GETTING INTO THE SPIRIT OF THE OCCASION — Chicks are chicks but eggs become something special, when they are decorated for Easter. Here they combine to create a perfect holiday atmosphere. Many a Big Spring kitchen

But coal strike settled

Thorny problems remain

WASHINGTON (AP) — Union and industry officials prepared Saturday to sign a contract officially ending the

109-day coal strike, but all sides agree it will take more than a contract to resolve some of the issues that led to the walkout. Striking miners ratified the new three-year contract Friday. Final United Mine Workers figures showed 58,384 votes in favor, or 57 percent, and 44,210, or 43 percent, against.

When writing out tickets

Officers hear all excuses

By CARLA WALKER
"But officer, I am late to work," "...I have to pick up my sick child at school," and countless other reasons for exceeding the speed limit are heard daily by traffic police in Big Spring. Approximately four hours of riding in a patrol car with a policeman yielded some eight different excuses with several repeats.

Choate pointed out that a speeding vehicle takes longer to stop. "A car going 41 to 45 miles per hour takes a longer distance to halt. If another driver assumes the oncoming vehicle is going the 30 m.p.h. speed limit, and pulls out in front of the speeding car, the result would be disastrous."

"At least one speeding stop a day will be a con artist, and at least one or more will be someone with a grudge against policemen in general," said Choate. "Sometimes, it is hard to avoid being a little cynical about people, but most of us try to avoid that and certainly don't want to take it out on anyone — especially the nice people we stop."

Meanwhile, President Carter announced that he will create a Presidential Commission on the Coal Industry to "address the industry's long-term problems," particularly wildcat strikes.

"There are a lot of legitimate reasons for speeding, and each traffic policeman is called to make judgment decisions daily. I don't know that we are always right in giving one person a ticket and letting another go, but I do believe that we are all trying to do the best job we can," Choate continued.

"Local vocals," and "county mounties," are two of the nicer names by which radar-using policemen are called. In addition to the excuses for speeding the Big Spring traffic divisions hears a lot of adjectives applied to their names each day that they use radar.

"The usual reason for speeding is just carelessness," Choate said. "Admittedly, I am sometimes careless myself, but that is no excuse. Lives are lost and people are maimed for life simply because a driver was hurrying and ran a stop sign, or couldn't control the speed of his car."

Officials for the government and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association are concerned that wildcat strikers, who can virtually shut down an entire region of unionized mines over a local dispute, will not be deterred by the new pact.

There are a lot of frustrations in the job for Choate and the other members of the traffic division — known at the station as "Wallace's Weasels," because they work under Sgt. Jimmy Wallace.

Their job ranges from using radar to hopefully slow down drivers exceeding the speed limit, to "working" minor and major accidents.

"We just want people to be more conscious that they are driving a potentially lethal weapon," Choate said. "That is why we issue traffic citations."

Observers are predicting a period of relative calm in the coalfields while miners recover from the financial hardships of the long strike.

After seeing people killed because a driver was carelessly speeding, policemen take speeding a little more seriously than the general public does.

"I don't even mind the CBers giving away the fact that I am 'handing out green stamps' along Gregg or Interstate 20," said Choate. "If knowing that I am pulling cars over for speeding will slow motorists down as they travel through Big Spring, I don't at all mind them knowing that I am working Gregg with radar."

The industry, on the other hand, will guarantee payment of health and pension benefits in the future, a promise it never made in the past.

Health care will be provided individually by company-selected insurance firms in the future, and miners will have to pay up to $200 for care that has been free.

Basically, said Choate, the job of traffic cops is to make the streets safer for motorists, not to hassle them, as many drivers believe.

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — When Western Airlines flight 567 left for Los Angeles, there were 83 passengers on board. When it returned to Las Vegas a few minutes later, there were 84.

The newest arrival, a 7-pound girl, was born in the galley section of the Boeing 737 shortly after it left McCarran International Airport Monday morning.

Western said the mother, Mrs. Talal Shaibi, told a flight attendant she was ill shortly after the 7:40 a.m. takeoff. The stewardess located two doctors on the plane who helped Mrs. Shaibi to the rear and delivered the baby.

The plane returned to Las Vegas where an ambulance took Mrs. Shaibi to Sunrise Hospital. Mother and daughter were reported doing well.

Nation and industry paid high price for strike by miners

NEW YORK (AP) — The full cost of the coal strike to the national economy may not be known for months, but even now its scope can be gauged in terms of billions of dollars that might have been.

The 160,000 striking United Mine Workers members. Although the miners can recoup some of that in overtime once the mines resume operation, the industry says the total won't be made up this year.

—In the 3½ months since Dec. 6, the industry officials say, 120 million tons of coal might have been mined — representing revenues of up to $2.8 billion in direct sales for the coal companies.

Those figures are from economists for the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, the bargaining arm of the soft coal industry.

—Railroads, in that period, might have earned $660 million from hauling the coal that might have been mined. That boosts the total direct economic loss to $3.5 billion, according to the coal industry.

But that is only part of the story of the nearly 16-week strike that unofficially ended Friday with announcement that the union had approved a third contract proposal.

—Coal miners might have worked 11 million man-days, or 88 million man-hours, that were lost. That, the coal industry says, translates to $760 million in straight-time wages lost by

Many who are not directly connected with coal production have paid — and will continue to pay — a different kind of cost because electric utilities in the Midwest and East found themselves with shrinking coal supplies as winter dragged on.

Although the Colorado City Playhouse seats only 160, the four productions offered there annually invariably make money.

Snyder's Sarah Coleman has the lead in "Annie" and they say she's professional timber. She's already been invited to further her career in Dallas this fall.

Last year, the Little Theater group wound up with a profit approaching $4,000. Acting is a labor of love with all principals — no one accepts even an honorarium for what they contribute to the success of the Playhouse. The money is plowed back into the physical properties of the theater.

The musical has a cast of 32, including McKinnon himself and his nine-year-old daughter, Kimberly, who is utterly enchanted by the thought of treading the boards.

Newest offering of the group is "Annie Get Your Gun," a musical directed by Marsha Moore and produced by newspaper publisher Mac McKinnon.

The production is scheduled Thursday, Friday and Saturday for two successive weeks beginning April 6. Price of admission is a modest $3.50. Several Big Spring residents can be counted upon to be in the audience.

A group of scientists at the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory in New Mexico has cited these factors, and wants a chance for further tests on the shroud to try to resolve some of the problems about it.

There are those that argue that Monday Night Football on TV would be replaced by Milton Berle reruns if saucy wasn't provided on a recurring basis by Don Meredith.

Then there is Howard Cosell, who says Dandy Don doesn't contribute all that much. Fact is, insists Howie, Meredith came to him, hat in hand, begging for reinstatement as a resident member of the broadcasting team.

Meredith cut out several years ago to pursue an acting career with NBC. Before long, after being cast in a dreary succession of cop shows, Don began to chew the scenery. If Marlon Brando worried about his presence in arts thespian, he never showed it. Meredith agreed to work again for ABC for the same figure (300 big ones a year) that NBC was doling out to him. Howard insists those are journeyman's wages.

Cosell suggests that NBC was not too unhappy to see Meredith split the scene. Howard is continually being roasted in the newspapers but he insists such vilification only provides additional thrusts to his career. In other words, every knock is a boost.

If traffic gets any worse in the big cities, drivers are going to need an appointment to make a left turn.

Leading cotton export port is jeopardized

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — Cotton merchants here fear that closing down the federal cotton sampling office in Galveston would jeopardize the future of the nation's leading cotton export port.

The proposal to move the office to Memphis, Tenn. comes from the head of the Department of Agriculture's cotton division, Jesse Moore, who feels such a move would save the government money. Cotton for export or the New York futures market is graded on quality and staple length by two federal inspectors here. Certificates issued to brokers and their bankers for a fee guarantee buyers will receive the quality cotton they purchased.

Galveston Cotton Exchange head Louis Oliver said cotton dealers in Houston and Galveston can now get one-day grading service but moving the office to Memphis could require up to two weeks and might result in losses or mixups of samples.

"The move would disrupt the smooth-running operation the port has built up over the years," Oliver said. "Traditionally where the USDA has closed offices, the ports have lost their cotton."

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas and C.S. Devoy, director of the Galveston municipal wharves have joined Oliver in protesting the proposed move.

At one time Galveston handled up to 35 percent of American cotton exports but there has been an increase in overland shipments from West Texas to the West Coast for export to the Far East.

Most of the cotton shipped from Galveston also goes to the Far East.

The agricultural department provides free cotton grading service in Austin and Lubbock for growers to give them an idea of what kind of product they have to sell. But cotton intended for export or the futures market

Australian Justice recently sent to jail an herbalist who caused the death of a five-year-old child through heat stroke.

The boy, a victim of cerebral palsy, was taken by his parents to the herbalist, who identified the case as a simple one that could be cured in eight months — naturally for a hefty consideration.

The child was taken to a farm, wrapped in a sack and buried in manure in a pit with only his head and neck exposed. The boy tried desperately to escape.

The manure was so hot it burned the father's hand. After 20 minutes, the child ceased to breathe and cry.

The parents wanted to remove the child from the pit but the herbalist insisted that he remain there. Ultimately the boy was taken to a hospital in an unconscious state. He breathed with great difficulty and his bright red skin was blistered. The parents and the herbalist gave a false case history and a diagnosis of encephalopathy was made. Only when the child died four days later did the true story come out.

The man Erwin Rommel had intrigued historians since the German field marshal almost ran the British out of Africa.

Rommel, a flamboyant and imaginative battlefield commander who once came to America to study the military ploys of Jeb Stuart and Stonewall Jackson, was born low on the social scale. It was not unnatural that he developed a fierce antipathy for the aristocracy.

A hero to his men, Rommel defied the German general staff and was able to get away with it for much of WW II because of his closeness to Adolph Hitler. Battlefield successes impressed Der Fuhrer and Rommel was able to produce a succession of glittering victories.

In the end, disaster overtook him because he was sucked into the conspiracy of those intent on killing El Supremo and wanted to use Rommel's name to give a patina of authority to their plottings.

The assassination attempt failed. Rommel's name surfaced in the inevitable inquiry and he was extended the opportunity of taking his own life on the promise that his role in the conspiracy, minor though it may have been, would not be revealed. Another stipulation was that he would be given a hero's funeral.

The key to Rommel's character, which, no doubt, attracted him to Hitler, was an insatiable and voracious hunger for military glory. Medals and promotions fed his monumental ego.

He was first and last a government-issue, four-square military man. He wanted nothing else out of life other than to be a successful military commander and he almost pulled it off.

A.L. (Dusty) Rhodes, first man to announce for the U.S. Congressional post being vacated by Omar Burelson, says the most reliable polls show him to be holding a commanding 37 per cent of the vote — or 23 per cent ahead of his nearest rival. Big Spring's Jim Baum ranks a very distant third in this particular sampling, well back of Charles Stenholm.

Rizzo wrote Dewey on Thursday that at the news conference he had "decided, as I have always done, the hypocrisy wherein a black caucus is considered progressive while a white caucus would be considered racist...."

Just over $2.6 billions for cities

Size of request surprising

WASHINGTON (AP) — Last minute arguments by key aides convinced President Carter to seek just over $2.6 billion in new spending for cities in his national urban policy, double the amount he first decided on, reliable sources say.

The sources, who declined to be identified, said Carter stunned aides, who had been preparing his new urban policy for a year, when he told them Friday morning he was willing to add only $1.3 billion to present spending.

The sources gave this account of the final decisions on the policy Carter will announce Monday:

The president awoke early Friday to finish reviewing 200 pages of program options aides had prepared for him. Had he approved all the options, the price tag would have been $8 billion to $10 billion more than the $80 billion the federal government now funnels to states and cities.

Key aides were confident he would approve chief domestic adviser Stuart Eizenstat's private recommendation that he select about $3 billion in new spending. When Carter's choices amounted to less than half of that, "People began to jump out of windows and call their mothers at home," according to one aide.

When it became clear that Carter would rely heavily on a redirection of current federal programs, the shock waves rippled through at least nine government agencies which had submitted proposals for the new policy.

The costliest program that Carter finally added to the urban policy would provide $1 billion for a "soft public works" program, designed to put hardcore unemployed persons to work renovating local public buildings and facilities. The turnaround came in a mid-afternoon meeting between Carter, Eizenstat, Vice President Walter Mondale, Budget Director James McIntyre and Carter's chief political aide, Hamilton Jordan.

Of State Insurance Board House committee in probe

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The House General Investigating Committee picked up Saturday a probe the Travis County Grand Jury started last year of the State Insurance Board. Committee chairman DeWitt Hale said the grand jury had "strongly urged the committee to pursue not so much criminal aspects as administrative aspects" of its investigation. He said Travis County District Attorney Ronnie Earle had told him "his office did not contemplate further exploration into this field. He thought he had gone about as far as he could go and we ought to take it from there."

The former agents said the complaints — at least in part — involved Gulf Atlantic Life Insurance Co., which they claimed no longer operates in Texas. Former Rep. Don Cavness of Austin, a member of the grand jury that started the insurance board probe, said he had never met the men. He said the grand jury had not looked into any matters pertaining to Gulf Atlantic. Hale said he had invited Cavness and former grand jury foreman Fred Bomar to brief the investigating committee on the grand jury's work. Hale and Speaker Bill Clayton got a similar briefing by the grand jury last summer. It was then, Hale said, that the grand jury asked the committee to possibly extend the grand jury's effort, but "there didn't seem to be any particular urgency."

made an unannounced tour of the Richmond school. He said he anticipated a visit to the Mexia school. "The information that has been developed is not particularly sensational," said Hale. "Most of the material already is in the public domain." He said, however, he thought the five-member committee needs to hold a public hearing at Richmond and possibly the other two schools to "clear the air and settle this thing down."

"We will pick up the problem area and pursue it as it warrants," said Hale, D-Corpus Christi. "We're interested in a lot of things not criminal (in nature) — perhaps the poor administration of a state agency." The grand jury indicted former State Insurance Commissioner Joe Hawkins on June 30 for allegedly lying to the grand jury about rides on an airplane maintained by Great Commonwealth Life Insurance Co., which was under his supervision. Hawkins pleaded no-contest last month to a misdemeanor charge that he illegally accepted a plane ride from the company and, as part of a plea bargain, prosecutors moved to dismiss the felony aggravated perjury indictment. Hawkins was assessed one-year probation and a $2,000 fine.

learning project for beginners in sculpture." Venn's own experience helps him evaluate the students' work. One of his creative sculptures represents a toy truck and is a satire on the automotive age. "It attempts to bite the hand that feeds it," he pointed out. By turning a handle, the hood of the "truck" opens as a vicious maw, grabs a coin put in place by the hapless operator. Then, the hood snaps shut with a clank, almost grabbing the operator's hand. The coin disappears to the back of the mechanism and is locked in.

