Funds needed to improve sewer plant, Nagel says

City bond election looms

By JAMES WERRELL
A public forum has been scheduled for 7:30 p.m., July 20, to discuss the priorities for a city bond election.

The need for the forum was stressed by Big Spring City Council members at today's regular meeting. Mayor Wade Choate referred specifically to funds needed to provide the city's share of a $3.8 million Economic Development Administration (EDA) Title Nine Project.

"The city's 1978-79 budget is balanced and it has been cut extensively. There will be no tax increase, but there is no surplus for matching funds for this grant," he said. "A bond election may be the only alternative."

The total project has been estimated to cost $3,815,000 with the city's share totaling $953,750. Of this, $1,750,000 has been earmarked for improvements to the local sewer plant at a cost of $437,500 to the city.

"We have to really move on the sewer plant. If those improvements are not made, the Water Quality Board can do one of three things: nothing, which is unlikely; they can allow no new customers and detach some of our current customers; or they can fine us $1,000 a day until the improvements are made," said Harry Nagel, city manager.

The public forum will welcome suggestions from any citizen on how monies from a bond election should be spent by the city.

"We have had many requests for street improvements in the city. This could come up for evaluation at the forum. We want input about funding for garbage collection, parks and recreation, city beautification, the police department and the fire department. Then the people can vote on it," said Choate.

The forum will be held 7:30 p.m., July 20, in the Dora Roberts Community Center.

In a polite, but obviously tense, encounter, R.E. McClure, owner and manager of Trans Regional Airlines, confronted the council and Airport Manager Harry Spannaus about airport regulations. McClure leveled a variety of complaints dealing with supposed lack of runways airport mapping, regulations that he said are detrimental to his business and security operations at the airport.

McClure wrote a letter outlining these complaints which was printed in Friday's Herald.

McClure referred to two incidents both of which resulted in confrontations between McClure and airport personnel. In the first, McClure was stopped by a member of the Airport Security Patrol while the airline manager drove off at night from the flight line.

"This was nothing but harassment. Can I expect everyone in every car to be stopped by the security police as they leave my office? We are sometimes there until 10 o'clock at night, and this just can't be," said McClure.

"I have instructed my security people to patrol the flight line at night, and to consider any private vehicle in darkness to be suspicious," replied Spannaus. "Mr. McClure has lost a plane, and another citizen has lost a plane out there. The only way to supply security without a fence around the airport is the way we are doing it," he added.

In another complaint, McClure accused Spannaus and the city of setting up regulations that are detrimental to agricultural aircraft such as crop-dusters. The type of plane, a "tail dragger," used commonly for agricultural use is more difficult to land than other aircraft, according to both McClure and Spannaus.

"In an emergency situation, the runway situation is inadequate for a tail-dragger plane. I was forced to land on a taxiway," said McClure.

"I am not convinced that proper emergency procedure was followed in that situation, and what you did was illegal and against safe flying regulations," said Spannaus.

"How many hours of tail-dragger flying time have you had?" asked McClure.

"Not many, and I find that irrelevant. What you did was illegal," replied Spannaus.

"This is unfair, and I will not put up with it. Like the other day when I was rudely dealt with; I don't know how the military is supposed to act in that type of situation, but I know what civilians do," said McClure.

"I can say for the city council that the regulations at the airport will be followed. Either you will do that, Mr. McClure, or you will get out. If you have any other complaints, address them to the Aviation Committee," said Mayor Choate.

"Well, I guess I will," said McClure. Spannaus later addressed the council to answer McClure's charges which appeared in the Herald's "Mailbag" section. McClure had left the council chambers by this time.

"I have no desire to get into a contest with Mr. McClure in the local paper. But since this letter was published, I feel I should respond to the council. This letter should be submitted for the fiction section of the public library," began Spannaus.

He then denied each of McClure's accusations made in the letter.

"When McClure is in the air, he is under the jurisdiction of the Federal Aviation Administration. When he is on the ground, he is under the jurisdiction of the city, just as you and I are," the airport manager later explained.

In other business, council members: —Accepted the high bid of $550 from China Long for a three-room residence owned by the city.

—Asked that a new ordinance regarding cemetery rules be drawn up for consideration at the next regular meeting.

—Accepted minutes of meetings of the Big Spring Steering Committee and the Detoxification Steering Committee.

Explosion kills 100

TARRAGONA, Spain (AP) — An explosion ripped through a campsite near Tarragona on Spain's Mediterranean coast today and police said it killed nearly 100 persons and injured more than 150.

The police said the victims included entire families. Many were believed to be French.

Two men's personal property valuations slashed $150,000

By BOB BURTON
Convened as the final county Board of Equalization for this fiscal year, Howard County commissioners reduced two local businessmen's personal property valuations by $150,000 Monday.

John Wilson, who appeared as an accountant representing Broughton Truck and Implement, requested that Broughton's total figure of $226,850 be reduced by half. Wilson pointed out that Broughton's figure for inventory was four times the figures for other dealers, and maintained that his inventory for this year was comparable to last year's.

Howard County Tax Appraiser Earl Dean told the board that he had used the 1977 figure for Broughton's in-town operation, but that the truck dealer had another lot outside the city limits. Dean said he had examined the property, and added $100,000 to the valuation for the inventory on that property.

Questioned about whether he had conducted a personal inventory at each of the other tractor and implement dealers in the city, Dean replied that he did not. In two cases, the figure used was brought forward from last year after a cursory check on new inventory, and in one case, a drive-by inventory was performed.

"We've had appraisers in Howard County who do more than drive by," remarked Commissioner Jack Buchanan, who voted with the rest of the board to drop the additional $100,000 from Broughton's total, leaving him with a $126,951 valuation.

"It's physically impossible to do them all at once," replied Dean. "A personal property man would pay for himself in Howard County with what he could evaluate."

"He had that much stuff north of town," the appraiser continued. "He (Broughton) knows it, you (Wilson) know it, and I know it. For the sake of fairness I'm willing to go along with it this time, but I'll go along no more."

Clyde McMahon Sr., appearing for McMahon Concrete, also protested his personal property evaluation. The figure on the plant had risen from $128,000 to $200,000 since last year.

"$128,000 won't touch what he has out there, and he knows that," Dean told the board.

"But a 56 per cent increase is pretty hefty to get at one time," McMahon replied.

The board voted unanimously to reduce the valuation to $150,000.

"We realize that not all the personal property is on 100 per cent," added Buchanan after the vote, "but it is a good goal to shoot at."

"One appraiser we had here had two men, and he was only getting about 50 per cent of the personal property," added Commissioner Bill Crooker.

In other action as a Board of Equalization, the commissioners heard Tax Assessor-Collector Zirah Bednar tell of a case of delinquent taxes going back 22 years.

According to Mrs. Bednar, the city originally owned the east-west and north-south alleys in the Farview Heights Addition of Big Spring. But in 1956, city attorney Walter Morrison drew up an ordinance returning the east-west alleys to their original property.

Inadvertently, the 10-foot additions were never picked up on some property, and were picked up on others. In all, according to Mrs. Bednar, 33 residents are paying on the additions and 46 are not. Total taxes for the city, county, and school on the property amounted to $4.80 last year.

The Board asked her to pick up the property in the coming year, but did not request that she try to collect the delinquent taxes going back 22 years.

In other action, the commissioners accepted a bid from Permian Electric for a base and mobile radio station. The bid for the base station totaled $1,576.90, while the mobile unit was bid at $1,087.10. Another bid from Motorola was judged incomplete because it did not include figures on the mobile unit. The base unit was bid at $1,649.55.

The court also discussed hangar arrangements at the county airport with attorney Dick Minstead representing D.O. Dorland Company, but no action was taken.

Commissioners approved a request to the Board of County and District Road Indebtedness of Texas for $27,933.32 to improve and construct Howard County lateral roads.

The court's next meeting is scheduled for July 24.

Bandit shoots hardware store employee, barricades woman

By MARJ CARPENTER

A male employee was shot in the shoulder and a woman employee barricaded inside a restroom while a safe was burglarized at Big Spring Hardware shortly after 8 p.m. Monday.

Michael Peszko, 24, was shot once in the right shoulder with a small caliber pistol and Mrs. LaVerne Rogers, bookkeeper, was trapped inside the restroom when the door was tied from the outside.

Both of the employees were working late, with Mrs. Rogers checking invoices and Peszko downstairs stocking the shelves.

The safe was open, since Mrs. Rogers was involved in book work, and inventory this morning by the bookkeeping department showed $794.61 missing. In the apparent hurry, one money bag and some packages of dollar bills behind them were left in one cubbyhole in the safe.

Peszko is in Malone-Hogan Hospital where the bullet was to be removed this morning. He is in good condition. Lt. Claude Morris said tests were also to be made on the gunshot victim's shirt to determine the distance from which the bullet was fired.

Peszko told officers he caught a brief glimpse of a silhouette of a person near the lawnmowers when the shot was fired. The store was lighted at the time of the shooting. However, Peszko told officers, "It happened so fast. I didn't really see the person that fired the shot."

Mrs. Rogers said that she glanced at the clock shortly after 8 p.m. when Peszko called up and asked her, "Do you want another Coke?"

"I decided at that point to go to the restroom and stay and work a little longer," she recalled. She went downstairs to pick up the invoice board and decided to go to the restroom.

"While in there, I heard some footsteps and thought it was Mike. Then I heard something brushing against the restroom door. I kept hearing it and knew something was wrong," Mrs. Rogers related.

"There were a thousand things going through my mind. I stood there listening and kept hearing the brushing sound. I found out later, somebody had gotten a piece of new rope there in the store and tied the restroom door shut," she continued.

Mrs. Rogers said she stood there quietly, thinking and finally decided that she had to get up her courage, open the restroom door and face whatever was out there. She then pulled on the door and found that it was bound.

"I could pull it open a little ways and no further," she related. "I tugged and I tugged and I tugged and I tugged until my hands were nearly bleeding," she added.

"I don't recall hearing a shot but as I tugged back I heard some type of noise. I'm used to shooting high-powered rifles so I may not have recognized it as a shot," she continued.

She recalled "I was calm. I'm surprised at how calm I was. I finally decided my hollering for Mike was getting no answers and that I might need to pretend to be hysterical. At that point, I began to fake a whimper and began to plead to get out."

She said Mike untied the door and stood there. "He was bleeding, and I asked, 'What's going on out here?' He answered that he thought we had been robbed."

Mrs. Rogers said she told her fellow employee, "Let's get out of here." They went out the front door. She started running up the street and when she saw Mr. and Mrs. Jasper Adkins leaving a local furniture store, she solicited their aid.

Police were called to the scene. The safe was open, like Mrs. Rogers had left it and some of the books were apparently knocked on the floor in haste. Everything else in the store was in order.

Det. Tony Lujan was assigned the investigation and will be assisted by Eddie Almond, Texas Ranger, who was at the scene this morning.

Chief Stanley Bogard, Lt. Morris, and several police officers arrived at the hardware store Monday night for the investigation.

Stacy reservoir application hearing under way in Austin

AUSTIN — A hearing to consider the application of the Colorado River Municipal Water District to impound a third reservoir near Stacy, twice postponed, got under way before the Texas Water Commission in Austin this morning.

Civic leaders from Austin and Highland Lakes are lined up in opposition of the application, which they say would decrease the water at the lower basin of the Colorado River.

CRMW officials, backed by endorsements from civic leaders all over West Texas, say that a broad expanse of West Texas will stagnate by the year 2000 if water supplies are not increased.

CRMW officials are disputing claims that such a dam would adversely affect the rights of downstream claimants.

Austin has supplied the news media with a preliminary draft of an engineering report which claims that Stacy might mean water rationing within the capital city in times of drought, power plant cutback in summer-time peak periods and the effluence of more sewage than river water below Austin.

The Lake Travis Property Owners Association have taken media representatives on a boat tour of the lake, water levels of which are lower than usual. It has been suggested, however, that the level was deliberately lowered in hopes that members of the water commission would be influenced.

The West Texas Chamber of Commerce has called for the project as part of the orderly development of all Texas waters.

The Stacy reservoir would be larger than either J.B. Thomas or E.V. Spence, other lakes maintained by the water district.

Hit-and-run driver kills BSSH patient

Mrs. Lillie Faye Holden, 57, Pecos, was killed about 3:30 a.m. Monday when she was struck by a hit-and-run vehicle 2 of a mile east of Midland on Interstate 20.

She was a walk-away patient from Big Spring State Hospital and was missing at bedcheck at 10 p.m. Sunday, according to officials at the hospital.

She was a voluntary patient and was in an open campus unit. "Apparently she caught a ride at least part of that distance," hospital authorities said here today, "because she was not in good enough physical condition to walk that far."

A Department of Public Safety spokesman said her body was found beside the highway by passers-by.

Officers are continuing a search for the driver of the vehicle which left the scene. There were some indications that it may have been a truck, according to one authority.

Action/reaction: Never brought up

Q: Why was there so little to do here on the Fourth of July when towns the size of La Mesa, Andrews and O'Donnell as well as cities the size of Midland and Odessa had fireworks displays and other activities? Should this be a chamber function?

A: In a lot of places, the chamber sponsors these activities and they can here, according to Bill Albright, chamber executive. He said, "I am subject to the feelings of the board and since I have been here the subject has never been brought up at the board meetings. However, it could well be a subject for study by them on their retreat when they plan a program of work." He added, "We welcome ideas of the people for such projects."

Offbeat: Alabama prison wipeout

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Glyn Gray is mighty frustrated, but he couldn't throw in the towel even if he wanted to.

In fact, towels are at the root of his troubles. Gray is purchasing officer for the state Board of Corrections. After the agency finally found enough cells for Alabama's prisoners, Gray discovered a towel shortage. He advertised recently for bids on 5,000 yards of terry cloth for towels, but no company responded, he said Thursday.

The prison board will readvertise this month, but if there are no takers, "I don't know what we'll do," he moaned.

'Shade Tree' deal

Narc testifies Bartley made heroin delivery

By CARLA WALKER Undercover narcotics agent Karen Mann testified Monday in 118th District Court that she portrayed a non-using drug "middleman" and received delivery of 2.28 grams of heroin from James Dexter Bartley, Jr.

Bartley is charged with delivery of a controlled substance and Mann was an undercover police agent during the "Shade Tree" operation, designed to catch narcotics dealers and burglars fencing stolen property.

Portraying the operator, of the Shade Tree Pawn Shop, Mann was able to pose as a narcotics dealer and establish contacts with street dealers and suppliers. Although the charges against Bartley are in relation to a delivery that, according to Mann's testimony, occurred on Aug. 2, 1977, grand jury indictments were not sought until after the undercover operation was exposed near the end of August.

Bartley was actually indicted twice, first under the last name of Bartlett — either a misspelling or an alias according to presiding Judge Ralph Caton — and secondly under his proper name.

