The Summer is ended, and the chilly winds of Winter are coming soon. This brings to OUR mind the one thought: FIRE, FIRE.—Fire prevention cannot fail to interest and benefit the nation at large and every individual in particular. Eliminate all the preventable fires and every property-owner in the United States will profit through the lowering of insurance rates. The fewer the fires the smaller the losses that must be paid—and this will reduce your Fire Rates.

Will you join with me in a request to the Honorable Mayor and City Council to appoint a Flue Inspector, whose duty is to examine and inspect flues, and order them cleaned and repaired if needed.

The Governor of Texas has issued his proclamation, setting Thursday, October 9th as FIRE PREVENTION DAY. Will you help in it?

OUR DUTY is to assist YOU in preventing fires. Will you heed it?

OUR BUSINESS is to insure YOUR property. Will you accept it?

For over twenty years we have guarded your property day and night. We are still on the job. IF YOU LOSE, WE PAY.

AN APPEAL TO PEOPLE OF REEVES COUNTY

As a citizen of Texas, already giving largely of my time to other patriotic and philanthropic movements, but interested in the welfare and uplift of every unfortunate individual in my home state, I deemed it my full duty, when called upon, to accept the State Chairmanship for the Salvation Army Home Service Campaign which begins Monday, September 29th.

However, I assumed that in every county in my State there were others not less busy than myself and just as interested in the success of the appeal now being made to redeem suffering and unfortunate humanity in this State. In most part, I am thankful to say, my assumption was correct, as nearly every county in the State has already organized for the $600,000 minimum quota drive now so rapidly approaching.

But, in a few instances, and including Reeves county, I have failed to secure anyone who would accept the county chairmanship and organize for the campaign. The money is needed NOW. Time and expense (and I am personally defraying the expenses of my office) do not permit me to approach individually the leaders of those counties not yet organized until I secure a chairman. Every county should be well represented on the list published on October 6th, at the close of the drive. I therefore appeal through the press of your county—whose editors are giving me this space free—asking:

"Is there not some good man who will take the responsibility of organizing your county and raising the sum of $880.00 for the Salvation Army, that these good people may go on with the work they have been doing in a broader and even more efficient manner?"

If you question the worthiness of this cause or want to know why you should be interested, ask a soldier who has been "over there."

Volunteers please address me, care of the Salvation Army Headquarters, Dallas, Texas.

State Chairman.

HUDSPETH SPEECH ON MEXICAN SITUATION

Recently a resolution was passed by the Senate of Texas, which was sent to me, in which it is stated:

"The point has been reached when the government of the United States ought either to give the State of Texas and its citizens the same degree of protection in their lives, their property, and their purposes as is enjoyed by the citizens of other States in the Union, or that if the government of the United States is incapable of doing this it ought to accord to Texas that liberty of action with reference to the protection of its citizens that it enjoyed prior to the time it in good faith abandoned its status as an independent nation of the world and became a State of the Union."

That ought not to be necessary, my friends. That flag over the Speaker's chair is ample to protect the people of the State of Texas. (Applause.)

The gentleman from New York (Mr. LaGuardia) very wisely (?) suggests that a committee be appointed by congress to go down into Mexico, gather together the discordant factions, including bewhiskered Carranza, and have a round-table conference—harmonize all of these warring chieftains in the space of a few moments, and let them select one of their number to rule Mexico, then withdraw the conference and abide the result. This, in my judgment, Mr. Speaker, is certainly an utopian idea and one that would be easy of execution. Let me state for the information of the gentleman from New York that a conference of this kind occurred at Aguas Calientes about two or three years ago, where they met, kissed the flag of Mexico, which contains an emblem of a serpent and a cactus, wrote their names upon it, embraced each other, and pledged eternal allegiance to that flag. In twenty-four hours they were fighting like Kilkenny cats and then in a short time were warring worse than they ever had been. You just as well try to pen up the hyena, the rattlesnake, and the coyote wolf and harmonize the three into one homogeneous whole. Nothing but the shrapnel from a few of the machine guns of the boys in khaki from this side will have a wholesome effect and a harmonizing effect upon these various bands of bandits from Carranza down to the south of the Rio Grande.

I say the time has arrived, in my judgment, when Americans in Mexico should be protected. I am not talking so much about their property. I would not put up a dollar against the life of an American boy. I am talking about the protection of their lives. You can reimburse a man for his property, but you can not bring back the life of old John W. Corral, that citizen of Oklahoma who was foully murdered a few days ago in Mexico. You can not bring back to that good woman, his wife, who was foully and criminally assaulted by Mexicans in Carranza uniform, that which they took from her. I need not refer to it. You have seen it in the papers. Many Mexicans who have been killed on this side have had on the Carranza uniform. I say again I am not a jingo or an agitator, but I say to you that in my judgment the time has arrived when this government should say to Carranza, "You have not measured up, you have not met your obligations to protect American lives, and therefore we withdraw our recognition"—as has been done in one instance in the past—"and we will put our troops into Mexico to protect American lives, until a stable government is established over there." (Applause.) That is what I say to you today. Pass your Emerson resolution.

