BOB SPECA OF BROOMAL, PA.
Will prove 'domino theory' here next month

'Domino' man to give local demonstration

The 21-year-old Broomal, Pa. man, Bob Speca, who has gained an international reputation for proving that the "Domino Theory" does not apply just to politics but can be carried out in a practical manner, will offer a demonstration during the first annual World Championship Texas-Style Domino Tournament here July 27-28-29.

George McAlister, co-author of the book, "Dominoes Texas Style" and promoter of the tournament, said Speca agreed to appear here in a telephone conversation this morning.

Speca will set up 20,000 dominoes for his local demonstration. He has made two appearances on the Johnny Carson "Tonight" show on NBC, during which time he demonstrated with 10,000 dominoes.

At the present time, he is setting up 100,000 dominoes at Manhattan Center in New York City for another demonstration that is sure to be given wide coverage by the news media. Speca is an astronomy major at the University of Pennsylvania. He holds the world record for toppling domino chains — some 50,000 of them at one time. That record will, no doubt, fall with the demonstration in New York City.

The site for Speca's demonstration will be announced at a later date. It could be in the Howard College Coliseum, if it is pronounced ready for occupancy.

McAlister said nominal fees will be charged to help cover Speca's appearance here.

GEORGE
McALISTER

Admission prices have been pegged at $2 for adults and $1 for children.

McAlister also said that the Lubbock public relations firm of Webster and Harris had been retained to circulate nationwide information about the tournament.

No more than 190 two-man teams will be accepted for the tournament. Each team will pay a $100 entry fee.

The players will be shooting for a first prize of $5,000. Prize money will total $11,700. In addition, big trophies will go to winning teams.

American Petrofina Inc. will serve as co-sponsor of the tournament. Teams are expected from throughout the United States.

The tournament was originally scheduled for early August but moved forward due to a conflict in dates with an antique car show here. Because the car show will attract many out-of-town people, too, hotel and motel space would have come at a premium.

U.S. prepared to meet either

Carter tells Soviets to choose confrontation or cooperation

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — President Carter, in a major policy speech, told the Soviet Union today it "can choose either confrontation or cooperation" and find the United States prepared to meet either challenge.

Speaking against a backdrop of heightened superpower tensions, Carter said he was convinced the Soviet people want peace and that their government was trying "in good faith" to complete a treaty limiting strategic nuclear weapons.

But, by contrast, Carter told a commencement audience at the U.S. Naval Academy, the Soviets were exploiting instability in Africa as they try to expand their influence.

"To the Soviet Union," he said, "detente seems to mean a continuing aggressive struggle for political advantage and increased influence in a variety of ways."

Detente — accommodation between the two superpowers — must be "truly reciprocal," he said, with both the United States and the Soviet Union exercising restraint in troubled areas and in turbulent times.

The president's 31-minute speech was punctuated four times by applause from the 956 graduating midshipmen and an audience of several thousand other persons in the academy's football stadium.

The clapping was apparently spontaneous when Carter, a 1946 graduate of the Naval Academy, noted that the Navy has the biggest share of the largest defense budget in the nation's history. But he had to pause a beat or two for applause when he reported good prospects for a new strategic arms pact with the Soviets.

Carter's speech, touted by his principal advisers as clarifying U.S. attitudes toward the Soviet Union, mixed both hard-line and conciliatory gestures. He consulted with Zbigniew Brzezinski, his national security adviser, and Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, among others, in preparing it.

The speech went through several drafts and was certain to be read closely in allied and friendly capitals for insights into evolving U.S. policies abroad.

For these reasons, he went on, the United States "will support African efforts to contain such intrusion," as it did by assisting in the civilian rescue effort in Zaire's Shaba province.

Passage of California bill to make it easier for others

The passage of a sweeping property tax cut plan in California will make things easier for supporters of similar moves in other states, say the people who are backing the efforts for change.

"It will help us tremendously to get our proposal on the ballot," said Cal Williams, head of the Ada County Property Owners Association in Idaho. The association is one of several groups collecting petitions to get a measure on the November ballot limiting property taxes to 1 percent of market value.

Williams said the group has about 20,000 signatures so far and needs 26,000 by July 7 in order to get the proposal on the ballot. "I believe we've been picking up momentum in the last week and I think we're going to make it," said Williams.

Average per capita property taxes in fiscal 1976 ranged from $7 in Alabama to $1,048 in Alaska, according to the Tax Foundation Inc., a nonprofit research group.

A recent Associated Press-NBC News Poll showed 59 percent of those questioned felt the property taxes they paid were too high. Seventy-five percent of those surveyed said they agreed with the statement: "There should be a lid on property taxes, even if that means cutting back some government services."

An AP survey showed measures to eliminate or sharply curtail property taxes are under consideration in six states — Ohio, Montana, Michigan, Oregon, Pennsylvania and Nebraska — in addition to Idaho, although they are in varying stages of development.

In Ohio, for example, a committee is still pondering a proposal for a constitutional amendment to raise the state income tax and cut reliance on property taxes as a source of school financing.

Bills now in Pennsylvania's senate would abolish property taxes as a way of financing public education, raise the state's 2.2 percent personal income tax and increase state funding for education, and raise the number of business taxes.

Parolee jailed on assault count

Detectives John Burson and George Quintero arrested Andres Mendoza, 24, in Lubbock on charges of aggravated assault, midnight Tuesday.

Mendoza is a parolee who resides in Lubbock, but is suspected of pistol-whipping Mike Ortega, 19, 603 S. Bell, at the Comanche Trail Park, 8 p.m. Sunday. Ortega was beaten with a pistol on the head and shoulders, but did not require medical treatment.

Mendoza had been on parole in Lubbock County after having served time for a burglary in Howard County, according to police. Charges of aggravated assault were filed today in Justice of the Peace Bob West's office.

Hail damages reported

Rains boosting water level at Lake Thomas

By MARJ CARPENTER
An additional 2,000 acre feet of rain water ran into Lake Thomas during the past 24 hours, bringing the lake up an additional 1.2 feet, according to a spokesman at Colorado River Municipal Water District.

More rain at this time would benefit the lake, which has been in desperate need of water for the water supply of most West Texas cities. Big Spring Experiment Station measured .42 on Tuesday.

Even today, the officials from CRMWD and many city officials are in Austin at a water hearing pleading for a permit to build an additional reservoir for future water for this entire West Texas area.

But as often happens, rain would not actually benefit the cotton farmers right at this time. Since many of them had either been unable to plant because it was too dry until this rain, or had planted and had the young cotton washed out, they are needing some dry days to get the cotton in the ground.

Deadline for planting in this part of the state is anywhere from June 19-25, so little time is left for farmers to get a crop in.

Out at the Cecil Allred farm in the area between Ackerly and Knott, additional rainfall was reported Tuesday night. However, Mrs. Allred said, "How can you measure the flood we had last night when the rain gauge got beaten into the ground the night before by hail?"

At their farm, the roof was heavily damaged on the barn, all the windows on the north side of the house knocked out, the horses are bruised from the baseball-sized hail which pounded big holes in the ground in the area.

The area is a sparsely settled one or the damage would have gone into the millions of dollars due to the large heavy hail.

Rain fell again Tuesday night in the Brown area. Residents reported that a heavy wind blew a sand storm in right ahead of it which seemed "unreal since the crossroads is completely under water and a regular lake."

The report said the sand was high blowing dirt from some other area and was followed by a .4 rain right before dark. Durwood Blagraves reported .75 in rain in that area Tuesday night.

A high wind damaged apricot trees on some of the farms. One farmer's wife reported, "What few apricots were not pounded off by the hail on Monday blew off on Tuesday."

The parched land, which had no measurable moisture for months, first absorbed water like a sponge and then water began to stand in the fields Tuesday morning and is building up to some real lakes in low spots in the fields.

So area residents are facing good news and bad news. The good news is the water running over the spillway at Lake Thomas. The bad news is that farmers need to get cotton in the ground within the next two weeks and the fields must be dry enough to get in.

Judge is ordered to make sure 'lifer' has attorney for appeal

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — The Court of Criminal Appeals ordered a district judge in Howard County Wednesday to make sure Doyle Denton has an attorney for appealing a life-in-prison sentence.

A jury in April 1975 found Denton guilty of theft and because of two prior felony convictions, he received a life sentence. Denton tried to appeal his case on his own, complaining he had not received proper help from his court-appointed attorney.

The appeals court said Wednesday there is evidence that Denton did not receive effective assistance from his lawyer on appeal. The attorney did not submit a legal brief on the appeal and a request for a trial record was late.

"We perceive that (Denton's) request to serve as his own counsel was an attempt to 'shift for himself' and he did not knowingly and intentionally waive his right to counsel in this appeal," the court said.

The court said Denton frequently wrote to District Judge R.W. Caton regarding his appeal and complaining of his attorney. One letter indicated a grievance committee for lawyers in Howard County had looked into the case.

The appeals court said the district judge should determine whether the present court-appointed attorney is able to pursue the appeal and appoint another attorney if he is not.

More water needed to lure industry, Choate testifies

"Big Spring and surrounding cities are growing rapidly and require additional water resources if we are to meet the needs of new industry," Mayor Wade Choate was to tell members of the Texas Water Commission in public hearings in Austin today.

He will be one of several speakers from an area which includes such cities as Odessa, Midland, Snyder and San Angelo as well as officials from the Colorado River Municipal Water District.

They are pleading their cause to ask for a resolution calling for the construction of the Stacy Reservoir, which will be located four miles below the confluence of the Concho River with the Colorado River in Coleman, Concho and Runnels counties.

This reservoir, which would be completed around Jan. 1, 1985, would provide water to all cities in line above the reservoir including the cities of Coleman, Ballinger, San Angelo, Sweetwater, and Miles.

In addition, it would also provide water to cities currently being served by the CRMWD, which includes Big Spring, Odessa, Midland, Snyder, Stanton, Coahoma and several rural water districts.

The Texas Department of Water Resources has estimated that the population of the major cities in this area, which includes Big Spring, Odessa, Midland, Snyder and San Angelo, will more than double within the next 50 years. This estimated growth, in addition to our current water requirements, is one of the main reasons why this area of the state requires that a reservoir be built.