Mann testified that she made a deal by telephone to purchase $200 worth of heroin from a known dealer, who was not named in the Shade Tree indictments. The dealer allegedly indicated that he would send the heroin by Bartley.

"Bartley entered and laid the packet (of heroin) down. I observed it and commented that it might be light, but agreed to take it since the deal was already made," Mann testified.

According to testimony from a chemist, the packet contained 2.28 grams of a substance identified as four percent heroin. The percentage was described as "fairly standard" for that date, but considerably higher than the .75 to two percent average "cut" now common in Big Spring.

Mann estimated that the heroin would break down to 10 to 15 "fixes," or individual packets, to be sold at a cost of $10 to $15 per fix, provided the substance was not "cut" again, meaning mixed with another substance to reduce the percentage of pure heroin. She indicated that "re-cutting" was a common practice among street dealers to heighten profits from the sale of the drug.

Since funds for the project were limited, Mann testified that she had feared that "they" were "big operators" and would not sell as small a quantity as $200 worth.

Roy Ford, attorney for the defendant, questioned Mann as to whether Bartley had been, in her connection with him, a dealer or simply a "delivery boy." Mann replied that she did not negotiate the price with the defendant, but considered Bartley, to be a "dealer" by the street terminology because he accepted the money for the heroin.

District Attorney Rick Hamby asked if there were any conversational indications that Bartley had been involved in more than delivery. Mann stated that upon Bartley's departure after the alleged sale, he stated that, in her words, he and the dealer would "keep in touch."

Mann also testified that she had seen Bartley on various other occasions prior to the date of the offense for which he is presently being tried.

She stated that, to her knowledge, Bartley was using drugs himself and making money on the side running deliveries and "whatever else he could." She added that in another instance, Bartley and another man "came together to take me to make a buy (of drugs)" which she testified she bought from the other man.

The "whatever else" was described by Mann as fencing of stolen property. "He brought stolen television, stereos, cameras, phonographs and film projectors into the shop to sell," she testified.

Defense attorney Ford asked if any of the transactions were recorded on video tape, as portions of the Shade Tree operation were.

Mann replied that it has been a year since the operation, and she was not sure. Ford then subpoenaed the video tapes, which were expected to be entered into evidence when Judge Caton reconvened the trial at 10 a.m. today.

Testimony concluded at approximately 4:30 p.m. Monday. The jury selection had been completed at 12:30 p.m., but testimony could not begin until 2:30 p.m. when the witnesses arrived.

Hamby rested the prosecution's case formally at the beginning of this morning session, and defense attorney Roy Ford called several witnesses quickly.

Police Chief Stanley Bogard was called to testify to the undercover agent's qualifications. Bogard also testified that the videotapes made by police at the Shade Tree site had been erased, and that no videotapes of narcotics sales had been made then in any case.

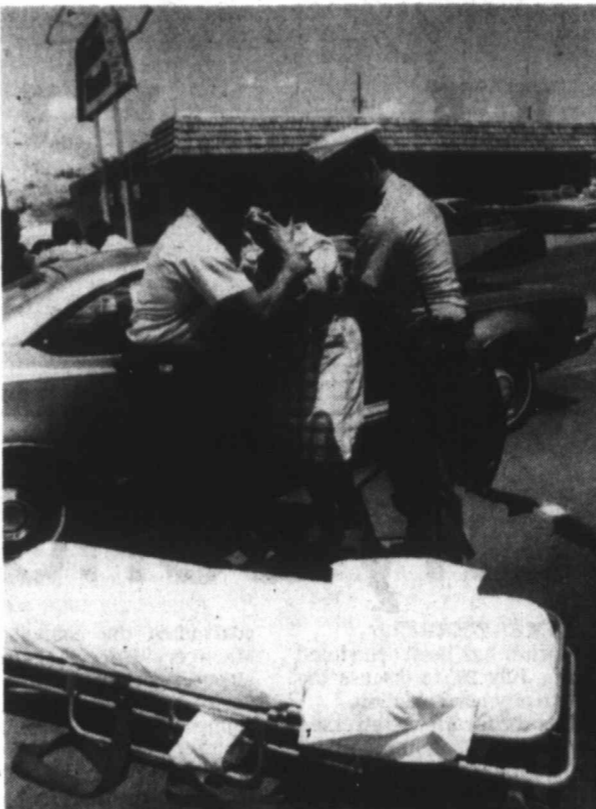

After Bogard, Ford called Mann to the stand. She testified about her training to work an undercover narcotics operation.

Bartley took the stand in his own defense. He testified that he had used heroin, but denied making the alleged delivery to Mann.

Closing arguments began at 11 a.m., with the case going to the jury at 11:48 a.m. Impaneled on the 11-man, one-woman jury were Lon Strain, Jr., Clyde McKimney, Wilbur Grigg, Daniel Allen, Bill Coleman, Ward Booth, Larry Adkins, Donald Spence, Charles Brown, Bobbie Peters, George Franklin and Irving Clawson.

Lamesa Bruton firm gains award

LAMESA — Bruton Manufacturing Company of Lamesa is one of four area winners of Gov. Dolph Briscoe's Industrial Expansion Awards for 1977. The Bruton firm, along with other winners, will be recognized in ceremonies at the governor's mansion later this year.

Bruton Manufacturing moved from Lynn Avenue to the Lamesa Industrial Park June 19, 1977, in order to occupy larger quarters. Bruton was the first firm to build in the park.

Bruton's physical plant is now bigger than 20,000 square feet. Its payroll has been increased 164 per cent.

Richard and Tommy Gentry manage the firm. The company handles the complete fabricated metal requirements of the cotton gin and oil mill industry, with about 60 per cent of the business coming from repairs to equipment and about 40 per cent created by new sales or by plant remodeling. In peak periods, the firm employs up to 70 people.

John Hill's assistant served with subpoena

ODESSA — David Kendall, first assistant to Texas Attorney General John Hill, has been served with a subpoena for a federal grand jury investigation next Monday in Midland. The grand jury will look into the Jan. 22 death in the Ector County jail of inmate Larry Lozano.

Kendall said the subpoena was served while Hill was away from Austin. The document calls for Hill or his authorized representative to appear at 8:30 a.m., Monday in Midland's federal courthouse.

It requires that any records, photographs, reports, scientific data, reports on interviews, internal memoranda, tape recordings or other documents produced during the attorney general's investigation of the arrest, jailing or death of Lozano.

Kendall said he had no way of knowing whether Hill will appear personally before the grand jury. He added that

Colorado City Taxes won't be raised

COLORADO CITY (SC) — Sitting in regular session in the afternoon, the Mitchell County Commissioners Court voted not to raise county taxes.

County Tax Assessor-collector Mike Burt reported to the court that current market valuation of property within the county is just over $57.5 million, up about $3 million over last year.

This increased valuation will generate an extra $28,500 in revenues for county coffers. For taxation purposes, the market value of property is assessed at a 25 per cent rate. County taxes will remain at the level of 95 cents per $100 assessed value.

Taylor County Commissioners declare Abilene still dry

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — And now, the story of Box 19.

That's right, Box 19 in Abilene, not to be confused with the famous Box 13 episode in Jim Wells County that clinched Lyndon Johnson's election to the U.S. Senate in a primary election 30 years ago.

Box 19 is the center of a controversy over whether Abilene will be wet or dry. After a June 17 vote, it appeared, unofficially, that this West Central Texas city would have to allow the sale of hard liquor inside the city limits.

The final, unofficial count for all 44 voting precincts was 11,591 in favor of on-and-off-premises consumption of alcoholic beverages, 11,460 against.

Monday afternoon, however, Taylor County Commissioners unanimously declared Abilene was still dry.

And they did it with what figures out to be about 35 votes to spare.

That's where Box 19 figures in.

The confused maneuvering involved the commissioners' decision to throw out 865 ballots from Box 19, whose boundaries the court claimed were in dispute because of annexation proceedings implemented last year. The proceedings split the voting precinct into two justice precincts and one of the justice precincts was not allowed to vote in the election.

Dry spokesman Neil Fry said he was "kinda flabbergasted" by the court's action Monday.

"I don't know what to say," said Fry. "We came up here to get a recount and we couldn't get one, but now it looks like the election turned around."

Wet forces, led by Mickey Holmes, had no comment on the proceedings. At a district court hearing set for 10 a.m. Friday, the wets say they hope to force the commissioners to canvass all 44 voting boxes, including Box 19, and declare the results.

Unofficial results from Box 19 showed 511 votes for, 354 against. If those results remain excluded from the canvass, along with nine others the commissioners tossed out Monday, the final results give the dries a 35-vote victory.

Police beat Three rapists sought

Two local women claimed they were assaulted Monday. One woman reported three men who gave her a ride at 12:25 a.m. raped her at a location on Carver Street.

Another woman, who was taken to Medical Arts Hospital, said her husband beat her while the family was at a Comanche Trail Park at 10:15 p.m. No arrests were reported.

A 4-foot-8-inches tall woman weighing about 170 pounds, tore into the arresting officer, and had to be subdued. She was arrested at the Ball Pin Cafe.

Two hungry people walked away without paying for their meal at two different locations and one of the duo took a dim view of being arrested on a charge of "theft under $5."

A woman walked out of Marie's Restaurant at 116 E. 3rd after eating a short stack of pancakes and a cup of coffee.

Four persons were injured in a major wreck at 1300 Lamesa Drive at 9:10 p.m. Monday at the North Service Road off IS 20.

Nelso Bowers, Lamesa, was driver of one vehicle and Melvin Eugene Marek, Pierce, Tex., was driver of the second vehicle.

Marek, and his wife, Janet, as well as their two children, Jackie, 12, and Michael, 10, were taken to Malone-Hogan Hogan. Mrs. Marek had the most severe injuries with some lacerations.

Roy Griffith, 506 E. 17th, reported a concrete lawn ornament featuring a Calverlyman was taken from his lawn.

Mrs. Jerry Snodgrass reported that somebody stole six shirts out of the machine that she was using at Parkway Laundromat.

Harold Sherman reported $13 removed from his billfold at the YMCA. Robbi Crow reported her purse containing $20 and credit cards was taken from a car while it was parked at 3609 Tingle.

Other minor accidents included a two vehicle accident at 12:06 p.m. at 4th and Gregg involving vehicles driven by Michael Wayne Desman, 608 Runnels, Apt. 6 and Nancy Christine Williams, 621 Caylor.

Criminal mischief was reported by Pollard Chevrolet employees. A large rock was thrown under a car which had a damaged rod, oil pan and tail pipe with damages estimated at $175.

Fire sighted at Cosden

A fire at Cosden Oil and Chemical Co. was reported shortly before noon in the dump area. It was under control.

A city fire truck was driven to the scene. Firemen helped contain the blaze in the salvage area.

A spokesman at the public relations department of the refinery said there were no refining units involved and no injuries. All safety personnel was at the scene along with Cosden's own fire department.

Solar flares troublesome

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — If powerful solar flares continue to erupt on the sun through Friday, power outages could occur and radio transmissions used in air traffic control could be affected, a federal official says.

Carl A. Posey of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said the Earth and sun will be aligned in such a way by Friday that expected solar flares could disrupt the Earth's magnetic field enough to cause such problems. Scientists recorded on Monday the largest flare since 1974 and solar forecasters say it could be a sign more are on the way.

DENVER (AP) — Nearly a quarter of a million homes and businesses in Colorado were left without electricity for a half hour after a failure in the power grid connecting several Western states triggered a series of outages.

Police want union

CULLMAN, Ala. (AP) — Police, who have been on strike since July 3, walked out of a City Council meeting vowing to keep the "blue flu" until a police union is recognized.

Earlier Monday, Police Commissioner Mike Murphree said a tentative agreement had been reached over a pay increase. The City Council agreed to a $762 base pay demand, but remained adamant over demands for union dues checkoff and recognition of the union.

Marijuana legal for some

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The Legislature has voted to make marijuana legal for some cancer and glaucoma patients, but the use or sale of the drug by anyone else will remain illegal.

The House passed the bill 57-38 after about 45 minutes of debate Monday, and the Senate approved it 33-4 with little discussion. It now goes to the governor.

Annual cargo lift today

SEATTLE (AP) — Seven tugboats, an icebreaker and 11 barges leave today and Tuesday for the 11th annual cargo sealift from Puget Sound to the Arctic's Prudhoe Bay oilfields.

The flotilla is expected to reach Point Barrow on July 25 or 26. It will wait there until the ice opens enough to let the convoy proceed to Prudhoe Bay.

Political unrest evident in Mexico

No part of the world has a corner on violence. There is something in man's makeup that makes him eternally restless.

When his sullenness intensifies, it sometimes becomes mutiny. He lashes out in protest, often at the closest thing to him and, likely as not, against one of his own kind.

And, sometimes, he resorts to such action without feeling any compassion whatsoever for his fellow man. Beware, the man, woman or child who gets in his way.

OUR NEIGHBORS to the south witnessed an example of violence last week when rioting occurred in the border community of Matamoros, just across the Rio Grande from Brownsville.

Observers on the scene said the trouble was not politically motivated. It was touched off by the death of a 15-year-old boy, who died while in police custody. The story that he was beaten gained currency and enraged students took to the streets to vent their rage.

Once aboard, they laid waste to much of the downtown business district. Refreshed by a few hours' sleep, they then demonstrated their anger on Matamoros' red-light district.

Municipal authorities responded shakily to the trouble, indicating that the long-dominant Institutional Revolutionary Party (PRI) may be ripe for overthrow.

Bravely and maybe foolishly, the Matamoros mayor went out to meet a mob of 4,000 angry people. If he hoped to restore calm to a raw situation, he was to be disappointed. They brushed him aside, in fact, sent him into ignoble retreat. As it turned out, he was lucky to escape physical harm.

Only when federal troops were sent in was a semblance of order restored. The rioting must have made PRI leaders take a new look at the political condition. The official party traces its lineage back to the Mexican Revolution of 1910-20. The revolution, of course, is still very much a part of the Mexican heritage and, for that reason, takes a significant role in Mexican politics.

IT IS REALISTIC to say that when many Mexicans look at the PRI, they do not see the embodiment of revolutionary ideals; rather, they see a facade which only partially conceals some stark and depressing realities. There is no great middle class in Mexico; mainly the very rich and the very poor. Land reform has been a bejeweled promise of each regime yet, invariably, it never becomes a reality. Ambitious social welfare programs invariably fall short of their goals. Corruption is a way of life in Mexican politics.

It would not be exactly in keeping with the facts to say that the troubles in Matamoros stem directly from dissatisfaction with the political status quo. Part of the unrest, no doubt, is caused by the heat of summer.

In Mexico, however, political violence is never far from the surface. Rioters know they compel attention by voicing and acting out their dissent. Other areas of a very restless country have, no doubt, been infected within that intense feeling for upheaval.

Eventful outing

Around the rim

Marie Homeyer

Oh, how I love holidays! Even if it is only for an afternoon and there were no barbecued hamburgers.

