Carter reviews troops, talks tough

FT. HOOD, Texas (AP) — President Carter watched Army and Air Force units launch a mock attack on the Central Texas plains Saturday in an impressive array of firepower.

Temperatures hovered in the 90s under clear skies as the president, with rolled-up shirtsleeves, watched the staging at the largest U.S. Army installation.

An estimated 1,660 Army personnel of Gen. George Patton's old 2nd Armored Division and 120 Air Force personnel from Arizona turned the valley into a smoldering and dusty battlefield.

Following the show, Carter greeted troops at the installation 60 miles north of Austin.

The $1 million show came during Carter's four-stop, two-day visit to Texas. It followed the president's claim Friday in Houston that the U.S. would never let Russia "push us around."

Accompanying the president at Ft. Hood were Defense Secretary Harold Brown, Army Secretary Clifford Alexander and Ft. Hood commander

Lt. Gen. Marvin Fuller. Before the president's arrival, Army officials denied that adverse publicity forced them to cut in half an originally scheduled one-hour, $2 million show.

"It wasn't a result of publicity," insisted Capt. Bill Wisenbaker of the Public Information Office. "There were changes in the president's itinerary."

Three factors — scheduling changes, maneuver duplications and constant cost concerns — went into the decision to cut back the air strikes and bombardments, Wisenbaker said.

When asked about the cost of the demonstration, Carter said it was "completely justified."

"If nothing else, it was worth the expenditure of funds just for my own education because I'm faced every day with a requirement to approve or disapprove expenditures of funds for these kinds of weapons or others that might replace them," Carter told reporters during a visit at a static display site.

"I need to know the level of operational capability of them (weapons). It gives me a chance to learn the special attitudes of the secretary of defense, secretary of the Army, generals and the others who command these forces."

Fuller sat next to Carter in a shaded reviewing stand some 200 feet above the mock battleground.

Each piece of equipment involved in different maneuvers was explained during the demonstration.

Tanks, armored personnel carriers, attack helicopters, antiaircraft guns and howitzers blasted targets from several hundred yards to seven miles on the dusty, rolling hillsides.

In the mock attack phase of the show, a narrator explained that U.S. troops theoretically had just intercepted enemy radio transmissions. A Russian-sounding voice then boomed over the public address system and was quickly scrambled out by Army interference. Tanks, then personnel carriers and helicopters punctured the air with loud blasts that echoed off the limestone hill that the troops attempted to capture.

They were supported in the demonstration by Air Force A-10 Thunderbolts and A-7 Corsairs. Soon the entire viewing area was filled with smoke from smoldering targets and powdery dust.

The 25-minute demonstration was meant to show America's readiness for any enemy forces, including Warsaw Pact nations, a narrator said.

Following the demonstration the President met briefly with troops before flying back to Washington.

Carter flew here from Beaumont in Southeast Texas, where he called on 7,000 people to exercise self-discipline in helping overcome the nation's inflation problems.

Carter was in Beaumont to dedicate a 34-year-old federal building here recently renamed for Rep. Jack Brooks.

Carter used the occasion to talk about his government reform program as well as the efforts his administration is making to combat inflation.

"We're simply spending too much money in the federal government," Carter said. "We hope to cut $7 billion from our projected budget deficit. One of the people who has helped save billion of dollars in the federal government is Jack Brooks."

Brooks, a 13-term Democrat from the 9th Congressional District, is chairman of the House Government Operations Committee, which oversees the General Services Administration. The GSA operates the building which has housed Brooks' offices since he was elected to Congress in 1954.

The 56-year-old Brooks, once a reporter on the Beaumont Enterprise, is highly regarded in his district, which includes Spindletop, the site of Texas's first working oil well. Observers said Carter hoped some of Brooks' popularity would rub off on him.

"One reason I came here was to get Jack Brooks to help me in the future," Carter said. "He is at the center of one of the most important undertakings in government today — reform of the bureaucracy."

Earlier in Houston, Carter talked with black community leaders, and Rep. Barbara Jordan, D-Texas, said she talked with well.

"It helped ease some of the friction between the president and some black leaders," Rep. Jordan said.

Identified with losers

With Tommy Hart

Toward the end of the 18th Century, everyone who could turn a crank or lift a hammer was trying to build a steamboat.

One who got involved but shouldn't have was John Fitch. If you consider yourself snakebit, shake hands with Fitch's ghost. He died dreaming the impossible dream.

The pattern for Fitch's misfortunes turned up early in life. When he was but six, he helped contain a fire started by his sister at their home in Connecticut. John was badly scorched. If he expected paeans of praise from his parents, he got instead a flogging.

John was apprenticed to some New England clock makers who fed him little and infrequently, paid him less and refused to teach him anything about the trade.

Later on in life, he became intrigued with the idea of steam propulsion on water. He built a working model. Though John called on everyone from Thomas Paine to a man named G. Washington, help was always beyond his reach.

Ultimately, Fitch rallied $300 and got his first boat into the water. The craft had steam, allright, and it was supposed to propel a dozen oars — each of which entered the water vertically, almost like a canoe paddle. The oars moved quite infrequently, when at all.

Four years later, Fitch established the world's first regular passenger steamboat run, from Philadelphia to Trenton. Better that it would have been on the Mississippi, or across the Rio Grande. It never earned him any money, and his backers began to grouse — you know how people stick with you, win or draw. Stagecoaches continued to get the paying trade. On a scale of one to ten, Fitch's stock was going for about minus two.

If the skies had been raining rye whiskey, Fitch would have been out trying to catch some with a fork. Emotionally and economically bankrupt, Fitch ultimately wrote, at low ebb:

"All I can say of the matter is this: I think this is a damned wicked world and when I get clear of it I never wish to come back to it anymore."

Thereupon, he began to try and drink himself to death. That method proved too slow. Ultimately, he saved enough pain killing pills to lift the curtain and vanish into that other world.

Guerrillas massacre mission families

VUMBA, Rhodesia (AP) — Black guerrillas wielding clubs, axes and bayonets massacred a dozen British missionaries and members of their families at a remote school for blacks near the Rhodesian border with Mozambique, the government reported Saturday.

A 3-week-old girl and four other children were among those killed in the attack, the deadliest raid on a white-run mission in Rhodesia's 6-year war with guerrillas.

The Mozambique government said, meanwhile, that fierce fighting continued between its forces and Rhodesian troops who staged a cross-border raid into Mozambican territory. Mozambique said the helicopter-borne invaders killed 19 persons, including two Belgian U.N. workers, in fighting that began Thursday night in southwestern Mozambique. Rhodesia said the report was "completely without foundation."

Six or eight black gunmen who infiltrated from Mozambique attacked the Emmanuel mission school Friday night and killed 12 of the 14 whites there, Rhodesian authorities said. The dead included members of three families.

The school, in this area of Rhodesia's rugged eastern highlands five miles west of the Mozambique border, was operated by the Elim Pentecostal Church, based in Cheltenham, England.

The missionaries, wives and children had been battered on the head and face and some had been hacked with bayonets or axes. The blanket-shrouded bodies lay beside the school cricket field when reporters arrived at the scene Saturday.

One of the victims, Joyce Lynn, 36, her face battered beyond recognition, lay with her left hand touching the battered head of her 3-week-old daughter, Pamela. The baby was killed by a single blow to the head. A blood-stained log lay nearby.

One badly beaten white woman missionary who survived, identified as Mary Fisher, 28, had staggered 50 yards from the scene of the massacre to the cricket field, where she was found by troops early Saturday.

GOING DOWN THE LINE — President Jimmy Carter reviews troops Saturday at Fort Hood, Texas after observing a three-phase Combined Arms Demonstration by army troops. The troops, dressed in full battle fatigues, operated a wide variety of new and sophisticated military hardware for the president.

'It's not so much fear, but excitement that you feel when you ride a bull' Cowboy hexing practiced

By JAMES WERRELL. Rodeoing changed a lot as it moved from the dust-filled corrals to the air conditioned arenas in cities such as Abilene, Oklahoma City and Cheyenne. But it stayed the same a lot, too.

"Rodeo used to be all hell-raising. You used to get on a bull, go to a bar, get drunk, and go to a dance," said Don Sims, Stephenville cowboy competing in the Big Spring Rodeo. "Now you get your rest and stay in shape, or you can't cut it."

Sims and his traveling buddy Mike Brown, also from Stephenville, are primarily calf ropers. In a pinch Sims will ride bulls and Brown will wrestle steers.

Sims has been on the professional rodeo circuit for five years; Brown for only two. In the process, rodeo ceased to be just fun, and became their business.

They travel over 80,000 miles a season, mostly in Texas, Oklahoma, New Mexico and Arkansas, hitting an average of two and three rodeos a week. During the Fourth of July holiday weekend, they compete in eight rodeos in six days.

Some of their nights are spent in motels, but most are passed on the road in a new Chevy pickup; one of them driving, the other sleeping.

"It has its advantages. I'm my own boss, and I only work when I want to," said Sims. "And if you have a good manager and you're a good roper, you can make money. Of course, you can't spend much of it. If you stay at the Hilton and eat steaks all the time, it won't go far," he added.

Brown and Sims both hope that rodeo will grow and become more popular, and maybe even offer some of the benefits other professional athletes receive. They would like to see organized team rodeo and retirement pay for members.

But that is the future, and right now both are fully aware that some things haven't changed. Rodeo is still a sport that ages a man fast, and could leave him crippled and penniless.

"We just take it day by day. You can't think about that," said Brown. And, though both are aware of the particular dangers and stresses of their events, that too is pushed aside for the time being.

Calf roping is especially hard on the knee and groin muscles, they explained. In steer wrestling, again it's the knees take most of the punishment; from the first jolt as the cowboy slides from his horse, and in trying to put the brakes on 700 pounds of moving beef. Bull riding gets you everywhere.

"We both have friends who got their fingers cut off roping, or got their arm jerked out of the socket. But you take precautions, tell yourself not to worry, and hope nothing happens," said Sims, holding out a finger he "messed up" practice roping three weeks before.

The ropers say that a winning run with a good calf is almost effortless, but that a bad calf can really leave the roper sore the next morning.

If he sees that the coil of rope he carries has snagged on the horn or around one of his fingers, the roper has a few seconds to compensate before the rope is pulled taut by the straining calf. Sims says that the bull rider has no such luxury.

Oddly enough, Sims moves out of the realm of natural hide, sinew and muscle, and into the mechanical to find a metaphor for the experience: "It's like trying to jump a ditch on a motorcycle, and you don't know how wide it is, and you're going 80 miles an hour. When you get there, there's no turning back, so you just have to try," he said.

Sims rides bulls only late in the summer when the competition has scattered among more numerous rodes.

"That way I feel like I have a chance to win some money," he said. "It's not so much fear, but excitement that you feel when you ride a bull. Everything happens real fast, and you've got to jump when he jumps or you're in trouble. Other animals are dangerous, but the bull is the only one that's a real aggressor."

According to the two cowboys, the big Brahma bulls with a large hump make for an easier ride than the short flat-backed bulls.

"The big ones are sort of springy. The short ones are faster, quicker and tougher," said Brown.

Local cowboy Himes wins bareback riding contest

By CARLA WALKER. Big Spring cowboy Jack Himes came out on a horse called Teacher's Pet to open Saturday night's competition in the 44th Annual Big Spring Rodeo's bareback riding contest and earned a 77 point score to take top position for this year's rodeo.

No other contestants in Saturday's bareback riding contest managed to get into the money-earning positions, although Richard Andrews of Comanche came close with a 68 score.

Overall winners of that event following Himes were Gary Payne, 71 points, Paul Mayor with 70, and Chick Elms and Glen Webb, both with scores of 69.

Top time in Saturday evening's calf roping was a 10.2 second tie-down by Johnny Edmondson of McCaulley, but even that wasn't good enough to get him into the second go-round money places.

None of Saturday night's ropers got into the money and final results for the calf roping left Pow Carter's 8.7 second time in the lead, followed by Butch Bode with 8.8 seconds, and Tooter Waites and Ed Workman tied with times of nine seconds flat.

In the second go-round, it was Terry Davidson who finished first with a nine-flat time, leading Jeff Copenhaver at 9.2 seconds, John Stallard at 9.6, and Wade Lewis at 9.8. In the total for two calves, Les

JACK HIMES

Cochran managed to take the top money even though neither of his times was good enough to earn a top slot in a go-round. His total time was 19.7 on two calves, followed by 19.9 seconds for Ed Workman, 20.4 seconds for Jeff Copenhaver, and 20.7 for Tooter Waites.

Hoyle Nix and his Texas Cowboys entertained the final night rodeo crowd of near 5,000.

Final standings in the barrel race, saddle bronc riding, steer wrestling, team roping, and bull riding were incomplete at press time and will be published in Monday's Herald.

Action/reaction: Wasted water

Q. Howard County seems to waste a lot of water irrigating its greenery. Everyone likes to see beautiful landscaping but the sprinklers continue to run long after the grass has been soaked, with the result that the water seeks out the lower areas. That means it winds up in the street. It seems to me the attendants could be a little more attentive. Who pays for the water, anyway?

Friends threw cans of beer to some graduates as they walked up to receive their degrees and one was doused with champagne.

Family killings probe

PURCELL, Okla. (AP) — A ground and air search continued Saturday for the pickup truck and camper that carried three members of a San Antonio, Texas family who were shot to death Thursday.

Authorities hoped the pickup and camper would give them some clue about the identity of the killer or killers of the family.

A report Saturday of an armed man in a house near here turned out to be false, officials said. The man was a hunter.

The bodies of Air Force Tech. Sgt. Melvin G. Lorenz, 38, and his wife, Air Force Staff Sgt. Linda Lorenz, 31, were found just off Interstate 35 south of this central Oklahoma town Thursday.

The body of Lorenz's son, 12-year-old Richard J. Lorenz, was discovered Friday in tall weeds just off the shoulder of the interstate, about one-half mile from the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Lorenz, authorities said.

Authorities said the youth was identified by description, including scars from open heart surgery.

The woman had been shot three times and her husband and step-son had been shot twice.

Authorities said they were stymied at this point in their investigation, but were checking dozens of possible suspects in several states, including Louisiana and Illinois.

"We're really at a standstill until we can find that pickup," an Oklahoma State Bureau of Investigation spokesman said.

Jaws fever mounting

MONTAUK, N.Y. (AP) — Dozens of Long Island fishermen vied Saturday to catch a great white shark that escaped after a 14-hour battle the day before.

Among them were John Sweetman, 46, and his six-man shark-hunting crew aboard the 40-foot boat, Ebb Tide. They had reported harpooning a huge shark Friday morning, and then being dragged by the fish a few miles through the Atlantic Ocean off the eastern tip of Long Island.

The crew described the fish as 25 to 30 feet long and weighing as much as two tons. They said their boat had at times been pulled backwards at a speed of 3 mph.

But after 12 hours of work on Saturday, the Ebb Tide and its crew returned — sharkless — to its mooring.

The publicity from Friday's duel between shark and boat was good for business in the Montauk area.

The would-be thief was caught around 1:30 a.m. Saturday by the Bogart's employees who called the police. Charges will be filed in the incident.

'They're wasting money' Federal jurors to probe jail death of Lozano

ODESSA — A federal grand jury reportedly will investigate the Jan. 22 death of jail inmate Larry Lozano within about 20 days, sources in Washington have indicated.

Jose Bustamante, chairman of Concerned Citizens for Justice, rejoined in the news, saying:

"We will continue to put the pressure on, to ensure that justice will be done. We are very confident that those guilty of violating Larry Lozano's rights will be brought to trial and sentenced."

Bustamante also said that if the federal grand jury was to turn up anything that has not been disclosed in Lozano's death his group would reorganize and appeal the decision.

District Attorney John Green, however, reiterated his contention that a federal grand jury will find no more than the justice of peace inquiry did, adding "it's just not there."

According to Green, there is a "radical minority group in Odessa that is trying to keep people in the state in turmoil."

"Thank goodness, the majority of the Mexican-American community is not going along with what they feel...I feel like this is adverse discrimination, the federal government coming in and making an issue because it is a minority."

"They're wasting money to satisfy a few people. They're wasting taxpayers' money just to satisfy a few minority groups."

Tourist traffic jam at Heritage Museum

Agenda lists paving bids

Howard County Commissioners will face a routine agenda Monday morning in commissioner's court.

Items for discussion include bids on paving and sealcoating materials, a discussion of jail conditions, and juvenile standards with the Howard County Sheriff and a conference with Bill Mims, county engineer.

Swimming pool hours changed

The Forsan swimming pool, regularly open from 2 p.m. until 5 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday, will open additional hours for the convenience of those who work.

On Tuesday and Thursdays, the pool will open from 8:30 p.m. to 8 p.m.

According to Green, some people in Odessa are trying to compare the Lozano case with that of Joe Campos Torres in Houston.

"...They don't want to understand," Green stated, "that the facts are not there in this particular case. In the Torres case, the right thing was done, the officers beat the man and should have been prosecuted as they were."

Green pointed out that the justice of peace jury which investigated the Lozano case here included several minority members.

When informed the federal grand jury would examine the case, Ector County Sheriff Elton Faught said:

"I don't care. All they're going to do is spend taxpayers' money. I welcome it."

Members of the sheriff's department have never varied from their story that Lozano suffered wounds that caused his death by beating his head against a cell door.

Special meet at Lamesa

The Dawson County Commissioners will have a special meeting at 10 a.m. Monday in the County Courthouse at Lamesa.

Items included on the agenda will be the opening of bids for sale or lease of the parking lot through the courtesy of the Tourism Development Council.

The recent James Campbell one-man art show was well received by an excellent crowd, according to Mrs. Gerri Atwell, museum curator.

New and renewal memberships received this week include Mr. and Mrs. Olen Puckett, Mrs. Nell Hall and Mrs. Roy Anderson.

Flies that 'hitch-hike' blamed for screwworm cases

MISSION — With screwworm cases increasing daily in West Texas, the Texas Animal Health Commission began requiring inspection and spraying or dipping of all animals entering Texas from Arizona and New Mexico.

The Commission reported Friday that Texas has 80 confirmed cases in 1978, with most of the cases in West Texas and a few in deep South Texas.

Flies that "hitch-hike" into Texas on cattle from western states headed to good Texas grazing have been labeled as the biggest culprits in the Texas screwworm outbreak.

In addition to the inspection and spraying or dipping, a prior permit from the Texas Animal Health Commission is also required before livestock can be brought into the state.

Arizona has reported 1,102 cases in 1978, with New Mexico 224, California 27, and Arkansas 1.

Old Settlers Reunion slated at park July 28

The Old Settlers Committee met last week to make preparations for the 54th annual Howard Glasscock Old Settlers Reunion set for Friday, July 28 at Comanche Trail Park.

No registration fee will be charged, and a cake and coffee booth will be open throughout the day.

Serving his sixth year as president of the Reunion is Dwight McCann, while the newly appointed vice president is Bill Henkel. Smokey Burgess was elected to the post last year, but never got to serve. Gertrude McCann was defeated to serve as secretary-treasurer when her husband accepted the presidency.

The reunion is open to the public, with no requirement age or years lived in Big Spring; however, those 70 years old or older will get to eat the barbecue lunch free.

Others who attend will have to pay for the traditional catered barbecue beef plate with all the trimmings. Some 700 attended the affair and ate the barbecue last year.

Events to be sponsored will include the old fiddlers contest, horseshoe pitching, husband calling contest, egg race, and tobacco spitting contest.

Individuals to be recognized will be the oldest man and woman, the native with the most authentic dress, the native traveling farthest to the reunion, the couple married for the longest, and the person with the most children.

A dance will begin at 8:30 p.m. and last until 12:30 a.m. at the Settlers Pavilion in the park, with the A.C. (Pete) Jensen band playing.

Members of the band, which calls itself the "Texas Brass and Strings" are Dale and Frankie Merrick, of Lamesa, Bob and Ben Ella Stewart and Eula and Pete Jensen, all of Sand Springs.

At 10:30 p.m., during the dance, 100 pounds of choice meat will be given away.

Donations are needed to support the reunion, and up to $2,000 will be accepted from a single donor. The donations can be made to Mr. or Mrs. McCann, Bill Henkel in cash or checks made payable to the Howard Glasscock Old Settlers organization.

The first reunion here was conducted on the J.L. McKinney farm in the Centerpoint area. It was later moved to Cottonwood Park also known as Roper's Grove or Parrish Park, and has been held in Comanche Trail Park for many years, with the exact site being the pavilion built near the totem pole. The pavilion was built by the settlers' organization.

Committee members who attended the planning meeting were Sam and Clara Lewis, Lois and Raymond Ferguson, Mrs. Mattie Wren, Mrs. Margaret Barnett, Mrs. T.A. Welch, Mrs. Pat Highley, Earl Plew, Bill Henkel, and Dwight and Gertrude McCann.

Novis W. Womack and O.S. (Red) Womack, both of Big Spring, and B.F. (Billy) Womack, Abilene; a daughter, Mrs. T.R. Barnhill, Hobbs, N.M.; a brother, Wright M. Womack, Snyder; two sisters, Mrs. Carl Aucutt, Snyder; and Mrs. Lillian Taylor, Colorado City; ten grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Scott

Mrs. Hulda Laura Scott, 96, died at 8 a.m. Saturday in a local hospital.

Services are pending in Pecos, and burial will be in Toyah, 20 miles west of Pecos. Local arrangements are being made by Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home.

Mrs. Scott was born March 2, 1882 at Toyah and lived there until one year ago when she came to Big Spring. She was married to Eugene Scott, who preceded her in death.

Her husband was a railroad man, and the division point for the T&P line was at Toyah. Mrs. Scott operated the only hotel in Toyah — the Youngblood Hotel — a popular stopping place for the railroad men. She and a son also operated the Scott Mercantile in Toyah.

Survivors include a son, Joe Weldon Scott, Toyah; a daughter, Viola Morris, Memphis; three brothers, one sister; several grandchildren; a nephew, Grover Dean, Big Spring; and two nieces, Della Herring, Big Spring, and Mrs. J.E. Merritt.

She was preceded in death by a son, Kenneth Scott.

Jack Campbell

Mr. and Mrs. Willard Neel have returned from Kingsland, where they attended funeral services Friday morning for Calvin C. (Jack) Campbell, 70, a former Big Spring resident who died in an Austin hospital June 20.

Mr. Campbell had been ill the past year and his condition had worsened about a month ago.

