SOWING EVIL WINDS.

There are times when the spirits of men are exasperated, as well as times that try men's souls. Sush a time as the former comes when one permits his thoughts to dwell upon the laffer population of a place.

What should be done with the indolent blacks who spin out and neither do they reap, yet who wax round and fat and live upon a bounty that comes from only the good Lord knows where?

It has been truly said, and this truth has been time-tried and has never been found wanting, that an idle brain is the devil's workshop.

The negro population in San Angelo as a whole is a blessing rather than a curse to the place.

San Angelo has its full quota of idle negro women who ought to be made to observe the golden law that by the sweat of the brow shall a living be made.

The Press-News would call on the self-respecting darkies here to take this matter in hand.

Remember the dates--October 5-9--and tell your friends to come to the San Angelo fair.

What San Angelo needs today like she needs nothing else is a sky-line of smokestacks. She needs more men carrying the tin bucket and making the pay roll a mile long.

A brick famine in San Angelo! This is not passing strange. San Angelo is making forward strides that even the natives can not realize.

Ormsby McHarg has resigned his job as assistant secretary of commerce and labor, all on account of a row.

The Press-News loves a fair, square fight. This paper has more respect for men of the stamp and calibre of Dr. Sewell, for instance, than it has for a whole lot of people who happen to entertain the same views held by this paper.

To Col. Sterling P. Strong, dear sir: Don't you want someone to help you turn loose Prof. Ivy?

WAS THAT SOMEBODY YOU?

Somebody's life was naught but care. Somebody's burdens were hard to bear.

Somebody carried a yoke of shame. Somebody lost both fortune and name.

Somebody stumbled along the way. Somebody's feet were going astray.

Somebody heeded the tempter's call. Somebody's life was nearing the fall.

Somebody faltered 'twixt right and wrong. Somebody lent a hand that was strong.

Was that somebody you? --Mrs. Lee Gentry.

The Architect for the Home Builder

(BY F. O. KIRBY.)

There is an old saying to the effect that anything that is worth doing at all is worth doing well. There are exceptions to this rule, since many things are designed to serve only temporary ends and may well be of an improvised character, but the building of a house is not one of them. The short life of many American buildings is chargeable to the improvements in construction and the introduction of new materials and appliances which render them "back numbers" while still maintaining their integrity as buildings. But a much more potent cause is found in the bad methods of building once generally practiced and still altogether too much in evidence.

Too many people fail to appreciate the importance of an architect in the construction of buildings of any importance. This is sometimes due to the egotism of those wishing to possess a house, who fancy themselves quite capable of superintending the work of construction; particularly where they have a stereotyped set of plans that look well in the blue prints. But the chief cause of the ignoring of architects by those bent on building is that they have only a meager idea of what an architect really is, knowing little of the wide scope of duties he is called on to perform. "An architect is one who draws plans for a building." This definition covers the popular idea and for this reason advertised plans, sold at a low figure, seem to meet every requirement and to obviate the necessity of employing an architect.

Such plans are often good, and buildings properly erected after them may meet every requirement, but the work of erection is as important as the preparation of plans. The calling of an architect is very far from being limited to the preparation of building plans; it includes many other things, such as the wide and intimate knowledge of building materials, the proper building methods and the numerous things that go into the finish and equipment of a house.

There are men in the publishing business with the ability and disposition to pay the engraver, printer and binder, but who begin to bungle the moment the question of paying writers and editors arises. Their theory is that well printed and artistically illustrated pages look well, and that small attention need be paid to the subject matter—the copy furnished the compositor. Such publishers always fail, because the enterprise is a fake, pure and simple. The man who ignores the architect, purchases plans for his house, or, as often done, leaves the entire matter to the judgment of his contractor, makes an equally serious blunder. The writer furnishes the most important thing to paper or magazine, and the architect the same requirement to the building. Having drawn the plans, under the general direction of the owner, he understands thoroughly all of the conditions and requirements and is able to practically work them out.

