necessary to do artificial seeding on local areas where all desirable grasses have been killed out. Under some conditions, superior grasses may be seeded into the natural stands.

Osborn said the Midland work unit of Soil Conservation Service soon would begin a systematic examination of pastures with cooperators of the Martin-Howard Soil Conservation district to determine the extent of drought injury and the measures needed to restore ranges to productivity.

Other collegians can have those souped-up jalopies, slick convertibles and hot rods. Gene McJunkins, Texas Christian University co-ed from Saratoga, Ark., will take a horse every time, according to reports from down Fort Worth way.

And when her friends hunt the cool shade these warm afternoons or go hunting their kicks along the highways, Gene heads for the dust and heat of a rodeo arena. She wouldn't trade with anybody.

Now a sophomore at TCU, Miss McJunkins has been riding horses since she was six when she carried water to workers on her father's farm. She took part in her first rodeo as a sophomore in high school and has been winning prizes ever since.

"When we started out, my 18-year-old horse 'Snip' won more prizes than I did," Gene grins. "They judged us on our horses, saddles and appearance in Western clothes. My horse and saddle used to win—I didn't."

These days she has a horse named "Snip" and she talks about his fine points as her friends do about the latest sports cars. Last Summer she rode "Snip" in Rodeo Cowboys Association events at Denton, Mesquite, West, Streetman and Bowie.

This Spring Miss McJunkins plans to compete in intercollegiate events. "I wouldn't trade Snip for any other horse," she says firmly. "He'll run his heart out for you."

Likes Barrel Race

The barrel race is the event Gene and Snip like best. They consistently have placed in stiff competition with both amateur and professional performers. But so far they have been unable to win the most cherished prize of all—the buckle that goes to outstanding performers.

"It's fine to win those other prizes, even some money," Gene reports. "But if I can ever win a buckle, I think I'll just die from the excitement. I missed that buckle, by three-tenths of a second at the Intercollegiate Rodeo Association race at Sam Houston State College this year. Maybe I'll make it next time."

Miss McJunkins, who was Ranch Week Queen on the TCU campus recently, is a student in the Harris College of Nursing. She's not just sure what she'll do with Snip and her rodeo work after graduation.

"Maybe I'll get a hospital job in an area where they have a rodeo now and then," she grinned. "A gal has gotta have some fun."

Officials said it will be the first rail-truck venture by a railroad south of St. Louis. They predict the service will be a great time-saver to shippers.

K. P. Chinn, assistant executive vice president, explained the service this way:

Merchandise from the Houston area will be loaded into trailer vans which will be moved aboard the special flat cars.

At Lake Charles, truck drivers will have the trailers on highways within minutes and make deliveries at Lake Charles, Crowley, Lafayette, New Iberia and smaller towns.

The trailers will return to Houston with merchandise for similar distribution in this area.

DID THIS EVER HAPPEN IN YOUR HOUSEHOLD?—What did you do? Chances are you took the sad-eyed stranger into the warmth of your home, fed him perhaps and wondered what to do next. If you live in Midland, or any other of the 600 communities in the United States and Canada where there is an SPCA or similar humane society, you probably called on them for help. Harold Anderson's original painting for this year's Be Kind to Animals Week is being displayed in Midland May 3-9.

Women Reporters Kid Ike But Honor Nurses In Korea

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The Women's National Press Club kidded President Eisenhower in a series of lively skits Saturday night—and borrowed one of his favorite golf jackets for a prop.

The jacket is cerise, and for sheer color it puts some of ex-President Truman's sport shirts to shame.

Betty Beale of the Washington Star got it on loan from the President to impersonate him in the skits which marked the press club's annual dinner. Not daring to take a tuck in the sleeves, she had a little trouble making it fit.

The President and Mrs. Eisenhower saw the show, as well as members of the Cabinet, Senator Taft of Ohio and his wife, and other Washington dignitaries.

Front-Line Volunteers

The President, on behalf of the press club, presented the club's 1953 Achievement Awards to five women who in the last year have been outstanding.

"The American nurse in Korea" was selected as "The Woman of the Year" by press club members. Named to receive this award on behalf of all battle front nurses was Lt. Mildred Rush, Lieutenant

Rush, an Army nurse anesthetist, is just back from 18 months volunteer duty in front-line hospitals. She is a native of Pembroke, N. H. Other women honored included:

U. S. Treasurer Ivy Baker Priest, credited with helping to get to the polls last November, the largest number of women who ever voted in a national election.

Indian Ballerina

Mrs. Catherine Marshall of Washington, D. C. Her book "A Man Called Peter" has been on the nation's best selling list almost two years.

Maria Tallchief, Oklahoma Indian ballerina, who has won international recognition for her dance interpretations.

Mrs. Helen Campbell Wilder, Washington, D. C., pathologist, whose work during the last year on the cause of a widespread eye disease has been termed "one of the most significant discoveries in the field of ocular diseases in the last 50 years."

Port Arthur Woman Hurt As Automobiles Collide In Midland

A Port Arthur woman, enroute to visit her daughter in a Kermit hospital, was injured slightly at 4:30 p.m. Friday in an auto crash at the intersection of West Wall and N Streets.

Damage to the 1952 station wagon driven by Mrs. Alice Mae Garriga, 53, of Port Arthur, and the 1953 sedan driven by Fredda Louise Black, 15, of Midland was estimated at $1,200.

Fredda Louise is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Black, 111 North N Street. Passengers in the car with the teenager were Stewart Chancellor and Eleanor Wheeler.

Officers said Mrs. Garriga explained that she was driving to Kermit to visit her ill daughter when the accident occurred. She did not require hospital treatment.

None of the Midlanders was injured.

Norris Returned To Prison, Unable To See His Child

FORT WORTH—(AP)—Gene Paul Norris was returned to the state prison Friday without a chance to see his 20-day old baby for the first time.

Norris was acquitted last month in the $248,000 robbery of two Cubans at a swank suburban hotel here. He had been on a conditional parole when he was accused of the robbery and the parole was revoked.

Shortly after Norris boarded the state prison van his wife and new baby appeared at the jail. She said she had driven from their home in Duncan, Okla., to see him and had no way of knowing he was being transferred. Mrs. Norris tearfully left the jail.

Korean Winter Freezes Flowing Blood Of Soldier; Loses 130 Pounds But Lives

By WILLIAM C. BARNARD
TOKYO—(AP)—For 34 hours the corporal lay in a valley of agony. Bullets had ripped through his stomach, groin and leg. It was bitterly cold and he was hiding beneath a corn shock in a Korean field.

The Communists captured him and in the next 29 months gave him no medical attention, he said. During three months in one prison camp he watched between 700 and 800 of his buddies die. Dysentery shrank him from 220 to 90 pounds. He hung grimly to life.

week, he told a remarkable story Saturday of his fight to survive. He was a Second Division rifleman. On Nov. 28, 1950, near Kunu, he and other members of his company were slugging it out with overwhelming numbers of Chinese. It was a confused battle of retreat.

Sixty minutes passed. Another Chinese came up, pointed a rifle, and put a bullet through Watters' stomach. That should have finished him off. It didn't. "I lay there and watched my chance and figured I had a slim chance if I could crawl a quarter mile to the battalion aid station."

South American Beauty Finds Fascinating Clothes In U. S.

By TRACY FLILER
Reporter-Telegram Staff
It takes a visitor to appreciate West Texas sandstorms—at least Senora Neusa Barroso of Brazil thought Midland's latest duster was interesting from a spectator viewpoint.

SENORA NEUSA BARROSO
... Sandstorms interest her.

Senora Barroso is accompanying her husband, Genesio C. Barroso, oil production chief in Brazil, on business trips through the Southwest. Barroso was here studying the paraffin problems and gas repressuring in the Permian Basin.

Speaking of the blowing sands of Midland, the petite South American beauty said, "I wouldn't want to live in it but I liked a chance to see it. The interior and exterior designs of Midland homes also attracted her attention since they are in contrast with houses in her native land."

The Barrosos expect to have their new home in Salvador Bahia completed by December, which is summertime in Brazil. By then, two wishes of Senora Barroso will have been fulfilled—one to build a new home and the other to take his beautiful wife on a tour of the United States.

Two Plans Figure In Fate Of Camp Hospital At Pecos

PECOS—The Reeves County Commissioners Court is studying the proposal of Dr. Jim Camp to sell the Camp Hospital to the county for $70,000. Dr. Camp accepted estimates given the county by two architects, Royal Dana of San Angelo and Don Smith of Sweetwater, in arriving at this price. However, no decision has been reached by the commissioners' court and Judge Dudley Cooksey indicated it might be some time before a decision can be reached.

