On last Sunday Mrs. J. L. Moore of Brogado, C. W. Mitchell, an aged gentleman from Heber Springs, Ark., two Mexican men and a Mexican girl were poisoned at the home of Mrs. Moore, and Dr. Camp called from Pecos to attend them.

On Saturday evening late Mrs. Moore discovered a sack in the house which was partly filled with what she supposed to be flour, left over from the camp wagon, and set in the house.

Last reports from them was to the effect that they were getting along nicely and since our physicians were not again called it is supposed they are all right again.

FOURTEENTH CENSUS EXTENSIVE IN DETAILS

Washington, Nov. 7.—That the Fourteenth Decennial Census, on which actual enumeration work will begin January 2, 1920, is to be the most important ever taken is shown by the fact that the Act of Congress providing for this census expressly increased the scope of the inquiries so as to include forestry and forest products, two subjects never covered specifically by any previous census act.

CONTRIBUTION OF BAPTIST FUNDS FOR TEXAS SCHOOLS

Dallas—Texas will share more largely in the Southern Baptist 75 Million Campaign than any other of the eighteen states participating, according to M. H. Wolfe, prominent layman of Dallas, president of the Baptist General Convention of Texas. The Texas quota, $18,000,000, is more than twice that of any other State. Of the amount to be raised in Texas, $7,240,000 will be devoted to foreign missions, missions in the Southern States, Panama, Cuba, to ministerial relief, and South-wide institutions. What will be done with the $8,860,000 to be expended in

M. H. WOLFE

Texas is sketched by Mr. Wolfe in the following interview:

"The first concern of the Baptists of Texas is for education. Since the precipitation of the Great War by Germany, whose schools, denominated by German Kultur, were responsible for the Kaiser's reprobate national ideals, the matter of Christian education has assumed an entirely new importance. State education is vitally defective because Christianity is neglected. We cannot neglect Christian education without peril to all of society.

Twelve Schools—6000 Students.
"We have twelve big schools in Texas, headed by Baylor University, with an annual enrollment of over 6000 students. Baylor has a small endowment, as has also the Southwestern Theological Seminary at Fort Worth, and possibly Simmons College at Abilene. Baylor College for women at Belton, Howard Payne at Brownwood, Barleson College at Greenville, Wayland College at Plainview, Decatur College, Marshall College, Rusak Junior College, San Marcos Academy and the Baylor Medical College at Dallas, have none. The five-year program provides for debts, deficits, student aid, equipment and endowment for these twelve institutions, the total sum of a little over $5,000,000 or about $1,000,000 a year.

"This amount, of course, is far too small to meet the actual need for such an educational foundation. The program, but it will greatly strengthen. This, with the auxiliary campaigns which citizens have launched among non-Baptists in the vicinity of each institution, with a view of supplementing the amount coming from the 75 Million Campaign to these vigorous institutions, highly valued in each locality where situated, make the future look much brighter.

To Evangelize Foreigners
"Along with their schools Texas Baptists are equally interested in the thorough Christianizing of their State through the instrumentality of State Missions. They have allotted $1,750,000 to this object for the five-year period. By means of this fund they will seek to evangelize the foreigners in their midst, help negroes to a stronger church life, plant hundreds of new churches in spiritually destitute communities, assist struggling churches in strategical centers, carry forward the vast training activities of the Sunday Schools, young people's societies, women's organizations, and seek to win thousands to Christianity by organized evangelism.

"Another field of service which Texas Baptists have improved is that of healing through the agency of hospitals. The great Texas Baptist Memorial Sanitarium at Dallas is now a million dollar plant, caring for more than eleven thousand patients last year. The first Texas Baptist hospital was the Houston Baptist Sanitarium, doing a marvelous work. The Central Texas Sanitarium of Waco is just now opening with splendid promise. Other sanitariums have been projected at San Antonio, Abilene and Brownsville. For these six institutions there has been allotted the total sum of $1,500,000. In a State where such ministry is so badly needed the Baptists long to serve humanity in the name of Christ.

$300,000 For Buckner Home
"Furthermore, an institution dear to the hearts of Texas Baptists, is Buckner Orphans Home. For it has been set aside $300,000 for permanent equipment. The Home cares for more than 800 orphan children annually. No investment the Baptists of Texas has ever made has brought them more gratification than the money they have put into this noble institution.

"Will Texas Baptists win in this big campaign? We have many anxieties about it. Much depends upon thorough organization and full information. More depends upon the spirit of sacrifice. We are standing on the threshold of a new civilization around the world, and Christianity is the only hope of humanity. The Nations have wandered away from God and will not come back until drawn by Christianity in its purest simplicity. The Baptist message has the simple charm for which the world is hungering. Will we meet the test of steel and answer God's Call?"

SAVE ALL YOUR COTTON SEED SUIT- ABLE FOR PLANTING

In 1917-18 a large part of our State, mainly central, northwest and southwest Texas, practically made no cotton, and was compelled to buy seed from the more favored sections of the State.

More than half of the State must buy planting seed for next year, and these seed must come from central and northwest Texas, where the best seed are now known to be. From this section seed for planting next crop must be obtained.