Mr. Speaker, in conclusion I want to say that I felt it my duty to lay these matters before you. I should have a little more time in which to do it. That flag there has protected American lives in the past. I have never seen any utterance from the republicans, but the democratic platform of 1912 said—

"We pledge our party to protect the rights and lives of American citizenship at home and abroad."

What does the republican platform say? That is what the democratic platform said, and I hope that pledge will be redeemed. I want to say to you that when the armies of the world were passing in review in front of Pekin, China, a foreign lady there saw the flags pass, and she asked, "What is that flag?" They said, "That is the Italian flag, that is the British flag, that is the French flag." Then the Stars and Stripes came by, and those khaki-clad boys marching with determination upon their faces, with pride in their countenances, carrying by the old Stars and Stripes. She said, "What flag is that?" A foreigner standing by said, "That is the flag that protects the rich and the poor, the peasant in his hut, the millionaire in his castle. That is the flag that protects democracy throughout the world. That is the flag that protects the women and children where it floats from the combined attacks of the world." (Applause, on both sides.)

Gentlemen of the House, let us stand for the traditions of the past, let us be worthy sons of worthy sires, and true to the heritage they have bequeathed us, and let us carry that flag to protect our citizens in benighted Mexico. It is due them. (Applause on both sides.)

FUGITIVE 19 YEARS SEEKS FAMILY

San Angelo—Dave Atkins, soldier of fortune and fugitive from justice for nineteen years, began a search today for his second wife and daughter whom he has not seen in twelve years.

Furnishing for a second time a $3,000 bond after forfeiting the first in 1900, Atkins was released from jail here last night. He is charged with the murder of Tom Hardin, a Knickerbocker merchant, in 1897. He was indicted a second time a few days ago.

Atkins, after jumping his first bond, went to South Africa, he says, fought in the Boer war, then went to Central America, and finally returned to the United States a few years ago. He was arrested September 1, in Jones county, by a former captain of the Texas rangers.

KULTUR AGAIN.

When several hundred men and women cheered the statement, made in the hall of the Deutsche Liederkranz in New York City a few weeks ago, that "the German spirit is not dead and never will die," and when the some speaker who made this statement further said that all men and women of German descent must do all in their power to bring "the German spirit, Kultur, and education to the American people and to the people of the whole world." America received notice that the war is not yet won. Nominally held to promote plans for helping starving people in Germany, this meeting was in fact a means for disseminating ideas against which this country has fought. It was one of many signs that what we have known as German propaganda is still a menace in America.

It seems easy for Americans to forget. Sometimes good nature is a vice, and good nature is an American characteristic. It was good nature that made our people slow to believe the reports of what the Germans were doing in Belgium in 1914. It was good nature that made our people dismiss as incredible the threats of the Germans to murder civilians and neutrals at sea. It was good nature that inclined our people to ignore that as a fantastic dream the outspoken ambitions of the Germans to secure at the cost of their neighbors world trade and world domination. It is good nature now that tempts our people to forget these things, to treat the beaten foe as if he were nothing but a beaten foe, to take what is called a sportsmanlike attitude, to go more than half way—to be ready to go all the way—in getting back to the old relation of friendliness with the German and to let the German resume his old ways if he wants to.

The vice in all this is the vice of carelessness about truth and principle. If German Kultur was an evil thing last year when we were at war, it has not become a good thing now just because we have stopped fighting. If hyphenism was bad then, it is bad today.

America was not furious with things German because she was at war with Germany; she went to war with Germany because she had reason to be furious with things German. The German ideal set forth by Germany's leaders, defended by Germany's apologists, and acquiesced in by the German people, was the ideal of a State above all law, both international law and moral law. According to this ideal, murder, rape, torture, violation of the pledged word, treachery, disregard of the rights of men and women and children—in fact, anything to which Germans might resort to further the interests of their "old Fatherland"—was justified. According to this ideal, men who were citizens of the United States, but who had German blood in their veins, were justified in using their privileges as American citizens for Germany's profit. As long as any vestige of this ideal remains in America, the victory which America sought in this war will not be complete.

German Kultur did not become extinct when Wilhelm went to Amerongen. The evil thing we call double allegiance or hyphenism did not cease to be evil with the signing of the armistice.—The Outlook.

THE CLASS ORGANIZATIONS

The following classes were organized the past week:

The Junior Class will be known hereafter as the Rainbow Class. Rainbow colors, pink, green and yellow, with the sweet pea as their flower, were chosen by the class.

Woody Cowan was elected president, Walter Ruhlen vice-president, and Evelyn Slack secretary. With these efficient officers and our newly acquired name, we feel that we will surpass all the past, present and future classes in old Pecos High.

The Sophomores have elected Betty Watson president, Frances Hubbard vice-president, and Louise Wadley secretary. From these efficient officers we judge the Sophomore class is strong for woman suffrage. Blue and gold are their colors, with the pansy as their flower. Their motto is "Ad astro per aspero." (To the stars through bolts and bars). With these capable officers we hope the Sophs will help to make this year's work a success.

