

COTTON MARKET EXPERIENCES A HEAVY DECLINE

Publishers' Press.
New York, Nov. 8.—Breaking from twenty-two to thirty-eight points, the cotton market experienced a most sensational smash this morning. The report from the census bureau was not a factor and had absolutely no effect on trading. December sold for 14 cents on call and later January fell below that level.

While the market was being hammered and excitement was at its height, Wall street stepped in and was a heavy buyer on the declines. The market was dominated by a fear of weakness in spot cotton, advices from the South saying that holders of spot were uneasy.

This afternoon the market became heavy after a slight rally, but prices continued erratic.

Exports for the day amounted to 54,195 bales. Spot 14:20; Liverpool spot quiet at 7 5/8 d.

Stocks.

Publishers' Press.
New York, Nov. 8.—An irregular movement characterized the stock market today. Amalgamated copper advanced three points, while Colorado Fuel and Iron was strong.

The Bank of Germany did not raise its rate and this caused some covering by shorts.

A short spurt of buying caused the Union Pacific to advance a point. London bought Rock Island, steel and Southern Railroad, with profit taking this afternoon in Rock Island and Union Pacific. Selling was vigorous in the last hour.

Governments unchanged, others firm. Call four.

Mining Stock.

Publishers' Press.
New York, Oct. 8.—A big smash developed in Ely Central, a curb market, mining stock, this afternoon. The stock started at 50 cents a share a fortnight ago and advanced to $4.25. In the selling movement today it was forced down to $1.50, but it later recovered somewhat.

The rawhide coalition sold from $1.50 down to 20 cents a share.

Both stocks are promoted by Nat Goodwin, the actor.

BESSIE TOONE CHARGED WITH OBTAINING MONEY FALSELY.

WILL BE ON THE STAND

Alleged That She Received $640 from William Finn—Tammany Leader Puts up Her Bond.

Publishers' Press.
New York, Nov. 8.—Bessie Toone, daughter of R. H. Toone, chief auditor of the Texas division of the Southern Pacific, was arrested today on a charge of obtaining $640 by false pretenses from William Finn. She was later released on $1000 bond furnished by a Tammany leader and will get a hearing Wednesday.

This woman has had an eventful career. In 1900 she married a Michigan man and was later divorced. In 1903 she wedded J. F. Willard, an actor, and was afterward divorced from him.

Her home is in Marshall, Texas, and her parents are wealthy. She will be on the stand.

IMPRISONED MEN FLAMES' VICTIM

NINE LIVES LOST IN FACTORY FIRE IN NEW YORK.

FORTY ARE INJURED

Doors Cut Off by Blaze and Windows Prevent Escape on Account of Having Iron Bars.

Publishers' Press.
New York, Nov. 8.—Bars across windows, blocking all means of escape, nine people were burned to death and forty injured in a fire here today which destroyed a factory building at 150-152 Columbia street, occupied by Robert Morrison & Son. The dead:

- William Morrison.
- Frank Cresselene.
- Dick Malazzo.
- Pasquale Malazzo.
- Frederick Sigenthaler.
- Frank Mardonla.
- Thomas Mardonla.
- Amelio Bossa.
- One unidentified.

The fire was under good headway before noticed, and the building was so arranged that it was impossible to reach any of the entrances without going through the flames. The windows were accessible, but all efforts on the part of the terror-stricken men to break the bars were of no avail.

Some attempted to rush through the flames but were burned to death before reaching the doors.

TWO LIVING EXAMPLES OF PELLAGRA PLACED BEFORE PHYSICIANS FOR STUDY

Special to The Press-News.

Austin, Nov. 8.—State Health Officer Brumby announced this afternoon that he will take two patients suffering with pellagra to San Antonio tomorrow, where they will be exhibited before the members of the Southwestern Medical association in convention there.

A thorough study of this much dreaded disease is to be made at this convention. In fact, it is said that this one topic will occupy the attention of the medical fraternity most of the time while in San Antonio.

Pellagra is said to exist in many places in Texas, and Dr. Brumby is very anxious that the disease be studied by all the physicians in order that they may join in with the state and stamp it out before it grows in this state to the proportions it has reached in some others.

INVITATIONS TO TEXAS EDITORS

NEWSPAPER MEN ALSO ASKED TO APPOINT DELEGATES.

The outlook for the West Texas Development congress is growing brighter with each succeeding day, and Chairman Bartholomew is laboring with zeal and marked intelligence to make this initial meeting, which will be held in San Angelo on December 6 a complete success.

Believing that out of a multitude of counsel comes the greatest wisdom and knowing that no class of people has done half so much to secure the advancement of the material welfare of West Texas, Chairman Bartholomew and the general committee have issued invitations to all West Texas editors to appoint ten delegates to attend this congress. Secretary Lawson O. Dalley mailed out the authorities to the editors on Monday and in this manner the attendance will be greatly augmented when the congress convenes.

In addition to the detail work done, Secretary Dalley on Monday received a lot of lapel buttons to be worn by those interested in the movement. This button, while small in size, is striking

KONE LECTURES AT COURTHOUSE

WILL BE HEARD TUESDAY MORNING AT 10 O'CLOCK.

LEAVES IN AFTERNOON

Uncle Dick Bonner and J. J. Johnson Remains and Will Organize a Farmers' Institute.

In the interest of the farmers of Tom Green county Hon. Ed R. Kone, commissioner of agriculture for the state of Texas, will speak in the court house Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock. Mr. Kone is in San Angelo for the purpose of assisting the farmers of this country to become more progressive and successful in farming. The idea that he has in mind is the organizing of a farmers' institute. This is the most distant city in West Texas that he has visited on this trip.

Mr. Kone arrived in the city Tuesday morning about 2 o'clock. With him came Uncle Dick Bonner and J. J. Johnson, who will also speak.

It is the intention of Mr. Kone to leave Tuesday afternoon, as he has some urgent business awaiting him at Austin. For this reason he will speak first.

Uncle Dick Bonner is one of the most progressive farmers in Texas, and he has kindly consented to give his views to the West Texas farmers. J. J. Johnson is also a good orator and he will have a chance to tell the people about farming. Both will speak in the afternoon.

PIPE ORGAN FOR CHURCH

SUNDAY SCHOOL TO BUY ONE FOR FIRST METHODIST.

For the purpose of receiving the report of a special committee appointed to make recommendations with reference to the construction of a pipe organ for the First Methodist church, the Sunday school will meet today and probably place an order for a $4,000 affair.

Mrs. J. W. Howell, J. R. Sanders and Mrs. Osmond were appointed as a committee to make a thorough investigation regarding the purchasing of a pipe organ, and they are ready to make their report, having agreed to recommend the Plicher organ.

The young men of the Sunday school have taken it upon themselves to raise this money. The fund will be started within two weeks when Rev. H. A. Boas, president of Polytechnic College, Fort Worth, will deliver an address on the subject, "Man or Money." This is Dr. Boas's most famous lecture, and one that has been given in all of the leading cities of the state, and in some of the larger places outside of Texas, always drawing a packed house.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE GIVEN

NOTHING CONCLUSIVE YET IN STEINHEIL CASE.