His wife is the former Edith Cauble, Mrs. Neel's sister. Mrs. Campbell has two other sisters, Ennice Ford and Stella Petty, living in Big Spring.

Last rites were said in the Kingsland First Baptist Church and burial took place in a Kingsland cemetery.

Mr. Campbell was born in Big Spring and attended public schools in Colorado City. He was an automobile mechanic both here and in Colorado City. He left here about 1960.

Mr. Robertson

MIDLAND — Alton Cook (Robby) Robertson, 75, a native of Colorado City, died Thursday in a Midland hospital after an extended illness.

Services were held at 10 a.m. Saturday in the Asbury Methodist Church in Midland. Burial followed in the Colorado City Cemetery.

Mr. Robertson was born in Colorado City March 18, 1903. He moved to Midland in 1940 and was composing room foreman of the Midland Reporter-Telegram until he retired in 1972.

Survivors include his wife, Myrtle, of the home; two daughters, LaVena Cooper, Odessa, and Bonnie Minter, Farmington, N.M.; a brother, George P. Robertson, Lafayette, La.; seven grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

W.N. Woodson

Walter N. Woodson, 70, Kermit, and a former resident of Coahoma, died at noon today in Kermit Memorial Hospital.

Services will be at 11 a.m., Monday in Grace Temple Baptist Church in Kermit. Graveside services are scheduled for 4 p.m., Sunday in the Coahoma Cemetery.

Mr. Woodson was born March 26, 1908, in Searcy, Ark. He had been a resident of Kermit for four years, having moved there from McCamey. He was a Baptist. He married Velma Bernice Pugh July 11, 1926, in Big Spring.

He is survived by his wife, of the home; a son, Walter L. Woodson, Odessa; a daughter, Mrs. Weldon O. Henderson, Kermit; four brothers, Paul, Tove, Fred, Lake Travis, Fattie, Hobbs, N.M., and Murphy, Massachusetts; five sisters, Mrs. Clayton Roberts, Odessa, Mrs. Rony Wood, Coahoma, Mrs. Bobby Hill and Mrs. Johnny Swindell, both of Big Spring, Mrs. Freddie Britton, Irving; four grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Austin paces 'housing boom'

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas' new construction soared to $2.2 billion through April, with $3 out of every $5 going for homes, apartments and duplexes, a University of Texas researcher reported Saturday.

Janet Tandy of the Bureau of Business Research said Austin, with 3,056 residential units authorized in the first four months of 1978, was experiencing a "housing boom."

Total new construction values are up 39 percent over the January-April period of 1977, Ms. Tandy said, with 48,779 new dwelling units registered since Jan. 1.

Of that total, 50 percent were for single-family residences, 3 percent for duplexes and 47 percent for apartment units.

Of the $2 out of every $5 that went for new non-residential construction in the first four months, the largest percentage — 26.8 — was for stores and mercantile buildings.

Using "crude estimators" such as population, civilian employment and personal income estimates, Ms. Tandy said, "so far in 1978 only six metropolitan areas in Texas have had levels of construction activity well above the hypothetical potential: Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston, Austin, Amarillo, Bryan-College Station and Midland."

During the first four months of 1978, she said, the Midland metropolitan area had the highest adjusted per capita new construction valuation — $557 — of any Texas metropolitan area.

The other five metropolitan areas with levels of new construction activity exceeding expectations had the following per capita valuation estimates: Bryan-College Station $351, Amarillo $330, Austin $310, Houston $309 and Dallas-Fort Worth $285.

Tandy noted that a $21.4 million construction permit has been issued for Dallas to build a special events center, and Neiman-Marcus will build a $2.5 million store in Dallas.

The largest non-residential permit for the Dallas-Fort Worth area was $5.6 million for a new high school in Plano.

In the Houston area, the pace of new apartment buildings was up 50 percent in numbers and 122 percent in total construction valuation, with $145 million authorized.

Ms. Tandy said the 3,056 new residential units authorized in the Austin area is almost 2½ times greater than the total for the first four months of 1977; the 1,584 single-family houses authorized is nearly double the total for last year through April; and the 1,218 new apartment units is nearly four times higher than in the same period of 1977.

Over the past five years, she said, a significantly higher proportion of new housing stock in the Austin area has been in duplexes, and the 254 authorized through April represents 16 percent of the statewide total. Only Dallas-Fort Worth, with 20 percent of the duplexes, had a higher percentage.

The largest non-residential permit issued in Austin this year was for the $6 million Southwestern Bell Telephone building.

In the Amarillo area, a 24 percent increase in residential units resulted from a sizeable gain in new apartment building units.

New construction valuation of $23 million in Bryan-College Station was 28 percent higher than in the first months of last year, but the gain came totally from non-residential building as new residential valuation dropped 24 percent.

New non-residential construction also accounted for the doubling of new construction valuation in the Midland area, Ms. Tandy said, with four of the five largest permits for non-residential structures. The largest was a $8.75 million hospital addition.

The number of new housing units in Midland fell 39 percent.

Also, Ms. Tandy noted, the average cost of construction for a new single-family residence in the Midland area reached a record $55,628 this year, a 20 percent increase over 1977.

The great rollback in taxes, as dictated in California by Proposition 13, can't possibly succeed. If this country is ever going to beat the inflationary process and avert national bankruptcy, it's people are going to have to bite the bullet and end their dependence on the tax dollar.

History tells us that no society once engaged in an inflationary spending process such as we are experiencing has ever had the courage to reverse it and endure the pain that comes with stopping it.

The reasons the challenge will be very difficult, if not impossible, are simple. There are more than 220 million people in this country. Of that number, at least 124,000,000 are being supported wholly or in great part by tax dollars. Their numbers include retirees, pensioners, the disabled, the unemployed, the government workers and members of the armed forces, all with their dependents.

That does not include those feeding on government contracts, nor those on Food Stamps, those who depend on Medicare and Medicaid, nor those physicians for whom Medicare reimbursements are the principal source of income.

If you fired half the estimated 15 million government workers (most of whom likely would have to go on welfare) you would still have half the population dependent upon government support.

One observer said "the great tax revolt" stands a good chance of merely being a rearrangement of the deck chairs on the Titanic unless we are willing to accept some hard decisions, make some real sacrifices and suffer some severe social pain. And that doesn't mean salvaging our own house of cards while knocking down everyone else's in sight.

If the tax revolt becomes an avalanche, the time may come again when the only things the government gives away are seeds and information catalogues.

It'll be hard not to win a trophy in George McAlister's upcoming World's Championship Texas-Style Domino Tournament, which will be held here July 27-28-29. In all, 24 awards will be given away in addition to the $11,700 in cash.

Consider yourself a nobody until Howard Coeell remarks over the air "When I was having lunch with (you) yesterday..."

Were you thinking about renting Houston's Astrodome for your daughter's class prom? Then, think in terms of spending 125 big ones ($125,000).

If you're planning an event for which you will charge admission, the fee is that or 17.5 per cent of the gate, which ever is greater.

Your grocery bill, no doubt, wouldn't be nearly as high if you didn't purchase tooth paste, pantie hose, musical discs and tapes and stationary on your swing through the store.

The Russians have produced a robot named Emik which may be the most remarkable mechanical man yet. He can't perform any household chores but he has a range of 50 emotions, including joy, anger, discontent and affection.

There are more than 26,000 charitable foundations exempted from paying taxes in this country.

They range from the $3 billion Ford Foundation, whose $1 million a day income underwrites everything from think tanks to entire nations, to the $150,000 Dyer-Ives Foundation of Grand Rapids, Mich. Among other things, the latter supported a community-wide poetry contest and a solar-heated shower in the city park.

If you haven't averaged catching a little over two colds a year in your lifetime, you're ahead of the game.

Susan Ford, daughter of the former president, earned just under $100,000 her first year away from the nest, which offers an idea of how an enterprising young person can benefit from the fallout of the most prestigious job in the country.

Susan, a 20-year-old photographer and sometimes television personality, did well enough to buy a condominium of her own in Palm Desert, Cal., not far from her parents' scater.

Miss Ford served as a special photographer for the movie "Jaws 2," which means she did the stills for the films. Susan says ex-White House press secretary Ron Nessen, took a cheap shot at her mother when he wrote that Betty Ford was jealous of pretty women who visited the White House during Gerald's term there.

I think you'll agree that the Ector County School trustees made Colorado City's Lloyd McKee an offer he couldn't walk away from. He'll be making $36,243 annually as deputy school superintendent at Odessa.

Bud Wilkinson, who will orchestrate the St. Louis Cardinal effort in the NFL this fall, will tap the ideas and the energies of a solid football fundamentalist when he pipes aboard Raymond K. (Buddy) Parker.

Buddy shepherded the Detroit Lions to greatness in the Bobby Layne-Doak Walker era. Layne, who reasoned the mid-watches of the night were wasted unless devoted to laughter and song, was a take-charge guy in the huddle — encouraged to that end by Parker. Bobby perhaps was the most colorful player the Lions ever had. Certainly he closed more bars than anyone in the history of the Detroit club.

Parker, who has been living far from the madding crowd in Kemp, Tex., will scout the opposition for the Cardinals. Teaching defense was somewhat an alien way of life for Buddy. He thrived when the Lions (and later the Pittsburgh Steelers) had the ball.

Parker played his college ball for Centenary of Shreveport. Centenary never lost to a Southwest Conference team while Buddy was there, though once he had to kick the first field goal he ever tried with time running out to topple the University of Texas, 9-6.

Parker was with the Cardinals in the late 30s while they were still in Chicago and later shared head coaching duties with Phil Handler there before Bo McMillin summoned him to Detroit. He was head coach of the Lions from 1951 through 1956 and won NFL championships two successive seasons (1952-53). He finally hung up his tack in 1965, returning to Kemp to live.

Parker, born in Slaton, moved to Kemp with his parents at an early age and went through public schools there.

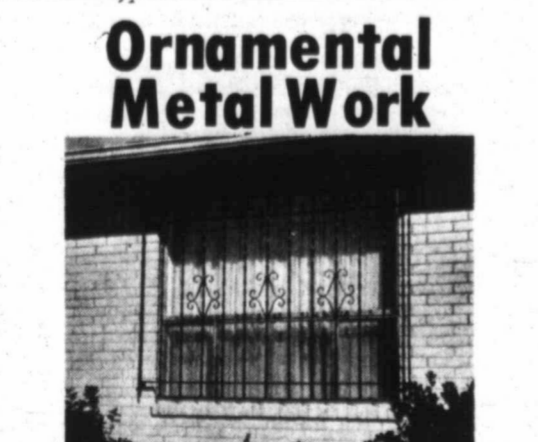

Mrs. Buck Richardson of Big Spring knows Buddy and still sees him occasionally at school reunions.

Russian author suggests change here, too

In a recent speech made at Harvard, the disenfranchised Russian, Alexander Solzhenitsyn, didn't treat the Soviet Union kindly but he had some rather critical things to say about this country, too.

"Should someone ask me whether I would indicate the West such as it is today as a model for my country, frankly I would have to answer negatively," the distinguished author said. "No, I would not recommend your society in its present state as an idea for the transformation of ours."

In short, the man of letters was condemning western civilization as being morally bankrupt. Solzhenitsyn castigated western nations for having leaders who have lost their courage, a legal system that doesn't work, a press that is shallow and all powerful and a population spoiled by material wealth.

He said it would require a "major turn in history equal in importance to the turn from the Middle Ages to the Renaissance" for mankind to rise above the morass he views as troubling it today's world.

THE HOT-EYED patriots have already suggested that Solzhenitsyn be sent packing. It's evident they've missed his point. Solzhenitsyn particularly criticized man's loss of "the concept for a Supreme Complete Entity which used to restrain our passions and our irresponsibility."

The author's message will be taken to the pulpit and dissected for the next few months. Let us hope, too, the ministers of gospel will remember that Solzhenitsyn was speaking of the moral cowardice, selfishness and complacency which is all too evident and accepted in our society today, that hedonism itself is threatening to become a religion of sorts, that more and more man is prone to be accepted for his material successes rather than the imprint he leaves on civilization.

The Nobel Prize winner says a "decline in courage" is the most striking feature of our "spiritual exhaustion."

"After the suffering of decades of violence and oppression, the human soul longs for things higher, warmer and purer than those offered by today's mass living habits, introduced by the revolting invasion of publicity, by TV stupor and by intolerant music," Solzhenitsyn said.

A NEUTRAL observer can often bring a perspective into sharp focus in appraising a situation, whereas we have become so accustomed to that situation that objectivity becomes impossible.

Maybe a Nobel laureate is prominent enough that at least a few people will take heed.

American history is replete with men good and true who didn't like conditions in their home lands and who didn't always like what they discovered here, either. They were willing to make numerous sacrifices in order to upgrade those conditions. In substance, Solzhenitsyn seems to be telling us to promote the same idea, hopeful there is enough pioneering spirit left in a lot of us to change before change overruns us.

Family conference

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — The White House Conference on Families, scheduled for 1979, has been postponed until 1981. The reason was a family fight in the Administration. Ms. Patsy Fleming, who works for Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph Califano, resigned as chairperson because some people objected to the fact that she was divorced and had three children. Califano, who denied he was bowing to pressure, said he would appoint a Catholic father from an intact family as co-chairperson to balance the program. This didn't go down too well with happily married Protestant and Jewish people who felt they should have as much to say as Catholics about the role of the family in American society.

THE ONLY REASON the conference was scheduled in the first place is that President Carter, in a rash moment of the campaign, promised to hold one if he were elected.

I suspect President Carter would like to forget about the whole thing, but he's stuck with it. I have a solution to the President's problem that would cost the taxpayers no money and keep the conference from turning into a religious, ethnic and sociological brawl.

Every day, lined up around the White House, there are at least a thousand tourists waiting to get in. They include a cross section of Americans from every state — middle-class people, poor people, white people, black people, Chicanos, Indians and Orientals. Some are families with both mothers and fathers in attendance; others are divorced people with their children; still others are grandparents. Everyone in line has a family of some sort or they wouldn't be there.

ON A RAINY DAY, which would not be announced in advance, the line, instead of moving through the public rooms and then being shuffled out into the street again, would be escorted into the East Room of the White House. There they would be given badges by Hamilton Jordan and then seated in gilt chairs.

Califano would come out and announce that he was swearing them in as delegates to the White House Conference on Families.

He would ask for suggestions on how the government could improve the health, education and welfare of the family.

The tourists could all have their say. A divorced person might ask for more alimony; a brother might ask the government to do away with sisters; a middle-class family might ask for larger tax credits for education; an unmarried couple with children could ask for a presidential pardon.

The session would be transcribed by an HEW secretary.

AFTER AN HOUR Califano would adjourn the meeting, thanking everybody for their time, and announce that as a surprise treat Amy Carter and her class would do a clog dance for them.

Then they would all be handed a tiny bottle of Amoretto by Jordan as a souvenir of the conference, as they were quickly shown out to Pennsylvania Avenue.

Califano would have the transcript of the meeting typed up and printed. The first copy would be presented to President Carter on television, and he would hold it up to show that no matter what obstacles he faced he once again did keep one of his most important campaign promises.

With the White House Conference on Families out of the way, everyone in the Administration could devote their full energies once again to figuring out how to get the Cubans out of Angola.

"Wow! You're gonna be a sure-fire winner... uh... when I get y'harnessed!"

Gilbert's disease a harmless quirk

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Will you write a few words about Gilbert's disease? My doctor said to forget about it. — Mrs. A.J.

Disease is a scare word for most of us. This is better described as Gilbert's "syndrome," and you can, as your doctor suggests, forget about it. For reasons that are not clear — some livers fail to store bilirubin like other folks' livers, so some shows up in the blood. Bilirubin is a bile pigment. With this condition (which about 5 percent of the population has) there may be some slight yellowing (jaundice). Hence, it can be misdiagnosed as hepatitis or some other serious liver problem, which it is not. Gilbert's syndrome is harmless (benign). Liver function tests easily rule out other problems that produce jaundice.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is there any harm in drinking tonic water that contains quinine? I take about three glasses a day when I have indigestion. I prefer it because it is a good thirst quencher and I like the taste. Can it cause dizziness? — N.F.

This amount of quinine is very small and shouldn't affect you. Drinking great amounts might supply enough quinine to cause stomach upset. Some people are bothered by ear noises or dizziness with quinine. But a very large amount would have to be consumed for this to happen unless you were particularly sensitive to it. For the more common causes of dizziness, see my booklet, "Dizzy Spells." Send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me care of the Big Spring Herald.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I tell my youngsters that unless they brush their teeth after every meal they will get dental decay. That's fine, and they do it. What concerns me are the snacks between. Does the same rule hold? It would seem to be the same. But they can't brush all day long for all those in-between meals. What can one do? — Mrs. R.E.

Snacks can be as damaging to teeth as a full meal. A publication of the National Institutes of Health indicates that intense oral bacterial activity continues for 20 minutes after eating, be it a dinner or a mid-morning doughnut. Also, a study of persons with severe decay showed that many ate only one or two meals daily, but snacked frequently.

You are doing well to have them brush after every meal. If you can get them to do the nearly impossible (after-snack brushing), fine. If not, be sure the teeth are rinsed well by swishing with plain water.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I recently had surgery — hysterectomy and removal of ovaries. My doctor says I have endometriosis. I'm 50. My neighbor had the same surgery and her doctor put her on estrogen, but my doctor didn't prescribe any medicine for me. I'm very confused. My doctor claims I don't need any. Who is right? — J.D.

Your neighbor may not have had endometriosis, which is, as you know, extra growth of uterine tissue. Estrogen can foster such growth, so your doctor may be biding his time to see how any remaining endometriosis fares in the absence of the estrogen your now removed ovaries once produced. Also, he will want to see how you fare generally without your ovaries.

No two women respond the same way. I think your doctor made a wise decision for you. If you are not having any outward symptoms, you don't need the estrogen and are better off without it.

For a comprehensive discussion of how to cope with the change of life, write to Dr. Thosteson, in care of the Big Spring Herald, for his invaluable booklet, "Make Menopause Easier." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters.

Big Spring Herald Mailbag

Dear Editor:

I am a forty-one-year-old woman, non-liberated, though I had always thought I was non-liberated by choice, preferring to be appreciated rather than liberated.

However, since I am employed and earning nearly $800 a month, I decided to apply for a loan of $785 at the local financial institution, strictly on my own merits, as a bonafide wage earner.

I received a reply to my loan application, loan denied due to inadequate collateral and insufficient credit information.

How I wish I were a liberated woman, or even a man, since several men I've talked to have been able to secure loans much larger than the one I applied for, on signature alone.

There was some good accomplished by the loan denial, though, I felt very young again, much like a high school student denied employment due to lack of experience!

How does one acquire an adequate credit rating, if one is not able to obtain credit?

If equal rights have reached Howard County apparently someone forgot to notify the place where I tried to do business.

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I am separated from my third husband, and I admit he had good reason to leave me because of my drinking and foul temper. Recently I have become a Christian and my life has changed. However, my husband refuses to believe me and is seeking a divorce. What should I do? — B.W.F.

DEAR B.W.F.: You will want to do everything you can to preserve your marriage, because now that you have become a Christian, you have a new capacity and new motive to love your husband. At the same time, you must be realistic and face the fact that things may have gone too far.

From what you say elsewhere in your letter, I gather that your present husband is not a believer and your new interest in the things of Christ may even frighten him a bit. Paul acknowledges that there may be instances in which an unbeliever will desert a believing partner, and in such cases the believer is not to be blamed for the divorce. (See I Corinthians 7:12-16). I realize your situation may not be exactly parallel to the examples Paul mentions, but you will want to make clear to your husband as best you can what has happened to you. Perhaps your husband would be willing to meet with your pastor.

Most of all, you will want to commit this whole matter to God in prayer. You want God's will for your life now that you have become a Christian, and He wants you to seek it carefully and prayerfully. Pray for your husband. He is probably as unhappy man right now, and sometimes God can use such times in a person's life to make them realize His love and His desire to forgive them.

This is not an easy time for you, I know. But God can use it to draw you closer to Himself as you trust Him. Perhaps you also will find that there are others in your church who have been through similar experiences and can help you. Above all, whatever the outcome of this present situation, remember that God loves you. Whatever the future holds for you, you know He is with you.

Kremlin confused

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — Kremlin leaders are so perplexed by Jimmy Carter that they have undertaken a "major reappraisal" of Soviet-American relations. This is the informed opinion of State Department analysts who confessed they are sometimes puzzled themselves by the signals coming from the White House.

Sometimes Carter comes on strong, condemning Soviet human rights abuses and warning against Soviet imperialism in Africa. Other times, he appears weak and conciliatory, like a watchdog wagging its tail while barking.

THE ANALYSTS BELIEVE that the Soviets are genuinely confused, that they are trying to figure out Carter. This apparently has led the Kremlin to conduct a complete review of the whole range of Soviet-American relations. The State Department strategists believe it is urgent, therefore, to impress upon the Kremlin that the United States sincerely wants better relations with Moscow.

On Feb. 27, the president's national security adviser, Zbigniew Brzezinski, gloomily detailed behind closed White House doors "a pattern of deterioration in U.S.-Soviet relations." The State Department's experts agree that Carter cannot achieve the same warm relationship that Presidents Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford had with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev. But the analysts believe that a dangerous breakdown can be prevented.

They have advised the White House to emphasize a desire to reach an arms limitation agreement. The president, however, instructed Secretary of State Cyrus Vance last April not to confine the issues at the arms negotiations but to take up with the Soviets their other actions, particularly their intervention in Africa.

This infuriated the Soviets who took a harder line in the talks.

Carter has assured his subordinates, nevertheless, that he is eager to sign an arms pact with the Soviets this summer. "The basic question," Brzezinski explained at a secret briefing, "is how the United States and the Soviets define detente."

But the Soviets apparently believe the basic question is Carter himself; they don't understand where he's heading.

THE SMUGGLERS: The bootleggers of the Roaring Twenties, with their fast boats and machine guns, were amateurs compared to today's sophisticated smugglers.

The drug traffickers sneak tons of marijuana, cocaine and heroin into the United States on boats slipping into fog-sheathed coves and small private planes landing to remote fields. But the most enterprising are the couriers who have developed some ingenious hiding places for contraband. Here are a few that the harried Customs agents have discovered:

—An intelligence report from Bangkok warns that couriers are "utilizing shaving cream cans to smuggle No. 4 heroin into the U.S." These aerosol cans actually dispense shaving foam, with the heroin concealed under the lather. They are manufactured for the smuggling trade, according to the report, by an "unidentified Danish national residing in Bangkok."