Architects, as a whole, are entirely honest and reliable. That some of them are unfaithful to trusts is no reflection on their class. The architect stands between the owner and the contractor, and protects the interest of the former, his employer. Understanding not only the art of architecture, but also the business of construction, he knows exactly what must be done to comply with the plans and specifications; he knows when the material is or is not up to the standard; is able, in a word, to prevent the building from being skimped. That he sometimes proves faithless to his client is no argument against the profession, since the same argument applies to every calling and undertaking in life. The commission paid the architect is small, and when the importance of the undertaking and the chances for evasion, substitution and general fraud are taken into consideration, it is in every case a most splendid and legitimate outlay, and, as an investment, will gleam richer returns in repair, alterations and maintenance than a similar amount invested in any other way.

Architects, as already suggested, are essentially like men engaged in other pursuits and vary in ability and honesty. A building of any size, a modest cottage home, even, should have an architect, to not only draw the plans, but to superintend the entire process of construction as well. The rule that governs the selection of an architect does not vary from that which controls the engagement of other agents and representatives. Reference to the work being done by an architect, and his general reputation will furnish an entirely safe criterion by which to be guided. The one thing of greatest importance to the owner who wishes to secure satisfactory results should not be overlooked: employ a good architect. This does not necessarily mean a man who will not bother with small commissions, but one who thoroughly understands his profession, and that from every standpoint, and one who is recognized an honest man. He may be young—gray hairs are not inseparable from ability and technical knowledge; he must at least have an adequate training and an ambition to succeed.

Having chosen an architect, leave the entire matter in his hands. You will, of course, suggest what you want, the size, style and approximate cost of your building, but you will leave the details and the direction of the construction in his hands. In that way, and that way only, are you likely to secure satisfactory results. The architect knows the business of construction and is able to draw contracts that cover every point, leaving nothing to the discretion of the contractor and providing no loopholes for disputes, extras and lawsuits, a most important matter, as those making contracts on their own account are almost certain to learn.

Every man, most unfortunately, is not able to build a home for himself and family, but he who is able to employ a competent architect as a means of economy, to see that his property is properly planned and honestly constructed. If this idea were more generally disseminated, home-building would become far more satisfactory.

STATE TREASURY IS SHY ON SILVER

Reason Attributed to Fact That Government Refuses to Pay the Express Charges.

Austin, Aug. 30.—There is a famine of silver coin in Texas, according to the state treasury department, and from present indications the people of Texas within the next month or so will be compelled to use only currency. At the close of business yesterday afternoon in the treasury department Chief Clerk Edwards said that he had only about $300, which included not only dollars, but halves, quarters, dimes and nickels. The famine, however, seems to be particularly in silver dollars, as only about $50 of the $300 on hand is in silver dollars. The treasury department has been making a strenuous effort to get silver to handle the daily business of the department, but the banks and depositors over the state have not sent any for the simple reason that they have none on hand. Requests are also pouring into the department for silver, but it is unable to grant any of them.

The cause for this famine is said to be due to the fact that the federal government has stopped paying express on shipments from the mint to New Orleans, which has heretofore been the custom. The expressage on silver is costly, as not only the amount is taken into consideration, but also the weight. The banks do not feel called upon to pay the express charges, consequently they are getting currency in $1 and $2 denominations. Currency can be sent by registered mail and the cost is comparatively small, and the banks, it appears, have adopted this plan. Practically all money used by Texas banks is obtained from the mint at New Orleans. The people of Texas, and the south, for that matter, have been so accustomed to the use of silver that the change to currency will be quite a novelty for some time to come.

GEO. SCARBOROUGH LANDS BACK HOME

"Live Wire from Texas," as He is Dubbed by Newspaper Men, Abandons Big Papers.

George Scarborough, dubbed by the newspaper writers of New York "The Live Wire from Texas," has come back to his native state to make his home and practice law.

Mr. Scarborough was born in West Texas, graduated from Baylor university, graduated from the University of Texas in law, made a reputation as humorous speaker, went to New York, where he spent three years on the New York American as reporter and special writer, and then, getting into the game of politics under the patronage of Mr. Hearst, again took up the profession of law.

Mr. Scarborough was confidential secretary to Max F. Ihmsen, Mr. Hearst's political secretary. During Hearst's mayoralty campaign and during the campaign when he was democratic candidate for governor of New York, George Scarborough was one of the leading speakers and has stumped New York again and again. In these campaigns, owing to his hysterical style of fervid oratory, he got the live wire sobriquet. For some time he held the post of assistant attorney general of New York.