The Freshman Class have elected Callie DeRacy president and Billie Prewit secretary. If the quality is commensurate with the quantity we fear only the Freshman Class will touch the high standards we have set for the Juniors.

JESSYE HEARD, Junior.

THE ISLAND OF YAP

Yap is one of the main islands of the Caroline group. It is situated about 500 miles southwest of Guam, and 800 miles east of the island of Mindano, of the Philippine group. It lies in latitude 9 degrees, 25 minutes north, and longitude 139 degrees east. It has a population of from 7,000 to 7,600 people.

In 1552 the Portuguese under Diego de Rocha, sailed into the harbor of the Bay of Tomil and claimed the island for their king. But they made so small an impression upon affairs in general that the name they gave the island, Siquiera, is completely lost, and is replaced by that conferred by Admiral Francisco Lascano, a Spaniard, who visited the island in 1686, and promptly claimed the islands in the name of his king, Carolus II, after whom he named the entire group. In 1687 the island was visited by Dampier, a pirate. After this visit the islands dropped out of recorded history for more than a century. In 1875, Germany came into the picture.

Bismarck was looking ahead to strengthen the empire he had made, and when Spain, with not a little noise, began to assert her rights on the island, Bismarck interfered and placed the imperial flag of the Hohenzollerns on Yap. It was so plain a case of steal that Spain protested and the dispute had to be settled by Pope Leo XIII. This was in 1885, for the dispute had lasted many years. The pope decided in favor of the Spaniards, but Germany was given certain trading rights. In 1899, when misfortune overwhelmed Spain, Germany offered her $3,500,000 for the island which she accepted. This ended the history of Yap until 1914, when the islands were captured by the Austrians. This island, Yap, is to be given to the United States as a reprisal for the sinking of the Lusitania. The island will be used as a coaling and a cable station. It will be a stepping-stone for the United States into the Orient.

The island is divided into small districts, each having its own village capital, and the rivalry between them is keen, but subdued. The people are Micronasians of a distinct Malay type, rather small of bone and stature, a coffee color, with curly black hair, very dark brown eyes, high cheek bones and small, hooked noses. The inhabitants are divided into two distinct social classes—the aristocrats and the slaves. The aristocrats are marked by the right to wear a comb made of narrow strips of bamboo, about eight inches long, and fastened together through the center. The strips are spread out like a fan. It would be as much as a slave's life is worth to be caught by an aristocrat wearing one of these combs.

The men wear a bunch of pandanus leaves, stained red, which hangs down in front; a pair of earrings, bracelets and armlets, and a loin girde. These with his comb completes his costume. The women to shield themselves from the weather wear a long kind of shirt made of pandanus leaves, of four to forty thicknesses. Their ears are pierced for rings in early life, and while they are healing are protected by halves of cocoanut shells, made fast by a string passed over the head.

There is little or no village life among these people. There is a club house where the unmarried men stay. The principal occupation is fishing, and no "fish stories" are allowed. The money of the island is very unusual. It is made of stone brought from the Pelen Islands, 400 miles to the south. The "coins" vary in size from 6 inches to 12 feet in diameter, and some of them weight almost five tons. If the coin is too large to go in a man's house, he simply lets it be known that it is his and no one takes it—there are no thieves in Yap.

The commerce of Yap is unimportant, though it exports copra, shell, bananas, sugar cane, and taro. It is connected with Shanghai by a direct steamship line. Almost due north of Yap is the American island of Guam.

The above are some of the interesting facts given in a round table talk by the Juniors of the Pecos High School. JULIA MAGEE, Junior.

SCHOOL TOPICS

The Domestic Science department is doing splendid work. There are thirty-one in the cooking classes (we are not cooking dainties, but are cooking waffles, cream potatoes, cream of wheat and coffee). The Intermediate grades have organized a sewing class and we feel sure this class of thirty-nine "Little Mistresses" will do excellent work.

On account of a leaky roof we enjoyed a holiday Wednesday of last week, but the roof was quickly repaired and we are again at our work.

Mr. Rutledge, our efficient superintendent, has had a most unusual experience the past week. The loss of his mother and nephew. He and his sister, Miss Clara Rutledge, returned Monday. The student body extends sympathy in their dark hour.

The High School officers were elected Wednesday morning. Archie Ross (Senior) was elected president, and Mildred Carson (Junior) secretary. With these capable officers the High school will do excellent work.

Dr. Jim Camp, the new president of the Board, and Dr. Bryan, were among the school visitors Tuesday.

Mrs. Cole, principal of the Intermediate Department, reports, notwithstanding the bad weather and unfavorable conditions, there has been almost perfect attendance in that department.

The Seventh Grade regrets the loss of three pupils: Sadie Cassels, Ray Thurman and Tobe DeRacy, the latter being out temporarily on account of a broken leg.

There will be a football game between Pecos High and Midland College, Saturday, on the Johnson Field, just north of the school building. The game will be played at 10 o'clock, a. m. sharp. No admission will be charged for the game, but the hat will be passed to give the people an opportunity to help the team. We hope the people of Pecos will appreciate the football games as they have the baseball games of the past.