The department of agriculture now urges every farmer not only to hold cotton, but to also hold seed suitable for planting. These seed will bring the top prices. Already some seed have sold for above the market price. If you sell to the mills they will crush them or hold for speculation. Store in a dry safe place and hold your seed, and be prepared to ship in car lots. When ready to sell, list them with T. S. Minter, Chief of Bureau of Markets, State Department of Agriculture.

Precocity, thou art indeed often the sauce of life. When the 12-year-old daughter of a negro laundress brought back a customer's laundry at 11 p. m., Saturday, the customer, femininely curious, inquired: "Aren't you afraid to be out alone so late at night?" "Oh, no, I got a gun," responded the daughter of Africa, producing a .32-caliber, loaded revolver from the pocket of her coat and flourishing it about. "I never shot it yet," she continued unconcernedly to further frightened inquiries, "but I would, all right, if anybody bothered me." She was hastily ushered out.—Detroit Free Press.

DON'T BE "AVERAGE" MAN

Young people must make themselves efficient and handle their earnings properly during their productive years if they are to escape the common lot of being dependent in old age.

The life insurance companies have compiled figures which undantly demonstrate these facts. Give sober consideration to this digest of life experiences of one hundred average men: At the age of sixty-five the record of these men are as follows: thirty-five are dead, one rich, four wealthy, six are self-supporting but are compelled to work for a living, fifty-four, or over half the number, are dependent on children, relatives or charity. If you could sit down and talk to those fifty-four you would receive the caution "to prepare and to train." That is the secret of success—preparation and training. You don't expect to die young and surely you don't want to be in the class who are dependent in old age. This is a sad state of affairs and only can be remedied by getting the proper kind of business training in youth.

