WRAP, Fort Worth

With all this improvement in the poultry chassis that has been going on in the "Chicken of Tomorrow" contest and the work with turkeys, etc., no one has yet come up with a four-drumstick fryer.

The biggest alteration in bird anatomy has been the wingless chicken, which is no real improvement anyway because there is only the back and neck left to feed the poor relations when they come to visit.

They say, however, that the "Chicken of Tomorrow" is already here. We say, then, let's eat.

Eggs are getting bigger, so manufacturers of egg cases are planning to enlarge the cases, flats and fillers a fraction of an inch to accommodate the improved cackles. Now, if ham and bacon will just enlarge proportionately breakfast will be more nearly complete.

Lots of folks are getting healthier than they've been for twelve months because garden produce is finding its way to the table. Getting the potatoes, beans, peas, squash, etc., out of the ground and into the pot or deep freeze at the right stage of growth subtracts much from the palatability and nutrition of vegetables, so harvest them at the right time. Some gardeners have them planted so there will be fresh vegetables coming off every week nearly all summer.

We learned, upon visiting C. H. McDowell at the Winter Haven experiment station in Dimmitt county (near Carri Springs) last week that the winter garden section of Texas is better for growing oranges than is the lower Rio Grande Valley—or at least, so said Mr. McDowell.

Oranges ripen on the trees here in the higher altitude, he pointed out. On the other hand, grapefruit and lemons do better in the Lower Valley.

We also confirmed our suspicions that it is harder to buy a slice of cold watermelon in sections of south Texas where they are grown in abundance than it is in the cities up this way. And in San Antonio the slice they served us for a quarter was twice as big as the slice we got at Pinar, in the Valley, for the same price.

And the cafes in the citrus-growing region serve canned orange juice, top.

Cotton is in all stages of growth in south Texas. And insects are in cotton over the whole state. It's going to be a bad year for cotton unless we knock them out early. Too much rain has already hurt the crop badly in many of the blackland areas.

W. E. Schrader, who railroaded until he was 67, now has at age 70, one of the finest gardens and peach orchards in Tarrant county we ever saw. He has pecan trees in his peach orchard, too. He grows winter legumes in his orchard and cultivates in the spring and summer. He gets a genuine pleasure in planting things and watching them grow and it shows up in his countenance.

Suggestions for Success

HERE ARE SOME sure-fire suggestions which will direct you on your path toward success. I found them in a timely little volume called "Live a New Life," published last spring by Professor David Guy Powers. And every one of these suggestions is easily followed if your mental attitude is right:

- 1—Cultivate the attitude of agreement. This is the very core of persuasion, "sweet reasonableness." Two or more minds coming together to seek understanding set the pattern of agreement. On the other hand, truculence creates truculence.
- 2—Accept men as they are and seek to understand them. There is a point of course, where a man must take the isolated peak and break with it all for clear principle, but until it comes he must work, if he would be of use, with men as they are. As long as good in them overbalances the evil, let him work with that for the best that can be got.
- 3—When dispute arises ask yourself, "How far can I go along with his views?" You may be amazed at the number of concessions you can really make before points of difference arise, and agreement in minor points often prevents issues from arising.
- 4—Assure the opposition that an agreement can be reached. Thomas A. Morgan advises: "I never assume that there is a fight. In fact, I tell the other person there isn't a fight, and ask his help with the problem."
- 5—Establish areas of agreement, and agreements will follow. In any dispute, be more than ready to compromise. The wise man continually seeks modifications which will create harmony. He knows that each item of agreement builds toward the next one by setting the pattern. Time spent in creating a mood of agreement is well invested. Follow the path of nature to a man's mind; present your story to his senses. For "the mind must yield to evident things." Remember there is nothing in the mind that was not previously in the senses.

Make demonstration a part of your thinking process. Visualize every aspect of your cause. Search your cause or product for its uniqueness. Ask yourself, "How can I make this point appeal to the senses of others?"

