BIG BEND PICTURES AT THE SOUTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION

Many hundreds of people attending the Southern Baptist Convention stopped to inquire about the beautiful pictures of the Big Bend Country that Rev. L. R. Millican had on display in Convention Hall at Houston last week.

The display was easily one of the most striking in the convention. It consisted of three large panoramic views taken by Mr. Frank Duncan a collection of beautiful painted pictures belonging to Mrs. Hamilton of Alpine most of the people had no idea that such striking scenery in a delightful summer climate could be found in Texas. A good many expressed their intention of attending either the Paisino Assemble or the Blois Camp meeting.

McDANIELS-WILSON

On Friday evening May 14th, in our neighboring city of Alpine, Miss Ora Wilson and Mr. William McDaniels were united in marriage.

Miss Wilson is the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Wilson, of Pinto Canyon. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson are among the oldest pioneers in that section of the Big Bend. Miss Wilson also has a sister in Marfa, Mrs. O. C. Dowe. Miss Wilson was a graduate of the Marfa High School in the class of 1924, and has lived in and around Marfa most of her life.

Mr. McDaniels comes from an old and prominent Floresville family. We have a number of citizens in Marfa who represent some of these old families. Mr. McDaniels is at present engaged in the stock business, and has been for the past several years.

The New Era joins with their many friends in wishing them a long, happy and prosperous married life.

Mrs. Del Richey of El Paso is in the City this week visiting her parents Mr. and Mrs. James Shannon.

THE MARFA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Last Wednesday the Chamber of Commerce had their weekly luncheon. Miss Duckworth gave an interesting account of her attendance on the Meeting of the Chamber of Commerce Secretaries. The Marfa C. of C. has just joined the West Texas C. of C., but when Miss Duckworth was in San Antonio it had not been affiliated, as the following letter from the Southwestern Manager stationed at San Antonio indicates:

I have just returned from my trip in the Valley for which I was leaving the morning you were here. I want you to know that I appreciated you being with us at our meeting here and hope you will not miss a single one that we may have in the future.

We very much appreciate your announcement that you will affiliate Marfa with our organization and I will ask that you write me for the service you desire and will see that you get it.

With every good wish and the assurance that it shall always be my pleasure to serve you, I am,

The following letter was received by H. L. Hord, vice-president of the Marfa C. of C. from M. J. Norrell, Manager of the Industrial Department of the Dallas C. of C. and who was Secretary of the Dallas Good Will Tour:

I want to take this opportunity of thanking you for the splendid courtesies shown our Dallas Good Will party when we were in Marfa recently, for your splendid address delivered and for each of the many other kindnesses shown us.

The citizenship of Marfa certainly did give us a real reception and our stay there was just as pleasant as it could have possibly been.

Throughout the entire area of your part of the State the greetings to us were cordial and sincere and our party deeply appreciates this wonderful spirit found in the west.

Thanking you again for your splendid hospitality, for the band that met us, for the dance, for the

TRUDO BLANKS

Trudo Blanks who died in San Antonio May 8 was 65 years old at the time of his death. He is survived by his wife, who before her marriage was Miss Elizabeth Ellison. About 40 years ago Mr. and Mrs. Blanks lived in Marfa. At that time he was extensively engaged in the Stock business, but a number of years ago having purchased a tract of land near San Antonio at the time of his death was mostly engaged in the dairy business. He was a prominent member of the Christian church.

DEMONSTRATIONS IN BUDDING PECANS HELD.

Demonstrations in budding Pecans were held last week at Mead Wilson's, Mrs. Childers, Buck Pool, and O. A. Knight, of Presidio County. W. D. Bourland, G. C. Palmer, W. M. Daugherty, Mrs. Fulcher, and Pope Henson, of Brewster County, Bennett McCutcheon, Joe Kingston, R. C. Williams, C. H. Bird, A. J. Tippitt and Willis McCutcheon of Jeff Davis County. The trees improved were all natives, bearing small inferior nuts, and were budded with thin shelled pecans of the Burkett Texas Prolific and Western Schley varieties.

WILL SPEAK AT ALPINE

The high school commencement exercises will be held at the school auditorium tomorrow night (Saturday) at 8:15, according to announcements being gotten out this week. Hon. Hunter O. Metcalfe of Marfa will deliver the address of the evening and a splendid program has been arranged for the event. Mr. Metcalfe is recognized as one of the most eloquent speakers in this section of the State and school authorities feel fortunate in securing his services for this occasion.

-Alpine Avalanche.

HIGH SCHOOL EXERCISES

One of the best commencement exercises in the history of Marfa closed last evening. The Auditorium stage was appropriately decorated for the occasion. This was the first time all of the different programs were ever given in a High school Auditorium in Marfa, and the first time held in the beautiful new building. In fact, in the old building neither the Auditorium nor its stage was ever adequately adapted for purposes of this kind.

Miss Edna Mae Scott was Valedictorian of the graduating class, and Eldridge Church was the Salutatorian. On graduation occasions there is always a mingling of joy and sorrow, of sadness and gladness.

Truly from the splendid baccalaureate sermon on last Sunday to the closing last evening marked the end of a most successful School year. And each pupil and teacher from the 1st to the 11th grade and especially the superintendent, should be most highly congratulated.

TEACHERS RE-ELECTED

The entire faculty of the Marfa High School for 1925-26 was re-elected for the coming year. The greater majority of the teachers accepted positions, but we are losing Mr. Blackwell, our principal, who is moving to San Antonio.

Miss Moore, who has been of great value to the High School in securing affiliated credits in Home Economics during the past four years, will not come back. Miss Moore will be greatly missed next year over at the cottage, as she is the only teacher we have ever had in food and clothing work.

Miss Medley, Spanish teacher, is not returning and Miss Newman, English teacher, is undecided, but we hope she will be with us again for we realize her ability as a teacher and know she is one of the best we have ever had in Marfa. Miss Medley will have to be here to assist in creating "pep" as she has so far, but if they do not return her, we wish them great success elsewhere.

Now in Good Health by Using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lansing, Michigan.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound whenever I needed it. When I first used it I was so bad I could hardly walk across the room without crying. I was tired all the time. I think my trouble was coming on me for six months before I realized it. I read of your wonderful medicine in the paper, and my husband bought me a bottle, and after the first few doses I felt better, so kept on taking it until I was well and strong. I take it at times when I feel tired and it helps me. I will always have a good word for your medicine and tell anyone what good it has done me. I recommended it to my neighbor for her girl, who is sixteen years old, and it was just what she needed. She is feeling fine now, and goes to school every day."—Mrs. E. F. DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years. It seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even if the child is chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy

Old Superstition Dooms Girls to Spinsterhood

An old superstition of obscure origin is responsible for imposing a severe handicap on Japanese girls who are twenty years old this year. It is said that they must all be so bad tempered as to be unsuitable for wives.

This unlucky time occurs every sixty-one years, and although the superstition is waning there are still large numbers of parents who will not allow their sons to marry girls under this cloud. A number of this year's unlucky girls have taken up professional work, in the belief that they are doomed to remain single.

To combat the superstition, efforts are being made by a society organized in Tokyo to help its members select their wives and husbands without parental help or interference. In the past, thousands of girls, fearing a lifetime of loneliness, have committed suicide.

New Freezing Method for Preserving Fish

Improvements in refrigeration methods which may result in widespread changes in systems of storing and shipping perishable foods are being put into effect by a group of shipping experts, fish distributors, and officials of the Atlantic experimental station for fisheries of the Canadian government.