In addition, according to Mayor Choate, "The diversified industry moving to this part of the state requires and necessitates a dependable water supply. When industry moves to any part of the state, the entire state benefits from this influx, either directly or indirectly in the way of additional taxes and new jobs for the state's citizens."

"A dependable water supply is also an inducement for new industry to relocate in our area of the state," Choate pointed out. "Recruiting industry to Big Spring has become a major project for our community since the closure of Webb AFB in March 1977 and one of the first things a prospective client asks about is the available water supply in our area."

Mayor Choate also pointed out that "The West Texas area, which needs the Stacy Reservoir, is contributing a large percentage of the energy requirements for the state of Texas and the nation as a whole. If we are to continue to support this type of energy production, a dependable water source is required and we feel the Stacy Reservoir would meet this requirement."

Mayors from Snyder, San Angelo, Midland and Odessa also were expected to speak.

Action/reaction: Who pays?

Q: Who's going to have to pay for the suit brought by the two women deputies that is now before the District Court, the taxpayers or the women?

A: First, the case is before Federal Judge Leo Brewster in Abilene, not 118th District Court here. Secondly, the women will pay their attorney, the county will pay its attorney, the state will pay the judge, the court reporter, the clerks, and the other state employees. You help pay the county and the state expenses.

A brief meeting of the Howard County Tax Appraisal Board today resulted in very little action. The board was in executive session for an hour, discussing salary changes for the 1979 budget. Graduate futures good BETHLEHEM, Pa. (AP) — There's a bright outlook this year for college graduates with specific skills, according to a survey by the College Placement Council. But the future appears less favorable for those students who followed a general curriculum. Results of the survey released Tuesday indicate that employers this year intend to hire 11 percent more college graduates than a year ago. However, a 2 percent decrease compared to last year is predicted in hiring in non-technical fields.

Obituary was premature

VILLA RICA, Ga. (AP) — Jimmy Bone says he's still in the flesh and running for office, despite an obituary published about him last week in an area newspaper. Bone, 37, who is running for the Georgia House of Representatives, said he sent the weekly Bowdon Bulletin an outline of his background for use in articles about his campaign. Somehow, it wound up in the obituary column of the paper. Bone, calling the death notice "greatly exaggerated," said he didn't believe it would hurt his campaign.

Television show claims Big Spring inhumane to rabbits

By MARJ CARPENTER
A few years back, Big Spring was attacked for inhumane treatment of rattlesnakes and Tuesday night they were attacked for inhumane treatment of jackrabbits. Environmentalist groups back east are in the process of attempting to obtain a national bill for prohibiting the use of jackrabbits for coursing. This is a practice of allowing them to be chased by greyhound dogs while training them for racing. Used as an example on the show was a rancher from Glasscock County, whom the ABC television series "20/20" claimed was selling jackrabbits for coursing. Jess Allen, the rancher whom the series incorrectly listed as being from Big Spring, actually is from the St. Lawrence area and has been trapping and selling jackrabbits for many years. Most trappers that sell jackrabbits don't ask questions about what the rabbits are used for. One neighbor in the area said, "You sell a calf and you don't ask whether it is going for dog meat or prime rib. You just sell it." Jess Allen Jr. said today in a telephone conversation that three men came to the ranch about three weeks ago and had called in and "said they wanted to buy rabbits." He added, "When they brought a television camera, we ran them off and if they come back we'll run them off again."

Ranchers in the West Texas area often maintain that three jackrabbits will eat as much grass as a calf. Hershel Armstrong, longtime West Texas rancher, said, "ranchers often shoot jackrabbits and let them lie by the side of the road for the buzzards just to get rid of them. The government tells ranchers that we can't kill eagles. They tell us not to trap the poor coyotes. I didn't know they cared about the jackrabbits. Why doesn't anybody care about the sheep and cattle?"

Allen said that his Dad has trapped and sold rabbits for many years. There is no law against it in Texas. Allen also said the men who called to buy rabbits said they were from Tennessee. "They didn't tell us they were from a television program. Is there any kind of law to require them to be honest?"

Five Kennedys working in journalism field

BOSTON (AP) — After years of watching reporters watch their famous elders, the younger generation of Kennedys seems more interested in chasing the news than making it.

Joseph and Rose Kennedy, whose children included a president and two U.S. senators, have at least five grandchildren dabbling in journalism. The dabblers are among 29 grandchildren whose interests vary from law to the political life that made their parents and late grandfather the quarry of reporters.

Caroline Kennedy, whose father John F. Kennedy was once a reporter, was the latest to get a journalistic job when she was hired last week as a summer reporter at the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner.

"I guess it's because we're in contact with the press and become interested in it," Timothy Shriver, one of five children of Sargent and Eunice Kennedy Shriver, said when asked about the grandchildren's penchant for journalism.

"Everyone is exposed to you guys a lot, or has been at one time or another," the 18-year-old Yale freshman told an interviewer.

Timothy, who has no definite plans for the summer, says he cannot write well enough to seriously consider becoming a reporter. But both his older brother and sister have full-time news jobs.

Robert Sargent Shriver III, 24, is also a reporter for the Herald-Examiner. Shriver, in fact, has been building his career in the best tradition of a newspaperman migrating across the country — from the Annapolis (Md.) Capital, to the City News Bureau in Chicago, to the Chicago Daily News and, finally, to Los Angeles.

His sister Maria, 22, is in a production training program at KYW-TV in Philadelphia. And two sons of the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy of New York are also showing a bent for journalism.

David Kennedy, 22, a junior at Harvard who plans to travel in Europe this summer, worked last summer in the Washington bureau of the Nashville Tennessean.

His older brother Robert Jr., 24, wrote a profile for The Boston Globe last August of Judge Frank Johnson Jr. of Alabama, President Carter's first choice for FBI director. His book-length biography of the judge will be published soon. Robert, who graduated from Harvard, is now studying at the London School of Economics and plans to go to law school.

In addition, when Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts led a family trip to China, Caroline and two of his children, Kara and Teddy Jr., sold pictures to newspapers and magazines. Kara, who is at prep school, will be spending this summer traveling in Europe.

Caroline, 20, has also exhibited photographs at a New York gallery. Last summer, she worked at the New York Daily News as a $156-a-week "copy person" in the city room.

Farm Producers, consumers to suffer beef prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — The rise in beef prices for both producers and consumers may be longer and stronger than expected just two weeks ago, the Agriculture Department now says.

Moreover, that and another report from department economists Tuesday indicate that supermarkets and food processors and wholesalers are lagging behind in passing through the consumers the full impact of higher raw-product prices.

That lag, which can extend to two months for some foods, is traditional and officials of the president's Council on Wage and Price Stability still expect the middlemen to catch up this summer and food prices to moderate in the fall.

But the higher beef-price forecast is a new wrinkle that could prompt reassessment of other inflation predictions.

The Agriculture Department World Food and Agricultural Outlook and Situation Board approved on Tuesday a forecast that average 1978 beef prices to consumers could rise 20 percent above the 1977 averages and those paid producers could rise 33 percent, indicating more to come next year for consumers.

As the board noted, President Carter is considering whether to allow more foreign beef, used for hamburger and processed meats mostly, to enter the country this year "as a possibility for tempering some of the rise in meat prices."

The White House said a decision is expected very soon. The National Farmers Organization and Rep. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, warned Tuesday that "making the United States a dumping ground for surplus beef" would again wreck the beef producers' market.

Government economists have been saying that world beef supplies are not excessive and allowing more imports would only trim consumer prices by about 5 cents a pound by the end of the year.

The 1977 averages used in the forecast are $1.38 a pound at retail for a wide selection of choice-grade cuts and $40 per 100 pounds for 900-pound to 1,100-pound Choicesteers at Omaha.

Retail prices for April, when overall cost of living averages took their biggest jump in more than a year, were released Tuesday also and showed a $1.63 a pound average. Preliminary May figures are closer to a record $1.68.

At the same time, average steer prices at seven leading Midwestern markets and California in April were $52.12 per 100 pounds and the new forecast said they could go to $57 late this fall before slipping to current levels.

The department and the meat industry have been projecting a two-year to three-year climb in beef prices until herds are sufficiently rebuilt to start that commodity's cycle over again.

But just two weeks ago, the board raised from 12 percent to a range of 16 percent to 18 percent its outlook for 1978 beef prices. A few days later, that kicked off a jump on its overall estimate for 1978 food prices from a 6 percent to 8 percent range to 8 percent to 10 percent.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Now that most schools are out for the summer, the Agriculture Department is sending $26 million out to the states to use in the next 3½ months to train children, teachers and school food service personnel "on the important relationship between nutrition, good food and health."

The money is given out at the rate of 50 cents per enrolled pupil, so California and New York have more than $2 million available each, with more than $1 million each allotted to Illinois, Michigan, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Texas.

Briscoe spent over $3 million in race

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Campaign spending for Gov. Dolph Briscoe's losing reelection bid vaulted over the $3 million mark, according to campaign financial statements filed in the Secretary of State's office.

In reports filed by Briscoe's main campaign committee and 14 local fundraising groups, expenditures totaled $3.1 million and contributions were $2.8 million.

Candidates who won primary races and will face opposition in November, such as Briscoe's opponent John Hill and Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements, did not have to file final primary election reports Monday but had the option of including finances from April 28 to May 31 in an Oct. 10 report.

However, Clements' campaign mailed a report late Monday, a campaign worker said Tuesday.

The last figures filed by Hill in April indicated his campaign committees had spent $881,997 and raised $1,066,050. Clements said in April he had raised $236,886 while spending $1,512,829.

Briscoe's main committee reported $983,500 in outstanding loans as of May 31, out of a total of $1,170,000 in borrowed funds. The loans were guaranteed by various supporters.

During the month ending May 31, Briscoe's campaigners raised $469,529 and spent $474,824. Of that amount, $160,000 was paid to the Richards Group, Inc. of Dallas for media expense and an additional $30,000

Thunderstorms move to Southeast Texas

By the Associated Press

Heavy thunderstorms roared across South and Southeast Texas early today, drenching the area with flash flood producing amounts of heavy rainfall.

