

PASSENGER TRAINS MEET HEAD-ON

Northbound Struck By Main Line Train

THREE MEN KILLED

Two Well Known at Plainview Lose Lives—Engines and Several Cars Badly Damaged

PASSENGERS GET HARD JOLT

Last Sunday morning a frightful wreck occurred at the hour of 10:30 on the Santa Fe between Canyon and Amarillo at the siding known as Haney, which cost three men their lives, the passengers on two trains a hard shaking-up and the company considerable money, and some yet to come.

The trains which collided were No. 28 on the Plainview branch and No. 201 on the main Pecos Valley line.

THE DEAD:
J. J. SMITH, railway mail clerk on No. 201, killed instantly.

ED MAHAN, engineer on No. 201, lived two hours and forty minutes.

BARNEY NELSON, conductor on No. 28, died Tuesday at 4 p. m.

SERIOUSLY INJURED
COLBERT HOLSTEIN, fireman on No. 201, expected to recover.

THE DAMAGE:
The engine on No. 28 was totally destroyed so that there is little hope that it will ever be rebuilt. The tender went into the end of the baggage car and the mail and baggage car telescoped.

The engine was badly wrecked on No. 201 and the mail car was totally demolished. Much mail was destroyed. The baggage car was turned over on its side.

The track for a considerable distance was torn up.

In addition something may be added for the jolt received by the passengers, some of whom may claim damages.

On train No. 28 was the following crew:

Engineer, Arthur Anderson
Conductor, Barney Nelson
Fireman, J. H. Hewitt
Brakeman, J. L. Morrow
The crew on train No. 201 was:
Engineer, Ed Mahan
Conductor, Bill Alberts
Fireman, Colbert Holstein
Brakeman, Jesse Gossett

What was the exact cause of the wreck is unknown. That a fog played a prominent part is certain. Train No. 28, which runs on the Plainview branch was on time and was just pulling out of Haney when they were hit by the west-bound train. They had the right-of-way and expected to find No. 201 on this siding or at the next, which is Zita. It is supposed that the engineer on No. 201 either forgot them or that he hoped to make the siding at Haney in plenty of time.

According to the orders No. 201 should have got in on a siding in time for No. 28.

The bodies of Smith and Mahan were frightfully mangled. Nelson was scarred up considerably with a severe gash on the back of the head.

Fireman Hewitt saw the other train coming and immediately jumped from the engine. Engineer Anderson followed after setting the brakes down tight. Brakeman Morrow also jumped before the trains collided.

In speaking of the wreck Fireman Hewitt said: "This is my second head-on collision in seven months. I was in one nine miles west of Roswell on the 27th of May. When I jumped from that train I hit the ground running. I might be running yet if it had not been that the right-of-way was fenced."

B. O. Sanford, the clerk on this line, was off for the day and thereby missed probable injury.

Mr. Nelson, the conductor on this line, was well known having been in the employ of the Santa Fe for twenty-seven years. He leaves a wife, two sons, who are in the employ of the company at Amarillo doing office work, and two grown daughters who are single. He has been on this branch for about eighteen months and was well known and liked here.

Mr. Mahan, the engineer who was killed, had no relatives in this country. His family yet lives in Ohio.

Mr. Smith, the mail clerk who was killed, was once assigned to this branch and had many friends here. He left a wife and child, who are on a claim in New Mexico.

Bud Robinson Here

Bud Robinson, the noted holiness evangelist, was here Wednesday night and preached to a large audience at the Central Plains college chapel.

As the meeting was not advertised at all, there were many people who would like to have heard him who knew nothing of the date. Rev. Robinson was on his way to New Mexico to hold a meeting, and his arrival here was somewhat of a surprise to the people. He was accompanied by Rev. Ed Roberts as far as Amarillo, where he preached at 11 a. m. Thursday.

Noted Orchard Sold

What is known as the J. J. Lively orchard near Hale Center, this county, has just passed into the hands of a new owner at what is considered by many who know the place as a bargain. The price paid was $40 per acre.

The farm contains 480 acres as fine farming land as any country can boast of, besides the orchard, which contains 37 acres of bearing fruit trees, consisting of apples, peaches, pears, grapes and small fruits.

The man who is so fortunate as to become the owner of this splendid property is from Missouri and was shown by J. Walter Day & company. His name is J. S. Pryor of Bethany, Mo.

It is predicted that Mr. Pryor will not keep this piece of property long if he is willing to take $50 per acre for it, as some prize apples and other fruits have been taken from the orchard on this place.

As a money producer this farm cannot be a disappointment to the owner. The fruit alone is a good revenue producer.

Considering that this land is thirteen miles from a railroad this may seem a pretty good price, but to those acquainted with the place it is considered a bargain.