The central idea of the new method is that foods preserved by freezing should be chilled rapidly instead of slowly. Fillets of large fish are wrapped in waxed paper and packed tightly in narrow cans and sunk in a rapidly circulating bath of very cold brine. Small fish are wrapped and packed whole.

Fish preserved by the new rapid freezing method have been kept for six months, and when thawed and cooked could not be distinguished from freshly caught fish.—Science.

Never Before

A speeding motorist had been hauled up before a southern Indiana justice of the peace. The motorist evidently thought it was a trumped-up charge with a fine as the reward for the local department of justice, and his conduct before the justice bore this out.

"No, never," was the retort, "but I've been before a justice of the peace before."

Shortsighted Cities

More than 300 of the 1,500 cities in the United States having populations in excess of 5,000 are without building codes or ordinances that effectively regulate new building construction. Many of these cities have populations exceeding 40,000, some reach 80,000.

Make Beauty Keynote of Outside of House

A proper choice of varieties of trees to be set out and the appropriate location of each tree should constitute the first job after the laying of the house foundations and the outlining of the paths and driveways, is the opinion of a writer in the Philadelphia Ledger.

Just how many trees you will decide to plant will naturally depend upon the size of your home grounds. If your acre or acres or "lot" will permit you should include a tree or so for shade, large ones such as the Norway maple, buttonwood, oak, or horse chestnut, a few evergreens such as Koster's blue spruce, Austrian pine or a hemlock for their winter beauty and summer coolness, and a few fruit trees for the sake of their spring blossoming as well as their welcome fruit. Several ornamental trees, if well placed, will add much to your place both in charm and elegance. There are a number, such as Tea's weeping mulberry, the catalpa bungei or the tulip tree, any one of which will give a touch of style to the whole garden. The Kilmarnock weeping willow is still another "ornamental" which is exceedingly graceful and beautiful and hardy as well.

No place appears to be quite complete unless it can boast of at least a few shrubs for every season of the year. There should be a few evergreens to cheer us with their glossy leaves or red berries, and to relieve the barren gray of winter time. The forsythia, that gayest harbinger of early spring, should find some nook in every garden.

Point of Importance Is Town's Entrance

A little town may not know what to do to make itself attractive, a matter that has grown highly important to all those on a main automobile highway. Several thousand people of more or less critical and cultured taste are going to pass through it every day and their opinion of it will be spread to the ends of the nation, is the sage comment made by F. H. Collier in the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Already a number of villages have begun to consider the question of portals—some kind of a distinguished entrance where the highway departs from the country and joins the "main street." A town in Ohio has set a large fountain at this point and surrounded it with lawns and trees. Another has "zoned" that portion of the village and will allow no sheds or coal bins there.

The least that any village can do is to lay out flower beds and keep them fresh. A plain lawn, jeweled with red geraniums, is better than weeds or tin cans, scattered with the profusion so often shown by the tasteless and the careless. Residents of any community can be stirred up to beautification if earnestly besought. People who are restive under rural monotony may here find something to occupy their idle hours.

Consider Transportation

The general location of the home may depend largely on the part of the city in which the members of the family are most likely to be employed. It should be either within walking distance of the probable place of work or in reach of good transportation. The mere promise that a trolley or bus line will be provided is not enough. Ability to reach shopping centers is important for the housewife.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Fire Prevention Easy

Careful watching of fire and heat in any capacity in which it is used, ordinary precautions with matches, cigarettes and inflammables, and the repairing of defective mechanical additions to building construction and comfort would virtually rout the fire demon from his abode, according to the past year's report of the chief of a large city's fire department.

Industrial Experts

GOOD EVERYDAY FOODS

An attractive salad is always a most welcome addition to a dinner or luncheon.

Sweetbread and Cucumber Salad.—Prepare the sweetbreads by parboiling and removing all the inedible portion, then drop into cold water to make firm again; add a tablespoonful of vinegar to the water. After standing an hour, drain and cut into pieces. Cut into cubes half the amount of cucumbers, mix all together with a highly seasoned mayonnaise which has been mixed with half its bulk in whipped cream. When well blended, heap lightly into nests of tender lettuce. Serve with toasted wafers.

Celery Jelly Salad.—Put two cups of strained tomatoes, a tablespoonful of grated onion, a bay leaf and a pinch of celery seed into a saucepan; bring to the boiling point and set aside for fifteen minutes to keep hot. Add half a package of gelatin which has been soaked in half a cupful of cold water, one-half teaspoonful of salt, and the juice of half a lemon. Stand over boiling water until the gelatin is dissolved; strain, stir in a quantity of finely cut tender celery and set on ice to set, stirring occasionally until it begins to thicken. Mold in small cups and chill. Serve on beds of lettuce and mask with a rich mayonnaise.

Apple Lemon Pie.—Take two cupfuls of chopped apple, one cupful of sugar, the juice and rind of a lemon, one egg well beaten, half cupful of water, and the same of cracker crumbs. Bake in a two-crust pie in a moderate oven.

Peas, Pickles, Peanuts Salad.—Take an equal quantity of peas and peanuts with enough chopped sour pickle to add zest. Serve on slices of orange, garnished with parsley. Serve with a highly seasoned boiled dressing.

Tapoca Pears.—Cook tapoca and bake with canned pears, adding grated lemon rind and butter. A little lemon juice added to the sauce which may be made from the pear juice will add to the flavor.

Mock Duck.—Take pork tenderloins and split them lengthwise. Make a dressing as for turkey. Put dressing in the meat, sew it up, season, lard with strips of salt pork, add a little hot water and sticke for forty-five minutes.

Luncheon Desserts.
For the noon meal, when dinner is served at night, the dessert should be a very light one.

A dish of fruit a small cake or cooky, a gelatin pudding are all desirable desserts for a light meal.
Jelly Fluff.—Take half a glass of jelly and the white of one egg; beat until stiff and the mixture will stand up alone. Heap in sherbet cups and top with a little egg white mixed with sugar or a bit of whipped cream.

Another nice fluff which is well liked is prepared as follows: Grate a medium-sized apple and mix with sugar to taste, add an egg white and whip until stiff. This may be served with a thin custard sauce, ice cold, or the fluff heaped over small cup cakes.

Emergency Desserts.—Steam any leftover cake and serve with marshmallow sauce. Mix one cupful of brown sugar with three tablespoonfuls of flour, add one and one-half cupfuls of boiling water and cook until smooth, add a generous grating of nutmeg and two tablespoonfuls of butter with a dash of lemon juice and rind. Just before serving have the sauce boiling hot and add a few marshmallows cut into quarters.

Caramel Cornstarch Pudding.—Brown one-half cupful of sugar until it forms a sirup in the pan, then add a pint of boiling milk; stir until the caramel is dissolved—this will take time. Add two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch mixed with a little cold milk and cook until the starch is thoroughly cooked. Pour into sherbet glasses and garnish with a spoonful of whipped cream topped with a piece of preserved ginger for each glass.

Chicken Loaf.—Cook a fowl in water until the meat falls from the bones. Strain, put the broth into a saucepan and reduce to three cupfuls by boiling. Add one-half package of gelatin. Separate the meat from the bones and shred fine. Put the chicken into a well-lined mold, season the broth and pour over it. Set away to harden and serve on lettuce with mayonnaise dressing. A good imitation for a hurry-up dish is canned chicken with chicken broth or canned soup used instead of the fresh fowl.

Snowballs.—Spread cooked rice an inch thick over squares of coarse muslin wet in cold water. In the center of each place a canned peach or apricot, or pear. Tie carefully and steam ten minutes. Serve with a sauce prepared by thickening the fruit juice from the can, adding a little butter to make it richer.