Flash flood warnings were posted today for Harris and Montgomery counties in Southeast Texas and a wide area of Southeast Texas was to remain under a flash flood watch throughout the day.

Flooding along Cibolo Creek, Salado Creek and portions of the San Antonio River in the San Antonio area continued during the night.

Rainfall amounts in excess of two inches were reported over most of the southern half of the state during the night.

Houston International Airport received 4.25 inches and up to 4.5 inches fell in the San Antonio area. The fast-falling rain caused rapid runoff. Blanco in Central Texas received in excess of two inches in 25 minutes. Luling which received nearly 2.75 inches in about 90 minutes.

Skies were generally cloudy over central and eastern sections of the state with the east third reporting thunderstorms.

Experience could help all of us

The threat was invariably more intimidating than the actuality — that of visits promised by Occupational Safety and Health Act inspectors.

Lots of businessmen were told to expect personal calls by the government men, that the visitors would demand operational changes whether they were needed or not, but the merchants and the shop foreman learned the inspectors never dropped in too often.

Now, following a ruling by the Supreme Court which said, in effect, that unannounced and warrantless OSHA inspections would be banned, the threat has been lessened. The court ruling could be a mixed blessing.

THE COURT decided, in a split decision, that the Constitution's protection against unreasonable searches applies to commercial premises as well as homes.

The ruling all but eliminates the Labor Department's strategy of keeping private employers alert to safety needs by holding over their heads the possibility of surprise visits by federal gumshoes.

The court's ruling said inspections can be made after search warrants, obtained from a judge, are in force. The decision, no doubt, is being widely applauded, OSHA has developed an image as another one of those suffocating bureaucracies that often makes unreasonable demands, that swoops down with the backing of the federal government to enforce arbitrary regulations. The OSHA has also been accused of having been a major contributor to our country's inflationary spiral since its inception.

THERE IS NO doubt that OSHA and its agents have blundered on occasions. Some have shown great impatience with business men who have tried to reason with them. Those in the private sector accuse the inspectors of having been unyielding and inflexible in enforcing rules that don't work in the real world.

It might be wise for all to concede, however, that employees of a firm deserve to work in areas that are as healthful and safe as possible.

Invariably, working conditions have been improved by government fiat when other methods have failed.

The Supreme Court ruling may be an effective way to put a harness on OSHA without eliminating its valid function.

Perhaps not only did the business community learn something by its confrontations with OSHA but the agency adjusted to the challenge by becoming more effective, too. If such is the case, we are all better off with the ruling.

Price to pay

Around the rim

Eileen McGuire

Junk food, the aging process and single living do not mix so I have discovered to the dismay of that part of me which was so well taught by my penny-conscious father to cringe at the thought of throwing "good money" away.

(I have always wondered if there is such a thing as "bad money," if it's all right to throw it away and how to tell the difference between the two. But that's another rim.)

One or more of the above — junk food, aging, single living — or maybe the combination of all three have proved to be my downfall, causing me to "depreciate" almost as quickly as my yellow Nova which you may recall having read about in this same spot last week.

THE AGING process I have no control over, but the other two — single living and junk food — are directly related, at least in my case.

When I embarked on this adventure of living as a single six months ago, one of the biggest obstacles I faced was having to learn how to cook. That obstacle was quickly overcome as I learned my way around Big Spring's drive-in hamburger establishments instead of the kitchen.

If you think all hamburgers taste alike, you haven't tried all of the varieties offered here. And if you tire of hamburgers, you have several other alternatives to choose from, all of which are habit-forming if you hate to cook as much as I do.

It wasn't until the feeling I can best describe as the "blahs" hit me last week that I discovered there is a fairly large price to pay for avoiding the supermarket and stove month after month. Don't suggest that I try some of those cookbooks written especially for those of us who hate to cook because I already have and my "Speedy Meatballs" which required only 15 minutes to cook according to the recipe, were only edible after they'd simmered an additional hour and a half.

I've also tried the popular natural food diets which require no cooking at all but the time saved by not cooking is made up for in peeling, grinding and blending. Also, it costs twice as much to eat "natural" foods as it does "processed" foods. For some reason, you must pay more for not having anything done to the food you eat.

SO, BREAKFAST became a cup of coffee, lunch a hamburger and supper, a cheeseburger. This plus the discovery that there is a life after work — also addictive — led me to the doctor's office last week and the dentist this week. My Nova will now have to wait for her repairs until I'm repaired and by that time my budget will no doubt require a few.

Let this be a lesson to all of you — man (woman, too) cannot live on bread and hamburger alone. A good dose of green stuff must be thrown in there or you end up having to pay your way out of it with twice as much of the other green stuff.

Fortunately, my vacation has arrived. I had planned to spend it in Michigan, but now I'll settle for an agenda of vegetables and lots of rest. I can't give up aging, I won't give up my singlehood, so this is my official farewell to junk food.

Carter vs. Castro

Evans, Novak

WASHINGTON — Intercepted coded messages to Fidel Castro's Africa Corps in Angola "covering a period of several days" before the invasion of Zaire's Shaba province comprise part of the evidence to support President Carter's charge of Cuban complicity in the invasion.

In addition, the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) has possession of "human intelligence" reports — possibly from Cuba, possibly from Angolan sources — that corroborate the intercepts.

That background explains Jimmy Carter's cold anger in totally disregarding Fidel Castro's personal protestation of innocence in a Carter-Castro confrontation that may have wide-ranging international impact.

Challenged by Sen. George McGovern to prove his accusation against Castro, President Carter ordered Adm. Stansfield Turner, CIA director, to begin testimony on Capitol Hill on June 1 before the House Intelligence Committee. Turner is due for similar testimony before the Senate Intelligence Committee next week.

Turner labors under a heavy burden of responsibility to protect American intelligence agents and sources. A leak from a member of Congress could destroy sources and cost lives.

THE NECESSITY for protecting sources, then, could leave the president open to renewed challenges from McGovern and other congressmen: supply proof positive that Castro was lying when he denied any Cuban role. That does not disturb Mr. Carter. He is certain that Congress will take his word over Castro's or Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, who infuriated the president with his May 27 statement on the White House lawn that Mr. Carter's information was faulty.

Indeed, evidence now being collected to prove the complicity of Moscow, Havana and other Soviet satellites in the murderous rampage of the Angola-based Shaba invasion force leaves no possibility of doubt. A central element has been Soviet use of Communist East Germany.

In his hard-hitting "Meet the Press" appearance on May 28, Abigniew Brzezinski fingered the East Germans, but only obliquely. In fact, the record of East Germany as a chief Soviet agent in Africa is just now becoming clear.

Moscow assigned East Germany the principal Communist coordinating role for intelligence and "security matters" in Ethiopia, Mozambique, Angola and several others states targeted by the Soviet Union. A special secretariat to handle this task, and oversee supplies of arms, was created in the early 1970s under East Germany's deputy foreign trade minister. In these Soviet-targeted countries, East Germany is credited with having more on-the-scene agents than any single country except the Soviet Union itself.

Special targets are the "liberation" armies now poised outside Rhodesia's frontiers under Robert Mugabe and Joshua Nkomo and the "national peoples' armies" of Angola, Ethiopia and Mozambique.

Early this month, in a speech in Addis Ababa, Lt. Col. Haile-Mariam Mengistu, the Ethiopian strongman, boasted that "progressive comrades" from East Germany "live with us, fight with us and die with us." When the speech was broadcast later in English, that phrase was deleted. One year earlier, a Western European intelligence service reported the capture of three East German soldiers in the Zairian town of Mutshasha during the first (1977) Angola-based incursion into Zaire.

With such a wealth of evidence at his disposal, President Carter's charge of non-African Communist complicity in the 1978 invasion of Zaire is beyond dispute.

Learn when enough is enough

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: During the past six months I have lost 55 pounds through diet and exercise. Recently I have been noticing that I tend to bruise very easily. Seems as though if a person touches me a bruise shows up the next day and stays for a week.

Could I possibly be lacking vitamins? I take vitamins and an iron tablet every day. My blood pressure is normal and I am 5-feet-5 tall and weigh 125 pounds. — C. L.

Congratulations on your successful weight loss. Losing 55 pounds over 90 days is a splendid rate of loss. Unless you were being short-changed on vitamins and iron during your reducing program it is unlikely that a deficiency is behind your bruising. Bruising like yours can be caused by a blood platelet deficiency (purpura). The vitamins important in blood formation include B-12, C, and K. These symptoms should never be dismissed. You need to have a blood study and platelet count done if the symptoms persist.

I hope you don't intend to lose more weight now that you have attained a svelt 125 — ideal for you. Many reducers become obsessed with losing weight and go far beyond reasonable weight loss as though trying to prove they can be as thin as they once were obese. This can lead to real problems greater than the obesity. Find your weight level, tailor your calorie intake to that, and you won't return to the heavy side of the scales.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a red rash on my left knee that started last summer. Then it spread to my right knee. It is solid-like in some spots. It spreads and there is a center that is clear like the rest of my skin. It's not sore and doesn't itch. The doctor calls it granuloma annulare. He says it is nothing I can put on it to make it go away. Will you please tell me what this is and if you know of anything that can be done for it. I have some on my hands now. — Mrs. G. C.

This is a benign skin disease featured by the spread of granular-like tissue. "Annulare" means "ring-shaped," and refers to the characteristic design created — a spreading out until a circle is formed. It can be yellowish or skin-colored. The feet, legs, hands, and fingers are common sites.

It is nothing to be overly concerned with, except that in adults it is sometimes found with diabetes. Perhaps it would be wise to have your blood checked for sugar.

It is a bothersome problem that eventually runs its course. For some the use of corticosteroid ointments overnight helps speed the disappearance. But since it is largely temporary cosmetic nuisance, I suggest you let nature take its course. The cause is unclear.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband has been ordered to do postural drainage exercises because of a lung condition. When is the best time to do these? How can I help him in this? — Mrs. P. T.

Usually three times a day — in the morning before breakfast, in midday before lunch, and late in the evening before retiring. The idea is to do them at times when the stomach tends to be empty (to avoid nausea and vomiting). The purpose is to have the upper trunk of the body below the rest of the body.