Fellow member of the Herald staff, Carla Walker and I spent the afternoon of the Fourth of July out at Moss Creek Lake. We had intended to do some fishing and swimming. The fishing didn't last long and the lake was too crowded for swimming. So we decided to ride around the lake to see if we could find another fellow worker, Danny Valdes. He had mentioned to us at work earlier that day that he might be out there with his sail boat. While on our search, we were pulled over to the side of the road by a man flashing a badge. We wouldn't imagine what he wanted to find out what would happen if we didn't. We soon discovered that he wanted us to take pictures of a truck that had been driven over a steep hill and almost into the lake.

AFTER THE PICTURES had been taken and our curiosities satisfied, we continued on our way around the lake. We couldn't find our compadre, so we stopped to do some more fishing. (Carla did the fishing, I just watched.) About two hours after we arrived, Danny came with his sail boat and a group of friends. Carla and I had our first experience at sailboating.

It was exciting. And, although we trusted our pilot, we took no chances and hung on tightly. Several times I almost got hit in the head when the wind changed and sent the sail my way.

Carla was more adventuresome than I. She tried her hand at piloting the rig. She caught on very quickly and managed not to turn over the boat. She got lots of help from Danny. "Carla, this way. Carla, this way," he kept saying.

One time though, she managed to pull herself off the boat. A strong gust of wind came along, pulling the sail. She left too much slack in the rope and ended up caught in it. It pulled her overboard. She was quite upset with us when she finally managed to climb back in. Danny and I had seen her falling, but were laughing too hard to help her.

LATER ON, OUR "crews" switched. This time it was even more of a challenge to stay in the boat. They were constantly trying to throw us overboard. I went over once and I stopped counting how many times Carla went over. Once she was trying to rescue a life jacket that had escaped when Danny's other boat had capsized. When she was leaning over, they gave her a little "help" and pushed her in the water. All in all, Carla spent just about as much time in the lake as she did in the boat. The last time she went out, she put up quite a fight. When our friends got her in, they lost their balance and came tumbling down on me. The only thing that could have made up for that would have been to be able to throw one of the friends overboard. He managed to be the only one not thrown over.

Anderson link to Marcos

Jack Anderson,

WASHINGTON — Philippine dictator Ferdinand Marcos is trying to keep the lid on our disclosure of his plans to recover World War II booty that the Japanese plundered in Asia and buried in the Philippines. The dictator forcefully denied our stories, calling them our "own concoction." But new confirmation keeps bubbling to the surface.

A top secret letter to Marcos from two of his treasure hunters has now come into our possession. The letter, dated May 2, 1973, and signed by Gen. Onofre T. Ramos and Col. Florentino R. Villacrusis, describes a digging at Fort Bonifacio in Manila. "Upon receipt of the signal from Your Excellency... on 1 March, 1973, conferences and preliminary reconnaissances were undertaken..." the letter reports. "Your Task Force Restoration proceeded with lighting of the tunnels, then finally checking the pinpointed areas, which were believed to have contained the treasure as indicated on the map. Three sets of detectors and instruments were used, and all of them confirmed the definite locations of at least 16 spots. These 16 spots were detected as positive for hidden treasures..."

THE DATE OF THE letter is significant, because it indicates Marcos may have known about the treasure when he overthrew the Philippine democracy and made himself absolute ruler six months earlier. The prospect of getting his hands on the plundered treasure may have influenced his decision to seize dictatorial power. For he had acquired secret Japanese maps showing the burial spots of more than $100 billion in gold, platinum, jewelry and other valuables.

The letter does not say how much, if any, of the treasure had been recovered at the time. One source has told us he was shown a room piled with gold bars in the basement of Marcos' summer presidential palace in 1975. Other sources quoted Amelito Mutuc, a Marcos crony and former ambassador to the United States, as confiding that more than $14 billion has already been removed from secret underground and undersea locations.

Meanwhile, two U.S. participants in the hunt for the treasure trove have finally admitted their involvement. Olof Jonsson, a Chicago engineer, has received two letters from the Philippine combine formed by Marcos to uncover the buried loot. Both letters urge him to return to the islands to fulfill his secret contract. One was dated May 2, 1978, after our first column appeared.

Jonsson also told our reporter, Eileen Canzian, that since the columns were published, two members of the Marcos combine have asked him to return any photographs of himself with Marcos, presumably to eliminate even circumstantial evidence linking Marcos to the recovery of the Japanese plunder. For the combine apparently has no intention of returning the booty to its rightful owners.

WE HAVE ACCUMULATED so much evidence that Marcos apparently has given up his earlier attempt to deny the treasure hunt as our "own concoction." The new line from Manila, it seems, is to dismiss it all as an end-of-the-rainbow search by dreamers who have no connection with the dictator.

Fireworks from Strauss

Evans, Novak

WASHINGTON — Japanese envoys participated in an unscheduled Fourth of July fireworks display when Ambassador Robert Strauss, abandoning his normal, conciliatory position, laid down the law on trade negotiations.

Fumihiko Togo, Japanese ambassador to Washington, had been seeking a meeting and finally got it, at Strauss' Washington apartment on Independence Day. Strauss, President Carter's chief trade negotiator, told Togo and other Japanese officials that their country had not been "forthcoming" in the current talks. He said flatly the U.S. had no intention whatever of agreeing to what the Japanese were currently proposing.

THE PLAIN TALK, followed by Strauss saying much the same thing to newsmen the next day, cheered business circles in Japan who would prefer that barriers against U.S. imports be lowered. They long have felt a virtual ultimatum from Strauss would be preferable to more soft soap.

MONDALE FUMBLE Senior aides at the White House are pointing to Vice President Walter Mondale's operation as the principal culprit in the embarrassing Gartner affair.

David G. Gartner, top aide to the late Sen. Hubert Humphrey, was cleared by the President's and Vice President's staffs for an appointment to the Commodity Futures Trading Commission even though his children had received a $72,000 stock gift from Dwayne Andreas, a millionaire Minneapolis grain dealer. Andreas, who was acquitted of making illegal 1968 contributions to Humphrey, contributed 1972 funds to Richard M. Nixon that later turned up to finance the Watergate conspiracy.

Michael Cardozo, the young White House lawyer who handled the Gartner appointment, simply did not know who Andreas was. Neither did top Carter aides such as press secretary Jody Powell. "But I'll say this," a White House staffer told us. "Mike Berman (a top Mondale aide) sure knew who Andreas was, and he never blew the whistle."

THE PRESIDENT'S DELEGATE While the White House has steamed over the public statements of a longtime peace activist named to the U.S. delegation to the United Nations disarmament conference, UN Ambassador Andrew Young had been distributing them around the country.

Harold Willens, a Los Angeles manufacturer long active in peace and other liberal causes, was named by the president to the U.S. disarmament delegation. The UN session had not even been completed before Willens was appearing in print with statements not following U.S. policy — decidedly bad practice for even a part-time UN delegate.

"For 30 years, the United States has led the way in arms escalation toward a world rapidly filling with terrorists and nations armed with nuclear weapons," he wrote in the Los Angeles Times. The Christian Century quoted him as saying, "I think the president is getting the wrong political advice" in taking a harder line on Soviet-Cuban operations in Africa.

"OUTRAGEOUS" was the one-word description by a presidential aide. But Andy Young did not think so. The Los Angeles Times and Christian Century articles, plus a column Willens wrote for the New York Times, were distributed by the UN ambassador to Washington newsmen.

Odds of undoing vasectomy improving

Dr. G. C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please discuss the pros and cons of a man in his early 40s having a vasectomy. It is my husband's idea. But I am concerned about the mental acceptance. A friend knows of three men who had a nervous breakdown within two years of the vasectomy. My husband also wonders if this would decrease his sexual performance any. —Mrs. C.

I would look more closely at your friend's reports of nervous breakdowns resulting from vasectomy. I have no evidence of any such connection, although folks being the way they are, I would not be surprised to find such a thing in an isolated case or two.

Neither is there any evidence it will alter sexual performance in the slightest, except that the absence of potential pregnancy could be a spur to more activity in some men. Mrs. A.K. writes me on this same subject, asking whether vasectomy will make a man more promiscuous. The answer is that it might, depending on the moral character of the man. Here again, this is not a medical question.

I am often asked whether the operation is reversible. Up until quite recently the answer was a qualified no. However, newer techniques are improving the chances of successful rejoining of the spermatic cords considerably. Still, what took only a few minutes to do can take a couple of hours of surgery to undo. So I urge that the tying procedure be considered more or less permanent.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What do you recommend for nighttime leg cramps in children? —J.S.

Not much except the gentle art of midnight massaging. It is usually a matter of an energetic child playing too hard. Even young muscles can go into spasm if overworked. See my booklet on the general subject of leg cramps. Send 35 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me care of the Big Spring Herald.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My wife is a hemodialysis patient. She has had this intense itching over her entire body for more than a year and nothing seems to help her. Thousands of persons like her would bless you if you knew of any remedy for itching. —H.J.E.

For the sake of other readers, I might explain that hemodialysis is the use of a filtering machine to remove blood impurities in persons whose kidneys have failed them or been removed. The machine does the work the kidneys formerly did.

The itching is due either to an increase in her blood calcium or the deposition of urea crystals on her skin. Lotions such as Alpha Keri or other anti-itch applications may be tried. A thin coating of petroleum jelly has been used successfully in this. Soaking in a tub of warm water to which a quarter of a cup of vinegar has been added is also recommended.

In severe cases, where high-blood calcium is to blame, removal of the parathyroid glands may have to be done. The parathyroids have to do with control of calcium.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it true there is a hormone that can be given to a child to help his testicles descend to the proper position in the scrotal sac? —Mrs. O.R.

The hormone to which you refer is chorionic gonadotropin. This has been tried, but reports of effectiveness are controversial. It's estimated that about 4 percent of male babies have undescended testes at birth. If they fail to reach the scrotal sac by the sixth week they rarely will later on their own. Surgery to bring the testes into the scrotum should be done between the 5th and 10th year. Otherwise they degenerate and may become malignant.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have geographic tongue. What causes this? The doctor gives me Mycostatin rinses, which I put on it twice a day. —L.A.

Geographic tongue is a form of glossitis. It produces a patterned redness or whiteness on the tongue surface. Often the cause is unclear. But if Mycostatin (nystatin) has helped, one might assume it is a fungus infection (such as candidiasis). Nystatin is an antibiotic which is effective against fungi.

Diverticulosis is a bulge in the digestive tract. To learn more about it, write to Dr. Thosteson's booklet, "Don't Let Diverticulosis Throw You," care of the Big Spring Herald. Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can alcohol be an irritant to osteoarthritis and bursitis? —Mrs. C.C.

No. Is angina pectoris dangerous? Is there a cure? If you would like to learn more about this heart condition, write to Dr. Thosteson, in care of the Big Spring Herald, for a copy of his booklet, "How to Handle Angina Pectoris." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Does the Bible say anything about cremation? —Mrs. P.J.

DEAR MRS. J.: Cremation was apparently not practiced either by the Jewish people or the early Christians, except in very rare circumstances. For example, when King Saul and his sons were killed in battle, their bodies were burned, probably to keep the enemies of Israel from exhibiting their bodies as a prize of war (I Samuel 31:11-13). However, cremation is not forbidden by the Bible.

The early Christians usually buried the dead, following the custom of the Jewish people. Through the history of the Church many Christians have resisted the idea of cremation, feeling that it somehow devalues the physical body. By His resurrection Christ showed that God is concerned about the body, and one of the wonderful promises of Scripture is the statement that "the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed" (I Corinthians 15:52). Others have wondered how God could raise us up on the last day if the molecules of our bodies were scattered. Some groups of Christians still forbid cremation, although it is increasingly a common practice and accepted by many Christians. I personally see no reason to avoid it, if that is the wish of the deceased and the family.

The important thing we should keep before us is the hope we have in Jesus Christ. In some societies, death is considered the end, and there is no feeling of hope for life after death. But Christ rose again from the dead, and because of that we know there is life beyond the grave. By faith in Christ we can have that hope within our hearts. Truly because of Christ, we can say, "Death is swallowed up in victory" (I Corinthians 15:54).

Small Texas town to become nothing

CALLIHAM, Texas (AP) — Back in 1971 the future looked pleasant, though not glistening with progress, for the self-sufficient folks in this South Texas community.

"The wants were simple. We put down our mobile home. We planted our trees and everything. I figured by the time I was old we'd have shade," said H.E. Sewell. "Now they tell us we'll have to go."

The 20 families that still live here and the community itself will soon be gone. Calliham, once a bustling small town, will be merely the setting for memories in the mind's eye of those who grew up here in the brush country.

The community will be replaced by nothing. Federal officials have calculated the area will be needed for the Choke Canyon Reservoir to gush into in case of flooding.

Last weekend about 500 former residents came home for one last look at the swimming hole, the old Rice Drug Store and the other things that make up their recollections.

There was bitterness mixed with the nostalgia. "If they'd told us the truth right at the beginning, but they've been lying to us here lately," said Henry Shenkir, a McMullen County commissioner. "You know, when the federal government people start lying to you, why..."

Calliham residents don't appreciate the way the federal officials went about planning the community's doom.

"We read about it in the paper after it was over," Bobby Shannon, who now lives in Tilden, said about a 1973 congressional subcommittee hearing in Three Rivers.

Herman Smith, like Sewell, put up a new home here several years back.

"At the time, they were figuring on building the dam further down, you know. Nobody thought this would happen," he lamented.

The federal government will buy the locals out and will set up New Calliham, a mile to the south.

Some of the residents here say the government has lied about the need for the land.

"If we'd stuck together and decided to stay, we'd have stayed, because this place isn't going to go under water. That's a lie," charged Shenkir.

First defendant to stand trial

Testimony begins in funds misuse case

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — A jury could begin hearing testimony today in the case of the first defendant to stand trial for misusing federal Manpower funds in the Rio Grande Valley.

Jury selection began Monday for Don Gray, business manager of the Harlingen-based Plumbers and Pipefitters Union Local 823, who is charged with stealing $20,000 in 1976 and 1977.

Gray is being tried on five of 29 theft indictments handed out by a Brownsville grand jury following a court of inquiry there in December and January.

Indictments against seven of the 16 persons charged in connection with the Manpower fund abuse case were dropped Monday by District Court Judge Harry Lewis. The case was moved here on a venue change.

Cameron County District Attorney Joe K. Hendley told newsmen he had exercised his discretion as prosecutor to move for dismissal of the indictments.

Among the indictments dropped was a witness tampering charge against former Cameron County District Attorney Fred Galindo. The ex-prosecutor was indicted for allegedly attempting to change the testimony of two members of the Governor's Office of Migrant Affairs.

Indictments were also dropped against John David Osborne and John Willard, trade school instructors, each charged with one count of theft for allegedly having repairs to their homes performed free-of-charge by Manpower trainees with materials bought with federal funds.