Mr. Pryor's attention was directed to this piece of property by S. P. Davison of Bethany, Mo., who is an agent working with Day & company. It is to be hoped that Mr. Davison will send Hale county some more men like Mr. Pryor if his community can spare them.

Railroad Rumblings

Plainview Takes Stock To Secure Interoceanic Line

As the Herald has been delayed this week by causes beyond the control of the management, it is enabled to give its readers the latest railroad news. At a meeting held Friday night about the time the Herald should have reached its readers, the most of the money was raised to extend the railroad to Floydada. If the Floydada people do their part the road will be built at once. It is believed that this will insure Plainview the inter-oceanic cutoff.

Civic League Is Organized

The Civic League movement has come alive again. Some time since it was announced that the ladies of the town had organized a league, but this was a mistake. The ladies had only appointed committees for the purpose of soliciting members for the league.

On Wednesday afternoon of this week the ladies, according to the plan met and organized the league.

The following officers were elected: Mrs. W. B. Joiner, president; Mrs. E. B. Hughes, vice-president; Mrs. J. W. Willis, secretary; Mrs. R. C. Joiner, treasurer. Committee to draft constitution and by-laws, Mesdames L. A. Knight, H. C. Randolph, Chas McCormack.

The attendance at the first meeting, while not large, was made up of representative women of the town, and shows that it will have the support of the element best able to carry on the work of a civic league.

As is known to most of the readers of the Herald, the work of the civic league is to promote the creative and the aesthetic, the educational and the uplifting in public improvement. There are many things needed for the promotion of morals, health and happiness, ness, such as trees, parks, sidewalks, schools, etc., which the ladies can by concerted action bring to pass, and the Herald hesitates to enumerate too many of these for fear it might forestall the ladies in some cherished undertaking or discourage them by the bulk of the work to be done.

That there is need of a civic league and that every lady who has means or influence and leisure at her command and is dominated by public spirit should become a member thereof, there is no question. All the ladies of the town are urged to come out to the next meeting of the league, the first Wednesday in January, become charter members, and assist in the good work which the league is sure to do, but can do better with their assistance.

Temperance Lecture

Mrs Maude L. Greene, of Marshall, Texas, national crayon artist and lecturer of the W C T U, was in the city this week and delivered her illustrated lecture, illustrated by her own hands with crayon on paper, at the Baptist church Wednesday night and at Central Plains College Thursday night.

Mrs Green came highly recommended, both by people and press, and that she made good, no one will deny.

Her logic was sound, her pathos touching, and all through the lecture ran a strain of humor that kept the audience in good spirits.

That the W C T U has done much in the temperance cause and is due much of the credit for the wave of prohibition that seems to be sweeping everything before it, and is as broad as the nation itself, there can hardly be any question whatever. When the W C T U wanted the army canteen abolished so far as the sale of intoxicants was concerned, they simply circulated petitions, getting the signatures of their male friends, and put them before congress. The work was done.

Mrs Green has the best wishes of the best people of Plainview who appreciated her work here.

C F Ramsey of Lockney returned home Tuesday from Fort Worth.

W H Laswell was back in town last week after an extended trip to Plainview and other towns in that part of Texas. — Texico Trumpet.

J A Bangle of Belton has just moved to Plainview and bought the brick veneered residence in the west part of town, which he will make his home. Mr Bangle brings a wife and two children whom the people of that section of town will welcome. Mr Bangle was for four years tax assessor of Bell county.

J H Griffith returned home Tuesday from Port Worth, where he went to market hogs. He took two cars with him, and, as is usual with plains hogs, he got a price near the top, lacking only five cents per hundred of topping the market for that day.

Thomas Jackle, Chris Wiseman, W W Myers, John H. Sendebach and Herman Wiseman all of Jasper, Indiana, and Jacob Schmidt of Hereford arrived Tuesday to look over the country. Some of them have been here before and think the plains is O K.

C Bradley, W F Anderson and R M Sloan are here from Oklahoma this week prospecting. They seem to like the country.

J B Taylor and mother of Roger Mills county are here this week looking at the country.

Coke County School Land Sold to Hillsboro Parties to Cut Into Small Tracts.

One of the best deals in the dirt line that has been closed in the Plainview country for many a day has just been consummated by J. D. Hanby of this place.

The tract which changed hands on this occasion lies in Cochran county, and is known as the Coke county school land. Like most county school lands, it is a choice expanse of terra firma.

The buyers of this piece of land are Hillsboro parties, and they bought it for the purpose of settling it with people—that one and only essential which is to any extent lacking in the development of the great plains country.