Posthumous Awards For Heroic Rescue Tries Given Texans

PITTSBURGH —(AP)— Bronze medals for heroism have been awarded posthumously to two Texans who died in attempts to save children from drowning.

The court has hired architects, Buford and Fineberg of Dallas, to draw up two sets of plans for the court to study. One plan calls for the purchase of the Camp Hospital at the price quoted by Dr. Camp and the addition of extra facilities. The other calls for a completely new structure.

ROSS Waidrop, 28, of Port Arthur rescued Garry Waldrop, five, and Ronald Waldrop, three, May 26, 1952. Waldrop had only one arm but kept the boys, who had fallen from a motorboat, afloat until help could arrive. Then he drowned.

Felix Ramirez, 36, died Aug. 11, 1952, trying to save Mary Birch, nine, who had slipped in a deep swift current in the Colorado River near Austin. Ramirez, weak from an abdominal operation, sank when only four feet from the drowning girl. Both bodies were recovered later in the day.

The purpose of the Community Survey is to obtain helpful information that will enable advertisers to improve their service to you readers by preparing ads the way you want them.

When you indicate which ads you think will do the advertisers the most good, it is possible to tabulate that information and give it to the advertisers for their guidance.

On the first page of the paper each day you will find a list of the advertisements to be checked that day.

All you have to do is to decide each day which Large Ad, which Medium Ad, which Small Ad and which Classified Ad you think will do the advertiser the most good. Just write four names on this blank each day.

Cash awards will go to those readers whose selections are nearest to what the majority of readers think. Every week is a separate survey.

YOU ARE NOT REQUIRED TO WRITE A LETTER. The awards are made to those readers whose selections are nearest to the list of ads which get the most votes. The awards are ACCURATE . . . FAIR . . . and HONEST.

You do not have to be an advertising expert! All ads are written for you readers. YOU are best qualified to indicate which ads will do the advertiser the most good.

We sincerely want your suggestions and ideas of how we may improve our advertising service for your benefit. Write your letter in your own way! It's the thoughts and suggestions that matter. You are not being "judged" by your letters. Actually they have nothing to do with awards . . . but . . . they will be helpful by giving additional information to our advertisers.

Your criticisms and suggestions will be given the advertisers to help them to improve their advertisements BUT they will NOT be given the names of those who write the letters. This is so you may say just what you really think without embarrassment.

Every member of any family may send in one answer each week but only one award for a good answer will go to any one household during the survey. Since the purpose of the Survey is to obtain information, any indication of collusion to secure an award automatically will disqualify such answers. In the case of ties duplicate awards will be made. Bold Use Of Color Inside And Out Marks New Trend

The most effective and least expensive way to individualize a home is with color. Color is used to unify shapes, accent points of interest and enlarge the apparent size of small rooms. It affects family moods by making a room gay or restful, warm or cool.

The modern trend is to coordinate both interior and exterior colors. Homeowners react so favorably to well-chosen color plans that stress is placed on color harmony by the makers of paint, flooring and home furnishings.

Personal likes or dislikes alone are not a safe basis for choosing a color plan because colors are functional and perform a specific job in creating a livable atmosphere. However, the choice and principles of color are so flexible that considerable latitude is possible in satisfying both personal preference and practical requirements.

New Departure

Departure from traditional white exteriors has given homes greater individuality. Builders use varied color plans to eliminate "look-alike" appearance of houses in their developments. Brilliant color on entrance doors creates interest and says "welcome." Architectural lines are changed by color illusions, such as a dark roof and light colored walls. The confused look of window openings at different sizes and shapes can be camouflaged by giving them the same color as the exterior walls.

But it is the interior where modern color use plays its greatest role. Color stylists advise bringing some of the exterior color inside, then doing floors and walls in harmonizing hues.

Color Emphasis

New color emphasis is placed on floors. These are large areas which require color treatment that contributes importantly to the overall scheme.

Late Spring Said To Be 'Good Time' For Farm Painting

COLLEGE STATION — Weather conditions in most sections of the state during late spring are favorable for doing the outside painting jobs on the farm. W. S. Allen, agricultural engineer for the Texas Extension Service, says painting farm buildings at regular intervals is a cheap way to keep them in good condition and preserve that smart look around the farmstead.

The engineer describes the preparation of the surface to be painted as one of the most important items connected with the painting job. Three items, he says, generally are responsible for too rapid a deterioration of the paint job. They are careless application, poor atmospheric conditions at the time of painting and too much moisture.

Chalking Process

Paint wears off, says Allen, by the process of chalking. But, if chalking begins to show up too early in the life of a paint, it's a good indication that the wrong kind of paint was used. Before repainting a heavily chalked surface, remove the chalk by scrubbing with water or by brushing with a stiff wire brush.

Frequently long narrow breaks in the painted surface will appear. These are called checks and when deep, cracks and checks, according to Allen, are caused by the shrinking and hardening of the paint film to such an extent that it can no longer expand and contract with changing atmospheric conditions. Later the edges between the cracks curl and the paint loosens and falls off. Flaking or scaling may be delayed or partially controlled by using a reliable brand of paint and by avoiding thick coatings.

SPRING IS THE TIME TO PAINT AND REPAIR FENCES

By MR. FIX
Distributed by NEA Service

If your fences are from two to five years old and never have been repainted, they are doubtless badly in need of a face lifting. Spring is as good a time as any to do the job. For then, throughout at least one summer your fences will set off your home to new advantage.

In another year or two they will need painting again, especially so in grimy industrial areas. The best idea is to repaint your fences when, and as often as, you paint your home.

Creosote-base paint on a wooden fence is a good bet to preserve its appearance. A yearly coat of creosote or some other wood preservative is worth while on an unpainted fence.

Before painting wooden fences, wire-brush posts and rails to remove loose flakes of old paint, sand down splintered areas to lessen the splinter danger to children, make sure the nails that have worked loose are replaced.

Steel Fences

Iron or steel fences are liable to be rusty and have considerable loose paint if not repainted for some time. Wire-brush the metal thoroughly before painting with a primer of red lead followed by the finish coating.

If you are considering erecting a new fence, you may want to look into the advantages of new chain-link aluminum fencing, especially if interested in fencing off play areas for children, protecting gardens, etc.

Steel posts may be used with aluminum fencing, because their cost is low and they are easy to paint. Aluminum, of course, does not rust and needs no paint. Those are reasons why the initial cost of aluminum fencing, while higher than that of iron, is more than made up over the years.

One manufacture of aluminum fencing, points out that painting an ordinary fence costs at least 10 cents a square foot.

The steel posts used in conjunction with aluminum fencing should be set in concrete well below the frost line. The same type brackets used for galvanized fencing can be employed for aluminum.

Weighting about one third as much as galvanized or common steel fencing, aluminum is no problem for the home handy man to handle.

Chain-link aluminum fencing has a mesh measuring two inches. The gauge is six or nine, and the height can be from 36 to 144 inches.

Setting fence posts in concrete is wise practice, whether the posts be of steel or wood. It safeguards against one of the most common troubles with wooden fences—the tendency of posts to rot at ground level and eventually cause the fence to collapse.

Besides preventing deterioration, of course, the concrete makes the fence much stronger. Concrete serves no very good purpose, however, unless it extends a few inches above ground level around posts, preventing water from standing in pools at the base of each post.

To prevent deterioration of wood or metal fences, keep a good coating of paint on them, set fence posts in concrete.

Low Partition Divides Space In Open-Plan Home

The trend in new homes which combines kitchen and dining quarters in one large area has brought a need for space division which will separate the two areas without destroying the spacious effect. Many builders attain this effect by erecting a short partition the height of the kitchen range or counter tops.

Both sides of the abbreviated wall then are covered with asphalt tile in colors which harmonize with the over-all color plan of the two areas.

Greaseproof asphalt tile is recommended for both partition and floor because it is undamaged by kitchen spillage and cleaning it is no chore. A sense of greater spaciousness is created if the same color of tile used on the floors is carried up the partition.

If walls of kitchen and dining area are pastel green, beige or yellow, a plaid floor design of heather mixture, white and Aspen green stripes carried into the room partition will be charming. "Tartan" plaid in Genesee and Clippoline green, gardenia white and Verde Antique is another appropriate suggestion.

Laminate yellow with ivy vine border will be distinctive. With any of these, tie in table cloths and window curtains to carry out the color.

Average Family Of Today Wants Porch On Its New House

If you want an old-fashioned porch on your new home, you're in good company.

The U. S. Housing and Home Finance Agency reports that roughly three of every five families include in their home plans a porch just like the one on which Grandpa and Grandpa used to sit and rock.

The catch is that today's family wants more use than that from the porch, but too often fails to plan for it. Your porch, however, can measure up to your dream of it if you'll consider these factors:

1. Use of the space. Think of the ways you can use the porch not just now but 10 and 20 years from now. Will you dine there in Summer? Close it in eventually for year-round use? Make part of it into a spare bedroom?