—Earl Melton and Paul Smith, brick contractors, each charged with one count of theft for allegedly using Manpower trainees on a Harlingen construction project and allegedly collecting federal labor payments while neglecting to pay the trainees.

—Roel Martinez, one of two incorporators of a janitorial service, charged with nine counts of theft. He was accused of participating in a kick-back scheme.

—Carlos Rodriguez, proprietor of a Brownsville language academy, indicted for bribery of a Manpower official in return for a government contract.

The five indictments on which Gray is being tried here stem from two contracts he negotiated between the Plumbers Union and a Hidalgo County anti-poverty agency.

According to the indictments, Gray contracted with the Associated City-County Economic Development Corp. in Hidalgo County to undertake a study of migrant workers. Gray is charged with stealing the $20,000 in study funds while failing to comply with the standards set forth in the contract.

Eliseo Sandoval, the former director of the Hidalgo County anti-poverty agency, was granted immunity in return for his testimony in Gray's case and others.

Prosecutors and defense lawyers spent most of Monday behind closed doors consolidating indictments in the various cases.

The trials are expected to last several weeks, with some defendants facing federal trial on similar charges later this month.

Many of the indictments are centered around the alleged abuse of funds channeled into Texas by the U.S. Department of Labor through the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act.

Engineers develop new deep-sea diving facility

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Southwest Research Institute engineers are readying a new deep diving research facility, a submarine-steel chamber that can be used for simulated dives to ocean depths as great as 3,600 feet.

If you think that sounds a little deep, you're right. It's 1,600 feet deeper than a diver has ever gone in such a chamber and 2,000 feet deeper than any open-sea dive.

"It is the only man-rated civilian chamber of its depth rating in the United States, to my knowledge," said George Wolfe, engineer in charge of the program at SWRI.

The chamber, designed, constructed and tested by SWRI, is being installed for research at the Duke University Medical Center in Durham, N.C.

The facility will significantly extend hyperbaric research capabilities beyond Duke's present depth simulation limit of 1,000 feet.

Made of submarine grade HY-100 steel, the chamber consists of a sphere almost eight feet across, sitting atop an upright cylindrical "wet pot" six feet in diameter. It is designed to operate at pressures to 1,600 pounds per square inch.

Experimental divers, SWRI officials said, have reached the equivalent of about 2,000 feet in a chamber and have gone to depths of 1,600 feet in the open sea. They said 1,000-foot dives are relatively recent and most dives are to lesser depths.

But the efforts to find and develop offshore oil and natural gas resources have helped provide impetus for the study of ways divers can live and work at even greater depths.

Capabilities of the new chamber will permit investigations into many questions affecting the physical and emotional health of deep sea divers.

Researchers hope to determine safe compression and decompression procedures for very deep dives and further investigate medical disorders, such as the high pressure nervous syndrome that causes dizziness, nausea, vomiting, tremors and brain wave irregularities in divers.

Duke's F.G. Hall Laboratory for Environmental Research is widely known for its work in diving research and medical research involving the application of oxygen at low or high pressures. Duke's six-chamber hyperbaric unit went into service in 1968.

The new chamber, designed to accommodate two-man teams of divers, will be attached to the existing facility so that living quarters can be provided during protracted experimental dives.

Deep sea divers, SWRI officials explained, often spend several days in a diving bell to complete a job at great depths.

Soviet dissidents maintain defiance

MOSCOW (AP) —

Dissidents Anatoly Shcharansky and Alexander Ginsburg were reported maintaining their defiance of their captors as their trials in two Soviet courtrooms went into the second day amid a storm of foreign protest.

Shcharansky, a 30-year-old Jewish computer expert, said he would refuse to give detailed testimony and demanded that Western correspondents and his supporters in the dissident movement be admitted to the Moscow courtroom, from which they were barred, his brother Leonid reported.

Ginsburg's wife said he looked "a half-dead person" in the courtroom in Kaluga, 100 miles south of Moscow. But she said when asked his nationality, he replied, "Zek," short for "zekslyuchonni," or "political prisoner."

Both men pleaded innocent at the opening of their trials Monday. Shcharansky to charges of treasonable espionage, for which he could get the death penalty, and anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda, and the 41-year-old Ginsburg to a charge of anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda. He could get 10 years. Leonid Shcharansky said his brother "looked well, self-confident and cheerful," called the charges against him "absurd," and in an hour-long statement defending himself told the court, "I consider all that I did was right."

PROTEST TRIAL BEGINNING IN RUSSIA — Protesters chant Monday near the Soviet Mission to the United Nations against the trial of Anatoly Shcharansky for treason. Shcharansky went on trial in Russia for protesting the denial of his request to emigrate to Israel and for allegedly being a member of the CIA, a charge President Carter has denied.

"I think they will give him the death sentence," said Leonid.

A closed trial session was ordered today for Shcharansky because the court was to take up testimony in support of the charge that he passed defense secrets to known American spies.

The prosecution was expected to make much of his contacts with Robert C. Toth, former Moscow correspondent of the Los Angeles Times who before he left Moscow in June 1977 was interrogated about their meetings.

Toth has repeatedly denied any connection with intelligence or espionage agencies.

Scientists work on Skylab's orbit

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Scientists at Johnson Space Center worked today to return Skylab to a minimum-drag attitude orbit that had been disturbed by an electrical power failure.

A power failure on the 85-ton satellite last Saturday started a chain reaction that caused the craft to wobble out of its minimum drag position and threaten the length of time it could remain in space.

Gene Kranz, deputy director of flight operations at JSC, said Monday he did not think any serious damage had been done.

Flight controllers shifted the position of Skylab June 11 to make it fly parallel to the Earth and cut down on the atmospheric drag that was pulling it out of orbit.

Scientists hope to keep Skylab aloft until a Space Shuttle crew can boost it into higher orbit late next year.

The most recent problem started Saturday when a battery charger over-heated and eventually caused a shutdown of all power in one of two sets of batteries providing power to the Skylab, Charles Redmond, a JSC spokesman said.

The power loss cut off Skylab's computer and slowed down the gyroscopes that have been keeping the craft in its favorable drag position, Redmond said.

Power from the other set of batteries was used Monday to begin recharging the drained batteries, Redmond said, and begin the process again of returning Skylab to its favorable drag position.

Prison sentences chill relations between Germanys

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Prison sentences given to two East German dissidents have chilled relations between the two Germanys.

Rudolf Bahro, 41, a Marxist economist who wrote a book accusing the East Berlin regime of smothering "true socialism," was sentenced last month to eight years' imprisonment for high treason.

Last week, 22-year-old Nico Huebner, who claimed the demilitarized status of Berlin exempted him from service in the East German army, got five years for draft-dodging and illegal contacts with Western intelligence agents.

Although the cases were largely ignored abroad, they were followed as closely in West Germany as the trials of Soviet dissidents Anatoly Shcharansky and Alexander Ginzburg have been in the United States.

The Bahro and Huebner verdicts, blated as "terror judgements" by the West Berlin Senate, have unleashed a storm of protest from all major political parties in West Germany as well as calls from conservatives for a suspension of negotiations with the Communist regime.

The West German government, which has soft-pedaled its criticism of alleged East European disregard for human rights, issued a statement Monday expressing concern over the East German sentences.

Chief government spokesman Klaus Boelling said Bonn was concerned about "increasing measures against citizens of the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia and East Germany, who exercise their rights of free opinion and thought."

But he said the evidence of an orchestrated plot throughout the Soviet bloc to muzzle dissent was "not strong enough" for a judgment.

BLOWOUT — Robert D. Doyle of Martinsburg, W. Va., walks into a House Oversight and Investigations subcommittee hearing in Washington Monday with a Firestone 500 radial tire he says blew out over the past weekend. Though not on the schedule, Doyle, was invited to testify before the panel which is hearing testimony on the Firestone 500 radial the government wants recalled.

Amtrak should be improved, 'fans' say

DALLAS (AP) — Supporters of improved railroad service say the U.S. government should improve its Amtrak train system, especially in Texas, instead of cutting it back to save money.

The "train fans" — as they called themselves — delivered their message Monday at the opening of a two-day public hearing in Dallas sponsored by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Purpose of the nationwide hearings is to gather citizens' comments on Department of Transportation proposals to trim the entire Amtrak system from 27,000 miles to 18,000 miles and eliminate two Chicago-to-Texas routes.

Most of the more than 50 witnesses Monday said Amtrak has failed financially because it has provided shoddy service and poor schedules and relied on outdated equipment.

James Hoffmeister of Houston, chairman of the Texas Association of Railroads, said Amtrak schedules "have made it simply impossible to get around Texas by train."

He said frequent, high-speed service on a Dallas-Houston-San Antonio route would be profitable.

James Gough of the Houston chapter of the Texas Association of Railroad Passengers, said Amtrak's level of service is too low to pay the cost of the corporate structure that runs it.

Gough said he flew to the hearing from Houston because riding the train would have required him to miss two days of work.

Other witnesses, especially older ones, recalled the golden era of railroads.

"The railroads are responsible for this country being what it is — or was," said Burt C. Blanton of Dallas, who rode the rails 400,000 miles before retiring from work.

Another witness who supported expansion and improvement of Amtrak was Robert Wagar of Dallas, who worked for Amtrak for about a year. He said his job was "frustrating."

"I used everything from rubber bands to bubble gum to keep things working," he said, recalling numerous mechanical failures on the train where he worked as a dining car waiter.

Longview Mayor Bob Maness said his city's survival 100 years ago was due largely to the coming of the railroad. He said Longview will fight to keep passenger service there.

If anything, Maness said, Congress should improve Amtrak's passenger service. He said Longview's 4 a.m. boarding time on the Inter-American train — one of two DOT wants eliminated — has done little to encourage ridership.

R.E. Foiles, vice president of Trailways Inc., the bus company, was one of a few offering the opposing view. Armed with statistics and projections, Foiles said the government must add $2 for every dollar paid by an Amtrak customer to keep the railroad running.

"Amtrak had a $530 million operating budget last year," he said.

Foiles said if Amtrak is to be continued, it should be confined to sections of the country where it can break even. He said the 7-year-old service has been a "costly failure in most places."

Hearing officer Jim Tuite said a second public forum will be conducted in San Antonio Wednesday. The hearings will continue across the country until Sept. 30 when results are reported to the ICC. The agency will consider the data and make its report to Congress by Dec. 30.

WEBB BOWLING LANES ... is topnotch facility

Webb Lanes offers fine bowling lanes

Webb Bowling Lanes has a wonderful facility available for Big Spring bowling fans.

They offer league bowling in the summer and plan new leagues for the fall months.

They have topnotch lanes available from 10 a.m. until midnight daily.

There is plenty of parking and security has been good at the facility.

Webb Bowling Lanes is a really fine place to spend a relaxed evening bowling. It also is an excellent spot for the beginner to learn the sport of bowling.

Next time you feel like going bowling, drop out to Webb Air Force Base. You will be glad you did.

The smooth operation can really give you a relaxed evening of recreation at one of the finest facilities in all of West Texas.

If you want an evening of complete fun and no hassling of any kind, check out Webb Lanes. There's a facility that really offers the best in the sport of bowling for Big Springers and folks from the surrounding towns.

Gibson's clothing has many summer bargains

Gibson's has a really fine selection of summer clothes. And some of these are really sales bargains at this time.

Reason for the low prices is that Gibson's, who always looks ahead, is already getting ready for fall.

So if you want some really good buys in shorts and tops and other summer clothes, check at Gibson's.

It's a good thing to visit their store at least once a week anyway, because you never know what particular items are going to be on sale there.

And they offer a selection of merchandise from grocery staples to oil for your car to gardening needs to clothing to jewelry, to appliances, to pharmaceutical needs, gifts, and many other items.

They say "If you didn't buy it at Gibson's, you paid too much."

Don't pay too much. Run down to Gibson's, at the south end of Scurry Street from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. daily and look over their selections.

If somebody in the family needs it, Gibson's probably has it and at prices that you can afford.

They are also in the process of starting to look for toy items for Christmas. Keep your eyes open while shopping out there. You may find some fine items early.

They didn't understand the forms Sterilized women say they are victims

By the Associated Press

They say they have recurring headaches and are abused by frustrated husbands but the physical hurt is less than the pain of knowing they are sterile. Estela Benavidez, 34, one of 10 women who filed suit against 10 doctors at the Los Angeles County-University of Southern California Medical Center, said her husband blames her for the sterilization. But she and the others say they were sterilized without their informed consent because they did not understand English. "A half hour before my child was born, the hospital staff told me I would be sterilized," Mrs. Benavidez, the mother of three girls, said Friday through a translator. "My husband thinks it was my idea alone. He constantly reminds me that if I had not had the operation, we would have a son now. I feel terrible." Superior Court Judge Jesse Curtis rejected the women's $10 million claim last week after hearing 2½ weeks of testimony. Curtis said that although the plaintiffs had suffered emotional and physical damage, the doctors performed the sterilizations in the belief the women had consented. The plaintiffs announced Friday at a news conference that they will appeal Curtis' decision next week in federal court. Victoria Hernandez, an attorney representing the women, said only seven of her clients signed consent forms for the operations. She added the others were given their consent verbally. Ms. Hernandez said all plaintiffs were in labor at the time they agreed to the operations. "No woman in labor is capable of understanding a consent form for sterilization," she said. "And nobody explained the forms to them in Spanish. Only two of the women understand English even a little." The attorney said her clients were misinformed, with some believing they would die without the operation. Federal and state law now requires a 72-hour period before sterilizations are performed, as well as explanations of the procedure in a language the patient can understand. As a result of the sterilizations from 1971 through 1974, the women are severely depressed and suffer headaches and backaches, said Dr. Terry Kupers. "Half of their marriages are torn up, and the other half are abused," said Kupers, a psychiatrist who practices in Los Angeles. "Some are beaten by their husbands. They are isolated because of their shame." Anthropologist Carlos Velez of the University of California at Los Angeles said the sterilizations have "fractured" the women's social and marital relationships. The Mexican culture usually defines the female role as that of a child-bearer and the inability to procreate is considered shameful, he said.

(AP WIREPHOTO) FAMILY KISS — Bonnie Sue Holbert, who was crowned Miss Arkansas last year while her brother was recovering from a plane crash, will give up her crown this week. Here, she gets a kiss from her brother, Andy, who will dance during the pageant. They were in Hot Springs Sunday to begin pageant rehearsals.

English teacher starts career in Peace Corps

"Some people think I'm overqualified to teach in the Peace Corps," said Austin, Tex.-born Jean Love whose parents live in Durham, N.C., and whose uncle Stanley Russ is a state senator in Conway, Ark. "I don't think I'm overqualified. When you work in a foreign country, you're never overqualified." Miss Love is the sister of Bruce Love, who works in Big Spring with the railway system. She was recently in Philadelphia with 70 other Peace Corps trainees for three days of orientation before flying to Morocco where she will teach English for two years.