Pretty Things that are Made at Home

"EARLY American," that is a description to conjure with whether the conversation is of architecture in a home, or the furnishings of the home. A wave of appreciation for early American art in home furnishings has swept across the country. Lucky possessors of fine pieces of furniture, handed down to them, have learned how precious these pieces are and a new interest has been awakened in the work of women in colonial times, in the craftsmanship of their weaving, quilt piecing, rug making and the like.

The old art of rug making has been revived and women are making hooked rugs of coarse yarns. Some of them are piecing quilts, as their grandmothers did and copying the quaint, old of becomingness has grown to be vastly important in them; it is stressed in all shoes except, perhaps, those for special sports wear, and even these must consider the element of style.

Besides the usual black and brown shoes for the street, there are new light browns, beige, parchment, honey, gray and gray-beige that harmonize with fashionable colors in suits or costumes, and are inconspicuous. But the color range is much wider and includes saunterne, blond and bols-de-rose as well as pastel colors in very smart oxfords. These are provided for those who are particular about choosing a color to harmonize perfectly with the costume. But kid leather in the brown, beige, gray-beige, parchment and honey shades, con-patterns that are well worth preserving. These are occupations for women of leisure and the finished rugs and quilts are valuable from a money standpoint, as well as from the standpoint of sentiment.

Rugs made of rags, cut into strips, braided and sewed in oval and circular shapes are well established and some of them are now made of discarded silk stockings. The legs of these are cut into continuous strips, the strips braided and sewed together. Table mats are made in the same way—the colors arranged according to the fancy of the maker.

A handsome design for a hooked rug is given here. These rugs are made on a burlap foundation and a modern needle, invented for the purpose, makes the work go quickly. With a colonial bed or bureau, a pieced quilt and homemade rugs one can make a splendid start in furnishing at least one room so that it shall be a tribute to the early Americans.

Strips of silk in many colors sewed together and loosely woven in the old "hit-and-miss" rag-carpet pattern, tributes shoes that will fill all ordinary requirements. Pumps seem to be cut a trifle higher than they were and oxfords somewhat lower, and becomingness depends upon cut.

There are a good many shoes of reptile skins—or of leathers that look like them. The alligator, the lizard and numerous snake skins, very often in combination with plain leathers, add interest to the collections of spring footwear. These may or may not be genuine, the innocent kid and calf, for all one knows, may be masquerading as lizard or rattlesnake—if so, the imitation is so clever that no one is the wiser. The utmost luxury is reached in these smart shoes combining two leathers. For sports or semi-sports wear linen and kid skin are shown in white, brown, beige and in white and brown combinations.

Shoes made of braided strips of leather are popular with sports frocks and so are white "saunter oxfords" like those worn with a smart jumper frock. The slippers shown in the oval are of bols-de-rose kid skin and appear made beautiful couch covers, pillow covers or portieres and small colonial rugs more closely woven and made of cotton or woolen rags, are staple articles of merchandise that find a ready sale. But the most alluring of all revivals seems to be the pieced quilt, because of its quaint, honey beauty, and because it is convenient pick-up work which anyone can do.

In front of windows filled with spring and summer shoes, women are clustering like bees about a honey-suckle bush—studying the new styles industriously and enthusiastically. Their footwear consciousness has been developed very rapidly during the past few years and they are quite as mindful of the clothing of their feet as they are of their millinery. Meantime shoe styles have grown more complicated and much more greatly varied than they ever were and the element to have a fanciful emplacement of lizard skin as a finish.

For evening wear metallic brocades, in slippers appear to lead. There are many black satin slippers with touches of gold or silver and handsome rhinestone buckles have lost none of their prestige. Metallic kid and brocades are combined in some of the smartest evening slippers.

About the best choice for mid-summer wear with all one's day dresses, is the kid shoe in beige, gray-beige, parchment, honey or light brown, with stockings and gloves to match in color. Even the street hat is often chosen with reference to the color of the shoes, and these matching accessories worn with tailored suits or frocks insure a chic ensemble.

Some Psychology

"I was introduced to a stranger as my partner in a bridge game last night by a gentleman who was friendly to both of us," said a Leslie avenue resident. "Our friend characterized me as 'the worst player loose at this time,' and my partner as 'the man who put the spots on the cards.' The effect of this introduction, banteringly given, caused me to hold down my bidding tendencies while it caused my partner, who was really a bit flattered, to go so high with his bid on two occasions that we were down three tricks on each. He was a good bridge player, too, and I'm not good, but the introduction ruined him, and spoiled me besides. That's how psychology enters into a card game."—Detroit News.

If you are not interested, you probably won't understand.

Nature's own body builder

"Before I tried Tanlac I was nervous, weak and worn to a skeleton. I gained 15 lbs. on Tanlac. That was six years ago; I'm still strong, do my own work, eat and sleep, and often help my neighbors." Mrs. M. La France, 501 1/2 Elm St., Waco, Tex.

Tanlac is Nature's greatest tonic and builder. Made from roots, barks and herbs after the Tanlac formula, it revitalizes the blood, tones up the digestive organs and puts the whole system in fighting trim.

Don't go about your work sickly and discouraged. Take the example of millions who have been helped by Tanlac. Stop at your druggist's today and get this wonderful tonic. You'll be surprised how quickly you improve. For constipation take Tanlac Vegetable Pills.

KITCHEN CABINET IS GREAT CONVENIENCE

Cooking Materials and Utensils Easily Assembled.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

There is no need to demonstrate to the modern housewife the value of having most of her supplies grouped near together, so that she can prepare foods with the fewest possible motions and steps. A kitchen cabinet, either bought in a store or home-made, answers this need perfectly, although its usefulness is not always realized until work with it has actually begun. A glance at the illustration, which shows how easily materials and utensils for cake making are assembled when one has a cabinet, will suggest many other ways of using this very convenient piece of equipment.

Convenient Position of Cabinet.

You have, of course, a stool in your kitchen, to sit on as often as work permits. Note the convenient position this cabinet occupies with respect to the sink, which is just to the left of the cook. Used bowls and mixing tools can be laid on the drain board without an extra step, and the working surface of the cabinet is thus easily kept clear. The United States Department of Agriculture suggested this particular arrangement.

Improved Cabinet.

If you do not wish to buy a cabinet it is quite possible for the "handy man" of the house to improvise one which will fulfill the main requirements: a place to keep the supplies and a counter to work with them easily. If this is a built-in feature it should be located so as to save steps in moving about the kitchen from sink to cabinet and cabinet to stove.

TO SECURE TIME FOR EXTRA TASKS

Various Odds and Ends Are Confronted at Once.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A period of spring freshening is inevitable in every good housekeeper's calendar, no matter how careful and systematic she may be about cleaning throughout the year. The furnace fire is dispensed with; screens go up; portieres and many window curtains come down or are exchanged for those of more seasonal fabrics; slip covers appear, and best rugs as well as winter flannels are put away with moth marbles. Such changes as these, as well as miscellaneous tasks of turning out boxes and cupboards, mending furnishings and getting rid of articles no longer wanted, confront one almost simultaneously, and while many of them are not, strictly speaking, cleaning processes, doing them frequently reveals corners that have been overlooked or that need attention and rearrangement.

In the home that is always kept reasonably clean the actual washing of woodwork, windows, floors or furniture may be less of an extra task in the general spring freshening than attending to these other requirements. If the housekeeper's time is already largely consumed by the ordinary duties of her home it becomes a problem to get in such additional jobs. As nearly all of them require some delegation on her part, they cannot be delegated successfully to anyone else, so she must find some way of gaining time for them without neglecting the daily needs of the family.