From where I sit... by Joe Marsh

Oh—My Aching Feet!

Other night just as I was settling down with a book and a mellow glass of beer, the wife calls down, "Joe—I almost forgot—you and I are going over to the High School and take dancing lessons!"

Now, I can waltz with the best of them, so I put up a quiet struggle against going but it was no use. Turns out it was the class in square dancing. And from the look on some of the other men I judged I wasn't the only one there who had been taken by surprise!

Miss Williams and Curly Lawson taught us what to do with our feet, and before it was over, darn if I wasn't actually enjoying myself. Going back next week, too!

From where I sit, we sometimes get an idea into our head for or against something and then hang onto it for dear life. Whether it's square dancing, or the right to enjoy temperate beer or ale now and then, we owe it to ourselves as Americans to take an open-minded attitude — that's even after we make up our minds about it!

Which?

When taxes are due, or insurance, or interest on borrowed money, do you say—

"I wish I had saved" or "I'm glad I did."

When vacation time comes this summer, will you say—

"I wish I had saved" or "I'm glad I did."

When emergencies arise, or sickness develops, or business opportunity presents itself, will you say—

"I wish I had saved" or "I'm glad I did."

The first answer means regret and failure; the second, success and accomplishment. If you start, and continue saving a definite amount regularly, you can always say, "I'm glad I did."

State Youth Join 4-H Safety and Health Programs

Conservation of human resources, a prime objective of 4-H Club work, is being achieved nationally by members sharing in the responsibility for improving individual, family and community health and safeguarding lives against accident.

Rural youth throughout the country are joining in the campaign by enrolling in the 1956 National 4-H Safety and Health programs. Both programs offer special awards for superior records to individual members and groups. In the 4-H Safety program, sterling silver medals are provided by General Motors for five winning members in each county. Also, the county reporting the most outstanding 4-H safety program this year will receive a plaque of merit, appropriately embossed. The State champion will get an all-expense trip to the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago next November. Eight national winners selected from the State champions will be awarded a $300 college scholarship each.

In the 4-H Health activity, attractive two-color certificates symbolizing health will be given to a maximum of four clubs in each county conducting the best health improvement program. In addition, $20 cash awards to be used for health education will be awarded to the ten 4-H Clubs in the State which carry on the best program. The member making the greatest progress in health improvement will receive an all-expense trip to the National 4-H Club Congress. The national awards also provided by Kellogg Company, Battle Creek, Mich., include a $100 U. S. Savings Bond and a blue ribbon to each member of the Blue Award group. The bond is to be used by the members to start a fund for protecting and maintaining their personal health.

Both of these programs are conducted under the direction of the Cooperative Extension Service. Complete information may be obtained from County Extension agents.

Ringworm Infection Is Common Ailment But Needs Attention

Austin, June 13.—It is a 50-50 bet that you have some sort of ringworm infection. Check to see. Chances are it will be in your scalp, hair, or your groin, or on your feet—either on the soles or between the toes. If you don't find it, you're lucky, because while it isn't serious, its itching and persistence is very annoying. A fungus—the same one that causes food to mold—causes ringworm. It's one of the world's most common ailments, with authorities estimating that half of the world's population is affected. It is more common this time of year than any other.

Animals get it too. As a matter of fact, cats, dogs, rabbits, mice, and fowls are frequently the source of infection in man. A child plays with an infected dog, the dog's hair brushes the child, and the child stands an excellent chance of ringworm infection. The scales which are formed can cause new infections on the body, so an infected person has to be careful to keep it from spreading. Advanced cases exude a clear, runny fluid—it "weeps" as doctors say, and the fluid can cause breaking out on whatever part of the body it touches. Children are especially vulnerable to scalp ringworm. Epidemics are usually started in schools or institutions.