Challenges have been received from Odessa for games with the boys' and girls' basket ball teams, but on account of the basket ball season not opening until after Thanksgiving we could not accept the challenges. Also have had a challenge in football from the Midland High School.

The typewriters to be used in the Commercial Course have not arrived yet. Though much progress is being made in the shorthand class.

The Parent-Teachers Association will have its first meeting Friday afternoon at 3:30. Though it is the first program a very interesting one has been planned.

The Keeping-Up Club will be organized next week. This club has been organized in the High School for several years.

HANDS, ARMS, LIMBS ASLEEP

And Was Run-Down, Weak and Nervous, Says Florida Lady. Five Bottles of Cardul Made Her Well.

Kathleen, Fla.—Mrs. Dallas Price, of this place, says: "After the birth of my last child... I got very much run-down and weakened, so much that I could hardly do anything at all. I was so awfully nervous that I could scarcely endure the least noise. My condition was getting worse all the time..."

"I know I must have some relief or I would soon be in the bed and in a serious condition for I felt so badly and was so nervous and weak I could hardly live. My husband asked Dr. Cardul about my taking Cardul. He said, 'It's a good medicine, and good for that trouble', so he got me 5 bottles. After about the second bottle I felt greatly improved... before taking it my hands and arms and legs would go to sleep. After taking it, however, this poor circulation disappeared. My strength came back to me and I was soon on the road to health. After the use of about 5 bottles I could do all my house-work and attend to my six children besides."

"You can feel safe in giving Cardul a thorough trial for your troubles. It contains no harmful or habit-forming drugs, but is composed of 100% vegetable, medicinal ingredients with no bad after-effects. Thousands of women have voluntarily written, telling of the good Cardul has done them. It should help you, too. Try it."

very good in those days at reading brands, but we were generally brought back our number, and sometimes we exceeded the quota (laughter), but we brought them back.

At the mature age of 22 years I was elevated to the position of a statesman in the Texas legislature. For 16 years I served as a State senator and representative, and passed on numerous Mexican questions that confronted the legislature. I drafted the bill to organize the Rangers Home Guard, to protect the border against Mexican cattle thieves—1,000 Texas rangers. The first time I set foot in the little town that is now my native home, El Paso, away back yonder, many, many years ago, it was a straggling village of a few Mexican adobe huts, nestled on the banks of the Rio Grande, where it was said—and this is borrowed from my good friend Judge W. M. Colwell:

The Rio Grande ripples when it has water in its bed. Where no champagne was ever drunken, All preferred mescal instead; Where no lie was ever spoken, being nothing one could trade; Where no marriage vows were ever broken, Because the same were never made.

Let me briefly review the revolutions in Mexico, and I say to you that it does not take much to start a revolution in Mexico. One Mexican steals a cigarette from another and it starts a revolution. Revolutions have come and revolutions will go.

Francisco I. Madero in 1911 rebelled against the government of Porfirio Diaz. Madero was a stockman who lived across the Rio Grande from Eagle Pass. I knew him personally. He traded and trafficked with the common on this side of the river, and every one of those old pioneers will tell you that Francisco Madero was an honest man. He made good his contracts and his word was his bond. Madero was a dreamer, however. He was not practical. He was a spiritualist. He believed in communing with the spirits—not the kind that the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. Volstead) has banished forever from this country with his mild bill recently passed, but those unseen beings they tell us about; and when the spirit told Madero to make a move he moved. Madero dreamed of a democracy in Mexico. He had been educated partly in the United States, but his people were not ready for that kind of a government in Mexico like the great government of the United States.

The first battle that he fought was at Casas Grandes, south of El Paso, about 100 miles. He was defeated, and he then invested Juarez in conjunction with Pascual Orozco and Pancho Villa.

The gentleman from New York appears to think that we made a mistake in not recognizing as the head of the Mexican government this bandit for 18 years, this outlaw from the Diaz government, Francisco Villa. After three days fighting they took the city of Juarez, and then shortly afterwards Diaz, who had reigned in Mexico 36 years, abdicated and went to Spain. The gentleman from New York (Mr. LaGuardia), in his statement here in the House, in his Epistle to the Ephesians, a few days ago, made the remarkable statement that Francisco de la Barra was in the Huerta cabinet, which President Wilson refused to recognize; yet the latter had to sit with him at the peace table. Let me say this with respect to Francisco de la Barra, regarded as a straightforward, honorable man, when Madero captured Juarez and Diaz abdicated all factions came together and centered on Francisco de la Barra as a provisional President of Mexico during the interim in which an election was held. An election was held under the constitution and laws of Mexico, and Francisco Madero was chosen as the constitutional president of Mexico at that election. He took the reins of government there in the spring of 1912.