Remember The Floor

2. The floor. Select a material that won't be rotted in a few years by moisture. One of the most satisfactory is quarry tile, since rain will not harm it and it is permanent. Tiled floors need no rugs, and no annual refinishing.

3. Furniture dimensions. Decide what furniture you will want, whether you buy it now or not, so that you can plan a porch spacious enough for it.

4. Lighting outlets. Include two or three electric outlets in the porch plan, so that you can have reading lamps near chairs and also plug in the toaster or percolator for outdoor meals.

5. Coolness. Orient your house to give the porch the benefit of prevailing breezes. Neighbors or the weather bureau can advise you.

6. Storage. Have some spaces for dishes, and a built-in that will take the card table, toys and Summer games.

7. Injunction Halts Grain Movements By Trucking Lines AUSTIN—A suit asking for a temporary restraining order to forbid the Railroad Commission from letting 23 trucking lines haul grain was filed Friday in 99th District Court.

The order was requested by the Fort Worth and Denver Railway. The suit accuses the commission and the trucking lines of conducting an illegal operation which makes for unfair competition with railroads.

The commission issued orders February 25 allowing the truckers to move grain in bulk between points in Texas but didn't prescribe maximum and minimum rates, as required by law, the petition claimed.

There are two types of camel—one-humped Arabian and the two-humped Bactrian. Only the one-humped variety is called a dromedary.

Outdoor Areas Of Home Should Have Safety Inspection

Untidy areas promote home accidents, and the yard and porch are no exceptions to that rule.

Many men would rather be fishing or working in the garden on a pleasant Spring weekend. But it's a wise investment to take a little time now to make outdoor areas of the home accident-proof for the Summer months ahead.

Loose boards, broken glass and discarded tools or toys find their way into every backyard. Get rid of them, to make the yard safe.

Porches need a Spring checkup, for moisture and outdoor conditions rot many materials quickly. Under such circumstances it's wise to modernize the floor with a water-proof material, which will not be affected by rot or decay.

Check Play Equipment Don't neglect the children's play equipment. Frayed ropes on swings should be replaced and other gear put into best condition.

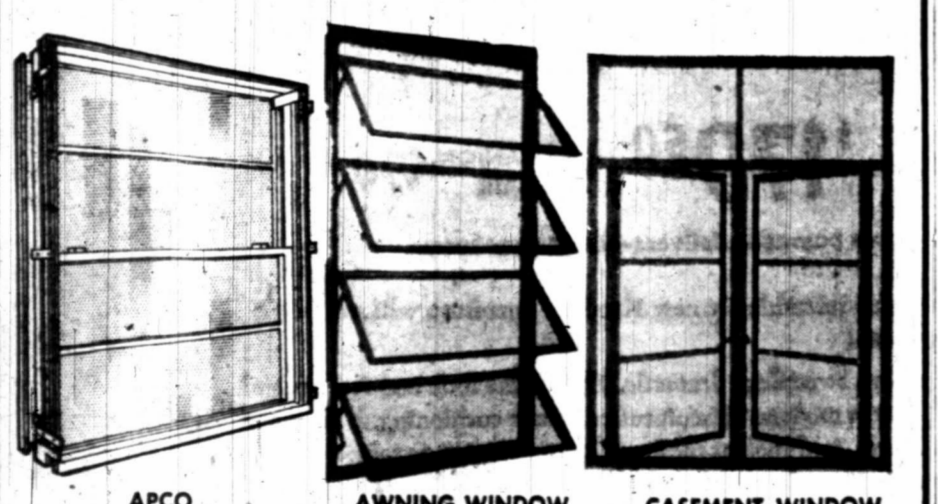

Lots of yard hazards exist for years without causing trouble. Visualize the accident possibilities, in such a thing as a low clothes line, into which people may walk in the dark—and take steps to eliminate them.

Today's families like to treat the backyard as additional living space. Spring is a good time to have a terrace built there of quarry tile, which will dry quickly after rains and make a steady footing for Summer furniture.

Finally, have garden tools and the lawn mower sharpened, and make a place for insecticides and sprays high enough that children can not reach them.

Charles Terrell, Oldest Ex-Senator Of Texas, Honored

AUSTIN — (AP)—A portrait of Texas' oldest living ex-senator, Charles Terrell, stood on an easel in the Texas Senate chamber Saturday on his ninety-second birthday.

It was unveiled and accepted by the Senate in a ceremony before 300 Friday.

Terrell sat in a swivel chair near the rostrum and cupped his hand to his ear to hear himself praised as one of the state's great men. He modestly called it an honor "far greater than I deserve."

He went to the Senate in 1897, served there four terms, was state treasurer four years and railroad commissioner 15 years.

He wrote the law that created North Texas State College at Denton.

SO THIS IS NEW YORK

BY NORTH CALLAHAN

NEW YORK—There are no bigger hicks than the people born and raised in New York City. This statement was not made by a disillusioned visitor, but by a fellow who hails originally from the Bronx—Dennis Day. He came home last week to receive an award from his alma mater, Manhattan College, and told some of his current thoughts on Gotham Dennis as you know, has gone a long ways since he sang in the choir of St. Patrick's Cathedral here. First with Jack Benny, now he has his own television show from Hollywood, and the best character in it—except Dennis, is a "hick" named Cliff Arquette from "Mount Idy, Loway." The way people take to these two indicate that most of us are hicks at heart.

Invited down to the John Peter Zenger Memorial presentation ceremonies by James Wright Brown, I saw Arthur Hays Sulzberger dedicate and present the memorial hall to the federal government. The building is located at Wall and Nassau Streets where on April 30, 1879, George Washington took the oath as our first President. In the same building, 35 years before, Zenger spent nine months in jail and was tried and acquitted on charges of libeling the governor of New York in his newspaper. The jury decided Zenger was telling the truth, so upheld the freedom of the press in a far-reaching decision. This shrine was given to the government by the newspapers of our nation, Sulzberger told us. Present for the colorful occasion was Mrs. Harry Clark Boden of Newark, Delaware, a direct descendant of Zenger.

The crowded living conditions of this city result in a lot of things, some of them laughable. Musicians, and those who presume to be, often have hindrances, trying to further their careers amidst the adjoining apartments honeycombed with thousands of city dwellers living right in each others faces, so to speak. In such a district on East 86th Street the other evening, a woman was heard singing, then she paused and was heard to ask her husband and was heard to ask her husband why he always went out on the balcony when she sang. "Well, if you must have the truth," he replied, "I want the neighbors to see that I am not beating my wife."

Out on Oyster Bay they are restoring the home of Theodore Roosevelt; there is one part of his life here that has been forever obliterated. It is his church, the Collegiate Church of St. Nicholas which stood at 49th Street and 5th Avenue. It was the oldest church with a continuous congregation in America, had what was said to be the most beautiful spire. Ever since TR attended it, they had set aside his pew with a marker. But a few years ago an insurance company wanted the spot for an office building, offered about four million dollars for it, and the officials in charge of the churches of this denomination for New York City finally decided to sell it. Its congregation and pastor resisted valiantly, but four million dollars won out. Today there stands on the site of this famous church, a modern office building.

A look at a collection of time-pieces here revealed sharply how times have changed. One watch was shaped like a human skull, another, said to have been worn by Queen Elizabeth I was set in a case of rock crystal. But the one which attracted most attention was insured for half a million dollars—it was the first dollar watch put on the market by Ingersoll in 1892. I asked a jeweler what a "dollar" watch costs today. He said they run around $250.

Gotham Gatherings: over at the United Nations, I found two items of interest: one, the recent rains caused a leak smack in the roof of the 70-million-dollar structure; another, the womenfolk at the UN are somewhat aquiver over the fact that the new Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold is a 47-year-old bachelor. Magazines keep up a running fight for advertisements by showing how they excel each other in the amount of advertising each year etc. But the mag which ran more ads than any other in the world last year, $12,000,000 worth, you can't even buy on the newsstands and it is hard to get a subscription to: it is "Business Week."

Heart Association Expresses Thanks For 'Memorials'

Suda Wills Oles, executive secretary of the Midland Heart Association, said Saturday she is much impressed and most gratified with the number of Midland residents who are sending memorials to the Periman Basin Heart Association.

"We have received many such gifts within recent weeks," she said, "and they are much appreciated."

Mrs. Oles said persons desiring to make such gifts in memory of loved ones or friends, should send the memorials to the Heart Association, 204 North Colorado Street, Midland. The telephone number is 2-7701.

Personal notes on appropriate stationery are sent by Mrs. Oles upon receipt of all memorials. Amounts are not mentioned, she said.

The memorial funds, Mrs. Oles explained, are deposited in a separate account and are used only for research.