—Customs agents at New York's John F. Kennedy airport discovered 1,100 kilograms of marijuana concealed in the hollowed-out legs and sides of chess tables.

—On three recent occasions, agents have found drugs packed inside fire extinguishers aboard ocean-going ships.

—Thirteen wire coat hangers were seized recently at the Los Angeles airport. Inside the hollow paper rolls, agents found 480 grams of cocaine from Bolivia.

—A smuggler was picked up in Belgium with a full pound of heroin packed in his shoes.

—A smuggler arrested in Toronto had five pounds of cocaine concealed in a body-pack corset.

—San Francisco agents discovered 100 pounds of hashish hidden in 16 forklift tires imported from India.

—A passenger from Colombia was arrested at the Miami airport the other day with cocaine concealed in book covers.

—It is common for smugglers to carry drugs in the false bottoms of suitcases or strapped to their bodies.

In this deadly game of hide-and-seek, the best estimate is that the smugglers win most of the time.

TOOTHLESS RULES: A presidential task force has decided that the federal program to provide better safety for American workers is too toothless. The group has recommended a system of fines and rewards by used to keep employees in line.

THEIR CONFIDENTIAL report to the White House said at present a plant with more than 250 workers faces inspection by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration on an average of once every four years.

For 250 companies with fewer than 250 employees, the likelihood of a federal inspection is once every 125 years.

The panel recommended that violators be hit in the pocketbook with fines while the government would offer low-interest loans and tax-incentive rewards to firms which make safety improvements.

Strangely enough, the labor unions argue against the idea on grounds it is morally offensive to place a price tag on human injuries and deaths.

Recent OSHA inspections have shown eight federal agencies, including the Central Intelligence Agency, among the worst safety offenders. Inspectors found 9,400 fire and electric hazards, 3,000 mechanical hazards and 1,300 health hazards among the eight agencies, but OSHA has no authority to crack down on them.

Home sweet haven syndrome

Experts may be undoing of American family

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — So your marriage is falling apart and you can't get a grasp on your kids? You're not alone. It's part of a syndrome of the family in general coming unglued. And according to a noted social historian, it's not your fault. You can blame it on the experts.

The family has been a victim, Christopher Lasch says, of the rise in this century of the "helping professions" — the proliferating flock of teachers, doctors, psychologists, counselors, social workers and juvenile court officers — who, claiming expertise, assumed the family's main function: raising children.

If what the University of Rochester professor says surpsies a confused parent, it might also surprises those who study the family. His new book on the history of the family is a rousing defense of traditional values, an apparent contradiction of his reputation as a radical. He even watches "The Waltons" on television.

In unflinching and incisive language belying his shy, pensive personality, Lasch attacks almost every sociological theory and professional practice of this century.

To really understand what is happening to the family today, he says, look back, past the rising divorce rate and falling birth rate of the 1970s, past the radically new lifestyles of the '60s, past the domestic bliss of the '50s. Look all the way back to the turn of the century.

The divorce rate was riding then, and the birth rate among the upper classes was falling. Women were seeking new roles for themselves, and traditional morality was being derided.

But something else was afoot:

Sociologists, previously content with debating how the family began in the first place, started studying contemporary families and their roles.

A consensus emerged, Lasch says. It reserved for the family the role as a haven for the cruel outside world but simultaneously justified the transfer of its other roles — healing, educating, protecting — to the helping professions.

Henfe Lasch's book, "Haven in a Heartless World," is subtitled "The Family Besieged."

The results of this steady erosion of the family's functions: Parents, lacking confidence in themselves and confused over whose advice to follow, hesitate to get deeply involved in their children's upbringing. Their children, then are shaped primarily by advertisers, peers and professionals.

"Anyone who has a family today is aware of many outside influences on children," Lasch says, "whether they come from the school or media or the peer group. Children are being shaped by experiences over which parents have very little control."

"In addition, parents are increasingly uncertain about what it is they want to transmit to their children or how to bring about certain results. They are necessarily dependent on expert advice."

Lasch also sees broader results of the family's invasion: A wholesale loss of individual autonomy and a shift of power from the individual to society and the state.

To Lasch, history is not some abstract system with a life of its own, unfolding according to some natural, mystical laws. Men make history.

But, he says, sociologists have overlooked the fact that a professional class was taking power from the family. They busied themselves instead with superficial observations of the roles played by families and their members.

Lasch has four children, and after his study he's more willing to invoke discipline. Lasch encourages parents to organize with others. "It never occurs to them that since every family is confronted with the same problems that maybe they could solve them if they got together."

A good place to start, he says, is with the school.

The ideals he upholds are often seen in "The Waltons," which he watches with his children.

"The sense of what is missing that is expressed in the program is legitimate. It shouldn't be sneered at."

"One would have to distinguish between the values one would like to promote — self-help, self-reliance, autonomy, the ability of the family to function as a haven, and those values are all exemplified in this dramatization — and the means by which those values can be realized today."

Lasch sees some hope of improvement. Parents in some communities are taking a greater interest in the schools. Some lawyers are suggesting that courts have been too willing to take children from the home.

And the anti-family fervor associated with radicals like himself seems to be subsiding.

"The only reason to be optimistic at all is that insofar as the left survives from the '60s, people in the left have learned something. You don't hear the kind of chic radical rhetoric today about how destructive the family is."

"The old socialist approach to the problem of the family, the collectivization of child-rearing, would now have to be seen as part of the problem."

Tony Randall is going back to Tulsa as 'The Music Man'

NEW YORK (AP) — Tony Randall is returning to the Tulsa stage for the first time since he appeared in "If I Were King" at Tulsa Central High in the 1930s.

Randall will have the lead in "The Music Man," which opens Tuesday for a six-day run. He just wishes that Allen Dexter, who had the lead in the high school play, could join him on "The Music Man" tour as the anvil salesman.

Dexter has played the salesman in several productions of the musical. "It's a very, very funny part," Randall says. "He walks around with a sachel which he keeps dropping. You realize he has got an anvil in it."

But Randall didn't ask that his high school chum be case because Randall himself wasn't sure if he could do "The Music Man." That hinged on whether his television series, "The Tony Randall Show," would be cancelled for next season. It was, and Randall was free to start a 10-city tour that started June 19 in Kansas City.

After Tulsa, "The Music Man" will play Fort Wayne and Indianapolis, Ind.; Atlanta; St. Louis; Chicago; Toronto; Vienna, Va., and Baltimore, where it will run Sept. 4-23.

Mañian the Librarian is the only character in "The Music Man" who has to sing beautifully, Randall says. But Harold Hill, the salesman of marching band instruments, has to do something harder — talk fast and syndicated. And he doesn't have a melody to carry him.

"It goes at 120. That's a metronome marking, 120 quarter notes to a minute. I'll never forget it. It's what we marched to in the Army."

"If you do Gilbert and Sullivan, it may be fast but it is always right on the beat. You can hardly go wrong."

"This is full of syn-copations and tiny dotted 16th notes. If you don't do it with perfect accuracy, you'll be hopelessly lost." Randall thumps a table with a finger, at 120, and recites from "Trouble": "... or you are not aware of the caliber of disaster indicated by the presence of a pool table in your community."

"Hear those triplets?" he says, after proving those words definitely are not delivered on the beat.

Randall worked with a coach in New York, learning his part, before going to St. Louis for two weeks' rehearsal with the tur's chorus. He could never have learned the part from the original cast recording, he says. It's too tricky.

Randall has taken voice lessons for 30 years, daily when he's at home in New York. That's good for an actor, even if he never sings, Randall says. "You can tell those who do... You can hear those who do, for one thing. They also have some range and some tone."

Top nuclear targets include Big Spring

In a move designed to improve the United States civil defense posture, the Carter Administration has proposed the creation of another super-agency.

Proposed by President Carter to Congress as a "comprehensive reorganization of the Federal Government's emergency preparedness and disaster response programs", the reorganization calls for merging several federal programs under one title to deal with "Preparedness, mitigation, and response to national emergencies ranging from natural and man-made disasters to nuclear attack."

The plan was proposed to Congress this week, and will go into effect in 60 days unless lawmakers act to halt it.

The program would consolidate into one unit five existing agencies — The Defense Civil Preparedness Agency (DCPA), the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration (now under HUD), the Federal Preparedness Agency (now under the General Services Administration), the Federal Insurance Administration (HUD), and the National Fire Prevention and Control Administration.

The move came after a DCPA report which claimed eight of 10 Americans would die in a surprise attack launched by another super power.

Included with the report was a list of top nuclear targets marked for destruction by the enemy in the event of a nuclear attack.

One of the Texas cities on the list was Big Spring.

The reason for the city's listing is probably two-fold, relating to Cosden's petrochemical processing plant — which could be crucial in wartime — and the capability of Webb to again serve as a military air base.

According to W.D. Berry, Big Spring civil defense director, Big Spring is in better shape than most West Texas cities, but all United States facilities pale beside the Soviet Union's.

Stressing that the sirens here are tested often and that we have the shelter capabilities for the population of the entire county, Berry still concedes that "in any emergency there are major problems."

Still, he has visited the Soviet Union, and returned with tales of deep subterranean catacombs, cement-lined and food-equipment, prepared to receive the Russian populace. There is nothing comparable in this country.

Although the city's crisis relocation plan is presently under study, it won't be completed for two years. Also, the shelters which would house the population here have no food, and probably won't be restocked for a few years.

Carter's plan is a reaction to pressure, designed to alleviate the awful potential death rate of a nuclear war. But it won't get off the ground for a few years.

And in the meantime, if the whistles start to blow, where would you go?

Clements will try to tie Hill with president

Texas politicians debate popularity of Carter

AUSTIN — At least for the record, Texas Republicans seem happier with President Carter's visit to the state than Texas Democrats.

"I would prefer to have him visit in September or October," Ray Barnhart, State Republican Chairman said. He said he expects the presidential visit to impact negatively on the November general election.

"I think they are trying to get rid of it right now and avoid embarrassment later on," Barnhart said. Carter's popularity is low in Texas and that's going to affect the November vote, he said.

Attorney General John Hill, the Democratic candidate for governor, agrees with half of that assessment. "His (Carter's) popularity has slipped noticeably," Hill said. But he said he doesn't expect that to affect the election.

"It's no problem whatsoever," Hill said of the political ramifications of the Carter visit.

But Hill will run a campaign decidedly distant from Carter. He said he will not invite Carter to campaign for him in Texas.

"I think the people of Texas expect those of us in public office to stand on our own feet," he said.

Republican governor candidate Bill Clements will be trying to tie Hill with Carter. He said Texans don't like Carter's policies on energy and national defense.

Clements said Hill worked to get Carter elected and now can't divorce himself from the President.

"I think Mr. Carter's presence in Texas evidences without a doubt the debt Mr. Carter owes Mr. Hill and can only be interpreted as an open endorsement of Mr. Hill's candidacy for governor," Clements said.

State Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong said he doesn't think Carter is as unpopular with Texans as some leaders seem to think.

"I think he still has a pretty good reserve on integrity with the people," Armstrong said. He believes people respect Carter's willingness to take on controversies.

"I still think he has the greatest intellectual grasp of issues of anyone who has been in the White House," Armstrong said.

He said he doesn't think most Texans are as down on Carter as Gov. Dolph Briscoe and some oilmen seem to believe.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock said he thinks the visit will help both Carter and Texas Democrats.

Bullock said Carter is unpopular with some groups, such as farmers and oilmen, but is doing okay with most (Texans) are in pretty good shape politically and financially."

Lieutenant Governor Bill Hobby said Carter's popularity has suffered in Texas since the 1976 election. He said Carter's energy program would hurt Texas, which has an economy tied closely to energy.

"Of course, Texans always welcome a visit by the President of the United States," Hobby said, "and I believe it may help his popularity in the state."

Bullock said he couldn't accept the invitations because of prior commitments.

"But I'm kind of proud of his coming," he said. "We

Pardners, there's plenty to do and see in West Texas

By MARJ CARPENTER

Local residents with visitors in their home from other states and other countries often take the attitude that "There is nothing to see in West Texas."

Not so — the items right in the county and within a one-day driving distance offer an amazing selection for the Big Spring visitor.

This week, of course, was one of the special weeks for back-easters with the rodeo in progress. They usually thoroughly enjoy a good rodeo. But there are others during the summer month in the area.

The two biggest ones are at about the same time with the Stamford Cowboy Rodeo and the West of the Pecos Rodeo both July 1-4 this year. These are two of the oldest and two of the biggest, along with the Big Spring rodeo.

During the summer months, there are junior rodeos throughout the area with one usually held in Big Spring during July.

A lot of visitors are thrilled to death to simply see a real ranch or a real oilfield. If you have a friend who can share either one with visitors, it is usually a bright spot in their vacation.

The Texas tourism council constantly points out that most visitors from out of the country immediately request "We want to visit a real ranch."

The local tourism council is currently in the process of looking into the possibility of making a tour of a ranch in this part of the state as a special tourist attraction.

More details will be announced at a later date, according to Mrs. Polly Mays, active worker for tourist attractions here.

For those who have never seen it, enjoy a stop at the Big Spring because of its early Indian history and most enjoy seeing the prairie dogs in the State Park. Other nearby prairie dog towns in West Texas include one in Lubbock and one in the heart of Andrews, 64 miles away.

And if you're going through Andrews, you might drive right on to Carlsbad, N.M. for a visit of Carlsbad Caverns.

Persons come from throughout the world to visit the caverns and sometimes the local citizens forget to ever go visit the National Park.

The same applies to Big Bend. Although spring and fall are a little kinder temperature wise to Big Bend visitors, the park is always awesome and splendid to those who don't mind leaving early in the morning to get there.

If you plan to spend the night, try for reservations in the Basin or take camping equipment.

A stop in the Davis Mountains and a visit to old Fort Davis can be a highlight to visitors from back east. It's like a page out of a western movie to see that old fort.

If you want to head the other direction and get a bunch of Texas history, call ahead to Canyon and get tickets to the pageant "Texas" presented most summer nights in the Palo Duro Canyon. Reservations will be held at the gate until a certain hour.

Of if you have a guest that likes good plays, there are good theaters in both Odessa and Midland that present good plays during the summer months.

A call to their chamber offices will get you the schedule. Later in the summer, Midland has what they call the Summer Mumm drama and it is a melodrama about West Texas complete with popcorn and beer.

If you like Shakespeare and dignity, try the Permian Playhouse in Odessa. As close as Colorado City, in an Close by, Colorado City has an excellent museum as does Gail, Lamesa and Stanton. Out from Midland on IS 20 is the Permian Basin Oil Museum.

If you heard toward Gail, you can show them some real ranch country on the San Angelo just completed their Rio Concho Days which is fun for summer visitors in June. If you want to drive as far as Fort Stockton, they have an excellent museum and you can swim at Comanche Springs.

Or if you want to swim in the world's largest outdoor swimming pool, go to Balmorhea State Park.

Pecos has an old west museum down near the railroad that includes an old saloon where several guys were shot.

MIDNIGHT COWBOY HOUSE — As you enter Stanton on the old highway, you go by the historical Millhollon Ranch home, which is marked for its early Texas history. It also was used in filming the Midnight Cowboy. It is now a private residence and can only be seen from the road.

IN THE FALL — Sand Hill cranes fly all the way from Siberia each fall to flock into Big Spring. A lot of people enjoy watching the flocks of the large birds, but it's difficult to get close to them as they fly around the county.

They have a replica of the old Judge Roy Bean Saloon outside. The real Judge Roy Bean Saloon is on down at Langtry. If you want to venture that far, you may as well go on to Del Rio, or up to El Paso and take your visitors across the border to Villa Cuna or Juarez. They'll love that.

If you go to El Paso, circle back through New Mexico and visit White Sands at Alamogordo. If you like sand, the Sand Hills State Park at Monahans is closer.

But if you're circling through New Mexico, go ahead and stop at Ruidoso for the horse races.

If you like gospel singing, both Stanton in June and Andrews in July usually have an all day or all night gospel singing.

Here in Big Spring, the Starlight specials in the Amphitheatre feature a lot of gospel singing music. There's one out there at 8:30 p.m. tonight.

Odessa features a Fourth of July parade and beauty contest and other celebrations. Lamesa usually has some kind of Fourth celebration in Forest Park. They also have one of the oldest county fairs around usually the week prior to Big Spring's in September.

Don't tell me there's no place to take visitors in West Texas.

There are supper clubs that feature good music and sometimes top stars.

This area is absolutely rich in old west history and things to see. There are wonderful eating places that feature Mexican food, barbecue, Oriental food, good Texas steaks and many more.

There's worlds to do in West Texas. Open your eyes and pay attention. And show a little bit of West Texas hospitality to your visitors. West Texas has it. Let's flaunt it.

RUDDICK PARK — This park is inside Colorado City and is a serene park which includes picnic tables available to visitors.

old opera house are summer plays held many summer weekends. Again you can check with that town's chamber on dates and plays.

There is, of course, an excellent museum here in Big Spring at Heritage Museum complete with a button that furnishes the sound of the old trains rushing into town.

Many enjoy visiting the Pottin House, a representative Victorian Architecture home. People drive all over the United States to visit old homes and Big Spring now offers one of its own.

There is a doll museum here, with a $1 entrance fee with a fine collection of dolls from throughout the world.

San Angelo just completed their Rio Concho Days which is fun for summer visitors in June. If you want to drive as far as Fort Stockton, they have an excellent museum and you can swim at Comanche Springs.

Farm Dry weather takes its toll

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Except for a drouth east-west strip through Central Texas, the state's agricultural picture remains fairly stable.

The dry corridor starts in the far west and extends to East and Northeast Texas, said Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Grazing conditions are deteriorating fast, hay cuttings are skimpier than usual and field crop growth is slowing. However, livestock are holding up well, and marketing is steady.

Elsewhere in the state, crop prospects continue to brighten due to rains in recent weeks. But they, too, will soon need more moisture. In most places, cotton, corn and sorghum look promising. Melon and grain sorghum harvesting is well under way in the Rio Grande Valley.

Almost all peach crop reports describe bountiful production and favorable prices. Reports also are good for pecans, although some areas are suffering insect damage. Small grain yields in northern areas are down because of earlier dry weather.

District Extension agents report the following specific conditions:

PANHANDLE: Soil moisture is adequate. Wheat is reaching maturity, corn is progressing, but cotton and sorghum are behind schedule due to late rains and replanting. Sugar beets are doing well, and a second hay cutting is underway. Ranges and pastures are improving rapidly and cattle are in good shape. Markets softened on all classes last week.

SOUTH PLAINS: Ranges and cattle are in good condition, thanks to recent rains. Some old cotton has been damaged by hail and rain, but later cotton is up to a good stand. Sorghum, corn, sugar beets and vegetables are progressing.

ROLLING PLAINS: Soil moisture is adequate. Earlier dry weather is now causing puny, small grain yields. Much has been grazed out or plowed under. Second hay cuttings continue. Cotton is being planted or replanted for the first to third times. Early sorghum is growing well, and more planting is under way. Pecan and fruit trees show promise, although case bearers are causing problems in pecans. Pastures and cattle are in average to above average condition.

NORTH CENTRAL: Wheat harvest is under way and most yields are good. Cotton is squaring, corn is up to a good stand and grain sorghum is still looking better than usual. Hay making is active. Livestock and pastures and stock tanks are holding up, but more rain will be needed soon.

NORTHEAST: Soil moisture is dry and the weather hot but a fast-finishing first hay cutting is producing good yields and sorghum and corn stands are at least average. Early soybean varieties are blooming, vegetable harvesting is under way and a good peach crop is producing good yields and high prices. The pecan crop is still promising. Livestock remain in good condition on good pastures.

FAR WEST: Livestock conditions are favorable, although green grazing is fading fast as hot, dry weather takes its toll. Alfalfa is growing well and there are heavy cuttings. The onion harvest is completed and the cantaloupe harvest is just starting. All fruit and pecans look good. Peaches are the size of silver dollars.

WEST CENTRAL: Soil moisture remains short.

which has produced low yields of small grains. Livestock are in fair to excellent shape, but ranges and pastures are going down. Most cotton, corn and sorghums are planted. Peanuts look fair to good, and Gillespie County reports a good peach crop.

CENTRAL: Dry, hot weather is parching crops and pastures throughout the district. Small grain yields are light. However, there is good cotton growth and early grain sorghum is turning red. Peaches and plums are ripening with good yields expected. Heavy infestations of nut casebearer may reduce the peach crop.

EAST: Short soil moisture is reducing hay yields, and all field crops need rain. Livestock are holding up, but pastures are average to below. Good peanut stands ranged from 2 to 12 inches. Peaches are maturing fast. Vegetable gardens are producing fairly well, but there is heavy insect damage.

Recent rains also have helped pastures, but more is needed. Livestock are in good shape.

SOUTHEAST AND UPPER GULF COAST: Scattered rains have helped soil moisture. Colorado County is producing considerable hay. Cotton is forming bolls and is blooming in all areas.

SOUTHWEST: Moisture ranges from short to adequate. The hay harvest continues, the grain harvest is complete, and vegetable and peach harvesting is under way. Range and pasture conditions are improving but will need more rain soon.

Boll weevil eradication trial delayed by rain, cold weather

DALLAS — Unseasonably cold spring weather and unusually heavy rainfall delayed the state of the three-year boll weevil eradication trial in Virginia and North Carolina, but trapping and population surveying have begun, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA).

The trial's goal is to eradicate the boll weevil in a major cotton-producing area. If it is successful, consideration may be given to starting a program throughout the entire Cotton Belt to eradicate the pest.

Dr. Francis J. Mulhern, administrator of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) located in Dallas, said the bad weather not only delayed planting, but also caused farmers to plant fewer acres of cotton than anticipated.

"Farmers simply couldn't get into the fields to plant," Dr. Mulhern said, "and many of them switched to other crops because the peak period for planting cotton had passed. So approximately 15,000 acres will be involved in the trial this year instead of the anticipated 24,000. The reduced acreage will in no way affect the validity of program results."

The trial is a cooperative effort of USDA, state departments of agriculture, and cotton growers to eradicate a pest that in some years has cost cotton producers as much as $340 million in crop losses and control measures. The trial features a package of chemical, biological and cultural controls carefully designed to be tougher on weevils but gentler on the environment than past methods.