REPORTER ON THE STAND

Fred K. Burlington, American Newspaper Man, Asked to Tell All He Knows About the Affair.

Publishers' Press.
Paris, Nov. 8.—After three days of hard and acute interrogation Madam Stenheil is much fatigued, but was brought back to the court room today. The interest and sentiment in the case is still running higher. People from all parts of the world are coming to hear probably the greatest criminal case in the history of the world. Another great attractive element of this trial has been the remarkability of Madam Stenheil. She is beautiful, pitiful and strange. Her traits are of no likeness to any other person who has undergone a trial for life as she is doing. Seated in the dock, she is calm and seems to be in a normal state. At times when unsuitable answers are made to questions, she breaks out in a meek voice and contradicts. She is always very attentive to every word of testimony.

There were several very important witnesses on the stand today, whose testimony will have a great bearing in the case.

Nothing conclusive has been shown against the woman, circumstantial evidence being given for the most part. This, however is having a very potent place in the trial.

One of the witnesses today was Fred K. Burlington, an American newspaper man who came from New York to investigate the case.

There is much gossip recalling intrigues of Madame Stenheil with famous men of affairs in Europe, for which she has been disowned by her family.

Corn Production.

MAIL SERVICE OVER ORIENT STARTS SOON

The Orient road, and not the government, is the cause of the long looked for mail service over that road between this city and Sweetwater not being started. That the railroad has a good reason for holding up this matter goes without saying, for every day's delay means the loss of revenue large enough to pay for cinders for 57 yards of ballast.

Monday afternoon the Business Club, through the president, Hon. C. A. Broome, sent a telegram to Senator Bailey, asking him to ascertain the cause of the delay in this service being started, and if the delay was with the government, to do what he could to hurry matters.

Early in the afternoon the following reply was received from the junior senator:

"Washington, Nov. 8.—San Angelo Business Club, San Angelo, Texas.—Postoffice department submitted proposition to railroad on Oct. 26 for carrying mail. No reply yet received from railroad, but just as soon as proposition is accepted service will be started. J. W. BAILEY."

Of course, at this distance the cause of this delay on the part of the railroad can be nothing but a conjecture. Efforts to locate either Mr. O'Brien or Mr. Burrows at Sweetwater Monday afternoon were futile. The chances are the government made a proposition to the Orient to change the whole scheme of bringing mail from the north and east to this section of the country, so as to throw practically the bulk of the mail from the big centers over this line, instead of sending it as is now done. If such was the proposition, it is quite likely that the Orient would have to make preparations for such a heavy movement.

However, it is not believed that the Orient will let this matter merely jog along to a solution. There's money in carrying mail—oodles of it—and the Orient is not breaking any precedents by declining to pick up a little easy money.

It would appear that the whole matter should be worked out before the end of this week. When it is worked out it will mean that the heavy work that is now crowded into an hour at the postoffice can be smeared over a considerable space and not only will the public get an improved service, but the postoffice employees here will be able to handle the mail with greater dispatch and less labor.

FISH AND FLESH, TOO.

How many times have we heard the expression "pass-packers" and "free pass lobby" and "pernicious free passes" rolled from tongues of public speakers like they would roll sweet morsels palatable? For nearly ten years the free pass hobby has been ridden like the Tom O'Shanter-colt by those who would find a hobby that would lead them to office and attendant emoluments.

Of all who have bombarded high heavens with anathematizations of free passes there is none who has given his voice greater shrillness, nor has rolled his eyes skyward with more telling effect than our own chief executive Thomas Mitchell Campbell. Gov. Campbell was in a position that fitted him most peculiarly to discuss the free pass proposition and its attendant evils.

But lo and behold it has come to pass that free passes are not things of the past. That which the state of Texas has forbidden private enterprises operated with a public scope, the state itself is now engaged in doing with a sang froid that would make the French chatter.

The testimony brought out by the penitentiary investigating committee shows that the state railroad has issued about twenty-six free passes. The reports of the testimony have been meager, largely perhaps on account of the charity of the newspaper writers, but enough has been developed to show that the evil exists.

Now, let's sift this thing. Free passes have been denounced as an unmitigated evil because it was alleged that through the medium of free passes members of the legislature were blinded to enact laws against the interests of the people, though specified incidents were never cited.

If the railroads of Texas have ever been in the attitude of asking favors of the state, how much greater favors must the management of the state railroad ask? To fasten the socialistic and foreign thing on the body politic of Texas means that the state must from time to time dig and dig deeply into its treasury.

Admitting that free passes are as great a thing as Campbell and his cohorts and cohortesses allege, is not this effort on the part of the state railroad in issuing free passes but an attempt to dispense blandishments in the hope of "catching the speaker's eye" to use a parliamentary phrase?

THE WHY OF IT.

State Press of the Dallas News makes the following observation: San Angelo Press-News: Abilene knows a good thing when she sees it. Abilene knows that the West Texas Development congress is a good thing for West Texas, and Abilene is a hustling and energetic part of West Texas, too. Abilene has taken her place as one of the real influences behind this movement.

in store for those who aid in making this congress a success. The Lord helps those who help themselves. The story of golden apples dropping in the laps of those who sleep beneath the apple tree is a pretty yarn, but unfortunately only a fable. Put your shoulder to the wheel. Take your place in the ranks of the lifters. Don't be a leaker. We can't lift ourselves by pulling on our bootstraps, but we can at least make conditions fit more closely to our needs if we pull hard enough and all pull together.

"State Press doesn't know with particularity what this West Texas Development congress proposes to do—or, rather, how it intends to go about it. But he is for it, if his conception of its mission is correct. West Texas has been coming fast the last three or four years, but it has been coming chiefly under its own momentum, and its speed can be accelerated by a little organized effort. Its conditions are in many respects peculiar to itself. Its industrial, political and social problems call for the skill of specialists, and that skill will be got only by organized study and effort."

For the benefit of State Press The Press-News begs to say that the West Texas Development congress has a mission in consonance with its name. It seeks, or will seek, to promote the material welfare of West Texas. State Press can not be blind to the fact that even in our own state at places the ignorance regarding West Texas is not only appalling but astounding.

For instance during the last session of the Thirty-first legislature a state officer, in addressing committees of the legislature, inferentially—and not so all-fired inferentially, either—declared that West Texas is peopled with a preponderance of land thieves, and so overwhelming was this sentiment that the courts, reflecting the temper of the people, would not dispense equal and exact justice. This is a gross libel. Then again, West Texas has problems that are perplexing and that must be solved, of which the people of East Texas know nothing, and in the absence of knowledge can not act with intelligence, even though the inclination to act honestly is a consuming passion.