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Hunt Petroleum Corp. has filed suit in U.S. District Court to enjoin the Idaho Land Board from holding a public auction of oil and gas leases for 34,000 acres adjoining and under Bear Lake in Southeastern Idaho. Gov. John Evans, other members of the land board and Land Director Gordon Trombley have been ordered by U.S. District Judge Marion Callister to show cause next Thursday why a preliminary injunction should not be issued to prevent an April 5 auction. The board has scheduled a public auction on the Bear Lake County court house in Paris on that date to sell the oil and gas leases or rights thereto covering a portion of the bed of Bear Lake. Hunt plans to drill underneath the lake at an angle from a shoreline position. The suit, filed Friday, said Ed Pendleton on Feb. 6, 1976, applied for oil and gas leases on the sections of state owned land proposed to be sold at public auction. The suit said the applications were duly granted by the Land Board and that Pendleton, or his assignee, Hunt Petroleum Corp., is entitled to, and has vested rights to the issuance of oil and gas leases from the state. Over the objections of Evans and State School Superintendent Roy Truby, the land board voted, 3-2, on Jan. 10 to allow Hunt to launch an oil exploration venture under the bed of Bear Lake, which straddles the Utah-Idaho border. The exploration was contingent upon approval of Bear Lake County Commissioners and the Bear Lake Regional Commission, a bi-state organization which regulates development along the shores of the scenic lake.

Two of the recent designs — a time-tested hobby horse and a peg board — were favored by a couple of 2-year-old critics. But the rookie designers discovered there were some unanticipated problems. The hobby horse was a favorite, perhaps because the legs moved up and down as it rolled across the floor, but the children kept pulling the head off. The peg board, with a crank to move pegs up and down, proved a bore at first. Finally, the children caught on and rearranged the pegs. Then, the only trouble came from arguments over who had the pegs first. "Toy manufacturers might spend months developing any one of these toys," said Venn. "So the grade isn't dependent upon total success. This is a

Stroke victim retained Act of affection

SANTA FE (AP) — Wofford Cain, a Dallas, Texas, millionaire, was incapacitated by a stroke during his final years, but Southern Union Corp. kept him as chairman of its board of directors. It was just an expression of longstanding affection and esteem. We sure didn't want to hurt him," recalls Southern Union chief counsel Art Grenier of Dallas. Cain, the key name in accusations being raised against the four-state utility here, was a founder of the company and the third largest stockholder. When he died last year at almost 80 years old he was unable to speak, Grenier said. Cain had no children, but he was close to a nephew, Frank Wofford Denius, another major stockholder. All this, strangely, has to do with the price of gas in New Mexico, where Southern Union operates under the name Gas Co. of New Mexico. Mary Frances Clark, a young consumer advocate lawyer from New York, asserts in a confidential report to the New Mexico Public Service Commission that Cain, Denius and John T. MacGuire violated the Clayton antitrust act. In the critical years of 1972 through early 1975, Cain, Denius and MacGuire, all directors of Southern Union, were also directors of Aztec Oil and Gas Co. and Southern Union Production Corp. SCARSDALE, N.Y. (AP) — It was a narrow escape for actress Joan Bennett. Fire extensively damaged her home but Miss Bennett and her husband of two months, David Wilde, escaped from the house without injury after the fire started shortly before 6 a.m. Friday, officials said. Steer thinclads win ABC Relays

By DANNY REAGAN

The adequate but very vocal crowd at the ABC Relays Saturday basked in the warmth and sunshine as the home team took the championship trophy in the boys' division and the runner-up award in the girls' division.

The only cloud on the horizon was the boys' 440-yard relay event. Big Spring was favored to win that race going away, but a missed hand-off on the last exchange cost the locals their chance at thrilling the crowd.

When Kenneth Coffey and Bobby Huff missed the exchange, the exuberant crowd suddenly went silent.

The locals didn't need the 20 points a win there would've brought, however, as they swept the boys' division with total of 182 points. Lubbock Estacado was the closest to the Steers with 149 points.

In a pleasant surprise for Head Coach Jerry Carter, the Bold Gold thinclads performed above the norm in the field events, taking a first, three seconds, a fourth and a fifth there.

Rusty Braun set a new personal, meet and school record with his pole vault of 13'6" for first place. Team-mate Robbie Wegner finished right behind with a second place clearance of 13 feet.

Senior Kenneth Coffey captured second place in both the high jumps and long jumps. He cleared 6'2" in the high jump and set a new school record with a leap of 22'8" in the long jump. Joe Willie Jones also took 4th in the long jump with a 21'3 1/2" leap.

Steve Painter marked a personal best with a shot put of 47'8 3/4" for fifth place in the last of the field point winners.

Coffey also scintillated in the 330 Intermediate Hurdles, winning that event by seven-hundredths of a second over Odessa's Glen Fink. Coffey ran a 40.47 on a slow track. He has marked a 39.8.

The sophomore distance medley team of Craig Neighbors, James Martin, Rudy Hilario and Steve Trevino gave the crowd one of its more suspenseful moments of the afternoon when Martin anchored in a winning time of 11:11.0. That nudged out champion-contender Estacado by two-tenths of a second.

The Big Spring sophomores also took second in the 2-mile relay, and third in the 880 and mile relays.

The varsity mile relay team finished first with a 3:27.0. That team is composed of Eddie Puga, Eugene Boadle, Kenneth Coffey, and Craig Neighbors.

The local 880 relay team of Bobby Huff, Ray Luedecke, Boadle and Puga also captured first place with a 1:31.3 time.

"If we hadn't dropped the baton in the 440 relay," said Carter, "it would've been a super, super meet. Of course, anytime you win it's unbelievable. No one can remember the last time a Big Spring team won a meet."

Carter was not surprised at the success of his charges, however. "The surprising is over, the improving is what's now," he said. "People are going to start worrying about us being in their meets now. And it's been a doggone long time since anyone worried about anyone from Big Spring."

Carter indicated that his team just keeps getting better and better. "We ran well on a decidedly slow track, and we did a good job. I thought our sophomores would do better," he added, "but I was very proud of them."

In the girls' division, Jeannie Hester's troops finished second with 99 points, to powerful Ectors' 134.

"They (Ector) were just a powerhouse," said Hester. "Such depth." The local squad is relatively small in comparison to the other schools in the West Texas area.

Hester was only disappointed in the shot and discus. Junior Kathy Bird-was sprained an ankle Friday and wasn't able to compete.

"Our kids gave it everything they had," Hester said, "and I think it can best be summed up by what the San Angelo coach said when someone asked her who she had to beat to win the meet. She said: "Ector because they're such a powerhouse, and Big Spring because they don't think they can lose."

Selena Harris and Connie Jackson were the big point getters for the locals. Harris took third in the triple jump with a 31'10" leap and Jackson was 4th with 31'5".

Jackson was also first in the long jump with a new school record leap of 16'11 1/2", and Harris was third in that event with a 16'7 1/2" leap.

Pam Banks also took first in the high jump with a 5'1" clearance. In running events, Terri Deel was 4th in the 440. Harris was third in the 220, the 880 relay squad set a new school record of 1:46.37 in finishing second and Donna Diliberto finished second in the mile with a 5:50.8.

The 440 relay team of Jackson, Harris, Tammey Woodard and Doris Mitchell finished first with a speedy 50.4 time.

The girls' varsity and JV cinder teams travel to Amarillo next weekend, while the freshmen will be involved in a varsity meet in Snyder. The boys will be in Plainview Saturday.

Steers fall to Midlanders, 4-3

MIDLAND — "It was the same old story," said Steer baseball coach Tommy Collins following his club's 4-3 loss to Midland High Saturday.

"We've had seven hits in the last 14 innings of district play, and you're just not gonna win many ball games that way," he continued. "If the bats don't start going next time, there's gonna be some changes made in the lineup."

The Steers only managed three hits against the Midland Bulldogs. "Other than that and a few defensive mistakes, we played okay. We had the chances to win it, but the sticks didn't come through."

The Steers drew first blood in the second frame when catcher Tony Mamm laced a solo round-tripper over the fence. Midland came back in the bottom half of that inning to score two runs, however, and added the other two in the third.

In the fourth, the locals rallied, as first baseman Johnny Mize singled after Tony Rubio had grounded out to begin that inning. Mize advanced to second on a passed ball. Pitcher Charlie Vernon struck-out for the second out, and then three consecutive walks, one intentional forced in Mize for the run.

However, third baseman Ricky Myers flied out to the centerfielder with the bases loaded.

In the sixth frame, the Steers also looked hungry for a second. Mize beat the throw from the catcher after a dropped third strike, but was forced out later at second on Vernon's grounder.

Mann then popped up to the shortstop, David Manley walked, and both he and Vernon advanced on a wild pitch. Larry Smith then drove in Vernon with a single, and another wild pitch advanced runners to second and third. Myers struck out to end the inning.

Charlie Vernon took the loss for the locals. He pitched six innings, gave up five hits, four runs (one earned), and walked three batters and struck out three.

The Steers have now dropped five games in a row, and stand at 7-7 on the season and 0-2 in first half of District 5-4A play. They host the Permian Panthers Tuesday in Steer Park at 4 p.m. in their next game.

Nelson leads Heritage

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Larry Nelson, a quiet little guy with a perpetually puzzled expression, survived the subtle terrors that claimed the other challengers and with a hard-won 68 established a 2-stroke lead Saturday in the $225,000 Heritage Golf Classic.

Nelson, a slightly built, balding 30-year-old former illustrator who didn't take up golf until he was 21, was in a cozy group of five who shared the lead at the start of the day but emerged the sole leader after 54 holes with a 206 total.

That's 8-under-par on the testing 6,655-yard Harbour Town Golf Links.

As an example of its deceptively destructive capabilities, the final threesome on the course required 20 strokes to play the par 5 15th hole — double bogey 7s by PGA champion Lanny Wadkins and Hale Irwin, twice a winner of this invitational event, and a bogey 6 by Nelson, who is struggling for the first title of his five-year tour career.

Chunky Craig Stadler, a former U.S. Amateur champion, and skinny David Graham, a dangerous veteran from Australia, shared the No. 2 position at 207 after matching 67s.

Another 2 strokes behind at 209 were PGA champion Lanny Wadkins and veteran Fred Marti. Wadkins struggled to a 72 while Marti ground out a 69, one-upping his last four holes, which he played in par figures.

Wadkins was one of the four men tied with Nelson after two rounds. The others all fell further back. The intensely competitive Irwin shot 73-210. Miller Barber and George Burns each were 74-211.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Jack Givens scored 23 points, including a key breakaway layup in the last two minutes, helping top-ranked Kentucky hold off the game but foul-pugged Arkansas Razorbacks 64-59 Saturday in the semifinals of the NCAA basketball championships.

The Wildcats, 29-2, advanced to Monday night's title game against Duke, 27-6, which earlier beat Notre Dame 90-86 before a roaring crowd of 18,721 at the Checkerboard.

Givens, a straight-shooting, muscular senior forward, was the key for the Southeastern Conference champions. He scored 10 of his points during one stretch early in the second half, powering the Wildcats from a tenuous 32-30 halftime lead into a nine-point advantage at 54-45 with 8:53 left.

Despite the foul trouble on Steve Schall that forced the 6-foot-11 center out of the game with 6:19 left, the Razorbacks, 31-4, made a game of it behind key baskets by Sidney Moncrief, Marvin Delph and Alan Zahn, Schall's substitute.

Zahn's tip-in on a missed free throw by Moncrief with 3:33 left brought the fifth-ranked Razorbacks within 59-58, while the red-clad Arkansas rooters roared their approval.

Givens later supplied a key rebound after a missed shot that gave Kentucky possession of the ball with 2:44 left. James Lee, another of the heroes for Kentucky with 13 points in a reserve role, was fouled at that point and sank two free throws for a 61-58 lead with 2:21 to play.

Zahn made one of two free throws with 1:58 remaining, trimming Kentucky's lead to 61-59. Kyle Macy, the Wildcats' floor general, then helped seal Arkansas' fate with an inbound pass than carried past midcourt and landed in Givens' hands. The 6-5 forward drove home the killing points with an easy layup with 1:54 to go.

The Razorbacks, co-champions of the Southwest Conference, were able to get only one shot the rest of the way against Kentucky's brutal press, a flip by Ron Brewer. Macy added Kentucky's final point with a free throw with five seconds left.

The Razorbacks were in early trouble as Schall picked up his fourth foul and had to sit down with 13:12 left in the first half. About 3 1/2 minutes later, another of the Razorbacks' front-court players, 6-7 Jim Connce, picked up his third foul. With 3:52 remaining in the first half, he got his fourth and had to spend the remainder of the half on the bench.

The Wildcats were able to take advantage of Arkansas' foul problems, firing passes inside for easy layups by Givens, Lee and Mike Phillips.

The Wildcats led 28-21 with 5:58 left in the first half, before the Razorbacks mounted a comeback, cutting the deficit to two at intermission.

The victory apparently puts the unbeaten Holmes into position for a title shot against Ken Norton, the World Boxing Council champion.

It was a masterful boxing performance by Holmes, who came close to stopping Shavers in the final round. He moved side to side, jabbed well and countered with both hands against Shavers, whose performance was much more miss than hit.

In the waning seconds, Holmes flashed home a right counter to Shavers' chin and Shavers buckled, his right knee dropping to just inches from the canvas. He straightened up and Holmes fired six shots to the head. Shavers looked ready to go down when the bell rang and he staggered across the ring to his corner.

Judge Harold Buck and judge Joe Swessel each scored it 120-108, and judge Dave Moretti saw it 119-109, all for Holmes. The Associated Press favored Holmes, 119-108.

Holmes burmas Shavers

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Larry Holmes nullified the vaunted power of Earnie Shavers with speed, a rapier left jab and flurries of precision punches to the head Saturday in pounding out a one-sided 12-round decision in their nationally televised heavyweight fight.

HURDLES HEAT — Sophomore Jana Wegner of Big Spring, second from left, digs in during one of the girls' 80-yard low hurdle preliminaries during Saturday morning action in the ABC Relays. The local girls took second place in the meet with a total of 99 accumulated points. Odessa Ector won the meet with 134 points. Jana did not make the finals in her particular event, but the local girls performed admirably in the face of Odessa Ector's overwhelming talent.

Danny Reagan Ride 'em Roy!

"Praise the Lord and pass the cinders please!" The ABC Relays were blessed with near-perfect weather and a relatively adequate (that's paper lingo for "not big as it should have been") crowd Saturday. They can thank me for that... at least the weather part. And it wasn't the highly effective "Reagan Reverse Curse" either. It was a quick call to San Angelo that did it. Buzzed up sports king Jack Cowan down there Friday and told him not to send sportswriter Roy "Thundercloud" Ivey. The more trivia-minded of you out there will remember that Ivey was responsible for "White Friday", the 1976 Big Spring-San Angelo football game played here in six inches of snow.