Improved boll weevil traps, sterile insects, pheromones (insect sex attractants) and safer insecticides are among the blend of new techniques to be used against the pest. The traps are used for weekly surveys of weevil populations during the growing season to determine where insecticide treatments are necessary.

Different costs--different methods

HOUSTON (AP) — Customers of Gulf Oil Corp. have been advised there is nothing unusual about several gasoline prices appearing at different service stations at a single traffic intersection.

Besides differences in gasoline cost, Gulf says, a variety of prices may reflect the varying business methods the dealers have adopted to operate their stations.

"The first dealer may opt for low prices and large volume; the second, for higher prices and smaller volume," Gulf reports.

"Another retailer may offer full service, with considerably greater operating costs than a fourth dealer who chooses self service."

Gulf presented its views on gasoline prices in a consumer news digest brochure distributed to its credit card customers and a spokesman said the response was about 100-to-1 favorable.

The brochure said the pump price elected by a dealer will depend to a large extent on how he interprets the needs of his customers and what marketing practices he employs.

"It is interesting to note that, on an average, dealers are setting current gasoline prices 2 to 5 cents below ceiling," Gulf added.

The price of gasoline has been subject to federal price controls since the early 1970s and there also are government-mandated price ceilings establishing the maximum price a dealer may charge.

The ceilings date back to the Arab oil embargo of 1973-74.

Gulf said pump prices also have differed from one retailer to another because of variations in dealer margins which existed in May 1973.

"If one dealer's margin for a certain grade of gasoline was 8 cents per gallon on that date, he could retain that margin under price controls," Gulf explained.

"If another dealer had a 5-cent per gallon margin on that day for the same grade of gasoline, he could only retain that 5-cent margin. Once controls were in effect, subsequent adjustments were made to the ceiling price to accommodate increased dealer operating costs."

To remain competitive, Gulf said, few dealers have charged the maximum allowable price.

The Gulf brochure also includes an estimated cost breakdown for a typical gallon of regular grade gasoline that carried a national average full service pump price of 63.8 cents last Nov. 1.

The crude oil used in processing the gallon of gasoline cost 28.9 cents or 45.3 percent of the selling price.

The cost of crude just a year earlier, Gulf said, was 24 cents or 40.7 percent of the cost of a gallon of regular grade.

Federal, state, and local taxes represented 19.6 percent of the November gallon. On the national average, the combined taxes total about 12.5 cents a gallon, with Mississippi, Georgia, Hawaii, Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and New York also imposing an additional sales tax on gasoline.

In addition to the 4-cent federal tax, state tax rates range from 5 cents in Texas to 11 cents in Connecticut, Delaware, and Washington. Also, 26 states have city, county or transit taxes which range from 0.5 to 4 cents a gallon.

The dealer's margin or markup amounts to 8.5 cents a gallon or 13.3 percent of the selling price. This covers the difference between what the dealer pays for the gasoline and what it sells it for, and, in addition to profit, covers such operating expenses as rent, utilities, and labor.

The combined cost of crude oil transportation, refining, product transportation and product storage accounts for 7.4 cents or 11.6 percent of the selling price.

The final 6.5 cents or 10.2 percent is broken between such marketing costs as credit cards, accounting, advertising, and maintenance at 4.5 cents or 7.1 percent and oil company profits at 2 cents or 3.1 percent of the selling price.

Six facing pre-trial hearings

LAMESA — Pre-trial hearings are set for six individuals in the 106th District Court Tuesday.

If the defendant's attorneys are ready, District Judge George Hansard will hear cases involving Benny Briones on charges of aggravated perjury; Henry Garcia on charges of murder in connection with a stabbing early this spring; Charles Moore and Bobby Follis in connection with the burglary and vandalism of the Poco Lambro Telephone Exchange last year and Kris Terry on charges of possession of marijuana.

Trial dates for these cases are scheduled for July 10. Twelve civil cases are on the docket for the July session of the court, although the court is expected to be devoted to criminal hearings.

New fees for city building permits effective July 1

New fees for city building permits will become effective July 1, and the city hopes to clarify the various purposes of the permits. Though residents own the property where they reside, or own property which they rent to others, they must have a permit to build a new structure, alter, remodel, add-to, repair, move or demolish any structure on that land. The property owner is jointly responsible with the contractor for permits. So before starting a new project, the city urges that owners check to be sure that a permit has been obtained. Permits are issued by the City Building Department to protect the health and safety of Big Spring residents. Permits required include a vast variety of projects in the home. All heating and air conditioning work requires a permit, whether it is for the replacement of an existing unit or the installation of a new system. This includes duck-work, all types of urnaces and space heaters, compressors, condensers and evaporators. Permits are required for the construction, alteration or enlargement of any type of structure on your property. This includes remodeling or repair of residences, garages, or storage buildings.

Permits are also required for work on roofs, swimming pools, walls, fences, lawn sprinklers, driveways and items too numerous to list. Plumbing must be properly installed to safeguard health, and must be inspected before placed in service. This applies to sewer, gas and water systems.

Any new service or the replacement of an existing service requires an inspection permit. And only persons licensed by the State Board of Plumbers and registered with the city are permitted to work on premises. The city also requires that only licensed electricians be allowed to work on home wiring. The electrician determines the power requirement for the residence and installs the proper wire size and protective devices to safely operate lights and appliances. Inspections usually take place in stages as work progresses, and they must be requested by a contractor. A final inspection is required before the city will release the contractor from his obligation. A building may also be obtained by the property owner, but an electrical or plumbing permit will be issued only to the contractor. For more information, please check with the Big Spring Building Department at 263-8311.

Lottie says thanks

with Marj Carpenter

If you haven't ever been to Lottie's, you missed it, because Lottie's has now been leased out and become the Ackery Cafe under new management.

Lottie says thanks to all of the persons who have helped her during the past two years when her health began to fail and she had some extra problems in running the facility.

But it will be kind of a shame for Lottie's — run just the way Lottie's was run to be gone.

Lottie Crittenden had opened that cafe in 1963. She had grown up in Big Spring as Lottie Williams, daughter of George Williams, a T&P section foreman. "I used to walk by the old Pottin house on the way to school at Central Ward," she recalled. She had married and moved to the Center Point area and later to Vealmoor about 1945 where her husband, Gene farmed. Then in 1963, they moved to Ackery, and he still farmed. She had taught music all around the county but they decided in Ackery that she could run a cafe.

So what's so different about a cafe? Well, Lottie's was different. Originally she started opening the facility at 6 a.m. and remaining open until 5 p.m. The big meal in a farming community is breakfast.

"A lot of the farmers' wives quit getting up and fixing breakfast years ago," Lottie stated. "And anyway, farmers like to gather for breakfast and talk about the weather, and cottonseed and all those important subjects."

Lottie's kind of became a gathering place — where people could sit and talk. She'd fry some hamburgers at noon for wives in town shopping for groceries, farmers who didn't want to go all the way back out to the house and whatever students could slip off from the school lunch hour.

But as help was difficult to get, Lottie ran the place herself. If she needed to go to town shopping, she'd neither close up or turn it over to whoever was sitting in the cafe.

"Want to run the place awhile?" she'd ask. One day she got delayed and finally called back to her own cafe to tell them to close it down. One of her friends said, "Oh no, Lottie. Business is good today. I'm frying lots of hamburgers." But if there wasn't sombody around, Lottie would close up and leave anyway, if she needed to go somewhere. The place got the reputation for only being open when the owner felt like it — but that was all right. That made it different from other cafes. And gave it a little color and character all its own.

Lottie finally decided nobody came late in the afternoon anyway, so she had started closing around 2:30 p.m. And when she began to feel worse, she just opened for breakfast and morning coffee break and shut it down about 10:30 a.m.

"But for a long time, we were the only cafe. We bought it and the old Schmidt Hotel, which had to be torn down," she recalled.

Lottie got tears in her eyes and she choked up a bit when she was saying "Thank all the good people for helping me out."

There's a couple cafes there in Ackery now and the grocery store sells barbecue sandwiches, so people will manage.

But Lottie said, "I'll miss running the cafe and seeing everybody."

And Ackery will miss Lottie — out where I ride fence.

Insurance agents alert Lamesans

LAMESA (SC) — Local insurance agents sent out warning letters in the community to warn citizens of an increasing number of out-of-town insurance agents peddling life, health and accident insurance policies, particularly to elderly and handicapped persons.

The local agents said some of these have cost patrons thousands of dollars in premiums and then cost them in court trying to recover premium. They warned against both these and transient agents, purporting to be tax experts or financial planners.

They urge local citizens to know the insurance agent and to know the company if possible.

They asked them to check with the Better Business Bureau, Chamber of Commerce, their own attorney, the Hospital Insurance Department or a local agent.

They also urged local citizens, "If you are not personally acquainted with the agent, do not sign an application or pay any premium on the first interview. Ask the agent to leave a sample policy or a written description of the proposal and then seek assistance."

They also warned citizens to beware of any agent that tries to leave the impression that he is not selling insurance. They point out that a good agent is proud of his profession.

They also urged citizens to beware of agents recommending replacement of existing policies. They particularly warned against policies purchased by mail, reminding the client to read it carefully, particularly the application before ten days from date of delivery as many policies provide for refund of premium if returned within ten days.

They also reminded citizens that an insurance policy is a binding agreement and once signed, paid for and accepted, is a legal contract.

Shawna Henry joins Acteen Activators

Shawna Henry is one of eight Texas girls who will participate in a mission trip to Rockford, Wis., today through July 1. The girls will represent the Texas Women's Missionary Union in a pilot project called Acteen Activators.

The project is designed to promote women and girls church work in pioneer mission areas. In order to qualify for the honor, the girls competed in local associations by making a notebook and writing a speech. These special Acteens then met in Dallas in January and were interviewed by a board who selected only eight girls in Texas.

Shawna previously participated in a mission trip to Minnesota last summer sponsored by the First Baptist Church of Big Spring. She also was one of three Acteens selected by the State director to speak at CIMTA, a state convention of 1100 Acteens in April.

A 1978 graduate of Big Spring High, Shawna is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Henry, 1707 Purdue.

Danny Reagan Women in sports

Friday afternoon, I read the article in Time magazine entitled "Comes the Revolution", a story about women in sports. From my perspective (male, of course) it seemed rather fair and in depth.

Friday evening, I watched my wife jog around the apartment complex a couple of times. Friday night, I went to a women's softball game, featuring a few friends and fellow co-workers. It just seemed appropriate to say something about all this, even though Zellars could count on his hand the number of women who read my column.

The women's movement into sporting prominence erupted only recently after gestating years of dormancy. With the equal rights slow gestation period, women gradually found themselves with added opportunities in sports.

As in equal pay for equal work, women in schools and universities must now be allowed an equal chance to pursue their favorite sport.

Personally, I don't know why it took so long. Even with a male-dominated society (in business), it seems as though things would've started popping before now. After all, it's not like Betty Baseball was after Pete Rose's job.

Whatever, the women have arrived on the American sports scene. In less than two years at this job, I've seen dramatic changes in the way the wire services treat women's sports.

And there's more women joining sports and more people interested in those women all the time. Does that mean women will start turning to the sports page first instead of the society section? I don't know. Maybe. It'd be nice for sportswriters, who are big hams anyway.

Don't tell me we won't appreciate as many readers as possible. And we'll adjust the look of our pages to prove it. I don't mean Dear Abby and recipes will suddenly appear, but I think you've noticed the change.

Time illustrated the growth of female sports thusly: —Eight years ago, 294,000 high school girls participated in interscholastic sports. During the 1976-77 academic year, the number was 1.6 million, nearly a sixfold increase.

—Since 1973, the first year the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women allowed athletic scholarships, the number of such grants has soared annually. Last year an estimated 10,000 girls from about 460 schools received scholarships upwards of $7 million.

—In 1972, the first all-women marathons in New York's Central Park drew 78 entries. Last month, 4,360 competitors entered the 6.2 mile race.

—One of the world's largest manufacturers of athletic shoes, Adidas, reports a one-year sales increase of 63 percent in its women's shoes.

There are probably half a hundred such similar statistics floating around which illustrate the point just as well. They're here to stay. They've always been here, it's just that some people never knew they could or wanted to play sports.

Right on! The more people who play sports, the healthier the nation, both mentally and physically.

REMARKABILITIES
"It's ridiculous. You can't train women as hard as you can train men, and the records will fall by the wayside."
— DR. JACK WILMORE, president of the American College of Sports Medicine, concerning the fact that the International Olympic Committee recently refused to allow women to run more than 1,500 meters in the 1980 Olympics.

"Five years ago, little girls never walked up to tell me that they wanted to be a professional golfer. Now it happens all the time. Things are changing, things are changing."
— CAROL MANN, woman golfer.

"I was once at the top," he said. "Now I must go to a prison. This is an experience that is going to help me in the future. I have prepared myself mentally for this. The worst is over. I feel as if a heavy burden had been lifted from my shoulders."

"I don't believe in defeat," the husky Cepeda said softly. At 40 Cepeda keeps in "playing shape," looking like a much younger man, and describes himself as a "health food nut."

"I was once at the top," he said. "Now I must go to a prison. This is an experience that is going to help me in the future. I have prepared myself mentally for this. The worst is over. I feel as if a heavy burden had been lifted from my shoulders."

As he spoke, his mother, Carmen Cepeda, sat nearby playing with her grandchild, Ali Manuel, 18 months, Cepeda's youngest child.

"My wife feels much better now," Cepeda added. "His family, Nydia, sat next to him agreeing: "We thought it was going to be much worse," she said.

Cepeda, who for 17 years was a baseball star playing for the San Francisco Giants, St. Louis Cardinals, Atlanta Braves, Oakland A's and Boston Red Sox, got in trouble with the law on Dec. 12, 1975, when he was arrested at the San Juan International Airport and charged with possession of 100 pounds of marijuana.

The former slugger was convicted in November 1976 and earlier this month a federal judge refused to grant probation and ordered him to serve his time. He will be eligible for parole after 30 months.

The sentence was criticized as being too harsh and

Records fall at AAU Junior Track Meet
BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — Fifteen-year-old Bill Lange set a world age group pole vault record Saturday in the first day of competition at the AAU's National Junior Track and Field Championships at Indiana University here.

Lange, a freshman at East Bridgewater-Raritan High School in East Bridgewater, N.J., set the record with his 16-foot vault on his second try at that height, which broke the old best of 15-7 1/2. That effort landed him in fourth place overall in the event.

Billion may watch World Cup

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Holland's disciplined goal-making machine pits itself against the Latin rhythm of Argentina on Sunday in a historic finale to the 1978 World Cup soccer tournament.

Neither team has ever won the championship, an event which draws hundreds of millions to their television sets around the world.

In U.S. sports terms, the World Cup combines all the excitement of the World Series and the Super Bowl rolled into one.

Although soccer still is just catching on in the United States, it is estimated that up to one billion people around the globe may be watching Sunday's final match.

It will be a traditional contest between the two strains which dominate world soccer — the virtuoso and effervescent South American style, and the well-oiled, slick passing and tackling of the European school.

No European team ever has won the World Cup in South America, and 77,000 wildly cheering spectators at River Plate Stadium never will let their opponents forget that.

Thousands are ready to pour into the streets as soon as the game ends, waving blue and white flags and chanting victory songs to paralyze Buenos Aires with celebrations, as they have done twice earlier this month.

Holland is in the final for the second straight time. The Dutch lost 2-1 to West Germany in the 1974 final at Munich.

Most of that great Dutch team still are playing — except for the legendary Johann Cruyff, who has retired.

Argentina, less polished but riding the crest of nationalistic frenzy, also fell short of a world title in 1930. It crossed the La Plata River and was beaten by neighbor Uruguay 4-2.

The orange-shirted Dutch, who have scored more goals than any other team in the World Cup, enjoy the nickname "clockwork orange."

They make a specialty of a midfield whirlpool-spinning passes among each other that have dizzied opponents, then they dart into defensive gaps to convert.

Virtually no Dutchman plays in a fixed position. Fullbacks like Ernie Brandts guard their goal with tackles so fierce that they sometimes score against themselves. But they come back with great long-range shots from as far as 40 yards to win games.

Attackers like Robbie Rensenbrink usually line up as midfielders, but combine remarkable dribbling and formidable shooting. Rensenbrink is the scoring star of the team, having tallied a total of five goals during the month-long tournament, more than any other player in the Cup.

On their way to the finals, the Dutch beat lackluster Iran 3-0, tied 0-0 with Peru and were defeated once by Scotland 3-2. But they put their goalscoring magic into gear in the second round of the Cup, giving Austria a 5-1 trouncing, tying 2-2 with defending champion West Germany, and defeating Italy, the surprise team of the Cup, 2-1.

Italy was the only team which was able to stop Argentina, winning 1-0.

The Argentines edged traditional soccer power Hungary and France by similar 2-1 scores. In the second round, they blanked Poland 2-0, drew 0-0 with three-time world champion and archrival Brazil, and crushed Peru 6-0 to storm into the finals.

The Latins have shed their image as the bad boys of international soccer under the direction of their chain-smoking coach, Luis Cesar Menotti.

A decade ago, Argentine national teams were feared as rough tacklers and often expelled from games. In the 1966 World Cup, English Manager Alf Ramsey called them "animals" after they lost a game with poor sportsmanship at Wembley Stadium.

Now, in a change of roles, Argentina's Menotti is voicing fears that the finals might turn "into a punchup" if the Dutch players use as much body contact as they did against Italy earlier this week.

The two key marksmen to watch on the Argentine side are Mario Kempes, a 23-year-old striker who plays in Spain, and Leopoldo Luque, a lanky, longhaired hometown idol, from the River Plate club.

Both have scored four goals so far in the tournament and are the spearheads of the Argentine attack.

A key figure in the match will be the referee, Sergio Gonella, of Italy.

By awarding free shots or penalties for rough play in tense matches, referees can turn the tide of the game for teams that lose their cool. In World Cup finals, those shots frequently have made the difference.

If the game ends in a draw, both teams will play two 15-minute extra periods beyond the 90-minute game. If the score still is tied, the teams will play again on Tuesday. But World Cups usually are sudden death affairs. No World Cup final ever has ended with the two teams deadlocked.

Lopez stumbles, 11 back

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — Rookie sensation Nancy Lopez continued to stumble Saturday in her bid to become the first professional woman ever to win six straight tournaments.

After 27 holes in the $50,000 Lady Keystone Open, the tournament's halfway point, she was 3 over par at 111 and 11 strokes behind the early leader, Jane Blalock.

Lopez, who won her fifth straight Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament at Rochester, N.Y., last weekend, fired a 1-over-par 73 Friday on the 6,398-yard Hershey Country Club west course.

On the front nine Saturday, she birdied the 540-yard No. 2 hole, then picked up bogeys on 3, 4 and 9.

Blalock, who lost to Lopez in a stirring stretch duel last weekend, had two birdies after six holes Saturday. On Friday, she fired a sizzling 5-under-par 67.

The pig-tailed Blalock, who last year became only the fourth woman ever to win more than $100,000 in a single season, is looking for her 20th win since turning pro 10 years ago.

Lopez, the 1975 Mexican amateur champion who in her first event as a professional was runner-up in the U.S. Open, is the tour's leading money winner in 1978. Her $130,198 in earnings this year is more than double the $57,493 collected by tour runner-up JoAnne Carner.

In fact, all Lopez has to do here to extend another record is finish in the money — which is anywhere in the top 50. The $153,336 she has won so far as a pro is the most ever for a rookie.

Every time she sweats the pot, she builds on the $153,102 Jerry Pate won on the men's tour as a rookie in 1976.

The 5-foot-7, 140-pound Curtis Cup player won her fifth straight tournament last weekend in Rochester, N.Y. The previous LPGA mark of four is shared by Kathy Whitworth, Shirley Englehorn and Mickey Wright, who did it twice. On the men's circuit, Byron Nelson won 11 in a row in 1945.

Lopez is going for her eighth victory of the year.

The 21-year-old darling of women's golf faltered on the front nine Saturday, picking up bogies on 3, 4 and 9 after a birdie on the 540-yard, par-5 No. 2 hole. She parred the back nine.

Jill Endicott, a pro for three years, was disqualified Saturday after she told officials she had signed an incorrect scorecard Friday. She had mistakenly recorded a 3 instead of a 4 on the fifth hole of the opening round.

At the completion of 36 holes of play Saturday, the field of 68 pros and five amateurs was cut to the top 60 players, plus ties.

Orlando Cepeda will report to prison Monday

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — On Monday, Orlando Cepeda will board a plane to Miami and, unescorted, will report to the Elgin Federal Prison in Florida to start serving a five-year sentence for possession of marijuana.

Four days before his departure, the handsome former Most Valuable Player in the National League, sat in the balcony of his two-story home in a San Juan suburb reading an encouraging letter from a Mrs. Maria Lewis of Murray, Utah, one of his fans.

"Just continue to be an example to all. Show everyone that you can rise above it," the letter said.

"I don't believe in defeat," the husky Cepeda said softly. At 40 Cepeda keeps in "playing shape," looking like a much younger man, and describes himself as a "health food nut."

"I was once at the top," he said. "Now I must go to a prison. This is an experience that is going to help me in the future. I have prepared myself mentally for this. The worst is over. I feel as if a heavy burden had been lifted from my shoulders."

As he spoke, his mother, Carmen Cepeda, sat nearby playing with her grandchild, Ali Manuel, 18 months, Cepeda's youngest child.

"My wife feels much better now," Cepeda added. "His family, Nydia, sat next to him agreeing: "We thought it was going to be much worse," she said.

Cepeda, who for 17 years was a baseball star playing for the San Francisco Giants, St. Louis Cardinals, Atlanta Braves, Oakland A's and Boston Red Sox, got in trouble with the law on Dec. 12, 1975, when he was arrested at the San Juan International Airport and charged with possession of 100 pounds of marijuana.

The former slugger was convicted in November 1976 and earlier this month a federal judge refused to grant probation and ordered him to serve his time. He will be eligible for parole after 30 months.

The sentence was criticized as being too harsh and Cepeda's friends pointed out the former major leaguer had led a law-abiding life since his arrest, working with troubled youths and managing an amateur baseball team.

But Cepeda himself is not bitter about what happened to him.

"I believed in God," he said. "I don't want to talk about the case. A man makes mistakes; I always wanted to help everybody. But I am not bitter. The worst part was at the beginning. The press was on top of me. But my friends were always with me."