West Texas is not an arid waste, as many have preached. West Texas is not a land of outlawry, as many preach. West Texas is not the haven of the criminal class, as many preach. But West Texas is a growing section, making headway with the handicaps ignorance places on things that ignorance attaches itself to. It is to remove this ignorance that the West Texas Development congress has been called. This congress will shun partisan and personal politics like the wise bass shuns the fly, but of those political subjects that are of economic import, rather than political, will be freely and candidly discussed and freely and candidly agreed upon: It's a good thing—this congress; push it along.

A Dallas pastor preached a sermon with the Lord's prayer as its text. What a strange departure from the style of sermons usually reported in the larger dailies. The preacher who can't denounce waiting, defy the trusts or spread a scarlet covering to the social evil usually doesn't get his name in the press of this country—which is a condition that is at least regrettable.

UP-TO-DATE DUEL OF PARTISAN FASHION. Henri Bernstein, the French Playwright, Intends to Write a Sparkling Play. Publishers Press. New York, Nov. 8.—Henri Bernstein, the French playwright and author of "Israel," is going to write a new play with the action around a duel. Just as Henri lived parts of the play of "Israel," so has he taken part in a real, up-to-date duel, fought after the most approved Partisan fashion in which neither participant is wounded, but honor is satisfied all round, and they all adjourn to the nearest cafe to pledge each other in several kinds of waters. M. Bernstein became enraged at some of the criticisms directed at his plays by Francois Chevaussu. He sent a challenge to Francois and they met in Prince Park with their artillery and coffins. On the flip of a coin borrowed from one of the seconds, Francois won the first shot. Carefully shutting both eyes he took long and careful aim while Henri stood back looking straight into the gun—just like the flower of France as depicted by the historical novelists. Bang! went Frank's cannon and the bullet went heavenward toward the planet Saturn. Henri stood in open-mouthed astonishment while his seconds danced around him, advising him to shoot. After the battle was over and the dead bodies had been removed, a timid bystander asked the playwright why he hadn't annihilated his hated rival. "Ah, my friend," exclaimed M. Bernstein, in his blandest manner, "I forgot to pull ze trigger."

RAILROADS AND THE PEOPLE

The following is the seventh of a series of articles prepared by The Press-News upon this subject. The Press-News believes that no problem so vitally affects the continued welfare of West Texas like the one that is here presented. The facts presented are correct in every detail. The deductions are without coloring of a hue that can not be easily misunderstood. Your attention is asked to this series. These articles will appear from day to day until further notice.

In the course of an address delivered before the Fourth International Dry Farming Congress, held at Billings, Montana, in October, Mr. James J. Hill, one of the great railroad builders of this age, commented upon the need for more mileage in the West. Then he gave the 2,000 delegates this advice: "Be good neighbors to your railroads and they will be good neighbors to you. We are in the same boat with you, and we must prosper with you, or be poor with you."

What a world of truth there is in those few words. And how simple we find it to be on good terms with our railroads. The same expression, in slightly different words, has been made in two or three instances recently by Mr. B. F. Yoakum, chairman of the executive committee of the Rock Island-Frisco lines, another railroad builder belonging at the top of the list. These two men agree that to be real neighbors is the solution of the problem of doing the greatest amount of good for each other.

How natural this advice seems when we digest it. Let us resolve it down to a simpler problem still, using comparisons from which to arrive at a conclusion. Suppose a large community has been going along comfortably for a good many years, but has not been progressing out of a rut of growing a few staple crops, and a new man moves in who buys a large body of land and proceeds to divulge ways of making money faster. This man is willing to begin on good terms with his neighbors and to share with them the knowledge on which he is working.

This newcomer has spent large sums of money learning how to study soils and how to get the best returns from them, and has brought many valuable implements with him that will help him in his endeavor to woo fortune in the new locality. But he will be glad to spend a good deal of his time explaining to those living near by how he gets better results than they. He is willing to let them profit by his efforts.

Might we expect this man to make any effort in behalf of that community if his neighbors held aloof from him and would not treat him as a neighbor? Unless those living about him would come to him in a friendly spirit and with an apparent willingness to give the new man of their experiences in return for what he might give, he would hardly be expected to try very hard to spread his doctrine. There would never be that co-operation necessary to the best results for all of them unless the neighborly feeling formed the foundation.

The same rule must apply to the railroad. The builder is not a different kind of man than the resident in the territory through which his rails are being laid. The chances are a thousand to one that he has come up to his high position after hard work down in the ranks. Many of the successful ones first lived on a farm and knew its workings. His first impulse is to seek the neighborly feeling of the farmer. Partly because the farmer is noted the world over as a man who makes a good neighbor.

When the railroad officials and the patrons of the road dwell together in neighborly harmony that community is on the high road to success. When they sit down and discuss their problems—for the problem of one are the problems of the other—they are sure to arrive at conclusions that will be of benefit to both of them. From such actions, too, there must come a feeling that will prove helpful in every detail of the business. Place yourself in the position of superintendent of a railroad division and then try to imagine every man you would try to talk business with shunning you and refusing to take you into his confidence or to listen to your confidences. Can you imagine either you or your patrons getting much benefit out of the existence of that piece of road? The neighborly feeling alone will bring out the results.

These things being so manifestly true, why should not our entire commonwealth, bunched as one individual, be a kindly neighbor to the railroads, serving as the other entity. If we would just sit down and talk hard sense for a little while we would find out that neither of us is such a dangerous thing as we otherwise might seem. We need to lay high and dry on the shelf a few agitating politicians and send to the legislature some hard-headed business men. This class of people, speaking through their commercial clubs, have told the lawmakers what they think of the attitude of antagonism to railroads.

The business interests of the state have been the first to get ready to be neighbors with the railroads. They have seen the error of the way we have been traveling and have openly confessed it. Now they are extending the right hand of fellowship to the roads and asking the law-giving body of the state to come to its senses. A little slower, perhaps, but nevertheless certain, the farmers are joining in the action.

It is just as important to the farmer that right relations exist with the railroads as it is to anybody else, and a little more so. No class of people in our country can prosper unless the farmer prospers. The soil is the foundation of the nation's wealth, hence the farmer is the biggest cog in the big machine. For that reason he should think the biggest thoughts and promulgate the ideas that will bring about harmony with every other business interest in the world.

We can well afford to listen to the advice of men like Mr. Yoakum and Mr. Hill. They have spent the greater part of their lives living close to the soil and both have been the most consistent advocates of farm improvement. The power of their great railroad systems has been exerted to bring about better conditions for the farmers and when they say all will be served best by being neighborly, they know whereof they speak. They have proven consistent friends of the people in the Southwest and West.

DRESSES AS ARAB TO ENTER COUNTRY

Douglas Carruthers First White Man to Penetrate the Border of Desert of Great West.

Publishers Press.
London, Nov. 8.—Douglas Carruthers just returned from an interesting expedition to Central Arabia and is the first white man to penetrate to the border of the "desert of the great west." Dressed as an Arab, he lived for some time as a Bedouin with the nomad tribes, it being only by this means that he got into the country. The journey was one of much hardship, owing to the absence of water and the constant warfare among the tribes. He succeeded in following entirely new country, in which he covered over 600 miles. This region was roughly mapped. Mr. Carruthers found his chief danger arose from Bedouin raids. "The fighting propensities of these people," he said, "can not be exaggerated."