The Heart Association, headed by Dr. Fred W. Gaarde, hopes eventually to establish a rehabilitation center here.

Dr. Glenn Walker of Midland is a director of the Texas Heart Association.

1,000 Students Will Participate In Two-Day Music Festival Here

More than 1,000 students will participate in the two-day City School Music Festival to be staged in the auditorium of Midland High School Thursday and Friday. The annual festival, a highlight of Midland school activities each year, will feature performances by bands, choirs, and dancing and folk singing groups.

The elementary school festival will get underway at 8 a.m. Thursday with a folk festival in which the city's eight elementary schools will present folk songs, dances, and games characteristic of eight different countries. Almost 500 children will participate.

The A Cappella and girls choirs will perform on stage for the high school, while each junior high school will have a mixed choir, a boys choir and a girls choir. Each group will sing separately. The grand finale Friday night will be a dual performance by the high school band and A Cappella Choir.

The elementary pageant should prove entertaining and enlightening," said Robert C. Michener, music consultant for the Midland public schools. "For example, the Sam Houston school students will wear the costumes of Scotland while they do a highland fling and the Lamar pupils will perform a Maypole dance representative of England."

The high school and junior high school presentation will start at 8 p.m. Friday with choirs and bands from the schools participating.

The Cowden Junior High School choral directors are Mrs. Sarah Ann Macina and Anna Louise Patterson. Robert Gans is band director.

Patricia Lindsey and Mrs. Martha Hall are choral directors at San Jacinto Junior High School, where Ted James is the band director.

The Midland High School band is under the direction of Ralph Mills and Michener is choral director.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Thorp were recent visitors in Harrison, Ark., with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. McCutcheon.

The entire court was presented again Saturday night at the Queen's Ball, the feature dance of the weekend. Best races throughout the weekend are a featured attraction of the festival.

Lubbock School Man To Speak At P-TA Meet

The San Jacinto Parent-Teacher Association will install officers and hear an address by Nat Williams, superintendent of Lubbock public schools, at a meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the school auditorium.

Williams, who has been particularly interested in what his teachers and students think about television, will speak on "TV—Its Effects on Our Children—Good and Bad."

Among the information to be discussed will be the educational value teachers place on TV, whether pupls who have access to TV are listless because of loss of sleep and spend less time with homework, and the affect on scholastic averages.

Other questions to be discussed are a television curfew hour for junior high school students, the advisability of adjusting the school work load to make allowance for TV, and the role of parents in securing educational TV facilities for the community.

Williams has been a school superintendent for 24 years. He served in Gladewater and Abilene before going to Lubbock two years ago. He holds a BA degree from Hardin-Simmons University, Abilene, and an MA degree from the University of Texas, Austin.

In addition to the installation ceremony the audience Tuesday will be given an opportunity to list suggestions for P-TA programs for next year. Special music will feature a clarinet quartet from the San Jacinto band.

Organizations In Midland Aid Abilene State Hospital

The Abilene State Hospital recently praised several Midland organizations who are participating in the volunteer program for the hospital, which is holding its annual observance of National Hospital and Visitation Day Sunday, May 10.

Midland organizations and individuals cited by Dr. William T. Lawler, Director of Education and Coordinator of Auxiliary Services of the Hospital, are the West Side Home Demonstration Club of Midland, The Business and Professional Women's Club of Midland, Mrs. A. C. Telford of Midland and others of Midland County.

Dr. Lawler said that last year's observance was very successful with 1,834 visitors registered.

The hospital is the diagnostic and treatment center for all epileptics in Texas and the most modern diagnostic and treatment methods are used. The purpose of Hospital Day is to encourage friends and relatives to visit their people in the hospital and acquaint the public with the program that is being carried on in Texas for these unfortunate, and to bring as much of the outside world as possible into the hospital thereby helping the patients to enjoy a more normal existence.

Membership in the Abilene State Hospital Auxiliary is classified under three groups:

1. Contributing members who give their time in actually working with the patients' Recreation Program and also pay their dues to help with the financial obligations involved in this work.
2. Donating members who live away from the Hospital vicinity but who pay their dues and gather donated articles from their friends and send to the Hospital. These articles may include new or good used clothing, radios, magazines, books, costume jewelry, toys, and other prizes and gifts. All clothing received is fitted properly for the patients. All sizes are needed so the sender need not worry about what size to send.
3. Members at large who live too far away from the Hospital to belong to either of the other groups but who want to contribute in some way to such a program. They send in cash contributions and help get other members who can help in some way.

All correspondence should be sent to: Abilene State Hospital Auxiliary, care William T. Lawler, Box 451, Abilene.

Nadja Buckley's Jewel Designs To Be Shown

Nadja Buckley, noted jewelry designer, arrived in Midland Friday for a visit of several days as a part of her first Texas tour.

About 200 Midlanders have been sent invitations to meet Miss Buckley at a cocktail party and showing of her one-of-a-kind jewelry collection from 6 until 8 p.m. Sunday in Parlor A of Hotel Scharbauer.

Miss Buckley, who is both a designer and manufacturer of jewelry, came to Midland from Dallas, where she held private showings and opened a shop.

She started her career as a jewelry designer 12 years ago while she was living in Brazil. She purchased what she called a "salad of gems"—topazes, aquamarines, amethysts and other uncut stones of all sizes and shapes.

Back in New York, she began creating settings for the jewels and soon acquired a reputation as a trend setting creator in modern jewelry design.

Some of her designs have included jeweled bracelet-disks, out-size tags for charm bracelets, the jeweled safety pin and very large single stone rings using chunky unpolished stones.

Record Enrollment Forecast For Summer School Here

Summer school for Midland Public schools anticipates its largest enrollment, according to Frank Monroe, school superintendent. Registration for Summer classes begins May 29 at the Senior High School building, Room 128, he said. Classes will be held daily during the morning hours from Monday through Friday for eight weeks. Courses offered for this Summer include Senior and Junior High courses in mathematics, English, history, and typing. Work in the Elementary grades will be offered according to demand, Monroe said. Detailed information may be obtained by calling the principal's office at the High School, telephone 2-1812.

Many students attend Summer school to earn an extra credit so that they may have time during the regular school session for such subjects as dramatics, speech, art, French, and mechanical drawing. For some it is an opportunity to make up work they were unable to complete during the regular term. For others it is a chance to become stronger in the subject in which they are weakest.

Well-Organized Plans, Chores Result In Pleasant Moving Day

This young homemaker simplifies moving day chores with use of clear tape. She avoids work involved in removing contents of dresser drawers (left) by sealing each drawer with strips of clear tape. Drawers are then fastened to cabinet at each end with two strips of tape. Arrived in her new home (right), she protects walls as she hangs pictures. To prevent unsightly cracks in plaster when she drives nails, she uses a criss-cross of tape over spot where nail is to be driven.

By GAILE DOUGLAS
NEA Woman's Editor

Moving is a task that practically nobody enjoys except people who don't have to move. They can look on and feel smug.

Some of these non-packers may include husbands and children, both given to rousing on rubbish about to be discarded, meanwhile yelling: "You can't throw that out! That's my college pendant!" (Class of '08). Or: "I wanna keep my stuffed toy!"

This sort of thing will get you nowhere. So, we offer an assist in the way of handy hints on moving. First things first. And the very first of these is to set aside one packing case for those articles you'll need immediately on arrival in your new home.

This means blankets, sheets, pillowcases, towels, washcloths, soap, light bulbs, flatware, coffee pot, cups and saucers and plates, plus a can of coffee. That way, you can count on having a cup of coffee in your new surroundings before you dig in.

If you're not having professional packers, ask your moving man to supply you with as many packing boxes and barrels as you think you'll need. (You'll need more than you think you will.)

Collect a good supply of newspapers and tissue papers to wrap all breakables both singly and well. Cushion them with wads of papers; put pillows and blankets in the bottom of the barrel.

If you have six rooms or so of furniture, plan to move in the morning when your energy and that of the moving men is highest. This way, you save on overcharges and get a definite time of arrival of the van.

Be sure to have everything packed and ready to go when the men come. Otherwise, you'll find they may be inclined to carry out one thing at a time—a mop, a broom, a powder puff.

Don't forget to notify utilities—gas, water, electricity, telephone as well as milkman and laundry. Be sure to arrange to have your newspaper sent to your new address and notify your bank, charge accounts and insurance company.

You're all set now. Have a good time and don't work too hard. If you follow our hints faithfully and something goes wrong, we'll be out of touch. We're moving, too. To the South Seas.