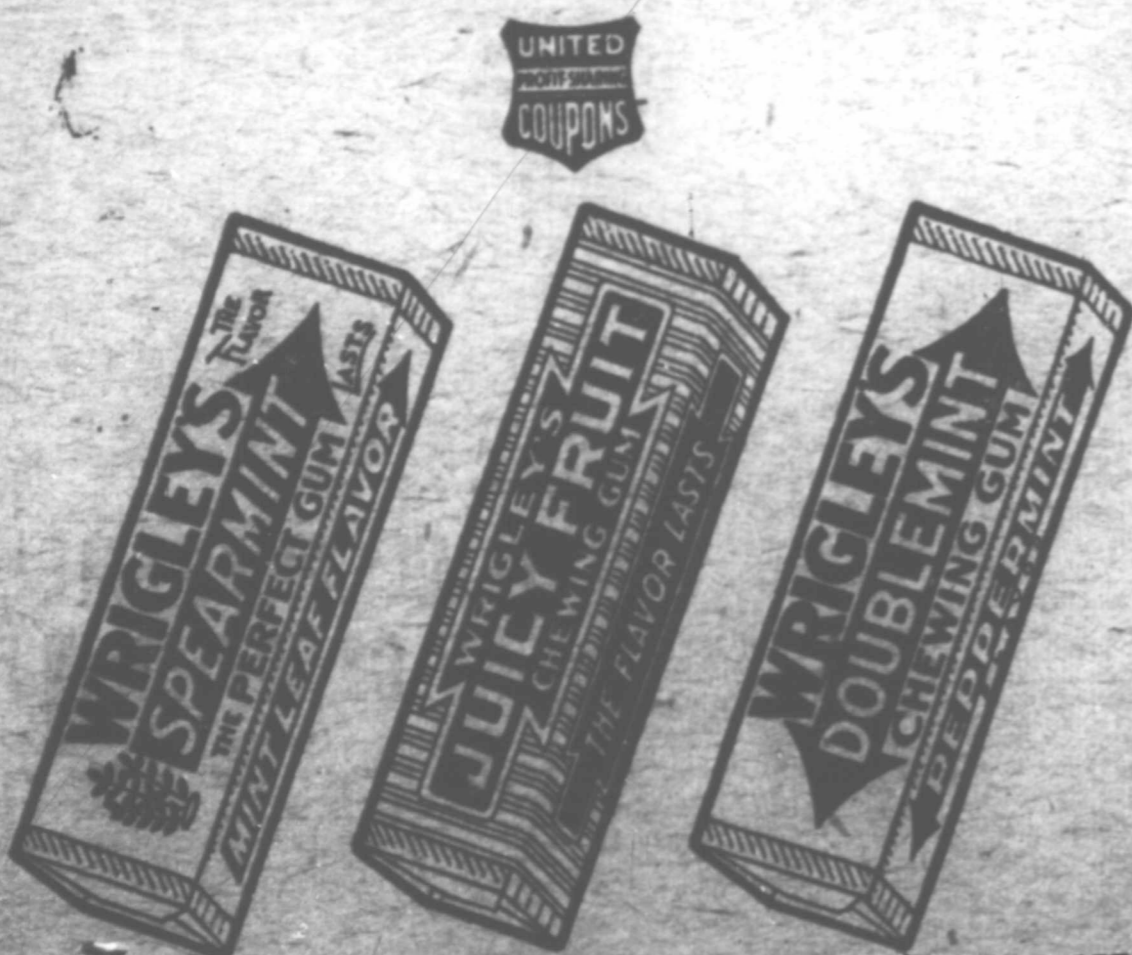

The average educated man gets a salary of $2,000 a year. He works forty years, making a total of $80,000 in a life time. The average day laborer gets $3.00 per day, three hundred days in the year, or $900.00 a year. In forty years he earns $36,000. The difference, $44,000, equals the financial value of an education. To acquire this earning capacity requires about five months time or one hundred and fifty days in the Tyler Commercial College. Divide one hundred and fifty days into $44,000, the value of an education, and you will find that each day spent in the Tyler Commercial College is worth $293 to you without considering the satisfaction and pleasure of living a much more successful life. Fill in and mail for free catalog. Get out of the average class. Tyler Commercial College, Tyler, Texas.

SOCIAL EVENTS

MRS B. R. STINE ENTERTAINS
A beautiful Hallowe'en 42 party was given Friday afternoon by Mrs. B. R. Stine at her attractive home. The decorations were gorgeous with crepe paper gaily printed with symbols of the season—black cats with arched backs, bats, witches and pumpkins outlined in vivid orange colors, draped on window curtains and from ceiling to chandeliers. Vases of white and yellow chrysanthemums and hangings of asparagus and honeysuckle were used to good advantage with jack-o-lanterns placed here and there.

The hostess was dressed as a witch and her assistants, Mesdames W. A. Hudson, J. E. Starley, Jim Camp, O. J. Byran, and H. N. Lusk, impersonated ghosts, with the skeleton in evidence and the lights dimmed to a pale glow, the effect was complete. The punch bowl, set in greenery and filled with nectar, was presided over by Miss Lillian Poe, impersonating a witch who generously dispensed the refreshing beverage.

There were fifty or sixty guests present and after the games delightful refreshments reflecting the Hallowe'en idea were served.

A LIFE TO IMITATE
At his summer home at Lenox, Mass., on August 11, 1919, Andrew Carnegie, the great steel king, passed away at the ripe age of 83 years. It is generally estimated that he had accumulated a fortune of $600,000,000 and had given away something like $350,000,000, leaving approximately $250,000,000 to his wife and daughter. More than $60,000,000 was contributed to library buildings in various cities and towns of the United States, something like $10,000,000 of this amount going into the Carnegie library building in Pecos. One afternoon of the week following his death the library was closed in honor of the donor.

Andrew Carnegie was born in Scotland. His first step in a business career was as a bobbin boy at $1.20 a week. In a review of his life and achievements the New York Evening Sun begins with this encomium: "Andrew Carnegie, the outstanding figure of nineteenth century industrialism, will go down through the ages of the very personification of 'Triumphant Democracy.'"

Overcoming almost insuperable obstacles by his unusual energy and tenacity of purpose, Andrew Carnegie rose from an humble messenger boy to wealth beyond the dreams of avarice. He rose from obscurity to a unique position in the world. Yet, despite the tremendous fortune put into everything he undertook, Andrew Carnegie's meteoric rise was due entirely to the opportunity offered to all in a land of freedom and of free speech.

His life might well be carefully studied by our present generation and while it might not be well to imitate every phase of it, the idea of making your earnings help earn more and depending entirely upon the fruits of your labor would solve the problems of many fortunes. Bring it matter to our very doors at this moment it might not be amiss to suggest that Enterprise readers secure a few oil leases.

There never was a time when men did not visit places they were ashamed for the world to know about and probably this would also apply to some women. There are a few ladies and young ladies in Pecos who do this today—not because these places are questionable, but for the most part just simply because they are breaking a solemn obligation and what they made when joining the church. The Enterprise editor does not believe it so bad to dance, but if you have taken a solemn obligation not to do so, then the breaking of that obligation is the crime, if there be one. A church member promises to support the church and obey the rules and regulations set down by such church. If these rules forbid dancing, then you should quit one or the other. In other words, The Enterprise believes a church member should keep his or her obligations the same as a non-church member, or a little "sooner" if he wishes to have a good influence over his associates.

BOYS' PARTY
Mrs. John Camp was hostess for her son, Jack, at a very delightful Hallowe'en party Friday night. The decorations were in keeping with the season. Games were played, after which a delightful supper of chicken sandwiches, pickles, cakes and pumpkin pie, fruit and chocolate were served. The youngsters decked in riotously colored costumes went out on witches' errands and encountered the proverbial black cats, who spat venom at witches sailing aloft on ragged brooms. Visits to friends were made and many innocent pranks were played.

MRS. J. W. BROOKS ENTERTAINS
An unique entertainment of the Hallowe'en season was the party given Friday night by Mrs. J. W. Brooks to the teachers. The decorations were in the Hallowe'en symbols and the diversions for the evening were games of 42. Dainty refreshments were served.