MAKING DIRT FLY ON MERTZON ROAD

Contractor Moseley Pleased With Results—Work On Sterling City Extension Begins.

"We are going ahead to beat the band and are literally making the dirt fly," exclaimed E. B. Moseley, one of the on-to-Mertzton grading contractors, who was here Monday buying supplies. "With a continuation of the kind of weather we had last week we will be able to finish this contract a long time before 1916 gets to be the ruling year on the calendar."

Santa Fe.
Work on the Sterling City branch of the Santa Fe started Monday, according to reports given out by the local offices in charge of this work. It will take about three months to complete this grading and once the grade is completed, it may take another three months to lay the rails and put in the bridging and culverts.
This is the proposition that was worked up by J. J. Lanin and was purchased by the Santa Fe from Mr. Lanin. It will serve as a splendid feeder for San Angelo.

COLLEAGUE FOR CARDINAL GIBBONS

Pope Anxious to Overcome Trouble by Appointing Americans, Thus Reorganizing Factions.

Publishers Press.
Rome, Nov. 8.—The announcement that two consistories are to be held within the next two months has caused great interest among the American church colony here, because of the belief that at least one or perhaps two American cardinals will be named.

It is an open secret in high church circles here that the Pope is and has been since his elevation to the papacy desirous of naming a colleague for Cardinal Gibbons, and that only the inability of American prelates to agree on the man has prevented him from doing so.

It is recognized at the Vatican that the church in America is the most active and vigorous Daughter of Rome and has deserved recognition, but unfortunately it appears here that there are factions in the American church and it is feared the recognition of either would offend the other.

The Pope is now seriously considering overcoming this trouble by appointing two American Cardinals, thus recognizing both supposed factions. Three bishops are under consideration for promotion. They are Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul, Farley of New York, and O'Connell of Boston.
Rumor further has it that Cardinal Gibbons may be named as a member of the Curia, which would necessitate his residence at Rome.

Guiding Them.

New York, Nov. 8.—It will be quite a long time before the jolly faces of the Bohemian Sextette are seen in New York again. Lured by a long term contract and a large money offer the Bohemians are now making their way over the Western circuit. Albert Sutherland is guiding them through the unknown regions west of North River. In New York they made a great hit with their own scenery depicting incidents in the Latin Quarter of Paris.

Football.

Friday is the day when the San Angelo High School football team goes up against the Ballinger squad. These two teams are well matched in size and playing, and from all indications there is to be one of the raciest football games of the season.

This game will be played on Friday so as to let the Simmons College and the San Angelo College have a round at the pigskin Saturday at the park.

Col. H. L. Calhoun, a capitalist, coal baron and ice king of Fort Worth, spent three hours in San Angelo Sunday, returning to his home city after an outing in the Devil's River country.

Boilermakers at Tyler Return to Work as Per Order of President of Union.

Special to The Press-News.

Tyler, Tex., Nov. 8.—The boilermakers, who struck for a wage increase of two cents per hour with a contract, at the Cotton Belt shops here, returned to work today at the instance of President Adams, of the Boilermakers' Union.

Details of the settlement will be adjusted later. The strikers demanded 40 cents. The railroad conceded 39 1-2 cents without a contract.

BANK & TRUST CO GIVES BANQUET

STOCKHOLDERS AND THEIR FAMILIES ENTERTAINED.

SPECIAL SHOW AT YALE

Entire Evening Spent in Most Enjoyable Manner—Occasion One Long to Be Remembered.

Following a custom agreed up on a year ago, the stockholders of the San Angelo Bank & Trust Company, with their families, held a banquet Monday night, this being the forerunner of the annual meeting that is to be held Tuesday morning in the offices of the company.

The banquet was held at the opera house and about 200 were present, the occasion being one that will long be remembered. The room was prettily decorated and on the tables were several beautiful bouquets of roses.

Col. Walsh, who has so successfully directed the affairs of the institution, was named as toastmaster, and while the different courses were being served, some jolly and some serious toasts were responded to. In the main the responses were along business lines, dealing with banking in all of its branches.

Joseph Spence, Jr., whose subject was "The History of Banking in San Angelo," told of the first bank the city had, then the second, and so on. He complimented Col. Walsh for the manner in which he has conducted the affairs of the San Angelo Bank & Trust Company, and commented on its rapid growth and advancement.

Other speakers included R. Wilbur Brown, Rev. J. W. Howell, Col. A. J. Baker, W. T. Renfro, Edgar S. Hamilton, W. T. Bartholomew and S. E. Taylor.

Col. Walsh read the report of the president and cashier, which was unanimously adopted, after which adjournment was taken to the Yale theater, where a special bill was given for the party. This proved to be a most enjoyable feature, and one that was especially appreciated by the ladies.

The stockholders of the bank will meet Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock for the purpose of taking up the annual reports and attending to such other matters as may come up for consideration.

O'DONNELL HERE READY FOR WORK

STARTS OUT TUESDAY IN QUEST OF FREIGHT SHIPMENTS.

Jimmie O'Donnell, as he was known when he was a chubby face, double-chinned, laughing eyes of blue baby, with blonde curls, but James P. O'Donnell as he is now called since his face is no more chubby, his chin no longer double and his blonde curls now down to two in a hill, and not so many hills, will blossom forth on the streets of San Angelo Tuesday with his collection of smiles numbering 57 varieties, his large and thoroughly variegated stock and choicely preserved anecdotes and his greeting hand hot with gladness, seeking freight shipments for the Orient road.

Sir James—or as his forebears have signed themselves, Seumas—got his first glimpse of San Angelo Sunday, when he stepped lightly from the Santa Fe train. He looked about and marvelled at the real size of the city. He whistled a chortling sort of a whistle indicative of amazement, astonishment and the like. Then he started to hike about and when he had gotten winded he was preparing to believe the stories about San Angelo that he had imagined were chapters from some Arabian Nights story, when they fell upon his shell shaped ears.

Mr. O'Donnell is commercial agent of the Orient road, headquarters at San Angelo. His appointment, as has already been announced exclusively in The Press-News, became effective on November 1. If he don't make good at the job it will be the first job, position or situation that he has ever held that he failed to make good with plenty to spare. And Mr. O'Donnell has had many jobs, situations and positions in his brief career.

Prior to accepting service with the Orient, Mr. O'Donnell was with the Mosle line of boats that ply between Galveston, Progresso, Yucatan, Vera Cruz, Coateacoalcos and other Mexican ports and he got scads of tonnage for the line he represented. But he got tired whiffing salt air and of always talking a language that had a Spanish accent and a custom house brogue, so he wanted to come West and grow up with the country—and the Orient.

"I like San Angelo," Mr. O'Donnell frankly confesses with great glee, "and I hope the people here will reciprocate." You see he uses the word "reciprocate." That shows he has been studying tariff duties. No man can represent a steamship company without being familiar with tariff duties.