He also came up here last year for the ABC Relays and brought a rainstorm that was right out of the Johnson Flood days. No telling what he would've brought with him this year, probably a tornado.

But Jack sent Gilbert Montez instead. Gilbert was allegedly responsible for a small dust devil at a baseball game back in 1974, but he can't hold a hair-trigger to Ivey.

By the way, the award-winning Danny Valdes picture of the relay team running in the one-quarter mile lake at "Old Memo" that I used again last year to promote the Relays (and unfortunately prophesize the rain), has special meaning for Ivey.

He was on the anchor leg of that race for his team back in 1966. That's probably when he picked up his propensity to bring the natural disasters back to Big Spring when he visits.

INDISCRIMINATELY SPEAKING — Jimmy "Bogie" Wilson, former Steer diamond master, had nothing but praise Friday night for one of the prime movers in this year's ABC Relays, but had a few sour grapes for the Texas Tech baseball coach.

"The best coach I ever had was Oakey Hagood," said Wilson, in reference to the one-time Bold Gold baseball mentor. Hagood, along with Tom Koger and Jerry Carter were co-met directors for this year's ABC fireworks.

But Wilson had less than words of praise for his ex-coach in Raiderland. "Until (Kal), Segrist stops using the seniority method instead of talent method in picking his lineups, he's not going to have a winner," the former big stick said.

Wilson may have a point there. Tech is currently 15-12 on the year and 5-4 in conference.

Lubbock Coronado pitcher Gene Segrest (no relation and different spelling), had this to say regarding his visit to Big Spring a week ago Friday when he went the distance and took a 4-2 win from the locals: "I thought Big Spring had as good hitters as I have faced all year." But he explained his win this way: "I would say the weather had a lot to do with it. It was pretty, not windy or cold. It's the first game I have pitched this season when the weather was good."

—Still speaking of Lubbock, former Steer hurler Dick Battle, now of the Lubbock Christian College nine, smacked a double Friday to help his team in its 9-0 win over Coe College. Battle is now 1-2 from the hill.

—Rod Carew, who missed by 12 points last season, feels that he might have a chance at hitting .400 this year if he bunts more. Hmm. Might work.

—Things have changed in the press box since women writers gained admission, according to Dick Young. At a recent ballgame he attended, a gal writer leaned forward from her chair and said "Hey, look at that!" as a guy in tight pants walked through the stands.

—For all you leisure time athletes out there, here's a good exercise to perform before you play tennis or handball. It's called the "shoulder stretch." First raise the right arm. Then bend your elbow so that your right hand is positioned behind your head. Reach up with your left hand and grasp the fingers of your right hand and pull for 15 to 25 seconds. (This also works for taking yourself into your own custody.) Reverse positions and repeat the exercise three times. The increased flexibility will lessen your chance of injury.

REMARKABILITIES — "Coaches are always under the gun. I'd like to see the won-lost records of doctors out front where people could see for themselves. Won 10, lost 2." — ABE LEMONS, University of Texas basketball coach.

"I can almost guarantee you that if the federal government steps in, rather than spending $5.5 million and having 65 employees (like the NCAA), within three years they will be spending something like $200 million and have 5,000 employees and it will run with the same efficiency as the postal service and Amtrak." — REP. NORMAN F. LENT (R.-N.Y.), at the House hearings on the NCAA.

"Now that players have contributed $150 each to set up $225,000 retirement fund for Marvin Miller, it is expected he'll step down as head of union after next contract negotiations, two years hence. Lords of Baseball would gladly contribute if he'd make it sooner." — DICK YOUNG.

"Sorry about Roscoe, Gretchen." — FAVORITE SPOTTER, on demise of Mousse's favorite cat.

STEPPING INTO IT—Sam Walker of Dallas prepares to unleash the shot during a workout at SMU Thursday, last August. The 6-2, 255-pound Walker was hospitalized and his right arm paralyzed after a severe case of mononucleosis. Now, Walker is training for both the heavy weight weightlifting and shot put events at the 1980 Olympic Games.

'Superman' Sam Walker story full of courage

NEW YORK (AP)—Last August, massive Sam Walker was lying in a hospital bed, his right arm paralyzed following a severe attack of mononucleosis, and "he couldn't even pick up a glass of ice tea," according to his wife, Carolyn.

Now, the 6-foot-2, 255-pound Walker, a former defensive tackle for Southern Methodist University's football team, has recovered sufficiently to have designs on winning gold medals in two strenuous, back-breaking events in the 1980 Olympic Games—the shot put and heavy weight weightlifting.

That is, if he can compete in the Olympic Trials in both sports—an opportunity he was denied in 1976, when the qualifying for the shot put was held in Eugene, Ore., and the qualifying for super heavy weight weightlifting (Walker's division that year) was held in York, Pa.—on the same day.

"If nothing is done to correct the situation in 1980, the same thing is going to happen as occurred in 1976," the hard-working Walker said glumly. "And it's simply because they (the Amateur Athletic Union) doesn't care. Their officials only care about their own individual sports. They make it extremely rough on me."

In 1976, when Walker realized there would be a conflict of dates, he wrote letters to officials of the AAU and the U.S. Olympic Committee pleading with them to help him with his plight. His pleas went unheeded, and he decided to forego the shot put trials even though "it's the event I love best" and opted for the weightlifting qualifying because he felt the competition would be easier.

He made the weightlifting team, but suffered a strained back in American team workouts at Plattsburgh,

N.Y., sidelining him for three weeks, restrained it during the Olympic competition at Montreal and finished a disappointing ninth in the super heavy weight class, behind the champion, Russian strongman Vasily Alexeyev.

Since then, Walker, who lives in Dallas and works for American Petrofina, a job he obtained through the help of the Olympic job training program, has been in constant communication—except for the period he was stricken with mononucleosis last year—with AAU and USOC officials, urging them to avoid a conflict for the trials for both events in 1980.

"If only I can get them to give me the opportunity to try out ... to see if I can do it ... make both teams," Walker said. "Obviously, I have to meet the qualifying standards in the two sports. I made them last time (in 1976) and I'm sure I'll be able to make them again in two years."

"I got so aggravated in 1976 when they said they couldn't relax the rules for me, and give me some kind of a break so I could try to qualify in the shot put and in weightlifting. After all, I had trained so hard for so many years for both sports."

However, Walker's herculean efforts again may be wasted.

The schedules for the 1980 Olympic Trials have not yet been determined, but there already are ominous notes being sounded.

The most ominous belongs to Rudy Sablo, a member of the National AAU and a representative on the Executive Board of the USOC, representing weightlifting.

"He wanted us to waive the rules for him, but we wouldn't do it," Sablo said, referring to Walker's attempts two years ago.

Sablo also explained that in 1964, former New York University star Gary Gubner wanted to attempt the same double that Walker is trying, "so we have a precedent."

"Gubner had to make up his mind, to compete in one or the other," added Sablo. "It's to the athlete's advantage to do only one sport.

"Walker, of course, would be free to try both, if the qualifying dates don't conflict. But I think he would be dissipating his energies and would have a problem. I don't think he could do well enough in both sports."

"I don't think he would make the team in either. That's just my personal opinion. Don't get me wrong. Sam Walker is a good competitor, and he could surprise me with what he will be able to accomplish in two years. But I don't think he will be able to do both, not well, anyhow."

"Remember," continued Sablo, "at the Games, he would be competing in one sport one day and the other sport the next day."

Walker, however, is not that easily discouraged.

He plans to continue his rigorous daily workouts, a total of about four or five hours ... in both sports.

He still is trying to regain his full strength from his bout with mononucleosis, suffered 7½ months ago in Budapest, Hungary, during an international weightlifting competition.

"The doctors said it was one of the most severe cases they had ever seen," said Walker. "I probably should have gone into the hospital earlier. But I was stubborn."

"Then, my temperature went up to 105 degrees and my right arm atrophied ..."

Irish upset!

ST. LOUIS (AP)—John Harrell and Jim Spanarkel, who hit 20 points for the Blue Devils, tossed in two free throws apiece for Duke, but Williams and Tracy Jackson responded with baskets for Notre Dame. With 50 seconds remaining Spanarkel threw the ball out of bounds and Tracy Jackson sank a 15-footer for Notre Dame to make it 88-86 with 20 seconds remaining.

A turnover gave the Irish a chance to tie, but Williams' 18-foot jumper from the left side bounced off the rim with 12 seconds to play. Two free throws by Harrell with 9 seconds left clinched the victory.

The Blue Devils, who led the nation in free throw percentage this season, hit a scorching 32 of 35 against the Irish.

RUNNING AWAY WITH IT Big Spring's Salina Harris can be seen leaving the pack in her wake Saturday morning during the preliminaries of the girls' wind sprints. The speedy local girl took second in that event of the ABC Relays easily, and helped her team win second in the 880 relay as well.

Easter Lemons gets the eggs

COLUMBUS, Neb. (AP)—For Easter, or for any time that is, Texas basketball Coach Abe Lemons should have played a National Invitation Tournament game in Lincoln, Neb.

He was sent a dozen Grade A Nebraska eggs, complete with basket and three eggs saying, "Eggs for Abe," after a Columbus woman read a story quoting him as saying eggs were $4.95 per dozen during the NIT finals in New York.

Jack Flynn of Columbus, who masterminded the idea, said Nebraska fans would have cheered the Big Red to victory at home and Texas could have avoided the trip to New York.

Flynn said Lemons could have bought the "two of the best eggs in all the world in Nebraska with all the trimmings for a buck and some change."

Lemons' refusal to play in Lincoln created a controversy during the NIT and Texas won.

.466 Watson leads Astros

COCOA BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Bob Watson knocked in his 10th run of the spring and raised his batting average to .466 as the Houston Astros shut out the Atlanta Braves 4-0 Saturday in exhibition baseball action.

Watson, who has been among the National League's most consistent hitters over the past eight years, has batted out 14 hits in 30 trips to the plate so far this spring.

Rangers lose to Orioles

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Ken Singleton led a 10-hit attack with two doubles and a single Saturday as the Baltimore Orioles downed the Texas Rangers 8-4 in an exhibition baseball game.

Baltimore centerfielder Al Bumbly, who hit only four home runs last season, hit a solo homer in the seventh, giving the Orioles a 3-2 margin and putting them ahead to stay.

Lee May followed with a two-run shot in the eighth and Baltimore added three more runs in the ninth.

Texas, now 10-5 this spring, scored twice in the third inning to take the early lead, but the Orioles tied it up with single runs in the fourth and fifth innings.

Al Oliver and Bump Wills each had two hits for Texas.

Hogs end drills in cold

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (AP)—The University of Arkansas football squad wound up its first week of spring football drills Saturday in subfreezing weather.

After practice, coach Lou Holtz said, "We're really coming along on defense. The hitting has been good."

Holtz praised lineman Jimmy Walker, Dan Hampton, Jim Elliott and noseguard Stan Freeman, noting that "all of them impressed me."

Holtz was bothered Saturday by the number of injuries which have plagued the offense during the first week of spring drills.

"We keep getting people banged up and its hard to gain the consistency you have to have," he said.

Offensive guard Birt Locke reinjured his right knee during Saturday's workout. However, trainer Dnee Weber doesn't see the injury as serious.

Running back Ben Cowins sustained a hip pointer and receiver Bobby Duckworth got a bruised rib.

The Razorbacks will resume practice Monday following an Easter Sunday break.

Confidence is the key for Eddie Johnson, and not even two missed free throws in overtime could shake that confidence.

"Those first two I missed came when I was winded," said the rookie from Auburn, who failed on two tries from the foul line with 1:09 to go in overtime and the score tied. "But I got a second chance."

And he made the most of it, sinking both shots with four seconds remaining to cap a career-high 29-point effort that helped the Atlanta Hawks beat the New Orleans Jazz 96-94.

"Once I got the first one," said Johnson, "I was home free."

Elsewhere in the NBA, the Houston Rockets edged the Kansas City Kings 107-103, the Chicago Bulls trimmed the Boston Celtics 97-96, the Philadelphia 76ers outscored the Milwaukee Bucks 131-122, the Washington Bullets defeated the New Jersey Nets 107-104, the Detroit Pistons topped the Portland Trail Blazers 107-95, the Los Angeles Lakers beat the Buffalo Braves 120-115 and the Seattle SuperSonics stopped the Indiana Pacers 104-102.

New Orleans' Gail Goodrich, who scored 34 points, sent the game into overtime tied at 90 with two free throws with 22 seconds left. Atlanta was unable to get off a shot before time expired.

Two baskets by John Drew gave the Hawks a four-point lead in overtime, but the Jazz tied it on two free throws by Truck Robinson and a 20-foot jumper by Pete Maravich.

Rockets 107, Kings 103

It was Calvin Murphy night in Houston and the veteran guard responded with 25 points to help the Rockets beat the Kings and snap a 13-game losing streak. Murphy got off to a slow start and shot 9-for-28 from the field overall, but he did hit for 6 points in the last two minutes.

Billie Jean chugs back slowly

NEW YORK (AP) — Billie Jean King's tennis comeback may be chugging along slowly, but the lady still packs a mean wallop when she aims at women's affairs and social structures.

"Don't go to college if you want to make your living in sports," she told some New York high school editors, representing 315,000 students in 111 schools.

Professors squirmed uncomfortably. Teachers stiffened. The kids couldn't believe their ears.

"But suppose I get a tennis scholarship, shouldn't I take it?" asked one of the youngsters.

"If you want to be a pro tennis player or enter into any other athletic profession, college is the wrong vehicle," the queen of the courts insisted Tuesday.

"If you are on a scholarship, you can't take any prize money. It's the sheer hypocrisy of the American educational system.

"If you decide to enter music, if you want to be a doctor or a lawyer, you are encouraged to try to improve your skill levels through outside experience for which you get paid. But if you are an athlete and do the same thing, your scholarship is taken away from you.

"It's discrimination against the athlete. It is total dishonesty."

King, 35, essaying a return to competition after another in a series of knee operations, took a break from the Virginia Slims circuit to appear before the group at Norman Thomas High School.

Wearing a white sweater and surrounded by associates from the New York Apples of World Team Tennis, for whom she plays, she met a barrage of questions head-on — just as she faces up to an opponent on the court.

She derided the sports scholarship system generally.

"Whether it's sports, music or science, if you offer you a scholarship it's because they know you can enhance the school," she said. "The alumni can go out and ask for more money. They give you that line of helping the needy and so forth, it's a lot of bull."

Another questioner touched a tender nerve when he brought up the Olympics.

"The Olympics are a joke," Billie Jean said.

Ask Jeffy about ball

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — If you want to know about a baseball, ask the man who hits one. That makes Jeff Burroughs of the Atlanta Braves an expert on the subject.

In seven major league seasons, Burroughs has clubbed 149 home runs, 41 of them last season after the Braves surrendered five players to pry him away from Texas. That was quite a jump from the 18 he managed in his final season with the Rangers. The difference, according to Burroughs, was simple.