The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture suggests that in such cases a time schedule or plan of work may be of real assistance. It should be made several weeks before the period of spring change is due, and followed until the transformation of the house is completed. Begin by keeping a record for one week of the time actually spent in your successive activities each day. Include housework, sleeping, dressing, care of the children, talking or telephoning, and any other ways you spent your time.

Now go over these time records day by day to see how long you spent on routine work, and what free times are available, even in spaces as short as five minutes, or half-hours. Decide, first, whether any of the tasks recorded could be eliminated altogether, at least for the period of extra spring work, or delegated to some one else, permanently or temporarily. Could one of the children set the table, sort the laundry or dust the living room? Could you send the washing out for a few weeks, to gain time for those tasks no one else but yourself can possibly do? Then see whether time could be gained by speeding up any of the regular work. Your method of dishwashing may be at fault; you can at least simplify meals for a while, so as to have fewer dishes and cooking utensils to wash. Fifteen minutes gained on several little tasks daily will prove worth while. Think it all out clearly. Look at the location of the scattered short periods of free time. Could any of these be brought together by combining other duties in a different order? The longer the space of time available the more one can accomplish. Such a slight change as rising a little earlier (offset, of course, by going to bed earlier!) may enable you to prepare part of dinner early in the day while getting breakfast and so leave a longer space free later.

Mercerized Fabrics Now Are Strong and Durable

Some confusion exists in the minds of many housekeepers as to distinctions between "mercerized" cotton goods, and those fabrics having more or less temporary glossy finishes produced by paste mixtures. "Paper cambric" is an example of a fabric with the paste finish. Artificial silk, or rayon, is a more lustrous fabric than either of these, but should not be mistaken for mercerized cotton.

Many years ago, says the United States Department of Agriculture, John Mercer, for whom the process is named, discovered that when cotton yarn or cloth was dipped in strong solutions of lye for a short time and then washed, neutralized, and dried, it became much stronger. In later years it was noted that if the yarn or cloth was held under well-regulated tension during the process it was rendered glossier as well as stronger. Hence, mercerization is a process that adds not only durability but beauty. There are today on the market many cotton fabrics in which the entire cloth is glossier and stronger than ordinary cotton materials, or in which bright mercerized yarns have been introduced to form stripes, checks, or figures. Some of the best known mercerized fabrics are batiste, mill, cotton damask, cotton foulard, sateen, venetian, and cotton poplin. Each of these is valuable for some special purpose, according to its character—the sheer, fine fabrics like batiste for underwear and infants' dresses, and the heavier ones for linings or household uses.

Vary White Sauce Used in Serving Many Dishes

To vary the white sauce used in serving such dishes as creamed potatoes, eggs, toast or vegetables, or in making scalloped dishes, try adding half a cupful of cottage cheese to each pint of sauce. Cool the sauce slightly before adding it to the cheese, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Stir till well blended, and then reheat in a double boiler. Avoid boiling the sauce after the cheese is added.

If the cheese is strongly acid it may be necessary to add a small amount of baking soda to it before mixing with the sauce. If a half a cupful of cheese is to be used dissolve a quarter of a teaspoonful of soda in a little hot milk or water and blend with the cheese, then combine the latter with the sauce.

Variations in the flavor of the sauce may be made by seasoning with cayenne pepper; by mixing a dash of curry powder with the flour used to thicken the sauce and adding a few drops of onion juice; by adding a little Worcestershire sauce and some finely chopped parsley; or by adding chopped parsley and pimientos.

Some Children Need Iron

Anemic children need iron. Egg yolk is unusually rich in iron and is very valuable in such cases, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. Prunes, raisins, orange juice, green vegetables, especially spinach, are valuable sources of this important constituent. Liver has been shown to be especially valuable in such a condition.

Condensed Milk

When milk is heated the water in it is readily driven off, and if the heating is continued long enough, the milk becomes thick and creamy. Advantage is taken of this fact in the manufacture of condensed and evaporated milk.

ANNETTE AND PINE

There was such excitement as little Annette and little Pine were coming to dinner.

Chocolate Ice Cream.

The children had not seen them in a long, long time for little Annette and Pine lived quite a distance away and they did not see them nearly so often as they wished.

There were few, if any, people they loved much better than they did Annette and Pine.

Most black. But Pine's hair was lighter in color.

Pine's real name was Phillip, but the children had always called him Pine. In school and by many boys he was called Phil, but the children who were expecting him to dinner always called him Pine.

It made him so much more their friend to have a name of their own for him.

Pine was the kind you really wanted for a friend. Once he was your friend he was always your friend.

Both Pine and Annette were wonderful children. It was not that they were so good that they weren't natural.

But they had such nice qualities. They were so generous and so willing to share what they had with everyone else.

In fact they never kept anything of their own very long for they were so ready and eager to share.

They were so generous and they were so loyal to their friends and they always wanted to do what they could for everyone.

They had the really wonderful qualities.

And they were great fun, too. Well, you can imagine how nice it was to think that they were coming to dinner.

The children thought about it all the day before the one when they would come and all that next day until it was almost time for them to arrive.

There was going to be a fine dinner, too. At Annette's and Pine's house every one always got such gorgeous dinners and such fine suppers and such nice tea parties and all sorts of parties.

But the children had asked their mother for an especially nice dinner on account of their guests.

So they were going to have soup and biscuits and roast beef and lima beans and mashed potatoes.

They were going to have celery and home-made currant jelly and home-made pickles.

And they were going to have home-made ice cream and home-made cake.

Chocolate ice cream was the flavor the children had decided upon.

Afterwards they would have hard candies and they would play games.

Oh, it was such fun looking forward to seeing Annette and Pine again.

The children could hardly wait for them to arrive.

Every sound they heard for at least an hour before they were due made them rush to look out of the door or out of the window.

And then at last they came.

And how happy every one was. The children just beamed with delight.

For Annette and Pine had come. And Annette and Pine were such great, great friends!

New Brand of Dog

A small boy, about five, came struggling along dragging a strange looking pup by a heavy chain.

"Well, well," exclaimed a kindly on-looker. "That must be a fine dog you have. What kind is he?"

"Yes, sir!" came the proud reply. "He's half brindle and half female."

About New Neighbors

The new neighbors were under discussion. Howard made it his business to go over and be the first in our family to get acquainted.

He brought home this information: "They's one that goes to school; he's John. Mary plays with dolls, and the babbiest one is Betty Jane."

Thought She Was Big

Despite her eighty-six years, there is no more enthusiastic lover of outdoor sports than Mrs. Olive Tobey of Elliot, Maine, and it is not an uncommon sight to see her and her daughter and granddaughters coasting on a double-runner bob sled. Towns no longer are developed along the lines of least resistance
It is the push and energy of its people which have created and placed upon the world's map the large cities of our country.

Natural advantages do not always make the town. What had El Paso around it originally only a wilderness of brush and weeds along the Rio Grande Valley, and on its mesas rocks, alkali, naked shrubs and thorny cacti. But then every man woman and child in the Pass city were boosters, and the Papers published there tooted a big horn both by day and night. Witness the marvelous result.

Land has an eternal value. Land tends to rise in price. Formerly often it was said of a man- he is land poor. It is trueonly the wealthy can afford to hold land for speculation.
In its last analysis the true value of land is what it will produce. No reference, however, is made to what is called the unearned increment.
The Big Bend of Texas contains the last track of cheap lands in the United States. Lands on the Rio Grande in Presidio, which formerly sold for $2 to $3 per acre, are now selling from $10 to $25 and soon the price will be from $50 to $200.