De La Barra went to Spain. He is now in Spain. He had nothing to do with Huerta or his government. He did not recognize the man who ascended to the presidency of Mexico by the assassination of his chief. (Applause). Huerta, that is the man—the gentleman from New York (Mr. LaGuardia) states Wilson should have recognized. At the time that Madero took the reins of government Huerta had been a Diaz general. Huerta was a military man. Madero, out of the kindness of his heart, unsophisticated, never having been engaged in politics, called all the factions together and said, "I am your president, and I want to harmonize all factions." He called Victoriano Huerta into his presence and, after Huerta had crossed his heart and placed the Judas kiss upon Madero, pledging allegiance forever to Francisco Madero, he made him commander in chief of the Federal army. Soon after Madero had taken the reins, the red flaggers revolted against him, commanded by Pascual Orozco and Inez Salazar, and they commenced operating in the northern part of Mexico, in the States of Sonora and Chihuahua. Then Victoriano Huerta and Francisco Villa drove them from the country. As I have stated heretofore, Huerta was a military man. He had been educated in the military schools of Mexico and Spain. He drove the red flaggers back in the northern part of Mexico. At that time friction commenced between Huerta and Villa. Huerta sent Villa in irons to the City of Mexico and placed him in prison. At that time Villa could not write his name, and he scrawled upon the whitewashed walls of the prison "Francisco Villa," and today he can only make that scrawl. That is Villa. Now, let us take up that delectable gentleman, Mr. Felix Diaz, whom the gentleman from New York (Mr. LaGuardia) paraded before you as the man to quell the troubles of Mexico. He said that Diaz has an army of 40,000 men. I want to say to you that Felix Diaz never had under him at any one time over 400 men. Felix Diaz is a moral pervert and a political degenerate. He is the man the gentleman from New York would have made ruler of Mexico, who, after acknowledging allegiance to Madero, and was pledged to him by all that was holy, started a revolution at Vera Cruz. As I now recall, Madero sent a portion of his army over there, subdued Felix Diaz, and had him brought to the City of Mexico, where he embraced Madero and placed the same Judas kiss upon Madero's brow and in every way renewed his allegiance. This man Felix Diaz, whom Porfirio Diaz, his uncle, gave very little recognition in his lifetime, a man with a yellow streak as large as that flag, a man who never in his life kept faith with any man or party, this man, the gentleman from New York states, should be recognized by this government, and this government should establish him in Mexico as its ruler. That is not all, gentlemen. He was placed in command of several divisions; that is, after Huerta came back from the north, after he had subdued the red flaggers, Felix Diaz for the second time revolted against his chief, his president, the man he had sworn allegiance to stand by all the days of his life, and on the 2nd day of February, 1913, he again started a revolution in the City of Mexico against Madero. He captured the arsenal, turned the guns upon the Mexican palace, and blood ran like rivers through the streets of that beautiful city south of the Rio Grande.

Madero put Huerta in charge of his army against Felix Diaz, and for days they fought. Madero believed, Victoriano Huerta was true to him until one night after a battle that had been going on for about five days, Huerta summoned his body guard and appeared at the palace where Francisco Madero and Pino Suarez, the vice president were, had the instrument all prepared, and demanded that Madero sign it, acknowledging Huerta as president of Mexico, and abdicating the presidency. Madero was a brave man, gentleman. Whatever you may say about his misguided actions, he was a brave man. He saw the trap that had been sprung for him, and he sprang upon his assailants and fought like a tiger, and secured a pistol from one of the guards, but was struck down from behind by one of Victoriano Huerta's bodyguard, with the butt of a Mauser rifle, and placed in a dungeon in company with Suarez, and that night he and Suarez were foully murdered, and their bodies were taken through the streets and thrown to the dogs in some secluded spot in the outskirts of the City of Mexico, and Huerta had it given out that he had put them in the penitentiary in order to keep the populace down. That is the history of this man whom the gentleman from New York would have the great president of the United States recognize. Is that all? No, no. That is not all. Let me tell you something more. A Mexican deputy, as they call them—a member of the Mexican congress—after it was found that Huerta had proclaimed himself president—never was elected president, you understand, but forced the Mexican congress to sign some kind of a resolution declaring him the provisional president of Mexico—this Mexican deputy arose in his seat and denounced Huerta as a traitor and a scoundrel and a tyrant, not only once, but he denounced him during the entire day. That night this member of congress was summoned from his rooms by Huerta's bodyguard and taken into the presence of Huerta at the palace, and then, when he was confronted by Huerta, he denounced him again as a tyrant, and Huerta had him seized and had his tongue cut out of his head, and he, taking the blood which flowed from his mouth in his hand, threw it in the face of Huerta. That is the man the gentleman from New York would have the great president of the United States recognize as president of Mexico. These are facts, gentlemen. That is not all. This Mexican deputy was thrown into prison, and there languished for three days, without food and drink, and finally Huerta put him out of his misery or had his guards do it.

That is the man Huerta, a man that succeeded to the presidency of Mexico by deception, that gained it by assassination, and whose hands were reeking with the blood of Francisco Madero when he asked the President of the United States to recognize him.

That is not all. Another Mexican deputy had the temerity to rise and denounce him, and he disappeared that night and has never been heard of from that good day. And yet, gentlemen, the gentleman from New York (Mr. LaGuardia) says we recognized the wrong man and that then was where our troubles began. A man who had been the chief adviser of Madero, who had been placed at the head of his army, foully had him murdered in the hours of night and then said to the populace next day that he had him over in the penitentiary for safe-keeping.