TEA
Tuesday afternoon Mrs. W. A. Knight, Mrs. T. Y. Casey and Mrs. Will Cowan entertained the members of the W. M. W. at the home of Mrs. Knight. A short business meeting, at which time it was decided to have a chicken-pie dinner on Tuesday, November 25th, the place to be announced later. A splendid program was rendered with Mrs. Hefner as leader. Several interesting papers were read, pertaining to the 75 million campaign. A very profitable afternoon was spent and enjoyed by all present. Dainty refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

MUST HAVE A PROFIT TO RAISE COTTON
There seems to have been a prevalent opinion that the South must raise cotton or starve, but this fallacy is rapidly being exploded and the southern farmers are taking a determined stand as evidenced by their stand at the first World's Cotton Conference held in New Orleans October 13th to 16th inclusive, at which time the strongest note was the unalterable resolve of the southern farmers not to raise cotton unless they could do so at a profit, according to Director T. O. Walton, Assistant Director W. B. Lanham and Walton Petzet, of the Extension Service, A. & M. College of Texas, who were delegates to this conference.

Leading farmers from all southern states were positive in their statements that many other crops adapted to southern soils and climatic conditions could be produced with more net profit than cotton is produced under present conditions and prices. This attitude was no doubt startling to the New England and European spinners, who evidently came to the convention expecting to find the same conditions which existed in the South a decade ago still governing the cropping system of southern farmers, and they were compelled to raise cotton whether the price was high or low.

The general adoption throughout the South of the principles involved

NOTICE
I have received so many inquiries about various oil companies that I have never heard of and can get no information from the fields in which they are supposed to be drilling in that I feel it my duty to give the public the benefit of my judgment as to the value of various propositions now offered the public.

These companies vary like the wind, both in capitalization, location and management, all of which are important factors in evaluating a stock value.

Some of these companies are very good, some are just a fair medium buy, and some are so poor they are an insult to a man's intelligence.

Some people seem to think because a company's location is within 300 feet of a gusher they are certain to make big profits. But not every time, you must consider their acreage, management and capitalization. By all means don't overlook the man behind the bat and you will save considerable money and disappointments, and for your benefit I have in my file at my office weekly drilling reports from all fields as well as comments on what the fields are doing. I receive these reports every Monday morning and they are reliable. I also have a pamphlet (judge for yourself) put out by the largest brokers in the State of Texas, containing many rules for judging oil stocks which will be of immense value to you. The time has come now when you must judge for yourself. The people that boost their wares highest are not always the best, for I have seen stocks advertised in papers at two for one and going fast that I could wire and buy off the market for half the price and, in closing, will say that I had rather lose all my stock and commissions in companies I have sold than have my friends lose on anything; but sometimes that cannot be helped for oil is a gamble, but will not handle any company that I am not willing to take my commission in stock. And will say, again, I am with you right or wrong any way you go. We are all lost anyway, but am not going to say in jail or out for that's a place I am not going to.

Thanks for your patience, in "Safe Farming," which doctrine originated in Texas, has wrought a revolution in Southern Agriculture, and this conference furnished an opportunity to reveal the new conditions to the cotton world.

In speaking of the matter T. O. Walton predicted that in the future the spinners of the world will devote their efforts to stabilization rather than reduction of cotton prices.

It was indeed gratifying to all the Texas delegation to note the attention given to the plans devised by Mr. Petzet of the Extension Service and the United States Bureau of Markets to inaugurate a better system of marketing cotton by farmers in their local markets. The Texas plan was generally discussed and unanimously approved by the convention. A resolution was adopted asking its extension to other cotton growing states.

There was unanimity of all interests represented in support of demands for better baling and handling of cotton to the end that needless waste and damage be prevented. One or two groups objected to specific recommendations concerning gin compression and selling on net weight, but the fact that nine of the eleven groups endorsed these two proposals shows how near the entire cotton trade is to unanimity on these two important reforms.

These gentlemen report the meeting a success from every point of view and are of the opinion that much good will result to the cotton industry in the South as a result of the bringing together of the varied interests concerned in the production of cotton and the attainment of a better understanding of the needs and requirements of each.—S. C. Hoyle Editor Extension Publications, A. & M. College of Texas.

Judge J. F. Meier of Balmorhea, accompanied by Mrs. Meier and Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Patterson were Pecos visitors the first of the week. Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Beck, Mr. and Mrs. George Beck, and Miss Cleo Beck, all from Blackwell, Okla., arrived in Pecos yesterday and will probably make this place their home. The two former have visited Pecos before, Mr. C. H. Beck having landed interests near Hoban. The Enterprise has been visiting the families for several years, and they called at this office on arriving to see that the dates were right for a continuance of its weekly visits.

The new cleaning and pressing outfit of Sam Hayes has arrived and is now in the freight station and will be installed in a few days. Mr. Hayes states he has a new Hoffman press and two of the very finest Singer tailoring machines, besides the very best and most up-to-date other equipment. He says his tailoring department will be as good as the very best. Watch for his opening announcement.

He is re-building machines.

E. A. Curran, El Paso, and stock Oil Company, were of this week. Their business here was to pay for their drerrick which is coming but they were also looking over town with a view of opening a business here, having already secured a building. They are both pleasant gentlemen and were very much surprised to see such a splendidly equipped print shop when they visited The Enterprise.