ONE WAY TO PUT IT — This can't be categorized as a letter to the Editor, since The Herald doesn't print unsigned letters, but one local resident made up in candor what he (or she) might have lacked in delicacy in the above note to the newspaper.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I have heard preachers talk about the "deadly sins." What is meant by this? — L. W.

DEAR L. W.: The so-called "seven deadly sins," listed in Proverbs 6:16-19, are "a proud look, a lying tongue, and hands that shed innocent blood, An heart that deviseth wicked imaginations, feet that be swift in running to mischief, A false witness that speaketh lies, and he that soweth discord among brethren."

This list is not the only list in the Bible of sins that are an abomination of God; for example, Galatians 5:19-21 gives a number of sins that are an offense to God. However, the list of the seven deadly sins is remarkable for several reasons. For one thing, this catalog of sins is actually very comprehensive. It mentions not only open sins such as murder, but inward sins that only God sees, such as evil thoughts. It also points out that in God's eyes such things as pride and an undisciplined tongue are just as sinful as inflicting physical harm on someone. The list is also remarkable because it reminds us how often our sins affect not only ourselves, but other people as well.

Peveto threat should trigger action

By JIM DAVIS
Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — State Rep. Wayne Peveto says if no one else will study alternatives for funding construction at 17 colleges and universities, he will. That threat should get some action.

Peveto would be biased on the 10-cent state property tax that finances such construction.

The Democrat from Orange has filed suit attacking the tax as unfair and wasteful. He believes construction funds should go through the regular state budgetary process.

He says the present formula gives the 17 institutions money for one and one-half times the space recommended by state college authorities.

Peveto is chairman of a committee that will recommend tax code changes to the 1979 legislature.

He says the committee will study the property tax but probably some other committee — such as higher education — should recommend a new policy on construction funding.

Peveto has talked informally with House Speaker Billy Clayton and aides of Lieutenant Governor Bill Hobby about starting study.

Rep. Susan Gurley McBee, D-Del Rio, says the top issue for the 1979 legislature will be how to make property taxes more equitable.

"I'm particularly interested in how this will affect agricultural land," she says. "I represent a very rural district."

She's not exaggerating. Her nine-county district is the biggest in the state, covering about 22,000 square miles of Southwest Texas.

But she says she's hearing from small-town residents, too. They are concerned about increasing taxes.

Harry Ledbetter will be using his brain rather than his brawn even though he lost his race for state treasurer.

Back during the campaign, Ledbetter said he had made an unusual deal with his principal financial supporter, J. Hiram Moore of Austin. He said he would do oil field work for Moore in the Dakotas to pay off a $100,000 campaign loan — if he lost.

Now Ledbetter has been hired as state budget expert. Now Ledbetter has been hired as state budget expert for John Hill's campaign for governor. If Hill wins in November, Ledbetter probably will land a job in the new governor's office.

Where does that leave the promise to Moore? Not forgotten, but ignored.

Ledbetter said Moore is an old friend and won't make him go to the cold north.

"But if he said, I would go," Ledbetter said.

The Texas Observer, the semi-monthly voice of Texas liberalism, will be going south temporarily this summer — or maybe north.

Jim Hightower, the Denison native who came to Austin as editor by way of Washington, D.C., wants to try a new way of taking journalism to the people.

He said the Observer crew will pack up occasionally and move to a Texas city for a couple of weeks. A special issue on the problems and possibilities of the area will be prepared on site.

Likely spot for the first try is the Rio Grande Valley. Hightower says other possibilities are Rockport and Amarillo.

State Sen. W. E. "Pete" Snelson, D-Midland, is heading a committee looking into alternatives to Social Security for state employees.

Snelson says local and state governments are increasingly concerned about the cost of Social Security.

Under legislation passed by the legislature last year, the state is picking up the employees' share of Social Security payments. That increases the state's share by $100 million this year, and the cost is increasing.

The committee will study whether the state should continue to participate in Social Security and what alternatives are available.

A Sunset Advisory Commission recommendation that there be no state regulation of the private employment industry won't stop a special House committee study of that regulation.

"We're not oblivious of the acts of the Sunset Commission," Rep. Charles Fennell, D-Holiday, said. "But our obligation is to report back to the next session."

The committee is looking into the makeup and powers of the private employment board. The Sunset Commission voted 7-1 to tell the legislature that the board isn't needed at all.

Scandal ends; 86 cadets graduate

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — The U.S. Military Academy brings down the final curtain on its historic honor code scandal today by graduating 86 cadets who received an unprecedented second chance to become Army officers after they admitted cheating on their engineering homework.

The 176-year-old institution had a record 948 graduates.

A number of the 86 who were readmitted — most of whom declined to be named — maintained in interviews before the ceremony that West Point still teaches lessons of expediency and hypocrisy for survival despite radical reforms brought on by the scandal.

"It stinks," one graduate said of the honor system. "It's rotten, worse than it ever was. I came back to the same stuff because people are people. I don't care what they do around here — it's not going to be the way they want it to be."

Said another, "I think things are changing for the better, but I don't think it's as good as it should be. They still have the archaic honor system, which is the root of the problem."

Gen. Bernard Rogers, Army chief of staff and the main commencement speaker, obliquely referred to the 1976 scandal in his prepared remarks, most of which were devoted to a defense of the volunteer Army. Speaking of the Class of 1978, which absorbed 92 of the disgraced cadets, Rogers declared:

"It has known some turbulent times, has dealt with some difficult challenges — some unprecedented in nature — and it has performed in a most impressive manner."

The chief of staff also said in his prepared remarks that West Point had given the graduates "a moral compass by which to chart your paths ahead."

To a man, the cadets interviewed said they encountered no overt hostility in the past year. To a man, not one would say for sure that he would stay in the Army beyond the required five years. Nearly all said the summer of scandal and the year of suspension matured them.

Of the 152 cadets who left in the wake of widespread collaboration on engineering homework, 98 returned after a bitter battle with the Pentagon to avoid dismissal. Of the 92 who entered the Class of 1978, five must remain for summer school. One awaits separation for conduct deficiencies.

The cadet who blew the whistle on the scandal, Timothy Ringgold, said he was glad he did. "It's been good for me and it's been definitely good for the corps," said Ringgold. He said the institution is "healthy and getting healthier," because it now concedes it has problems.

NTSU police use study, psychology

DENTON, Texas (AP) — The situation isn't new — a distraught, armed man barricaded himself in a house and SWAT (Special Weapons and Tactics) teams are brought in. Much fiction ends the drama with a rush by SWAT police, gunfire and death.

But in the scholarly atmosphere of North Texas State University, campus Police Chief Robby Robinson, Sgt. Vic Lauderdale and Lt. Frank Robinson take a more academic approach, forming a specialized crisis intervention team focusing on homework and psychology.

Chief Robinson is an instructor in abnormal psychology. Lauderdale has a degree in criminal justice and Lt. Robinson is a political science graduate.

Their expertise came to play recently when an 18-year-old man barricaded himself in a house that was quickly surrounded by SWAT teams from the Lewisville police department.

"The primary objective is the protection of human life, including the life of the suspect," Chief Robinson said. "We started active negotiations at 4:25 p.m. He came out of the house at 6:45 p.m."

The Lewisville incident was the first for the NTSU team.

Lewisville police called in the university team from the campus, about 20 miles away, after futile attempts to lure the suspect out of the house.

A telephone call from an 18-year-old girl started the incident. She said that Glen Ellis had assaulted her. By the time police reached Ellis' house, he had barricaded himself.

Chief Robinson, a boyish-looking 31, acted as negotiator, Lauderdale as a liaison man and Lt. Robinson videotaped the scene for future study.

"We have to establish trust," Chief Robinson said. "And it has to be one person. In the event that I didn't work out, Vic would have tried out."

Robinson stood near the corner of the house, with Lauderdale nearby by out of sight of Ellis. Lauderdale relayed cryptic notes — "Stall," and "The girlfriend is coming."

"We don't just stand there and talk (to the suspect)," Chief Robinson said. "Anybody can do that. It's a matter of doing your research and using it. Vic will send out for more information and bring it back to me."

He said many suspects in such a position threaten to kill police, but few commit suicide.

In the Lewisville incident, Chief Robinson promised Ellis he could have a chance to apologize to the girl. The apology was made, and Ellis eventually came out.

"Our training is a service we offer not only here at the university, but to anyone who needs it," Chief Robinson said. "So, whether it's someone in a rural area barricaded in a house or in a school building, whether hostages are involved or not, we are able to offer this service."

Parents file $2.5 million suit

HOUSTON (AP) — An attorney representing the parents of a Louisiana teenager shot and killed by Houston police in 1977 says he will file a $2.5 million suit against the city.

Percy Foreman said Tuesday the suit is based on an 1871 civil rights act that holds local governments responsible if rights of citizens are deprived by city employees.

The Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that cities can be sued for civil rights violations under the terms of the Reconstruction era-inspired legislation.

Randall Webster, 17, of Shreveport, La., was shot and killed by Houston police in Feb. 1977 who had been pursuing him in a stolen van on city freeways.

A state grand jury later no-billed the officer who said he shot Webster in self-defense after the youth pulled a gun.

A federal grand jury has indicted four officers, three of whom had been fired earlier, on charges of conspiring to cover up circumstances surrounding Webster's death. They are charged with supplying and planting a "throw down" gun near the youth's body. One officer was charged with striking and shooting the youth.

Iran will invest $600 billion in new industry in the next 10 years to shift the economy away from its dependency on oil revenue, a government official said today.

In 1976, oil revenues accounted for 71 percent of the national budget, which totaled about $60 billion, he said. That figure was reduced to 60 percent last year, Yeganeh added.

CLIFFORD CASE

Iran shifting economic base

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — In 1976, oil revenues accounted for 71 percent of the national budget, which totaled about $60 billion, he said. That figure was reduced to 60 percent last year, Yeganeh added.

Tax proposal passed, incumbent defeated

By the Associated Press.

"Enough," California voters told their tax collectors, and the echo of frustration skipped across the country, helping to dump four-term Sen. Clifford Case in New Jersey and denying money to Ohio's largest school districts.

While California voters were overwhelmingly approving a cut in their property taxes by 57 percent Tuesday, New Jersey Republicans turned out the 74-year-old Case in favor of 34-year-old Jeffrey Bell, who favors a 30 percent cut in federal income taxes.