Now, the gentleman from New York in his recitation stated that we should have recognized, or words to that effect, Francisco Villa instead of Carranza. I want to say to you that I am not going to defend Mr. Carranza. I want to state to you from my knowledge of the gentleman—and I have a personal acquaintance with him, because he was in Juarez for a number of months before he went to Mexico City to take the presidency, and, being a State official at that time, I did confer with him about matters that affected the two towns and Americans generally—Mr. Carranza is nothing but a big chunk of pomposity, egotism, and ignorance. I want to say that in behalf of Mr. Carranza that aptly describes the gentleman—pro-German and intensely anti-American.

But should we recognize Villa, a man who had been an outlaw for 18 years, an ignorant man, a bandit, and a man who descended upon the little American town of Columbus and tried to sack it in the night time? Now, the gentleman from New York states further in his recitation that it is very questionable as to whether or not Villa is charged with having attacked Columbus. There is no proof, he says, that Villa ever attacked that place. Is there not? Let us see whether or not there is evidence to that effect.

A man by the name of J. L. Watson, who formerly lived in the good old State of Alabama, was living in Casa Grandes when Villa started for his raid to Columbus and passed by Watson's little farm on the road. He seized Watson and murdered him in the presence of his wife. Their little baby was given, as the mother presumed, to one of the soldiers, but fortunately it fell into the hands of a good old Mexican woman and was returned to Mrs. Watson at Juarez. This good woman was taken along. It was a trip that consumed about a week, going north to attack Columbus. She was taken along and maltreated by this man Villa and his soldiers, and at the battle of Columbus she escaped to the American side and came to El Paso and stopped at the Hotel Paso del Norte until she was sent home to her friends. They say there is no evidence that Villa attacked Columbus, and yet this woman, who was formerly from Alabama, stated to numerous of our citizens at El Paso that Villa was along and commanded his troops and rode a mule when he attacked the town of Columbus. Is that evidence that Villa was at Columbus or not?

Here's my guarantee! Ask your druggist for a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone and take a spoonful to-night. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and wake up feeling great. It's perfectly harmless, so give it to your children any time. It can't salivate, so let them eat anything afterwards.

An old cowboy, a friend of mine, William Corbett, who worked for me on the Pecos river many years, was running a range wagon about 20 miles south of Columbus. Villa seized him and his boss and hung them to a cottonwood tree. Corbett had committed no offense whatever against anyone. Villa stated at that time that "he wanted to see the cottonwood kick," and he hung him to a cottonwood tree. Any evidence that that bandit attempted to sack and burn the little town of Columbus? Well, I know it as well as I know the gentleman from New York is a member of this House and that he has recently had a hair cut. Then, gentlemen, you have got to disregard the testimony of this good woman, Mrs. Watson, who was maltreated in every kind of a way during the trip north, where they bound her to a mule in the daytime all through that week's journey. Do you believe it?

Yet to my surprise a friend of mine, a former congressman, Mr. McLemore, writes an article to the effect that there is no evidence that Villa was ever in command of that troop at Columbus, when he was seen all along the road by ranchmen, when he was seen behind the hill at Columbus holding a pack train while the battle was in progress, and when Col. Hopkins finally secured the guns at the arsenal there and drove him south.

I have had a little experience with Mr. Villa, rather unpleasant at the time. When he was in charge of the city of Juarez he confiscated American property on the other side, not once, but many times. I knew him well. I had a telegram, sent by the Secretary of State of the United States, directed to Francisco Villa, that he return to a certain American his property. I went over, and it happened on the same day that he murdered in cold blood the British subject Benton. I did not know that he had murdered Benton or I would not have been there. (Laughter). In two hours, possibly, after he had murdered Benton, the British subject, I saw that there was great excitement, and I presented to Villa a telegram from the Secretary of State of the United States, that he should restore to this citizen of the United States his property. He was in a great rage. He rose up when I presented him the telegram and threw it on the floor and stamped on it, and he said, "You say to your government that I have no respect for it. You say to your president that I think he is an old woman. You say to your government that I have no respect for it, and I will not grant any of its requests. Your soldiers are cowards; and they will not fight."

I shook my finger across the table at him, and I said, "There will come a time when you will respect my government." (Applause). "There will come a time when you will find out whether the so-called 'Gringo' Army, the American army, will fight."

I said to Villa, "There will come a time when you will respect my government, and you will find out whether or not the American army will fight." Thank God, that time came on the 17th day of last June, when the American troops crossed the river at El Paso, when shots were falling into my city, fired either by Villa or Carranza, I know not which, and threw the shrapnel into Villa, and he ran like a cotton ball to the mountains of Chihuahua. He found out whether the American boys dressed in khaki, would fight when they went across to stop the shooting into El Paso.