The land was the property of R. I. Tubbs and W. H. Laswell of Lubbock and was used for years solely for grazing purposes. The price paid is reported to be approximately $150,000.

The land has been cut up into 177-acre tracts and will be sold to settlers on reasonable terms to facilitate the settlement of the country.

It has been so arranged that that portion of the price of the land which is yet due the county of Coke, and which extends over a period of forty years, is divided equally between the several tracts so that each stands separately as security to the county for its pro rata share of the indebtedness and does not in any way encumber the other tracts of land.

It is rumored that the settling of this tract will begin at once. Of course most of the settlers will get off the train at Plainview and this will be their shipping point.

John M Webb, the contractor who came here from Abilene for his health about two months ago, says he is 100 per cent better. Mr Webb is just finishing a nice residence for Oscar Reeves on Restriction street and invites the public to inspect the work when finished. The house is modern in design, convenient in its apartments and one of the neatest homes in Plainview. It was both designed and built by Mr Webb.

Dissolution Notice

The firm of Webb, Malone & Co has been dissolved by mutual agreement of all parties concerned and Mr. Malone has entered the business of selling land and writing insurance with E. I. Hoyle. The notice which appeared in the Herald last week was written by the Herald man upon the request of one of the parties and was not intended to reflect on any member of the old firm or anyone else.

Rainfall in the Texas Panhandle for Twenty-eight Years

Mr. T. J. Considine, official in charge of the Amarillo weather bureau office, has contributed to the Daily Panhandle, for the benefit of the people of the plains, a bulletin prepared under the direction of the chief of the United States weather bureau at Washington. This bulletin shows the precipitation in the Panhandle of Texas for a period of nearly twenty-nine years. It is a most valuable paper and our reader should clip it and file for reference.

The bulletin is recent, being dated Washington, November 10, and is as follows:

To meet the many calls for information regarding precipitation in the northwestern, or Panhandle portion of Texas, such reports as have been made in that vicinity have been assembled in the following table of monthly and annual amounts, covering a period of nearly twenty-nine years, from 1880 to 1908, inclusive.

The records from 1880 to 1890, inclusive, were made by observers of the U. S. Signal service at Fort Elliott; from November, 1890, to May 1891, inclusive, observations were made at Panhandle, a station less than 25 miles northeast of Amarillo, and from 1892 to 1908, inclusive.

The breaks in the record for October, 1890, and from June to December, 1891, inclusive, were carefully estimated from reports made at surrounding stations and can be assumed to represent approximately correct values.

The two stations, Amarillo and

Fort Elliott, are about 50 miles apart, but the topography of the intervening territory, principally rolling prairie, offers no obstruction to the free passage of the rain-bearing winds, and the precipitation at the two points should be very similar and fairly represent the precipitation over entire area of the Panhandle region of Texas.

Additional data are added showing to the average number of days with precipitation each month; the monthly and annual means and extremes of temperature for the entire period of observations; the average relative humidity from about ten years of observations, at 8 a. m. and 8 p. m., respectively; the average velocity of the wind, and the number of days with winds of 40 miles, or over per hour, for a period of ten years.

Concert Is Successful

Baptist Ladies Get Snug Sum for Organ

The Baptist ladies kept their word to the letter in the giving of their grand concert on the night of December 4, the receipts of which are to be applied to the new pipe-organ for their church.

The program was rendered as published, which can be said to the credit of the performers and the ladies. So pleased was the public with the renditions that encore after encore was sounded and the performers were compelled to return again and again to satisfy the clamoring audience. The program was as follows:

Piano—(a) Moment Musicale, op. 94—Schubert (b) Minuetto, op. 78—Schubert.—Miss Ray.

Violin—(a) Legende op. 17—Wieniawski (b) Maiden's Song—Musin.—Mr. Pudor.

Vocal—Come Unto Me—Legros.—Aden P. Williams.

Reading—The night run of the Overland—Peake.—Miss Weaver.

Violin—(a) Reverie—Vieuxtemps (b) Romance—Vieuxtemps.—Mr. Pudor.

Piano—Valse Brilliant—Chopin.—Miss Ray.

Vocal—Love's "Lullaby"—Levick.—Aden P. Williams.

Reading—A Christmas Dinner on the Wing.—Miss Weaver.

Violin—7th Concerto—de Broit.—Mr. Pudor.

From a financial point of view the concert was also a success. Contrary to custom true merit was rewarded on this occasion with financial success. The ladies' gross receipts were $110 cash. As the expense of the occasion was not heavy, it is likely that near $100 will be available for application on the buying of the organ. The ladies of the church are to be congratulated upon their enterprise and business sagacity. The occasion was well planned, well advertised and well carried out.