Mr. O'Donnell is affable, pleasing, obliging and he knows the tariff business from AA class clear down to the last of the commodity lots. He will locate his family here in the near future and the chances are he will have an office down town pretty soon, too.

Convention Closes, Blanket Being Selected for Next Meeting Place.

Closing the Christian Endeavor meeting in San Angelo, Rev. Dr. C. W. Yates delivered an address on "What Christian Endeavor Stands For."

This assembly lasted three days, beginning with Friday night and closing Sunday.

In the address made by Dr. Yates the main elements of Christian Endeavor work were explained.

"First," he said, "Christian Endeavor stands for Christian culture and development of the individual. Second, for personal evangelism; third, world-wide evangelism; fourth, denominational loyalty; fifth, inter-denominational loyalty; sixth, all moral reforms."

Dr. Yates illustrated the importance and value in teaching these subjects, and told wherein a person would become more familiar with the principles of Christianity, if he were better acquainted with these parts of Christian Endeavor teachings.

After deliberating upon where the next place for meeting would be, Blanket was chosen. The convention will be held there in 1910.

TEXAS FLAG IN NEW YORK CITY

It Will Float From Top of Pulitzer
Building, the Home of the New York World.

Austin, Nov. 8.—The Texas flag will hereafter float to the breezes of Manhattan Island, from the top of the Pulitzer building, the home of the New York World. The governor has just received a letter from E. A. Pratt of New York, superintendent of the Pulitzer building, in which he makes a request for a Texas flag to hoist on the building along with the national flag and that of other countries. As Texas is one of only a few of the states in the Union that boasts of a flag, the state emblem seems to be in great demand. It was only a short time ago that a request was made for a Texas flag to fly over the United States consulate at Shanghai, China. The letter to the governor was referred to Captain Day, superintendent of public buildings and grounds, and that official said he would send the flag as requested at once. In this letter Mr. Pratt writes:

"Hereafter, on certain days, I want to fly the state flags with our own national colors and flags of foreign countries. Will you furnish me the Texas state flag, size 8x12, or about that size, and a list of special state holidays that are celebrated in Texas, and as far as possible, I will see that same is put up with the American flag on this building when the date does not interfere with other arrangements."

"As the population of this city is made up from every state in the Union, and every country on earth, this will please some, and teach others the flags and holidays celebrated."

Let The Press-News get it for you.

FORT CONCHO
SUN DIAL IS GRAND FAKE!

NOT THE ONE MADE IN 1869 BY CHRIS MULLADY, ACCORDING TO HIS OWN STATEMENT.

WHEN SUBSTITUTED
NOBODY HERE KNOWS

After Having Been Away for About
Thirty-Five Years, Old Soldier Returns to Old San Angelo.

Where is the sun dial that held a place of recognition among the soldiers in Fort Concho forty years ago? Foul play has been done by some person of many years ago. The sun dial that rests in peace in a lonely spot between the old barracks in Ft. Concho today is not the one made by Chris. Mullady in 1869. This is the sun and substance of what Mr. Mullady had to say Monday afternoon. "The huge, rough sun dial that shows it was carved by an unskilled hand that sets in silence in Ft. Concho today is an imposter and a usurper," said Mr. Mullady Monday. It is nothing more than an imitation of the one made by me."

Mr. Mullady came to San Angelo in 1867 from New Orleans. He had many intentions in mind when he left New Orleans—but let him tell the story.

"At the age of seven," he said, "I landed in Brooklyn, New York, coming from Ireland, where I was born. I worked as an apprentice to the stone cutting trade for five years, when I quit and took part in the Civil war. It is rather funny to tell how I came to go into that war. It was one day when several young men, including myself, were engaged in a piece of work, that we threw down our tools and pulled out to fight for something that we knew nothing about. Right in the center of Central Park, New York, today is where my little box of tools landed. When I cast those instruments that were so precious to me aside, I had no idea that such a future was in front of me. Instead of thinking the war was going to continue four years, I had an idea, like many other people, that it would last but a few months. I was mistaken. It continued four long years, in which some of the best blood of the world was strewn upon many battle grounds, where the hottest fights of all history took place.

"I saw my hardest times on the old ship, Hartford, which was under the command of Admiral Farragut. Many are the times did I think and wish I was back in New York working away at my old trade. It was no use. I had realized what I had got into and my Irish blood boiled up in me and I fought bravely till the last shot was fired. That day is over. We are now in an age of wonderful growth and development, and thank God that we are.

"I left the Hartford at New Orleans. I well remember the day I bade her good-bye. The boys were standing on her upper deck, looking calmly at those who were leaving. When I left her deck, I said farewell forever. I never intended to see her again, and I haven't.

At Ft. Chadbourne.

"At New Orleans I joined in with a wagon train that was coming out in West Texas to locate a fort for the soldiers. After traveling six weeks we landed at Ft. Chadbourne. It was first decided to build a fort there, but here on the Concho was a better place for it, and the officers made this selection. That was in the year 1867. Forty-two years ago I first landed in the city now known as San Angelo. There was no town here then. Nothing, I might well say.

"For about four months we laid around in camps doing nothing. I got tired of such idleness, and, on my own accord, made a sun dial for the soldiers. Some people have an idea that the sun dial cost the government a lot of money. That is a mistake. The government had nothing to do with its making. The only reward I got for carving it was the appointment as superintendent of mason work in the fort.

False Sun Dial.

"There is something else I want the good citizens of San Angelo to know. That old roughly carved square sun dial that lies in that fort today was not made by me.

"The one that I made had an octagon shape and was three and one-half feet high. The top was fourteen inches wide and a little hollowed out where the needle was. I carved some fancy models around the edges and in the center. It was for the handsome piece of work that I did that caused Gen. Jno. P. Hatch to appoint me superintendent of mason work.

"So I do not want the people of this country to give me any credit of having made the one that is over there now. Where the one I made disappeared to I do not know. In fact, I did not know it had been stolen or moved till Sunday when I was out there looking around. Probably the sun dial that I made has been gone thirty-five years, and this is the first time that I had any idea of such a thing.

"Not that I want it, but that I want the people of this city to know that man here with whom I am acquainted. He is Judge John G. Preusser. I came to this country with that sterling gentleman. If there was ever a man who needs to be honored and loved, it is John Preusser. I also knew the Tankersleys, Taylors and Vecks. They are about the only people I can think of now whom I knew when I was here in the 60's and 70's.

"Those days the nearest railroad from here was at Columbus, Texas, near the coast. San Antonio had no railroads. Austin had no railroads. Houston was a town hardly as big as this one. I tell you, it was in the early days that I was here. I wish I could tell you my whole history from beginning to end, but the time is too short."

KIDNEY DISEASE

A disease that comes on gradually without the knowledge of the victim; its symptoms are so trifling they are misunderstood; hence proper treatment is too often delayed beyond the possibility of recovery.

PRICKLY ASH BITTERS

Is a Life Saving Tonic.