GRAFT
What is Graft. It is difficult to define. One definition might be termed stealing under the color of law or it might be called the fine art of taking advantage of the other fellow. The big and small grafters receive different appellation. We call the successful one plungers or speculators while the little ones are only contemptible thieves. Sometimes and even often the sarduced undertaker or a fine looking hospitality with a sweet sounding charitable name may be found grafting.
It may be true all the items are down in the bill.

Bureaucracy
I am in favor of constitutional government as established by the fathers of the Republic. And those powers retained by the States should be maintained.

The growing power of the Federal government should be abolished and the State should recapture and make secure their powers or Sovereign State.

"No plan of centralization has ever been adopted which did not result in bureaucracy, trynny, inflexibility, reaction and decline"

"Unless bureaucracy is constantly resisted, it breaks down representative government and overwhelms democracy. It is the one element in our institutions that sets up the pretence of having authority over everybody and being responsible to nobody."

—President Coolidge

Candidate For Nut Factory

"Zim" the titling evangelist is a candidate for governor of Texas.
He proposes to cast himself on the Altars of Sacrifice in order to defeat "Fergusonism". Incidentally he is against evolution and opposes the World court on the ground
"Americais Gods own Country", and therefore, does not wish to have it plunged into the European mess.
What connection evolution and the monkey talk have to do with the Ferguson family and the Altar of Sacrifice is not plain unless the Reverend Speeler desires to build around his campaign funeral pyre to cause consuming interest, the fires of religious fanaticism. This country according to his pronouncement belongs to God, but Europe must belong to the Devil and although the Christ died for all men yet Europe is outside of his jurisdiction and without question the Rev Ti-ther does not expect to pass around his hat for contributions from that impoverished debt-ridden country.
And he would throw out a Sop to the fundamentalist by putting in his platform a guarantee to rid the State of this outrageous doctrine of evolution. Perhaps this is possible, especially after contemplating how this modern knight out Herods Herod and even Ferguson is made a very small political Animalcule when Rev. Zim arrogates to himself the powers of the Texas Legislature and promises to "discharge any judge who decides a case on technicalities." He should have gone further in his arrogant assumption and put in his wind bag a promise to send to the Pen any one—man, woman or child refusing to pay his tithes.

If the Rev.Z. is not careful he will find himself talking his platform to the inmates of some insane asylum where his candidacy might appeal to their intelligence.

Run-Down gave out easily

"MY health wasn't any account at all," says Mrs.
H. L. Cayton, of Washington,
N. C. "I would start to do my housework and I would give out before I had done anything at all. I did not have any strength, and if I did the least thing it seemed to tax me so I could not finish.
I was run-down sure enough.
"Several of my friends had taken Cardui and they said to me, "Why don't you try it?"
I knew I needed something to build up my general health and to increase my strength.
"Finally one day when I was recovering from a spell of sickness, I decided to try Cardui. I got a bottle and began to take it. I could notice that I was improving as my appetite got better and I did not give out nearly so quick.
I took several bottles and I felt lots better.
"Two years ago I decided to take it again. It built me up and made me feel like a different person. It is the greatest medicine for women that I know anything about."

JIMMIE SCHOTE APPOINTED DEPUTY MARSHAL

Folks beware, we now have a deputy Marshal, our publicspirited Marshal, Mr. Raetzsch, who in the past has been too busy looking after our good roads and other civic interest to pay very much attention to the speed demons, drunks, etc., has appointed a deputy, Mr. Jimmie Schote, and he sure packs a mean looking gat. Mr. Schote is not a large man and looks as tho he might be under a strain when he packs that great big gun, but it evens his chances with the biggest of them.

They say that while Mr. Schote has been in the Big Bend section he has had considerable experience in hunting (especially Badgers) so he must be a pretty good shot with that pretty little pistol of his.

So beware, you would be Oldfields and had yegmen, our deputy is coming out, and he is steppin' high wide and handsome.

Firestone TIRE DEALERS

Serve You Better

We Are Tire Specialists

Our experience and equipment help you get the most mileage, comfort and safety from tires.

Gum-Dipping—the only known method of insulating every fiber of every cord with rubber—gives the strongest construction possible. And the special Steam-Welding process makes Firestone tubes both leak-proof and long-wearing—further increasing the life of the tire.

The proof is demonstrated by the biggest taxicab and bus fleets—by race champions and in everyday service of hundreds of thousands of motorists.

Let us see that your tires are properly mounted, inflated and cared for.

We repair your tires, when necessary, by the new and better Firestone method.

Equip your car with these famous Gum-Dipped Cords and Steam-Welded Tubes. We will take your old tires in trade, giving you liberal allowance for unused mileage.

Crusader Towns Get Into News

Dispatches From Syria Recall Forgotten Places.

Washington.—Dispatches from Syria tell of political prisoners being sent to Ruad, and mention other places which emerge into the day's news, after lying in the back waters of world history since the time of the Crusades.

In a communication to the National Geographic society, Maynard Owen Williams tells of a recent trip he made through this historic, but almost forgotten, region.

"As one comes up to Tartus from the south, having left the ruins of Marathus behind and drawn a sort of coast circle around the shoreward side of Ruad, the most prominent feature of the landscape is a huge Crusader church bulking large above the town. The interior, when one has entered it, through a small breach in the age-browned wall, color of crumbling newspaper falling away from some treasure it enveloped, or of nut brown mummy wrapping is pleasing in its grace. Time, however has worn finger holes in the once rounded columns, and it resembles the workshop of a carnival committee or a pageant board because artless battlements, jagged from thin lumber, fill one corner.

Mosque Is Deserted.

"The Crusader church stands alone between flat-roofed houses and the fertile plain, edged with spiny cactus. On the right-hand forward corner there is a small tower erected when there were plans of making a mosque of this vast barn of a building. But Tartus is small and a mosque, like a cafe, is at its best when embellished with humans compacted together. A great face, high under upturned domes, may need only the complement of a lowly, kneeling figure to make it a house of worship. The mosque, lacking the presence, needs a more companionable upholstery of living beings in it. So the church, no longer church, is saved from the desecration of non-Christian worship and abandoned to the desecration of dirt.

"In the walled town (the roadway from the south enters a hole hacked in Phoenician masonry coeval with Solomon's temple perhaps) there is a Crusader's hall, the outside of which runs along one side of the square. But search as I would, no matter how many Moslem women or village boys guided me about, I was not able to see the inside of this hall, now divided among many owners.

"A little farther on, its megalithic foundations sloping to the disused moat, there is a former church now a mosque, with a really fine minaret proclaiming its presence. Above the arched doorway a cross has given way to a sort of trefoll which disguises the effacement, and the imam, handsome and commanding in presence, is so cordial a friend that one cannot begrudge him the privilege of instructing the youths in a narrow corridor of a room flanking the main hall.

"The student may, if he will, trace the megalithic wall most of the way around the town. But to what purpose? Does counting stones awaken the imagination? Or does one huge block, its cheek bulging beyond the carefully cut edges trimmed to a perfect line along the seam, betray the workmanship as akin to that which Hiram did for his Jewish friends on Mount Zion?

When Crusaders Sailed Home.