"First of all, Rawlings got the ball back to normal," he said. "And second of all, Atlanta has a good hitting ballpark, a lot better than Texas."

The manufacturer of major league baseballs was turned over to the Rawlings company in 1977 after Spalding surrendered the contract.

"You can feel the difference," said Burroughs. "The stitching is different. In 1976, you could move the cover around on a brand new baseball. You hit it once or twice and it was shot."

The baseballs Burroughs hit in Atlanta often appear to be shot — right out of a cannon. That's just what the Braves figured would happen when they dealt for Burroughs. Only two of the five players Atlanta gave up in that swap are still with the Braves, and one of the five, pitcher Adrian Devine, is back with the Braves.

"The ballpark is one of the best in baseball for home runs," said Burroughs.

TRADING HAPPINESS — Shortstop Bud Harrelson expresses feelings in the New York Mets clubhouse as he packed belongings leaving for the Philadelphia Phillies. Harrelson was traded to the Phillies Thursday after 12 years with the Mets.

Jack Nicklaus not dead yet

By the Associated Press
News Item: "Jack Nicklaus wins third TPC golf championship, has two titles and two runner-up finishes in last four appearances and takes money lead with $157,065.

Honestly? No Kidding? Are you sure it isn't a mistake? Maybe a typographical error. Or maybe an old story plucked from a newspaper printed in 1975.

Everybody with 20-20

vision must have read Nicklaus' golfing obituary a year ago. It was in almost every paper. On the TV tube. You remember the headlines: "Nicklaus Beaten Out by Tom Watson in Masters." "Nicklaus Bows to Watson in British Open." "Nicklaus Fails to Win Major Crown." "Watson Takes Money Titles and is Pro Golfer of the Year."

Of course, if your eyes were bad, your ears could still pick it up in the locker room. "It looks like Ol' Jack is over the hill." "Can't make a charge any more." "Too busy making money." "Thirty-seven years old, now he knows what Arnie went through."

Big Jack just read and listened, and hid that smirking grin of his.

Was he really feeling the hot breath of a 10-year younger Watson on his neck? Was this perhaps the beginning of the inevitable downward slide? Did Jack recognize Watson as a threat to his longtime reign as the game's undisputed No. 1 player?

"Sure," Nicklaus responded to repeated queries. "Am I getting edgy about it. No. There's always someone out there challenging."

But no one seems to hang in there better than Nicklaus, already the winningest golfer in tournaments — 65 tour victories, 16 major championships — and in money, well in excess of $3 million.

Nicklaus buried dire predictions under an avalanche of tournament triumphs. He turned pro in 1961 and set out to challenge the legendary Arnold Palmer.

Coming from a German family that liked to eat, he was too fat. His hands were too small. He suffered from a chronic back ailment. He had to wear a special support for one heel.

Net laws to cause violence

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Wild Life and Fisheries director Bert Angelle says he's lining up stand-by reinforcements because he expects violence when anti-gill net laws go into effect on April 1.

Game wardens throughout the state will be on call, and "if there is a need, they will come in and supplement our local agents in the southern part of Louisiana," he said.

"I expect (violence), and highly-efficient nets will make it harder for them to feed their families. But sports fishermen say the nets, which are practically invisible when submerged, are wiping out gamefish.

The commercial fishermen argue that sports fishermen themselves are depleting fish populations and are trying to put the blame on someone else. They say they'll be back in Baton Rouge this legislative session trying to get the law repealed.

The East Bank Commercial Fisherman's Association contends that 90 percent of the speckled trout taken in Louisiana between 1964 and 1975 was caught by sport fishermen.

A fishermen caught breaking the anti-gill net law faces a mandatory $500 fine plus the loss of his fishing gear and licenses for one year.

"There's another element that I feel needs to be looked at, however," he said, "and that's the human safety element that's going to be involved between the sportsmen and the commercial fishermen."

Angelle said his agents in the field have picked up rumors of pending violence, and he said he'll call in as many extra agents as necessary to enforce the law.

Billy Martin: 'Nobody skips these trips, guys!'

TAMPA, Fla.—It is beholden-upon all managers of big league ballclubs to address the troops when they assemble in training camp, to tell them to forget about the past if it has been lousy, to recall their achievements, if good, and to gaze upon the future. Billy Martin, manager of the World Champion Yankees, chose to hold up a horrible example before them—the Cincinnati Reds.

"They were the World Champions, just like you, when they reported a year ago," The Leader told the Yankees in effect. "They thought everything would fall right into their lap again. That's what beat them. Complacency. That won't happen here. We're going to be ready for them. We're going to work hard, every day. There will be no goofing off on trips. Everybody goes. Everybody plays."

And so it is, as the World Champion Yankees make their swing of Florida's West Coast, all are here, the stars and the scrubins, the healthy and the hall. Don Guillet isn't pencilled in yet to work the games. He does his pitching on the sidelines, but he does it with the club, not gack in Fort Lauderdale.

"Nobody skips the trip," says Billy Martin, who skipped a few in his playing days, to go fishing with the rest of The Unholy Three, Whitey Ford and Mickey Mantle.

At Top Fighting Weight
Billy Martin appears to be at his best fighting weight, which is important in his job in the event any pitcher should challenge his right to take said player out of the game. Which reminds me...

"Have you had any individual meetings with your players?" Billy was asked.
"What kind of meetings?"
"You know: about attitudes. Getting along."
"This isn't the time for that. Not yet. When the nut-cutting comes, in the last week of camp, then we'll start talking about those things."

Billy Martin will talk about it, with punctuation. No matter how many TV talk shows there may be, with Reggie Jackson and Thurman Munson professing their abiding love, Billy Martin knows the truth, because he is right in the middle of it.

Almost Cost the Pennant

And so, when the right time comes, he will talk to them, perhaps individually, or perhaps he will ask them out together, for dinner, or a couple of drinks. Billy is good at that. He believes a manager, especially a manager younger than his almost 50 years, can be one of the boys, mix with the players, talk their language.

Billy Martin, if need be, will tell them to cut the bull. He needs them both, and he knows it, and they know it. He doesn't expect them to double-date. Neither does he want the team choosing up sides. It almost cost them the pennant last time.

Billy Martin knows the press didn't make up the whole thing because Billy Martin knows it wasn't the press that pulled Reggie Jax out of right field that day in Boston, and it wasn't the press that held back Martin and Jackson in the dugout when they wanted at each other, and it wasn't the press that imagined

'Pete is dirtiest player in baseball'--Bernie

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—There are days when Bernie Stowe would like to run Pete Rose through a car wash. "Pete is the dirtiest player in baseball," said Stowe, who has served as equipment manager of the Cincinnati Reds for the past 11 years. Stowe was referring to Rose's affinity for finding ways to look like a soot-covered chimney sweep. "That belly slide is really tough on shirts," said Stowe, who was a batboy for the Reds when Rose, the Reds' 11-time All-Star, was 6 years old. Stowe's job is to make sure members of the Big Red Machine look like a million dollars. "We probably order more uniforms than any other big league team," he said. The Reds take pride in their spotless image, a policy that took root when Bob Howsam became general manager of the club in 1967. "He's a stickler for presenting the best possible image," said Stowe, a round little man who is often the instigator of clubhouse horseplay. His job isn't easy or inexpensive. The laundry bill alone totals a king's ransom and outfitting a baseball club can quickly add up to astronomical sums. Every winter he orders 85 new white uniforms and 85 red gray pants at a cost of about $12,000. "The pant and shirt go for $70, a cap is $8.50, and our red wool socks are $8.50 a pair. We're the only club in either league that still uses wool socks. They are expensive, but they look very good," he said. Players provide only shoes and gloves. Some players, like Rose and slugger George Foster, are rougher on uniforms than others. "Foster is the hardest guy on the team when it comes to wear and tear on pants. He slides in such a way that he tears up three or four pairs of pants a year," said Stowe. The artificial surfaces at many ballparks have cut down the laundry bills, but produced unforeseen new costs. "If an outfielder slides on his knees while making a catch on astroturf he'll melt a hole in the nylon material the size of a half dollar," said Stowe. Pine tar, used to improve the grip on a bat, is Stowe's worst enemy. It doesn't wash out easily. "And then there was Rocky Bridges. For a guy who never played he was always dirty. He used to spit tobacco all the time. His uniform was freckled."

Guess where A's will play

DENVER (AP)—In just 16 days baseball is supposed to begin in Oakland. Its proximity has prompted Oakland Coliseum officials to launch preparations for the A's home opener April 10 against Seattle. But it's still anybody's guess whether the A's actually will play in the Bay Area this year ... or in Denver. A's owner Charles Finley maintains he's staying put. Finley announced Friday he has withdrawn his offer to sell the American League team to Denver oilman Marvin Davis.

"Baseball is pressuring me continuously to put up more money, but I'm not putting up another dime over $1 million," Finley said Friday in Chicago. "I can't dilly dally around and wonder if my team will be sold or play in Oakland. So I just made a decision that I'll play at Oakland."

Davis, who reached agreement on the sale of the team and its transfer to Denver last December only to have the deal fall through when Finley couldn't extricate himself, from a 10-year lease at the Coliseum, said he's "had a bellyful" of the protracted on-again, off-again maneuvering. Nevertheless, Davis left the door open. "If Mr. Finley would reconsider his decision, even at this extremely late date, we still have the capabilities to complete the transfer," Davis said.

The key stumbling block remains a reported $3.25 million assessment the Coliseum is demanding to release the A's from the lease. Finley has agreed to pay $1 million and baseball's other owners would pay another $1 million. But no one seems willing to budge from those positions.

Bob Lurie and Bud Herseth, co-owners of the San Francisco Giants, who stand to benefit by a move of the A's from the Bay Area, reportedly were meeting Friday in Phoenix, Ariz., leading to rumors that they were considering a contribution to keep the sale alive. In the past, however, Lurie has been adamant about not bailing out Finley.

In Oakland, Coliseum President Robert Nahas said Friday the ballpark staff is going ahead with preparations for the A's first home game.

Juices' dream does come true

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—O.J. Simpson is returning to the city where he was born in quest of one goal which has eluded him during a record-shattering career—a professional football championship.

"All my life I've been a San Francisco 49er fan," the superstar running back said Friday. "When I was a kid I used to dream of leading the 49ers to a championship."

Simpson, the National Football League's leading active rusher, was sent to the 49ers Friday in exchange for five draft choices spread over the next three years. The 49ers gave up no players.

"The thing that I approved for me was that we didn't have to give up any of our players or our No. 1 draft choice this year," said 49ers General Manager Joe Thomas.

"It is hard for me to believe that the gentleman sitting next to me is actually here and is a 49er," a beaming Thomas told a news conference. "O.J. can play for at least three years, and if he does that it will be the finest acquisition this club has ever made."

For Simpson, it marks a return to the city where he grew up, playing football at Galileo High School and San Francisco City College before moving on to glory at the University of Southern California.

From 1967 until I went to USC in 1967 I never missed a 49er game," Simpson said. "I used to scalp tickets outside Kezar Stadium when I was a kid. The 49ers made it possible for me to eat in the school cafeteria."

Before the trade was finalized, Simpson had to pass a 49ers physical examination to check the knee he injured last year. The injury caused him to miss the final half of the season.

"The knee is fine," he said. "I've been playing some tennis and running a little to stay in shape. All I really need is to strengthen it a little."

Although he has long sought a trade to a West Coast team to be near his family and business interests, Simpson confessed that he was a little saddened when it appeared the trade would become a reality.

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP)—Willie Stargell, one of baseball's most skilled left-handed batters, says the challenge of hitting is a matter of geometry. "They give you a round ball and they throw you a round ball," says the Pittsburgh Pirate captain. "And they tell you to hit it square."

MIAMI (AP)—Arguing that a new stadium would cost less, Miami Dolphins owner Joe Robbie has urged Miami and Dade County officials to scrap plans for a $22 million renovation of the Orange Bowl. Robbie submitted his own proposal for a $23 million stadium which would seat 70,000. He said his plan was more logical than a consultant's recommendation that the aging Orange Bowl be repaired and remodelled.

TAIPEI (AP)—Tu Ah Yue, winner of the 1978 Taiwan Ladies Open golf tournament, left for Japan today to compete in the Chubu Ladies Open Golf Tournament in Nagoya, central Japan. Tu was invited to take part in the Chubu game opening Wednesday by the Japan Ladies Professional Golfers Association.

She retained her Taiwan Open championship by finishing with a three-day total of 73-72-222. EDMONTON, Alberta (AP)—Yugoslavia outscored its opponents by the margin of 11 goals over two games Friday to move into a tie for first place in the Can-Am-Mex water polo series.

Cuba led the event after a pair of opening-day victories Thursday but managed only a 5-5 tie with the United States to finish two days of action with five points. Yugoslavia, which picked up a tie in its only game Tuesday, crushed Canada 9-2 and outscored the United States 10-6 Friday to tie Cuba in the standings.

One point back in third place was Hungary, which won both of its starts. Hungary was the winner in the Mexico City and Long Beach, Calif., events in the three tournament series.

West Germany and the United States are tied for fourth place with three points each while both Mexico and Canada are winless after three starts.

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—The horse races resumed in Beirut today for the first time since Israel's invasion of south Lebanon 18 days ago. The track committee declared the profits of 13 races today and Sunday would be donated to help relieve the plight of an estimated 200,000 fleeing refugees from the south.

HOOKEING—Los Angeles Laker Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (33) books a shot during action against the Buffalo Braves in Los Angeles Friday. Abdul Jabbar scored 30 points in the game replacing the 20,000 point mark in his nine-year career to become the ninth player in NBA history to reach that milestone.

Slow Pitch tourney nears

The Big Spring Men's Slow Pitch Softball League will hold a seeding tournament April 4-6 to determine what division the member teams will play in this season. The league, made up of 22 squads, will be divided into two divisions of 11 teams each. The tournament is to assure that the squads are distributed equally as to potential talent.

The season opens April 11 and runs through July 15, with four games played on three nights a week each. Twelve games will be played a week, Monday through Wednesday, and each team will be involved in two games a week.

Spokesman Troy Frazier expressed his appreciation to Jerry Foresyth and the City of Big Spring for improving the parks in the city. The league will be hosting three tournaments featuring numerous out-of-town clubs this year, and the improvements will make a keener impression on the visitors.

CHICKEN DELIGHT—While in New York for the NIT tournament, University of Texas Coach and wise-cracker, Abe Lemons, made a few remarks about expensive breakfasts and the cost of eggs in that northeastern city. The comments prompted an El Paso fan to ship Lemons some chickens for his very own. One flew the coop, perched on the incoming file near the National Invitational Championship trophy and decided to wait for the breakfast critic, who was not at his desk.