Accompanied by his family, Mr. Scarborough has moved back to Texas, and in either in this state or in Oklahoma will take up a residence and open his law office. Either state that secures him will be fortunate, for his lurid linguistic powers, his pen that alternates vitriol and balm of Gilead and his vivid lack of personal beauty all tend to make him a favorite.

Calvin Jones has returned to his home in Coleman.

PRESIDENT TAFT HELD UP.

His Automobile Got Upon Restricted Boulevard.

Boston, Aug. 30.—President Taft has been held up in his automobile on the restricted part of Revere Beach boulevard by Sergeant Elmer Bickford.

Bickford, recognizing that it was the president who was violating the boulevard driving rules, not only allowed Bickford and when the officer came out with a raised hand Mr. Taft tipped his hat. The automobiles stopped and the sergeant called Patrolman Chisholm.

In another minute Chisholm was on the step of the president's auto and the three machines started along the boulevard. At Revere street Chisholm left the auto, the machines being then on unrestricted territory.

Mrs. Mitchell left for Winters Saturday.

Better Not Get Dyspepsia

If you can help it. Kodol prevents Dyspepsia, by effectually helping Nature to Relieve Indigestion. But don't trifle with Indigestion.

A great many people who have trifled with indigestion, have been sorry for it—when nervous or chronic dyspepsia resulted, and they have not been able to cure it. Use Kodol and prevent having Dyspepsia.

Everyone is subject to indigestion. Stomach derangement follows stomach abuse, just as naturally and just as surely as a sound and healthy stomach results upon the taking of Kodol.

When you experience sourness of stomach, belching of gas and nauseating fluid, bloated sensation, gnawing pain in the pit of the stomach, heart burn (so-called), diarrhoea, headaches, dullness or chronic tired feeling—you need Kodol. And then the quicker you take Kodol—the better. Eat what you want, let Kodol digest it.

Ordinary pepsin "dyspepsia tablets," physics, etc., are not likely to be of much benefit to you, in digestive ailments. Pepsin is only a partial digester—and physics are not digesters at all.

Kodol is a perfect digester. If you could see Kodol digesting every particle of food, of all kinds, in the glass test-tubes in our laboratories, you would know this just as well as we do.

Nature and Kodol will always cure a sick stomach—but in order to be cured, the stomach must rest. That is what Kodol does—rests the stomach, while the stomach gets well. Just as simple as A, B, C.

Our Guarantee

Go to your druggist today and get a dollar bottle. Then after you have used the entire contents of the bottle if you can honestly say, that it has not done you any good, return the bottle to the druggist and he will refund your money without question or delay. We will then pay the druggist for the bottle. Don't hesitate, all druggists know that our guarantee is good. This offer applies to the large bottle only and to but one in a family. The large bottle contains 24 times as much as the fifty cent bottle.

Kodol is prepared at the laboratories of E. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago.

DECLINE OF OLD CUSTOM HERE NOTED

The state of Wyoming—that western commonwealth vehemently protesting against the epithet of "wild and woolly" attached to the average easterner, and proudly boasting of its advanced civilization—has at last found the beam in its own optic and taken steps looking toward its early removal. It has been discovered that Wyoming is the only state in the union where the brutal practice of "busting" is permitted in roping steers for amusement purposes. The practice of "busting," he it known, was confined to the earlier history of cattle raising in the west, before more humane methods were discovered, and consists in a rope or lasso being thrown over the animal's head, the horseman then deftly circling the steer and tripping it up with the rope. The plunging animal usually lands squarely on its back, not infrequently, however, sustaining a broken leg or horn and occasionally a broken neck.

It is a disgustingly brutal practice, long prohibited by legislative enactment in other western states, but still permitted and featured in Wyoming at Cheyenne's annual frontier days' celebration, despite the efforts of humane societies to have the cruelty discontinued.

Many Steers Injured. And with the prospect of "busting" being abolished from the scene this year, the humane forces may take but very little if any credit for having brought about the reformation.

Strange as it may seem, the men who now seek to do away with this barbaric custom are the big cattle owners of the west. Each year a month previous to the frontier show at the state capital the cattlemen have been finding many steers on the ranges with broken legs and horns, and occasionally one with back or neck broken. Only recently have they awakened to the fact that these injured animals—representing a considerable money loss—are due to the tempting prizes of gold offered the most expert ropers at the frontier show. With the approach of that event every cowboy on the range aspiring to the purse and the glory, is watchful of an opportunity to practice his skill, and to find a lone steer on the range is a favored chance not to be overlooked. Attributing the large number of injured cattle to this cause, the big cattlemen have petitioned the frontier committee to abolish the brutal method this year, and while their prayer may not be answered, it is certain the practice will be prohibited by legislative enactment at the next assembly.