H. H. Dix of Manhattan, Kas., was here prospecting the first of the week and was so well pleased with the prospect that he bought a piece of it to keep.

C. Prueett of Manhattan, Kansas, was here the early part of the week returning home Tuesday. He evidences his faith in this country by investing in a slice of this land.

Settler Writes Home Paper About Plains

There is at least one paper in east Texas which is not too narrow-minded to say anything good of west Texas. Terrell Transcript prints the following letter from one of Terrell's former citizens who promised to tell his friends how he liked the plains through the columns of his home paper:

(To The Transcript)—Having lived near Terrell for the past eight years and having many friends in and around Terrell who asked me to give them a short sketch of this part of the Lone Star state, I trust you will allow me space in your paper so I may reach them facts as I see them.

This section has made fine crops of all kinds except cotton. Stock is fat and feed cheap. Corn is worth 35c to 40c per bushel. Fat hogs are worth from 4c to 4½c. Land is advancing rapidly, but a man with a little cash can soon own a home, as it is sold on small cash payments with long time and low interest. If you want a level farm and good water you can be suited here. You will soon be convinced that there is something doing on the plains besides raising white-faced cattle. There have been forty eight immigrant cars for Plainview this month from east and north Texas.

In my opinion the south plains in a few years will be the garden spot of our great state. We have the water, soil and climate. Last, but not least, we have the health. We only need more good people and railroads to develop one of the greatest farming belts of the Southwest.

We are having a good rain today. With best wishes to The Transcript and its readers, I am here to stay.

Tribute to the South

When Carmack's seat in the house was contested by Josiah Patterson, during the second session of the Fifty-fifth congress, Carmack delivered a speech which was reprinted throughout the country. It was one of the few speeches to which the late Thomas B. Reed listened with any show of enjoyment. Here is the peroration:

"I speak, sir, for my native State, for my native South. It is a land that has broken the ashen crust and moistened it with her tears; a land scarred and riven by the plowshare of war and billowed with the graves of her dead; but a land of legend; a land of song; a land of hallowed and heroic memories. To that land every drop of my blood, every fiber of my being, every pulsation of my heart, is consecrated forever. I was born of her womb, I was nurtured at her breast, and when my last hour shall come I pray God that I may be pillow'd upon her bosom and rocked to sleep within her tender and encircling arms."

It was this speech which saved his seat in the house.

News In Brief

There is a move on foot to redistrict the Panhandle, as the courts are some of them overworked, owing to the increased business resulting from the settlement of the country.

Having secured the packing house, Amarillo is at work on the beet sugar factory proposition.

Thirty commercial secretaries of Texas have joined in inviting President-elect Taft to visit Texas before his inauguration as president. His possible acceptance is looked upon as a harbinger of good for the state as it will bring the section more into prominence.

It seems that a negro cannot feel sure of suicide if he attempts it with a pistol. A negro riding on a railroad train near Council Bluffs fired a ball at his own head. The bullet glanced and struck the negro porter on the back of the head, flattening it—that is, the bullet.

It is proposed to name the new state of New Mexico in case statehood is granted by congress, "Lincoln." This may be distasteful to some southerners, but most of them will swallow it if they can get statehood.

William Jennings Bryan is in Texas this week shooting ducks at Lake Surprise near Galveston. The Colonel is perhaps a happier man than he would be if he were president.

Dallas is going to have a union station which will cost one and one-half million dollars. This is to be one of the finest depots in the southwest and one of the finest buildings in Texas.

The Baptist Standard is after the city of Dallas for complicity in operating a gambling hell in the form of race meets at the Dallas fair. It seems that the state laws forbid gambling anywhere in the state, but permit it at the race tracks. The city of Dallas is the owner of the fair grounds, having floated bonds to buy them, and gets half the net proceeds.

The last spike in the Orient has been driven between Sweetwater and Kansas City. Bonds will be sold to extend to San Angelo.

"Malvern Hill," the historic colonial residence below Richmond on the James river, 270 years old, built by Governor Randolph, where once General La Fayette camped in the revolutionary war, and where the battle of Malvern Hill was fought, has been destroyed by fire.

Former Judge Sam H. Cowan of Fort Worth, representing the American Livestock Association and the American Cattle Raisers' Association, was before the Ways and Means Committee on the subject of the duty on hides. It seems that while the shoe manufacturers are protected, the majority of hides come in free. It is said that the Democrats will demand the removal of duty on shoes and if that is defeated will vote for the duty on hides.

tensely, "really it was not gold. Pierpont, what is gold?"

"Gold's an element, a metal—"

"Wrong! Billy Pierpont," said Barris, coolly.

"Gold was an element when I went to school," said I.