Ali's gold may be tarnished, but it's still in his pocket

By the Associated Press
 Muhammad Ali, nearing the end of his era as a big money fighter, finds that most of his millions have come and gone.
 But, unlike some other ring greats, he is still a rich man and his earning potential outside boxing remains fabulous.
 No one, probably not even Ali, knows how much money he has made since he came out of Louisville, Ky., in 1960 and fought and talked his way to boxing's greatest fortune.
 He doesn't have to fight again to pay his bills. But he no longer gives away thousands, invests in risky hamburger stands or lives as high as he once did.
 Muhammad Ali is nowhere near broke, despite reports that his recent title-losing fight with Leon Spinks took place because he needed the money.
 No one connected with him seems especially concerned about his financial future.
 Ali's boxing skill and showmanship have brought him almost $50 million in the ring and millions more in other ventures.
 His reputation as a talker rivals his reputation as a fighter — he can talk clearly even while wearing a mouthpiece. About anything that is, except money: "I don't talk about money."
 But many who have known him or benefited from his largesse provide strong clues about his financial worth and future.
 Ali is 36 and his biggest source of income is about to dry up. The mountain of dollars has dwindled to a foothill. His closest associates seem to think the Midas of the sports world may now have to learn to be a mere millionaire.
 "I don't think he'll end up like Joe Louis as far as finances are concerned," said Don King, who has promoted several of Ali's fights including his paydays of $5.45 million against George Foreman in Zaire and $6 million against Joe Frazier in Manila.

 A picture emerges of a man, generous to a fault, who has had the expenses and taxes that come with making great sums of money. Ali's also had the bad investments that plague many who achieve wealth. But while sources estimate more than half of Ali's earnings have been eaten up by taxes, he has always paid in full and on time. Louis, the champ known as the Brown Bomber, was done in financially by tax problems.
 Ali's second wife Belinda, the Internal Revenue Service and manager Herbert Muhammad probably ended up with more money than the man responsible for putting it there.
 However, people close to Ali maintain he is not broke. "To him, having $100,000 is being broke," John Ali, the secretary and accountant of Ali Enterprises in Chicago, said recently.
 A national publication estimated Ali's net worth in cash and holdings at $2 million. One source placed the figure at $3.5 million.
 Questions from The Associated Press concerning his true current worth were often greeted icily.
 "Muhammad Ali is not a corporation," said Herbert Muhammad, the fighter's manager. "He is a private individual and asking how much money he has in the bank is an invasion of his privacy."
 "You must remember I am his manager. I make the deals. But I don't control his money once he gets it."
 Charles Lomax, Ali's attorney in Chicago, was initially willing to talk about his client's charitable contributions and his future earning power. But after he requested written questions from the AP, he indicated he had shown them to Herbert Muhammad, and his cooperation ended then and there.

 Where did the money go? Ali's ring earnings total $48,951,117, according to figures published in his autobiography and publicly announced purses. Of this, $3,641,117 came before he was stripped of the title in 1967 for refusing to accept the military draft and while he was being handled by a group of Louisville businessmen. It was during his exile from the ring, which ended Oct. 26, 1970, that Ali discovered another source of income — the lecture circuit, which is still open to him. One insider said he was getting $2,000 a lecture during his exile.
 Those lectures proved to be very important to Ali then. They could become more important in the future.
 Herbert Muhammad became Ali's manager before the Cleveland Williams fight in 1966 for which Ali got $405,000. From then through his title loss to Leon Spinks, Ali's purses totaled $46,575,000.
 Herbert Muhammad's one-third share as manager was roughly $16 million, leaving Ali a career total of $32 million. Subtracting a minimum of 50 percent for taxes, Ali is left with a "take-home" pay of about $14 million to $16 million, which his lifestyle, generosity, good and bad investments and two divorces reduced further to the estimated $2 million to $3.5 million.
 Of course, Ali also had income outside boxing, but what he has made with his fame, his looks and his mouth was a pebble against the boulder of what he made with his fists.
 Easy cash also rolled in for Ali with his syndicated television cartoon show and his "Rope a Dope" jump rope.
 Where did the money go? His lifestyle, though not personally extravagant, befits one of the best-known personalities in the world. John F.X. Condon, vice president of boxing for Madison Square Garden commented: "His heart regulates his mind."
 On Jan. 3, 1977, Ali's second wife, Belinda, now known as Kalilah, was granted a divorce in circuit court in Chicago which awarded her custody of the couple's four children, a large apartment building on Chicago's South Side, a home in the Chicago suburb of Flossmoor, two automobiles, including a Rolls Royce, a trust fund for the children and a cash settlement.
 Ali has said the house was worth $114,000, the apartment building $400,000, the Rolls $40,000 and the cash payment $2 million. Some insiders place the entire divorce settlement as high as $6 million.
 Little is known of Ali's investments, good or bad. Few were ever publicized. Some of his unsuccessful ventures have been in the fast-food hamburger business.
 Ali's one extravagance has been cars, but he has toned down considerably. He reportedly now owns a Rolls and two custom-made buses for which he paid $40,000 and $110,000 respectively.
 Once when Ali appeared at a Cadillac dealership in New York to give publicity to its black owner, he said: "The brothers buy El Dorades and $1,000 alligator shoes and then don't have any money to buy beans. From now on I'm

ONLY A ROSE — Muhammad Ali sniffs the fragrance of a rose carried by his wife Veronica at London's Heathrow airport before they flew off to Chicago. But Ali, the man who once stung like a bee, is on the trail of another scent. He hopes to regain the world heavyweight title he lost to newcomer Leon Spinks in Las Vegas and become the only fighter to regain the title three times.

Astros give slow-pitcher chance

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The Houston Astros are taking a chance on a slow-pitch softball player from El Cajon, Calif., who says he hasn't played hard ball since he was a kid.
 He's 22-year-old Jeff Pich and his story reads like Cinderella's.
 "I'm kind of the Astros special project this spring," said Pich in a telephone interview from the Astros spring training camp at Cocoa Beach, Fla.
 "They feel I have the potential to become a good player, even though I don't have that much of a background in baseball."
 What Pich has is talent. He excels in softball, that game with the fat ball played at office picnics and local parks everywhere.
 The 6-foot-2, 207-pound switch hitter was in a Mission Valley slow-pitch league in San Diego less than two months ago, working as a mechanic in a service station, when he was spotted by Bob Cluck, area scout for the National League baseball club.
 Cluck liked what he saw of the brawny outfielder and after a couple of private workouts, he signed Pich to an Astros' contract.
 "I quit my job and came down here when spring training started," said Pich, who got married six months ago. "I didn't get any kind of bonus to sign... just the rookie league salary."
 "I had no guarantees from the Astros, they just paid my SS Builders, Dibrell's lead MOD's puttin' my money in 'bricks.'

 Ali's known bricks are his home in Chicago, where he lives with his third wife, Veronica, and their two children; a training camp at Deer Lake, Pa.; a farm at Berrien Springs, Mich.; and a vacant department store building in Cleveland.
 Ali reportedly paid $2,000 an acre for eight acres of land at Deer Lake. Ali has said he has spent in the area of $500,000 on the training camp. The purchase price of the Berrien Springs property is put at $400,000 and $600,000 by two Ali associates.
 The building in Cleveland is being held in trust by the Exchange National Bank of Chicago. Attorney Lomax said the building was granted to a "religious group" — supposedly the Nation of Islam — with the understanding it would be developed.
 Ali remains close to his family and has provided for them financially.
 Of course, Ali has been touched for money by people, whose only concern for charity was their own. "He don't even know how to give it away," said a man who has been connected with Islam. "He donates to the Nation as any follower does."

Big Springers meet with UTPB officials

BIG SPRING — A group of Big Spring business and community leaders met with officials of The University of Texas of the Permian Basin recently to provide input in an evaluation of program offerings at the university.

UTPB Academic Vice President J. Edwin Becht noted it has been five years since classes began at UTPB. "We feel now is the appropriate time to evaluate the program offerings planned prior to the opening of the university and to determine what adjustments need to be made for the future," he said.

Becht said a campus task force, composed of UTPB faculty and administration has been appointed to review programs and to report their findings to UTPB President V.R. Cardozer.

"To help in this task, the committee has asked for input from Big Spring and from other communities in the Permian Basin to determine the appropriateness of present UTPB programs and courses to meet the needs of students and to determine what additional programs or courses are needed to better serve students throughout the Permian Basin," Becht added.

Big Spring representatives in the recent discussion in Big Spring included Billy T. Smith, certified public accountant; Harold Canning, acting editor of the Big Spring Herald; Lynn Hise, superintendent of Big Spring School; other participants and the organizations they represent are Ron Killough, First Baptist Church; W. L. Albright, Big Spring Chamber of Commerce; Donna Goolsby, Big Spring Human Resource Center; Johnnie Lou Avery, Wanda Reese and Wayne Bonner, Howard College; and Molly Butler, Big Spring State Hospital.

STATE QUALIFIERS — These three students won top rankings in the vocational CVAE contests and are now eligible to compete at a state level. They include Rosie Bailion, Marcus Phillips and Robert Diaz.

Students can apply for Millard Cope Scholarship

SAN ANGELO — Students interested in majoring in journalism at Angelo State University may begin applying for the $300 Millard Cope Memorial Scholarship.

The scholarship is awarded each year to a freshman journalism student entering Angelo State University. A student receiving the award as a freshman is eligible to apply for renewal each year providing the student maintains good academic standing and makes significant contributions to the ASU journalism program.

Students who are selected for the scholarships must enroll in ASU as journalism majors and must agree to work as staff members on one of the campus student publications.

At least four awards are made each year by the selection committee with scholarships going to a freshman, a sophomore, a junior and a senior journalism major. Last spring, a total of seven Millard Cope Scholarships were awarded with two going to entering freshmen and five to students who were renewing their awards.

In addition to the Millard Cope awards, the university may provide other ASU journalism scholarships to outstanding entering freshmen who are not selected for the Millard Cope scholarships.

The Millard Cope scholarships are financed from the proceeds of a $25,000 trust fund established by the late Houston Hartle and his wife as a memorial to the late Millard Cope, publisher of the San Angelo Standard-Times at the time of his death January 4, 1964.

A former publisher of the Marshall News-Messenger, Cope was also president of the Southern Newspaper Association and a director of the Associated Press.

TCU staff will hold meeting in Midland

FORT WORTH — Choosing a college or university that meets the needs of a student's future and the family's budget is a major decision for high school students and their parents. Each spring Texas Christian University staff and student body members visit cities throughout the United States with a personal, local presentation of what TCU can offer in making the decision.

Two "TCU Today" programs will be held in the Midland-Odessa area. Midland's Hilton Hotel will be the site for the April 4 reception beginning at 7:30 p.m. On April 5 at 7:30 p.m. reception will be held at the First Christian Church in Odessa.

"TCU Today," begun in 1965 and now coordinated by the University's admissions office, is a traveling program featuring current students, faculty and administrators. This spring the group will explain the advantages of a private, coeducational institution when visiting 37 cities in 18 states and the District of Columbia.

Reservations for the program will be accepted from high school students and their parents. Also attending will be high school counselors, TCU alumni and ministers of the Christian Church.

The event is designed to answer questions about various aspects of collegiate life. An audio-visual presentation will introduce the 254-acre campus, the 6,000-member student body and the more than 300 full-time faculty members. Current TCU students will elaborate on their impressions of TCU and why they chose the University.

An administrator will speak on TCU's role in higher education. Financial aid and admissions procedures will be discussed by an admissions counselor. Faculty members will briefly outline some of the academic areas offered at TCU.

H-SU to inaugurate new president

ABILENE — Hardin-Simmons University's twelfth president, Dr. Jesse C. Fletcher will be inaugurated April 24 in ceremonies at the university.

Fletcher succeeded Dr. Elwin L. Skiles as administrative head of the Baptist university in November. He will be officially installed in his new position during ceremonies beginning at 10 a.m. in Behrens Chapel Auditorium.

More than 2,500 invitations will be mailed according to Dr. Zane Mason, professor in history, who serves as chairman of the inaugural committee. Included are alumni, leaders in education, business, and professional fields, denominational leaders, media representatives, and state and national political figures.

Participating in the ceremony will be two former H-SU presidents. The investiture will be performed by Dr. Rupert N. Richardson, president emeritus and distinguished research professor in history. Skiles will deliver the inaugural prayer.

Coming from San Antonio to deliver the benediction at the inauguration ceremony will be Jesse N. Fletcher, father of the president.

An inaugural luncheon for official delegates and their spouses will follow the inauguration ceremony. The luncheon will be held at the Civic Center. Later that afternoon a public reception will take place in Beckham Lounge of H-SU's Moody Center.

On the day prior to the inauguration Fletcher will be honored at an autograph party as the author of "Baker James Cauthen: A Man for All Nations," a book dealing with the executive director of the Southern Baptist Convention's Foreign Mission Board. Cauthen will also be present for the party and will remain in Abilene to speak at Fletcher's inaugural luncheon.

NTSU to award scholarships in journalism

DENTON — Four $500 scholarships will be awarded to incoming freshman journalism majors at North Texas State University through a grant from Harte-Hanks Communications, Inc.

The Department of Journalism is seeking applications for the awards, especially from students in cities served by Harte-Hanks newspapers.

Students who apply should be in the upper 15 per cent of their graduating class, and should commit themselves to concentrate in either the News Writing, Editorial sequence or Advertising sequence at NTSU. They are also expected to take a minimum of 18 hours in business administration. Purpose of the scholarships is to encourage students to enter the field of business reporting or advertising sales for newspapers.

Winners will be paid the awards at the rate of $250 at the beginning of the 1978 fall semester and the 1979 spring semester.

"There is a need for reporters with a knowledge of business," commented Dr. Reg Westmoreland, NTSU journalism chairman. "And there is a need for ad sales people at newspapers. We appreciate this investment in young people by Harte-Hanks Communications," Dr. Westmoreland said.

Legal fight attains milestone Ruling hits Kodak hard

NEW YORK (AP) — The legal fight between the giant Eastman Kodak Co. and Berkey Photo Inc., which reached a milestone this past week, is attracting attention well beyond the photo industry.

Berkey, a small film processor and manufacturer of cameras, won damages of nearly $113 million from Kodak, based on triple the amount of the jury's award of $37.6 million allowed in such antitrust cases. The size of the award is among the largest ever for a civil antitrust suit.

But it is a portion of the complex antitrust argument — that Kodak had a legal duty to disclose plans for some of its new products and technology to its competitors — that is attracting attention in the corporate and legal fields.

Throughout the six-month trial Berkey, a New York-based firm with annual sales of about $200 million, argued that Kodak, a photo giant with sales of $6 billion, made competitors dependent on it for new film, color print paper and necessary photo chemicals by using its considerable resources to develop new technology and products that made existing technology obsolete.

Part of the Berkey argument was that secret agreements between Kodak and Sylvania and General Electric to develop new products violated antitrust laws and that Kodak should have disclosed in advance its knowledge that new products were under development.