The tenacity with which Wyoming's frontier committee has clung to "busting" is due to the fact that furnishes one of the big attractions of the annual four-day show held at Cheyenne each year to perpetuate frontier scenes. Expert ropers come from every state to participate in these contests, from Mexico and South America, and the championship last year was carried off by a native from far away Hawaii. The element of danger is great—the chance of a broken saddle girth, a fighting steer or a fallen horse whets the spectator's appetite in marked degree and keeps interest at fever heat. With an average of ten ropers up each day, the excitement is protracted for more than an hour.

Modern Methods Used.

The roper is stationed near the corral gate, mounted, and must remain there until after the steer has gained at least sixty yards' start. As these untamed natives of the southwest are released they instantly take to their heels and madly charge over the wide open area, snorting with rage and trembling with excitement. At a signal the roper begins his pursuit. He must first overtake the steer to make a successful cast, sometimes requiring several throws on the part of the most skillful. Meanwhile his quarry is charging around the arena, fenced on all sides and strengthened by the presence of a thousand men and women on horseback. The thousands in the big steel grandstand are generous with applause and shouting, adding to the terror of the steer from the uninhabited wilds of the Texas Panhandle or the broad stretches of the great southwest.

A successful cast and a skillful ride soon brings the steer in proper position to be "busted," when both feet are swept from under him as he goes down in a whirl. The rider jumps from his horse—that trained animal constantly keeping the rope tight as the man hog-ties his steer. In less than one minute from the time the signal is given the steer is tied down, absolutely helpless. The winner of last year's championship made his record of 58 seconds flat. There is no discounting the excitement; it is intense.

But even should the committee abolish "busting" this year, it will not mean the end of roping at the big celebration. Instead, the modern method will be used. The practice in cattle land today, the most humane method yet devised, requires two ropes to each animal. One throws a rope over the steer's head, while the other skillfully lands the snake lariat over a hind foot. Both ropes are then drawn tightly as bowstrings by the trained saddle horses and the animal is stretched out at full length—helpless, but uninjured. Equal skill is required but the brutality is absent.—F. H. Barrow in Portland Oregonian.

NEW BUILDING ORDINANCE AS IT NOW STANDS

Providing for a general revision of the building laws of the city and improving generally on existing conditions, F. O. Kirby of the firm of Scott & Kirby, has just finished drawing up a new building ordinance at the request of the city council. The ordinance as drawn is complete in every particular and covers every phase of the situation.

It will have a tendency, if passed and carried into execution, to lower very materially the insurance on buildings on Chadbourne street and within the fire limits, by cutting down fire risks and putting up buildings that are safe.

The new ordinance provides for the establishing of the office of city building inspector, with full powers to take charge of all building matters, as well as all things pertaining to wiring and plumbing. This will require a technical as well as a practical man to handle it. All persons desiring to erect buildings within the fire limits will be required to make application to the building inspector and pay a certain fee for the privilege, such fees to be turned in to the city funds. He will be placed under a nominal bond to the city. All buildings will be constructed according to the ordinances in force.

The ordinance fixes an inexorable code for the construction of brick and stone buildings as regards thickness of walls, so as to have safe construction. Of course this does not limit their height, only makes them safe for the public.

It is also required that all public buildings, factories, etc., must be provided with fireproof stairways and fire escapes to facilitate public safety. It will also govern the erection of public halls, opera houses and buildings of similar design.

This innovation will be taken up at the next regular session of the city council.

BAR HARBOR GAME RAIDED.

Police Find Expensive Gambling Outfit in a Cottage.

Bar Harbor, Me., Aug. 30.—It has been known for some time that a complete Monte Carlo outfit had been running in a fashionable cottage which posed for far different purposes. A number of prominent men of the summer colony were in the habit of going there and playing late and for heavy stakes. They include a number of New Yorkers and Philadelphians.

Last spring a cottage close to one of the most exclusive hotels was hired by a man named Swain and his family. The cottage is owned by a prominent local resident, who was unaware of the purpose to which it was to be put.