"It has not been an element for two weeks," said Barris; "and, except Gen. Drummond, Prof. La Grange and myself, you two youngsters are the only people except one in the world who know it—or have known it."

"Do you mean to say that gold is a composite metal?" said Pierpont, slowly.

"I do. La Grange has made it. He produced a scale of pure gold day before yesterday. That nugget was manufactured gold."

"Could Barris be joking? Was this a colossal hoax? I looked at Pierpont. He muttered something about that set thing the silver question, and turned his head to Barris, but there was that in Barris' face which forbade jesting, and Pierpont and I sat silently pondering.

"Don't ask me how it's made," said Barris, quietly; "I don't know. But I do know that somewhere in the region of the Cardinal Woods there is a gang of people who do know how gold is made, and who make it. You understand the danger this is to every civilized nation. It's got to be stopped, of course. Drummond and I have decided that I am the man to stop it. Wherever and whoever these people are—these gold-makers—they must be caught, every one of them—caught or shot."

"Or shot," repeated Pierpont, who was owner of the Cross-Cut gold mine and found his income too small?" Prof. La Grange will of course be prudent—science need not know things that would upset the world!"

"Little Willy," said Barris, laughing, "your income is safe."

"I suppose," said I, "some flaw in the nugget gave Prof. La Grange the tip."

"Exactly. He cut the flaw out before sending the nugget to be tested. He worked on the flaw and separated gold into its three elements."

"He is a great man," said Pierpont, "but he will be the greatest man in the world if he can keep his discovery to himself."

"Who?" said Barris.

"Prof. La Grange."

"Prof. La Grange was shot through the heart two hours ago," replied Barris, slowly.

CHAPTER II.

We had been at the shooting box in the Cardinal Woods five days when a telegram was brought to Barris by a mounted messenger from the nearest telegraph station, Cardinal Springs, a hamlet on the lumber railroad which joins the Quebec & Northern at Three Rivers Junction, 30 miles below.

Pierpont and I were sitting out under the trees, loading some special shells as experiment; Barris stood beside us, bronzed, erect, holding his pipe carefully so that no sparks should drift into our powder box. The beat of hoofs over the grass aroused us, and when the lank messenger drew bridle before the door Barris stepped forward and took the sealed telegram. When he had torn it open he went into the house and presently reappeared, reading something that he had written.

"This should go at once," he said, looking the messenger full in the face.

"At once, Col. Barris," replied the shabby countryman.

Pierpont glanced up and I smiled at the messenger, who was gathering his bridle and settling himself in his stirrups. Barris handed him the written reply and nodded good-by; there was a thud of hoofs on the greensward, a jingle of bit and spur across the gravel and the messenger was gone. Barris' pipe went out and he stepped to window to relight it.

"It is queer," said I, "that your messenger—a battered native—should speak like a Harvard man."

"He is a Harvard man," said Barris.

"And the plot thickens," said Pierpont; "are the Cardinal woods full of your secret service men, Barris?"

"No," replied Barris, "but the telegraph stations are. How many ounces of shot are you using, Roy?"

I told him, holding up the adjustable steel-measuring cup. He nodded. After a moment or two he sat down on a campstool beside us and picked up a crimpler.

"That telegram was from Drummond," he said; "the messenger was one of my men, as you two bright little boys divined. Pooh! If he had spoken the Cardinal county dialect you wouldn't have known."

"His make-up was good," said Pierpont.

Barris twirled the crimpler and looked at the pile of loaded shells. Then he picked up one and crimped it.

"Let 'em alone," said Pierpont; "you crimp too tight."

"Does his little gun kick when the shells are crimped too tight?" inquired Barris tenderly; "well, he shall crimp his own shells then—where's his little man?"

"His little man" was a weird English importation, stiff, very carefully scrubbed, tangled in his aspirates, named Howlett. As valet, gilly, gun-bearer and crimpler he aided Pierpont to endure the ennui of existence by doing for him everything except breathing. Lately, however, Barris' taunts had driven Pierpont to do a few things for himself. To his astonishment he found that cleaning his own gun was not a bore, so he timidly loaded a shell or two, was much pleased with himself, loaded some more, crimped them and went to breakfast with an appetite. So when Barris asked where "his little man" was, Pierpont did not reply, but dug a cupful of shot from the bag and poured it solemnly into the half-filled shell.

Old David came out with the dogs, and of course there was a pow-wow when Voyou, my Gordon, wagged his splendid tail across the loading table and sent a dozen unstopped cartridges rolling over the grass, vomiting powder and shot.

"Give the dogs a mile or two," said I; "we will shoot over the Sweet Fern Covert about four o'clock, David."

"Two guns, David," added Barris.

"Are you not going?" asked Pierpont, looking up, as David disappeared with the dogs.