"Tartus was the last place on the mainland to be held by the Christians, but it was from Ruad that the last of the Crusaders, giving up hope of Christianizing by the sword a land in which they had lived for two centuries, set sail for home. When the

Charleston Is His Home Town

The "Charleston" comes natural to Representative T. C. McMillan of South Carolina, because his home town is Charleston. A photographer with a nose for news discovered Congressman McMillan "doing his stuff," showing the pretty Misses Sylvia Clavans and Ruth Bennett a few new twists.

Twentieth century fighters arrived to fight against the Turks and Germans. Ruad was occupied by the French, and today its central castle, dominating the low-lying island, and in turn dominated by a lighthouse, is the prison of political prisoners.

"Ruad stirs the imagination because, quarrying away its tiny coast line to construct a megalithic wall which dropped sheer to the surf, the Arvadians shut themselves into a place where, lacking a fleet they would starve, but sallying forth from there they dominated the mainland as far as the Orontes, including the Nosariyeh hills, now inhabited by descendants of several mystic sects and those who gave the word assassin to the world.

"Today the men of Ruad are skillful mariners as of old and in the lee waters between the island and the mainland, there are many small ships. These ships are all that turn the balance of trade in favor of the island, enabling it to live, for all the food is imported from the mainland. It is a tiny Britain around which one can row in half an hour, and the boatman who ferried me across from Tartus in a heavy boat equipped with four oarsmen and a sail was glad to add a trip around Ruad to the ferry passage for the promise of an extra 50 per cent added to the 75 cent fare which was the minimum for a direct crossing.

"Tonight I sat in a Tartus cafe full of muleteers in conical felt caps, slouchy and comfortable, and town folks in turbouches well pressed and ruddy in the light."

Cheap Nitrogen Sought by Utilizing Sea's Heat

New York.—The American Chemical society made public a proposal it received from German scientists to obtain atmospheric nitrogen with the aid of electric current produced by using the heat of sea water.

At the surface of the sea the temperature of sea water in the tropics and in portions of the temperate zone is at least 25 degrees, and at 200 or more meters depth is 10 degrees or below.

The Germans propose to evaporate carbon dioxide ammonia with the warm water, using the pressure obtained to run turbines and condense the gas with the cold water. The business possibilities would depend on the product of the energy obtained, as the location of the plants would be remote from industrial centers.

TRY PSYCHOLOGY AS AID IN TEACHING DEAF TO READ

Scientist Reports That Visual Method Is Helpful in Learning Intangible Words.

Washington.—A new way of teaching the deaf to read, in which the word symbols are learned by the deaf child by visual study, has been made practical by recent advances in psychology, according to Dr. Arthur I. Gates, professor of educational psychology in Columbia university.

Doctor Gates has been attending the convention of school superintendents of the National Educational association here to present the results of recent tests before the educators.

"The main difficulty has been to convey to the deaf child the meaning of such words as 'when,' 'above,' 'these,' and 'but,' which are quite essential to ordinary reading," Doctor Gates explains. "These difficulties were previously considered by teachers of the deaf to be well-nigh insurmountable, but principles of learning now available from psychology suggest means of overcoming them.

"The underlying theory is that the deaf could be taught to understand words presented visually quite as readily and as fully as the normal child learns to understand words presented orally. There seems no reason to believe that it is harder fundamentally to associate meanings with visual symbols than with auditory signs."

The first test of this procedure is being made in the school of the New York Society for the Improvement of Instruction to the Deaf, with promising results.

That methods of teaching the deaf children to read are not fully adequate at present is shown by investigations made two years ago, Doctor Gates showed. It was found that deaf children, even those taught in first-rate institutions, are rarely able at the age of fifteen, or often later, to read ordinary prose readily enough for either information or enjoyment.

"Deaf children often suffer pitifully from loneliness," said Doctor Gates. "If they could be taught very early to read, their lives could be immeasurably enriched and enlightened."

Giant Turtles a Nuisance

Thousands of carnivorous, giant snapping turtles, averaging two feet in diameter, abound in the lake country between Fort William and Wintrop, according to Joseph Spoon, full-blooded Indian trapper. This is something new in the natural history of this country, but Spoon says he should know because he lost hundreds of dollars through them. Beavers trapped under the ice are eaten piecemeal, he declared, and turtles are increasing in number. It would take a sledge hammer to crack their shells and some of the turtles found on lake shores have been declared to be a century and a half old.

"Ah!" he muttered. "Monsieur, I am shocked. My hundred thousand livres will never come back to me. Ah, well. We must say nothing to the old rat below. He shall think the land is still there; and he shall go with me."

"You will go on?"
"Pardieu! I must. And after all, there are many things not known about this country of the damned. Perhaps I, Francois Narbonne, may find riches after all! If not, I will be as well off as at the start. Ho, ho! Down hill there, old rat! Are you lost?"

"I hear you. But batten down your hatch, or we'll have a boarding party after our brandy. A canoe passed downstream a bit ago. Too dark to make out their rigging, but they spoke a foreign lingo, neither Spanish, French nor good old English. Wild Indians, I've logged it."

"One of my enemy's canoes, scouting the back-trail," I whispered to Narbonne. "His Choctaws must have discovered my smoke, and some of them are out to locate it. I must make the cut-off at Point Coupee as quickly as possible. It will take a day of hard paddling. If you are still minded to help mademoiselle forget her fears—"

"I would gladly paddle through hell to ease mademoiselle's mind, monsieur," he gravely interrupted.

I waited for Six Fingers to come up the bank, which he mounted with the agility of a monkey. He reeked of brandy and was in a beastly humor.

"Cheer up," I said, with malicious enjoyment. "There is gold ahead, a gold mine."

"Aye? That's why the devil bites me," he grunted. "There's two gold mines ahead, and I can't take both of them. This Narbonne's a crazy fool. If he'd told the yarn I'd laughed at it. But the second officer of the Maire believes it. He had talked with this Sagan, who visited the land."

"And the second gold mine?"

"Don't you wish you knew, my brave cock?" he mocked, his brandy giving him assurance. "Hark! ee! A man who helped sack St. Augustine, and who has seen many a stout lad—some women, too—try to walk on the ocean with their eyes blindfolded, knows how to keep his hatch closed."

He swung on ahead of me, and I knew the brandy had stirred up thoughts of the old days; for in a low voice he was whining something about:

Low down, hull down,
We're off for Fortobello-O
Women and drink, and the isthmus stink,
And our cap'n's very mellow-O.

He was as poisonous as a swamp-moccasin, but age had drawn his fangs; he was merely a shell filled with wicked memories and evil longings. If not for the danger of his babbling to Damoan I would have set him adrift with his brandy with as little compunction as I would shoot an alligator. When I came to the fire the girl and Narbonne were seated side by side before the dying bed of coals, the ruddy light playing on their faces and giving me the impression she was more at ease in his company than in mine. She asked:

"Are we to move on tonight?"

"It is best. If we can travel till near daylight we can camp for the greater part of the day and reach Point Coupee at twilight. You can sleep in the pirogue while we travel tonight."

"I was not thinking of myself," she reproached. "I was thinking of you, monsieur, who must be so weary. And I know all this extra labor is because of me."

A man never takes amiss the pity and sympathy of a woman. He may deride it and he may know he is not deserving of it, but deep in his heart he worships the notion and feels like purring; for it is one form of a caress. I mumbled something intended to make light of it. She was foolish enough to imagine I resented her solicitude; whereas I was pleasurably confused and appeared to be gruff to cover up my diffidence. So I ushered Six Fingers down the bank and left the Frenchman to escort mademoiselle.