With some humor, Cepeda said he looked at his time in as if it were "spring training in the minor leagues."

"I am not a rebel," he stated. "I am going to take advantage of the time I am going to spend there. I will study and I will improve myself mentally. I am going to volunteer to help in any way I can. I am not going to sit down and be bitter. What is gone is gone. I have to deal with what's in front of me."

Tragedy strikes Belmont

NEW YORK (AP) — Tragedy struck with terrifying swiftness in the stretch run at Belmont Race Track Saturday, and Flying Water, the champion race horse in Europe last year, was destroyed.

The 5-year-old mare, ridden by jockey Jean Cruguet in the second division of the $111,950 split New York Handicap, hit the rail in the midstretch while rallying from last place.

The mishap occurred just as it appeared Cruguet would take the lead.

While Late Bloomer rallied on the outside to win the race, Flying Water lay on the ground without moving. Cruguet, who was thrown to the track, got up immediately and escaped with minor injuries, though badly shaken.

Track officials said later the mare, whose shoulder was shattered, was humanely destroyed.

Owned by Daniel Wildenstein, the French-bred mare was running in only her second American race. Her career earnings totaled $245,195.

Pearl Necklace ran the 11-16 miles in 1:40 to win the $55,600 first division over another Wildenstein French-bred, Waya. The winner, under Ruben Hernandez and top weight of 122 pounds, led all the way and paid $6,40, $2,60 and $2.10 for a three-length victory.

Waya returned $2.60 and $2.10 and Dottie's Doll paid $2.10 for show.

LEADING AFTER THREE EVENTS — Bob Coffman of Houston, Tex., throws the shotput 15.14 meters Saturday at the University of Richmond during the 1978 National AAU Decathlon Championships to win in that event. Coffman's throw placed him in first place after three events with 2418 points.

McCovey inks new pact

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco Giants announced Saturday that slugger first baseman Willie McCovey has signed a contract following months of negotiations.

Terms were not disclosed. It is believed, however, that McCovey signed a 10-year contract in which he would be paid $125,000 annually for the 1978 and 1979 seasons and $40,000 for the next eight years for his personal services as a non-player.

It also is believed that incentive clauses would allow the 40-year-old McCovey to receive as much as $40,000 per year this season and in 1979. He also will have the option to play a third season in 1980, which would make him one of the few major leaguers in history to play in four different decades.

Entering Saturday's game with the Atlanta Braves, McCovey was batting .229, but ranked among the National League leaders in runs batted in with 41. He has 496 career homers, mostly as a member of the Giants.

Saturday baseball

Rangers shutout Angels, 3-0

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Jon Matlack tossed a two-hitter for his first American League shutout and Richie Zisk, Bobby Bonds and Bobby Thompson drove in the runs as the Texas Rangers stopped the California Angels 3-0 Saturday night for their fifth consecutive triumph.

Matlack, who has only a 6-8 record but a 2.57 earned run average, allowed only infield singles to Dave Macher and Dave Chalk and only one California runner reached second. He walked one and struck out five.

Texas scored its first two runs off loser Dave Frost, 0-1, just back from the minors. The first one came in the third inning when Bump Wills singled with two out, stole second and came home on a single by Zisk.

Texas scored in the fifth without a hit. Bert Campaneris was hit by a pitched ball to lead off the inning and moved to second on Wills' groundout. Campaneris stole third and scored on Bonds' sacrifice fly, his ninth RBI in the last three games.

The Rangers' final run came in the eighth when rookie center fielder Thompson hit his first major league homer off reliever Dave LaRoche.

Dodgers edge Reds, 4-3

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Los Angeles Dodgers broke a tie with two runs in the sixth inning, one on a bases-loaded walk to Jerry Grote and the other on a grounder by Dave Lopes, and held on for a 4-3 victory over the Cincinnati Reds Saturday in a nationally televised game.

Don Sutton, 7-6, with relief help from Charlie Hough and Bob Welch, earned the victory, the 11th in the last 14 games for Los Angeles. The loss was only the third in the last 10 games for the Reds, but it dropped them three games behind front-running San Francisco in the National League West. The third-place Dodgers are 5 1/2 games back.

Whiso spin Twins, 7-4

CHICAGO (AP) — Claudell Washington drove in four runs with a homer and triple and Wayne Nordhagen hit a solo homer Saturday night to pace the Chicago White Sox to a 7-4 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

Washington blasted his second homer of the season after Alan Bannister walked to trigger a four-run sixth, which also included Nordhagen's third homer and a run-scoring triple by Eric Soderholm.

Unbeaten Tiant downs Orioles

BOSTON (AP) — Butch Hobson drove in two runs with a homer and a single and Carlton Fisk drilled a solo homer Saturday as the red-hot Boston Red Sox whipped the Baltimore Orioles 8-3 behind unbeaten Luis Tiant.

Posting his sixth victory in his last seven starts — he also had one no-decision in that stretch — Tiant allowed seven hits, including solo homers by Rick Dempsey, Eddie Murray and Doug DeCinces in boosting his record to 7-0 for the season.

Expos cut Cards, 2-0

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Recently acquired veteran Woodie Fryman teamed up with Darold Knowles and Mike Garman on a six-hitter and Ellis Valentine singled home the only run Montreal needed as the Expos downed the St. Louis Cardinals 2-0 Saturday night.

Fryman, 3-5, a 38-year-old left-hander making only his second start for the Expos, pitched out of first- and sixth-inning jams.

Giants edge Braves, 2-1

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Roger Metzger's two-run double with two out in the sixth inning lifted the San Francisco Giants and Jim Barr to a 2-1 victory over the Atlanta Braves Saturday.

The triumph was the 12th in the past 15 games for the Giants, leaders of the National League West.

Barr, 3-4, blanked the Braves for five innings before Atlanta broke a scoreless tie with a run in the sixth. Barr, winning his first game since May 3, scattered nine hits.

Rookie Bob Horner opened the Atlanta sixth with a double, reached third on Gary Matthews' single and scored on Roland Office's single.

The Giants bounced back with their two runs in the bottom of the inning off loser Phil Niekro, 8-8.

Grandslammer paces Indians

CLEVELAND (AP) — Gary Alexander belted a grand-slam home run and Buddy Bell added a two-run triple to power the Cleveland Indians to a 12-3 rout of the Toronto Blue Jays Saturday night.

The Indians jumped on Toronto starter Jim Clancy, 4-7, for four runs in the third inning to begin the romp.

The Blue Jays had taken a 1-0 lead in the second on Tommy Hutton's single, a bunt single by Luis Gomez and Willie Upshaw's single.

Pirates down Mets in 12

NEW YORK (AP) — John Milner's grand slam home run, the sixth of his career, capped a five-run Pittsburgh burst in the 12th inning and gave the Pirates a 7-4 victory over the New York Mets Saturday.

Milner's homer, his second of the season, came after Omar Moreno broke a 2-2 tie with a run-scoring single.

Kent Tekulve, 4-4, the third Pirates' pitcher, was the winner, going 2-3 innings before leaving in the 12th for a pinch hitter. Dave Hamilton, the second Pirates pitcher in the 12th after the Mets scored twice, got his first save. Paul Siebert, 0-1, the fourth Mets pitcher, was the loser.

Milner had four hits, four RBIs and scored two runs against his former teammates.

Tigers clip Yankees, 4-3

DETROIT (AP) — Jason Thompson and Steve Kemp drove in two runs each Saturday night to help Jim Slaton to his seventh victory as the Detroit Tigers edged the New York Yankees 4-3.

The Tigers jumped on Yankee starter Ken Clay for three runs in the opening inning, one on a single by Thompson following a walk to Lou Whitaker and a single by Rusty Staub, then two on a single by Kemp.

After the Yankees tied it 3-3 with two runs in the second inning, Whitaker doubled in the third off Dick Tidrow, 3-5, and scored the winning run on a single by Thompson.

New York scored its opening run in the first inning on singles by Graig Nettles and Thurman Munson and Reggie Jackson's grounder.

Brewers skunk Mariners, 5-0

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Jerry Augustine pitched a three-hitter and Gorman Thomas and Larry Hise belted two-run homers, leading the Milwaukee Brewers to a 5-0 victory over Seattle Saturday night that snapped the Mariners' winning streak at a club record five games.

Phils win 4th straight, 6-2

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mike Schmidt's two-run first inning homer started the Philadelphia Phillies toward their fourth consecutive victory, a 6-2 triumph over the Chicago Cubs Saturday night and a one-game lead over the second-place Cubs in the National League East.

Royals edge Oakland, 7-5

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Pete LaCock homered and doubled to drive in four runs and Andy Hassler recorded his first victory of the season as the Kansas City Royals downed the Oakland A's 7-5 Saturday night.

LaCock, a reserve first baseman, unloaded a three-run homer to cap a five-run first inning off Steve Renko, 2-3. In the third, he tagged reliever Steve McCarty with an opposite-field double to left that scored Al Cowens.

Baseball Studying Holtzman Deal

THE LEGALITIES AND PROPRIETIES' of the Ken Holtzman case are being looked into by Commissioner Kuhn and both league offices. Don't panic, Yankee fans. There is no danger of Holtzman being returned by the Cubs. They have him, for better or for worse, for richer or poorer... Which brings us to why the commissioner is studying the trade.

The Yankees are about $270,000 poorer for having given away Holtzman. He is, I believe, the only high-salaried player in history to be sold with the purchaser receiving the money. The Cubs wouldn't take him unless the Yankees agreed to pay $100,000 of Ken's 1980 salary for each of the remaining 2 1/2 years on the contract. That's not bad. There was one club that wanted the Yankees to pay the entire salary. If Holtzman has any ego left, this transaction should eliminate it.

You may ask why the Yankees would agree to pay ransom just to have somebody kidnap Holtzman. The answer is this: If the Yankees had simply released him, they would have been obligated to pay the full salary for 2 1/2 years because Ken has a guaranteed contract. Thus, by sending him to Chi, the Yankees have saved about $270,000, which is one way of looking at it.

They also saved themselves a lot of grief, which we'll discuss a bit later.

The papers on Holtzman have not yet been filed with the league offices. They are being anxiously awaited by Lee MacPhail, AL prez; Chub Feeney, NL ditto; Bowie Kuhn, the owner's commissioner of baseball, and Marvin Miller, the players' commissioner of baseball.

"The Cubs and Yankees are keeping both league offices and ours advised on the settlement if they are working out," says Sandy Haddon, Kuhn's legal aid. "That is all we have to say about it at present."

There is obviously, something fundamentally wrong with a situation that allows a man to play for one club and draw his salary, or a large part of it, from another. The Cubs automatically incur a financial interest in the Yankees' success. It would, also obviously, be worse if the two teams involved were in the same league.

There will be more and more Holtzman cases because of the changing structure of baseball. Suppose the Rod Carew trade had gone through, say to the Yankees. Suppose the Yankees had given up a few high-salaried players — Chambliss, Figueroa, Nettles, just to toss in some names.

Pitch-in eagle on 18 gives Lietzke Canadian lead

OAKVILLE, Ont. (AP) — Bruce Lietzke's pitch-in on an eagle 3 on the final hole finished off a 67 and gave him a 2-stroke lead Saturday in the third round of the $250,000 Canadian Open Golf Championship.

Lietzke, who started the warm, sunny day 3 shots off the pace, finished 54 holes with a 210 total, 3 under par on the difficult, 7,050-yard Glen Abbey Golf Club course.

"That's a very good way to end the round," Lietzke said of his 45-yard shot with a sand wedge that found the cup on the 18th hole. "It makes up for a couple of shots I threw away."

Lietzke, winner of two tournaments last year but in a slump most of this season, was trailed by John Schroeder, skinny Jeff Hewes and rookie Pat McGowan at 212, the only other men under par after three trips over this course Jack Nicklaus designed as a permanent home for the Canadian National Championship.

McGowan also eagled the final hole for a 72. Hewes, who shared the second round lead with McGowan, also shot 72. Schroeder, who held a 3-shot lead at the turn, played his back nine in 39 and finished with a par 71.

Australian Bob Shearer, with a 71, and Ben Crenshaw, with 3 shots back at par 213. Crenshaw birdied three holes in a row at one stretch and also birdied the par 5 18th hole, where he made that horrendous '99 in Friday's round.

Defending champion Lee Trevino had a solid 69 and was tied with Mike Sullivan at 214. Sullivan shot a 68. "I'm good position," Trevino said. "I wish I could have got it in at 67 or 68, but I'm in good position. Four shots back isn't too much on this kind of a golf course. You're not gonna see anybody moving much. I mean it's not the kind of course that a guy can shoot real low numbers, and he can shoot pretty high, so at one over par I've still got a good chance."

Nicklaus had a 72 and was at 217. Masters champ Gary Player shot 73-218. Arnold Palmer had six birdies in an erratic round of 73 and was at 219. U.S. Open champ Andy North shot 72-221.

Lietzke's cross-handed putting was the key to his round. He had nine one-putts, one no-putt and holed five times from the 10-15 foot range.

Bruce, whose best finish this year has been a runner-up position at Tallahassee, one-putted 6 times on the front side and made the turn 2 under par with a 15-foot birdie putt on the fourth and a six-footer on the next hole.

He had to scramble on the 10th and 11th, scored from 15 feet on the 12th, then reached the par 5 13th in 2 and promptly 3-putted for par.

With the other leaders backing up, Lietzke held the lead alone until he bogeyed the 16th hole.

He got his second shot over the green on a mound and "from where I was I was very happy to make 5. It could have been a double bogey very easily," he said.

He pitched across the green to the front fringe, chipped back and made a two-footer for bogey. That dropped him back into a tie for the lead.

The dramatic closing eagle put him back on top alone.

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Brad Corbett's millions paid some blue chip dividends Friday night.

The controversial free-spending majority owner of the Texas Rangers purchased Furguson Jenkins from the Boston Red Sox in the off season for the bargain basement price of $50,000.

Then he traded Claude Washington to the Chicago White Sox for Bobby Bonds and signed the slugger to a $2 million 5-year contract. Chicago is still hollering "damaged merchandise" because Washington had an injured ankle, but American League President Lee MacPhail ruled the trade okay.

And it was certainly okay Friday night as Bonds blasted two three-run homers and Jenkins registered his 41st career shutout as the Rangers defeated the California Angels 7-0 in the first game of a double-header.

In the second game, Bonds delivered a two-run double in 8-4 Ranger victory to top his RBI count to 8 for the evening.

Texas strapped the loss on Tom Griffen, who is now 0-3.

Doyle Alexander collected his sixth victory against four losses although he needed relief held from Reggie Cleveland, who gained his seventh save.

The sweep brought the Rangers to within one game of Western Division leader Kansas City.

It was Texas' fourth straight victory.

"When you have a relaxed mind you can perform. I didn't know whether I was going back to Chicago and I didn't have a contract. I went 0 for 18 in one stretch because I had a mental lapse," Bonds said.

"The fans here have been great. I have said it before and I still mean it. I was surprised I didn't get stoned I was playing so poorly."

Both of Bonds' homers came off Angels' starter and loser Chris Knapp, who is now 7-6.

Jenkins, who is 8-3, yielded only five hits and struck out six batters. He now has 2,509 strikeouts, which is 12th on the all-time list—three ahead of Christy Mathewson.

"My home run ratio has been super," said Jenkins, who has only yielded five homers in 105 innings.

"I can't understand why I'm not giving up any. I keep shaking my head. I can't figure out what is wrong. I will probably give up nine in some game."

Jenkins added "I've always won big here. I love this park and the fans are great. I feel happy and it's the environment that makes the athletes perform."

Knapp, a former teammate of Bonds said, "Bonds just killed me. I usually pitch him inside and I think he knew that. He seemed to turn on both balls."

TOKYO (AP) — The undefeated University of Kentucky basketball team sound up its seven-game Japan tour with a 108-57 victory over the all-Japan team Saturday. The reigning National Collegiate Athletic Association champions led 59-29 at halftime.

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Whittier College of the United States, one of the three unbeaten teams, defeated Taiwan's Feng Camel 89-65 Friday night after taking a 45-37 lead at halftime in the William Jones Cup basketball tournament. The South Korean national team and the Brewster Heights of the United States also are undefeated.

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Ferenc Puskas, a former Hungarian soccer star, has agreed to manage A.E.K. of Athens for the coming season, team officials confirmed Saturday.

A.E.K. won the 1977-78 Greek major league championship and the Greek Cup under the guidance of manager Zlatko Cukovic of Yugoslavia, who transferred to the Zurich football club.

Cauthen speaks up

OWENSBORO, Ky. (AP) — Jockey Steve Cauthen, often a youth of few words, opened up for young questioners here in a way that would turn some sports writers green with envy.

After a day of racing at Belmont in New York, Cauthen hopped a plane for a brief appearance Friday night at a gathering of super-achievers his own age.

The 18-year-old jockey, known for his short answers to the probing questions of sports journalists, talked with the student leaders about horses, riding, his future and even girls.

Gathered for a warm summer evening picnic in a tent near the Ohio river were about 350 of the nation's most honored student orators, journalists, farmers and others.

The American Academy of Achievement's "Salute of Excellence" gave them an opportunity to meet government officials, scientists, show business big-names and other notables.

At first, Cauthen was ill at ease. He mounted a special stand put behind the podium for him, and began haltingly: "All you people my age, you must be very special because you've got an awful lot of nice people setting this up for you."

He said he admired the scholarship of the group and added, "I was no great student."

"Luckily, I found something I could do, which was ride horses—and could make a living at it," he said.

Cauthen's remarks trailed off. Then he kicked the special platform away, resuming his normal short stature, and began answering questions.

The students had plenty.

—What does he say to the horses? Cauthen didn't go into detail, but said, "The only one I've been talking to lately is Affirmed."

Hiller will be feted

DETROIT (AP) — John Hiller figured he'd last about five years in major league baseball and drop out after his salary peaked at perhaps $30,000 a year.

Sunday at Tiger Stadium the 35-year-old ace relief pitcher, whose salary is in the $100,000 range, will have a recognition day in honor of his 10 years in the majors—all with Detroit.

Hiller, who likely will be remembered by baseball historians for his courageous and successful comeback after a heart attack, never thought things would work out so well.

"I think my wife and I used to talk about five years," he said, when asked how long he thought he'd be pitching in the big leagues. "The minimum salary then was $7,000. We talked about maybe getting up to $30,000. It shows how things have changed."

Little did the Tigers, or Hiller, realize during his rookie year in 1967 that the slender Canadian left-hander would command such a large salary and a status as one of the game's top relief specialists.

He sat out all of 1971 and half of 1972 because of the heart attack. He had a coronary bypass operation and started his comeback in 1972.

In 1973 he set major league records with 38 saves and 48 Firemen Trophy points (38 saves, 10 victories), and a club record with 60 games finished. His ERA was an incredible 1.44.

That established him as a bullpen ace and he has been outstanding most of the time since.

On the free agent market Hiller could have made a mint.

NO WEIGHT PROBLEM — Amanda Bradshaw, 3, clad in a jockey's outfit of the Queen's racing colors, would encounter no weight problem as a jockey and race fans attending the Royal Ascot in Ascot, England Friday look on approvingly. Amanda stood in the Royal enclosure in a bid to see the Queen. A steward attempted to reunite her with her mother but Amanda was adamant. She stayed put and saw Queen Elizabeth's driver past in her carriage.

Suit filed against UIL

HOUSTON (AP) — A Madison High School basketball player is asking a federal court to grant an injunction against the University Interscholastic League which says he will lose his eligibility if he attends a summer training camp.

A suit filed Thursday by Robert Kite, father of 6-foot-11 Greg Kite, seeks to have the UIL disbanded because it unconstitutionally deprives the youth, considered top basketball material, of the legitimate opportunity to better himself professionally. The suit also claims the UIL practice discriminates against basketball and football players.

A companion suit is expected to be filed Monday on behalf of National Basketball Association stars Rudy Tomjanovich of the Houston Rockets and Dave Cowens of the Boston Celtics. The players, who plan summer clinics in Texas, will allege restraint of trade because UIL rules prohibit varsity basketball and football players from attending training camps. The suit claims there is no restriction against such training for junior varsity or B-team players or participants in baseball, tennis, and golf.

It is the second time this year a high school athlete has sought court action against UIL restrictions.

Fergie moves up whiff list

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Texas Rangers right-hander Fergie Jenkins struck out six batters Friday night to pass Christy Mathewson and move into 12th place on the all-time major-league strikeout list.

Jenkins gave up only five hits in the first game of a doubleheader Friday night with the California Angels, while raising his strikeout total to 2,509, three more than Mathewson.

He broke Mathewson's record when he whiffed California's Ron Fairly in the fourth inning.

The win also was the 41st career shutout for Jenkins.

Prep given better med heed

ROCKPORT, Maine (AP) — The medical attention given to high school athletes is better than it once was, but not as good as it should be, says the team physician for the Kansas City Chiefs of the National Football League.

Albert Miller said 50 percent of high school athletes aren't getting the medical attention they should. Miller said some pro football prospects report to the Chiefs' training camp "without ever having had an electrocardiogram or without ever having blood drawn."

More high school and college athletes should be receiving blood tests and a urinalysis, at least, Miller told the annual convention of the Maine Osteopathic Association Friday.

Teen 'A'ger debuts hot

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Teen-ager Tim Conroy surrendered only two hits and one run in 3-1 innings — his major league debut Friday night — and his Oakland teammates scored four unearned runs to beat Kansas City 5-4 for a split of their doubleheader.

In the first game, George Brett drove in three runs to pace a 5-3 Royals victory.

The split left the Royals just one-half game ahead of the Texas Rangers in the American League West, as of Friday.

Conroy, the A's No. 2 pick in the free agent draft earlier this month, walked five and failed to earn credit for the triumph when he was relieved by Pete Broberg with the bases loaded in the fourth. Fred Patek's sacrifice fly scored Kansas City's first run and Broberg, 7-6, was the winner, although he needed help from Bob Lacey and Elias Sosa.

In the first game, the Royals jumped on Rick Langford, 1-5, for two runs in the first inning on Brett's triple. They loaded the bases in the third and Al Cowens, who has been in a deep slump, slapped a two-run single.

Chris, Martina in finals

EASTBOURNE, England — Chris Evert defeated Australia's Wendy Turnbull 3-6, 6-1, 6-1 and Martina Navratilova beat Billie Jean King 6-4, 6-2 to advance to the finals of the Eastbourne International tennis tournament.