WEDDING BELLS

SIMMONS-PREWIT

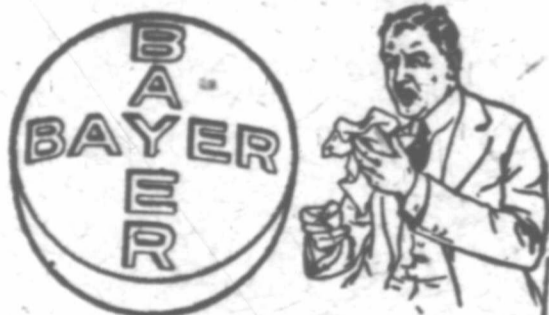

Last Sunday morning at nine-thirty o'clock, occurred the quiet wedding of Mr. Tom Simmons and Miss Edna Prewit, the ceremony being performed by Homer L. Magee, at his residence.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Prewit, and is a Pecos girl, having been born and reared to young womanhood here, and with the exception of about a year and a half, during which time the family resided in El Paso, Pecos has been her only home. She is a capable young lady and fit in every way to cope with the new duties now incumbent upon her as head of the household, and make it what it should be.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Simmons, and his residence in Pecos has been continual for about ten years, with the exception of over a year during which time he was with the Expeditionary Forces of Uncle Sam, being one of Reeves county's volunteers in the late war. Tom is a fine young fellow and his many friends trust that he and his bride will have a pleasant voyage through life. At present he is one of the drillers on the Victory well near Pyote, and thither he and the bride have gone, everything being shipshape for housekeeping out there.

chance to get in a producing, dividend-paying and developing oil concern. Read the El Paso Homer fields, then ask any oil man, and he will tell you that BULL BAYOU HOMER OIL has them all skinned. One good well now producing on 40 acres of land at Bull Bayou now drilling, and besides 20 acres right jam up to big productions at Homer. The big oil men are playing Homer and Bull Bayou Louisiana fields. Bull Bayou Homer Oil Company has over 6,000 acres of land in Texas and Louisiana oil fields, with oil flowing in tanks from one well and dividends soon to be paid.

I can sell you any stock you see advertised in El Paso papers, and would be glad to take your order for same, but this company has the best holdings, largest acreage for their capital stock in the country, and remember they have production right now and are handled by oil men under Louisiana blue sky laws.

Now, listen, for you are my friends. An oil man friend of mine wrote me from Louisiana that he believed this was the best company in the field, and he don't buy stock (only leases) himself, and is not connected with the company in any way. As I told you before, oil is a gamble. If you can not lose don't buy oil stock—for it is all a gamble. Now, as I say, I believe this stock will make all other stocks sold in West Texas look like thirty cents. Remember there is only a limited amount of stock, and look how quick Homer Union sold out. Well, enough said. Buy any stock you want, but would like you to come in and talk to me about it—you are welcome to any advice I can give—for remember, I am with you. Any way you go, it makes no difference, you are lost anyway. But remember we have tamed one wildcat and the others are hunting their holes.

Call, wire or write. Do it now. Just say enclosed so much money to buy Bull Bayou Homer oil stock. I will do the rest. Capital $500,000. Shares, par value, $1.00.

Some Barnum Tales with a Moral

P. T. Barnum, the great showman, in his autobiography, says that in his younger days in New England, there was no effort to heat the church building for the comfort of those who attended on a cold day (and everybody attended church then). Fire in a church at that time was considered sacrilegious and would not have been tolerated by those devout people any more than they would have tolerated a violin being carried into the church.

While Barnum was a very religious man, he was also progressive and did not think that a stove in the church was so sinful as some thought. A big church row came up when Mr. Barnum proposed to put a stove in the church, but there were enough progressive members in the church to vote with Barnum and the stove was duly installed, to the holy horror of some of the good old brothers and sisters. The first meeting after the stove was put in, Barnum put two lighted candles by the stove instead of wood. The flames of the candles shining through the mica windows gave the appearance of a cheerful fire. When two of the sisters came in and saw what they thought was fire in the stove, they complained of the heat and fell down in a faint and had to be carried out.

When one of the deacons attended to the wants of the fainting sisters, in his wrath he opened the stove door to put out the fire, and to his disgust he found only the lighted candles burning. As pious as those fellows were, they laughed at the joke that Barnum played on those good sisters and the deacon, but they got used to a stove in church and now no one thinks but what they are a necessity.

The writer remembers when the violin was considered the most vile and wicked of all man's inventions.

It was considered the devil's wand by which he enticed sinners on their downward march to hell.

We remember the time when our good old schoolmaster gave an entertainment at the old school house, and how he surprised the wicked-minded (?) as well as disgusted the pious by springing sweet strains of two violins on the audience. The people did not know that this was a part of the program and in the main were all delighted except two good old sisters who, when the music struck up, left the house in holy horror. At the next conference, these good sisters preferred charges against the old schoolmaster "for allowin' fiddlin' in the school house," and while they did not have him turned out of church, they made it hot for him.