JEAN LOVE

The soft-spoken Miss Love's unassuming demeanor conceals a 1978 master's degree in foreign language education from the University of Texas at Austin and another in linguistics from the University of Caen, amidst the hills of Normandy. She is fluent in French, speaks Spanish and writes Arabic. "My life runs in cycles," said Miss Love who enjoys Beethoven as much as she does Jacques Brel. "When I was young I read 'The Thousand and One Nights.' That got me to Syria in 1971. "While in Texas in 1975, I met some Moroccan. I wrote to their embassy in Washington, inquiring how could I work in the country. They suggested the Peace Corps. "Some people thought I should pursue a more profitable career, but I want no part of business. I just want to be a good teacher. Maybe it's selfish because I derive personal satisfaction in seeing a student learn. "Maybe what I'm offering through the Peace Corps isn't the most needed thing in Morocco, but I also want to get to know its culture. "Morocco, smaller than Texas and having the population of Arkansas, North Carolina and Texas combined, occupies Northwest Africa. Independent from France since 1956, it now claims a per capita income similar to Rhodesia, illiteracy of Saudi Arabia and political freedom comparable to that in Malaysia. Rabat, where Miss Love will receive several weeks of additional cross-cultural training and Arabic instruction, is the capital. "When she first told me she's going, I was completely amazed, but when she told me the reasons why, I was impressed," said Dr. Laura Love, a speech pathology professor at the North Carolina Central University. Dr. Love believes that the Peace Corps will enable her daughter to utilize her talents and give her an edge in the job market when she returns home. Miss Love held a garage sale before leaving and "sold everything I didn't absolutely need." "If you can leave behind the people that you love, why you can leave behind any and all physical possessions. I have had a car, for example, and my friends couldn't understand that — but I'll spend $1,000 a month on letters to friends," she said halfway in jest. While working in Morocco, where 40 per cent of the youth between 20 and 30 are unemployed, Miss Love will subsist on an allowance of $250 a month, about what an American would spend at the Rabat Hilton for a week's lodging alone. Some 150 American volunteers already serve throughout Morocco, mostly in agricultural and health programs or as teachers of English, a language that Moroccan students must pass if they hope to enroll at a university. The Peace Corps, budgeted at $83 million, is part of ACTION, the federal volunteer agency. Close to 6,700 volunteers work in 64 developing nations. About 4,700 VISTAs and 235,000 Retired Senior Volunteers at home are also part of ACTION. "As an English teacher, I really don't have to go to Morocco to immerse myself in a different culture," concluded Miss Love. "I could have joined VISTA at home. Maybe I will when I come back."

Fears Worst For Falsifying Age

DEAR ABBY: Many years ago I falsified my age on my driver's license. (I deducted three years from my birth date.) I am now 62, and I look every year of it. I am actually entitled to some senior citizen benefits, but my driver's license says I'm only 59! In order to change the birth date on my driver's license, I have to write to the State Department of Motor Vehicles. I haven't written to them because I'm terrified of the consequences. I've never been in any kind of trouble in my entire lifetime, and I have an unblemished driving record. Will I lose my license? Can't I have that happen? Will I be arrested? Will I have to pay a stiff fine? What will my punishment be? Please find out what's in store for me. If the penalty is too great, I'll leave well enough alone and forget the benefits. I don't want to go to jail, but I think they may have to lock me up in a mental institution if I have to worry much longer over this mess I got myself into years ago. Has anyone else ever had this problem? If you use this letter, for heaven's sake, please change my name.

WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: Many others have had this problem, and if that's the worst crime anyone ever committed, we'd all be saints. Simply provide proof of your real age to the Department of Motor Vehicles (a copy of your birth certificate is considered acceptable documentation), and all will be forgiven and forgotten.

DEAR ABBY: At the bottom of your column you say, "You'll feel better if you get it off your chest," so I am writing to get something off my chest.

I get along OK with my mother-in-law, although deep down I've always had the feeling that she never really liked me. What bugs me most about her is this: When she calls our house and I answer the phone, she says, "Let me talk to Dennis!"

She never asks me how I am or anything. I don't have the nerve to tell her to her face how much this irritates me, but if I were to pick up the paper one day and see this letter in your column, it would really make my day.

SOMEBODY WHO FEELS LIKE NOBODY

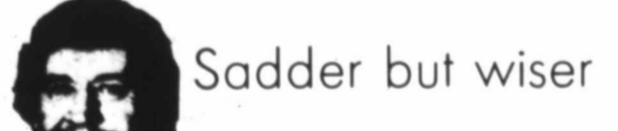

DEAR SOMEBODY: I'm glad I was able to make your day.

DEAR ABBY: I am just about ready to blow my stack. My husband and I gave his parents a key to our house so that they could check on it when we are out of town, although we seldom are. They live near us, so it is handy for them to drop in often. Now when they come over, they never knock or ring the bell, they just let themselves in with the key they have. They come into our home whether we are home or not. What's the solution?

HAD IT ON OHIO

DEAR HAD IT: Ask your husband to ask his parents to please knock or ring the doorbell when they visit, and to use the key only to "check the house" when you are out of town. And if they continue to ignore your wishes, the solution is obvious—change the locks.

Sadder but wiser

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed. D. Copley News Service

Dear Doctor: I'm 13 and last summer my boyfriend and I went "all the way" and made love. This was the very first time for me. Now people are calling me a tramp. Am I one if it was my very first time? How can I make people stop saying this to me? Please help me. I'm hurt badly.

Hurt, Woodsfield, Ohio
Dear Hurt: No, you are not a tramp but you should now be a wiser young lady! Boys have the reputation of kissing and telling. Only your boyfriend and you really know what happened. The other people are only speculating. Your reputation will again be good if you really want it to be and you guide your lifestyle in this manner.

Dear Doctor: You are my last hope. I cannot hide my secret much longer. Three months ago I went to visit my cousins in a neighboring city. They are older than I am and kind of wild. I come from a strict Mormon home and I'm very shy. Anyway, they had a party and I got drunk and now I'm pregnant and don't know who the father is.

Please help me. Every day it's getting worse. S.K., Mcnatchee, Wash.

Dear S.K.: I would hope that you will confide in your mother. If you do, she will know what to do. If you can't tell mother just yet, talk to a group such as Planned Parenthood, but also seek out a member of your clergy to help guide you.

You haven't said if you have seen a doctor yet. If you haven't, see one immediately!

Coahoma Past Matrons meet

The Past Matrons Club of Coahoma, chapter 499, Order of the Eastern Star, met for breakfast July 1 at the First Methodist Church.

Mrs. Joe Miller and Mrs. Ernest Garrett were hostesses. The tables were decorated with white cloths and featured red, white and blue decorations. The centerpiece was a replica of Abe Lincoln's hat surrounded by flags. Napkins, plates and favors completed the decorations.

Jane Headrick gave the invocation. Mrs. John Westmoreland, president, presided, and gave the program. A report on the year's project, a show case, was given. It has been finished, and placed in the masonic hall. Ricky Phinney did the craft work.

Out-of-town members present were Jimmie Brown, Wink, and Christen Tindol, Canadian. Edith Taylor attended, following a long absence due to eye surgery.

It was reported that Neva Swan's husband is in Methodist Hospital in Lubbock following surgery. Hostesses for August will be Neva Swan and Adaline Madison.

National All-Stars try for seven in a row tonight

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Pitcher Vida Blue and outfielder Reggie Jackson, teammates for so long on the controversial Oakland A's, are in and out of the spotlight for tonight's 49th All-Star Game.

Blue, traded across the bay by Oakland to San Francisco during spring training, becomes the first pitcher ever to start All-Star games for both leagues when he opens on the mound for the Nationals.

"Some youngster on the plane told me I was the last winning pitcher for the American League," Blue commented, and then laughed, "I already knew it."

He was the starter and winner in 1971 when the AL took a 6-4 victory — with Jackson smashing a tremendous home run over the roof of Detroit's Tiger Stadium — and also started in 1975 when the NL won 6-3 in its current domination of the midsummer classic.

Monday night, however, Jackson became the fifth player to withdraw from the American League squad when he telephoned Manager Billy Martin and reported that he was running a fever of 102-103 degrees. Jackson was promptly replaced by his New York Yankees teammate, third baseman Graig Nettles, who himself had been scratched Sunday with a bruised toe.

Jackson is the only AL starter to pull out but the junior circuit also has lost catcher Thurman Munson, infielder Rick Burleson and outfielder Carl Yastrzemski.

The National League lost starting catcher Johnny Bench, who has been suffering from a bad back in recent weeks. Ted Simmons of St. Louis will replace him.

The NL has won six straight, 14 of 15, 19 of 21 and leads the series 29-18 with one tie. American League President Lee MacPhail calls the recent result "embarrassing."

Manager Tommy Lasorda of the Los Angeles Dodgers, in naming a hurler from arch-rival San Francisco, said Blue's knowledge of American League hitters was a factor, but added, "I think he is the best pitcher in the National League."

Blue, with a 12-4 record, opposes Baltimore's Jim Palmer, 10-7, who was Martin's choice to start for the American League in the 9 p.m., EDT, game before a sellout San Diego Stadium crowd of 55,000 and a national television audience.

Palmer was less than enthusiastic over his starting assignment. On Monday, the righthander underwent treatment in Los Angeles for a sore left shoulder and commented:

"I don't really want to start. I started last year and I embarrassed myself and now I'm hurt. But somebody has to do it."

Palmer missed the Monday workout that drew an estimated 25,000 to the park for the open session.

Martin's starting lineup will have first baseman Rod Carew of the Minnesota Twins leading off, followed by George Brett, Kansas City, 3b; Jim Rice, Boston, lf; Richie Zisk, Texas, rf; Carlton Fisk, Boston, c; Fred Lynn, Boston, cf, replacing Jackson; Don Money, Milwaukee, 2b, and Fred Patek, Kansas City, ss.

Lasorda, whose Dodgers lost to Martin's Yankees in the 1977 World Series, will have Pete Rose of Cincinnati at third base, followed by Rose's teammates Joe Morgan at second base and George Foster in right field. Greg Luzinski of Philadelphia plays left field and bats cleanup. Then come Steve Garvey, Los Angeles, 1b; Simmons, c; Rick

Monday, Los Angeles, cf, and Larry Bowa, Philadelphia, ss.

Neither manager revealed substitution strategy except Martin, who said, "I'll bring in my left-handed pitchers when Tommy brings in his left-handed hitters."

Ron Guidry, who won 13 games before losing his last start with the Yankees, had been expected to be the starter for the AL, but Martin said his ace hadn't shown his usual velocity in recent outings.

"Our players really want to win this one," declared the Yankees' manager. "This is the first time in recent years that the AL really wants to win."

President MacPhail said, "I can say the recent results have been an embarrassment, a league as superior as we are to lose as many as we have."

There was criticism of the fans' voting in determining the team, but the Dodgers' Garvey said he favors retention of the system and said, "There is no greater honor than playing with your peers in this game."

In 1974, Garvey won a starting position as a write-in and wound up as the game's Most Valuable Player.

Boe's rainbow has turned gray

NEW YORK (AP) — Once upon a time Roy Boe had the world on a string. He was a millionaire who owned two of the most desirable franchises in professional sports.

But that string seems close to strangling him, closing the book on what once was a fairy tale and now seems headed for a very unhappy ending.

The culprit for Boe is money. He doesn't have enough of it to support basketball's New Jersey Nets and hockey's New York Islanders — two teams which have a book liability of $30 million.

And because of those debts — and alleged mismanagement of funds — Boe must meet two deadlines this month in order to retain control of the two teams.

The National Hockey League's ultimatum gave Boe until July 18 to create a satisfactory plan that would make the Islanders, who have debts reaching $19.5 million, solvent. Ten days later, Boe must submit a viable financial plan to save the Nets, whose debts are in the neighborhood of $10 million.

"I keep going because I feel both franchises will be here for a long, long time," said Boe, who is seeking a buyer for the Nets. "And they've been my life for the

Auerbach may quit

BOSTON (AP) — Now it's Red Auerbach's turn to keep new Boston Celtics owner John Y. Brown in the dark.

Former owners of the Buffalo Braves, Brown and silent partner Harry Mangurian, swapped National Basketball Association teams last week with Irv Levin, who is moving the Buffalo franchise to San Diego.

Brown and Levin then unveiled a multi-player deal without consulting Auerbach, the Celtics' president and general manager.

Auerbach said Monday he's not ready to tell Brown if he'll stay on after his contract expires Aug. 1, although the two have discussed a new contract.

"I've received what's been described as a 'very attractive' offer," Auerbach said of Brown's bid to keep the president-general manager. "But attractiveness is in the eye of the beholder. I want to talk to him about it."

Brown called a news conference at Boston Garden today but Auerbach said his plans will not be announced. (See "Celtics" p. 2B) past eight years. I put my heart and guts into this.

"I'm not one of those 1 percent general partners who take a fee for bringing people together. I've got more of my money in these teams than anyone."

Boe, 48, owns 21 percent of the Islanders and 25 percent of the Nets. He has a total of 35 partners, one of whom brought attention to Boe's troubles by suing him.

Thomas J. Thornton, a limited partner in the Islanders, sued Boe for $10 million for allegedly diverting funds from the Islanders to keep the Nets afloat.

Last week, State Supreme Court Justice Douglas Young, acting on a motion in Thornton's suit, stripped Boe of his position as president of the Islanders while the team is resolving its financial obligations.

Temporarily stripped of one of his teams and in jeopardy of losing both clubs permanently, Boe is seeing a side of sports he couldn't possibly have imagined when he bought his first team — the Westchester Bulls, a minor league football team.

Boe got his investment money from a lucrative dress business, an idea that was spawned when his wife, Deon,

Reed doubled pleasure

NEW YORK (AP) — Ron Reed doesn't attend many pro basketball games anymore, but there was a time when he enjoyed the best seat in the house.

It was the mid-1960s and the seat was on the bench of the National Basketball Association's Detroit Pistons. Reed was one of those unique athletes who excelled in two pro sports.

"It wasn't that difficult," recalls the 6-foot-6 relief pitcher for the Philadelphia Phillies, "because I was single at the time and I had no family ties whatsoever, other than my parents back in Indiana."

After being graduated from Notre Dame in 1965, Reed was drafted third by the Pistons and made the team. But that left him with an entire summer to kill.

"I wasn't supposed to report to training camp until September," so the 35-year-old righthander says, "so I went looking for a professional baseball job."

He found one with the Atlanta Braves. They offered him a contract and sent him to (Class A) Waycross, Ga. Reed managed to get to the Pistons' camp because the minor league schedule ended in August. He also didn't have any trouble making it to spring training on time since the Pistons were out of the playoff picture in 1966 and 1967.

"The seasons overlapped a little bit at the major league level," he said, "but I was still in the minor leagues in baseball when I played for the Pistons."

Reed, who pitched in five games for the Braves while under contract with the Pistons, averaged about 15 minutes playing time a game in his two NBA seasons. In 118 games, Reed had 951 points and 762 rebounds. His most productive night was Jan. 15, 1966 — 24 points and 20 rebounds against the then-Baltimore Bullets.