Q. How can you soothe tired and weary skin without using many cream or ointments?

Manners MAKE FRIENDS

When you're asked to do a job for a club or organization either take it or leave it. Nothing is more trying for a president or chairman than having a person say "I don't see how I can manage it—but maybe I can get it done somehow" or "Well, if you can't find anyone else I suppose I can do it." A grudging "yes" is almost as discouraging as a "no."

Frank Fletcher Elkins Will Observe Golden Wedding Anniversary Here On Wednesday

Lula Bush and Frank Fletcher Elkin were married May 6, 1903, in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Bush, in Allen, Collin County.

Wednesday will mark the fiftieth anniversary of that event as the happy bride and groom of a half century ago observe their golden wedding anniversary in their home, 1206 Princeton Street.

Most of those 50 years, Mr. and Mrs. Elkin have spent in Midland, where they have resided since Jan. 23, 1907.

They have seen Midland develop from a small ranch town into the thriving and prosperous headquarters city of the Permian Basin Empire—and, more than that, they have had prominent roles in the growth and expansion of the city, county and area.

Quiet Observance Planned
Mr. and Mrs. Elkin will observe their fiftieth wedding anniversary quietly, due to the illness of Mrs. Elkin, with only their son and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Bush Elkin, and children, Virginia and Frank, being present. The pioneer Midlanders were visited in March by their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Kennett, and children, Lawrence, Mary and Dorothy, of New York City.

Bush Elkin is baking the golden wedding anniversary cake for his parents.

Mrs. Frank Elkin's corsage will be of Golden Fabric—the one brought her by Mrs. Charles Goldsmith and Mrs. Guy Cowden from the golden anniversary tea held recently by the Woman's Wednesday Club.

But back to the Bush-Elkin wedding of May 6, 1903. The Rev. R. D. Shults of Van Alstine, a relative of the family performed the ceremony. Willie Mae Scott of McKinney, a friend of the bride, accompanied by Priscie Bush, a sister of the bride, played the wedding march. The couple was attended by Bettie Bush, another sister of the bride, and Walter Haggard of Plano, a friend of both families. Mrs. John Greene of Allen, a cousin of the bride, had charge of the guest register. Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the home.

The Elkin and Bush families had migrated from Kentucky to Texas in 1853, settling in Collin County, only a few years after Texas became a state. There was not a railroad in Texas at the time.

TCU Class of '08
Frank Elkin was one of four graduates of the Class of 1898 at Texas Christian University. He was business manager of TCU's first annual, the Horned Frog, and was a member of the university's first football team and first glee club. The football team, he recalls, later took its name from the annual.

Mrs. Elkin attended TCU one year and Randolph College two years. Mr. and Mrs. Elkin spent their wedding trip in Galveston, San Antonio and Austin. They then established their first home at Roby, Fisher County, where in 1898, Henry James of Abilene, Elkin, his father, E. F. Elkin, and his brother, W. B. Elkin, organized a bank. Frank became cashier of the bank in 1903 as brother, W. B., was leaving for Midland. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Elkin lived in Roby three years and in Abilene, where he was connected with the Citizens National Bank, one year.

They moved here from Abilene in 1907, and have resided here continuously since that time. He has had business interests in Midland since July, 1903, when E. F. Elkin, his sons, Frank and W. B., and Ed S. Hughes and Henry James of Abilene, along with a group of Midland citizens, organized The Midland National Bank. The Midland group included J. R. Dublin, Dell Dublin, D. W. Brunson, W. H. Brunson, Earl Holloway, S. H. Holloway, W. K. Curtis, Ed M. Whitaker, S. B. Tullous, W. H. Pepper, Mrs. M. J. Riggs, and L. A. Webb.

Mr. and Mrs. Elkin located immediately on bonus school land they purchased six miles east of Midland. An employe, Albert L. Stewart, preceded them here a few days with their belongings—the main item, they recall, being a barrel of fresh hog meat.

Mr. and Mrs. Elkin . . . Fifty years ago

The Elkin's bonus house was the first one built in Midland by Jess Barber, pioneer Midland builder, and his brother.

Pioneer Church Members
Mr. and Mrs. Elkin placed their church membership with the First Christian Church, which then was meeting in Midland's second courthouse, while the church at the corner of Loraine and Illinois Streets (recently demolished) was being constructed.

Elkin, although quite modest about it, long has been one of Midland's number one boosters. He also has been identified prominently with the growth and development of the city and section through his interests in banking, real estate development, ranching and farming.

CAMPUS QUEEN—Marianne Broden of Houston, senior student in Austin College, Sherman, was crowned queen of the college in a traditional May pageant Friday.

He helped sponsor and promote the county's first farm display at the State Fair of Texas.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Elkin recall many interesting incidents in the early days of Midland and of West Texas.

They remember the first automobile which chugged down the street in front of their house. "Lula, we'll never ride in one of those things," Mrs. Elkin quotes her husband as saying.

They also remember seeing their first airplane here. Planes occasionally would come to Midland on Sunday afternoons to take passengers for a ride over the city, they recall.

Their son, Bush, incidentally, purchased the first commercial airline passenger ticket out of Midland—bound for Dallas. He later wrote the airline requesting return of the ticket as a souvenir. He still has it.

The Elkins kept house here 18 years before they had electricity. Horse And Buggy Days
Mrs. Elkin said that during the horse and buggy days, how a woman got in and out of her buggy and how she handled her reins as well as such an art how she carried her dress train. She believes that Holt Jewell's mother was the most graceful.

Dr. John B. Thomas, now retired, was the Elkin's first family doctor here.

Mrs. Elkin said she always liked for Addison Wadley, retired merchant, who, as a youth, worked in the J. H. Barron Dry Goods Store, to wait on her. She said young Addison Wadley was "efficient and just about as quick as lightning."

"Neither Dr. Thomas or Addison Wadley were married when we first knew them," the Elkins said.

"Store clerks in those days almost ran over each other to meet you at the door to ask, 'What can I show you?'"
Mrs. Elkin recalls that she once had quite a time making up her mind to pay $1250 for a pair of blankets offered her by the late T. S. Patterson, pioneer merchant, and father of Mrs. Joe Youngblood. The blankets, incidentally, lasted until a few years ago.

"The morning of Nov. 11, 1918," the pioneer residents recall, "Midland was in a loud stir; bells ringing, whistles blowing and horns honking."

"First we knew what really was happening was when Mrs. J. O. Nobles drove up in front of our house, honked her auto horn and shouted, 'Armistice is signed!'"

Things To Come
A foretaste of things to come for the young bride of 50 years ago was when she was unable to locate the bridegroom during the wedding reception. When she did find him, he had a man cornered on the back porch closing a deal for land in Lubbock County. Mrs. Elkin terms that her "most embarrassing moment."

Elkin says his hobby is raising registered Aberdeen Angus cattle. People are Mrs. Elkin's hobby.

"I love people," Mrs. Elkin stated. "Each person has a fine quality or qualities."

Thinking back over the years and speaking for her husband as well as for herself, Mrs. Elkin said, "When one moves from Midland, one generally is accosted, 'You'll be back.'"

Recently during these dry years, with the sandstorms, tumbleweeds and all, I remarked to our pioneer friend, Mrs. Frank Ingham, that if I had not lived here 46 years I think I'd leave. She replied, "You would be back."

"And I guess that's right. After all is said and done, Midland and Midland people are the greatest."

"To be celebrating our fiftieth wedding anniversary so privately, although so joyously, also is lonely without our friends and relatives. We can assure them all, however, that we have experienced enough clouds, during 50 years of abundant sunshine, to enjoy the beautiful sunset."

GIRL SCOUTS MEET
Mrs. M. H. Ball displayed a group of weather flags when Intermediate Girl Scout Troop 77 met Wednesday in the Little House. Refreshments were served by Sandra Miller to approximately 19 members.

Writer's Advice Troubles Reader

Joe S. Doakes, a reader of this paper, feels that in the best interest of all subscribers some of the columnists should be exposed. Mr. Doakes has taken the attitude that all is not as it should be. In fairness to our readers we think we should explain Mr. Doakes' position.

Just before the first rain of this year, Joe drops into the store and orders himself a few bags of that wonderful Turf Special. He put it on the lawn as he told him. Then it rained. Then Joe watered his lawn a little. A couple of weeks ago we had another good rain. He followed our advice, and got himself into trouble.

A week ago Joe was back in the store. "What," says he, "am I gonna do with my lawn?" We put on our best look of innocence and queried, "Whassa matta, Joe?" "Matter," he retorts, "how do I get rid of that gorgeous grass that is ankle high from that Turf Special treatment?" "Yep, you guessed it! We had him in the nine hole, and he had to listen to us again. Know what? Joe's got a beautiful Jacobsen gasoline mower now. He says that it is as good as his lawn, the best there is. Maybe you think we don't work both sides of the street!"