How times have changed! No church choir is considered complete these days without a violin.

So it is with the movie pictures. There are people today who think they are pious because they are 'agin' the moving pictures, and like those who supposed the stove and violin were agencies of the devil, only later to discover that they were the agents of comfort for the body and delight for the soul.

Some one who thinks along lines of common sense will some day see the possibility of the film as a means for education and enlightenment, he will show the people that they are overlooking one of the best things ever discovered and not only the schools will be equipped with a moving picture machine, but the churches will install them, and on Sundays the minister will not only tell his congregation about Jerusalem, the Jordan, the Sea of Galilee, Mount Moriah, the Dead Sea, and a thousand other wonderful things of the Bible, but will show them how they look.

When that day comes there will be no complaint about people staying away from church, for they will all go then, for the preacher will not only tell them things, but will show them things.

But we have got to wait awhile yet. We still have a lot of moss on our backs and a little of the superstition in us that the good sisters had when Barnum put a stove in the church, and when the schoolmaster allowed "fiddlin' in the school house." We have yet to learn what Christ meant when He told the disciples about old things being passed away and all things become new. We have yet to learn the use the elements and forces of nature which God has put into our hands to bring the erring soul into the paths of righteousness. God speed the day when men will leave superstition and intolerance in the rubbish pile.—Exchange.

FARM LIFE

The folks who live in rural spots
Have nought to eat save beef and pork,
Mutton and sausages and lots
Of stuff like that for folks who work;
Ducks, chickens, turkeys, butter, milk
And fruits and berries—nothing more—
(Save breads and all the jelly ilk)
Unless they buy it from the store.
Yet, when you go among the hicks,
You don't find many Bolsheviks.

They've nought save friends and telephones
In easy reach when they would talk,
In cars and riding plows their bones
They shake, with chances few to walk.
To shows and dances off the wind
They split in jolly henriettes,
And have no parties save the kind
To which one never sends regrets.
Indeed, their life's so dull it serves
To bar them from the joy of "nerves."

They have no janitors to dread
But court for royal favors rare,
No neighbors fighting overhead
Or phonographing down one stair.
They have no knowledge of ennui,
Their life's so deadly dull and tame,
Yet country folk who clearly see
The life their city friends acclaim,
Somehow decide they'd just as well
Keep right on farming for a spell.
—Lee Shippey in Kansas City Star.

The Clean Age

Americans today are living in what promises to be the "clean age" of world development and are very probably standing on the threshold of a longer expectancy of life in which diseases of filth, such as typhoid fever, smallpox, typhus and plague, will be controlled and perhaps eradicated.

The end of typhoid fever already is near. Modern sanitation, sewerage, vaccination, and a safe water supply have greatly reduced the ravages of a disease that would be unknown but for human filth. In the case of smallpox the almost universal vaccination and isolation of the few cases developing have made this disease less to be feared than ever before. Old world scourges like typhus and plague are stopped at the American gateways by delousing immigrants and by preventing plague infested rats gaining a foothold on the American shores. Overseas effective measures are being adopted to prevent the spread of these diseases by teaching cleanliness in communities where the scourge now thrives.

More strongly entrenched than typhoid fever and smallpox combined, claiming more innocent victims every year and leaving a trail of wrecked humanity in its wake stand syphilis and gonorrhea, typical preventative diseases. These, too, are going to be controlled in the "clean age" in which we live, for the United States Public Health Service and the State Boards of Health throughout the Nation are concentrating their efforts and have pooled their resources with this end in view. Most satisfactory progress has already been made with the establishment of free clinics for the treatment of venereal diseases in the larger cities and the closing of restricted districts, making it difficult for the professional prostitute to spread the diseases. During the fiscal year, which began July 1, the Public Health Service hopes to extend this part of the campaign in cooperation with the States, so that clinics will be established in every city in the United States with a population of 10,000 and over, and so that adequate facilities for treatment will be provided in the rural communities.

The very backbone of the fight to control these two scourges is education. The greatest handicap encountered has been the reluctance of the general public to recognize the existence of diseases that are gnawing away at its very vitals; an inclination to regard syphilis and gonorrhea as diseases of crime rather than of unclean living.

The World war brought home to us with telling force the necessity for clean living when the draft revealed the high prevalence of venereal diseases among men taken into the army from civil life. This lesson of the war is to-day among the most important reconstruction problems of peace.

We can no longer protect syphilis and gonorrhea by refusing to recognize their existence. We must realize what physicians have long known—that every day we walk with these diseases; brush elbows with them and run the risk of having them invade our homes. We must learn to live clean, in clean communities in which filth diseases can not thrive. We must teach our young people the lesson of social hygiene. We must also throw the weight of our influence against any interest that seeks to set up again the disease-breeding restricted district.

More than any other health movement in history the campaign for the eradication of venereal diseases needs the support of every citizen. Let's do our share.

THE PROOF

An old man, smiling, watched the strife;
And seeing how serene he stood
I asked: "What is the sum of life?"
He answered: "Good."