LONDON — Heavy rain stopped quarter-final play in the Queen's Club International Tennis Tournament, forcing the final to be played on Sunday — the day before Wimbledon starts.

Play was halted with fourthseeded John McEnroe leading fellow American Tom Gullikson 3-2 in the third and final set. Gullikson had taken the first set 6-4 and McEnroe won the second, 6-2.

Not much interest in 500

MOUNT POCONO, Pa. (AP) — Even with nearly $400,000 in prize money at stake, organizers had to invite cars in to fill the field for Sunday's eighth annual Schaefer 500.

The 11th row in the 33-car field is comprised of Bill Vukovich, Phil Threshie and Lee Kunzman, all invited starters because not enough able cars were on hand to fill the field through qualifying Thursday and Friday.

Twenty-six cars qualified during the opening day of time trials, and four successfully completed runs Friday. Officials extended qualifying for an extra 30 minutes to give any of the four cars still sputtering around in various states of disrepair a chance to get their acts together. But none answered the bell.

So Dr. Joseph Mattioli, president of Pocono International Raceway, opted for a drawing to fill the remaining spots. None of the invitees is expected to be a factor in the race.

Heading the list of competitors are pole position starter Danny Ongais, whose qualifying speed of 190.335 mph was the fastest speed recorded at the track in six years, defending champion Tom Sneva, and Indianapolis 500 winner Al Unser.

Wimbledon question: Can Borg win 3 straight?

LONDON (AP) — Not since the great Fred Perry did it in 1936 has any man managed to win three consecutive singles tennis titles at Wimbledon. On Monday, Bjorn Borg of Sweden starts the long road toward what he hopes will be his third straight.

Many of the greats have tried and failed. Rod Laver, John Newcombe, Roy Emerson and Lew Hoad all won it twice but faltered. There is nothing to suggest it will be any easier for the flying Swede.

Wimbledon, despite the introduction of a plethora of other championships and titles, remains the big one, the world's leading lawn tennis tournament. It is an institution. And for that reason, every top player in the world wants to win a Wimbledon title.

World Cup stars...

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — The stars will be out when the soccer teams of Holland and Argentina meet in the World Cup final at Buenos Aires' River Plate Stadium Sunday afternoon.

The Dutch, some of the most talented and disciplined professionals in the world, are in the final for the second time in a row. The Dutch lost 2-1 to West Germany in the 1974 final at Munich.

The members of that great Dutch team are still playing — except for the legendary Johann Cruyff, who has retired. The Dutch are coached by Ernst Happel, an Austrian.

Argentina, less polished and less experienced, has ridden to the final on a wave of fanatical patriotic enthusiasm. The Dutch must face 11 men plus 77,000 ardent, flag-waving, trumpet-blowing fans.

Argentina has had little success in the World Cup since World War II, and made the final only once before, in the inaugural Cup of 1930.

But while Connors has what looks like an easy first-round match against New Zealander Russell Simpson, Borg might well have hoped for an easy opponent initially than 6-foot-7 American Victor Amaya.

The value of Wimbledon seeding is that players like Borg and Connors are supposedly protected from their more dangerous rivals until the later stages.

Big-serving players like Amaya are always a danger at Wimbledon — but Borg hasn't lost a match here since 1975 when he fell in the quarter-finals to eventual champion Arthur Ashe.

The major challengers to Borg and Connors, the 1974 champion, are mainly Americans.

Vitas Gerulaitis, only 23, is seeded third. Fifth seed Brian Gottfried, who defeated Borg once last year, and Roscoe Tanner, seeded sixth, cannot be overlooked. Tanner was a semifinalist in 1975 and 1976 before going out to Britain's John Lloyd last year in the first round. His powerful game is well-suited to Wimbledon.

It would be foolish, too, to write off such men as fourth-seeded Argentinian Guillermo Vilas, Ilie Nastase, Sandy Mayer, and even the out-of-form Ramirez.

Wimbledon has a habit of bringing out the best in players. It would be no surprise to see a giant-killer emerge from the unknowns.

In the women's singles, however, that is less likely. The women's game is ruled for the most part by Chris Evert, Evonne Goolagong, Martina Navratilova and defending champion Virginia Wade.

There is always a chance that a youngster, perhaps South African Marise Kruger, might surprise everyone. But if the winner is not to come from the top four seeds it might well be the veteran American Billie Jean King, looking a record 20th Wimbledon title.

...and Black Market

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Black market sales of tickets for the last two soccer matches of the 1978 World Cup were moving along briskly Friday as Argentines sought precious seats at the 77,000-capacity River Plate Stadium.

Dozens of classified ads appeared in Friday morning newspapers offering tickets for the matches, which were officially sold out more than four months ago.

Saturday's match — for third and fourth place — between Brazil and Italy were not as sought after as those for Sunday's final between Holland and Argentina.

For Saturday, grandstand seats in the better sections of the stadium, away from the howling mobs who frequent the "popular" — read that cheap — stands originally cost $35 apiece. The black market vendors were asking, and getting, up to $400.

For Sunday's match, the asking price was $1,000 per seat, more than 13 times what they originally cost.

Outdoor converts

FLINTSTONE, Md (AP) — Hikers, bikers, backpackers and canoeists are but in numbers. They've pulled on their hiking boots, filled their packs, grabbed their paddles and are getting a firsthand glimpse of redoubt and mountain streams.

The old timers — the people who have known about the outdoors for years — chuckle when they talk about the more recent converts.

Members of local outdoor groups, such as the Potomac Appalachian Trail club, the Sierra Club or the Wanderbirds, say their ranks are growing as the novices discover the joys of nature.

"On most every hike we have two or three new members, and it doesn't take long before they're so enthusiastic that they're organizing hikes of their own," said Walter Wells, a veteran hiker and conservation chairman of a local Sierra Club chapter, said. Wells said the Sierra Club has been constantly growing in recent years, and other outdoor organizations report similar experiences.

The Washington area's Potomac Appalachian Trail Club, which includes suburbs in both Maryland and Virginia, has zoomed to 3,000 members since the early 1970s.

Since its inception 50 years ago, the club has assumed responsibility for maintenance of 225 miles of the Appalachian trail. Their section of the trail runs from the Susquehanna River in Maryland to the south end of Rockfish Gap near Virginia's Skyline Drive.

The group keeps that segment in good hiking condition, and maintains shelters and cabins which are available for hikers.

For those who prefer less rugged terrain, the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal stretches for 184 rolling miles along the Potomac River, from Washington to Cumberland, Md.

As the Canal, the Appalachian Trail, and the region's many parks become popular weekend retreats, outfitters and stores that supply camping gear have noticed a sharp increase in business.

Bill Plough, who works at Oakton, Virginia's Appalachian Outfitters, says business is booming, with people's interests ranging from backpacking to whitewater canoeing.

"Everybody's trying to get out — they just want to get out of the city," he said. "So they come here to get ideas and advice, as well as equipment."

Plough said he's delighted at the "grand increase" in outdoor sports, but added: "Sometimes you worry that some day it's going to be hard to find a secluded spot."

Wells echoed the sentiment.

"There's no question that the outdoors is where it's at for a great many people these days," he said. "I think it's an opportunity for them to get away from noise — from the interruptions of their daily lives."

INSECT PESTS

Whether you're picnicking, gathering wild berries, hiking, or often just mowing the grass at home, ticks and chiggers are always a potential problem.

There are ways to prevent these parasites from attaching themselves to you, say the outdoor recreation experts at Mercury outdoors.

One of their standard remedies is an old-fashioned method that was used by America's earliest pioneers, and is still effective today.

Simply dust yellow sulphur, available at almost any drug store, on your clothing before going out where insect pests are prevalent.

Make sure you get plenty around the ankles and trouser legs, and also inside the waist where shirt and trousers meet.

A thorough dusting with sulphur will last an entire day in the woods, and you'll find it easy to wash off when you return home.

If you do bring a few of the unwelcome critters home, you'll find that ticks are much easier to shed than are chiggers.

Douse a piece of cotton with rubbing alcohol and hold it over the tick until it dies.

Then take tweezers and gently pull the tick loose, being sure you remove the head.

Wash the area with alcohol and watch for infection during the next several days.

Chiggers can be killed by repeated dosing with camphorated oil, or any of several patent treatments available without prescription.

It usually takes several days for the itching to cease.

These abounded in catches at various concession points.

Billy Stewart, Arlington, took the lead in the striped bass contest at Paint Creek Marina, but Donnie Bowman and Daryle Avis, Bryan, came in with a 14-pounder at Hillside.

Reports for the week included: Paint Creek Marina —

Wildcat Fish A Rama — James West, Odessa, two strippers to 5 lbs.

Hillside Grocery — Eddie Braswell, Herman Stoddard, Donnie Bowman and Daryle Avis, Bryan, 12 strippers ranging from 6½ to 14 lbs.

Super 'cats' at Meredith

FRITCH — Lake Meredith has been considered the top lake in Texas for walleye, but a few fishermen are proving that the Panhandle lake is a super catfish lake, too.

The latest success story comes from two Berger catfishermen, David Jackson and Jim Rynders. These two anglers have caught nine catfish averaging 27 pounds each along with a stringer of walleye. One of the blue catfish weighed 30 pounds and all were caught on rod-and-reel using a Lindy walleye rig and worms.

The two anglers will not tell where on Lake Meredith they found the catfish "hole," but rising water from heavy rains upriver on the Canadian watershed would be the best lead.

The rising water has slowed the walleye fishing and anglers wanting to put a real bend in their fishing pole should try for the big cats as the water flowing into Lake Meredith whets the appetite of the fish.

TP&W develops new system for dove sanctuaries

AUSTIN — The Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission has adopted a new system for establishing white-winged dove sanctuaries in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

In a public meeting May 31, the commission authorized six major sanctuary areas — three of which will be closed to hunting on alternate years.

The sanctuary areas are basically situated along a narrow band near the Rio Grande in Cameron, Hidalgo and Starr Counties. The and landowners advance notice of areas to be closed to hunting.

Heretofore the sanctuary areas were established in July each year, according to Dunks.

The area designated as Sanctuary A will be closed to hunting during the white-winged dove season in even-numbered years (1978). It is the area south of a line extending north from the International Bridge at Brownsville along State Highway 415 to US 281, then north and west along US 281 to FM 1015 and south along FM 1015 to the International Bridge near Progreso; and that area south of a line extending north along US 281 from the International Bridge at Hidalgo, then north along FM 1926 to FM 1016, then west and north along FM 1016 to US 83 at Mission, then west along US 83 to Loop 374, then west along Loop 374 to FM 2062, then south along FM 2062 to the entrance of Bentsen-Rio Grande Valley State Park, and then along the east boundary of Bentsen-Rio Grande Valley State Park to the Rio Grande; and that area south of a line extending north from the Rio Grande at Los Ebanos along FM 886 to US 83, then west along US 83 to FM 755 at Rio Grande City, and then south along FM 755 to the Rio Grande.

The area designated as Sanctuary B will be closed to hunting in odd-numbered years (1979).

The area designated as Sanctuary B will be closed to hunting in odd-numbered years (1979).

STATE RECORD DRUM — Larry D. King of Wichita Falls was surprised recently when he landed this 31-pound freshwater drum (gaspergou) at Lake Arrowhead while bass fishing. The fish, caught on an artificial lure and 14-pound test line, beats the old record held by Larry Joe Thomas of Bedford by more than five pounds. The record was certified by the State Fish Records Committee of the Texas Parks & Wildlife Department.

GRASSY BASS — With Moss Creek near spillway level, newly covered vegetation offers the angler more opportunity to surprise a lazy lunger resting from the noon-day sun in the high grass. Such areas, sheltered from the wind, can be found on the southside of the lake.

BABCO VISES FOR EVERY NEED

Try the dam

By Danny Reagan

Went out to Moss Creek again this week. Dang wind's still kicking up, but if you're a sheltered cove fisherman, there's always a spot out there that's protected from the West Texas howling.

Never had much luck there myself, in the sheltered cove that is. The "spot" that works for me is the dam. Early in the morning, during the heat of the day, wind blowing smack dab in the face, no matter what time, the dam always offers something.

Hooked three black bass last Monday on a medium-sized sonic, the color of a carp minnow. A "baby" pound and a half and a keeper (about three pounds) hit within a span of about 45 minutes. The biggest spit the lure right back in my face about five feet from the bank.

For a lake the size of Moss Creek, it's best manners to consider "keeper" at anything three pounds or more. And remember this, it's illegal to keep a black that's less than 10 inches long.

With the murky conditions still prevalent, keep to those artificial baits that make the noise. You might also remember to cast into the teeth of the wind, as the big hawks aren't known to strike at many targets, no matter how tempting, that are "swimming" against a strong current.

Plunk yourself down on a comfortable rock (midway down the dam is good), get out your noisemakers and cast out time and time again in a semi-circle from your left to the right, and back to the left again. If nothing strikes, change colors.

This may take a while, but I guarantee you'll catch something at Moss Creek, a lake sometimes maligned for the bad luck many anglers experience.

As soon as I get my "Fishing Chair," I'll try the upper end of the lake, the place that the Fitchys from Coahoma have so much luck with inner tubes and purple plastic worms.

LaVerne Byers indicated that the wind has been blowing out at the lake all week long, keeping the fishermen away, but not deterring the campers and vacationers.

She reports one black, 3½ pounds, taken off the dam Wednesday, and a few scattered two to six pound cats. One out-of-town man also brought in a five-pound cat off the dock during night fishing.

REMEMBER THIS TIP
During our recent vacation trip to Lake Buchanan, fishing buddy Bill Norris tied a securing rope to each string of fish dangling from the side of the boat as we trolled. Why? While fishing at Lake Spence one day, Bill noticed a full string of black bass swimming by his boat. Many of the fish were lunker size...five pounds and more. The poor guy who lost that mess. I bet he was sick for a week.

But there's a lot of stress on that one clamp of a metal stringer that's holding full string against the pull of a boat that's only trolling slowly. Better safe than sorry, right? If you use a metal stringer, attach an insurance line on it.

HOOK SETTING IS THE KEY

About a year ago Homer Circle, Sports Afield's Angling Editor who knows as much about freshwater fishing as any man alive, made a profound statement: "It takes more than a big jerk to set the hook." He's been studying hook-setting techniques for years and has spent long hours working with Du Pont's tensiometer to measure the pounds of energy delivered to the end of the line by an angler. But one thing bothered him:

"That tensiometer was anchored to yield consistent readings as we varied the methods of hook settings. But, when I set the hook on a real bass it isn't anchored like that tensiometer. It's bound to move toward me when I jerk on the line and thus lessen the poundage I'm getting into the end of that line."

So the lab boys at Du Pont studied this matter and suggested that a tensiometer be mounted inside a fiberglass bass. They would balance the bass to float upright and weight it to barely sink. A wire leader would come through the center of the mouth and activate the tensiometer. The gauge could be read through a little window in the bass's side.

Thus came into being a five-pound plastic bass named GeeBee. She was furnished by Archie Phillips, a taxidermist of Fairfield, Alabama. GeeBee was brought to Circle's Florida home by Du Pont's Charles Booz. In an exhausting two days of hook setting and checking variables, the two of them "got the facts." Circle reports that his arms and shoulders ached from the exertion of cast after cast, and Booz was "worn to a nub" handling the placement of GeeBee and reading the tensiometer through the little window in her side.

Circle is sure pleased with the test results, and in Sports Afield's May issue Homer disclosed the chart he's devised on hook-setting power and the most foolproof "speed set method" for landing bass.

Gee City ends season

GARDEN CITY — The Garden City A's pony league club defeated Robert Lee last Thursday, 15-9. Erby Lopez took the win from the hill and also garnered a single. Garden City also lost to Miles, 20-9 last Monday, with Lopez taking the loss.

KFNE-FM joins MBS

Radio Station KFNE-FM in Big Spring has joined the new Southwest Radio Network of the Mutual Broadcasting System, it was announced by Gary Bradbury, general manager of KFNE-FM.

"The addition of the Mutual Southwest Radio Network's fine lineup of news and sports programming will provide a real service to our listeners and our community," the KFNE general manager said.

He pointed out that the Mutual Southwest Radio Network covers the nine southwestern states of Texas, Arkansas, Arizona, Kansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Tennessee. News, sports and other programs are broadcast from the Network's headquarters in Dallas.

Other Garden City hits came from Greg Kingston, Victor De Hoyas, (1B, 2B), Joe Lopez (1B, 2B), Robbie Patino (2B) and Randy Lister (1B, 2B).

This ends league play for the A's, and they finished the season with a 4-6 record. Two players from the team were represented in the All-Star Tournament held in Abilene, June 17-22. They were Jody Kingston and Allen Winn.

Holmes wants good rep

CLEVELAND (AP) — Larry Holmes says he wants to set a shining example for children as the World Boxing Council's new heavyweight champion.

"I would like people to say, 'There's the heavyweight champion and he's a very nice person,'" Holmes said in an interview Wednesday.

He was in Cleveland to meet with his manager, Rich Giachetti, and to make several personal appearances.

"It took me nine years to win the title and I'm not going to do anything to spoil it now," he said. "I want to be an example for kids."

"I came from no education and no background. Now, I'm the champion. If I could do it, they must now feel there's a chance for them in what they're trying to do."

The 28-year-old boxer from Easton, Pa., captured the WBC version of the heavyweight crown from Ken Norton in a 15-round split decision two weeks ago.

The 6-foot-3, 220-pounder said no plans have been made for a title defense, although it could come in September or October.

"I had two hard fights and took a lot of banging and pounding," said Holmes, who got his shot at Norton after defeating Earnie Shavers in April.

Where Are They?

1. He played high school ball at Brooksmith, and went to Tarleton State for a year before a stint in the service. After finishing his schooling at Howard Payne, he was head of athletics at Garden City High School from 1962-71, head football coach at Forsan from 1971-75 and is currently principal at the latter school.
2. His real name is Arnold Cream. On July 18, 1951, he knocked out Ezzard Charles in the 7th round for the Heavyweight Championship of the World. A little over a year later (9-23-52), Rocky Marciano knocked him out in the 13th to take the title from him. Recently a sheriff in Camden, New Jersey, he still works with the public in an advisory position.
3. When he was a young kid, he used to bring then-Sports Editor Tommy Hart reports of neighborhood touch-football games he played. He was coach of the Coahoma Bulldogs and led the Steers from 1967-69, compiling a 16-14 record while here. He is now a coaching assistant at the University of New Mexico.
4. He started out as a sportswriter for a New York paper, and eventually worked his way up in the television business until the Brooklyn native, now in his mid-50's, became the elder statesman of CBS sports. His latest achievement, which brought nationwide publicity, was a commentary following the Ali-Spinks fight when he "told it like it was" about the ratings game.

Why have Black Hall of Fame?

NEW YORK (AP) — On the day Muhammad Ali appeared on the front page of the New York Times with Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, a press luncheon was held in New York for the Black Athletes Hall of Fame.

An ironic coincidence, indeed.

What other athlete in the world — black, white, red or yellow — could have warranted so warm a reception from one of the world's most powerful heads of states?

Muhammad Ali, an uneducated black from Louisville, Ky., like no other, has ready entry to the Kremlin or the White House. Our greatest home run hitter, Hank Aaron, is black. So are pro football's best ball-carrier, O.J. Simpson, and the World Series baseball hero, Reggie Jackson.

Most of the country's top basketball players, the capitalists of big-time sports, have black skin. Blacks dominate track and field and have given us our most revered Olympic heroes and heroines, Jesse Owens and Wilma Rudolph being prime examples.

Why do they need a special Hall of Fame? There's no Hall of Fame anywhere exclusive enough to keep them out. So, doesn't a Hall of Fame based on the color of the skin perpetuate rather than erase the NAMED TO BLACK ATHLETES HALL OF FAME — Former heavyweight boxer Floyd Patterson, right, signs autographs Tuesday as ex-Olympic hurdler Josh Culbreath, center, and Nathaniel "Sweetwater" Clifton, left, look on. Scene took place at press luncheon in New York at which it was announced the three will be among those inducted into the Black Athletes Hall of Fame at a dinner on June 28.

Stones may lose his am status

LOS ANGELES (AP) — High jumper Dwight Stones may lose his amateur status because of payments made for his appearance in the Superstars competition to a corporation that lists his mother, sister, grandmother and attorney as officers.

The question is whether the high jumper illegally evaded rules concerned with accepting money, said Ken Worthen, chairman of the registration committee of the Amateur Athletic Union's Southern Pacific Association.

Worthen, whose group met with Stones for four hours Monday, said Tuesday that the former world record holder faces loss of his amateur standing in a controversy over the $33,000 Stones earned in this year's Superstars, a multi-sports competition televised by ABC.

The money went to Stones' corporation, the Desert Oasis Track Club, which is not recognized by the AAU.

BEARING DOWN — Phillies pitcher Steve Carlton starts a delivery during Thursday night's game in Philadelphia against the St. Louis Cardinals. Carlton went all the way to win 2-1 over Cardinals pitcher John Denny. Carlton struck out six Cardinals gaining his 8th victory of the season.

Mickey Mantle better

DALLAS (AP) — Mickey Mantle's condition improved substantially during the night and the former New York Yankees superstar who is suffering from bleeding ulcers was ordered moved from the intensive care unit to a private room today.

His condition was changed from "critical" to "good."

"He is doing fine. Everyone can rest easy now," said Mantle's doctor, Frank Altick. "His condition is stable, good. He took a normal breakfast and everything's going well."

Mantle, 47, was admitted to the Brookhaven Medical Center Hospital in critical condition Wednesday after suffering from hemorrhaging ulcers.

His hospitalization was not generally known until late Thursday, but Altick said information was not released at Mantle's own request.

STILL IN TROUBLE — Detroit Tigers pitcher Mark Fidrych was back home from Florida workouts Wednesday but club officials said there was little improvement in the tendinitis that has kept him off the mound since April.

Personalities in Sports

Doak Walker says 'leave salons out of violence'

DENVER (AP) — There is no need to legislate against violence in sports, insists former Heisman Trophy winner and all-pro footballer Doak Walker.

"Leave it to the players," adds Walker. "They will police themselves. From my experience, I found that the guys who persisted on trying to get in some dirty licks never lasted very long."

Walker was a triple threat backfield star at Southern Methodist University in 1945, 1947-49, taking a year out to serve in Uncle Sam's Army, and he won college football's highest award, the Heisman Trophy, in his senior year.