GUESTS IN HENDERSON HOME

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Stephenson arrived Thursday night from Jackson, Miss., for a few weeks visit with their daughter, Mrs. Charles F. Henderson and family.

Ruth Millett
Here Is How Husbands Feel About Junk-Gathering Wives

According to my men readers, what the American home needs more than anything else is an annual "throw-away week."

The way we women hang onto useless junk, according to the men, is a crime and a shame.

Their letters poured in after a recent column of mine decrying the lack of storage space in the average modern house. Even an architect joined in the chorus, writing: "No matter how much storage space a woman had she would never have enough for all the junk she insists on saving."

Here's a typical letter on the subject:

"You ought to write an article on the women who save things, all kinds of things. They manage to fill desk drawers, closets, cellars, attics, and everything else that has a horizontal surface, with a variety of objects which could only be duplicated in a museum, a curio shop, or a junk collection."

"My wife collects magazines. I find them on radiator covers, inside closets, down in the cellar, on the trunk. She would as soon part with one as her right arm. She doesn't look at them after reading them once; she just keeps them—here, there and everywhere."

"She also saves clippings—all kinds on all sorts of subjects. They stick out of the strangest places. At least they prevent drawers from rattling. In addition she keeps bits of string, menus, theater programs, letters, anniversary cards, ribbon from packages."

"I mustn't forget those boxes of all sizes and shapes in the cellar. Oh yes, and the sewing she is going to do but hasn't gotten around to yet. All these articles must, simply must, be saved because 'Everything has a use if you save it long enough' is my wife's motto."

And here's the postscript: "Please, please don't mention my name. I love my wife. But I would like to see you publicize this masculine view of women and their collecting ways."

Well, there it is. If it describes you it could be that your husband is the man who wrote the letter. Only don't accuse him of it. Instead, surprise him by announcing a family "throw-away week."

Mrs. Porter Is HD Club Hostess

Pauline Williams, county home demonstration agent, gave a demonstration on making belts and interfacing skirt bands. A report on the district meeting of the Texas Home Demonstration Association was given by Mrs. J. E. Cassidy.

It was announced that Mrs. Archie Booth will be hostess for the May 15 meeting, when Mrs. J. D. Bartlett, Mrs. Cassidy and Mrs. W. M. Maxey will give demonstrations on laying patterns, cutting, marketing and stay stitching a garment and the selection of patterns.

Present Friday were Miss McWilliams, Mrs. Bartlett, Mrs. Cassidy, Mrs. Maxey, Mrs. J. T. Flowers, Mrs. A. C. Teinert, Mrs. W. S. Hudson, Mrs. I. J. Howard and Mrs. B. L. Mason.

Educational TV Debut Postponed

HOUSTON—A rain-dampened coaxial cable has forced indefinite postponement of the nation's first educational television station opening.

Manager John Schwarzwalder of KUHT on the University of Houston campus said somebody in Massachusetts left the coaxial cable of the station's antenna exposed to rain.

"Now all the moisture must be baked out before the antenna will be in shape to operate," Schwarzwalder said. He said he will be lucky to get a test pattern on the air by May 14. All equipment has been installed except for the antenna.

From Fear to Freedom

For those facing fear and trouble, the door of Truth is open today as never before, and man-made measurements of hope and health can no longer shut it.

A great book, the Christian Science textbook

SCIENCE and HEALTH WITH KEY TO THE SCRIPTURES by Mary Baker Eddy

is clearly explaining the inspiring truth and thereby opening the way to freedom.

In a plain way it is showing how the Bible promises can be made practical in daily life. It shows what real freedom is and how it can be won.

Many are turning today to this great book, stepping thankfully through the door of promise into their God-given heritage of freedom. It may be read, borrowed or bought at

Youth Building Dedication Slated By Midland Church

Dedication ceremonies at 3 p.m. Sunday at the First Christian Church will climax five years of planning and work on the new $40,000 Youth Building at the corner of G Street and Louisiana Avenue.

Tommie Bouchard of Fort Worth, state director of Youth for the Christian Churches, will give the principal dedication address. He is associated with the Texas Christian Missionary Society in Fort Worth.

Also featured on the dedication program will be Bill Harrison, state president of the Christian Youth Fellowship groups and a student at Texas Christian University.

The new brick and tile structure near the church has been used since February 1 for Sunday School classrooms for the Junior High and Senior High Young People.

In the completely air-conditioned building are assembly rooms, a large play room, class rooms, a lounge, fully equipped kitchen, janitors storage room, photography dark room, Boy Scout room, and an office for the Rev. Ray W. Frotzman, associate pastor and youth director. A large fireplace has been placed in the play room.

The center has facilities for basketball, volleyball, badminton, shuffleboard, table tennis, pocket billiards, table games, roller skating, arts and crafts and photography projects.

Christian Youth Fellowship groups will use the building for their meetings and special activities.

Pastor of the First Christian Church is the Rev. Clyde Lindsley. Clark Steinberger was chairman of the church Board of Directors when plans were started for the building. Since then, W. F. Z. Jr., has succeeded him in that position. Guiding the building committee was Dr. J. O. Shannon. Guy Breneman, was contractor in charge while Joe Bill Pierce aided in planning the architecture of the structure.

The Youth Activities Committee includes Earl Ridge, chairman; Mrs. Delbert Downing, vice chairman; Mrs. Tom Campbell, Mrs. Jennie Guthrie, Mrs. R. E. Dupuy, H. G. Bedford, Audrey Gill, Tom Potter, and Clarence Symes.

Program feature Wednesday will be the last film of the current series on the 1952 football season schedule—the games between Stanford and Washington State and Stanford and Santa Clara.

Officials ask that all club members attend. Guests also are invited.

Sticky Beer Strikes Note

MUNICH—(AP)—Five Bavarians stood solemnly by as two brewers poured dark, heavy beer over a wooden bench.

At a signal, the five marched over the bench, sat down in the beer and waited. Presently they rose. The bench rose with them, stuck fast to their leather pants. Everybody cheered.

It meant that Malbeck beer was ready for drinking.

Malbeck, a Spring brew, has a strong, 18.5 alcoholic percentage but it must have the proper body to be ready for the steins. It was first brewed here in 1614. They've been "stealing it every year with the 'slinging down' ceremony.

600 Participate In Girl Scout May Day Festival

Approximately 600 Midland Brownies, Girl Scouts and guests participated in the May Day Festival held Friday in the high school stadium by the city's 61 Brownie and Girl Scout troops.

Wesley Martin served as field commentator for the event, which featured games and songs that are a part of the Girl Scout camping program. Mrs. Deryl Bishop, acting Girl Scout field director, led the songs.

Preceding the songs and games the Brownies and Girl Scouts gave the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag and reaffirmed their scout promise. Forming the color guard were Mary Louise Erskine, Zola Morgan and Evelyn Jackson.

Climaxing the event, the girls formed a double friendship circle, using colored streamers to suggest a Maypole.

Senior Girl Scouts served as consultants and program aids for the younger girls. Also recognized during the festival were the 110 adult leaders who assist with the Brownie and Girl Scout troops.

This photographic portrait is one of five prints exhibited recently at the Southwestern Photographers' Association Convention at Fort Worth.

SAM WILBOURNE, representative of Eastman Kodak Company. Mr. Wilbourne visits Midland several times each year and resides in San Antonio, Texas.

The print is a Nelson Goldtone, printed on tapestry paper. The tapestry finish is desirable for a broad treatment of a masculine subject. Tapestry is one of several texture finishes available in the Nelson Goldtone.

The gold leaf frame is of traditional design. The small bead liners add to the frame details without distraction. This frame is just one of several dozen patterns on display at the studio.

Only 'Federal' Left Looks Back On Civil War History

DULUTH, MINN. —(P)—The old soldier peered through a lace-curtained window into the muddy street. His eyes sparkled at traces of an overnight snowfall. "It's Old Man Winter's last kick," he boomed with a chuckle.

This is the 107th Spring for Albert Henry Woolson, lone survivor of the Union Army in the Civil War, sole living member of the Grand Army of the Republic.

With Winter dying, old Albert Woolson was "feeling like a million" and amazing all who saw him with his firm handshake, his resounding voice, his persistent good health and his mind with a century of memories.

The ranks of the 2,675,000 boys in blue who went south to save the Union have dwindled to one—drummer boy Woolson, who put on his uniform Oct. 4, 1864, at the age of 17 as a "volunteer private."

Woolson's last comrade, James A. Hard, Rochester, N. Y., died March 12 at 111.

For those who come to visit in his modest brick home near Lake Superior's shores, Woolson relates the often time-clouded events of his life, which began more than 106 years ago—Feb. 11, 1847.

