HOW TO FEED HOGS ON THE AVERAGE FARM

Care for the Brood Sow and Young Pig—Grazing Crops and Pasturing Feeds.

All breeding stock and young animals need liberal amounts of nutritious feeds that will develop and maintain muscle and bone," said R. L. Shields, head of the division of animal husbandry and dairying of Clemson College, making suggestions for the care and feeding of hogs, with special reference to brood sows and pigs. Prof. Shields suggests the following feeding practices to the average farmer who is establishing a hog plant this autumn or winter.
The brood sow must receive careful attention, she must be kept in good condition during gestation, or the period of the development of her piglets, but one should not allow her to become fat. The sow must have exceptional care if she is to produce two litters a year. Suitable rations for the brood sow consist of: (1) equal parts by weight of ground corn, wheat middlings and ground oats; or (2) equal parts by weight of rice meal, wheat middlings and ground oats; or (3) equal parts by weight of rice meal and ground oats.
Either rice meal or wheat middlings may be used as a part of a ration of feeds if preferable. Wheat bran may be used as a part of a ration of mature breeding hogs. Bran is too bulky to constitute the entire ration. Skim milk and buttermilk are excellent for both growing and mature hogs, and should be used when available.
Rely on grazing crops to supply the bulk portion of the ration, as such feeds aid in keeping the hogs in thrifty condition. They balance the ration, reduce the cost of pork production, generally compel exercise, ward off the cholera and reduce diseases to a minimum. Rape, wheat, oats, and rye, sown in the fall, furnish excellent winter grazing. Vetch may be used to advantage with any of the grains. Bar and crimson clover sown or Bermuda sod are especially recommended. When the clover dies out the Bermuda grass will replace it and can be grazed until frost. Cowpeas, soy beans, peanuts and sorghum, sown in May, will furnish grazing in late summer and early fall.
If given an opportunity pigs will soon learn to eat. They should be weaned when about seven weeks old if skim milk can be given them and it is desired to raise two litters a year. Otherwise they may be allowed to run with the sow until ten weeks old or even longer. The sow should have only dry food for several days if the pigs are taken from her, instead of allowing her to wean them herself.
The weaned pigs need good concentrates that are rich in muscle and bone making material to insure thrifty development, but get them on their feet gradually as overfeeding will produce scouring, etc. Take from ten to twelve days in getting them adjusted to the change, feeding them lightly three times daily during this time. Rations recommended for young pigs are: (1) skim milk and wheat middlings; or (2) one part ground grain to some kind or two parts of wheat middlings or rice meal. Ground oats and rice meal make a splendid mixture. Feed pigs about as much as they will clean up readily and with appetite.

Circus Matinee.

The Al. G. Barnes Big 3-Ring Wild Animal Circus is coming, and will give one performance here on Tuesday, Oct. 27.
The coming of this great wild animal show always elicits a great deal of interest, as no other circus equals the Barnes shows for the multitude of entirely original wild animal features presented.
Practically the entire entertainment provided by this show is given by the use of educated animals—500 in number—animals of almost every known species. The show is still a circus, however—a circus from which all tiresome and objectionable features have been eliminated, but which retains the many traditional elements that for years have made the circus the most popular form of entertainment.
For instance, there are innumerable equestrians, acrobats, jugglers, tumblers, high divers, bareback riders, etc. The performers are animals, yet their work is done with as much, or even greater proficiency than one is accustomed to see in the human. There's sawdust rings and pink lemonade, for what's a circus without them, otherwise the Barnes Circus is an animal show, exclusively so.
Prominent among the great features of its present program are Tom, Dick and Harry, juggling horse-riding sea lions; Sampson, the aviation lion, that rides to the top of the tent surrounded by shooting sky rockets; Big Bill, the wrestling grizzly; Mile. Florine and troupe of Persian leopards, jaguars and pumas; Mabel Stark and group of Royal Bengal and Siberian tigers; the horse riding lions and bears; high diving dogs and monkeys, and the Barnes' troupe of educated world's premium horses and ponies—550 of them.
The big, sensational, thrilling spectacle of the program is the group of twenty-four man-eating African lions shown in one act by Herr Louie Roth. These lions are valued at $50,000 and represent the greatest wild animal act ever shown.
Fifty comedy elephants, bears, monkeys, dogs, goats, ponies, together with Dancer, Dynamite and Mileaminit—mules, provide the laughs of the entertainment.
A new big feature, mile-long parade in which four bands play is presented to the public at 10:30.
One performance only will be given, at 2 p. m.