Now, Mr. LaGuardia says Carranza was governor of Chihuahua. Carranza was never governor of Chihuahua a day in his life. He was governor of Coahuila when Madero was assassinated. His son-in-law, Candido Aguilar, is minister of foreign affairs. You have read his contradictory statements in the press. I believe this celebrated cabinet officer is now in Spain or in France. He was a milk boy, living near Vera Cruz, when Carranza went down there after Madero was assassinated. He became Carranza's bodyguard and married Carranza's daughter—minister of foreign affairs and as ignorant as a wild mule. That is the kind of a minister Carranza has. This man Bonillas, ambassador to the United States, was an engineer in the State of Sonora before Carranza took him up and made him minister to the United States.

I was amazed by a statement made by Mr. Bonillas recently in the public press, to the effect that Mexicans had always been punished for crimes committed against Americans on the south of the Rio Grande. I want to say to him that he can not produce an instance in ten years where a Mexican has been punished for taking the life of an American in Mexico or any punishment of any kind visited upon a Mexican by the government of Mexico for outraging a good American woman. Bonillas knows there is not a word of truth in his statement, and that it is false from beginning to end.

Now, Mr. LaGuardia seems to make capital out of the fact that Huerta was thrown into prison. I do not think it is important to this House where Huerta died, but Mr. LaGuardia wants you to believe that he died in a dungeon in El Paso, thrown there by the American authorities. He was in jail only six days. Let me read you this telegram which I have received:

El Paso, Texas, July 11, 1919.
Congressman C. B. Hudspeeth,
Care Congress Hall Hotel, Washington,
D. C.

Huerta committed to jail July 3, 1915. Released July 9, 1915. Bond, $15,000. His quarters in jail were the best, being a part of the woman's ward. I attended him personally, giving him the freedom of jail, allowing him everything money could buy. Visitors at all hours. He complimented me through El Paso papers. His home at 415 West Boulevard worth $20,000, where he died January 13, 1916. He occupied this home about five months. This home is in best residence district. You will recall after his release from county jail he was at Fort Bliss a short time, and was treated royally while there.

BUCK ELLIOTT,
Ex-County Jailor.

That shows you the kind of argument that a gentleman will make here, that our government threw Huerta into a dungeon and kept him there until he died. When I corrected the gentleman from New York he again reiterated the statement in another part of his speech. He only remained in jail six days and spent the rest of his time in his palatial home on West Boulevard. If the gentleman from New York ever visits El Paso, I shall be glad to show him that marble tomb out there in Concordia cemetery where his martyred hero lies.

Yes, I am talking to you, my republican friends, on this side now. You are a majority in both Houses. You have some resolutions here pending, one introduced by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Emerson), I believe. Instead of having your investigations you have been reading in the daily papers, and you have been reading every day of atrocities upon Americans in Mexico. What have you to investigate? You have a majority. Pass the Emerson resolution and protect American lives that are being sacrificed daily down there while you are investigating here. You have read the Emerson resolution, but I will read it to you:

"The Secretary of War be, and he is hereby authorized and directed to use the military forces of the United States in Mexico in the protection of the lives and property of citizens of the United States that may be in Mexico.

"The Secretary of War is further authorized and directed to keep the military forces of the United States in Mexico for the purpose of protecting the rights of the United States citizens in Mexico until some responsible form of government is established in Mexico that will protect the lives and property of United States citizens."

That is the resolution. Pass it and quit your investigating. It occurs to me you are trying to make political medicine for the next campaign and are not really trying to protect the lives of Americans in Mexico. If you pass the resolution introduced by Mr. Emerson, I expect you will get some democratic help. You can not get a man, in my judgment, who is strong enough to quiet that benighted country down there. You may say it means war. I say it does not mean war. They have not forgotten, gentlemen, when Zachary Taylor went almost to the City of Mexico with 6,000 troops and whipped Santa Anna at Buena Vista. They have not forgotten when Gen. Winfield Scott visited Mexico and whipped Santa Anna at Chapultepec. No; Santa Anna had 25,000 troops and Scott had only 5,000. They have not forgotten that the "gringos" can and will fight. They have not forgotten that Sam Houston and his 680 coonskin cap and flintlock frontiersmen vanquished Santa Anna with 1,800 of his picked troops at San Jacinto, where a nation was born in the short space of 18 minutes. They have not forgotten the time when old Sam Houston rode his white horse, leading those unconquerable frontiersmen against Santa Anna at San Jacinto singing that love song, "Come to the lower I have shaded for thee." When he put the fear of God into them with the Minie balls from the muzzle of the flintlocks and the craven cowards, when they saw death approaching, fell upon their knees in front of Houston and his gallant frontiersmen and pleaded, "Me no Alamo; me no Goliad," when their hands at that time were red with the blood of the dead heroes of both places. No! They have not forgotten the Alamo, where Crockett died, where Fannin died, where Bowie died, where Travis drew his line and said, "Every man who wants to die for the liberty of Texas come across this line," and every man crossed. No; they have not forgotten the Alamo, the citadel of American liberty, the cradle of Texas liberty, the grandest cradle, sir, that ever rocked American valor to a full maturity of immortal glory. (Applause.) No; they know Americans will fight. I say to you that the time has arrived, in my judgment, and I am not a jingo or an agitator. But I was reared under that flag. I am a Texan, but I am an American first. (Applause.) I repeat, they have not forgotten that Texans and Americans will fight.