"Bigger game," said Barris, shortly. He picked up a mug of ale from the tray which Howlett had just set down beside us and took a long pull. We did the same, silently. Pierpont set his mug on the turf beside him and returned to his loading.

We spoke of the murder of Prof. La Grange, of how it had been concealed by the authorities in New York at Drummond's request, of the certainty who had done it, and of the possible alertness of the gang.

"Oh, they know that Drummond will be after them sooner or later," said

"True," said Barris, gravely; "you can't take Homlett, you know."

Pierpont muttered something which ended in "d—n."

"Then," said I, "there will be but one gun on the Sweet Fern Covert this afternoon. Very well, I wish you joy of your cold supper and colder bed. Take your night-gown, Willy, and don't sleep on the damp ground."

"Let Pierpont alone," restored Barris; "you shall go next time, Roy."

"Oh, all right—you mean when there's shooting going on?"

"And I?" demanded Pierpont, grileved.

"You too, my son; stop quarreling! Will you ask Howlett to pack our kits—slightly, mind you—no bottles—they link."

"My flask doesn't," said Pierpont, and went off to get ready for a night's stalking of dangerous men.

"It is strange," said I, "that nobody ever settles in this region. How many people live in Cardinal Springs, Barris?"

"Twenty, counting the telegraph operator and not counting the lumbermen; they are always changing and shifting. I have six men among them."

"Where have you no men? In the Four Hundred?"

"I have men there also—chums of Billy's, only he doesn't know it. David tells me that there was a strong flight of woodcocks last night. You ought to pick up some this afternoon."

Then we chatted about alder-coves and swamp until Pierpont came out of the house and it was time to part.

"Au revoir," said Barris, buckling on his kit; "come along, Pierpont, and don't walk in the damp grass."

"If you are not back by to-morrow noon," said I, "I will take Howlett and David and hunt you up. You say your course is due north?"

"Due north," replied Barris, consulting his compass.

"There is a trail for two miles and a spotted lead for two more," said Pierpont.

"Which we won't use for various reasons," added Barris pleasantly; "don't worry, Roy, and keep your confounded expedition out of the way; there's no danger."

He knew, of course, what he was talking about, and I held my peace.

When the tip end of Pierpont's shooting coat had disappeared in the Long Covert I found myself standing alone with Howlett. He bore my gaze for a moment and then politely lowered his eyes.

"Howlett," said I, "take these shells and implements to the gun room, and

J. S. Evans has left for Wise county to make his home. His family has preceded him.

Watch for the Palace for Men.

Rev. G. S. Hardy, presiding elder of this district, left Saturday for Kress to preach and hold quarterly conference.

Kress Notes

J. J. Hochstetler was a Plainview visitor Wednesday.

J. F. Moore is still loading out cars of Kaffir corn and some wheat this week.

Mr. Pagett started the carpenters to work on his new residence this week.

Mr. Haydon of Plainview, son-in-law of Dr. Ford, will move to Kress in the next few days.

The townsite company has sold the townsite to F. T. Skipworth and D. M. Woods of this place. The deal was closed last Tuesday evening.

J. E. Wright of Prosper, Clay county, Texas, who has been visiting his nephew Mac Dozier, returned home. He will return about the first of the year and locate in Kress.

F. T. Bass of Westbrook, Texas and family have moved to Kress to live in the future. Mr. Bass is one of H. D. Padgett's expert carpenters and was here this summer, but like all the rest returned to the plains.

A message was received Wednesday morning, stating the sad death of Mrs. Lula Helms, the wife of James Helms, died Tuesday night. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Knight of Runningwater. The remains were interred in the Plainview cemetery.

J. S. Brooks, deputy of the Modern Woodmen of America is in Kress, and is going to organize a Woodmen camp here.

W. A. Kerr and P. H. Dozier, of Kenton, Tenn., came in with their cars last week. Mr. Kerr will take charge of the Mac Dozier place two miles east of Kress, and P. H. Dozier will move to the old Moore place which he has bought.

C. A. Hamilton and family of Wabash county, Ind., has moved here and will build about nine miles northeast of Kress. Swisher county should be proud to get such men as Mr. Hamilton as he intends to put in a big crop this season and from the machinery and mules he certainly can do it. Chas. Hornady and Dick Lester accompanied Mr. Hamilton here to help erect his home, and look at the country. They both promise to return here to live.—Buster, in Tulia Standard.

Building Bids Wanted

The Wayland Literary and Technical Institution wishes bids for the construction of a brick and concrete star-shaped building, 150x150 ft., two stories high. The right is reserved to reject any and all bids. Bids returnable by January 1. For particulars, plans and specifications, address W. B. Joiner, Secretary, Plainview, Texas.