During his brief stay in Detroit he had Dave DeBusschere and Dave Bing as teammates. DeBusschere, like Reed, also played baseball, spending two years as a pitcher with the Chicago White Sox.

"When Dave stuck with the White Sox he realized it was impossible to play both sports at the major league level because the seasons overlapped too much," said Reed, who eventually had the same choice but chose the other sport.

Bing's rookie season was Reed's final one in the NBA. "I'll never forget that season with him," Reed recalled. "I got hit in the forehead, the nose and the chest with all his passes. All you had to do was get open and he would get the ball to you."

Reed got the message. He figured his chances for longevity were greater in baseball. So he ditched the shorts and kept the spikes.

"I knew it was just a matter of time before the draft choices came in and I'd be sitting out. I knew my physical capabilities and I felt there was no way, over the long haul, that I could compete with these guys."

All-Star voting must change

SAN DIEGO (AP) — It is time to change the All-Star voting procedures to make this mid-season game a more meaningful collision between the American and National leagues.

On paper, the idea of turning the vote over to the fans was certainly a good one and you can't argue with Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's well-intentioned efforts in that direction eight years ago.

But, sadly, the fan vote has become little more than a popularity contest with familiar names receiving the strongest support. That doesn't always produce the very best performers in the first half of the season. And isn't that what the All-Star Game is all about — a game between two teams of current stars?

The most flagrant example of name-voting this year was the selection of Johnny Bench as the National League's starting catcher. More than 2.4 million fans voted the honor to the Cincinnati catcher, most of them casting ballots while Bench was in a hospital with back problems.

In the last six weeks, while his vote total was mushrooming, Bench played in no more than a half dozen games. He was elected on his reputation for past accomplishments and it is to his credit and good sense that he is passing up the game, allowing Ted Simmons to start behind the plate for the National League.

At second base, the NL starts Joe Morgan, a two-time Most Valuable Player who is struggling along this season with a .254 batting average and some nagging injuries of his own.

There are other examples of voting injustices. Don Money is starting at second base for the American League, despite the fact that he's rarely appeared at that position this season. Jeff Burroughs, leading the NL in hitting, was 11th among outfielders because the ballot listed him at first base. He compounded that problem by playing for a mostly anonymous Atlanta team that lacks the glamour and exposure of other clubs.

Players in both leagues generally agree that the fans are doing a poor job with the All-Star voting franchise. If the fans lose the All-Star vote, who gets it? The players?

The Most Valuable Player, Cy Young Award and Hall of Fame elections are conducted by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Washington shows Pokes speed

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Free agent George Washington turned in the fastest 40-yard dash time Monday during the Dallas Cowboys rookies and young veterans' first practice session of the 1978 National Football League training camp season.

The 5-9, 169-pound Georgia wide receiver sprinted the 40 in 4.44 seconds with closest competition coming from another free agent — 6-0, 196-pound defensive back Kenny Randle of Southern Cal, who ran a 4.53.

The 65 players also ran a mile and a half with Tim Abney, a 6-1, 170-pound free agent defensive back from Lincoln, Mo., clocking in at 8:51.

Eleventh-round draft choice Dennis Thurman, a Southern Cal defensive back, and second-year quarterback Glenn Carano finished second a third in the distance run.

Two-per-day practices begin Tuesday in preparation for scrimmages with Los Angeles Rams and Oakland Raiders rookies later in the week.

They didn't understand the forms Sterilized women say they are victims

By the Associated Press

They say they have recurring headaches and are abused by frustrated husbands but the physical hurt is less than the pain of knowing they are sterile. Estela Benavidez, 34, one of 10 women who filed suit against 10 doctors at the Los Angeles County-University of Southern California Medical Center, said her husband blames her for the sterilization. But she and the others say they were sterilized without their informed consent because they did not understand English. "A half hour before my child was born, the hospital staff told me I would be sterilized," Mrs. Benavidez, the mother of three girls, said Friday through a translator. "My husband thinks it was my idea alone. He constantly reminds me that if I had not had the operation, we would have a son now. I feel terrible." Superior Court Judge Jesse Curtis rejected the women's $10 million claim last week after hearing 2½ weeks of testimony. Curtis said that although the plaintiffs had suffered emotional and physical damage, the doctors performed the sterilizations in the belief the women had consented. The plaintiffs announced Friday at a news conference that they will appeal Curtis' decision next week in federal court. Victoria Hernandez, an attorney representing the women, said only seven of her clients signed consent forms for the operations. She added the others were said by the hospital to have given their consent verbally. Ms. Hernandez said all plaintiffs were in labor at the time they agreed to the operations. "No woman in labor is capable of understanding a consent form for sterilization," she said. "And nobody explained the forms to them in Spanish. Only two of the women understand English even a little." The attorney said her clients were misinformed, with some believing they would die without the operation. Federal and state law now requires a 72-hour period before sterilizations are performed, as well as explanations of the procedure in a language the patient can understand. As a result of the sterilizations from 1971 through 1974, the women are severely depressed and suffer headaches and backaches, said Dr. Terry Kupers. "Half of their marriages are torn up, and the other half are abused," said Kupers, a psychiatrist who practices in Los Angeles. "Some are beaten by their husbands. They are isolated because of their shame." Anthropologist Carlos Velez of the University of California at Los Angeles said the sterilizations have "fractured" the women's social and marital relationships. The Mexican culture usually defines the female role as that of a child-bearer and the inability to procreate is considered shameful, he said.

FAMILY KISS — Bonnie Sue Holbert, who was crowned Miss Arkansas last year while her brother was recovering from a plane crash, will give up her crown this week. Here, she gets a kiss from her brother, Andy, who will dance during the pageant. They were in Hot Springs Sunday to begin pageant rehearsals.

English teacher starts career in Peace Corps

"Some people think I'm overqualified to teach in the Peace Corps," said Austin, Tex.-born Jean Love whose parents live in Durham, N.C., and whose uncle Stanley Russ is a state senator in Conway, Ark. "I don't think I'm overqualified. When you work in a foreign country, you're never overqualified." Miss Love is the sister of Bruce Love, who works in Big Spring with the railway system. She was recently in Philadelphia with 70 other Peace Corps trainees for three days of orientation before flying to Morocco where she will teach English for two years.

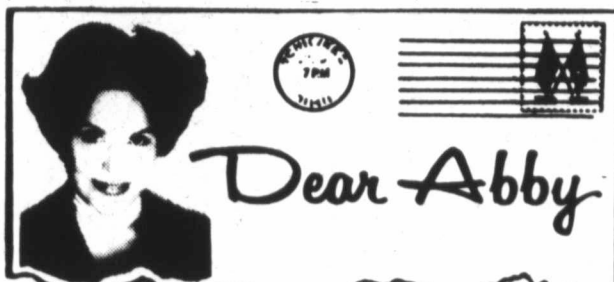

JEAN LOVE

The soft-spoken Miss Love's unassuming demeanor conceals a 1978 master's degree in foreign language education from the University of Texas at Austin and another in linguistics from the University of Caen, amidst the hills of Normandy. She is fluent in French, speaks Spanish and writes Arabic. "My life runs in cycles," said Miss Love who enjoys Beethoven as much as she does Jacques Brel. "When I was young, I read 'The Thousand and One Nights.' That got me to Syria in 1971. "While in Texas in 1975, I met some Moroccan... I wrote in their embassy in Washington, inquiring how could I work in the country. They suggested the Peace Corps.

"When she first told me she's going, I was completely amazed, but when she told me the reasons why, I was impressed," said Dr. Laura Love, a speech pathology professor at the North Carolina Central University. Dr. Love believes that the Peace Corps will enable her daughter to utilize her talents and give her an edge in the job market when she returns home. Miss Love held a garage sale before leaving and "sold everything I didn't absolutely need." "If you can leave behind the people that you love, why you can leave behind any and all physical possessions. I have had a car, for example, and my friends couldn't understand that — but I'll spend $1,000 a month on letters to friends," she said halfway in jest. While working in Morocco, where 40 per cent of the youth between 20 and 30 are unemployed, Miss Love will subsist on an allowance of $250 a month, about what an American would spend at the Rabat Hilton for a week's lodging alone. Some 150 American volunteers already serve throughout Morocco, mostly in agricultural and health programs or as teachers of English, a language that Moroccan students must pass if they hope to enroll at a university. The Peace Corps, budgeted at $83 million, is part of ACTION, the federal volunteer agency. Close to 6,700 volunteers work in 64 developing nations. About 4,700 VISTAs and 235,000 Retired Senior Volunteers at home are also part of ACTION. "As an English teacher, I really don't have to go to Morocco to immerse myself in a different culture," concluded Miss Love. "I could have joined VISTA at home. Maybe I will when I come back."

Fears Worst For Falsifying Age

DEAR ABBY: Many years ago I falsified my age on my driver's license. (I deducted three years from my birth date.) I am now 62, and I look every year of it. I am actually entitled to some senior citizen benefits, but my driver's license says I'm only 59! In order to change the birth date on my driver's license, I have to write to the State Department of Motor Vehicles. I haven't written to them because I'm terrified of the consequences. I've never been in any kind of trouble in my entire lifetime, and I have an unblemished driving record. Will I lose my license? I can't have that happen! Will I be arrested? Will I have to pay a stiff fine? What will my punishment be? Please find out what's in store for me. If the penalty is too great, I'll leave well enough alone and forget the benefits. I don't want to go to jail, but I think they may have to lock me up in a mental institution if I have to worry much longer over this mess I got myself into years ago. Has anyone else ever had this problem? If you use this letter, for heaven's sake, please change my name.

WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: Many others have had this problem, and if that's the worst crime anyone ever committed, we'd all be saints. Simply provide proof of your real age to the Department of Motor Vehicles (a copy of your birth certificate is considered acceptable documentation), and all will be forgiven and forgotten.

DEAR ABBY: At the bottom of your column you say, "You'll feel better if you get it off your chest," so I am writing to get something off my chest.

I get along OK with my mother-in-law, although deep down I've always had the feeling that she never really liked me.

What bugs me most about her is this: When she calls our house and I answer the phone, she says, "Let me talk to Dennis!"

She never asks me how I am or anything. I don't have the nerve to tell her to her face how much this irritates me, but if I were to pick up the paper one day and see this letter in your column, it would really make my day.

SOMEBODY WHO FEELS LIKE NOBODY

DEAR SOMEBODY: I'm glad I was able to make your day.

DEAR ABBY: I am just about ready to blow my stack. My husband and I gave his parents a key to our house so that they could check on it when we are out of town, although we seldom are. They live near us, so it is handy for them to drop in often. Now when they come over, they never knock or ring the bell, they just let themselves in with the key they have. They come into our home whether we are home or not. What's the solution?

HAD IT ON OHIO

DEAR HAD IT: Ask your husband to ask his parents to please knock or ring the doorbell when they visit, and to use the key only to "check the house" when you are out of town.

And if they continue to ignore your wishes, the solution is obvious—change the locks.

me. Now people are calling me a tramp. Am I one if it was my very first time? How can I make people stop saying this to me? Please help me. I'm hurt badly.

Hurt, Woodfield, Ohio

Dear Hurt: No, you are not a tramp but you should now be a wiser young lady!

Boys have the reputation of kissing and telling.

Only your boyfriend and you really know what happened. The other people are only speculating.

Your reputation will again be good if you really want it to be and you guide your life-style in this manner.

Dear Doctor: You are my last hope. I cannot hide my secret much longer.

Three months ago I went to visit my cousins in a neighboring city. They are older than I am and kind of wild. I come from a strict Mormon home and I'm very shy. Anyway, they had a party and I got drunk and now I'm pregnant and don't know who the father is.

Please help me. Every day it's getting worse.

S.K., Menatchee, Wash.

Dear S.K.: I would hope that you will confide in your mother. If you do, she will know what to do.

If you can't tell mother just yet, talk to a group such as Planned Parenthood, but also seek out a member of your clergy to help guide you.

You haven't said if you have seen a doctor yet. If you haven't, see one immediately!

Coahoma Past Matrons meet

The Past Matrons Club of Coahoma, chapter 499, Order of the Eastern Star, met for breakfast July 1 at the First Methodist Church.

Mrs. Joe Miller and Mrs. Ernest Garrett were hostesses. The tables were decorated with white cloths and featured red, white and blue decorations. The centerpiece was a replica of Abe Lincoln's hat surrounded by flags, napkins, plates and favors completed the decorations.

Jane Headrick gave the invocation. Mrs. John Westmoreland, president, presided, and gave the program. A report on the year's project, a show case, was given. It has been finished, and placed in the masonic hall. Ricky Phinney did the craft work.

Out-of-town members present were Jimmie Brown, Wink, and Christeen Tindol, Canadian. Edith Taylor attended, following a long absence due to eye surgery. It was reported that Neva Swan's husband is in Methodist Hospital in Lubbock following surgery. Hostesses for August will be Neva Swan and Adaline Madison.

National All-Stars try for seven in a row tonight

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Pitcher Vida Blue and outfielder Reggie Jackson, teammates for so long on the controversial Oakland A's, are in and out of the spotlight for tonight's 49th All-Star Game.

Blue, traded across the bay by Oakland to San Francisco during spring training, becomes the first pitcher ever to start All-Star games for both leagues when he opens on the mound for the Nationals.

"Some youngster on the plane told me I was the last winning pitcher for the American League," Blue commented, and then laughed, "I already knew it."

He was the starter and winner in 1971 when the AL took a 6-4 victory — with Jackson smashing a tremendous home run over the roof of Detroit's Tiger Stadium — and also started in 1975 when the NL won 6-3 in its current domination of the midsummer classic.

Monday night, however, Jackson became the fifth player to withdraw from the American League squad when he telephoned Manager Billy Martin and reported that he was running a fever of 102-103 degrees. Jackson was promptly replaced by his New York Yankees teammate, third baseman Graig Nettles, who himself had been scratched Sunday with a bruised toe.

Jackson is the only AL starter to pull out but the junior circuit also has lost catcher Thurman Munson, infielder Rick Burleson and outfielder Carl Yastrzemski.

The National League lost starting catcher Johnny Bench, who has been suffering from a bad back in recent weeks. Ted Simmons of St. Louis will replace him.

The NL has won six straight, 14 of 15, 19 of 21 and leads the series 29-18 with one tie. American League President Lee MacPhail calls the recent result "embarrassing."

Manager Tommy Lasorda of the Los Angeles Dodgers, in naming a hurler from arch-rival San Francisco, said Blue's knowledge of American League hitters was a factor, but added, "I think he is the best pitcher in the National League."

Blue, with a 12-4 record, opposes Baltimore's Jim Palmer, 10-7, who was Martin's choice to start for the American League in the 9 p.m. EDT, game before a sellout San Diego Stadium crowd of 55,000 and a national television audience.