From SMU, he went into the pro game with the Detroit Lions, playing six years, making all-pro and sharing in three divisional and two National Football League championships.

"At Detroit, we had what we called the 'dead dog play,'" the Doaker explained. "If one of our guys got unnecessarily roughed up, we would go back in the huddle and say, 'Dead dog 36.' The ball would go one way, the other 10 would go after number 36. Number 36 wouldn't give us much trouble after that."

Since retiring from pro football at age 28, Walker has been treated very well by life. He is a success in the construction business in Denver, married to former Olympic skier Skeeter Werner and active on both the ski slopes and the golf courses.

A member of the Cherry Hills Country Club, he served as a volunteer locker room attendant for the U.S. Open Golf Championship, won dramatically here Sunday by young Andy North.

RELAXING GOLFER — Nancy Lopez, leading Ladies Professional Golf Association money winner in her current rookie year, relaxes at an amusement park in Hershey, riding the kiddie whip with three-year-old Lori Ann Smith, a park visitor from Williamsport, Pa., Thursday. Nancy was taking a break from practice for the opening round of the Ladies Key-Stone Open, which started Friday.

Putt Choate: SMU's 'Old Man' (Part I)

Mark Putnam "Putt" Choate was a unanimous offensive and defensive all-district pick his junior and senior years while playing fullback and linebacker for Coahoma High School. He was All-West Texas, All-Abilene Area, Big Country Back of the Year and second team All-State. He was also nominated to the All-American squad.

The 21-year-old, 230-pound, 6-1 linebacker for the Southern Methodist University Mustangs was named to the UPI All-Southwest Conference team last year, and was honorable mention pick to that team his freshman and sophomore years.

For his efforts against Baylor his freshman year and Texas A&M his junior year, he was named Southwest Conference Player of the Week. He is back working in Big Spring this summer, prior to completing his senior year at SMU.

The elder statesman of the Ponies is a very intelligent and outspoken young man.

SPEAKING of Sports with Danny Reagan

"As a matter of fact, when I made second team All-State, I was really surprised."

"I hate Texas A&M, that's why I do so good against them."

"People just seem to follow me that way, and because I've been around for so long, I'm kind of the old man."

REAGAN: What was the best game you've had while at SMU, and why do you remember it as such?

CHOATE: "The best game personally was during my sophomore year against Texas A&M. I had a total of 31 tackles, which was a personal best, and as far as I know was a team record at SMU. And then this year against A&M, in three quarters of play, I had 28 tackles."

"So, I would've probably broken the record again, but I got hurt, so I had to go out in the last quarter. I hate Texas A&M, that's why I do so good against them."

REAGAN: What was the highlight of your high school career at Coahoma?

CHOATE: "I guess the highlight would have to be against Hamlin my senior year, when we had about a 20-play drive, and I carried the ball 18 times in that one drive. It was one of those drives that we had to go down and score to win, and we did."

"And this was after we had been rated number one in the state all year long, and the week before, we had just lost the district championship, so we weren't going anywhere. And I was really disappointed. Because in double AA ball, if you don't make the playoffs, you don't make All-State, and all my life I wanted to make

All-State.

"As a matter of fact, when I made second team All-State, I was really surprised."

"I had a lot of other great moments. My sophomore, junior and senior years, the first time I carried the ball, every year, I scored."

REAGAN: What is this we've heard about you placing third in the Dallas area in weight-lifting?

CHOATE: "I lift Olympic lifts in Dallas, not Universal. It's the free bar lift. And I lift in competition, more or less as a hobby. It's also good for football, I've lifted in two contests so far, and in both of them I've placed third."

REAGAN: How many pounds are we talking about here?

CHOATE: "In the clean and jerk and snatch, what you see on TV, Alexsev and all those guys, the best I've done in competition is 305 in clean and jerk, and the best snatch has been 210. That's low for me. The best I've ever done is a 335 clean and jerk, and about a 220 snatch."

"But the thing about that is both of these contests were right after football... one after spring training, so I'd been several months without lifting."

REAGAN: You've been described by the Dallas press as a team leader. Do you feel like a leader? Why? And while we're at it, how do you think the Ponies will do this year... realistically.

CHOATE: "I am, for SMU right now, the most natural team leader they have, because I sort of evolved up through their system, and because I have started since my freshman year. (Choate is a four-year starter who missed some of his freshman season due to a broken wrist).

"I'm not much of a holler-guy. I don't talk a lot on the field, but I work hard, and I work hard off the field. People just seem to follow me that way, and because I've been around for so long, I'm kind of the old man. That's why I'd say I'm the natural leader."

"Realistically for us this year... we're playing probably the toughest schedule in the nation... it may not be THE toughest, but it's one of the toughest. Because we play Florida, Ohio State, Penn State and then we go into the conference."

"We have to be vastly improved to win four games this year, (SMU won four games last year), and I think we can be if a lot of people on our team decide they want to be winners instead of losers. We'll start winning some games we should've won last year."

"We lost to North Texas, Baylor and A&M, and those were games we had won. But people didn't believe, and we lost them."

Taylor signs with Giants

LUBBOCK — Billy Taylor, a running back for Texas Tech the past four seasons and a fourth-round draft pick of the NFL's New York Giants, has come to terms with the club.

Taylor inked a four-year contract with the Giants, who also drafted Tech defensive tackle Jim Krahl.

Other Tech players drafted by the NFL were cornerback Eric Felton (New Orleans, fifth round), linebacker Mike Mock (New York Jets, eighth round) and offensive tackle Dan Irons (San Francisco, 12th round).

EYES ON THE BALL — Pittsburgh Pirate shortstop Frank Taveras eyes the ball at recent batting practice in Pittsburgh. Taveras raised his average to .287 when the Pirates beat the Chicago Cubs 2-1 Wednesday night. He's batting .393 in his last 16 games.

Wagner to serve 5-25 year term

SAN ANGELO - Robert Mark Wagner, 19, was formally sentenced in 51st District Court here Friday to five to 25 years in prison for the scissors stabbing death of an Angelo State University coed, Leandra Morales.

The body of the victim was discovered in the ASU business administration building. Under Texas law, the Martinsburg, W. Va., resident would be eligible for parole consideration after serving eight years and a few months of a 25-year term.

HEW cites two area districts

School districts in Lamesa and Midland have been cited by the Civil Rights division of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) for not being in compliance with a federal mandate concerning bilingual education.

If the problem is not corrected, the non-compliance could affect Emergency School Aid Act (ESAA) funds in the two districts.

Lamesa and Midland are two of the 42 school districts in Texas receiving ESAA funds which have been notified they are not in compliance with the mandate, identified as the Lau decision.

The Lau case stemmed from a California court case in which the Supreme Court ruled that schools must provide assistance in language study to those children who speak a different language than that used in the school.

TMTA would stop air service

Texas International Airlines has asked the Civil Aeronautics Board for permission to halt its services to Carlsbad, Clovis and Hobbs in New Mexico.

TIA has been serving the cities with Convair jets, which it is phasing out of its fleet.

Air West of Wichita, Kan., may file for authority to serve the three cities if the CAB approved the Texas International request. The airlines would use 20-passenger jets on the routes.

Next inmate executed will go out fighting

By the Associated Press
Next year an inmate in Georgia, Florida or Texas is likely to become the first person legally put to death in the United States since Gary Gilmore was executed by firing squad in Utah on Jan. 17, 1977.

But the next execution probably will involve someone who has been fighting to stay alive — unlike Gilmore, who pressed Utah authorities to carry out his sentence and became the first person executed in this country in almost a decade.

In 1967, the federal courts declared a moratorium on executions pending a review of death penalty laws by the U.S. Supreme Court, and in 1972 overturned all existing capital punishment statutes as unconstitutional.

On July 2, 1976, however, the Supreme Court upheld new death statutes in Georgia, Florida and Texas, ruling that they provided "guided discretion" about the exercise of the penalty and satisfied constitutional demands.

Opponents, searching for some momentum as the possibility of renewed executions nears, say they believe the court responded to public pressure in 1976.

"It's going to be a very close race between society waking up and the state again beginning to kill," said Millard Farmer, an attorney with the Atlanta-based Team Defense Project.

"We sometimes like to think these (court) decisions are made in a vacuum, but there's no doubt in my mind that public opinion — public fears about crime and that sort of thing — influenced the (supreme) court."

"It's a barroom mentality — a simple solution to a complicated problem. And unless we do our job better, we could very well have an execution by 1979," he said.

For some of the condemned men and women in Georgia, Florida and Texas, the appeals countdown that

John Spenkelink, a 29-year-old Californian incarcerated at the state prison in Starke, Fla., may be closer to execution than any other death row inmate in the country.

Spenkelink has exhausted all his appeals in the Florida state court system and now is awaiting a ruling by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. An adverse decision would leave him one last appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court before "the setting of a final execution date."

Assistant Florida Attorney General Ray Marky says Spenkelink is farthest along from "a procedural posture," and it is "highly probable that we will have an execution in Florida sometime next year."

Depending on how fast the courts act, an execution could be carried out as early as this December, Marky said. "But not many governors would sign an execution around Christmas. You don't give an execution as a Christmas present," he added.

Spenkelink has been under death sentence since Dec. 20, 1973. He was convicted of the Feb. 4, 1973 murder of Joseph Szmankiewicz, a prison escapee. Spenkelink claims Szmankiewicz robbed and sodomized him during a cross-country auto trip, and that Szmankiewicz was killed during a struggle.

Prosecutors claim Spenkelink shot Szmankiewicz while the victim slept in a Tallahassee, Fla., motel room. Spenkelink is white, as was his victim.

Jerry Jurek, 27, has been under a death sentence in Texas since February, 1974. He was convicted of the kidnap-slaying of a 10-year-old girl in Cuero, Tex. Jurek is white as was his victim.

Like Spenkelink, he too has exhausted all available appeals in the state court system and is before the 5th U.S. Circuit. Jurek's attorneys, however, have yet to argue that appeal.

"Given a reasonable set of circumstances, he would be the first one executed (in 1978 involved a black offender and a white victim, while 36 percent of the death sentences imposed were for the killing of whites by blacks.

The battle for public opinion, according to Bowers, may not be won until his side loses the immediate battle.

"I hope there are no executions, but I do think the reality of renewed executions would move people who right now may not be moved by the abstract threat of state execution," he said.

Groups such as the NAACP, the American Civil Liberties Union and National Council of Churches are part of a loosely knit coalition of about 60 organizations working to prevent the resumption of executions.

The National Coalition

Against the Death Penalty in New York City, N.Y., coordinates the efforts of these groups.

Less has been heard from supporters of the death penalty since the 1976 Supreme Court decision.

In Georgia, however, state Supreme Court Chief Justice H.E. Nichols not only publicly supports capital punishment, he has declared that the appeals process in Georgia is so complicated that legal delays are undercutting the deterrent effect of the death penalty.

According to Nichols, "We ought to repeal the statute or we ought to execute the judgments in a reasonable time."

State Comptroller Bullock opens sub-office in Midland

AUSTIN — State Comptroller Bob Bullock Wednesday announced that he has opened a new sub-office in Midland to serve taxpayers in Howard, Martin and Midland counties.

The new office is located at 2811 N. Big Spring, and will be open from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. The telephone number is 684-5807.

Tom McCright will be in charge of the office.

The comptroller invited area businessmen and women and other taxpayers to drop by the new office and get acquainted with the tax experts who will be serving them.

"It's a heck of a lot easier — and more pleasant — to deal face-to-face with someone you know and trust than trying to communicate with a computer in Austin," Bullock said.

"It saves everyone involved time and money to have our people nearby to provide help when it's needed, and that is exactly what sub-offices such as this in Midland allows us to do."

Fluvanna folks bit jittery

FLUVANNA — A rash of house burglaries in Fluvanna have residents there worried.

In an effort to combat the threat, citizens have started patrolling roads at night. Vandalism of property also poses a problem.

Four suspects were recently apprehended at a house south of Fluvanna and were later indicted on charges of burglary.

Those participating in the nightly patrol stay in contact with each other via CB radios.

No major highways pass through Fluvanna, so strangers are scrutinized closely.

August affair in San Antonio

Variety of folkstyles spice fest

Under the shelter of a spreading tree, an octogenarian East Texan, a Middle Eastern oud player, a fiddle-playing English professor and a lye soap maker swap stories over a cold drink.

A sunny hillside provides the seating for stages featuring ethnic folk dancers. Visitors watch, and can join performers like the Filipino "tinkling" (bamboo dance) dancers, Ukrainian cossacks or Spanish flamencos.

Visitors laze under the Brush Arbor eating Greek souflaki, Irish stew or Scandinavian Varm Korv (hot dog) and sing "Serving Jesus With a Smile" with a black gospel group. Others learn the unfamiliar sounds and syllables of a Dutch folk song.

Unstayed hands try such pioneer skills as horsehair rope spinning, log splitting, basket weaving or sheep shearing. A chicken who just might break the next world's record in long-distance flying in cheered along, and the delicacies of possum are described by the Professor of Possumology.

The medley of activity is the annual Texas Folklife Festival. The symphony created out of the diversity of Texas' people, occupations, skills and fun will be presented August 3-6 on the grounds of The Institute of Texan Cultures in downtown San Antonio.

Texas was settled by more than 30 cultural and ethnic groups who came here seeking opportunity and freedom. Although their lifestyles were altered by the frontier experience, many shared traditions and customs, creating a common bond in all Texans. The pioneer skills celebrated at the Festival reflect this — Germans, Czechs and Japanese contributed to farming methods; Mexicans and Spaniards shared their knowledge with the first Anglo cowboy.

The seventh annual Festival, like those that precede it, is a revival and celebration of customs, some passed down through generations, some only a tale read in a book. It adds up to educational entertainment where each Texan is brought closer to his heritage, and non-Texans discover aspects of the state that differ greatly from popular stereotypes.

The Festival is sponsored by The Institute of Texan Cultures, a learning and communications center that actively and dramatically presents the history and folk culture of the state. The Festival was the forerunner of the Institute's living history programs. It originated in 1968 when the Smithsonian Institution invited Institute staff to help stage a tribute to the Lone Star state at the Festival of American Folklife. The Texans returned ready to do it again for the folks back home. Since 1972, the Festival has presented its four-day, non-stop, celebration of this culture.

Western tomes available at County library

By ANNE SMART, Children's Librarian

As everyone knows, this is Rodeo Week in Big Spring. At the Howard County Library we have many interesting books about the rodeo, cowboys, and the West for children and adults.

"Big City Rodeo River," written and illustrated by Rozel Scott, is the easy-to-read story of Thryl Latting, a Black man who grew up on the West side of Chicago. As a teenager, Thryl became interested in horses. Later, he worked in a factory and competed on weekends in rodeos throughout the Midwest. Today he has a rodeo school where he teaches future cowboys how to bullride and barrel race.

"Cowboys" by Philip B. Silcott of the National Geographic Society describes the life of Texas Cowboy Mac Morrow. In simple text and color photographs, this book shows Mac herding cattle, shoeing horses, repairing the windmill, mending fences and teaching his young son Michael how to ride and rope.

"The Cowboy's Own Brand Book" by Duncan Emrich describes how to read a brand (from left to right) from top to bottom or from the inside to the outside), the different ways to write a single letter (Lazy R, Crazy R, Flying R, Running R, Rocking R, etc.), a single numeral or a figure (such as a heart, a spur, or a pipe). There are also descriptions of how rustlers alter brands and suggestions for designing your own.

"Cowboy Jamboree: Western Songs & Lore by Harold Fenton is a collection of twenty cowboy songs and the stories behind them.

Bart McDowell was raised on a ranch near Eagle Pass, Texas. In his book, "The American Cowboy in Life and Legend" published by the National Geographic Society, he traces the colorful and violent history of the cattle industry from its origin in Mexico to the mechanized present. There are numerous first hand accounts from the past and present of roundup, stampedes, and rodeos. This book is illustrated with over 100 color photographs and reproductions of great Western art.

Bob St. John is a sports writer with the Dallas Morning News. He spent a year on the professional rodeo circuit talking with the participants and the promoters in order to write "On Down the Road: The World of the Rodeo Cowboy". This book describes realistically what rodeo life is like inside and outside the arenas. Great current and retired stars and ambitious rookies describe their riding and roping experiences and secrets. This book also describes the dangerous antics of the clowns who distract the wild bulls while the riders escape. This book is illustrated with hundreds of black and white and color photographs.

"A Ranching Saga: The Story of William Electious Halsell and Ewing Halsell" by former Texas Tech history professor and Museum Director Dr. William Curry Holden, describes the lives and fortunes of W.E. Halsell and his son Ewing who started ranching in Wise County, Texas and later made their fortune ranching in the Indian Territory of Eastern Oklahoma. Eventually, they expanded their cattle empire to two other ranches in the Texas Panhandle near Muleshoe and South Texas near Eagle Pass.

There are many other books about cowboys and the West for children and adults in the Howard County Library.

PLAYIN' POSSUM — There's more to possums than you ever wanted to know. But if you do get curious, come to the Texas Folklife Festival and find out from Professor of Possumology, Spot Baird and his assistant, Dr. Potter. One specialty is baked possum, shown here with Dr. Potter, but that's not all. The Gilmer, Texas clan claims to have a group of possums on a 100 per cent peanut diet and says the peanut butter flavored possum bacon is delicious.

Willie's picnic moved up

Promoters for the upcoming Texas World Music Festival announced today that the Willie Nelson Picnic, originally scheduled for Monday, July 3, is being moved up a day to Sunday, July 2.

According to David Krebs of Contemporary Communications Corporation and Louis Messina of Pace Concerts, the change comes in response to the expressed wishes of thousands of Nelson fans and after a personal request by Nelson himself.

Advance tickets are priced at $12.50, with a $15.00 charge for those sold the day of the event. Tickets may be purchased at all Rainbow Ticket outlets. Those previously sold for the July 3 date will be honored on July 2. Further ticket information is available by calling, toll free in Texas, 800-392-3794.

Area Cinderellas journey to pageant

If you should happen to see a caravan of eight streamer-decorated automobiles making its way through Big Spring this morning, lay your curiosity to rest. It's not a presidential parade, it's only Cinderella — or rather, nine of them.

The "Cinderellas", eight from Big Spring and one from Coahoma, ranging in age from 4 to 15 and their mothers are on their way to North Texas State University at Denton where the girls will compete in the statewide Miss Cinderella Girl Pageant.

The caravan leaves at 9 a.m. this morning from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Brooks, 1755 Purdue, and will return to Big Spring Saturday following a week of pageant rehearsals, preliminaries and final set.

The preliminaries begin Monday with final staging taking place Friday night. Trophies and college scholarships will be awarded at an awards breakfast Saturday morning.

The girls qualified for the state pageant by competing in the March 4 Big Spring Miss Cinderella Girl Pageant and the May 13 District Pageant. A tenth girl, Gaylene Bruton, the talent winner of the teen division in the March 4 pageant, has since moved to Denver City, but will represent Big Spring at the state pageant.

"Including Gaylene, there are nine girls representing Big Spring and one representing Coahoma," said Nelda Colclazer, director of the locally held pageants and member of the Cactus Chapter of the American Business Women's Association, sponsor of the pageant system. "That's the most girls this area has ever sent to the state competition. And we've got an especially good group of girls this year."

ABWA sponsors the pageant as part of its goal of educating America's young women. Money is raised through ABWA chapters for scholarships, some of which are presented as prizes to the pageant winners. Larger scholarships will be awarded to state winners who go on to win the International Miss Cinderella Girl Pageant which will be held in a special Cinderella Girl Pageant Castle in Baton Rouge, La., this fall.

Competing in the Cinderella Tot division of the state pageant are District Cinderella Tot Stacey Mauldin, 4, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Russ Mauldin; Big Spring Cinderella Tot Kimberly Gee, 5, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bobby Gee, and District Cinderella Tot second alternate Sonya Lindsey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lindsey. Sonya is a 1977 Cinderella Tot.

Last year's Miss Miniature Miss, Ginger Brooks, who reclaimed her title in this year's district pageant will also compete in Denton. Ginger is the 8-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Brooks. Competing with her is Big Spring Cinderella Miss talent winner and first alternate of the district competition Terri Miears, 12, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D.J. Miears. Terri was also voted Miss Congeniality in the district competition.

Competing in the Cinderella Miss division in Denton is Ginger's sister, Tymi Brooks, who was named Cinderella Miss in 1977 and again this year in the district pageant. Competing with her is Big Spring Cinderella Miss Diane Boothe, 11, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Boothe.

The teen competition includes District Cinderella Teen Rhonda Griffin, 15, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stan Griffin of Coahoma; Big Spring Cinderella Teen Felicia Ford, 13, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. V.R.

WHO PLANS TO WIN? — All of these girls, who leave for the statewide Miss Cinderella Girl Pageant in Denton this morning, plan to win. If not a title, then a new friend. The girls, from left to right, are Felicia Ford, Rhonda Griffin, Diane Boothe, Terry Miears, Tymi Brooks, Ginger Brooks, Kimberly Gee, Sonya Dunbar, and Cinderella Teen talent winner Gaylene Bruton, 15, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Bruton of Denver City.

The girls, their mothers and Ms. Colclazer attended a Good Luck Party June 17 at the home of Mrs. Preston Dunbar. The party was an informal get-together at which cake and punch were served. Afterwards, the girls were treated to a swim at the home of Mrs. Bobby Gee.

According to one contestant, Felicia Ford, all of the girls are very excited. And so are the mothers. The state pageant is a new experience for all with the exception of Sonya Lindsey and Tymi and Ginger Brooks, and an experience which called for brand new wardrobes.

"We're all taking souvenirs to exchange with the new friends we make there," said Miss Ford. The items include emory boards, hairbrushes, Bible markers, lucky pennies and pictures, all with the girl's name and address printed on them. The girls are looking forward to making some good friends from the 180 girls from other parts of Texas who will compete with them in the pageant.

"Friends and fellowship are the biggest prizes in this pageant," one of the mothers said. "It's not a beauty pageant and there are never any losers. Each girl walks away with an experience she'll never forget and that's the best prize of all."

"It's a unique pageant," said another mother, "because it begins and ends with prayer. Have you ever heard of a pageant like that before? It's a Christian pageant. There are no swimsuit competitions and the girls aren't judged on beauty. There aren't even any shorts allowed in the teen division."