W. H. M. S.

On Monday, December 7, the quarterly business session was conducted by Mrs. Donohoo, first vice-president.

Though the reports were not made in full it was found that the local fund had been increased about $175 by the proceeds of the bazaar and Thanksgiving dinner; the week of prayer offering for Ann Browder Home, $37; visits reported, 168; brigade fund, $3.95, dues, $6.25; number of tithers, 12; subscribers to "Our Homes," 37; to King's Messenger, 2.

Mrs. Hardy read an interesting paper on "The Missionary Education of Our Children," which is the initial article for the December program.

The December number of "Our Homes" comes proclaiming this month the most notable on our calendar, and is itself equal to the times. How appropriate that this month's study is that of "Our Children."

The following facts will be found of use in our programs.

Child labor: 2,000,000 boys and girls under 16 in this country are breadwinners; 10,000 little boys work in coal mines; 6,400 children work in glass factories, hundreds work all night; 60,000 little children work in southern cotton mills, 41.5 per cent. of these between the ages of 10 and 14 are illiterate.

The society will meet in bible study December 14 at the home of Mrs. Pack. Mrs. Jones will conduct the meeting. Lesson found in John as given in "Our Homes" for November.

We hope for a good attendance and that the interest will continue.

Opportunity for Panhandle

Chance to Show Her Resources to Europe

SHOULD NOT BE OVERLOOKED

The Rock Island has undertaken to interest the southwest in an exhibition to be held next year in London, in which the Panhandle of Texas should be represented. Why should this rich empire halt at an opportunity to now capture laurels abroad as well as at home? This a rich opportunity for the combined counties of the Panhandle. Petty jealousies should be dropped and a march on to England be made by sending over an exhibit which will enlighten the English people of wealth, and those of modest substance, as to the rich opportunity for home-building and material success. Regarding the exhibition and America the London Chronicle has the following:

Next year's Earl's court exhibition is to be devoted to the "Golden West and American industries."

"It is now more than twenty years since a representative exhibition of American manufactures and products has been held in this country. Yet Uncle Sam has many "notions" which are worth studying, and many things to show the old country which are worth seeing. After all, the business carried on between the United States and the United Kingdom comprises one-fifth of the commerce of the world, and, in spite of artificial barriers, it is increasing. And there is a prospect that, after the present presidential election, it may increase still further.

"The United States sends us the raw materials of many of our staple industries. In spite of the effort to promote cotton growing within the empire, Louisiana and the Carolinas send us the bulk of our supplies of raw cotton, and the ranches and wheatfields of the great west provide a large share of the bread and beef which appear at our tables.

"But the manufacturers of the states have been abreast of all the world in working up their raw materials. Their labor-saving machinery is to be found in all factories of Great Britain. And the forthcoming exhibition will enable the British manufacturers and importers to see examples of the very latest departures in machinery and machine tools for which America is so famous.

"In a word, the exhibition will comprise carefully selected examples of the products of the farms, ranches, forests, fisheries, manufactures, mines and quarries from the states. Besides this, the arts, archaeology, ethnology, natural history, domestic economy, recreations, and sports of the American people will be illustrated by carefully selected and qualified examples.

"And efforts will be made to draw upon the romantic history, the marvellous development, the ardent life and the fascinating natural features of the great continent, which stretches from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

"The commissioner, Mr. John W. Ryckman, of San Francisco, has recently made an extensive tour of the United States, with the object of ascertaining the feeling on the subject on the exhibition, and he has everywhere been met with assurances of individual, municipal and even government support. An invitation has been issued to the governors in the west, the mayors of all the important towns and cities and to firms and individuals throughout the country, to participate energetically and liberally in the exhibition.

"The Honorary Advisory committee includes the names of Sir Alfred Bateman, chairman of the Advisory committee on Commercial Intelligence of the Board of Trade; Sir Percy Sanderson, H. M. Consul-General in New York, 1901-1907; the Lord Mayor; Sir George Wyatt Truscott, president of the Imperial Industries club, and many representatives of great American firms.

"The amusements and attractions at Earl's court will be kept up to the old standard and in the great Empress hall a realistic spectacular performance in harmony with the exhibition is being arranged for.

"This will be the twentieth of the series of great annual exhibitions at Earl's court. It promises to be as interesting and attractive as any of its predecessors."

drop nothing. Did Voyou come to any harm in the briars this morning?"

"No 'arm, Mr. Cardenhe, sir," said Howlett.

"Then be careful not to drop anything else," said I, and walked away leaving him decorously puzzled. For he had dropped no cartridges. Poor Howlett!

CHAPTER III.