Swimming pools, locker rooms, and gyms are potent sources of infection. Everyone has heard of "athletic's foot." It is nothing more than a type of ringworm. So is the so-called "barker's itch." Preventive measures call for avoiding persons and animals known to be infected. Swimming pools, gyms, locker rooms, and the like can do their part toward ringworm control by boiling towels, swimming suits and their other public facilities for 30 minutes. Foot baths are also worthwhile. The best thing to do is to keep clean at all times. But if you happen to get ringworm, or if you have it now, it will be better for all concerned if you report to your family doctor immediately. He'll recommend medication designed to shorten the course and lessen the severity of the infection.

"Let's Talk Live Stock"

By TED GOULDY

Fort Worth, June 13.—This is the season when cattlemen are faced with the $84 question—should we leave the cattle and calves on the grass and get the extra weights or should we ship 'em now and get the "before the rush" season's higher prices? It appears from this corner that right now is the best time to ship those dry cows and others with defects that make you want to be rid of them this year. It doesn't hurt a bit to have some extra grass in the fields and pastures and the extra sod and seed are money in the bank for winter or dry spells that may come later.

A good many cattlemen are working their herds earlier this year and a good number of young calves in the 300 to 350 pound range are being seen. Prices of from $25 to $31 for these calves are seen each day at Fort Worth. Only this week John Miles of Cresson had some old cows and some 315 pound calves, the calves at $31 and the cows brought enough to make around $300 a pair. Lots of money for stuff he didn't want to carry over. Sealing Ranch of Clay County sold 34 barren fat cows at $23 Tuesday. Stocker demand remains exceedingly lively. There are still enough lightly stocked spots in the Southwest that good demand is noted from this section and Northern feeders still have a good deal of feed and look for another big crop this year. Fleshy quick-turn steers and yearlings are in great demand in the Cornbelt.

Lots of steers contracted at seemingly "high" prices a few months ago look cheap now and at Fort Worth we see feeder buyers outbid packer buyers every day on fleshy to fat cattle.

Lambs are beginning to move from the farther West Texas areas. Sterling County was represented by Foster Ranch and J. T. Davis. The Foster lambs brought $27. Some lambs and yearlings are getting pretty heavily infested with needle grass and for that reason are slow to sell.

Ewes of breeding ages are in very broad demand from all quarters as sheepmen strive to rebuild their herds.

We had a report this week that floods in Australia had killed many thousands of sheep. This may mean Australian wool will not be as great competition for domestic fleeces next season but the wool and mohair market is doing all right anyway.

Hogs are still hovering around the $20 mark and the trade thinks they'll go higher. Feeder pigs are steady as a rock at Fort Worth.

Admiral William L. Mann, who has a farm near Georgetown, suffered loss of 30 acres of wheat in a hail storm and fruit trees were stripped. Guess the Admiral referred to the storm as a "hail broadside." He was philosophical about the trees. "Needed pruning anyway," he said.

We saw a registered Hereford breeder on the Fort Worth yards yesterday looking at some big 1,800 pound brahma bulls that sold for $22.00 per hundred. "Whew," he said, "that's nearly $400 per head. It hasn't been so long ago that if a registered sale averaged $400 for bulls, it was news all over the country." And just the other day, W. H. Hammon of Wichita Falls cleaned out a bunch of cattle to "make room for his good cattle" and the 153 head ranging from baby calves to old bulls brought nearly $25,000 on the stockyards. Some old bulls in just pretty good flesh at over $350 were in the lot.

Some cattlemen are expressing concern over the high market. Stop and think. The car you used to buy for $1,000 costs plenty more today. What did your suit of clothes cost you this year compared with 10 or 20 years ago. How about houses, rents, gasoline, or whatever you can think of.

Nope, livestock prices ARE NOT out of line with wages or anything else. Neither are farm product prices. Tell everybody you see. We are getting undue criticism when labor or capital or anybody else says livestock and farm prices are too high. "Taint so, Joey!"