Lindsey and Stacey Mauldin. Another girl, Gaylene Bruton, who recently moved to Denver City, will join the girls at the pageant where she'll represent Big Spring.

"What the judges will really be looking for is an all American girl.

Interviews with the judges count for a majority of each girl's score," explained a mother.

ONCE UPON A TIME — Nelda Colclazer, director of the Big Spring and District Cinderella Girl Pageants which qualified eleven area girls who will compete in Denton this week, tells some of the younger contestants the story of the Cinderella Girl Pageant. The little girls, from left to right, are Stacey Mauldin, Kimberly Gee and Sonya Lindsey.

DAUGHTER KNOWS BEST — Daughter Terry Himes, left, began riding when she was 10 and has competed in national rodeo finals three times. Somewhere along the line, the sport began looking interesting to her mother, Thy Lewis, right. Thy, who didn't even start riding until Terry was grown up, has also made it to the finals.

Rodeo women say it adds to family life

A rodeo is like a golf tournament. At least, that's the way barrel racer Wanda Driver sees it.

"Like golf, you have to really like the sport to do it," she said. "It takes at least an hour of practice every day, year around, if you really want to be good at it. You have to want to do it."

Wanda is one of 38 barrel racers, all women, who were featured at last week's rodeo. She's the wife of calf-roper Skipper Driver and the mother of a four-year-old son, Dean.

The three of them have spent a lot of time on the road since January, riding in a different rodeo every weekend. According to Wanda, however, the traveling doesn't interfere with family life. If anything, it's added to it.

"We do it together and that's what important," she said. "The best part about this sport is the people you meet and the places you see. We enjoy that. Wherever we go, we've got friends. It's a good family sport."

When Dean starts school, the Drivers plan to slow down a bit, but they won't stop entirely. Dean, who started riding a couple of months ago, has some plans of his own as far as rodeos go. "A rodeo judge" was his firm answer to "What do you want to be when you grown up?"

Wanda, who's been riding since she was 2½ and barrel racing since age 10, is the spokeswoman for the Texoma Circuit of the Girls' Rodeo Association and serves as the secretary of the Lonestar Chapter of G.R.A. Her husband, an insurance man, and she work together in their arena at home, training and selling arena horses.

"I haven't made it to the nationals yet, but I'm hoping," she said. "You have to be willing to travel 12 months a year to make it. The competition is pretty stiff now." She said they'll continue their rodeo weekends until rodeo season ends, around October, and then they'll start up again in January.

Two of Wanda's friends and barrel racing competitors, Thy Lewis and Terry Himes, have made it to the national finals. Terry has made it three times and her mother, Thy, has been once.

"Thy is a miracle lady," Wanda said. "She didn't even start riding horses until her daughter was grown up. Now she's barrel racing with the best of them."

"When Terry was about 10, she wanted a pony," Thy said. "My husband, Jack, doesn't ride, and I never did either. But we got Terry her pony. Terry always had a lot of good horses around so, after she grew up, one day, I just decided to try it."

And it's a good thing she did try it, because according to Wanda, she was made for it.

"She learned fast and she's good at it. She hasn't been riding very long and yet she's already competed in the national finals at Oklahoma City," Wanda said.

While rodeos involve all three of the Drivers' in Thy's family, with the exception of her daughter and son-in-law, she's the only one who rides in them.

"My son, Jackie, is more interested in motorcycles than horses and my husband doesn't participate in them."

But that hasn't stopped Thy from doing her share of traveling to be in weekend rodeos over the past few years. This year, she says, she's been staying closer to home.

Meanwhile, her daughter Terry, pursues the sport with her husband, Jack, who rides bulls and horses bareback.

"It's more than a sport to us," she said. "It's a life."

She jokingly referred to herself as "retired" because she doesn't travel as much as she used to. Part of the reason is that she has a school-age daughter, seven-year-old Elana.

She did, however, come out of "retirement" long enough to barrel race Friday night with mother Thy. Wanda competed in the barrel racing Thursday night.

Rodeos, with all of the time and travel that are involved, would appear to create a hardship on the families who follow them. But that's not so, according to Wanda, Thy and Terry. Rodeos add yet another dimension to family life.

To Wanda, rodeos are a good family sport. To Thy, rodeos are a rewarding hobby. And to Terry, rodeos are another way of living.

"Our involvement in rodeos doesn't detract from family life," Terry explained. "It is our family life."

TUNING UP TALENT — From left, Terry Miears and Diane Boothe practice talent presentations accompanied by Felicia Ford at the piano. In addition to talent, these girls will be judged on sportswear, party dresses, poise and personality at the Denton competition between Texas Cinderellas. There will also be a modeling talent competition for those who want to enter.

GOOD FAMILY SPORT — That's what rodeos are to Skipper and Wanda Driver and it looks like four-year-old Dean, who is learning how to ride and anticipating a career as a rodeo judge, will soon be in on the act. Wanda, shown here with Dean, is a barrel racer while her husband ropes calves. Together, they've traveled to a different rodeo every weekend since January.

According to Ms. Colclazer, who plans to attend the finals, the girls will be judged by about eight judges in each division on sportswear, party dresses, talent, poise and personality.

"And something new has been added to the pageant this year," she said. "There will be an optional modeling talent competition from which the International Modeling Talent Association will be looking for modeling talent."

The girls are being sponsored in the pageant by First Federal Savings and Loan, First National Bank, Webb Credit Union, Mort Denton Pharmacy, O.D. O'Daniel Trucking, Margaret's, Big Spring Hardware, Gibson's Discount Center, Morris Robertson Body Shop and the Good Housekeeping Shop. Other local businesses are helping the girls with trip expenses.

So, off they go in a caravan of "coaches" to compete in a pageant for which they've been preparing for over two months. And just like in the fairy tale, when it's all over with, Cinderella will come out a winner. All ten of them.

WHERE'S THE FAIRY GOD MOTHER? — Unlike in the fairy tale, these Cinderellas have to take care of their own coach. Miss Cinderella Tenna Felicia Ford, left, and Rhonda Griffin prepare streamers to decorate the eight-car caravan which will transport the girls and their mothers to the state pageant in Denton. Felicia is one of 10 girls who will represent Big Spring and Rhonda will represent Coahoma.

ALMOST PACKED — Theda Brooks helps her daughters, Tymi 9, and Ginger, 7, pack their new wardrobes and some old favorites for the week-long Miss Cinderella Girl Pageant. The girls were named Miss Cinderella Miss and Miniature Miss last year and again this year at a locally-heled pageant.

Wayne, Kevin Crenwelge cross paths to Academy

By CAROL HART

When he begins a four-year stint with the United States Air Force Academy tomorrow, Kevin Crenwelge will be in for "an equivalent amount of shock, just different from what I went through," according to his brother, Wayne, a 1978 graduate of the Academy.

Wayne entered the academy without having ever visited the campus. "Kevin has been to the Academy to visit. I didn't even know what it looked like. Kevin has been in the rooms and talked to people. He knows how the system works."

Wayne attended the Colorado Springs, Colo., academy during a period of transition on the military campus. When he entered the academy as a freshman, or "doolie", no women were allowed in the programs offered. The policy changed while Wayne was at the academy, though. He assisted in the training of women in squadrons at the Academy during his last years there.

He found that "non-acceptance of women has faded. The academy is already almost integrated. Everyone knows what is going on now. Kevin's class will be the third with girls. When the 1979 class leaves, there will be no classes without girls."

Wayne has seen a "more professional-type attitude" take place at the Academy in his years there. Physical punishments are more a thing of the past, he said. "They got rid of hazing."

The hardest transition for "doolies" is a change from civilian life to military life. Military life is strictly ordered, and "doolies" have very little time to themselves.

"Wayne has given me an insight into the Academy," Kevin said. "It will be pretty rough, but I have an idea of what's going on."

Although Kevin may be better informed about Academy policies, Wayne advised that "I don't want him to be too cocky. That makes upperclassmen mad. Freshmen are there to learn. I don't want him to build up his ego. He needs to play dumb."

Kevin acknowledged that his ego was not inflated. He said he feels that the advantage of having a brother who went through the Academy will "keep me a little ahead."

Attending the Air Force Academy is not a spur of the moment decision, the Crenwelges said.

"Preparation takes years," Wayne said. "Kevin knew he wanted to go to the Academy since he was a freshman. You've got to prepare yourself for it."

Kevin added "You've got to be the one that wants to go, not your parents."

Kevin said that Academy hopefuls must "get active in all aspects. Academy appointments are given to good students who are also active outside the classroom."

The Crenwelge's youngest brother, Bret, an eighth grader, is already preparing for the Academy. "He is more active now than when we were his age," his brothers said. "The further back you start preparing for the Academy, the better chance you have of being accepted."

Kevin and Wayne are the sons of Lt. Col. (ret.) and Mrs. Joe Crenwelge.

Wayne said "I'm glad I'm a graduate." He said that parts of the Academy were disillusioning, but that he would repeat the experience if he had it to do over again.

Wayne will report to Mather Air Force Base in Sacramento, Calif., for navigator's school July 17. The program will last 33 weeks.

About entering the Academy, Kevin said "I'm nervous. There is so much I want to do (before I go) and no time to do it. It's scary, I don't know anybody. I know I'll get homesick. It's a big milestone."

Big Springers on TSTI roll

SWEETWATER — Students from Big Spring and Coahoma have been named to the spring quarter honor roll on the Sweetwater campus of Texas State Technical Institute (TSTI).

Named to the President's Honor Roll was James L. Arnold of Big Spring. Selected on the Vice President's Honor Roll were Joel B. Petty of Big Spring and Lorin P. O'Daniel of Coahoma.

O'Daniel has completed the course of training in Auto Body Repairman at TSTI Sweetwater.

The school is a state-supported technical-vocational training institution.

Colleges mark anniversary of first woman graduate

PADUA, Italy (AP) — Three hundred years ago today, Elena Cornaro stood before professors of Padua University in the city's cathedral and was acclaimed master and doctor of philosophy.

She was the first woman in the world to be graduated from a university, and prelates and scholars traveled to the lagoon city to talk to the 32-year-old Venetian noblewoman who could speak and write in several languages and could engage in learned conversations in philosophy, theology, mathematics and astronomy.

She caused a sensation during her life, but after her death at age 38 her name lapsed into virtual oblivion.

"I believe there would have been no celebrations in Italy if the Americans hadn't rekindled interest," says the Rev. Ludovico Maschietto, a Benedictine monk and scholar who is completing five years of research for a new biography of Miss Cornaro.

Interest in Miss Cornaro was renewed when American women made her a symbol of female emancipation. With their zest and money, Americans prodded research by the Institute for History of Padua University that has established her primacy.

Now 15 U.S. colleges and universities plan to mark the June 25, 1978, occasion, and several groups of Americans are planning to attend week-long celebrations in Padua Sept. 3-9.

Although Miss Cornaro set precedent three centuries ago, it wasn't until 1967 that the last all-male bastion of Italian universities fell when Rome's Jesuit-run Pontifical Gregorian University admitted women to studies.

When Miss Cornaro's father, Giambattista, asked Cardinal Gregorio Barbarigo, bishop of Padua and chancellor of the university, to let his daughter graduate, the churchman was amazed anyone would even think of it. Even worse, the woman had asked to graduate in theology.

"A woman graduate in theology; this will never be because we would be held up to the mockery of the world," the cardinal, who after his death was canonized a saint, wrote in a letter. "I talked about it with a French cardinal and he broke out in laughter."

But Elena's father, one of the wealthiest men in Venice and a ranking city official, became so insistent that the cardinal finally settled for philosophy.

Noblemen and women, students and professors from many cities traveled to Padua to attend the graduation. The crowd was so large that the ceremony was moved from the usual public hall to the cathedral — for the first and only time.

Auxiliary meets for tea

Mrs. Jim Holmes entertained the members of the Downtown Lions Auxiliary at an informal tea at her home, 706 West 17th, on June 21.

Mrs. C.L. Huibregtse of Premont attended as a guest.

The group noted plans for Ladies Night at the installation of officers of the Downtown Lions Club. The event begins at 7 p.m., June 27, at Howard College.

The next meeting of the auxiliary will be at 7:30 p.m., July 29, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Quigley. Husbands will be guests for homemade ice cream.

Women spared from program

After including women in their space program as cosmonauts, the Russians have decided that the job is too dangerous for women and have curtailed their female training program. In explanation, a woman cosmonaut said, "We love our women very much and spare them as much as possible." — from the Virginia Slims Book of Days.

Dear Abby

Do Women Cause Male Impotence?

DEAR ABBY: I read that there is a growing problem of male impotence in America, and no one seems to have the answer. I'm a male, and a fellow I work with may have put his finger on the reason. He says he is turned off by women in slacks, boots and mannish haircuts.

I agree with him. Nothing turns me on like a woman with long, soft, fragrant hair and a frilly, feminine dress.

Clothes make the woman, too. If more men are becoming impotent, it just might be that the mannish look of some women is the cause.

LOVES LAVENDER AND LACE

DEAR LOVES: If male impotence seems to be on the rise, it could be because (a) it has never before been as thoroughly recorded, or (b) male sexuality suffers from the revved up pace and intensified pressures of modern life. Plenty of men are panting over women in long pants and short haircuts.

DEAR ABBY: I am 24, single and have been dating the same man for two years. Neither of us has dated anyone else since we met.

About a year ago, friends and relatives (especially aunts) began asking us (separately, of course), "When are you two going to get married?"

I must admit that when the questions first started I felt as if I had to come up with some kind of answer in order to satisfy people's curiosity. I think we'll eventually marry, but I want to live on my own awhile and not go directly from my parents' home to living with another person. My boyfriend feels the same way, and we're both happy with things as they are, but we can't seem to get this across to some people.

Some friends of mine recently broke up because of repeated questioning from her parents. He wasn't ready for marriage, and she started to pressure him to set a date.

I wish well-meaning friends would leave the decision and timing up to the people involved. Thanks for letting me air my gripe. Is there anything I can say to stop these questions and still be polite?

NOT YET

DEAR NOT: You can't stop insensitive and nosy people from asking questions that are none of their business unless you put it just that way. An appropriate reply would be, "When we decide, we'll let you know."

DEAR ABBY: Through a very reliable source, we found out that our son has been peeping into various neighbors' windows. He is an average teen-age boy, brought up in a respectable home. We have no idea why he does this.

Because of the humiliation that would be brought upon the family, we do not wish to consult a doctor. Can you help us?

VERY SMALL TOWN

DEAR VERY: Yes, I can "help" you by assuring you that you would suffer no "humiliation" whatsoever by consulting a doctor.

If you son had a "kink" in his back, you'd seek medical advice in order to correct it, wouldn't you? So why, when he has an obvious "kink" in his thinking, do you choose to ignore it?

Window peeping is usually a symptom of a deeper emotional problem and should be neither hushed up nor ignored. You owe it to your son (and to society) to get him to a doctor.

Do you wish you had more friends? For the secret of popularity, get Abby's new booklet: "How To Be Popular; You're Never Too Young or Too Old." Send $1 with a long, self-addressed, stamped (24 cents) envelope to Abby, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

Handshaking ranks first

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Four minutes is all the time it takes for people to form their first impressions of you, according to Seventeen Magazine.

A recent University of Arizona experiment showed that in these initial minutes, people decide if they want to know someone in a friendly or romantic way; if he or she is intelligent; and whether or not they want to continue talking.

Clothes, fingernails, mannerisms and openness all help determine these judgments. But one of the biggest factors is whether — and how — we shake hands.

Business women meet in Tumbleweed room

The Cactus Chapter of the American Business Women's Association met at the Howard College Tumbleweed Room on June 19 for an installation of new officers. Presiding was Ruth Manuel.

Carol F. de Grand of Hamden, Conn., attended as a guest.

Officers for 1978-79 include Frances Swann, president; Margaret Wiles, vice president; Neida Colclazer, corresponding secretary; Vonna Lee Davis, recording secretary, and Essie Jackson, treasurer.

The guest speaker for the evening was Nancy Dickens, owner and manager of Magic Mirror Salon. Her topic was "Physical Fitness. Are We in Shape?"

According to Ms. Dickens, Americans lead such a sedentary life that 70 per cent are overweight and 80 per cent are not physically fit. Physical fitness, she explained, is when the body is at its peak of efficiency.

A person does not inherit fat, she said. It is acquired through eating habits learned beginning with infancy. In mature adults, mental factors largely determine the amount of food one eats. People overeat out of boredom and frustration.

She warned the chapter members to avoid "crash diets" and to adjust their eating habits to achieve their own personal physical fitness.

"You owe it to your family, your employer and your country to stay healthy. And to stay healthy, you must stay in shape," she said.

The vocational speaker was Velma Graham who has retired from office work and now enjoys the role of homemaker.

The chapter voted to give four college scholarships for the coming school year.

Oklahoma City church site of June ceremony

Odas James Williams and Shirley Kay Hall exchanged wedding vows June 15 in the Capitol Hill Assembly of God, Oklahoma City, Okla., with the Rev. Paul Jackson officiating.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Mike Hall, Oklahoma City, and Mrs. Annazine Williams, Norman, Okla.

The couple stood before an altar decorated with three brass arched candelabra flanked by two large arrangements of white gladiolus, light blue poms accented with white satin bows, and a pair of cathedral-style candelabra. A profile kneeling bench and a brass unity candle completed the altar decorations.

Ginger VanHorn was organist. Kristie and Tim Haynes, Oklahoma City, were vocalists.

The bride wore a gown of Dacron polyester with net and tulle overlays. It featured an empire waist and a madrin collar. The Alencon lace made up the front and back bodice. Seed pearls finished out the scalloped edges. Sheer sleeves with the lace around the bottom came to a point, with pearls accenting it. Alencon lace was also featured about the ruffle around the bottom of the gown. The A-line skirt fell into a chapel-length train. Alencon lace made up the cap for her finger-tipped veil. Seed pearls were featured on her cap, with the Alencon lace edging the veil.

The bride carried a cascade of white roses tipped in blue, white daisies, baby's breath, tied with satin streamers on a white Bible.

Karla Kneopfil, Norman, Okla., was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Keith Zinke, Oklahoma City, and Melissa Holland, also of Oklahoma City.

Rick Forgas was best man. Groomsmen were Keith Zinke, Oklahoma City, and Bruce Hall, Norman, Okla. Ushers were Michael Hall, brother of the bride, Oklahoma City, and Tim Haynes and Doug Haynes, Oklahoma City.

Carrie Hohmann, Oklahoma City, was flower girl. Ring bearer was Jason Crawley, Oklahoma City.

Following a wedding trip to Lake Murray, Ardmore, Okla., the couple will reside in Oklahoma City.

MRS. ODAS JAMES WILLIAMS

The bride attended Moore High School in Norman, Okla. She will be attending the University of Oklahoma and working as a bookkeeper and secretary.

The bridegroom graduated from Big Spring High School and attended Howard College, Oscar Rose Junior College and Houston University. He is employed at the Veteran's Administration Hospital in Oklahoma City.

A reception honoring the couple was held in the fellowship hall. Servers were Mrs. Michael Hall, Mrs. Tony Smith, and Laura Wright. A three-tiered wedding cake trimmed in blue with white doves accented the bride's table. Silver candelabra with blue and white daisies centered the table, as did a silver punch bowl.

Laura Wright, Houston, presided at the registry.

'Too beautiful' has enviable problem

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D. Copley News Service

Dr. Wallace: I'm 17 and I've got a weird problem. I'm a varsity song leader at my high school and my friends tell me that I could get any girl that I wanted. I'm very friendly but I can't seem to get many dates and those I do get, the boys seem to be in shock because I do have a good shape and people say I'm beautiful. My moral standard is high, but the boys never realize it because they never ask me out again, let alone get fresh. What can I do?

Too Beautiful, Anaheim, Calif.

Dear Beautiful: You have a problem that many girls would like to have. But yes, surveys show that boys and men are actually "afraid" to date extremely beautiful women, with the theory being that the male feels he is not worthy of such beauty.

On your next date, make sure you do not talk about yourself and above everything else, don't look at another guy.

I'll probably get a thousand letters from boys wanting to know your address.

Dr. Wallace: I have an 11-year-old brother who is starting to smoke pot and he can get all he wants because he buys the stuff from my older brother. I've talked to him but he won't listen to me. Whenever possible, he will smoke it.

Please print my letter because I don't know what to do.

Janice, Goshen, Ind.

Dear Janice: Your older brother needs to be brought down about two pegs. Tell your parents what is taking place. Don't think of yourself as a "fink." You owe it to your 11-year-old brother!

parents refuse to allow me to attend. What can I do? Kevin, Spokane, Wash.

Dear Kevin: Your problem reminds me of a similar problem I had when I was in seventh grade. My mother allowed me to take swimming lessons but wouldn't let me go to the beach (Gary, Ind. — Lake Michigan) after my lessons ended.

Why not have a member of the church call your parents and intercede on your behalf. This usually works. Maybe your parents might be enticed into being chaperones.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Imagine tender filet mignon at $1.88 a pound, New York steaks at $1.56 a pound and juicy, ripe tomatoes at 15 to 20 cents a pound.

Bargains like these attract thousands of Americans, squeezed by high taxes and inflation, to Mexican border towns that have a devalued peso, government price ceilings and no sales taxes.

In contrast to the low prices commonly available in Mexico, trimmed filet mignon at one market in the La Jolla section of San Diego was $6.45 a pound Tuesday and New York steaks were $5.49 a pound.

Tomatoes were selling Tuesday in San Diego for about 79 cents per pound.

Fruits, vegetables, spices, beef, lamb and other household staples often sell in the Mexican markets for less than half of what they do in San Diego, just across the border. And most of the items can be brought back into the United States.

It is also legal to purchase and bring back across the border many prescription drugs filled at Tijuana pharmacies for far lower prices than in the United States.

Although the Mexican government's price ceilings on 18 basic food and household items are frequently violated, they hold down prices.

Tijuana is the commercial hub of a duty-free zone in Mexico along the California border. Last year U.S. Customs officials in San Diego recorded 8.5 million automobile crossings and five million pedestrian crossings.

Customs law entitles each American to import up to $100 of merchandise a month from Mexico. But in practice, inspectors often overlook the personal exemption.

"Legally, we could require them to sign a declaration each time they bring something in," said Manny Nagera, director for the U.S. Customs Service at the San Ysidro crossing in San Diego. "But that obviously is impractical. You can imagine the jam-up it would create at the border."