With the girl on the blankets behind me I led the way, after warning Narbonne and Six Fingers to keep close and indulge in no talking. Six Fingers was insistent on singing some of his evil old sea-songs and Narbonne was quick to curse him out for his indiscretion. I was patiently explaining the dangers of their carelessness when the girl emitted a shriek that could have been heard for a long distance. I dropped my paddle and stretched out a hand to arouse her from her bad dream, but as I touched her she seemed to be crawling overboard, and her voice was suddenly stilled. Thoroughly nonplused, I could not compel my mind to function until her stifled voice choked out:

"Save me, Englishman!"

Then I detected something in the water alongside the pirogue which had no business there, and my fingers encountered a brawny arm. As I clutched the naked flesh ten fingers seized my wrist, and the girl, released, screamed again. The pirogue careened as the thing in the water sought to drag me overboard. Clearing my ax, I relieved the strain by leaping over the side, yelling as I went:

"Sit still!"

As I struck the water the hand released my wrist and two hands grabbed my throat. Down we sank, and down swung my ax as we were going under. I felt the ax register, and the grip on my throat loosened. I kicked about and wrenched the ax free and satisfied myself the naked body was lax and limp, and then shot to the surface.

"Hush mademoiselle. It is all right." I softly told her before attempting to climb into the pirogue. "Hush your noise."

"Le bon Dieu!" she moaned. "Is it indeed thou, monsieur?"

"No other. All is well."

And I washed the ax and stuck it in my belt and climbed aboard and began anxiously peering about to see from what craft my assailant had swum.

"What is it?" I heard Narbonne cry. "Stand by to repel boarders!" howled Six Fingers.

"Ah, the devil! How blind I am!" snapped Narbonne, and I heard his sword slithering against iron.

"In your throat! How does it taste?" cried Six Fingers.

"God help us! They fight between themselves!" faintly exclaimed the girl.

"They're attacked," I corrected, sweeping the pirogue about and heading downstream where I could make out the vague shapes of two canoes some distance apart.

With a wild war-whoop the canoe of the enemy began closing in on my two companions, their first assailants being Choctaws who thought to take them by surprise by swimming.

A flight of arrows hissed over my head and one or two stuck in the side of my pirogue. I snatched my pistols up from the bottom of the pirogue and emptied them, and then braced myself to use the musket as a club. Narbonne fired two pistols and Six Fingers let off a musket, and the pirogue frantically retreated toward mid-channel and downstream.

"Naked men in the water attacked us, monsieur," explained Narbonne as our pirogues drifted together. "I got one and the old rat diked another. How is mademoiselle?"

"Dieu merci! I think I shall live, but I was dying of the fright," she whispered. "Red hands at my throat! Can I ever forget when they would drag me into the river!"

"But they did not, mademoiselle," I sharply reminded her. "A danger passed is as though it never happened. Be calm. They have all gone. There is no more danger."

Narbonne asked what I purposed doing.

"Mademoiselle is nervous. We will land and wait until she recovers her composure," I said.

Her fingers closed on my arm, and she whispered:

"After all it was only Death that stalked me. Death is clean. It was his coming while I slept that unnerved me. Monsieur, you prefer to make a certain distance before daylight. Proceed. Do not consider me. I am myself now. It is nothing."

After reloading my musket and pistols and seeing that Six Fingers did the same, I again took the lead.

This time there was no need to caution my companions as to the value of silence. Nor did we again glimpse the Indians' pirogue although we kept to the river until well into the gray morning.

Spaniard Gets Credit for the Frankfurter

What is a hot dog? Well, it is mostly bull; but mixed with pork, highly spiced, steam cooked and smoked over hickory smoke. It originated in Bologna, Spain, so long ago that only the main facts may be recalled. They used to slaughter an enormous number of bulls in the arenas of Spain in days when bullfighting was more popular and more brutal than it is today.

It looked like a great economic crime to see so much prize beef wasted. But nobody wanted bull beef just so; bulls are tough and not so delicious as cows and steers are. A butcher in Bologna had an idea and bought bulls that were killed in the bull ring and made the meat into a sausage, mixed with pork and highly seasoned. Bologna sausage appealed to the popular taste.

Germans borrowed the formula, put the same sausage mixture into small casings and Bologna became "Frankfurter" in Frankfurt and "Weenie" in Vienna. Coney Island gave it the name of hot dog and popularized it. One stand in Coney Island that has with nothing occurring to disturb mademoiselle.

The river talked to me. It taunted me with threats of ambushes along the silent, brooding shore, it whispered of Damoan the Fox cunningly awaiting us at the big loop. The influence of the mighty waters rather worked on my nerves, and when an unusually large area of drift first appeared around the next bend I paddled to the bank and leaped ashore to reconnoiter it from a tree. I was suddenly taken with the notion that we had been seen and that Damoan's canoes were stealing upon us under cover of the onsweping mass.

I hurriedly explained my purpose to Narbonne and the girl and had them come ashore and hide while I threw green boughs over the pirogues without bothering to extricate Six Fingers from the bottom of his canoe. Near the bank I found a tall tree and climbed it until I had an excellent view of the river beyond the solid mass of drifting trees. My fears were empty. There was no sign of Damoan's red hunters. Ashamed of my panic, yet greatly relieved, I descended.

Only a few feet from the tree I came upon the scene of a recent tragedy—a dead Indian. A feathered shaft struck from between his naked shoulders and he had fallen while in the act of setting an arrow to bow-string.

The dead man was a Natchez. He was in the country of the Humas, who were of Choctaw blood and included in that confederacy. As I reconstructed the tragedy, he had been shot down from behind by a Huma and had run away and escaped discovery although ultimately dropping dead. I took the bow of acacia-wood and the quiver of reed arrows. The heads of the latter, fashioned from bone, were not barbed like the war-arrows, but were such as were used in hunting deer and buffalo.

The dead man had not been on the war-path. Carrying the bow and arrows, I returned to my companions, and, to spare the girl's feelings, explained I had found the weapons in the wood.

Clearing the pirogues of brush I set off with the girl with Narbonne following close. We worked hard, for only a short period of daylight remained for us. It was the beginning of dusk when we came to the tiny bayou. I drove my pirogue to the eastern side of the blockade and jumped out to investigate. By carrying the pirogues a hundred feet we could take the open water again. I aroused Six Fingers from his slumbers by the simple process of taking him by the shoulders and sousing him up and down in the river. He began a string of fearful curses, but by thrusting his monkey's head under water I soon took the heart out of him.

Tossing him ashore, I ordered him to help Narbonne with one end of the pirogue while I took the other. I was elated at having gained the cut-off without having to fight my way. I felt so safe with that hundred feet of drift hiding me from the river that I directed Narbonne slowly to paddle my pirogue and the girl along the bayou with Six Fingers bringing up the other while I tried my luck hunting. Pointing out a dead tree far ahead, I told Narbonne to halt there and build a small fire, taking care to shield it with blankets.

"We'll camp long enough to rest and eat and then push on," I told them. "It will save a full day's paddling and a possible encounter with Damoan and his Choctaws." Then taking the bow and arrows, and my ax, I scouted toward the main river in the hope of finding some waterfowl.

But move as silently as I would I could find no birds. When I was about opposite the dead tree I decided it was growing too dark for hunting and began making for the camp. As I turned my back a rustling in the underbrush behind me revived my hopes and I glided behind a clump of bushes and slipped an arrow from the quiver. The ground was clear of growth for a few rods, and as the sound was repeated I fully expected to see a rabbit enter the opening.