Palmer was less than enthusiastic over his starting assignment. On Monday, the righthander underwent treatment in Los Angeles for a sore left shoulder and commented:

"I don't really want to start. I started last year and I embarrassed myself and now I'm hurt. But somebody has to do it."

Palmer missed the Monday workout that drew an estimated 25,000 to the park for the open session.

Martin's starting lineup will have first baseman Rod Carew of the Minnesota Twins leading off, followed by George Brett, Kansas City, 3b; Jim Rice, Boston, lf; Richie Zisk, Texas, rf; Carlton Fisk, Boston, c; Fred Lynn, Boston, cf, replacing Jackson; Don Money, Milwaukee, 2b, and Fred Patek, Kansas City, ss.

Lasorda, whose Dodgers lost to Martin's Yankees in the 1977 World Series, will have Pete Rose of Cincinnati at third base, followed by Rose's teammates Joe Morgan at second base and George Foster in right field. Greg Luzinski of Philadelphia plays left field and bats cleanup. Then come Steve Garvey, Los Angeles, 1b; Simmons, c; Rick

Monday, Los Angeles, cf, and Larry Bowa, Philadelphia, ss.

Neither manager revealed substitution strategy except Martin, who said, "I'll bring in my left-handed pitchers when Tommy brings in his left-handed hitters."

Ron Guidry, who won 13 games before losing his last start with the Yankees, had been expected to be the starter for the AL, but Martin said his ace hadn't shown his usual velocity in recent outings.

"Our players really want to win this one," declared the Yankees' manager. "This is the first time in recent years that the AL really wants to win."

President MacPhail said, "I can say the recent results have been an embarrassment, a league as superior as we are to lose as many as we have."

There was criticism of the fans' voting in determining the team, but the Dodgers' Garvey said he favors retention of the system and said, "There is no greater honor than playing with your peers in this game."

In 1974, Garvey won a starting position as a write-in and wound up as the game's Most Valuable Player.

A LITTLE HELP FROM THE COACH — Rams rookie corner back Curtis Royall gets a little help from Los Angeles Rams head coach George Allen get in a little

Boe's rainbow has turned gray

NEW YORK (AP) — Once upon a time Roy Boe had the world on a string. He was a millionaire who owned two of the most desirable franchises in professional sports.

But that string seems close to strangling him, closing the book on what once was a fairy tale and now seems headed for a very unhappy ending.

The culprit for Boe is money. He doesn't have enough of it to support basketball's New Jersey Nets and hockey's New York Islanders — two teams which have a book liability of $30 million.

And because of those debts — and alleged mismanagement of funds — Boe must meet two deadlines this month in order to retain control of the two teams.

The National Hockey League's ultimatum gave Boe until July 18 to create a satisfactory plan that would make the Islanders, who have debts reaching $19.5 million, solvent. Ten days later, Boe must submit a viability financial plan to save the Nets, whose debts are in the neighborhood of $10 million.

"I keep going because I feel both franchises will be here for a long, long time," said Boe, who is seeking a buyer for the Nets. "And they've been my life for the

Auerbach may quit

BOSTON (AP) — Now it's Red Auerbach's turn to keep new Boston Celtics owner John Y. Brown in the dark.

Former owners of the Buffalo Braves, Brown and silent partner Harry Mangurian, swapped National Basketball Association teams last week with Irv Levin, who is moving the Buffalo franchise to San Diego.

Brown and Levin then unveiled a multi-player deal without consulting Auerbach, the Celtics' president and general manager.

Auerbach said Monday he's not ready to tell Brown if he'll stay on after his contract expires Aug. 1, although the two have discussed a new contract.

"I've received what's been described as a 'very attractive' offer," Auerbach said of Brown's bid to keep the president-general manager. "But attractiveness is in the eye of the beholder. I want to talk to him about it."

Brown called a news conference at Boston Garden today but Auerbach said his plans will not be announced. (See "Celtics" p. 2B) past eight years. I put my heart and guts into this. I'm not one of those 1 percent general partners who take a fee for bringing people together. I've got more of my money in these teams than anyone."

Boe, 48, owns 21 percent of the Islanders and 25 percent of the Nets. He has a total of 35 partners, one of whom brought attention to Boe's troubles by suing him. Thomas J. Thornton, a limited partner in the Islanders, sued Boe for $10 million for allegedly diverting funds from the Islanders to keep the Nets afloat.

Last week, State Supreme Court Justice Douglas Young, acting on a motion in Thornton's suit, stripped Boe of his position as president of the Islanders while the team is resolving its financial obligations.

Temporarily stripped of one of his teams and in jeopardy of losing both clubs permanently, Boe is seeing a side of sports he couldn't possibly have imagined when he bought his first team — the Westchester Bulls, a minor league football team.

Boe got his investment money from a lucrative dress business, an idea that was spawned when his wife, Deon,

Reed doubled pleasure

NEW YORK (AP) — Ron Reed doesn't attend many pro basketball games anymore, but there was a time when he enjoyed the best seat in the house.

It was the mid-1960s and the seat was on the bench of the National Basketball Association's Detroit Pistons. Reed was one of those unique athletes who excelled in two pro sports.

"It wasn't that difficult," recalls the 6-foot-6 relief pitcher for the Philadelphia Phillies, "because I was single at the time and I had no family ties whatsoever, other than my parents back in Indiana."

After being graduated from Notre Dame in 1965, Reed was drafted third by the Pistons and made the team. But that left him with an entire summer to kill.

"I wasn't supposed to report to training camp until September," the 35-year-old righthander says, "so I went looking for a professional baseball job."

He found one with the Atlanta Braves. They offered him a contract and sent him to (Class A) Waycross, Ga. Reed managed to get to the Pistons' camp because the minor league schedule ended in August. He also didn't have any trouble making it to spring training on time since the Pistons were out of the playoff picture in 1966 and 1967.

"The seasons overlapped a little bit at the major league level," he said, "but I was still in the minor leagues in baseball when I played for the Pistons."

Reed, who pitched in five games for the Braves while under contract with the Pistons, averaged about 15 minutes playing time a game in his two NBA seasons. In 118 games, Reed had 951 points and 762 rebounds. His most productive night was Jan. 15, 1966 — 24 points and 20 rebounds against the then-Baltimore Bullets.

During his brief stay in Detroit he had Dave DeBusschere and Dave Bing as teammates. DeBusschere, like Reed, also played baseball, spending two years as a pitcher with the Chicago White Sox.

"When Dave stuck with the White Sox he realized it was impossible to play both sports at the major league level because the seasons overlapped too much," said Reed, who eventually had the same choice but chose the other sport.

Bing's rookie season was Reed's final one in the NBA. "I'll never forget that season with him," Reed recalled. "I got hit in the forehead, the nose and the chest with all his passes. All you had to do was get open and he would get the ball to you."

Reed got the message. He figured his chances for longevity were greater in baseball. So he ditched the shorts and kept the spikes.

"I knew it was just a matter of time before the draft choices came in and I'd be sitting out. I knew my physical capabilities and I felt there was no way, over the long haul, that I could compete with these guys."

All-Star voting must change

SAN DIEGO (AP) — It is time to change the All-Star voting procedures to make this mid-season game a more meaningful collision between the American and National leagues.

On paper, the idea of turning the vote over to the fans was certainly a good one and you can't argue with Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's well-intentioned efforts in that direction eight years ago.

But, sadly, the fan vote has become little more than a popularity contest with familiar names receiving the strongest support. That doesn't always produce the very best performers in the first half of the season. And isn't that what the All-Star Game is all about — a game between two teams of current stars?

The most flagrant example of name-voting this year was the selection of Johnny Bench as the National League's starting catcher. More than 2.4 million fans voted the honor to the Cincinnati catcher, most of them casting ballots while Bench was in a hospital with back problems.

In the last six weeks, while his vote total was mushrooming, Bench played in no more than a half dozen games. He was elected on his reputation for past accomplishments and it is his credit and good sense that he is passing up the game, allowing Ted Simmons to start behind the plate for the National League.

At second base, the NL starts Joe Morgan, a two-time Most Valuable Player who is struggling along this season with a .254 batting average and some nagging injuries of his own.

There are other examples of voting injustices. Don Money is starting at second base for the American League, despite the fact that he's rarely appeared at that position this season. Jeff Burroughs, leading the NL in hitting, was 11th among outfielders because the ballot listed him at first base. He compounded that problem by playing for a mostly anonymous Atlanta team that lacks the glamour and exposure of other clubs.

Players in both leagues generally agree that the fans are doing a poor job with the All-Star voting franchise. If the fans lose the All-Star vote, who gets it? The players?

The Most Valuable Player, Cy Young Award and Hall of Fame elections are conducted by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Washington shows Pokes speed

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Free agent George Washington turned in the fastest 40-yard dash time Monday during the Dallas Cowboys rookies and young veterans' first practice session of the 1978 National Football League training camp season.

The 5-9, 169-pound Georgia wide receiver sprinted the 40 in 4.44 seconds with closest competition coming from another free agent — 6-0, 196-pound defensive back Kenny Randle of Southern Cal, who ran a 4.53.

The 65 players also ran a mile and a half with Tim Abney, a 6-1, 170-pound free agent defensive back from Lincoln, Mo., clocking in at 8:51.

Eleventh-round draft choice Dennis Thurman, a Southern Cal defensive back, and second-year quarterback Glenn Carano finished second a third in the distance run.

Two-per-day practices begin Tuesday in preparation for scrimmages with Los Angeles Rams and Oakland Raiders rookies later in the week.

SCORES UPSET — Little-known Victor Pecci of Paraguay makes a shot against Ken Rosewall of Australia during their match in the Forest Hills Invitational in New York Monday evening. Pecci routed seasoned Rosewall 6-3, 6-1.

Bradley still unsigned

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Luther Bradley, the Notre Dame defensive back who was the Detroit Lions' top draft choice, is the only rookie still unsigned by the National Football League team.

Michigan's Dwight Hicks, Detroit's No. 6 pick, came to contract terms with the Lions Monday, along with No. 5 pick Amos Fowler, an offensive guard from Southern Mississippi, a team spokesman said.

Spokesman Brian Muir said of Bradley, "We're still negotiating and I'm hopeful we can still get him signed in time for camp... I'm optimistic we can get it done."

Hisle is top Americaner

SAN DIEGO — Milwaukee's Larry Hisle was named American League player of the week for his 400 average with four homers and eight runs batted in last week's action for the Brewers.

Rosewall upset at Forest

NEW YORK — Vitas Gerulaitis defeated Phil Dent 6-1, 7-6 in the inaugural match of the Forest Hills Invitational tennis tournament.

Victor Pecci of Paraguay routed Ken Rosewall of Australia 6-3, 6-1 in another first-round match.

The $300,000 tournament, a World Champions Tennis event, is being played for the first time. Officials announced that 3,800 attended the first night's matches at Forest Hills, far below the 12,000-seat capacity of the old horseshoe stadium, site until this year of the U.S. Open.

Twelve men are playing in three round-robin groups for a $100,000 first prize.

Forego hanging up shoes

NEW YORK — Forego, the second winningest horse of all-time, has been retired by his owner, Mrs. Martha Geary.

Forego finished with lifetime earnings of $1,938,957, just $39,000 short of Kelso's all-time mark.

Sore legs, always a problem for the eight-year-old gelding, were cited by trainer Frank Whiteley as the reason for the retirement. The last race for Forego was the Suburban Handicap on July 4, where he finished fifth in a six-horse race.

Santone climbs over Midland

San Antonio climbed out of a tie for the Texas League West cellar Monday by defeating Midland 8-6.

The only other league action saw Jackson's winning streak climb to 12 with a 2-1 victory over Shreveport in 14 innings. Tulsa at Arkansas was rained out.

San Antonio broke open a 5-5 game with a three-run seventh inning. Alex Taveris sent in what proved to be the Dodgers' winning run with a two-run single.

Taveris drove in four runs in all, going 3-3 for the evening.

The win went to Dave Stewart, 10-8. Rick Sander received credit for his first save of the year. Lee Smith, 7-5, took the loss for Midland.

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — "If you were going to build a new course, you certainly wouldn't build one like this," said Arnold Palmer.

"If I tried to lay out another course like this one, people would laugh at me and say, 'Call that a golf course?'" said Jack Nicklaus.

"It's a very well laid-out course," said Andy Bean, this year's top U.S. money winner. "You've got to hit a

...In fact, some would use a plow

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — If the famed old course at St. Andrews happened to lie in the United States, they would plow it up and build a string of condominiums on it.

A lot of golfers would cheer. Traditionalists would weep.

She's hardly a pretty creature, and certainly not a nice one — this stretch of whin and gorse and shot-making agony that lies beside the North Sea, the seat of the Royal and Ancient Club, cradle of the game.

But she's St. Andrews, she's special and she's opening the doors this week to the world's best professional golfers, gathered for the 107th British Open championship.

Bernard Dawin, the great British golf historian, spoke of her in frightening terms but marveled that she was wooed by 'a town given wholeheartedly to golf — the butler, baker and candlestick maker.'

Thirty-two years ago, slamm'n' Sammy Snead took one look at her and said, "Back home in Virginia, you wouldn't plant beets on a place like that." He won in 1946 and never came back.

Bob Jones was an American whiz kid of 19 when he first set eyes on the craggy old dame in 1921. He took a 43 for nine holes, blew his stack and told friends, "I don't care if I ever play this course again."

In subsequent years, he fell in love with her, won the perfect shot to get close." They were all talking about the Old Course at St. Andrews, cradle of the game and mecca for golfers the world over. On Wednesday, St. Andrews stages its seventh British Open since World War II and its 22nd since the Open was first played 120 years ago.

Both Nicklaus and Palmer hastened to get the record straight — they weren't guilty of high golfing treason.

British Amateur here for one of the four crowns in his 1930 Grand Slam and became an idol of the local populace.

Tom Watson, the young Kansas City shotmaker with the Tom Sawyer look, got his first view of ancient St. Andrews last weekend prior to defense of his title and admitted he was impressed and dazed.

"I don't know whether to hate it or like it," he said.

Tom used the neuter gender. Most golfers and most historians personalize — and feminize — golf courses. Jones once said of Augusta National, site of the Masters: "She is like a fickle woman. You can't push her around. Treat her gently or she'll leap up and bite you."

But Augusta National drapes herself in a cloak of majestic pines. She wears garlands of dogwood, azalia and wisteria in her hair and necklaces of finely fashioned sand around her throat. Most American golf courses are similar — marvelously coiffured and manicured.

The old lady of St. Andrews is, by comparison, a hag. She hasn't fixed her hair or done her fingernails for centuries. She is just the way God and nature fashioned her. Let no one dare touch a hair on her shaggy head. It's against the law of the township of St. Andrews.

Her hazards are many and unique — swilkan burn (creek), crossing the first fairway; Kitchen, Hell, Grave and Ginger bunkers on the 14th; Walkinshaw's Grave on the 13th; the Principal's Nose on the 16th; Valley of Sin on the 18th; 14 greens shared on both the outgoing and incoming nines.