In other business developments this past week:

—Congress sent to the White House a bill which, with few exceptions, would allow workers in private business to continue on the job until age 70 if they want to. The bill doesn't change 65 as the age when retired workers can collect maximum Social Security benefits. But it would prohibit most private employers from forcing an employee to retire age 65.

Rep. Claude Pepper, chairman of the House Aging Committee, said he expects President Carter to sign the bill next month.

—The government revised figures on how fast the economy grew in the fourth quarter once again. The Commerce Department also said growth this quarter was expected to be way down because of weather problems and the coal strike. The latest Commerce figures for the fourth quarter of 1977 show Gross National Product, adjusted to account for inflation, grew at a seasonally adjusted rate of 3.8 percent.

In February the government said the growth was 4 percent and in January it put the figure at 4.2 percent.

—Sears Roebuck & Co., the nation's largest retailer, reported its profits slid 11 percent to $251.8 million in the final quarter of last year despite a 13 percent increase in sales.

Analysts said that report was partly responsible for ending a short lived rally on the stock market, on the theory that sales of Sears stock provided a downward leadership for the market in general.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial, of which Sears is one, showed a net loss of more than 12 points for the trading week, wiping out its gain of more than 10 points the previous week.

Despite the fourth quarter earnings decline, Sears said it had record profits for fiscal 1978 of $838 million, up 21 percent from a year earlier.

Oklahoma firm pleads guilty

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Williams Companies, an Oklahoma-based construction firm, pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court here Friday to charges involving bribes paid to officials of an unnamed foreign government.

The Justice Department charged that in 1973, the company illegally used international telecommunication services to arrange the undisclosed transfer of $177,000 out of the United States to bribe foreign officials.

Federal prosecutors said the bribe was to obtain work permits for expatriate personnel employed by Williams in the foreign country.

C.J. Head, a Williams' vicepresident, pleaded guilty to the charges before U.S. District Judge Barrington Parker.

'Secret' meetings are blasted by candidate

ABILENE — Fike Godfrey, candidate for Congress in the 17th District, blasted a closed meeting between two of the other candidates in the race and the postal workers union of Abilene.

Two unidentified candidates were quoted as saying "they did not wish publicity" in connection with their appearance.

"What in the world is going on here?" Godfrey asked.

"Are two candidates in the race meeting in secret and making deals or what?"

"I do not know Mr. Norris Lineweaver nor am I sure how many members of the postal employees' union I know, but I want it on the record and out in the open that I was not one of the candidates who met behind closed doors. I have not received an invitation to meet with this group.

"I guarantee you that when I meet with a group I do not mind news media coverage because I want the voters to know exactly what is discussed and how I stand.

"We have had enough problems with secrecy in government in this nation in recent years. We should have learned our lesson.

"I don't know who those other two candidates were, but I can't help but wonder why they didn't want their views known to the public.

"Was it because they, by their actions, would be free to answer questions one way behind closed doors to this union local and then flip-flop and answer the same questions another way with another group," Godfrey said.

"One of this nation's problems now is that there are too many in Congress who flip-flop on the issues with various groups. If a man starts it as a candidate you can be almost certain that he would do it as a Congressman.

"I resent being placed under a cloud of suspicion which might make people think I was one of those candidates who wanted a secret meeting, so that he could flip-flop later on.

"Let me make it very clear that my argument is not with the American Postal Workers Union, Abilene local," Godfrey stated.

"But I violently disagree with any candidate who does not have guts enough to stand up in public and let his views become known to all the voters.

"The voters know how Fike Godfrey stands — and if they don't I want them to ask me because I want to answer — and answer on the record for all the voters to know," he stated.

"I am discussing the issues in this campaign with the voters out in the open, not in secret meetings.

"I challenge those two candidates, whoever they are, to identify themselves and tell all of us what they talked about, how they answered the questions and, if any, what promises were made.

"After all, if campaign promises are made behind closed doors then the next step is to conducting government, or the public's business, behind closed doors," Godfrey said.

"I don't want that — and I am sure the voters do not want that."

Navy hopes are dashed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy's plans for enlarging its fleet by 50 percent appears to be dashed as the Carter administration decides to cut Navy construction by more than half during the next five years.

The Navy had hoped to increase its fleet from the current 602 ships to more than 900, a figure senior admirals contend is the minimum needed to protect U.S. interests worldwide.

But Defense Secretary Harold Brown and Navy Secretary W. Graham Claytor recently told key senators and representatives the administration now wants only 70 new warships and support vessels built and another 13 modernizations by 1983. Pentagon sources put the cost at $28 billion.

An earlier plan left over from the Ford administration would have included a five-year schedule of 156 new ships and 20 conversions of older ships at a cost of $49 billion.

Despite the administration's cutbacks, there were indications that Congress might restore some of the earlier construction. The House Armed Services Committee already has voted to add billions of dollars to next year's defense budget for an additional nuclear-powered aircraft carrier and a new type of nuclear-propelled strike cruiser which Carter does not want.

The Navy shipbuilding program has been under attack within the administration because of spiraling costs, construction delays and a tangle of claims for additional payments totaling about $2.7 billion filed by shipbuilding companies.

City employees accused of stealing millions

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Nine employees who collect coins from San Francisco's parking meters and their supervisor have been accused of stealing at least $3 million in pennies, nickels, dimes and quarters over a six-year period.

Six other employees of the 17-member department were booked for investigation of embezzlement by working only four hours a day, although they were paid full-time salaries.

The only department employee not booked Friday was one who had been working there only five weeks.

District Attorney Joseph Freitas Jr. said Melvin Wilson, 38, supervisor of the crews that emptied the meters, is believed to have carted home $1,000 a day himself "when he worked."

Among the 10 employees booked for investigation of pocketing meter money, was one who an assistant district attorney said is believed to have taken $60,000 to $80,000 a year.

Freitas estimated the workers' illicit take from the meters was at least $500,000 annually, about 25 percent of all the coins fed into them each year. He said some of those arrested "were in the habit of taking a handful of coins from the piles in the sorting room at City Hall" while others took sackfuls home.

Freitas said the scheme allowed employees to buy "some pretty grand cars" despite annual salaries of $10,000 to $15,000 a year.

Those accused of theft were the workers who collected money from the meters and placed the coins into wheeled canisters. Freitas said the men worked in pairs because the full canisters were too heavy for one man to lift into city vans.

Once the canisters were in the vans, the men "opened the tops and poured the money into their own large, strong canvas sacks," Freitas said.

Generally, they took the money home or dropped it off in one of their cars parked strategically in the neighborhood, he said.

City tax collector Thad Brown, although not accused in the case, was suspended Friday pending the outcome of an investigation of his department, which includes the meter division.

The time of year that we call Easter means different things to different people.

TO PAGANS, this time of year was a festival called Ostara or Eostre, meaning the celebration of spring at the vernal equinox, March 21, when nature is "reborn" after winter. From the rites of the ancients, we get our traditions of eggs and rabbits. Rabbits were honored for their fertility, and eggs, a symbol of birth, were colored like the rays of the returning sun.

TO HEBREWS, this time of year was and is the festival of Passover, commemorating the night in Egypt when the angel of death "passed over" the homes of the Israelites, sparing their first-born sons.

TO CHILDREN, Easter is a time for the Easter Bunny to come and hide colored hard-boiled eggs, to get new clothes for church, and to get Easter baskets filled with such treats as chocolate bunnies, jelly beans and marshmallow chickens.

AND TO CHRISTIANS, Easter is the time to celebrate the death and resurrection of our Lord, Jesus Christ, who was crucified during the feast of Passover in Jerusalem and rose from the dead three days later.

Often, in the fun and activity of the traditions that we observe for our children (and let's be honest: for ourselves), the real meaning of Easter is lost.

Here then, in the compiled words of eyewitnesses to the death and resurrection of Jesus, as recorded by the writers of the Gospels, is the story that has inspired generations of people to remember the life, and the death, of a young carpenter from Nazareth.

When the morning was come, all the chief priests and the elders of the people took counsel against Jesus to put him to death: and when they had bound him, they led him away, and delivered him to Pontius Pilate the governor.

THEN JUDAS, which had betrayed him, when he saw that he was condemned, repented himself, and brought again the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests and elders, saying, "I have sinned in that I have betrayed innocent blood." And they said, "What is that to us? see thou to that."

And he cast down the pieces of silver in the temple, and departed, and went and hanged himself.

And the chief priests took the silver pieces and said, "It is not lawful to put them into the treasury, because it is the price of blood."

And they took counsel, and bought with them the potter's field, to bury strangers in. Wherefore that field was called "The field of blood" unto this day.

Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremiah the prophet, saying, "And they took the thirty pieces of silver, the price of him that was valued, whom they of the children of Israel did value; and gave them for the potter's field, as the Lord appointed me."

And the priests began to accuse Jesus, saying, "We found this fellow perverting the nation, and forbidding to give tribute to Caesar, saying that he himself is Christ a King." And Pilate asked him, saying, "Art thou the king of the Jews?"

And he answered him and said, "Thou sayest it."

THEN SAID PILATE to the chief priests and to the people, "I find no fault in this man."

And they were the more fierce, saying, "He stirreth up the people, teaching throughout all Jewry, beginning from Galilee to this place." When Pilate heard of Galilee, he asked whether the man were a Galilaean.

And as soon as he knew that he belonged unto Herod's jurisdiction, he sent him to Herod, who himself also was at Jerusalem at that time.

And when Herod saw Jesus, he was exceeding glad: for he was desirous to see him of a long season, because he had heard many things of him; and he hoped to have seen some miracle done by him. Then he questioned him in many words; but he answered him nothing.

And the chief priests and scribes stood and vehemently accused him. And Herod with his men of war set him at nought, and mocked him, and arrayed him in a gorgeous robe, and sent him again to Pilate.

And the same day Pilate and Herod were made friends together: for before they were at enmity between themselves.

And Pilate, when he had called together the chief priests and the rulers and the people, said unto them, "Ye have brought this man unto me, as one that perverteth the people: and, behold, I having examined him before you, have found no fault in this man touching those things whereof ye accuse him: no, nor yet Herod: for I sent you to him: and, lo, nothing worthy of death is done unto him. I will therefore chastise him, and release him." (For of necessity he must release one unto them at the feast.)

And they had then a notable prisoner, called Barabbas. Therefore when they were gathered together, Pilate said unto them, "Whom will ye that I release unto you? Barabbas, or Jesus which is called Christ?" For he knew that for envy they had delivered him.

WHEN HE WAS SET down on the judgment seat, his wife sent unto him, saying, "Have thou nothing to do with that just man: for I have suffered many things this day in a dream because of him." But the chief priests and elders persuaded the multitude that they should ask Barabbas, and destroy Jesus.

The governor answered and said unto them, "Whether of the twain will ye that I release unto you?"

And they all cried out at once, saying, "Away with this man, and release unto us Barabbas." (Who for a certain sedition made in the city, and for murder, was cast into prison.)

Pilate therefore, willing to release Jesus, spake again to them, but they cried, saying, "Crucify him, crucify him."

And the governor, said, "Why, what evil hath he done?" But they cried out the more, saying, "Let him be crucified."

When Pilate saw that he could prevail nothing, but that rather a tumult was made, he took water, and washed his hands before the multitude, saying, "I am innocent of the blood of this just person: see ye to it."

Then answered the people and said, "His blood be on us, and on our children."

were hanged nailed on him, saying, "If thou be Christ, save thyself and us."

But the other answering rebuked him, saying, "Dost not thou fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation? And we indeed justly, for we receive the due reward of our deeds; but this man hath done nothing amiss."

And he said unto Jesus, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into the kingdom."

AND JESUS SAID UNTO HIM, "Verily I say unto thee, Today shalt thou be with me in paradise."

And they that passed by reviled him, wagging their heads, and saying, "Thou that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three days, save thyself. If thou be the Son of God, come down from the cross."

Likewise also the chief priests mocking him, with the scribes and elders, said, "He saved others; himself he cannot save. If he be the King of Israel, let him now come down from the cross, and we will believe him. He trusted in God; let him deliver him now, if he will have him: for he said, 'I am the Son of God.'"

Now there stood by the cross of Jesus his mother, and his mother's sister, Mary the wife of Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene. When Jesus therefore saw his mother, and the disciple standing by, whom he loved, he saith unto his mother, "Woman, behold thy son!" Then saith he to the disciple, "Behold thy mother!" And from that hour that disciple took her into his own home.

After this, Jesus knowing that all things were now accomplished, that the scripture might be fulfilled, said, "I thirst."

NOW FROM THE SIXTH HOUR there was darkness over all the land unto the ninth hour. And at the ninth hour, Jesus cried with a loud voice,

"Eloi, Eloi, lama sabachthani?" which is, being interpreted, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?"

Some of them that stood there, when they heard that, said, "This man calleth for Elias." And straightaway one of them ran, and took a sponge, and filled it with vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink.

The rest said, "Let be, let us see whether Elias will come to save him." And when Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, he said, "It is finished." And when Jesus had cried with a loud voice, he said, "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit; and he bowed his head and gave up the ghost.

AND BEHOLD, THE VEIL of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom; and the earth did quake, and the rocks rent; and the graves were opened; and many bodies of the saints which slept arose, and came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many.

And when the centurion, which stood over against him, saw that he so cried out, and gave up the ghost, he said, "Truly this man was the Son of God." There were also women looking on afar off: among whom was Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James the less and of Joses, and Salome; (Who also, when he was in Galilee, followed him, and ministered unto him;) and many other women which came up with him unto Jerusalem.

The Jews therefore, because it was the preparation, that the bodies should not remain upon the cross on the sabbath day, (for that sabbath day was a high day,) besought Pilate that their legs might be broken, and that they might be taken away.

Then came the soldiers, and brake the legs of the first, and of the other which was crucified with him. But when they came to Jesus, and saw that he was dead already, they brake not his legs: but one of the soldiers with a spear pierced his side, and forthwith there came out blood and water.

And he that saw it bare record, and his record is true: and he knoweth that he saith true, that ye might believe. For these things were done, that the scripture should be fulfilled, "A bone of him shall not be broken." And again another scripture saith, "They shall look on him whom they pierced."

AND NOW WHEN THE EVEN WAS COME, because it was the preparation, that is, the day before the sabbath, Joseph of Arimathaea, an honourable counsellor, which also waited for the kingdom of God, came, and went in boldly to Pilate, and craved the body of Jesus.

And Pilate marvelled if he were already dead: and calling unto him the centurion, he asked him whether he had been any while dead. And when he knew it of the centurion, he gave the body to Joseph.

And he bought fine linen, and took him down, and wrapped him in the linen, and laid him in a sepulchre which was hewn out of a rock, wherein never man before was laid, and rolled a stone unto the door of the sepulchre.

And that day was the preparation, and the sabbath drew on. And the women also, which came with him from Galilee, followed after, and beheld the sepulchre, and how his body was laid. And they returned and, prepared spices and ointments; and rested the sabbath day according to the commandment.

