Self-Respect Maintained

Since World War II the United States has admitted hundreds of thousands of political refugees from Europe. trying to help in the colossal world task of making a new home for these tragic folk who walk the earth homeless and jobless.

The uprooting of these people is one of the saddest consequences of the war and the rise of the Russian system of Iron Curtain satellites. And inasmuch as the forces which produce this great floating mass of humanity still are at work, we simply cannot ride on what we have done in the past and say: "There, that's enough."

There are an estimated 30,000,000 refugees and escapees throughout the world, almost 10,000,000 in West Germany alone, where they have streamed through one of the few gaps in the Curtain. There and elsewhere about Europe these people have aggravated over-population problems that years ago became a serious matter.

Recognizing the continuing aspect of this crisis, Presi dent Eisenhower asked Congress to admit another 240,000 fense Wilson's former company. Motors. He acknowledged, however, that the instructions came straight

Congress finally passed a modified version of this proposal, which calls for admission of 214,000 over three

Only by listing the measure as a "must" for this session and exerting strong pressures through his congressional leaders did Eisenhower gain even this much of his goal. For the proposal encountered strong opposition from a coalition of Southern Democrats and right-wing, Midwestern Republicans.

The protest was led by Senator McCarran, Nevada Democrat, who evidently regards any foreigner as a contaminating influence in the American bloodstream, and would have us all forget that America was built by people of other lands. McCarran, a specialist in erecting road- ducing costs has merit, what really that he did not want to sell his blocks, was responsible more than any other man for the raised eyebrows in industrial circles General Motors stock, he said he ters show he's now pushing 53. scaling down of the refugee total in the approved bill.

It is a pity that so much legislative weight is carried by men who, now that their own European ancestors have allowed them to claim America as their home, want to make this nation a sort of exclusive club for the Descendants of Early Immigrants.

Fortunately for our own self-respect as a country celebrated as a haven for the downtrodden, these voices to bid for the right to continue prodid not prevail, though they clamored loud. By a thin ducing It will be left up to Chrysler in Korea margin we maintained our position before the world.

Sip Mint Juleps Without Foliage? It's Done, Anyhow

The man said did I want to try new way of making a mint fulep. It was a silly question because the temperature was 87, the humidity was 90 and, besides, it was hot.

First they said I really ought to see how they made a mint julep, the old-fashioned way. They took some mint leaves and bruised the living chlorophyll out of them. Then they added some sugar and some water and hit 'em again, harder.

This liquor was poured into a glass of crushed ice. Next came a mean-looking hooker of bourbon. This whole mess was stirred up and then they stuck a sprig of mint leaves on top. Jaunty affair "Taste this," said the man.