With the silence of a shadow a Choctaw warrior emerged from the growth and stood as if listening. Then he dropped on his knees and began examining the ground. I realized that he had found my tracks and would know at the first glance that a white man had been there. My next thought was the necessity of preventing the fellow from reporting his discovery. As he leaped erect I released the arrow. His yell of discovery was a second ahead of the reed shaft, and although he went down with the arrow sticking through his neck he had done what I intended to prevent.

That his companions were close at hand was proved by the almost immediate response to his wild cry; then there came the sound of men crashing recklessly through the growth. Next they were pouring from cover in single file until I counted an even dozen, and there were more behind among the bushes. The first warrior in the opening came to the dead warrior and dropped beside him and examined the arrow. Another was casting about for a trail.

"What do you find?" spoke up a soft voice from the bushes. It was Damoan the Fox speaking.

Before he could receive his answer I sounded the shrill war-cry of the Natchez and began discharging the arrows as fast as I could manipulate the bow. With cries of alarm and rage the Choctaws swept back into cover, for the moment believing the Natchez had taken the red path against the French and their allies the Gulf Indians. As I loosed the last arrow I turned and made toward the dead tree. Damoan's voice rose in a cry of triumph, and in Choctaw he shouted:

"The White Indian! It's the nian we're after. These are hunting arrows. He plays tricks with the Natchez arrows. He is alone. After him!"

My sole advantage was the waning light which made it difficult to follow my trail. I ran on and soon struck the cut-off close to the dead tree. With a leap I was on the other side and kicking the fire into the water.

"What's wrong?" whispered mademoiselle.

"Into the pirogue! Quick! Narbonne! Six Fingers! Aboard and follow me quietly. We have a few minutes!"

They obeyed without a word, and with the girl lying flat to escape ball or arrow we worked rapidly along the sluggish narrow lane.

No sounds came from the woods to establish the position of our pursuers; and as the quiet continued the girl lifted her head and tremulously whispered:

"They have gone away, monsieur. We have escaped them."

I pitied her because of the rude awakening her hope was to receive. The profound silence told me the Choctaws were making every exertion to find me. At any moment I expected to be attacked from the bushes lining the bank. It was an actual relief to me, even though it made the girl moan in terror, when Damoan's high-pitched mellow hunting-call floated to our ears.

"It is nothing," I told her. "They have found our camp. They will not know whether we returned south, or came this way."

She did not discover any discrepancy in this statement, although it was so obvious a child should have realized that the discovery of us on the cut-off would point only to one course of flight—the course we were taking.

I knew they were following the cut-off, bounding along the bank like so many dark devils. I knew they had read the signs about our fire and knew how many were in the party, and that one was a woman. I picked up speed a bit and soon slid my pirogue up the inclined surface of a sunken log. I leaped to the bank and helped mademoiselle out, and whispered to Narbonne to give me a hand. He ran his canoe alongside and I stepped aboard, and the two of us were pulling my canoe off the log, when with a wild howl they were upon us.

MADERA SPRINGS IS RESORT GEM OF THE DAVIS MOUNTAINS

West Texas is to have a new town Madera Springs—located in the Davis mountain region south of Balmarhea and near the Old Spanish Trail.

In the heart of this wonderful land, with its plateaus and peaks, where in other years the fox dug his hole unscared and the Indians wooed his bronze checked mate, now is heard the tools of craftsmen and the hum of industry and development.

Madera Springs is to be the vacation spot of Texas, where representative Texans will gather in an atmosphere of pleasant sociability and physical well being.

Under the supervision of experts, a lodge club house and hotel are constructed. Attractive cabins and cottages will be built on the sides of wooded hills, some nestling among splendid pines, others overlooking the deep canyons. The rooms will be comfortably furnished and the prices for accommodations most moderate.

Madera Springs is being developed on the top of a mountain, lying next to Timber Mountain, one of the highest peaks in the entire range of the Davis Mountains and from the valley to the mountain top the highway being constructed by authorities as being an unusual engineering feat.

In these mountains there has been laid out what is regarded as the highest golf course in Texas. It is being so constructed as to command most favorable comment from the lovers of this National outdoor pastime. Tennis courts and similar outdoor sports will be made available as rapidly as possible and horseback riding, mountain climbing and other pleasures inherent to such a country will always be at hand.

In a recent interview with Lee I. Starling, president of the Timber Mountain Development Enterprise, who are building the town of Madera Springs, this statement was made:

Nature has made this section of West Texas transcend all ordinary scenes. It has given it the fascination and charm of the Rocky Mountains. It is naturally a playground in Texas, for the people of Texas, and to their happiness our efforts are dedicated.

ELECTION NOTICE

This the 12th day of April, A. D. 1926, came on to be considered by the County Judge of Presidio County, Texas, the petition of J. W. Wilson and forty nine other freeholders of the hereinafter described subdivision of said county for an order of an election in such subdivision for the purpose of enabling the freeholders thereof to determine whether horses, mules, jacks, jennets and cattle shall be permitted to run at large therein, and it appearing to the undersigned judge of such court that such petition was filed with the Commissioner's Court of said county on the 15th day of March, A. D. 1926, and that such Court thereafter on the 12th day of April, A. D. 1926, heard and granted the same and ordered that such election be held on the 12th day of June, A. D. 1926, and that the Judge of such county issue an order therefor and cause notice thereof to be given as required by law.

Now, therefore, by virtue of the authority vested in me under such order and the law, I K. C. Miller, County Judge of Presidio County, Texas, do hereby order that on the 12th day of June, A. D. 1926, at the public school building in the Town of Presidio, in such subdivision, an election shall be held for the purpose of enabling the freeholders of such subdivision to determine whether horses, mules, jacks, jennets and cattle shall be permitted to run at large in such subdivision, to wit: Being the same subdivision of Presidio County, Texas, covered by, and being election precinct No. 4 of Presidio County, Texas, as described by metes and bounds in the Minutes of the Commissioner's Court of Presidio County, Texas, Volume 6, Page 482-8, reference being here made to said book and page for a better description hereof.

That the polls shall be opened for such election at the public school building in the Town of Presidio, in such subdivision; E. W. King, J. E. Bowman and Jerry Gray, being proper persons for such purpose and freeholders and qualified voters of such county, are hereby appointed as managers of said election, and they shall appoint their own clerks.

No person shall vote at such election unless he is a freeholder, and is also a qualified voter under the constitution and laws of the State of Texas. All votes at such election shall be by ballot, and voters desiring the animals designated herein from running at large shall place upon their ballots the words, "For the Stock Law," and those in favor of allowing such animals to run at large, "Against the Stock Law."

On or before the tenth day after such election, the persons holding the same shall make due return of all the votes cast at their respective voting places for and against said proposition to the county judge of said county, who will tabulate and count said returns and ascertain and proclaim the result of said election in the manner prescribed by law.

Public notice of this order shall be given for at least thirty days before the date of such election by publication thereof in some newspaper published in said county, if there be one; and if no newspaper be published in said county, then at three public places in said subdivision.

Witness the hand of the County Judge of Presidio County, Texas, this the 13th day of April, A. D. 1926. K. C. Miller, County Judge, Presidio County, Texas.

TO THE PUBLIC:

We are now beginning our work of re-constructing the Marfa Telephone plant which construction will include among other improvements the installing of new cable, new switchboard and racks.

While this work is going on we ask the kind consideration of our subscribers as it will be necessary for your phone to be temporarily disconnected at times as the work progresses. If you find yourself without service please be patient with us as it will only be temporary and when the work is completed you will have very much improved service all over the system.

Remember we will not inconvenience you any longer than is necessary to make the repairs.

We thank you kindly in advance for your consideration.