Fingering a cigar in a steady, vein-lined hand, he rocks, gently

QUAKER MISSION OF MERCY Funds For South Koreans Sought In Midland Area

"Help South Korea" is the battle cry of the American Friends Service Committee (Quakers) as it conducts a nation-wide campaign for funds with which to finance an all-out program of relief in that war-torn country.

"It is a drive in which everyone is invited to help," Adam Ristad of the Southwest regional office of Quakers, Austin, said here Friday afternoon.

"Among all of the earth's underprivileged and distressed peoples, the worst off are the South Koreans," he declared, in stating the plight of the South Koreans and explaining what the Quakers plan to do to aid them.

"Approximately 21,000,000 persons are crowded into South Korea, a little country which, even under favorable conditions could not produce food for half that many inhabitants—not even a subsistence rice diet," Ristad declared.

Two Million Refugees
 He went on to explain that 2,700,000 of these persons are refugees, and that almost half of the native population, some 10,000,000 persons, have lost their homes. The Koreans do not have sufficient clothing and their general condition is far from standard.

Realizing all these things, the Quakers, after thorough study, have decided medical relief, along with general relief and welfare work, is the thing most needed, Ristad said. The American Friends Service Committee is out to accomplish its mission, with the help of American citizens generally.

The first Quaker personnel to South Korea will be doctors and nurses, whose initial job will be to institute intensive training programs for Korean medical technicians and hospital workers. Supplementary feeding of children, day care nurseries and other community services will follow.

Only 64 general hospitals, all under-staffed and ill-equipped, now are operating in South Korea.

Midland Chairman Named
 The Quakers estimate that for the first eight months this mission of mercy will require $75,000.

Ristad spent several days in Midland to acquaint citizens with the mission of mercy and to seek financial support.

He said that Earle M. Craig, Jr., independent oil operator, has agreed to accept contributions which will be forwarded to the Southwest headquarters.

Persons desiring to aid in the Quaker-sponsored South Korean mission are requested to send their cash gifts to Mr. Craig, 108 Wilkinson-Foster Building, Midland.

BULLDOG EDITORIAL

Midland is the State Student Council President. This is a big job. It means that Midland's president virtually will be in charge of next year's meeting in addition to the many things that will happen throughout the year concerning the Texas Association of Student Councils.

Besides all this, there are the dozens of duties that will have to be carried on in high school.

The person who holds this office evidently will be a very busy person. He must be a competent one. The main thing to keep in mind while voting for Student Council president is, "Is he capable of handling this job well?" Although John Smith might have a wonderful personality, is he acquainted with parliamentary procedure? This is vitally important, as Midland will be in charge of the meetings next year. Mary Brown may make a point of always speaking to everyone; but does she have stage presence, could she introduce a speaker successfully?

Ability, sincerity, integrity and interest in the job should all be taken into consideration when voting for Student Council president.—Sherry Page.

VIA THE GRAPEVINE

By CAROL GARRISON and MARY JANE MILLER

There are only 18 more school days for the seniors! And only 104 days, 6,240 minutes and 384,400 more seconds. You notice how anxious we are!

Mrs. Floyd Simons, the former Georgie Gately, is the proud mother of a baby boy born April 1. They named the boy Johnny Len Simons. Georgia is a student in Midland High last year.

It seems as though Rosanne Yearby, Janada Wilcox, Ann Shelton, Shirley Burnham and Faye Henshaw had a wonderful time pushing their car out at the Chief Drive in the other night.

Mary Jane Miller and Dona Ingham spent the weekend in Lubbock. They took in all of the activities of Western Week at Tech. It seems they had quite a time!

Barbara McMillan and Carol Garrison spent the weekend at Austin. Carol went to a dance at Shriner and Barbara visited Marion Sever, a former MHS student, who is attending the University of Texas.

Sadie Nugent, Jimmie Counts, John Petty and Tommie Underwood went to the Counts' ranch this weekend. It is about 30 miles from Uvalde.

We wonder where the key to the organ was Friday night. Could be Gerry Gesler had it in his pocket at the drive in theater.

Golly Burns, the invitations going around! Everyone is celebrating the end of school or something to that effect. Why don't we just dispense with six weeks-exams and mid-term exams, and let everyone party? What a question.

Everyone that is going to work this summer is madly applying for jobs. A lot of the kids are going to work in the oil fields, and type, and work out of town.

Sand, sand, sand, sand and more sand. That is all we have to say about the situation concerning the sand, sandstorms and more sand. All we need is a lake, or some water and we will have a swell beach. Oh well, wishful thinking.

Katherine Carter visited the Art Department of Texas Western College of the University Texas at El Paso last weekend. Next week a detailed report of Katherine's trip will appear in this column.

A fellow journalism student, Don Dwight, is the Kullbrite of the week. Don is to be lauded for his service to MHS in the field of journalism. Don is on Who's Who, a member of the National Honor Society, and a member of the Order of DeMolay.

A week ago Saturday speech history was made at Lubbock. Charles Whitmore took first place.

"Young man, do you think you should be taking my daughter to the show every night?"

"No," answered the boy. "Let's try to reason with her."

Joe: "My girl is a saint."

Mo: "How do you tell them apart?"

Joe: "Her brother is a little smaller."

Boy: "Do you think you could learn to love me?"

Girl: "Well, I've learned short-hand."

Roddie: "Did you take my time?"

Timekeeper: "I didn't have to you took it yourself."

Lieutenant (roaring at the steward, with rage): "Who told you to put those flowers on the table?"

Steward: "The commander, sir."

Lieutenant: "Pretty, aren't they?"

"I've never seen such dreamy eyes before."

"You've never stayed so late."

He: "You are the sunshine of my life! You alone are my heart. Without you, life is but a dreamy cloud."

Educator Enigma

This week we are having a mystery teacher instead of a student. Try your hand at guessing who it is. She is a very well-liked teacher from Hugo, Okla., who came to Midland in the Fall of 1949 and has been teaching here ever since.

She got her AB degree from West Texas State College and her MA from Greeley, Colo.

Some of her college activities were, in addition to having two majors and three minors, president of the Dramatic Club and Secretary of the Art Club. She is now the National Secretary of the Sixth Province of Delta Sigma Epsilon.

Last week's Mystery Student was Walt Chambers, guessed by Julie Owepe.

Death Rides The Highway

By PAXTON HOWARD
Driving by night across the arid flats of Utah generally could be classified as a laxy assignment. The stretch of road is long and straight and there is not much traffic about three in the morning. I had driven for quite a while that day. Starting at Reno, Nev., some 500 miles away and driving at a torturing speed, except for brief stops at our field offices on this highway, I was near exhaustion. Salt Lake was just two hours away and then home. This would be my last trip for a while. My boss had promised me a two week vacation as soon as I completed this assignment.

I was driving alone. It was a lonely job, with only a friendly radio announcer as my companion. He was playing records for all the drivers like me. If it were not for my radio I might have fallen asleep. Seidom did I meet another car on this road. Usually their oncoming lights tended to keep me awake, but tonight there was no oncoming light. I glanced at the dashboard clock. It was 2:30 a.m. I hadn't seen a car in 20 minutes and I was feeling extremely drowsy.

The minutes dragged on and soon my friend of the radio became still. Lucky man, he could go home now. I still had 90 miles before me. My bed seemed as distant as the moon, and I was getting more weary with each mile. The tires hummed as they ate away the road. Over and over they turned—yet apparently achieving nothing in their monotonous and endless quest against distance.

"What if I were to fall asleep while driving?" I asked myself. "The police would find me early in the morning." I replied. Then I could have no vacation—just eternal sleep. The thought of death on the highway passed through my mind. I must keep awake. I have no choice. I honked the horn just to keep my ears awake. I tuned my radio to an all-night program in Los Angeles, and I was no longer alone in the car.

While I had been fooling with the radio, I had become aware of a pair of red taillights less than a mile ahead of me. At least I didn't have a monopoly on the road. I had company on this lonely stretch. The scenery was leveling out considerably until the highway was almost flat again. I was steadily catching the car ahead of me, for in haste to get home my foot had pressed ever steadily on the accelerator. I was pushing '75 when I came within sight of my companions on the road.

The moonlight silhouetted against the tail-lighted object. It was a large dark car with an out-of-state license. It was in no hurry, it appeared to me, though it was obviously a high-powered job. Soon I would pass it and in a few minutes be alone again on the highway.

Suddenly the preceding car swerved and began weaving as if keeping time to music. My driver's pass passed as if I had stepped into a shower, for the moonlight caught and reflected the glitter of a metal object being thrown from the car. Yes, why hadn't I noticed that before. The occupants of this leading car had been hurling beer cans out of the car. The tinkle of the cans on the pavement clarified my apprehension. Fear edged my heart. What if they were drunk? As close as I am to them any sudden action on their part would endanger me.