Used when the trouble is in the early stage it quickly checks the progress of the disease, strengthens the failing kidneys, stimulates the torpid liver and drives out the paralyzing uric acid poison through the bladder and bowels. To those who suffer from kidney disease in the more advanced stage it is of priceless value.

A TALE OF THE MISSISSIPPI VALLEY By EDWARD BONNEY

CHAPTER IX.
 Detection of the steamer at Rock Island, enabled me to disclose to those who were in possession of my secret purpose, the important communications received from Granville Young, and to make further arrangements to prosecute the search for the three murderers who left Redden's for Missouri.

When I had narrated the particulars of the part acted by the man who had visited at the house of Col. Davenport, under the guard of friendship, George L. Davenport, Esq., recognized, in the description, the person of one John Baxter, who had been for several years, and was, at the time of the murder, a resident of Rock Island, but soon after that event had removed to Jefferson, Wisconsin, wholly unsuspected.

This scoundrel, John Baxter, whose name should be printed upon his front, in letters as black as his heart, was now a prominent object of attention, and we rejoiced that, in the event of his conviction, his punishment, as necessary, would be no less severe than that of the active perpetrators of the murder.

As the reader will notice, the present position of the murderers, as far as we had discovered who they were, was as follows: three of the principals, according to the intelligence received by Granville Young, were travelling in the gang, Aaron Long, the other of the murderers, was at his father's, six miles east of Galena, John Baxter was in Jefferson, Wisconsin. Old Grant Redden and Wm. Redden, on Devil Creek, in Lee County, Iowa, and Granville Young was then a passenger on the steamer, on his way to Nauvoo, and Devil Creek. Most of these could be arrested at our pleasure, but it was determined to suffer the five to remain unmolested, and pursue Fox, John Long and Birch. This must be accomplished by following the trail marked out by Granville Young.

Fearing that the Dubuque blank bills, which had succeeded in winning the confidence of Young, might not be available in all parts of the country through which I must necessarily travel, I made arrangements, by the aid of Joseph Knox, Esq., and others, before leaving Rock Island, to obtain from the State Bank of Missouri, at St. Louis, such blank bills, and other accommodations as I might desire, to decoy the gang, and aid me in the pursuit of the murderers.

Everything being satisfactorily arranged, and the most profound secrecy enjoined upon all concerned in the plot, I left Rock Island upon my downward trip to St. Louis.

Resuming my interview with Young, I obtained much additional information relative to the extensive organization and operations of the gang.

This Young informed me that he was a native of Virginia, and had been a member of the United Banditti for about seven years. He had left his native place about five years before my acquaintance with him commenced, with several stolen horses. Although vigorously pursued, he evaded his followers, and escaped with the horses into Kentucky; then crossing the Ohio River into Indiana, he disposed of his horses without suspicion.

He also stated that Killgore, alias Big Davis, who, with Birch and others, robbed Mulford, in White-bago County, was then on Sherridan River, in the neighborhood of Packard's Grove.

Granville Young left the War Eagle at Nauvoo, from whence he proceeded to Old Redden's on Devil Creek, where he was afterwards arrested.

On arriving at Montrose, I informed James Knox, Esq., of the present abiding place of Killgore, the notorious robber, suggesting that he might be arrested without difficulty.

I also discovered, by conversing with Mr. Loomis, of Nauvoo, that the bloody coats found near the Robbers' Camp—so called—he thought he could identify as being the coats of John Long and Fox. He also believed the gloves belonged to Birch.

This Robbers' Camp was found in the bluffs, south of Rock Island, and near it were discovered two coats stained with blood, concealed under leaves and rubbish. In a pocket of the coat were a pair of kid gloves, afterwards identified as the property of Birch.

On the 23d of August I arrived at St. Louis. I found that notwithstanding the supposed secrecy with which our plot was progressing, there was a leaky vessel somewhere among us, and that some inkling of our project had been seized upon by the editor of the Quincey Whig, in the last number of whose paper an article had appeared containing enough to put the murderers upon their guard. As this article had been copied into the St. Louis papers, my first undertaking was to have it contradicted, in which I succeeded by the aid of Dr. Knox. I felt very much vexed and disheartened at the discovery that some one or more of those in the secret had thus failed to exercise common prudence and caution in a matter of so much importance. I was almost inclined to return home, and abandon all hopes of arresting the perpetrators of the murder. I had attempted an enterprise, hazardous in the extreme—one in which a hope of pecuniary reward alone would never have induced me to engage in, and I certainly was excusable in feeling some discouragement at these premature developments. It would have been time enough to have given facts to the public when it could have been done without prejudice to the public good.

I completed the arrangement with the State Bank of Missouri, and obtained the blank bills agreeably to my request.

While in St. Louis, Dr. Reuben Knox, and J. S. Dougherty, City Marshal, rendered me all the assistance in their power, towards accomplishing the object of my mission.

I inquired for Reynolds, livery stable keeper, to whom I had been referred by Young. His general character, as far as known, the Marshal informed me was good. I determined, however, to give him a call. I met him in the street, and introduced myself as Mr. Brown.

"I have been referred to you, Mr. Reynolds, as a gentleman with whom it would be beneficial for me to have a little private conversation."

"Who referred you to me?"
 "Granville Young."
 "I don't know any such man."
 "Do you not?"
 "No."

"Do you know Thomas Brown of Nauvoo?"
 "No."
 "Do you know any one by the name of Long or Birch?"
 "No, I do not."

"You are probably then, not the person I was referred to by my friend Granville Young."
 "Where do you reside?" he asked.
 "In no particular place. Wherever business calls me."

Reynolds watched the expression of my countenance very closely, and finally said—
 "I think I understand your business."

"That is sufficient. The public street is no place for confidential conversation."

"I have no private room."
 "Is there no place in which we can meet?"
 "Anywhere you please."

"Well, I will get a horse and carriage at the Walton House and we will ride into the country."
 "Very well! I will meet you at the Walton House in one hour from this time."

Reynolds met me punctually at the time of his appointment. We rode through the principal streets, and were quite out of the city before I again introduced my business.

"You may think, Mr. Reynolds," I said, "that I am rather free for a stranger, but when I have satisfactory references, I am not backward in making business known, and have no fears that you will betray me."
 "I am not apt to betray confidence."

"Well, then, I will show you a little specimen of work, which I think will meet your approbation. What do you think of it?"
 I produced my blank bills on the Miners' Bank and the State Bank of Missouri. After inspecting them he replied—
 "It is very good. How much have you like it?"

"Only a few samples, but will soon have plenty of it. When I return I would like to leave a few thousand in the city. Young tells me you are acquainted with all the boys in this vicinity, and would not hesitate to assist me."

"I think I can render you some aid, if you request it. When I first met you, I thought best to be a little careful. It is equally times about here now. The officers are watching for Tinker from Cincinnati, and some others, but they won't find them, I reckon."

"Is Tinker in this city?"
 "Yes, but he can't be seen at present."

"Are the boys doing anything in this part of the country now?"
 "Not much. I am well acquainted with the men whose names you mentioned, but I confess I was at first afraid you were a spy."