NOW THE NEXT DAY, that followed the day of the preparation, the chief priests and Pharisees came together unto Pilate, saying, "Sir, we remember that that deceiver said, while he was yet alive, 'After three days I will rise again.' Command therefore that the sepulchre be made sure until the third day, lest his disciples come by night and steal him away, and say unto the people, 'He is risen from the dead:' so the last error will shall be worse than the first."

Pilate said unto them, "Ye have a watch: go your way, make it as sure as you can."

So they went, and made the sepulchre sure, sealing the stone, and setting a watch.

The first day of the week cometh Mary Magdalene early, when it was yet dark, unto the sepulchre, and seeth the stone taken away from the sepulchre.

THEN SHE RUNNETH, and cometh to Simon Peter, and to the other disciple, whom Jesus loved, and saith unto them, "They have taken away the Lord out of the sepulchre, and we know not where they have laid him."

Peter therefore went forth, and that other disciple, and came to the sepulchre. So they ran both together: and the other disciple did outrun

get ready for Easter.

I'D RATHER DO IT MYSELF — First on the list of Sarah Bristow's Easter activities is to dye the eggs that her mother has boiled. Although dyes of all colors are provided, Sarah leans toward pink and refuses help in selecting other colors. As a result, the Easter Bunny will find mostly pink eggs to hide in the Bristow household. Sarah is the daughter of Keith and Jeanne Bristow.

I SURE AM PRETTY! — After the eggs are dyed, Sarah dons her new Easter outfit with a little help from her mom, Jeanne. Sarah confided that she liked her dress, since it was her favorite color — pink — but thought that the new shoes were a bit too big. "Has the Easter Bunny hidden those eggs yet?" asks Sarah. "I'm ready to hunt!"

I FOUND ANOTHER ONE! — Although slightly perplexed by the presence of the photographer, Sarah participated zealously in the egg hunt which is the highlight of her day and finds every one of the hidden eggs in the atrium of her home at 1 Bennett Circle. And to her pleasure, most of the eggs are pink, proving that the Easter Bunny does, in fact, care about a little girl's wishes. "Maybe next year I'll make them all purple," she says thoughtfully.

'Peace be unto you'

Go and tell that he is risen from the dead

(Con't from p. 1)
Peter, and came first to the sepulchre.

And he stooping down, and looking in, saw the linen clothes lying, yet went he not in.

Then cometh Simon Peter following him, and went into the sepulchre, and seeth the linen clothes lie, and the napkin, that was about his head, not lying with the linen clothes, but wrapped together in a place by itself.

Then went in also that other disciple, which came first to the sepulchre, and he saw, and believed.

For as yet they knew not the scripture, that he must rise again from the dead. Then the disciples went away again unto their own home.

But Mary stood without at the sepulchre weeping; and as she wept, she stooped down, and looked into the sepulchre, and seeth two angels in white sitting, the one at the head, and other at the feet, where the body of Jesus had laid.

And they say unto her, "Woman, why weepest thou?" She saith unto them, "Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him."

And when she had thus said, she turned herself back, and saw Jesus standing, and knew not that it was Jesus.

JESUS SAITH UNTO HER, "Woman, why weepest thou? whom seekest thou?" She, supposing him to be the gardener, saith unto him, "Sir, if thou have borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away."

Jesus saith unto her, "Mary." She turned herself, and saith unto him, "Rabboni" which is to say,

"Master." Jesus saith unto her, "Touch me not, for I am not yet ascended to my Father: but go to my brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto my Father, and your Father; and to my God, and to your God."

Mary Magdalene came and told the disciples that she had seen the Lord, and that he had spoken these things unto her.

Then the same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus

BUT THOMAS, ONE OF THE TWELVE called Didymus, was not with them when Jesus came. The other disciples said unto him, "We have seen the Lord." But he said unto them, "Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe."

And after eight days again his disciples were within, and Thomas with them: then came Jesus, the doors being shut, and stood in the midst, and said, "Peace be unto you."

Then saith he to Thomas, "Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into my side: and be not faithless, but believing."

And Thomas answered and said unto him, "My Lord and my God."

Jesus said unto him,

Dictionaries get new words

BRONXVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — When they learn that "zich" and "pothead" have made it into the dictionary, some purists may say, "Yecch!"

Their reaction may be even stronger when they learn that "yecch" made it too, admit a father-and-son lexicography team. Clarence L. and Robert K. Barnhart deem such "new" words — and many more — important enough to be included in the annual revisions of "The World Book Dictionary," which they edit.

"A 'new' word is just about anything that can describe exactly what you want to talk about," says Clarence, the elder Barnhart. He, along with psychologist Edward L. Thorndike, began some 45 years ago to select words in the preparation of dictionaries on the basis of the frequency of their use and to define them as simply as possible.

Indeed, a "new" dictionary entry, Barnhart explains, can be one such as "gorp," the nuts and berries that hikers eat. But then, again, he says, it need not be new at all. It can also be an "old" word such as biorthym, which has reappeared in a recent edition with a new meaning. Or it can be an old word now used as a different part of speech — the adjective "firm" also becomes a verb meaning "to firm up." Or a prefix or suffix can give an old word a new meaning, such as "deprogram" or "polarize."

"That's what makes English such a useful language," adds Robert Barnhart, articulate and well-spoken like his father.

But how do these words, regardless of age or meaning, find their way into the dictionary? In the case of their own dictionary, the Barnharts explain that they employ a dozen or so people, from Sydney, Australia, to Tuscaloosa, Ala., who check on usage.

"Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed."

Artist can't figure out his art's meaning

NEW YORK (AP) — High above Soho, a face stares and a haunting message blooms in black on a billboard that once touted sunny vacations and the pleasures of beer.

Dangling cryptically amid scaffold and rope: "I wondered what I'd leave behind if I did die. Would the fragments of my life seem significant?"

Nearby, on the same brick warehouse wall, a 22-foot face broods, considers the words. Behind dark glasses, the eyes stare.

Hardly the breezy, billboard art that flashes on the retinas of drivers approaching the Holland Tunnel and sells them soap or soup or sex.

But the picture and message — the fourth of six — is the 50-by-32-foot epistle and portrait of an artist who ponders in foothold letters his life and death and art.

He calls himself "Horatio Alger" after the turn-of-the-century author of rags-to-riches books. His real name is Martin Cohen, who was born in Brownsville, Brooklyn, and had a startling rise himself from junk seller to art dealer.

Played out in full view of rumbling trucks and blase regulars at the Broome Street Bar, the billboards are a soap opera of Horatio Alger's self doubts, intellectual question marks, stomach pains and cries for attention.

"I seem to be questioning everything and I'm still trying to figure it out," said Cohen, who has no pat answers to what he and his art are about.

"Art really is communication. It is supposed to tell us more about life," said Cohen.

MRS. RODNEY ROY ROBERTSON

Doss-Robertson vows repeated

Dallas and Tyler are the destinations of Mr. and Mrs. Rodney Roy Robertson after their wedding at 7:30 p.m. Friday in the First United Methodist Church, Big Spring. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. William Butler, pastor of the church.

The bride, formerly Lynn Doss, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Terry Lloyd, 2609 Rebecca, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Robertson, 1425 E. 6th.

The couple was united before an altar adorned with a blue and white floral arrangement. A floor candelabrum with white candles and a tall floor vase filled with greenery stood on either side of the altar.

Lydia Molina, soloist, was accompanied by Charles Parham at the organ.

The bride chose a white floor-length gown with a chapel-length train. The gown, enhanced with French lace, was fashioned with high lace collar, and long lace sleeves. Lace appliques accented the skirt. A Spanish mantilla-style chapel-length veil was edged with lace accented with seed pearls.

She carried a bouquet of blue daisies, white carnations and pink baby's breath. Her going-away corsage was of blue and white carnations.

Mrs. Maggie Lloyd, San Angelo, great aunt of the bride, and Sigmon Lloyd, San Angelo, great uncle of the bride, served as matron of honor and best man.

Ushers were Robby, Reggy, Ricky, and Randy Robertson, all brothers of the groom.

Julie and Wendi Robertson, nieces of the groom, were flower girls and ring bearer was Curtis Lloyd, brother of the bride.

A reception was held at the church after the wedding. The bride's table was draped with a white lace cloth and centered with a three-tiered cake decorated with blue roses. Appointments were of silver and crystal. The groom's table was draped with a beige lace cloth and a chocolate ring cake was served with appointments of gold and crystal.

The bride is a 1976 graduate of Big Spring High School and is employed at Hall-Bennett Hospital. The groom, who attended Big Spring High School, is employed at Morris Robertson Body Shop.

After their ten-day wedding trip, the couple will make their home at 1505 Lincoln.

Newest parole member had rough youth

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The newest member of the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles grew up in the Roseland Homes project in Dallas, and crime sometimes erupted at her front door.

Connie Jackson's early life in an all-black housing project and her nine years as a probation officer equipped her to take her new job three months ago with no illusions.

Ms. Jackson was appointed to fill the unexpired term of the late Selma Wells, who also was black.

While attuned to the special problems of the ghetto, Ms. Jackson voices middle class values, such as respect for others, in trying to help ex-convicts return to the community and stay there.

"We are too quick to ignore the lessons of the past. We've tried everything else until we've almost eradicated ourselves," the 39-year-old board member said in an interview. "The community is crying for swift and sure justice. It's tired of models that haven't produced any success."

She remembers growing up with two sisters under a father who "always knew where we were, what we did and where we would go."

Her father preached respect for the rights and property of others and a motivation to succeed, she said.

She said those attitudes carried over to her work, first in helping ex-convicts stay out of trouble and now to help inmates plan how they will re-enter society.

"We as counselors take on the parental role. And I believe that if you expose a person to accepted values, if he goes astray, he will have that to fall back on," she said in her paneled, seventh-floor office in a state building.

"I got into criminal justice services because I heard of many allegations of injustice by blacks and minorities. I entered to get a first-hand view and understand our system," said Ms. Jackson, who has a bachelor's degree in sociology from Wiley College in Marshall.

Among her concerns as a new board member are being sure the Texas Department of Corrections educates and trains inmates for jobs on the outside.

"These are the tools for an inmate," she said, adding that in the past the need for such programs went unrecognized.

Another concern is that the pardon board tell inmates how to improve their chances for parole, if they are turned down.

The board reviews an inmate's case each year he or she is eligible for parole.

"Parole is a testing ground for the rehabilitation efforts of our penal system. In the past, the board might not have given enough feedback on what a person could do to make parole," she said.

Communications with inmates has improved since 1975 with the addition of six commissioners, who visit each inmate up for parole and sit on case review boards, she said.

Reports of in-fighting between the three board members and six commissioners over procedure have been distorted, she said.

"There's an ongoing effort to keep open a district line of communications. As a foreigner, I think I would be the first to note a problem and I didn't," she said.

Citizens United for Rehabilitation of Errants (CURE), a prison lobby, says the board is not considering as many parole cases as the Legislature intended when it boosted the number of parole officers last year.

CURE says the board should be paroling 1,950 inmates per month, while board figures show totals for the last six months of 1977 ranged from 312 in December to 852 in July.

"There has been a lag in cases and I haven't ascertained all the reasons for it. I've heard people say this isn't a working board, but I don't see how you can be on the board and not work."

She's Weary From All His 'Affection'

DEAR ABBY: Boy, do I ever have a solution for the lady signed CRAVING AFFECTION.

My husband is ready to jump into bed at the drop of a hat, a raindrop or a snowflake.

I love my husband very much, but after doing my housework, taking care of five kids, running my errands and helping my in-laws, I'm exhausted by 9 p.m.

Not my husband! He is ready for a night of cuddling and loving. (I like the cuddling—it's the LOVING that wears me out.)

Tell CRAVING AFFECTION that I would gladly change places with her, or send her my husband.

TOO TIRED

DEAR TOO: The problem of sexual fulfillment can be compared to world hunger. Although there's no shortage of food, much of the world's population is near starvation. There's plenty of supply and demand—it's the distribution that's fouled up.

DEAR ABBY: I am having an affair with a married man I am really in love with. (I'm 27 and he's 48.) We have been out in public together, and have even gone to some parties where he knew we'd run into some of his friends. (Once we even ran into his wife and neither seemed embarrassed!)

We've been going together for over a year, and have even spent weekends together, so I finally got up the courage to ask him why he was having this affair. He told me that he and his wife have an "open marriage"—a totally honest arrangement in which they agreed that if either one wants to sleep with someone else, it's okay. That way there's no lying and nobody is hurt.

He tells me he loves me and "needs" me and doesn't want to stop seeing me because I'm everything his wife has never been to him.

I'm confused. If he's being honest with me, why doesn't he get a divorce and marry me?

CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: Because he and his wife prefer to stay married. He is being completely honest with you. He has made it clear that you "fill a need" for the present. So if you're angling for a wedding ring, you're the sucker.

DEAR ABBY: It is the height of stupidity when a smoker starts to light up, stops abruptly, then hypocritically asks, "Is it all right if I smoke?"

Of course it's NOT all right!

In addition, I'm tired of having my home stunk up. I want to breathe clean air and so do my children. I'm dumping every ashtray I own.

I sympathize with smokers. I used to be one, but I quit. It wasn't easy. Now I would like to apologize to everyone whose air I fouled up when I smoked around them.

NEW BRIGHTON, MINN.

DEAR NEW: It's hardly "the height of stupidity" to ask, but it is the "height of rudeness" to smoke if the answer is no. And "no smoking" is a movement whose time has come.

DEAR ABBY: You wrote: "In teaching children to respect others, EXAMPLE is the best teacher."

True. And that caused me to recall George Bernard Shaw's famous quip: "If you must hold yourself up to your children as an object lesson, hold yourself up as a WARNING—and not as an EXAMPLE."

Black, Asian dolls now much in vogue

DALLAS (AP) — When Shindana Toys of Los Angeles started business in 1968 as a manufacturer of black dolls, whites purchased most of the products, says Herman Thompson, Shindana's representative at The Dallas Toy Show. Last year Shindana introduced its Asian doll. Although it became the firm's largest seller, Thompson said once again only a small number of the dolls were purchased by the minority depicted. They still have to get used to seeing themselves as a doll, as we had to get used to seeing ourselves as a black doll," Thompson said Tuesday. Shindana also features white, Hispanic and American Indian lines, but its stock in trade is still the black doll, now in many models. A miniature O.J. Simpson has been a favorite among child football fans, and it is joined this year by a Julius "Dr. J" Erving basketball doll. A Redd Foxx doll talks with the entertainer's raspy voice when a cord is pulled, and a prototype of a Florence the Maid doll from "The Jeffersons" television show is being tried out here. Ann O'Neill, manager of the semi-annual show at Dallas World Trade Center, aid 112 temporary exhibitors have set up booths, joining more than 100 exhibitors who have permanent toy showrooms. About 2,000 buyers from the Southwest have registered, looking over items they'll want in their stores next summer and fall. Amid the garish packaging of superhero merchandise, space fantasies and television tie-ins, some salesmen push for a quieter approach. "Play value" is a favorite phrase. "Let me point out a little of the play value on this to you," said Luke Dollar of Fisher-Price. He sent a "lift and load" model railroad through its motions. Hasbro Industries has a "Super Joe Adventure Team." A sales representative, Dave Balthrop, said, "Light is the play value here," as he aimed a laser communicator at a space monster. If light hits the right point, the monster stops and screams, and his eyes turn red. The Goss Co. is a specialist in wooden doll houses and blocks. "We're in the basic wood products," William Goss said. "As more and more plastic toys come on the market, I think we'll still have a spot." Charlie Smith of Jackson Stephens Associates is the Southwest distributor for an adult toy, the "Dyna-Bee." A gyroscope in a palm-fitting ball whirrs at 8,000 revolutions per minute to exercise the forearm and wrist. "This is the hottest item on the West Coast," Smith said.