It was the busiest political day of this non-presidential election year and there were a number of noteworthy victories.

They included:

—The victory by former basketball star Bill Bradley in the Democratic Senate race in New Jersey;

—The nomination of Wayne Hays, the former Congressional power in a Democratic primary for a seat in the Ohio House;

—The victory of state Attorney General Evelle Younger over former Los Angeles Police Chief Ed Davis in the California Republican gubernatorial primary;

—The easy win by Rep. Max Baucus over appointed Sen. Paul Hatfield in Montana's Democratic Senate primary.

—Mississippi's first competitive Senate race in 30 years, in which Gov. Cliff Finch and lawyer Maurice Dantin qualified for the June 27 Democratic runoff, and Rep. Thad Cochran won the Republican race.

But the theme of the day was taxes. Voters in Cleveland and Columbus, Ohio, overwhelmingly rejected new tax levies that school officials said were necessary to keep their systems running next year.

And if California's tax rebellion — the approval of controversial Proposition 13 — was expected, the Republican primary in New Jersey was not.

Case, who has one of the

most liberal records among Senate Republicans, had been expected to win easily against Bell. A former aide to Ronald Reagan who had campaign help from former Treasury Secretary William Simon and Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, Bell was unknown statewide.

But he had one issue — his tax cut proposal, which an AP-NBC News Election day poll showed was important to half the people who voted for him. Bell claimed that was the reason for his win.

"From coast to coast, the American people are building to a tidal wave of tax revolt," he said.

Texas Congressman says New York should be watched, not helped WASHINGTON (AP) — Until New York City comes to grips with its own problems "and corrects them, Congress should watch, not help," says a Texas congressman.

Dallas Republican James Collins voiced his views concerning the financially beleaguered Big Apple, during a Tuesday speech before the House.

As Collins urged his colleagues to refuse pleas for federal aid, New York City Mayor Edward I. Koch told the Senate Banking Committee that the Carter Administration plan for $2 billion in bond guarantees for as long as 15 years could "mean the difference between fiscal life and death" for his troubled city.

The Mayor also warned that without aid, the nation's largest city could succumb to bankruptcy within a month.

"When this body approved the original financing package for New York, we were assured that it was a one-time only bond guarantee, yet New York City is back and begging for more," began Collins.

"Because the economic health of New York City is in such direct contrast with its Texas counterparts, I decided to compare various aspects of New York's budget and municipal practices with those of Dallas, Houston and San Antonio... these startling comparisons underline the waste and extravagance that New York City is asking the rest of the country to finance," he continued.

Collins pointed to New York's wage scales for municipal employees and "cavalier attitude when it comes to the taxpayers' money... reflected in New York City's spending policies for services" as prime reasons for the fiscal problems besetting the city.

Collins, armed with figures from the Bureau of the Census and New York City, said the average "city employee is paid $26,654 per year, with extra benefits being 65 percent of base pay. This ratio is twice as high as the average of these Texas metropolitan areas."

Comparatively, Dallas city employees average $12,926 a year, Houston $12,288 and San Antonio $9,841, according to Collins' figures.

The hourly labor costs of each of the four cities showed New Yorkers receiving $18.13 an hour with Houston topping the Texas list at $9.29.

Collins also noted that "municipal employees in New York only work 35 hours a week and 210 days a year" compared to San Antonio's 221 working days, Houston's 228 and Dallas' 222.

"New York City municipal salaries and work hours are enough to make even a federal bureaucrat turn green with envy," continued Collins. "So well taken care of is your average city employee that when salaries were 'frozen' during the height of the last fiscal crisis, their take home pay managed to increase by as much as 19.9 percent as a result of various contract clauses."

Collins also cited an April 8 New York State Comptroller General report that noted that municipal workers are not productive 61 percent of their work days. "The report states that these practices potentially cost the city about $16 million annually in (one) department alone."

As an example of how New York could trim its deficit, Collins said that reducing fringe benefits for municipal workers from their current 65 percent to the federal government's level of 35 percent of base pay would reduce personnel costs by $1.5 billion a year. "This alone could reduce the difference between a billion-dollar deficit and a half-billion-dollar surplus in this year's budget."

"The city's leadership, however, refuses to consider such measures and has instead opted for what is in the short run more politically profitable, but in the long run is financial suicide."

'Lights out' cure to school vandalism

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — San Antonio Independent School District officials are successfully fighting vandalism, but not by turning schools into bristling, well-guarded, well-lighted fortresses. They simply turn out the lights.

The five-year "lights out" program developed by Sam Wolf, SAISD director of security services, has reduced damage from $160,000 annually five years ago to only $40,000 per year. Plus, there's the savings in utility costs.

"The other law enforcement officers thought we were crazy to do this — to turn off the lights," Wolf said Tuesday, recalling that the primary teachings of his 35-year law enforcement career has always stressed well-lighted areas to discourage crime.

"I remembered that as a kid we never hung around in the dark. We hung around a street light or some other kind of illumination. We wanted to see who was with us," said Wolf.

"With vandalism, the thrill is seeing the windows broken, in seeing the words written on the wall. It's no thrill to hang around in the dark," he added.

The district first tried the "lights out" program in 19 schools in high-priority areas during the summer of 1973. All of the lights are turned out, leaving the schools completely dark.

"We saved so much on utilities — a dramatic 19 percent savings in building costs — that our business managers and everybody else were quite impressed," said the security director.

Marine biologist makes claim Sharks may return to Gulf beaches

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The sharks are out in the Gulf of Mexico by the thousands. It's just a question of whether they'll swim into shallow water a few feet off tourist-crowded Texas beaches and terrorize swimmers again this summer.

A swarm of more than 2,000 sharks, some reported to be 12 feet long, cruised last June only a few feet off some Texas beaches and made landlubbers out of all but the shark fishermen and a few fearless swimmers.

Dr. Faust Parker Jr., a marine biologist in Port Aransas, said Tuesday that the sharks could appear just as quickly again this summer — but without anyone becoming aware of them.

"It could happen again," Parker said by phone from the University of Texas Marine Science Institute. "We don't know much about their habits or why they do it. It's all guesses on our part."

"Last year, the water was slick calm up to the beach and there was a lot of food available for them. You could really get a look at them from the air," he added. "But it's been pretty windy this year, so even if they swarmed out there, we probably couldn't spot them."

"I'd say it's probably not that uncommon for them to swarm like that," said Parker, the author of a paper on last year's swarms. "It might have happened a number of times without our being aware of it. We just had excellent viewing conditions last year."

The sharks swarmed for about three days last June in the calm, crystal-clear water off 20 miles of beach from Port Aransas to the northern end of Padre Island, feeding on abundant young shrimp and crabs. He said 12 species of sharks and five species of rays were spotted in the packs, some of which roamed in water only waist deep.

Most of the tourists that had crowded the beaches stayed out of the water, but hundreds more poured onto the beach to get a look at the sharks. No swimmers were reported injured.

Parker said he doesn't know for sure that the sharks are even a threat to swimmers.

"I don't know that they are dangerous to swimmers. We assume they're concerned about other things, like eating shrimp and crabs.

"Some sharks are always out there. We've seen them cruise by when we swim, but they're not going to mess with you unless you're carrying a string of fish or something. I don't imagine humans taste very good to them."

Traffic signal for the blind

CARBONDALE, Ill. (AP) — Blind residents in this college town may be getting a "sonic boon" to assist them in crossing streets with a specially designed traffic signal, reports Southern Illinois University.

The seeing-eye traffic signal is a squawk box which translates "Walk" and "Don't Walk" commands into high-pitched noises which tell the blind when to cross and when to stay on the curb.

The Sono Guide, being tested for the first time here, was invented by Alfred C. Erickson, of Michigan City, Ind. It resembles a square speaker and it the same size as the pedestrian crossing signals with which it is synchronized.

Drivers and workers near the installation have complained that the device's sonic signals are distracting. But, says Chris Ethier, of the college's office of specialized Student Services, for it to be effective over the din of traffic, the auditory signal must be loud enough for the blind to hear.

Brokerage firm member testifies

HOUSTON (AP) — One of the partners in a brokerage firm that made over $1 million for the University of Houston through short term investments in less than a year has testified he personally made about $250,000 in commissions.

Roger Knox of Covington Knox, Inc., said Tuesday the commissions, earned on transactions channeled to his firm by former UH financial analyst Samuel Harwell, were appropriate and not out of line.

The State Attorney General's office and the State Securities Board obtained a receivership action last month against the firm alleging that owners of Covington Knox, Inc. and Harwell engaged in a scheme to defraud the university. Because of the alleged scheme the university claims CKI owes it more than $475,000.

The testimony came during the second day of a hearing before State Dist. Judge Wyatt Heard in which CKI is attempting to dissolve the receivership order. The third partner in the firm is Harwell's half-brother Patrick Sullivan.

The second sacker connected with the strong smoke and hung a clothesline over the fence for a four-bagger. That's not CB talk. That's baseball talk. They're both distinct dialects, although vaguely connected with the English language, and both are able to stand apart for inspection from amazed people who are not familiar with the complexity of their respective phrases.

I don't know why CBers say "Howzit look over your donkey?" instead of "Seen anything?" or why baseball announcers say "He took out a row of seats with a rope" instead of "He hit a line drive into the stands."

I don't know, but I kinda like it. As soon as I become fluent in both, I can brag about knowing two more foreign tongues.

Baseball's been around just about as long as hotdogs and apple pie, and that's probably the reason that it has idiomatically crept into the English language itself.

WHAT A WAY TO START THE DAY

Many of you Techsians may know this already, but for those of you who don't, here's your day ruined right here.

The 1978 version of the Texas Tech Red Raiders open their gridiron duels against the University of Southern California, Texas A&M, Arizona State University and the University of Texas. With no "really big" names coming back for the scarlet and black next year, alumni are already dreading an 0-4 start with a young team and new coach.

All I can say is, after those first four games against those monsters, the last seven games should be a breeze.