The Ford Motor Company has just received official advice from the navy department that it was four Ford Liberty motors—all built in the Ford Motor Company's shops at Detroit—which furnished the power that drove the N. C.-4 to victory in its recent record-breaking flight across the Atlantic from Trepassey, Newfoundland, to Plymouth, England, a distance of 4,000 miles. They were regular stock motors built during the war as a part of the Ford Liberty motor production.
Upon his arrival in Lisbon, Portugal, Lieutenant Commander Read said, "The engines functioned perfectly all the way from America to Portugal." And American naval officers who thoroughly inspected the N. C.-4 upon its arrival at Plymouth, England, stated that the big seaplane was in even better condition than when it left America.

PERSONAL MENTION

Lace Hart of Toyah, was a visitor in Pecos Monday, and stated that some activity is noticeable in the sulphur fields north of there.

Mrs. Tom Hart and son, Calvin Clyde, were down from Toyah Tuesday and spent the days with relatives. They returned home Wednesday on belated No. 1.

Will Cowan spent several days in Pecos this week with his family. Will has the same complaint as all stockmen in this section of the State: Nothing to do but watch the grass grow and the stock fatten since the fine rains.

Finley Holmes, general manager of the Reeves County Mercantile Co. of Toyah, and general all-around good fellow, was a business visitor in Pecos Wednesday.

W. M. Hopper, pioneer driller of West Texas, and who knows the formations under every acre in Reeves county, was here on business Saturday. Hopper says work on the section is at a standstill for the present, but the intention is to go deeper, as the formation is different than any yet struck in the county, and favorable indication of oil and gas abound.

Ernest Lee, reported in last week's Enterprise as having moved to Big Spring, is back in Pecos plying his trade at the Stephen barber shop. Too much water on the streets of Big Spring made him decide to return. As he expressed it, he rode right in, saw that water and turned around and rode right back here again.

Word from the Hedblom family to friends in Pecos, conveys the news that they have landed in the good old U. S. A. again after a short sojourn in Sweden, and are now in Chicago. It is their intention to make Pecos a visit in the near future.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Barlow, and C. D. Barlow of Balmorhea, autoed to Pecos Monday, and were the guests of their grandmother, Mrs. M. E. Randolph.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Ardoin, of El Paso, accompanied by Miss Marsh, also of that city, spent a couple of days in Pecos last week the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Drummond, old time friends. Mrs. Drummond had not seen Mrs. Ardoin in twenty-five years.

Barney Hubbs left yesterday for Dixieland where he will assist in the erection of a standard derrick and rig for the Dixieland Syndicate. This concern owns considerable acreage up there and will start a deep oil test and soon as the rig is complete.

Tom Hart, the leading tailor and clothes cleaner of Toyah, was a business visitor in Pecos Monday, and while here made The Enterprise a pleasant visit.

J. S. Gantt, who for a while had been working in the office of the Western Union Telegraph Co. here, left last week for Paris, Texas, where he has accepted a position with the same concern.

E. B. Conger of Saragosa was a business visitor in Pecos yesterday.

Will Courtney and wife were Pecos visitors yesterday from their ranch near Crystal Water. Will reports that his neighborhood got the fine weather the rest of the country did, and you can see the grass growing.

A letter from Tote Drummond to his parents this week states that he is all O. K., but a long way from home—being stationed at Brest, France, aboard the U. S. S. Nancy. A photo enclosed indicates that he is in fine physical condition. He expects to be home in about three months.

MOTHER OF SUPT. RUTLEDGE DIES

Mrs. J. A. Rutledge, mother of our superintendent of schools, Prof. P. J. Rutledge, and of Miss Clara, one of the teachers, passed away at her home in Weatherford Friday, having been a patient sufferer for many years. She is survived by her aged husband and several children. The body was laid to rest in a cemetery at Weatherford Saturday afternoon.

On Wednesday at his home in Weatherford, Luther Buchanan, a nephew of Prof. Rutledge, also passed away, after a short illness and the body was buried at Mineral Wells, the old home.

Prof. Rutledge left here Wednesday of last week and attended the funeral of his nephew Thursday and was also with his mother several hours before the end came. The bereaved ones have the sympathy of our people in their deep sorrow.

BOY'S LEG FRACTURED BY FALLING TREE

Tobe DeRacy, son of Mr. and Mrs. John DeRacy is having a vacation from school these days, but under such forced conditions that The Enterprise opines he would rather be at school. Tobe had hard luck while he and some companions were felling a cottonwood tree on the vacant lot south of the DeRacy home. They had seemingly taken every precaution to let the tree fall away from them, which it did, but bounding in their direction struck Tobe and fractured the bone of his leg above the ankle.

Though incapacitated from many games and frolics, modern surgery makes it unnecessary for him to lay flat of his back for a month or more. Instead of the rude plaster cast his leg is encased in a steel splint, and with the aid of crutches he can hobble where he listeth.