Acceptance of wife beating hardest problem to overcome

By MARTY HAIR
Associated Press Writer

YPSILANTI, Mich. (AP) — A housewife, wearing a designer dress that cloaks her badly bruised arms and torso, visits her family doctor. He shakes his head in disbelief: "Your husband's too nice a guy to beat you." The wife of a factory worker, on advice from a social agency, calls the local prosecutor's office. She asks what legal action will stop her husband from beating her. "Call back Monday," she is told. Another woman sees a counselor about the beatings she is subjected to when her husband comes home drunk. "What do you do to provoke him?" the psychologist asks. Spouse abuse seems to be culturally accepted, says Dr. Elissa Benedek, a psychiatrist who works with both abusers and their victims. "Who's at fault? Nearly everyone who deals with cases of spouse abuse, says Dr. Benedek, a clinical associate professor of psychiatry at the University of Michigan and training director at the Center for Forensic Psychiatry in Ypsilanti. "We have to tell these women not to feel guilty, that it's not something they are causing," she says. The prevailing attitude among physicians, mental health workers, police, courts and husbands and wives themselves, she feels, is that domestic violence is bad, but it's nobody else's business. "Nobody needs it. That's probably the biggest thing that has to be refuted, that if a woman is abused, she wants it, she needs it, she's provoked it, she enjoys it. "Women are in very difficult positions. Many have no resources, nowhere to go. Who can you go to and say your husband's beating you?" Some battered women testify in court that having no one to listen, nowhere to go, made them so desperate that they resorted to violence against their husbands. One of them, Francine Hughes, has moved to

Jackson, Mich., following her acquittal by reason of insanity of a first-degree murder charge in the death of her ex-husband. The 30-year-old woman told the Ingham County Circuit Court jury last fall that her ex-husband choked her, threatened her with a knife, teased their children to tears and allowed a family pet to freeze. After years of this, Mrs. Hughes said she splashed gasoline around the bed where James Hughes slept and lit it. This year, in another case, Jennifer Patri of Waupaca, Wis., who contended she was the classic example of a battered wife, was convicted of manslaughter in the death of her husband and sentenced to 10 years in jail. "This is absolutely the last option," Dr. Benedek says. "They looked, they tried everything and there just was no other choice — or they didn't see that there was another choice." There is no "typical" spouse abuser, although the person is usually male and often he uses alcohol and was abused himself as a child, she says. "People abuse because the legal sanctions against it are not all that stringent. You can get away with it. "Mental health people are as guilty as anybody of saying, 'What did you do to cause it?' and in fact there may be some direct relation to something a woman did. But certainly not with all women. And even if there is, that's not the way to handle it." The problem is getting experts to realize "it takes two. To say not 'what did she do, but why is he doing that to her?" To facilitate this, she advocates special training, such as Detroit police officers are now receiving, in dealing with spouse abuse. One of Dr. Benedek's patients was living with a man who was a drug dealer. "She said she tried to leave him a couple of times. The night before she murdered him, he came home drunk. He beat her and raped her. And then he wanted to go out and look for a car," she said. "No, I won't do that." And he left and she sat by the window and waited and shot him with a gun. She said she had tried to leave him and he had followed her each time." Another woman, middle-class, has a job and several children. Her arms show bruises where her husband beats her. She told Dr. Benedek that she is staying with her husband for her children's sake, and will leave when her oldest child is grown. "That's not a legitimate thing to do," the doctor said. "Kids know. And you're setting up the pattern of violence again. It's important to weigh the options, but, in fact, you're not doing your children any good. There are no family secrets." Dr. Benedek tells patients they should get police officers' names and badge numbers when they arrive at the scene of a domestic dispute and should ask the officers to file a report. If the woman has to be hospitalized, she should get the name of the treating physician and request that pictures be taken showing her injuries. Beyond that, she may go to

Museum gets ancient shoes

SALEM, Mass. (AP) — Wooden shoes that French resistors used to clog Nazi machinery, 150-year-old, still-like clogs and huge leather postillion boots used by mail carriers 327 years ago are among a collection of historic footwear recently donated to two museums here. The collection of 4,300 shoes from 90 countries was donated to the Peabody Museum and the Essex Institute here by Enhart Corp., whose subsidiary, USM, built the collection over a 75-year span starting in 1899. One of the oldest and best preserved shoes is a 4,000-year-old Egyptian sandal made of intricately woven papyrus leaves. There's a boot worn by Tom Thumb and boots worn by Admiral Byrd on the third Antarctic expedition; there are jousting boots worn by Henry IV of France about 1600 and 18th-century slippers worn by the Bishop of Trent.

'Real' mother is one who raised you

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D.
Copley News Service

Dear Doctor,
I am 18 and adopted. I have lived with the Joneses (not their real name) since birth. My adopted mother and father told me I was adopted when I was 14. To some this might have been traumatic, but to me it was no big thing. I love and respect my adopted parents very much. They have been super parents.

Lately I have been wondering about my real mother — I would like to see her. My adopted parents know her whereabouts but I don't want to hurt mom and dad. Should I attempt to see my real mother?

Ada, El Centro, Calif.
Dear Ada,
Your "real" mother is Mrs. Jones. The person you want to see is your natural mother. To answer your question, yes, you should see her, but only if she wants to see you.

I'm sure the Joneses knew someday you would want to meet your natural mother, and would not be hurt by you doing so.
Talk to your real mother and have her arrange the meeting.

Dear Doctor,
My problem is my weight, even though I'm only 16. In the last four months I have gained 15 pounds. This may not seem to be much, but I am only five feet tall.

I consider myself to be somewhat attractive, but my weight is getting out of hand. I realize I am overweight, but whenever I am depressed, I eat. Please help!

Andrea, Piqua, Ohio
Dear Andrea,
Many times it's not how much you eat, but what you eat that puts on weight. If you must snack, nibble on fresh fruit or cheese. Eat three balanced meals a day (never skip breakfast) and try to eliminate all foods that contain white sugar, lard or shortening and white flour. Stay active and your depressed state will diminish — and so should your weight.

Dear Doctor,
We are a Christian Mormon family and very close. In our family besides mother and father, there are two boys and three girls.

I am 13 and my brother is 18. My sisters are 12, 14 and 16. Last week my 12-year-old sister and I saw my brother, Jim, smoking at the football game.

He was surprised when we saw him and he said he would never smoke again, if we wouldn't tell our parents. Jim is a youth leader in the church, and my parents would be hurt if they knew he smoked.

Every day he begs my sister and me not to tell. What should I do? I think my sister is going to tell.

Forrest, Wenatchee, Wash.
Dear Forrest,
No doubt, Jim has made a mistake. If he is still smoking, your folks will find out soon enough. If he has quit, he has learned an important lesson.

Don't tell your parents, but tell Jim he has placed your sister and you in a very unpleasant situation. Encourage him to talk to your parents about what happened.

The love in a Christian home should overcome the immediate disappointment your parents would feel if Jim would share his problem with mother and dad.

Dear Doctor:
My best girlfriend told me she thinks she has VD. She said she is scared and doesn't know what to do. She is afraid to tell her mother and doesn't want to see her family doctor because she is embarrassed.

What can I do to help her? Also, can I catch VD by hanging around with her?
C. T., McAllen, Texas

Health Service at once. Inform her that everything will be held in the strictest of confidence.

The only way one can be infected with VD is by direct contact. You cannot catch VD by hanging around with her.

Parents may be part of problem for youngsters unable to read

Parents who are wondering why their youngsters can't read well may unwittingly be part of the problem, says Dr. Edith M. Dowley, former director of the innovative Bing Nursery School at Stanford University.

"Parents are the principal models for the behavior of young children," says Dr. Dowley, who served as a special consultant for the new "Learn Together" series by Hallmark — a seven-book collection aimed at involving parents and children in the learning process.

"The example that parents set is very special," Dr. Dowley says. "If the relationship in the home teaching situation is loving, children will enjoy learning. Teachers in a school environment can't give this loving attention to each child."

"Parents should encourage a sense of learning. Encourage the child's sense of wonder. Encourage the child to explore and discover and to use his motor skills, imagination, and memory. The child should be aware of the many things one learns through one's sense."

Perhaps no figure in history has inspired more literary activity than has Jesus.

This is a logical outcome, considering the depth of the controversy which he elicited both during and after his sojourn on earth. Easter is an appropriate time for a rethinking of Jesus' significance, and to that end the reader may be aided by any of a host of works. Some attempt to reconstruct merely the temper of the times, and some strive to give a factual account; they all help to tell the story.

Numerous novels have been written of the impact of Jesus' teachings on a world which was dominated by the power of Rome. Lew Wallace's masterpiece, "Ben Hur," was first published in 1880 and is still read by millions. In juxtaposing the careers of a prominent young Jew of the upper class and a young Roman, the cultural contrasts of two societies are made clear, the climax of the story occurring at the time of the Crucifixion.

"Quo Vadis" followed in 1895, the product of a brilliant Polish author, Henryk Sienkiewicz. By 1915 it was estimated that one and a half million copies of the English translation had been sold. Its popularity is due, in part, to the drama of a love affair between a pagan noble and a Christian, with Nero's court serving as a backdrop.

More recently, Lloyd C. Douglas' "The Robe" released in 1942, tells of the family of the Roman who officiated over the Crucifixion on Calvary, and who came to possess the robe of Jesus. That artifact was instrumental in the conversion of the head of the family, who later faced death rather than to deny his faith before the emperor, Caligula.

Frank G. Slaughter's "The Crown and the Cross: the Life of Christ," was considered his best work by many people upon publication in 1959. Slaughter's writing has been criticized for a certain lack of accuracy, yet a strongpoint is the rapid flow of events which tends to drive his characters (and his readers) to the climactic finish.

Jim Bishop's "The Day Christ Died" is an hour by hour reconstruction of the day on which Jesus died, beginning with the apostles on their way to the Last Supper and ending when the body was taken down from the cross.

Last year, Taylor Caldwell's new novel, "I, Judas," provided an interesting portrayal of Jesus' betrayer. He is revealed as a complex man who believes that his action can force the Master to confront Caiaphas and overthrow the Roman yoke. His doubts prove to be stronger than his faith.

The following are recommended factual accounts of the life of Jesus: "Jesus: an Historians Review of the Gospels," by Michael Grant - 1977, "The Life of Christ," by Fulton J. Sheen - 1958, "Jesus of Nazareth: the Hidden Years," by Robert Aron - 1961, and "Jesus, the Son of Man," by Khalil Gibran - 1928.

Is third time a charm?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "The Young Pioneers" is symbolic of two recent developments that bode well for television — and the audience.

One is that the networks are more willing to give a good series idea a second, or even a third chance, to prove itself.

The other is that spring has become television's new haven. "Three's Company," "Family" and "Eight Is Enough" are shows that became hits after spring tryouts.

"The Young Pioneers" is up for its third try on ABC — but with a difference. That difference is that Earl Hamner, the creator of "The Waltons," is now guiding the show.

The two-hour movie airs on ABC at 7 p.m. EST Sunday and will be followed by two one-hour episodes the succeeding Sundays. Linda Purl and Roger Kern star as the young pioneer couple.

"What I tried to do — in the earlier versions the villains were too villainous," said Hamner. "I tried to give some dimension to them. I gave the Indian hater a reason for hating Indians, because they had killed his father. The storekeeper had been too tight-fisted. I made the man more of a romantic bachelor."

"What I'm especially proud of is that instead of seeding the Indians burning cabins and scalping people, we see them as human beings, loving and suffering and giving."

Although it has the feel of a Western, Hamner said he sees it as a frontier drama. He said "The Western traditionally has been a struggle between good and bad. Here, our struggle is between mostly good people trying to survive and find a life of their own."

"Basically," said Hamner, "this is a love story between Molly and David Beaton. David was 18 when he married Molly and she was 16 in the first movie. They are now two years older. It is not only a love story, but a young love story."

"I think the audience is ready for romantic relationships. It's about two young, attractive people in love with each other — almost an idyllic kind of love. It seems apt to tell a young love story against a background when this country was young."

The story is set in 1875 in the Dakota Territory, although it was actually filmed in Arizona south of Tucson. Hamner said if it becomes a series it will

JOHN AND JAGGER — John Travolta star of "Saturday Night Fever" goes to a party in London with Bianca Jagger, Wednesday night after the gala premiere of the movie in London.

Who needs Travolta!

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Travolta has been packing them in as a greasy, grunting duke of disco in "Saturday Night Fever," but even if Travolta's contorted prancings hadn't drawn a soul to the theatres, "Fever" would have done its makers well. The songs from the movie have dominated pop music like no other group of tunes since the Beatles disbanded.

The Bee Gees' "Saturday Night Fever" album is No. 1 in the pop and R&B charts and no less than seven tunes from the movie, performed by various artists, have become hits.

Among those mining the soundtrack for vinyl gold is Yvonne Elliman, whose "If I Can't Have You" is the latest "Fever" tune to hit big. Like the Bee Gees, who are managed by Robert Stigwood of the Robert Stigwood Organization, which made the movie and owns the soundtrack, Miss Elliman has benefited from her connection with RSO.

The sultry Hawaiian, who broke into the bigtime as Mary Magdalene in Broadway's "Jesus Christ Superstar," records on the RSO label and her husband, Bill Oakes, heads the company's film division.

She'd been without a hit for a while, and hooking up to the "Fever" bandwagon was about as sure a thing as was likely to come along.

But you get the feeling that Elliman sort of tosses out this hit, referring to it in conversation only casually as "that current thing from 'Saturday Night Fever.'" In spite of the coat-tail success she's had with "If I Can't Have You," it's a disco song, and Elliman knows her broad, husky vocals are best suited elsewhere.

But she's not quite sure where. She has tried almost every style in pop music, from sweet little ballads on Broadway to disco to country rock, but never found a niche that suited her.

She migrated to London from Hawaii at the age of 17, kicked around from manager to manager until she was discovered in a Piccadilly dive by "Jesus Christ Superstar" creator Tim Rice.