REMARKABILITIES

"No, why should I? The crowd doesn't have second thoughts for me. And when I lose, they're happy afterward." — ILIE NASTASE, asked if he ever has second thoughts about his behavior on the court.
"It's a miracle and I deserve to have it happen to me." — SAM SCHULMAN, owner of the Seattle SuperSonics on his team's success.
"It's much more fun being involved in doing something than trying to preserve a reputation." — BUD WILKINSON, when asked why he would risk legendary reputation to try coaching in NFL after 15-year layoff.
"Dallas Cowboy Coach Tom Landry is concerned with how well Tony Dorsett, small as pro backs go, will hold up under a 16-game pounding. He was gutty but came up limping often in his rookie year." — DICK YOUNG.

Astros crowned

CHICAGO (AP) — Dave Kingman, the Chicago Cubs' home run and strikeout king, doesn't say much but when he speaks, opposing pitchers and managers had better listen.

"Whenever they walk someone to get to me, the ball looks double in size," said Kingman, whose grand slam homer Tuesday powered the Chicago Cubs to a 9-4 decision over the Houston Astros for their fifth straight victory.

With runners on second and third in the sixth inning, Houston Manager Bill Virdon ordered pitcher Oscar Zamora to walk Larry Bittner. Kingman stepped up and smashed his 11th homer of the season and the seventh grand slam of his career.

"I can understand it," said Kingman. "It's a percentage move. They're looking for the double play or strikeout and then you have the right-hander-right-hander situation."

"It happened once before this season when Craig Swan New York Mets walked a guy in front of me," recalled Kingman. "I hit a three-run homer and beat him."

"I'm a better hitter with men on base," said Kingman, who struck out in the first inning for the 49th time this season. "Most of my hits come with men on base. I don't know why, I have no explanation, but that's the way it is."

Virdon did explain why he ordered Bittner walked to get to Kingman.

"I felt we had a better chance for a strikeout or a pop up with Kingman rather than Bittner," said Virdon. "You take a chance. It doesn't always work out but Bittner hits better, for average than Kingman."

Also hitting better than Kingman's .234 average is pitcher Dave Roberts who helped his own cause by drilling two hits including a three-run double in the second inning to gain his third pitching triumph against no losses.

Roberts started the five-run rally in the sixth with a single and scored on a double by Greg Gross before Kingman unloaded his slam, a towering 400-foot drive which landed on Waveland Ave.

"I'm going after Ted Williams' record," said Roberts in reference to the major leagues' last 400 hitter. Roberts is batting .417.

"When you're hitting better than you're pitching, you have to talk about your hitting," laughed Roberts.

7 months, 23 days later, NBA champ to be crowned

SEATTLE (AP) — The Seattle SuperSonics and Washington Bullets have saved the best for last. "I think the seventh game will be the best of the series," said Bullets forward Bobby Dandridge. "I think it will be even right . . . to the last basket."

"Come Wednesday night," said Sonics forward John Johnson, "it's the biggest game in our franchise's history. And we're going to win."

So the stage is set for the seventh and final game of the National Basketball Association championship series tonight in the Seattle Center Coliseum.

The winning team in the final game of the longest NBA season ever will be crowned the league's 32nd champion. The losing team will find solace in the fact that it isn't a loser at all; it simply will finish second best.

Tonight's game — seven months, 23 days after the opening tap of the regular season — became necessary after Washington humbled the Sonics 117-82 at Landover, Md., Sunday, squaring the best-of-seven playoff finals at three games apiece.

The outcome of the contest pitting these two evenly matched and well-coached clubs hinges on which club executes its game plan best. If the Bullets dominate the boards, get their running game going and work the ball in to their big men like Dandridge and Elvin Hayes, they should win.

If the Sonics can control the tempo of the game with their talented guard trio of Gus Williams, Dennis Johnson and Fred Brown, they should win.

It depends on who you talk to whether the site of the game, the 14,098-seat Coliseum where the Sonics have won 22 straight, will be a factor.

"We're happy to be playing in front of our fans," said Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens. "The home-court advantage has to help us in a game like this."

Hayes sees it differently. "We're pros. This is a big game and we all know it," he said. "The crowd won't be a factor. The crowd can't play on the floor and the crowd can't play on the floor and the crowd can't put the ball in the hole."

Sunday's game was the worst Seattle has played in weeks. The Bullets, who needed the victory to stay alive in the title chase, dominated in every statistical department.

Washington is counting on a carryover from its 35-point triumph. The Sonics are banking that they can't play that bad twice in a row, and certainly won't look that miserable at home.

"Losing the way they did has got to be on their minds," said Hayes. "It's going to be very difficult for them to shake it so quickly."

Sid Paul Silas, the veteran forward of the Sonics: "They've still got to win one more, and ain't no way in hell they're going to do that."

Finley's youth kick causes furor in baseball draft

NEW YORK (AP) — Charlie Finley, the owner and manager of the Oakland A's, was barking on the phone to his stand-in manager, Jack McKeon.

"Hey Jack, who you got pitching on Sunday?" "Broberg," answered McKeon.

"Scratch him, I got a replacement." "Who is he?" "Michael Thomas Morgan."

"Yeah?" "Yeah!" "That's the way to go boss."

Finley, the P.T. Barnum of the baseball world, had done it again, creating excitement and interest out of something as mundane as Tuesday's free agent baseball draft of amateur talent.

Before he even picked the 18-year-old Morgan, a hard-throwing high school senior from Las Vegas, Finley had signed him to a bonus of more than $50,000. Then he decided to throw him into the starting rotation for the A's, leaders in the American League West.

"He has a lot of poise," said Finley from his office in Chicago. "He told me he'd go out there Sunday on that mound, take command, take control and challenge the hitters."

"I think there is a danger of him getting his head knocked off. But after talking with the kid, I realized there was no possibility of his losing his confidence. He impressed me very much with his cocky confidence."

Morgan was the fourth player selected in the draft, which continues today. Until Finley went on his youth kick, the major interest of the draft focused on the domination by College World Series contenders, Arizona State and Southern California.

Arizona State had four players selected, including No. 1 pick Bob Horner by Atlanta. No. 3 selection Hubert Brooks by the New York Mets, and Chris Bando by Cleveland. Bando is the brother of Milwaukee third baseman Sal Bando, who also once starred at Arizona State.

Southern Cal players were called six times Tuesday, including Rod Boxberger, the No. 11 pick, by Houston, and Rob Hertel, the Trojans' star quarterback in football and infielder in baseball.

BATTER UP? — Chicago Cubs' catcher Dave Bader watches as Houston Astros' Jesus Alou dives down and jumps back to avoid close pitch during second inning in Chicago Tuesday. The Cubs won the game, 9-4.

Texas prep goes in 1st round

By the Associated Press
Milt Hawkins of Midway High School of Waco was selected in the first round Monday in major league baseball's free-agent draft.

Hawkins, a pitcher was taken by the San Diego Padres, was the fifth player selected in the draft.

The Houston Astros picked pitcher Ron Boxberger of Southern California in the first round while the Texas Rangers selected pitcher-infielder Amos Lewis of Astronaut High School in Mims, Fla. in the second round.

The Astros also selected pitcher-outfielder Daniel Heep of Saint Mary's University, San Antonio; pitcher John Hessler of Tulsa; Ronald Meredith of Oral Roberts; shortstop Douglas Stokke of Southern California and shortstop Scott Fletcher, Valencia, Florida Junior College.

The Rangers also selected pitcher David Crutcher.

Bonds' blast lifts Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP)—Bobby Bonds says you can chalk up his game-winning homer in Texas' 2-1 victory over Kansas City Tuesday night to Ranger owner Brad Corbett.

Corbett told the 32-year-old right-fielder before the game that the Rangers definitely weren't sending him back to the Chicago White Sox, who've been grumbling ever since they got outfielder Claudell Washington in a trade in mid-May.

White Sox president Bill Veech has been demanding the trade be voided or that the Rangers send another player for Washington, who showed up a day late to the White Sox and then saw only limited action before being placed on the disabled list with a bad ankle.

Bonds hit a 400-foot blast eight rows deep into the left field stands in the fifth inning to provide Ferguson Jenkins his sixth victory against three losses.

Dennis Leonard, 4-9, yielded only six hits and faced only 27 batters in his eight innings. Three double plays helped him. Jaun Beniquez' double in the third was followed by Bump Wills' single for the Rangers' only other run.

George Brett homered over the right field fence in the fourth for Kansas City's run.

Bonds said he was "just looking for a ball to hit" when Leonard served him a breaking ball across the plate.

"But the most important thing was just talking to Brad," said Bonds, who said the 6 p.m. conversation was the first time he had met the Ranger owner.

"Talking to him took a helluva load off my mind. It can do a lot to your head, not knowing where you're going to be. Knowing that I don't have to worry about going back to Chicago takes a lot of tension away."

Bonds brought only a .192 batting average into the contest for his 18 games since coming to the Rangers. His homer was his fifth of the season, the third with Texas.

"I'll be the first to admit, my play hasn't been up to par. I've been shaky and felt I could do more to turn things around if I was a little more at ease. I'm glad I didn't incite a riot with the Texas fans the way I've been playing," Bonds said.

Jenkins, who wasn't even being counted on for starting duty when the season began, got stronger as the game progressed. Four of his eight strike outs came in the last three innings. He allowed only one walk.

"Jenkins is phenomenal. I'll tell you," Ranger manager Billy Hunter said of the 34-year-old Canadian right-hander who is in his 14th year in the majors.

"He can really pitch to spots, and the team he was facing, you have to do that," Hunter said.

Other 1978 tournament winners on hand include Miller Barber, Barry Jaekel, Jerry Heard, Lon Hinkle, Bill Rogers and Andy Bean, winner of last week's Kemper Open.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by CBS-TV.

Among the other standouts are veteran Dave Hill, a four-time Memphis champion, and Lee Trevino, a two-time winner. Trevino, winner of the Colonial National Invitation in Fort Worth last month, has played extremely well this year and could be a particular threat.

Tech AD to be named

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — The Texas Tech University board of regents will meet Wednesday to name a new athletic director to succeed JT King, who retires Aug. 31.

The new athletic director will be introduced at a news conference following a closed session by the board.

King has been at Texas Tech since 1958 and also is a former Red Raider head football coach.