Musing he stood a little while,
And thought back on the tollsome way;
Then turned, and told me with a smile
As bright as May:

"Yes, you will find life's test is this:
The sum is 'Good' if at its end
You find your oldest neighbor is Your oldest friend."

Livable Tenant Houses for Farm Help

Farm help is now more of a problem than ever before—harder to get and harder to keep. The farmer who wants to be sure of his help must offer extra good inducements.

The best possible inducement is private, attractive, and comfortable quarters—in other words, livable tenant houses. The farm laborer has the same desire as the farmer for a home of his own.

A modest, moderate priced home for your help is the wisest and surest form of farm labor insurance and, when lumber is the building material used, it will prove to be the most economical.

BUILD NOW and be assured of permanent farm help.

PREVENTION OF BLACKLEG BY VACCINATION

In the opinion of J. P. Jacks, of Phoenix, Arizona, extension animal husbandman of the bureau of animal industry, practically all losses from blackleg may be prevented by the systematic vaccination of all young cattle a month before the season when the previous losses occurred from the infection. The reseeded soil with blackleg spores or germs may be largely avoided through the prompt disposal of the animals dead of blackleg by burning or when this is impractical, by proper burial of the carcass. Drainage and cultivation of the infected pasture when practical is also advised.

It is to be remembered that blackleg may be prevented much more certainly and economically than it can be treated and that vaccination is the cheapest and most satisfactory way of preventing the disease. It was formerly thought by a rather large number of stockmen that by "roswelling," "bleeding," "driving" and also by using garlic and pine tar to act as a vaccine that the disease could be prevented. This is simply an ancient fallacy and has no prophylactic value whatever.

Blackleg vaccine has been in use many years to immunize young cattle against the disease. This vaccine is one of the earliest and most successful agents employed for the protection of cattle against an infectious disease and has enabled stockmen to successfully raise cattle in badly infected districts. Like all true vaccines this one has certain limitations and the more important of which are the severe reaction and occasional death in an extremely susceptible animal and insufficient protection in others.

It was formerly thought to be impossible to obtain adequate protection in all individuals by means of a single vaccination, without increasing the strength of the vaccine to a degree where it would be dangerous for the more susceptible animals, these difficulties have been eliminated recently by the development of a new immunizing agent which has overcome the deficiencies of the old vaccine to a great extent. This new product, known as the blackleg antigen, is a sterile, germ-free product and therefore may be used without danger of causing blackleg. Since it is only slightly toxic, it may be given in sufficient dosage to safely immunize most animals at a single vaccination.

For best results under all conditions we advise regular spring and fall vaccinations of all cattle under two years old, but the time for vaccination varies with the localities and seasons. Losses from blackleg occur when the feed is good and the cattle start to improve in condition. It is best to fix the time of vaccination so that the work will have been completed at least two weeks before the date when the early losses have occurred in the previous years.

FOWL TICK DESTRUCTIVE TO POULTRY

The fowl tick—sometimes called "blue bug"—and probably the worst chicken parasite known in the Southwest, centralizes its activities in western Texas, southern New Mexico, Arizona, southwestern Oklahoma, southwestern California, and portions of Florida. It is a blood-sucking insect which does not establish or maintain itself readily in the humid and cooler sections of the country or in the higher mountain regions.

The fowl tick concentrates on chickens, although it will also attack turkeys, geese, ducks, pigeons, ostriches, and guinea fowls, ranking next to the chicken as a popular host. It wreaks destruction by reducing the vitality and condition of the birds as well as minimizing egg production. Fowls raised where ticks are numerous are often stunted in growth. Another source of loss is desertion of the nest by setting hens, caused by annoyance from the ticks. Death often results in the case of heavy infestation, the parasites draining the fowls of blood and also poisoning them with certain secretions.

In some instances the ticks are so hungry and so plentiful that they swarm over the fowls by the thousands. The symptoms are usually weakness in the legs and droopiness of the wings, the chickens being unable to walk or even get up on the roost. The feathers appear ruffled, and there is usually a loss of appetite. The comb may or may not appear pale. Sometimes death occurs a day or so later. Chickens, soon after hatching, are often killed by becoming infested with ticks.

The chicken tick or "blue bug" is the bedbug of the fowl family. Usually its presence can be determined by examining the ends of the roosts or pulling up loose pieces of bark or boards about the roosts rather than by examining the fowls themselves. Ordinarily during warm weather the eggs hatch in from 10 to 15 days, while in cool weather the hatching period sometimes exceeds three months. The young ticks have six legs and are grayish in color; they usually crawl about the roosts, searching for fowl upon which to prey during the night. They crawl up on the legs of the fowls and attach themselves on various parts of the body, especially where the feathers are not very dense. The ticks attach themselves in bunches on the host and usually are concentrated on the breast, under the wing, and on the thighs and neck. They attach themselves very firmly by their spiny mouth parts and suck blood, usually continuing their blood feast for about a week or ten days. Then, blood gorged, they drop from the fowl and seek a secret hiding place. Four to nine days thereafter the seed ticks shed their skins and acquire an additional pair of legs as well as more size. Henceforward, they work entirely at night, hiding in crannies and crevices during the daytime. Following each of the first three meals of blood the skin is shed and at the time of the last molt the adult males and females appear. After partaking of another meal of blood the females are ready to lay eggs, the average production being 500 to 900 eggs a female.