"I thought that Young would not misinform me."
 "No; Young is true as steel."
 "He directed me to you as being able to accomplish more than any one here."

"These are the best imitations of the genuine bills I ever saw. None but the best judges could detect them."

"So I think myself. It costs a pile of money to engrave as good a plate as this, yet I believe I can realize a few thousand dollars out of it."

"I have no doubt you will do well with it. I don't know of anything of the kind now in St. Louis. I have a little bogus gold but have been dealing mostly in horses, and keep a livery stable. I buy horses very cheap of the boys; then fit them up to suit myself, and take them down the river to sell."

"Do you not occasionally have an owner come for a horse?"
 "Not often! I have had as many as eighteen or twenty horses at one time, and never had one claimed. I usually keep them out of sight until I get them fitted for market, and changing their appearance as much as possible. I put them on board a steamboat, and run them down to the southern market. I remember once I got frightened; I took a horse of one of the boys, who had stolen him back in the country. Before I had time to fix up and dispose of the horse, the man who had stolen him was taken dangerously ill; his attending physician pronounced his disease incurable, and I was fearful that he would not frighten and confess everything. In the meantime there was such close search for the horse, and I was compelled to keep him secreted; and I sheared and docked him, so as to change his appearance as much as possible. My fellow finally died, good grit, without showing on anybody; and watching my opportunity, I got the horse down the river, sold him, and so the matter ended."

"Are you dealing in horses now, or don't the boys keep you well supplied?"
 "Not very well at present. I got two horses a few days ago. One of the Longs, Fox, and Birch, come here with three good horses, a few days since, and left two of them with me. I had no suitable place to keep them, so I took them out a few miles, and put them in pasture."

"Young tells me that Fox and Birch are game."
 "They are—no mistake."

"I would like to get acquainted with them. Don't you think they will want to get some of the paper? I should be glad to supply them, with any quantity, upon my return. I suppose they always have plenty of money?"
 "They appear to be flush. I never saw Birch until he came here the other day with Fox and Long. Fox I have been acquainted with for a long time, and believe I know as much about his business as any other man. He has plenty of money—has always been very successful, and never spends much."

"What does he do with his money? I suppose, of course, he don't carry it about with him."
 "He tells me that he has about two thousand dollars secreted in the bluffs on the Des Moines River, in Iowa, concealed in four separate bottles, corked and sealed airtight. Fox is the most energetic fellow I ever saw."

He doesn't mind lying out three or four nights in succession to accomplish his designs. Storms, cold, or heat, hunger, or fatigue, are all the same to him. When he once gets a good sight he never fails to raise it."

"Is John Long as much of a hero as Fox?"
 "I am not as well acquainted with Long as with Fox. His physical powers are not equal to those of Fox, and he cannot endure as much."

"Where did they raise their horses, which they have left with you?"
 "In the upper part of Missouri. The one they did not leave with me, was the finest race mare I ever saw in my life. Fox said he would not take a thousand dollars for her."

"Are the boys in St. Louis now?"
 "No, not now."
 "Where are they?"
 "I don't know exactly."
 "I wish I could find him. Fox seems to be a splendid fellow."
 "Yes, and the others are of the right stripe."

"I suppose I cannot see them, then?"
 "They left St. Louis in a hurry about the first day of August. I was up town and happening to come across the Chicago Democrat, read an article containing the disclosures of West, and implicating Fox, Long, and Birch, in several robberies on Rock River, and also expressing the opinion that they were concerned in the Davenport murder, on Rock Island. I carried the paper home and showed it to the boys. They left St. Louis, and crossed to Illinois town the same day. Just at night, Fox returned after his race mare; he swore that his name should never be Fox, alias Sutton again and said they were all going east."

APPLIANCE TO STOP FORGERY

PARISEE RESIDENT IN LONDON MAKES GREAT INVENTION.

ELECTRICITY FOR INK

Continuous Series of Almost Imperceptible Perforations Burnt in Track of Pen.

Publishers Press.

London, Nov. 8.—A Parisee resident in London has invented an appliance designed to prevent forgery, and which should result in a considerable reduction in the number of persons who are convicted at the courts of this and other countries of that offense.

The method of operating the invention is simple. Inside a small glass-topped desk are fitted a pair of tiny batteries, together with a rheostat, condenser, and resistances, through which a powerful electric current is induced. The circuit is closed by what appears to be an ordinary stylographic pen attached to the desk by a piece of ordinary insulated electric wire.

The check or other document to be written upon is placed upon an aluminum plate affixed to the glass top of the desk, and is written upon in the ordinary way. But instead of ink, a fusilade of tiny electric sparks passes from the pen through the paper to complete the circuit inside the desk. Thus there is burnt a continuous series of almost imperceptible perforations in the track followed by the pen. Each hole is carbonized by the process, and to alter the order of the markings is impossible.

LORD ROBERTS TAKES INTEREST IN BOYS

Offers Book and Prize to the Student Making Best Advance Average at Bishop Foy School.

Publishers Press.

Dublin, Nov. 8.—Lord Roberts, on the occasion of his recent visit to Waterford (to which city his family belongs, made arrangements for the erection of a monument in the old Abbey church in memory of his only son, who was killed in South Africa. During his visit to the city Lord Roberts showed great interest in the educational work that was being done at the Bishop Foy High School for boys, and learned from the Bishop of Cashel that he (the Bishop) annually gives a prize for the best essay, and that the subject of the year's essay was "The Best Way to Defend One's Country." The gallant field marshal expressed great delight and at once offered a copy of his book, Forty-one Years in India, and an additional prize to the boy who was considered the best all-round pupil in the school.

POLITICS APLENTY IN OLD IRELAND

Outlook for Settlement of Question of Home Rule Declared to Be Very Encouraging.

Publishers' Press.

Dublin, Nov. 8.—It is a hard matter just now to get away from politics in Ireland. It is felt that the outlook for a settlement of the whole question of Irish home rule never was brighter. It is firmly believed that the recent unionist victory in Bermondsey will so strengthen the backbone of the house of lords that it will reject the budget and thus force Mr. Asquith to go to the country.

There is, by the way, an Irish cast to the election in Bermondsey. Dr. A. Salter, the socialist candidate, has been a strong advocate of home rule and was extremely popular with the Irish voters of the borough.

It is asserted and believed here that had the Irish leaders desired the election of the liberal party they could have divested enough votes from the socialists to have accomplished it. But the leaders want a general election with the veto power of the house of lords the issue, and the Bermondsey election, they believe, will help them get it.

STREET CAR CO. TO CROSS RIVER

COMMITTEE MAKING ACTIVE PREPARATIONS FOR NEW LINES.

DETAILS WELL GUARDED

Just What Extensions Are to Be Made is Matter That is Not Yet Ready For the Public.

Unless all signs fail the street railway company will start spreading out a bit, and that's real soon.

A committee of the directors of the new road spent several hours Monday in looking a little out and when a committee of busy men spends considerable time in looking a little out, it is a sure thing there will be something doing, and that, too, before many moons have swung the orb.