One young fellow dropped $5000 there one evening and complained to the authorities. The officers raided the cottage and found Swain and a gambling outfit, including a roulette wheel which he said cost $1200 and other equally expensive paraphernalia.

In view of his promising to leave the state, the authorities forbore to prosecute, but if he ever returns to Maine a long term awaits him, as a complete case is on file.

TO-DAY

IS THE LAST CHANCE AT THE Great Last

Days' Sale

All our Spring and Summer Stuff has been cut squarely half in two. We have marked practically all spring and summer goods at exactly half what they are really worth.

Remember this is the Baker-Hemphill merchandise. There is nothing shoddy, no shew worn goods. This great sale includes a vast line. None of the lines are complete, but all are more or less full. We more than likely have exactly what you want and if we have, you can save 50 per cent your needs.

This great money-saving-to-you sale positively ends with today. Come on, come early, we are prepared to wait upon you. We have marshalled more bargains in line for one day's selling today than has ever before been the case in San Angelo.

Our reputation is behind everything we sell. You take no chances. But you do receive the full benefit of our intelligent buying. You know we buy 'em for less, and for today we will sell for less and then knock off 50 per cent besides. Cold weather is not here for several weeks. Everyone needs some "fillers." We can tide you over to the woolen days for so little money. Let us demonstrate. Come to our store today.

MANDAMUS FOR COUSINS IS IN SIGHT

Austin, Aug. 30.—Mandamus proceedings will more than likely be instituted in the supreme court by the city of Houston against R. B. Cousins, state superintendent of public instruction, to compel that officer to approve warrants for the city of Houston out of the appropriation or apportionment for the schools of that city. This will be done in order to test the validity of the law of the Thirty-first legislature requiring treasurers of the school fund in all cities, independent school districts, towns and common school districts of the state having upwards of 150 scholastics to file bonds for the safekeeping of funds. The state superintendent has already indicated that he will not approve any of the warrants for any of the districts, unless the county treasurer which is supposed to be a depository, shall first file a bond for the safe keeping of the funds and this bond to be approved by the state superintendent.

City Attorney Wilson of the city of Houston was here and had a conference with Attorney General Davidson regarding the matter. Mr. Wilson insists that the city of Houston, by provision of its charter, is exempt from this general law, but the attorney general failed to see it in that light and made a ruling for Mr. Wilson that the city of Houston as well as any other school district having upward of 150 scholastics, must file this bond and also pay a certain rate of interest on the daily balances. Mr. Wilson declared there was no balance on which to pay any interest, as the expenditures for the city schools were paid out of the general revenue fund. This, however, did not shake the attorney general, in view of the plain provisions of the law. Mr. Wilson then declared that there was nothing left to be done but to institute mandamus proceedings in the supreme court to test the matter. Houston is not the only city in this state that is complaining against the filing of this bond, consequently, in the event these proceedings should be instituted, the result would be awaited with a great deal of interest by a number of the localities throughout the state.

Business Change. S. E. Long has sold his cafe to a company and it will be run hereafter under the name of the Metropolitan cafe, under the management of Chas. R. Kelly.

Mr. Kelly has been in the restaurant business for several years and most of this time he has spent in San Angelo. He has everything first-class and expects to keep up with the high standard attained by Mr. Long.

John C. Walters of Longview is here and has accepted a position with the Model laundry.

It was very interesting and also profitable for the large crowd that attended the auction sale of Japanese hand painted glassware last Saturday night.

H. Byrens, the auctioneer kept the people amused during the sale and sold hundreds of sets of chinaware at very low prices.

Mr. Byrens will conduct the sale for a few days and then leave for Fort Worth to make a sale there.

Fun and more of it! Manager C. Coggin, in pursuance of prearranged plans, started off his stock production Monday night when the James P. Lee stock company put on the highly interesting and comical play, "Charley's Aunt." A crowded house turned out to see the "first night stand" and laughter and merriment was the order of the day from the time the first act began until the curtain rolled down on the last act. The play was well put on, the parts admirably portrayed by an excellent cast and it is a pretty safe prediction that the S. R. O. sign will be out before the week is over. Manager Coggin intends to run stocks all through the winter and an era of delightful entertainment is just dawning for San Angelo play goers.