The longevity of the fowl tick is remarkable, as some of them have been known to live over two and one-half years without any food, and unquestionably, in infested chicken houses many of them survive longer than this, even when all poultry is excluded.

The rapidity of breeding depends largely upon the temperature. Hot, dry weather apparently does not interfere with the development of the chicken tick; in fact, it appears to be at home under such conditions.

It is difficult to control fowl ticks by the use of chemicals, although two satisfactory solutions, carbolineum and petroleum, have been found to be effective. Carbolineum is more destructive to ticks than is petroleum. It persists longer and possesses the advantage of drying into the wood so as not to soil the fowls. Anthracene, which is the principal constituent of carbolineum, has been found to be about as effective as the latter material. The limiting factor here, however, is the difficulty of obtaining this material on the market. Creosote oil, containing 8 to 20 per cent tar acids, is also very destructive to fowl ticks, but is difficult to use in a spray, owing to its caustic effects on the operator. When applied to the roosts and crevices with a brush it destroys all ticks touched and persists well.

In gradicating ticks it is essential to destroy by fire all the infested material and other equipment which is not valuable.

Complete information regarding the fowl tick is contained in Farmers' Bulletin 1070, which has just been published by the United States department of agriculture.

VEGETABLES GROWN IN WINTER IN SOUTH

southern gardens; cultural advice Spinach should be given a prominent place in the Southern winter garden and two or three plantings should be made in order to have a succession of cuttings. Spinach requires a rich soil and the seed bed should be thoroughly prepared before the seed is planted. A bed 7 feet wide and 75 to 100 feet long, containing about 7 or 8 rows spaced just far enough apart so that the hoe can be used between them, will provide all the spinach that is needed by the average family. These suggestions are made by garden specialists of the United States department of agriculture.

In many parts of the South, Bermuda onions may be grown as a winter crop and used in the early springtime, either in the form of young onions or later as mature spring onions. If grown from seed, the seed should be placed in the ground as the earliest possible moment and later thinned so that the plants stand about 3 inches apart in the row. If grown from sets, they may be planted any time up until the middle of December. The common yellow and white onion sets may be planted during November or December and will furnish young onions during the greater part of the winter.

Lettuce of the Cos or Romaine type is especially adapted to growing in the south during the winter. The ordinary hardy varieties of lettuce require some protection to prevent their being "tip-burned" by frost. For growing the more tender varieties of lettuce, a cold frame or cloth covered frame is essential.

In many sections a fall planting of beets can now be made to advantage, the young or baby beets becoming large enough for table use before their growth is interfered with by cold weather.

Peas can be planted in certain parts of the South late in November or during Deember and will be ready for gathering early in March.

Carrots may also be planted in January or February and will be large enough for use in the early spring.

Winter cabbage of the Charleston-Wakefield or Jersey-Wakefield varieties can be planted in the open ground during November and will mature the latter part of March or during April. A number of plant growers make a specialty of supplying the hardy, outdoor grown cabbage plants suitable for winter cultivation.

One point which should be borne in mind when planting semihardy crops that are to be wintered over is that very little fertilizer should be used at the time crops are planted, but that an abundant supply should be worked into the soil alongside of the plants about the time that they start an active growth in January or February. If large amounts of high-grade fertilizer are used in the fall, the plants will grow soft and be more subject to injury by cold weather than if they are kept growing slowly. Later, when the weather begins to be warm, the fertilizer may be applied and the plants pushed to a rapid growth. In the case of the first plantings of spinach, the product of which is to be used in the autumn, the general rule above stated should be disregarded and an abundance of highly available fertilizer used. Where spinach is planted later, to be wintered over and used in the springtime, very little fertilizer should be applied at the time of planting and a top-dressing should be worked into the soil about midwinter.

Many of the failures of Southern winter gardens are due to poor preparation of the land and to inferior seeds. In many cases the land is covered with weeds, which should be removed and the soil afterward turned over and thoroughly pulverized. There is always the danger of securing seeds that are left over from last spring's sales and as a result a poor stand of plants is secured. Insist that the seeds procured for planting the winter garden are reasonably fresh and of high vitality. Good seeds may cost a little more than poor ones, but they will effect a great saving in the long run.

MR. DODSON WARNS USERS OF CALOMEL

Says Drug Acts Like Dynamite on Liver and You Lose a Day's Work.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when a few cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and can not salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel today and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you.

The vagaries in the state of exchange, extravagantly high in some countries and excessively low in others, with fluctuations occurring almost daily, are causing a great deal of trouble to business men and bankers.

Exchange rates depend upon the balancing of exports and imports, and it is because that international finance cannot balance them properly at the present time that extraordinary rises and fallings are seen.

In the case of India, owing to the rise in the value of the rupee, the markets of India are in an indescribable condition of chaos. It has even brought the export trade to a standstill, tea sales have been suspended and the price of cotton has fallen heavily.