I decided to pass these intruders. As I started to swing around them, I checked the scene for coming vehicles in the distance. I had, perhaps, 80 seconds in which to safely pass these objectionable characters. I depressed the gas even more. As my car reacted to my command, the other car rapidly increasing its speed to that of mine. No more was I drowsy, for I saw now what their game was. The drunk and his companions were not going to let me pass. I decreased my speed. They slowed also. I was fully abreast of the car alongside me. Three small red spots of light glowed inside. That meant at least three persons were in the car. One threw another can. It was aimed at me.

but it failed to hit its mark. I tried desperately to get back into my driving lane for the headlights before me were rapidly growing larger. Instinctively I slowed my car. I could not outmaneuver this wizard at the wheel, for my old company car was years behind in design and power compared to his. My car was heavier than this other demon though. I kept that thought stored in my mind.

I would have to decide upon my plan of action within a half of a minute. The ominous headlights before me were growing nearer and blinking harder with every revolution of the wheels. Why must that approaching motorist be jowling at the same moment I am? I couldn't blame him. His fear must equal mine. Probably it was some fellow with his wife and children. My decision should be influenced by their safety, too. The shoulders of the road were extremely poor. If I pulled off of the road to the left, the oncoming motorist might become confused and dart right into me. I glanced to my right again at the driver racing beside me. The moonlight showed me a face that was set and determined. A drunken motive was behind his actions. He was not going to let me pass. A rider in the car laughed and pointed his finger at me, for I was certainly the picture of fear itself.

A quarter of a minute stood between me and death. Wasn't I going to reach my bed? Wasn't I going to get my vacation I had counted on?

My decision was made. I must act fast though. I slowed my speed—so did my oppressors. With a lightning fast movement, I shifted into second gear. My car reacted and I was suddenly a very few feet ahead of them. Before they could counter my movement, I pulled hard on the wheel to the right and pushed the gas to the floor. Metal ground and brakes and tires screamed in agony as our cars collided. The force of my cross movement pushed both of us off the road and the oncoming motorist slid by.

A forceful hand moving across my bleeding face roused me. "This one's alive, Joe," said a strange voice. I opened the eye which was not closed by a vicious bruise. It was a police officer who held me. He skillfully applied a compress to my forehead. I tried to speak. Pain pierced my throat, but I managed to inquire of the others. "All dead—hit a telephone pole. They were drunk." Was my reward for the inquiring about the oncoming motorist. "They're fine—just scared stiff. They stopped up and told us the whole story. You'll be okay, Buddy. Don't worry."

Again I was weary and I had no choice but to pass into a deep sleep, remembering only the word of the Good Samaritan patrolman. "You'll be okay, Buddy. You'll be okay." And then I slept.

Happy Cheerleaders Are Crew Of Experienced Noise-Makers

By NELL CURRAN
On Friday, April 24, we heard these words over the loudspeaker: "Cheerleaders for the 1953-54 season will be: Head cheerleader—Janna Murray and the others will be: Wanda Murray, Ray Miles, John Blackmon, Tom Dyer and Fifi Pryor."

We are sure you know all these people, and now we are going to tell you a little more about each one of them.

Our head cheerleader will be Janna Murray, a junior who hails from Pampa. Besides living in Pampa and Midland, she also has lived in Texas, Arkansas and Fort Smith. Ark. Janna has plenty of experience as she was also a cheerleader for two years in junior high. Some of her favorites are: pasture—riding horses, food—pecan pie, and person—Coach Mashburn. Her schedule consists of man's home room. Some of her activities are being one of our star members of the tennis team, the secretary of her home room, and the reporter of the Pan-American Club. When asked what she thought about being elected, she said, "It's just about the most wonderful thing in the world."

Right next in line to her sister is our lone sophomore cheerleader, Wanda Murray. She was born in American history, typing, English, Spanish, plane geometry and tennis. She is a member of Mr. Feld's same place and has lived in the same places as Janna and she was also a cheerleader for two years in junior high. Her favorites are: riding horses, chocolate pie, and Coach Rutledge. She is also on the tennis team, the secretary of her home room, and a member of the Pan-American Club. Her schedule is typing, Spanish, biology, English, plane geometry and tennis. Her home room is "Doc" Grevette. She was "just real, really happy" when she was elected.

John Blackmon, who says his favorites are swimming, corn on the cob and steak and potatoes, and Miss Jackson, is the next to be interviewed. He has lived here in Midland always, he was even born here. His classes are typing, plane geometry, English, American history, and PE. He says, "I didn't know what to think, but I believe I was the happiest person in the world."

Ray Miles was born in Dallas and has lived in Arlington, Odessa, Seminole, Hobbs and Abilene, before finally coming to rest in dear old Midland. He participated in intramural basketball, sergeant at arms of his home room, which is Mr. Ford's. His favorites are swimming, all food, and his mother. He is taking PE, American history, chemistry, plane geometry, English and study hall. When he found out he was cheerleader, he said his brain wasn't working so good, so he didn't know what to think.

Tom Dyer, a native of Southern California who lived there until he moved to Midland in the eighth grade, was a cheerleader last year. He is a member of the DeMolay, Hi-Y, National Honor Society, and Theatians. His favorites are just sitting, rabbit, and any one that is friendly. His schedule consists of American history, typing, English, chemistry, senior English and basketball. The first thought he had after the announcement was, "Now I can go to bed early."

Fifi Pryor, who had five years of experience at cheerleading, three years in junior high, and now two in high school, is an old hand at the business of being a cheerleader. She has many other activities some of them being: vice president of Junior Classical League, Best All-Around girl, played senior singles on the tennis team for two years, is State DeMolay sweetheart, and was an attendant in the Coronation. Her favorites are: dancing, steak and pan-fried potatoes, and Mr. Mashburn. Her reaction was that she was relieved, but tickled to death.

One year ago I was talking to a student about a friend of mine who needed some assistance with his homework. So when I said, "I'm going over to his house tonight and abet him," the student replied, "I didn't know you were a gambler!"

When I asked a speech student how to make a good speech, he said, "Speak straight from the shoulder." I replied, "Wouldn't the speech be more interesting if my remarks started a little higher up?"

During Clean-up Week, many posters about cleanliness were seen in the hall. One of them read, "Don't spit if you expect to rate as a gentleman."

A boy we knew was complaining because of the amusement tax. It seems that it wasn't any laughing matter. And then there's always the person who thinks syntax is a tax he pays for having fun.

Two years ago the English teachers were telling their students that a preposition was a bad word to end a sentence up with.

When you heard a person saying, "Deeds, not words," he probably was planning to be a realist.

Some students who, when given an inch will take a foot, should study to be a chiroprapist.

Many students were worried about making both ends meet when they got out of school. But they shouldn't worry because the only people who ever do are Siamese twins.

From the "daffy-ntions" came this definition of mugwump: "The mugwump is an animal that sits on the fence, with its mug on one side and its stump on the other."

Boys Garner Best Marks Of 'Top 10'

The senior class of MHS went against tradition last week when the names of the 10 students with the highest scholastic averages were announced: the boys predominated over the girls 7-3.

Computed on a basis of the first five six-weeks of the senior year, averages ran from the almost unbelievable high of 89.29 to 92.28. Totals are based on all subjects taken.

Clayton Tatom, who scored the highest of the averages, and Wesley Pittman, who made a second with 96.21, will be valedictorian and salutatorian, respectively, and will speak during the graduation exercises.

The two were followed by Robert Stubbeman with 95.91, Marsha Frick with 95.84, Shirley Pugh with 94.83, Roddy Braun with 94.36, Jean Wadgill with 93.83, Jimmy Smith with 93.25, Bill Robitsek with 93.00, and Bill Aldrich with 92.28.

Averaging was done by Principal Don L. Mitchell, and then approved by the students.

Seniors Set Date For Carlsbad Trip

The senior class held a meeting on April 21, to decide the place for the annual Senior Trip.

Anna Bess Doyle, president, opened the meeting and gave the date of the trip as May 15. Benny Bedford gave a report on possible places for the trip. A motion was made by John McGuigan and seconded by Royce Measures that the one-day trip be to Carlsbad, N. M. The motion carried.

Also the following dates were announced: Junior-Senior Banquet, May 22; Baccalaureate, May 24; Class Day, May 27; and Commencement Exercises, May 28.

Choric Drama Given In Unusual Program

A presentation of choric drama was given by the third period drama club last Wednesday in assembly. They were assisted by the first period speech class and the A Cappella choir.

The selection, "The Voice of America," was written by Elizabeth Welch, and was abridged to allow for the time limit.

Choric drama is a style of reading in which a group of people, actually a choir speak in unison, or in suitable combinations. It is very impressive.

Background music for the patriotic selection was furnished by members of the A Cappella choir conducted by music director R. C. Michener.