Bass to test UIL rule

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Assistant Coach Bob Bass of the San Antonio Spurs was quoted Tuesday as saying the Spurs are prepared to file a suit to test a rule against high school varsity basketball players attending summer basketball camps.

"We've gone past the stage of thinking about it; we've budgeted money for it," Bass, also assistant to the president of the pro basketball team, told the Austin American-Statesman.

The University Interscholastic League rule states that if a schoolboy attends a summer basketball camp, he can only play on the junior varsity the following season.

Bench back'll be better

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati catcher Johnny Bench, out of the starting lineup with an ailing back since May 27, will be playing regularly again in two or three days, the Reds have announced.

Doctors in Chicago confirmed Tuesday that Bench is suffering from a strained lower back.

Bench was injured sliding on May 19 but continued to play until May 27 in San Diego, where the injury became aggravated, a Reds spokesman said.

Reds looking for top hurler

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds are still searching for someone to anchor their starting pitching rotation, according to Manager Sparky Anderson.

Going into the first week in June, the fourth and fifth starters, Tom Hume and Paul Moskau, had a combined total of two victories.

"We've got two wins out of Hume and Moskau in 15 starts," Anderson said. "We've got 13 of our 32 wins out of the bullpen. That's too many wins. The bullpen is supposed to save games. It isn't supposed to have that many wins."

"That's flirting with disaster," Anderson added.

YOUNG IDEAS
By DICK YOUNG

T KILLS DOCK ELLIS that he isn't Muhammad Ali. Dock, when he first came onto the big league baseball scene, would shadow box in large circles around the Pittsburgh clubhouse, running off at the mouth incessantly as he punched at the air. Pretty soon, he'd be screaming wildly, and the rest of the team would be screaming back at him, and he'd laugh and shout. I am the Greatest!

He could have been one of the greatest pitchers of this time. He had the stuff, but he also had a bent gene of some sort, something in his psyche that kept driving him to hassle. You've seen the type. Everything is a challenge to his rights. Everything must be a big issue. If a day passes without a beef, that day is wasted.

And so it has been that Dock Ellis, for all his natural pitching talent, never won 20 games, and has been passed around in the last three years by three clubs, going on four. The label tagged on Dock Ellis is that he is a great asset to a club in his first season, but he can't control himself beyond that. He acts up his second year. That fits. It takes him a year to become oriented, to feel sure of himself with a new club; then he starts flexing mouth-muscle. To gain a guaranteed forum, he campaigns for the job of player-representative, the shop foreman of the players' union.

Sure to Be Shipped Elsewhere

It is in such a capacity that Dock Ellis became embroiled in his latest hassle, this one with Billy Hunter, manager of the Texas Rangers. Characteristically, it is in Dock Ellis' second season with Texas that the disturbance arises, making Dock Ellis a pretty good bet to be passed on to another team by the June 15 trading deadline.

In Billy Hunter's code of rules for the Texas team is one which declares off limits to ballplayers the hotel bar where the club is bivouacked on the road. Many clubs have this identical rule. It goes way back. Casey Stengel always installed it on his teams. "The hotel is where I do my drinking," he would say. "And I drink with the newspapermen."

It goes beyond that. Most newsmen I know don't give a damn if a ballplayer swims in the juice, in fact they'll help him. Clubs just don't think it's a good idea to have the hotel help and guests seeing their players get crooked.

Whatever the merits of such a rule, Dock Ellis decided he didn't like it. Or, as Marvin Miller seems to think, the players on the team griped to him, their player-rep, about it and he simply popped off for them.

There had been considerable drinking on the Rangers' flight from Seattle to Minnesota, a longie. On the bus ride from the Minneapolis Airport to the hotel, Dock Ellis decided to make a speech. He arose and announced that he intended to continue drinking at the hotel bar, pay the $250 fine if need be, and anybody who wanted to join him was welcome.

Suddenly, there was a crash of glass in the rear of the bus. Somebody had dropped a glass or bottle. "That did it," says Billy Hunter now. "I was really amused at Dock's antics. He can be pretty funny at times. But when I heard that glass drop, I got a little peeved."

"Shut up and sit down!" Hunter told Dock Ellis. "I haven't been told that since my father died," said Dock Ellis, obviously interpreting Hunter's command as treating him like a little boy. Such things can be touchy in this day and time. Being "treated like a man," has become a sports cliché among athletes, who seem to overlook at times that acting like a man is part of the same deal.

Dock Ellis likes to push, to test, like little boys and girls often do with their parents or teachers. At Pittsburgh, he got into hassles of all sorts: Wearing hair-curlers on the field. . . . A rhubarb with a gate guard who sprays mace to cool him. . . . A mutiny over being used in relief. . . . Calling a clubhouse meeting to abuse the manager and front office.

All these have been well reported. One major incident is known by relatively few people, although it is on the Federal Aviation Authority records. Late in the 1976 season, on Northwest Airlines flight No. 214, the Yankees were en route from Minneapolis to Texas. Dock Ellis became loudly and profanely involved with a stewardess, a Mrs. Romano. The pilot of the plane threatened to land it at the next airport and eject offenders if such conduct did not cease.

Lawyer Settled Case for $400

Mrs. Romano filed a complaint with the FAA against Dock Ellis, violation of Reg. 91.8A. The charge was dismissed because of "insufficient evidence." Mrs. Romano appealed, produced additional witnesses, and on April 8, 1977, Dock Ellis was adjudged guilty by an FAA examiner, Thomas Halloran. Ellis could have been fined $1,000 and suspended from flying on commercial planes. His lawyer settled the case for $400.

Billy Hunter has not had to fine Dock Ellis, because he did not go to the hotel bar as announced on the bus last week. Since then, the team has been on the bus. Tomorrow, the Texas team flies to Toronto.

"We'll see what happens," says Billy Hunter.

World Cup wildness

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Another wild night of revelry in Buenos Aires. Yelling soccer fans paraded through the streets and motorists sounded a victory tattoo on their horns into the small hours.

Soccer fever mounted to an unprecedented level in Argentina as the home team edged France 2-1 in Buenos Aires' River Plate Stadium and clinched a place in the second round.

It was a night of agony and ecstasy for Argentines. The 77,000 screaming, flag-waving fans in the stadium saw their team lose its lead, falter for a while and then regain it.

Leopoldo Lugue, their hero, scored the winner with a spectacular shot from 27 yards and shortly afterwards was writing on the grass in pain from an arm injury.

Lugue was helped off and came back in the final minute with his arm heavily strapped, just in time for the final eruption of enthusiasm as Argentina held out against the last dying French attacks.

Italy, impressive 3-1 winners over Hungary, also made sure of a place in the second round. The Italians and Argentines are joint leaders in Group 1, each with 4 points from two games, and cannot be caught.

For France and Hungary, the dream of the World Cup is over. They are scheduled to play each other Saturday, but then will go home.

The French provided the greatest thrill so far in the tournament, a classic goal by Bernard Lacombe after only 30 seconds against Italy last Friday.

Against Argentina Tuesday night, they lost their goalkeeper Jean-Paul Bertrand-Demanes. He crashed against the goalpost and injured his back in making one of the finest saves of the championships.

Hungary reached the end of the trail mauled and sadly depleted. They had two players sent off the field in a frenzied opening match and lost two more key players with injuries, and were no match for Italy.

Italian stars Paolo Rossi and Roberto Betegga wrapped up victory for their team with two goals in a fantastic 60-second spell.

USC unbeaten in CWS

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — "He gutted it out," Southern California Coach Rod Dedeaux said about pitcher Rod Boxberger after the top-ranked Trojans became the last undefeated team in the College World Series by beating second-ranked Arizona State.

Boxberger retired 12 of the final 13 Sun Devil batters as the Trojans took a 5-2 victory Tuesday night. He pitched his way out of a bases-loaded jam in the fifth inning after allowing a run-scoring single and gave up a solo home run to Jamie Allen in the sixth.

"Then Boxberger got tough. It took a lot of guts," said USC's Chris Smith, who doubled home what proved to be the winning run.

The NCAA All-American team was announced before the game, and USC pitcher Bill Bordley was selected along with three Sun Devils — none of whom could hit Boxberger very well.

Bob Horner, the Sun Devils' third baseman who was first player selected in the major league draft earlier Tuesday, was hitless in four times at bat. Hubie Brooks, the third player taken in the draft, managed only a single and Chris Bando — Milwaukee infielder Sal Bando's younger brother — got two singles, flied out twice and struck out.

Tennis lessons available

It's not too late to join the school's summer tennis program. The fee for the six-week course is only $5 and all participants need is an inexpensive racket.

A challenge match has already been scheduled against Snyder's summer tennis program so that both groups of beginners will gain practical experience. The beginners class meets every morning (five days a week) from 9 a.m. until 10 at the high school tennis courts.

The advanced group is made up primarily of junior high and high school players who competed for the school last year. The Big Spring schools will provide transportation to several tournaments in the surrounding area: Crane, Midland, Snyder, and Brownfield, and all players will be urged to support tennis in their hometown by participating in the Big Spring Highway 80 Tournament that will take place during the Fourth of July celebration at the Figure 7 Tennis Center.

THAT COAL GANG OF MINE — Six women coal miners pose outside the shaft of the Orchard Valley coal mine, Paonia, Colo., at the end of the day shift. One out of every six mine employees is female, and S.O. "Bud" Ogden, vice president of the parent company, says the mine is one of the safest, most productive, best-paying coal mines in the country. Farm life and feminism keep woman active WATKINS, Minn. (AP) — Farm life and feminism may seem like strange bed-fellows, but not to chicken farmer Marianne Brueshoff.

Ms. Brueshoff, who raises 2,000 to 3,000 chickens in addition to helping with other farm duties and canning 1,000 quarts of vegetables, jams, fruits and pickles a year, has left home three times since last fall to represent rural woman in busy urban centers.

In November, she attended the National Women's Conference in Houston as a Minnesota delegate. In February, she was in Washington.

Ms. Brueshoff, whose involvement in women's rights has not been popular with many in her community, said she found the meeting reassuring because it helped erase her feeling of isolation as a rural feminist.

"I've always thought I wasn't marching along to the mainstream of society," said Ms. Brueshoff, whose husband is sympathetic to her feelings.