But no golfer dares shun her. To court her and survive — that's a mark of immortality. Bob Jones knew it. So does Jack Nicklaus.

NOAH'S ARK FLIPS — Hydroplane driver Noel Waters survived the spectacular accident photographed by Jerry Berg during a weekend regatta on Black Lake. Waters was at the helm of Noah's Ark when the 145-class limited boat became airborne while running at near

"It's a very subtle course — though some people might call it by other names," said Palmer, who played his first Open at St. Andrews 19 years ago. "To play it properly you've got to take a great deal of thought."

"I think it's fabulous," said Nicklaus, who like Palmer is a two-time Open winner. Nicklaus won in 1970, the last time the Open was played here.

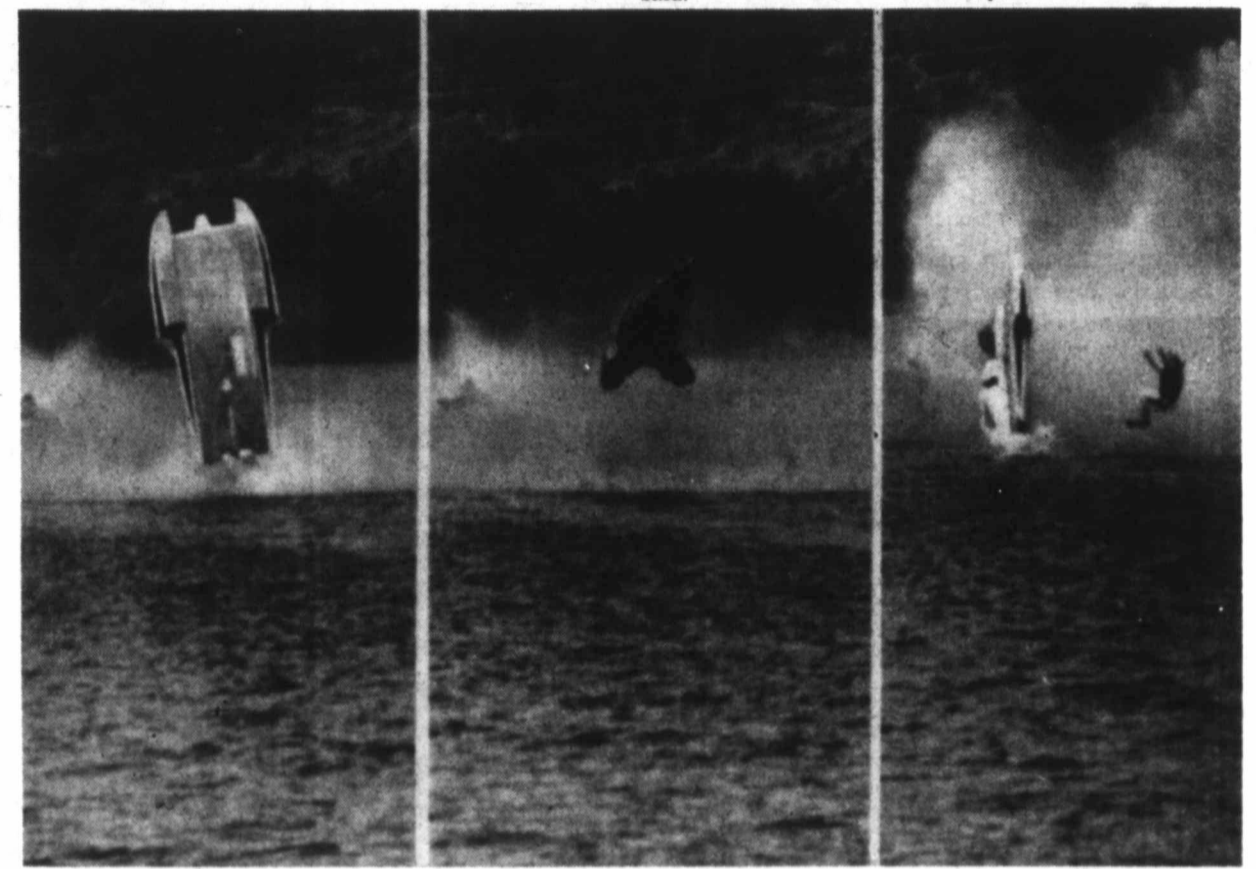

"You've got to accept it for what it is — the home of golf. Some people may say it's the worst course they've seen. It isn't, and I love it," Nicklaus said.

St. Andrews is a course, windswept most of the time, without trees, with gorse lining the fairways and with hidden sandtraps and undulations to catch the unwary.

Bean arrived here Sunday after an overnight flight from the United States. Three hours afterwards he made his first acquaintance with the course and shot a 4-under-par 68 in practice.

"I must admit that when I first saw it I thought it was rougher than we expect in the U.S. But the more you play it, the more you learn to respect it," he said.

St. Andrews is a course, windswept most of the time, without trees, with gorse lining the fairways and with hidden sandtraps and undulations to catch the unwary.

OSU's Tway captures Trans-Miss spotlight

DALLAS (AP) — Bob Tway, the No. 5 member of Oklahoma State's NCAA championship golf team, grabbed the spotlight Monday for his teammates in the first of two qualifying rounds for the 1978 Trans-Miss golf tournament.

The 19-year-old Marietta, Ga., amateur fired a four-under-par 67 at Brook Hollow Golf Club, where more than half the qualifying field had scores in the 80s and 90s.

OSU's top player, Lindy Miller, missed an eagle by an inch on the 18th hole and settled for a tap-in birdie for a 70, one-under-par on the more wide-open Las Colinas Country Club, a few miles away at Irving, Texas.

Another OSU player, Britt Harrison, came in at one-over 72 and former Mexican Amateur champ Rafael Alarcon shot a double-bogey on No. 17 and a bogey on 18 to finish with a three-over 74. Both Harrison and Alarcon were at Las Colinas.

The field of 400 of the nation's top amateur golfers played in 102-degree temperatures. The best 64 after today's second qualifying round will compete in match play at Brook Hollow that begins Wednesday and continue until two finalists battle in a 36-hole final Sunday.

Kenny Huff of Dallas led the field at Las Colinas, matching Tway's 67. The only two other sub-par rounds of the day were a 69 by John Shackelford of Austin, Texas, 69; Andy Blossom of Stockton, Calif., 70; and Gary Pinns of Winston-Salem, N.C., 71. Shackelford and Blossom were at Las Colinas and Pinns at Brook Hollow.

"I wasn't trying for any kind of super round. I was just trying to hit it in the fairway and onto the green, and I happened to hit a few close enough that I made the puts," said Tway, who offset two bogeys with four birdies and an eagle.

nounced. The former Celtics coach said Brown's offer deals with front office control as well as money.

Auerbach also says he had a variety of job offers from other sources. He won nine NBA titles as coach of the Celtics from 1950-66 and was front office chief for the last four Boston championships.

The Celtics' general manager was in the midst of a rebuilding plan when Levin and Brown made their deal.

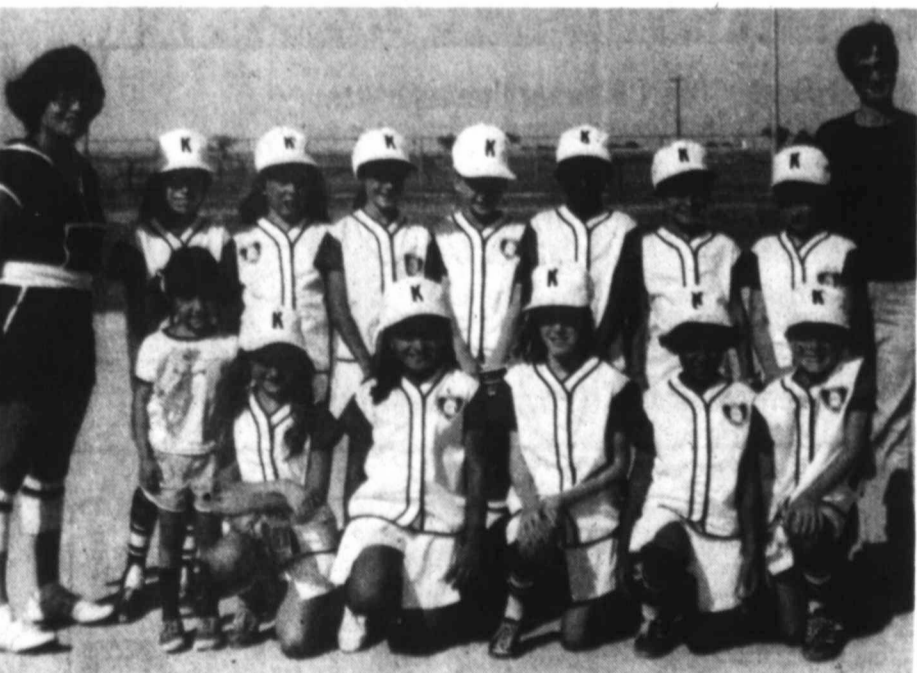

The controversial trade sent Kermit Washington, Kevin Kunnert, No. 1 draftee Freeman Williams and rights to Sidney Wicks to San Diego. In exchange, Boston received Marvin Barnes, Billy Knight and Nate Archibald.

Auerbach signed Kunnert as a free agent, traded for Washington and drafted Williams.

Other members of the Celtics front office also wanted to meet with Brown today to discuss their status.

Jeff Cohen, the team's assistant general manager, said the staff expects to stay but had not yet met with Brown.

Boston finished with its worst record in history last season — 32-50 — and missed the playoffs. But Auerbach recently negotiated new contracts for Coach Tom Sanders and assistant K.C. Jones, both former Celtic players.

Texas has lower taxes Ridin' fence

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas has lower state taxes than most other states in the United States, including all its neighbor states, said Comptroller Bob Bullock.

Bullock said Monday in a statement that Texas actually is 46th when considering just state taxes, according to fiscal figures for 1977.

He said Texas state tax collections were 5.82 percent of personal income in 1977, compared to a national average of 7 per cent. California's state taxes were 7.75 percent of personal income and New York's 8.04 percent.

Bullock said Oklahoma state taxes are 6.91 percent of personal income, Louisiana 7.89, Arkansas 7.16 and New Mexico 9.34.

Cotton Mize, one of the baseballingest buys in town, was up at Hobbs, N.M. the other day involved in a baseball game.

So what else is new? Well, a fellow came up to him and said, "I've been waiting to run across somebody from Big Spring for 20 years."

"Oh?" says Cotton, expecting some kind of an attack. But the man told Cotton, "About 20 years ago, I found a Big Spring High School class ring while I was attending the Dawson County fair in Lamesa.

"I never have found anyone to give it to, so I'll give it to you."

Cotton held out little hope for finding who owned a 1949 class ring. "I'll bet they're not still hunting it," Mize quipped.

But the ring was initialed inside. Going to the high school yearbooks for an answer, the logical thing to do was to look in the 1949 yearbook for the seniors.

There's no 1949 yearbook in the vault, but there is a 1948 one, so we looked in the junior class. There was only one RDB in the class and that was Ray Burke.

A check of the permanent records shows that he not only was an RB but an RDB because his middle name was Delnoe.

Then I began to look for Ray Delnoe Burke. I called all the Burkes in the local telephone directory. Two did not answer. One had the number changed. And one thought I was crazy.

Who is RDB?

with Marj Carpenter

The records had showed that his father, George Burke had operated a Gulf Station at 3rd and Lancaster. Tommy Gage, whose father was then a Gulf wholesaler, remembers the family but doesn't know what happened to them.

They used to reside at 507 E. 15th. Does anybody know the whereabouts of Ray Delnoe Burke? If so, Cotton Mize has a ring for him.

Ge, 1949 is a long time ago. That's 29 years. Before coast-to-coast television, in the really dark ages. Ha.

Speaking of television, I used to think all of the old movie stars were dying off, but it seems that television stars are also now beginning to bite the dust.

I was quite shaken up over Steve Crane, whom we know always magically escaped getting caught by the Bermans and who always outmaneuvered both the German Sgt. Schultz and the head of the prison camp in Hogan's Heroes — was killed by being beaten to death out in Arizona. A terrible thing.

Then the next week, James Daly who played the main doctor in Medical Center, died of an unknown illness.

How could he possibly die of an unknown illness when on television he had all the answers to all ills?

It's amazing how we relate to television characters. And I watch TV very seldom. I heard one woman who watches one of the soap operas daily say recently, "When the woman died on my favorite program, I felt so badly. I really thought I ought to go and bake a pie and take it to the family."

But back to the subject, if you know what ever happened to Ray Delnoe Burke, call Cotton Mize, or call this old fence rider — when I'm not out ridin'.

Libertarians submit petition to get on ballot

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Libertarian Party submitted signed petitions Monday to the Secretary of State in an attempt to get on the November general election ballot.

The party had to collect more than 20,000 signatures of persons who did not vote in either the Democratic or Republican primaries. The Secretary of State's office must verify the signatures.

Alan Vogel, Libertarian candidate for governor, said his party advocates tax reduction, abolishment of government bureaucracies and repeal of laws against so-called "victimless crimes."

"We believe in an absolute right to private property," he said at a news conference. "We believe that a man who earns a dollar should not have to pay taxes to anybody."

Victim of disease returns to convention

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — William Stokes spent 41 days in a hospital fighting Legionnaire's Disease which he got while attending the 1976 convention of the Pennsylvania American Legion here.

The mysterious germ killed 29 people, sickened 150 others, and frightened the nation. But now Stokes, who lost his right leg when he stepped on a World War II land mine, is coming back to Philadelphia for another state Legion convention that starts today — and isn't afraid at all.

"I don't think it's going to happen again," he said, laughing, during a telephone interview from his home in Jeannette, about 40 miles east of Pittsburgh.

The deadly outbreak caused the biggest germ hunt in the nation's medical history, and also forced the closing of the world-famous Bellevue-Stratford, where the Legion activities had been centered. The sickness hit after the convention was over.

More than 15,000 Legionnaires and their wives return for the first time here and Adjutant General Edward Hoak, said: "We don't have any apprehension about coming back to Philadelphia."

Last year the Legion met in Pittsburgh. The state's two biggest cities are the only ones with hotel space available for the convention, and they alternate each year.

"We're looking for no problems at all, and I don't think there's anybody who is nervous about it," Hoak said, although he acknowledged that security would be strict at the Sheraton hotel.

C-C recording tells tourists of attractions

For information for tourists, one can dial 3-0831. The local tourism council is sponsoring a recording which tells tourists of attractions in Big Spring.

The recording will be changed every five to ten days and offers highlights of things happening in the city. I also tells of regular attractions such as the 'big spring' in Comanche Trail Park, the tennis center, the golf course, the Heritage Museum and the Pottion House, to name a few.

The chamber has also received new brochures highlighting attractions in the city, to be displayed at places which are occupied by tourists.