The directors of the street car company are as mum as the proverbial oyster when asked about the intentions of the company. Instead, however, of being "sealed" oysters, the members of the directory are "sealed" oysters.

This much, however, can be stated with considerable emphasis: The electric line will before long be "spoked." Unless the usual order is reversed those who want to get this service—and everybody ought to want it—should "skope" to the management and that without a moment's delay.

It is also believed that when the next branching out is done the river will be crossed. It was noticed Monday that the committee now engaged in wisely settling the routes to be followed, paid particular attention to the river. Just what point will be used in crossing the river is a sealed chapter, for the present.

Every little helps, but the street car service is seven big things in one package. The man who wants to get a street car service ought to be up and doing. Delays may prove vexatious, if not dangerous.

If walls or street car men would talk, a lot would now be public property. Both are silent, at times, however.

WILLIAM ANSON SENDS HORSES TO THE FAIR

Seven Sent in From His Head of the River Ranch for Shipment to San Antonio.

Billy Anson, who owns the Head of the River ranch, sent seven horses to town Monday which he will ship Tuesday to the San Antonio fair. Five of these animals are Steel Dust stallions, as prettily conformed and as good looking horses as can be found anywhere in the world, and two are the famous Suffolk Punch mares that Mr. Anson imported from England.

The contrast between the two breeds shows in striking lines the difference between the two types. The Steel-dusts are lithe and active as kittens, while the Suffolks are great stocks of horse flesh, while not exactly lumbering, at least not nearly so active as the smaller animals. But the powerful frames of the Suffolks tell of the great pulling abilities of that breed.

CONVENTION OF SUNDAY SCHOOLS

TOM GREEN COUNTY ASSOCIATION MEETS IN DECEMBER.

FOR DISTRICT AFFAIR

Effort Being Made to Have Representatives Here From Towns in Suburban Counties.

At the convention of the Tom Green County Sunday School Association to be held in San Angelo December 9, 10 and 11, an effort will be made to make it a district affair. Invitations will be sent to the pastors and Sunday school superintendents of the various cities in this part of West Texas, and it is believed that they will accept.

In speaking of the matter Monday, Rev. Dr. Foster, pastor of the First Baptist church, said it is the desire of the local association to have all of the surrounding towns join, among them being Eldorado, Sherwood, Sterling City, Miles, Bangs and Ballinger.

Dr. Williams of Dallas, general superintendent of Sunday school work, accompanied by his wife, will be here and will make several addresses.

The convention opens Friday, December 9, and adjourns Sunday night following. On Sunday some splendid services will be held. At 11 a. m. Dr. Williams will speak at one of the local churches on the subject, "Sunday School." At 2 o'clock a special meeting will be held for boys and girls. At 3:30 o'clock a meeting will be held for workers and at night union services, in which all churches will be asked to participate, will mark the close of the convention.

Dr. Foster left Monday afternoon for Dallas, where he will attend the Baptist General Convention of Texas. He will be out of the city for about ten days.

REVENUE FROM WHISKY SALE

FOR EVERY HORNFULL MAN DRINKS GOVMT. GETS 2 CTS.

FROM OLD KENTUCKY

A. S. Lacy, of Green River Distillery, Says Prohibition Has About Gone Its Limit.

A. S. Lacy, one of the proprietors of the Green River Distillery of Owensboro, Ky., was in San Angelo Monday. Like all new comers, he was greatly impressed with the city and was struck by the marked progressiveness of the people here.

"In Kentucky the prohibition movement has about spent its force and it is now diminishing," he said, in discussing the question that directly affects his investments. "We have about 25 or 30 wet counties and I am not the least apprehensive about the pros making any further gains."

In discussing whiskey in the making, Mr. Lacy explains the details most lucidly, especially with regard to the revenue producing side of the business.

"When whiskey is placed in bond," he said, "it must be 100 proof, or that is to say, it must be 60 per cent whiskey and 40 per cent water. The government makes allowances for evaporation ranging from 1 1-2 gallons per barrel—and the barrels average about 47 gallons—for whiskey removed after two and under four months storage, and this allowance runs up to 13 1-2 gallons per barrel after 84 months storage. When taken from the bonded warehouse each gallon of whiskey pays the government a tax of $1.10. When sold over the bars a gallon of whiskey will average 55 to 60 drinks. Let's take the low figure and we find that every time a man take a full hornfull he contributes the sum of 2 cents to the support of the government. That's where a lot of government money comes from and the reason is not hard to ascertain."

HOSPITAL FUND WILL BE RAISED THIS WEEK

Hard Campaign in Collecting Bonus Subscriptions is Bringing in Good Returns.

Attorney J. J. Neill, who represents the Sisters of San Antonio who are desirous of building a $30,000 hospital here, states that the indications now are that the entire amount of the $15,000 bonus asked and which has been subscribed, will be paid in by the end of this week.

"The hard campaign in collecting this money that has been waged is securing results," he says, "and some of the heavy subscribers who have been for one reason or another holding back, have come around nicely and have paid the amount of their subscriptions during the last day or two."

"New York is a great place for a merchant to visit for the purpose of buying goods and for people who delight to study crowds and to see, but when it comes to real living, well, commend me to dear old San Angelo," says C. B. Henderson, the big department store man, who is back from a buying trip to Gotham. "In New York one can see everything that womankind and the kingdom of man can possibly need, want or desire, and at prices small enough to be infinitesimal or big enough to shake a skyscraper.

More New Sweaters

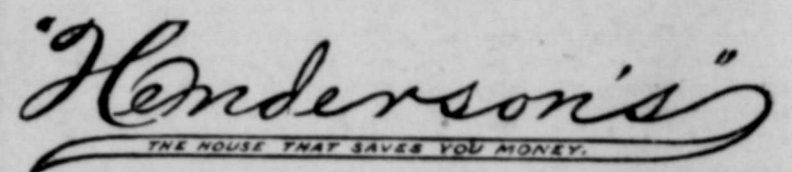

Recent shipments of pretty new Sweaters for ladies make our stock of these garments very complete.

We are now showing all sizes in reds, whites and greys. Also a few fancies.

They are new goods, and considering the fact that they are very hard to get at this time, we think that these are priced more than reasonably.

They are

$2.50 to $6.50

and it is this vast collection of wares and wearables and things that makes New York the ideal place to go to purchase goods.

"But in New York there is an utter absence of that feeling called friendship, as we of this country know friendship. With all the great opportunities there is a minimum of opportunity, as paradoxical as this may appear, for the reason the code that governs New York is the cold, calculating one of success or failure.

"Of course, I am looking for a bigger and a better business in the future than we have ever had in the past, and I have bought with that expectation. I have been continually doing a bigger and a better business with each recurring season, and I have no thought that this general rule will be violated during the coming spring."

Incidentally Mr. Henderson found that the high price of cotton that pre-valued here while he was gone was a good thing in more ways than one, and if there is anything that Mr. Henderson had rather see above everything else it is a long reign of cotton prices above the 15-cent mark.