"Your wife is a part of your life," he said. "She's half-partner in your business ... You might say it's kind of dirty the way some women are treated."

Ms. Brueshoff says she has tried to instill a non-authoritarian gentleness in her two sons and has brought up her daughters to be self-sufficient — "that they shouldn't have the idea of getting married to have somebody to take care of them."

The Brueshoff children have not shown an interest in farming. "The kids are still remembering the hard work," Ms. Brueshoff said.

But for Ms. Brueshoff rural life is just fine, especially since she has become acquainted with other women who share her views. "I not only love it, I need it," she said. "It's just the only place I can imagine living."

Dear Abby

Responsibility Is Going to the Dogs

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: You wrote a whole column on the "dirty tricks" that humans perpetrate on dogs (such as letting them run loose and breed accidentally).

Well, I am tired of dogs leaving their dirty tricks on my lawn! I'm tired of shoveling dirty tricks off my yard so I won't have to warn each visitor to step carefully.

I think you left out an important law concerning care of dogs. Any parent who gives a child a dog should specify that the child is obligated to shovel up the dirty tricks his dog leaves on neighbors' lawns.

I have learned to cope with dogs tipping over my garbage cans. I rinse off meat papers and even sprinkle chili powder over anything that might interest dogs, and I always make sure the lid on my garbage can is tightly secured. Dogs have learned a new respect for my garbage cans, but not for my lawn.

Come on, Abby, be a friend to countless thousands of people who are abused by dumb animals, and print this letter.

DOGGONE MAD IN MESA, ARIZ.

DEAR DOGGONE: The dirty tricks that dogs perpetrate on humans would be completely eliminated if every dog owner accepted the responsibility for his dog's actions—as he well should!

DEAR ABBY: I've been seeing a psychologist for about five months. He's a male and so am I. On my first visit to his office, he had me strip naked, stand before a mirror and talk about my body. I don't know if he asks his female patients to do this, but all of his male patients that I've spoken to told me that he did the same thing with them. (He asks his patients not to mention this procedure to others.)

We wonder if perhaps he is a voyeur. He's about 45, and has a nice wife and family.

If you lie on his couch and feel embarrassed or nervous, he sits on the floor beside you and holds your hand to relax you. I have never heard of a psychologist doing this, have you?

If you return for further sessions and lie on his couch, he asks you to remove your shirt. He has told me that he has seen some very good-looking young men in his practice.

I once heard a well-known psychiatrist say on a talk show, "Never take your clothes off for a shrink."

I'd like your opinion.

JIM IN LOS ANGELES

DEAR JIM: Most psychologists are competent, caring and strictly ethical in their manner of treatment, but if you question the professional ethics of your psychologist, write to the State Board of Medical Quality Assurance, 1430 Howe Ave., Sacramento, Calif. 95825.

Those residing in other states should check out their therapists with their county psychological associations.

DEAR ABBY: A reader signed ALWAYS THE GUEST asked how to gracefully get the check in a restaurant. In this case, it was a woman who occasionally entertained gentlemen who were not as financially able to handle the check as she was.

You suggested that she go to places where she had credit and arrange with the management to add the gratuities to the bill and charge everything to her account.

I leave a major credit card with the maitre d' with instructions to charge the meal, taxes and appropriate tip to my account. This always works and is a surefire way of avoiding embarrassing squabbles over who is to settle the bill.

Whereas most people have major credit cards, many do not have restaurant accounts.

JOHN F. IN NORTHRIDGE, CALIF.

DEAR JOHN: Thanks for the tip!

Parents worry about motel

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D.
Copley News Service

This week's guest writers are Jason White, 18, from Fresno, Calif., and Lynn Sauran, 16, who hails from Columbus, Ohio. Welcome to both of you. All three of us will try to guide Richard Markus through his problem.

Dr. Wallace: I'm an 18-year-old senior and my girlfriend is a college freshman. She has invited me to attend a sorority formal dance and I would like to go. My problem is the college is over 150 miles away, and it would be necessary for me to stay in a motel the evening after the dance.

My parents are hassling me because they don't want me spending the night in a motel. They are afraid something bad might happen. Your comments please. — Richard Markus, Vancouver, Wash.

Richard: Many college students go home for the weekends so there are usually a few beds available for people like you. Have your girl call a fraternity house. They almost always have space and it wouldn't cost anything.

Hi, Rich: See all the trouble you can get into by dating older women — only kidding. Why not see if there is a local YMCA in the college town. If there is, you can't lose. Women are not allowed and you would have plenty of security and safety.

Your parents couldn't find fault with that ... could they?

Have fun, Jason.

Hello, Richard: I'm sorry, but I have to agree with your parents. Too many things can go wrong.

First of all, if you drive, it's just too far. You would be forced to spend an abundance of money (which you probably don't have) and being a high school student, you just might feel out of place.

And, last but not least, if you are cute, you can escort me to my high school prom if you happen to be in Columbus. Your friend, Lynn.

Teens who would like to be guest writers, please write to the care of this newspaper stating your sex and age. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Goodbye Uncle Pete

with Marj Carpenter

Over in Colorado City this week, the building erected in 1884 by Uncle Pete Snyder hit the dust.

W. H. (Uncle Pete) Snyder was a merchant in the early days of West Texas. He ran a trading post at Deep Creek, in what later became Snyder — named for the trader.

When he first had a trading post out there, the settlement — which was sparse — was referred to as Hide Town or Robber's Roost.

It was the location of a lot of big buffalo hunters including J. Wright Moor who was reported to have killed the white buffalo, which is honored with a big statue in Snyder. It was also the headquarters of a few robbers.

The area was one where they traded buffalo hides for supplies and Uncle Pete Snyder sold lots of buffalo hides.

But when the railroad came into Colorado City in 1880, he decided he had set up shop in the wrong place at Deep Creek.

So he moved over to Colorado City and had a temporary trading post over there. In 1884, he erected a two story building. This is the one that was pulled to the ground this week.

The building had apparently passed the point where it couldn't be saved. It had developed a big crack in one wall and people were afraid it would fall. It was in an area between the Civic Center and the museum, ideal for a place that could have been developed into a historical site.

But it's gone. In 1897 and '98 when a drought occurred in Colorado City, Uncle Pete decided he had set up shop in the wrong place after all. So he moved back to Deep Creek and began trading there again. Snyder was later named for him.

Several other businesses were housed in the building in Colorado City after 1897. At one time, it became a grocery store and a meat market. The last business in the building was a second-hand furniture store. For a while, it was a farm implement display building.

Lee Jones Jr., who along with Mayor Marion Bassham recently saved the Winfield Scott home by purchasing it for a Texas Corporation, said, "The building just went too far to be saved. It was hazardous."

The Winfield Scott Home, built in 1883, will be turned into a heritage house and show place with three period rooms to be opened later to the public.

In the meantime, any memories of Uncle Pete Snyder in Colorado City just went down in a heap of rubble.

"Maybe if Colorado City had been named for him instead of Snyder, somebody would have saved the building," one history buff stated.

Colorado City, which had the very first motorized bus back in the early 1900s, had the first bus run in all of Texas from Colorado City to Snyder.

But the preachers in Snyder preached that it was a contraption of the devil and ordered their parishioners to stay away from it.

So the Colorado City businessmen sent the bus run to Big Spring instead. Big Spring didn't care if it was a contraption of the devil. They rode in it anyway. They soon extended the line to Lamesa and Lamesans didn't care either. Only Snyder was afraid of the thing.

So maybe it's appropriate that Uncle Pete Snyder's store was demolished to rubble — this week in Colorado City — out where I love to ride fence.

Too early for guess, GOP chairman says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wait a minute — or better still, a year — before you make any wagers that Jimmy Carter is going to be a one-term president.

He's in a slump, and a bad one. But this is 1978.

Gerald R. Ford got his kicks out of the poll that showed him leading Carter if the election were held now. But he's seen polls change dramatically before, and he said they could again.

Or take the author who predicted between hard cores that Sen. Henry M. Jackson would be the 1976 Democratic presidential nominee. The book didn't sell much.

Republicans, often divided from left to center to right, are almost unanimous in their optimistic forecasts about GOP prospects in the 1980 election.

Almost.

"It's way too early to be predicting a one-term presidency, like a lot of people are doing," said Republican National Chairman Bill Brock. "It's not too early to be predicting one heck of a contest."

Brock said that will be a boon to the Republicans, whatever the outcome.

Then too, Republican optimism is tempered by the familiar GOP argument over the ideal ideological credentials of the candidate most likely to succeed against Carter.

John Sears, a political pro who worked for Richard Nixon in 1968 and Ronald Reagan in 1976, is betting in print that the Republican nominee, regardless of identity, will be a sure winner.

But Sears could get a good argument, and perhaps a bet, from Patrick Caddell, the youthful, ruffled pollster who regularly tests the political winds for Carter.

Caddell, addressing a business group here recently, readily acknowledged the president "has had a serious drop in public opinion surveys in recent months, no matter how they've been measured."

But Caddell argued that the poll results most Americans read "tend to be masking the amount of personal popularity he maintains individually, in terms of personal qualities."

Moreover, the guru of Cambridge Research Associates finds a "lack of intensity" among Carter's poll-measured detractors.

"I have rarely seen a politician who has reached the levels in overall (low) ratings that Carter has which has not been accompanied by an enormous amount of ... personal hostile reaction," said Caddell.

He said Carter seems to escape the kind of hostility directed at such earlier presidents as Nixon, Lyndon Johnson and Truman when their popularity ratings were similarly slim.

In Caddell's view, public attitudes toward Carter are more ambivalent than negative.

New FTC rule would protect used car buyers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Your chances of buying a lemon from a used car dealer would be reduced under a proposed rule expected to be made public next month by the Federal Trade Commission staff.

The proposal, now being put into final form, would require dealers to inspect used cars before they sell them, and to post windshield stickers telling of mechanical or safety defects.

The idea is that used car dealers are likely to correct the defects before putting a car bearing such a sticker on the sales lot.

Dealers say the proposal would increase their costs, meaning higher prices for customers.

"We would require sellers to inspect their cars...and to disclose to the buyer the results of the inspection," says Albert Kramer, director of the FTC bureau of consumer protection.