About four o'clock that afternoon I met David and the dogs at the spinney which leads into the Sweet Fern Covert. The three setters, Voyou, Gamin and Mioche were in fine feather—David had killed a woodcock and a brace of grouse over them that morning—and they were thrashing about the spinney at short range when I came up, gun under arm and pipe lighted.

"What's the prospect, David," I asked, trying to keep my feet in the tangle of wagging, whining dogs; "hello, what's amiss with Mioche?"

"A brier in his foot, sir; I drew it and stopped the wound, but I guess the gravel's got in. If you have no objection, sir, I might take him back with me."

"It's safer," I said; "take Gamin, too; I only want one dog this afternoon. What is the situation?"

"Fair, sir; the grouse lie within a quarter of a mile of the oak second-growth. The woodcocks are mostly on the alders. I saw any number of snipe on the meadows. There's something else in by the lake—I can't just tell what, but the wood-duck set up a clatter when I was in the thicket and they come dashing through the wood as if a dozen foxes was snappin' at their tail feathers."

"Probably a fox," I said; "leash those dogs—they must learn to stand it. I'll be back by dinner time."

"There is one more thing, sir," said David, lingering with his gun under his arm.

"Well," said I.

"I saw a man in the woods by the Oak Covert—at least I think I did."

"A lumberman?"

"I think not, sir—at least—do they have Chinamen among them?"

"Chinese? No. You didn't see a Chinaman in the woods here?"

"—I think I did, sir—I can't say positively. He was gone when I ran into the covert."

"Did the dogs notice it?"

"I can't say—exactly. They acted queer like. Gamin here lay down an' whined—it may have been colic—and Mioche whimpered—perhaps it was the brier."

"And Voyou?"

"Voyou, he was most remarkable, sir, and the hair on his back stood up. I did see a groundhog makin' for a tree near by."

"Then no wonder Voyou bristled. David, your Chinaman was a stump or tussock. Take the dogs now."

"I guess it was, sir; good afternoon, sir," said David, and walked away with the Gordons leaving me alone with Voyou in the spinney.

I looked at the dog and he looked at me.

"Voyou!"

The dog sat down and danced with his fore feet, his beautiful brown eyes sparkling.

"You're a fraud," I said; "which shall it be, the alders or the upland? Upland? Good!—now for the grouse—heel, my friend, and show your miraculous self-restraint."

Voyou wheeled into my tracks and followed close, nobly refusing to notice the impudent chipmunks and the thousand and one alluring and important smells which an ordinary dog would have lost no time in investigating.

The brown and yellow autumn woods were crisp with drifting heaps of leaves and twigs that crackled under foot as we turned from the spinney into the forest. Every silent little stream, hurrying toward the lake was gay with painted leaves afloat, scarlet maple or yellow oak. Spots of sunlight fell upon the pools, searching the brown depths, illuminating the gravel bottom where shoals of minnows swam to and fro, and to and fro again, busy with the purpose of their little lives. The crickets were chirping in the long brittle grass on the edge of the woods, but we left them far behind in the silence of the deeper forest.

"Now!" said I to Voyou.

The dog sprang to the front, circled once, zigzagged through the ferns around us and, all in a moment, stiffened stock still, rigid as sculptured bronze. I stepped forward, raising my gun, two paces, three paces, ten perhaps, before a great cock-grouse blundered up from the brake and burst through the thicket fringe toward the deeper growth. There was a flash and puff from my gun, a crash of echoes among the low wooded cliffs, and through the faint veil of smoke something dark dropped from mid-air amid a cloud of feathers, brown as the brown leaves under foot.

"Fetch!"

Up from the ground sprang Voyou, and in a moment he came galloping back, neck arched, tail stiff but waving, holding tenderly in his pink mouth a mass of mottled bronzed feathers. Very gravely he laid the bird at my feet and crouched close beside it, his silky ears across his paws, his muzzle on the ground.

I dropped the grouse into my pocket, held for a moment a silent caressing communion with Voyou, then swung my gun under my arm and motioned the dog on.

It must have been five o'clock when I walked into a little opening in the woods and sat down to breathe. Voyou came and sat down in front of me.

"Well?" I inquired.

Voyou gravely presented one paw which I took.

"We will never get back in time for dinner," said I, "so we might as well take it easy. It's all your fault, you know. Is there a brier in your foot? Let's see—there! it's out, my friend, and you are free to nose about and lick it. If you loll your tongue out you'll get it all over twigs and moss. Can't you lie down and try to pant less? No, there is no use in sniffing and looking at that fern patch, for we are going to smoke a little, dose a little, and go home by moonlight.

Think of Howlett's despair when we are not in time! Think of all the stories you will have to tell to Gamin and Mioche! Think what a good dog you have! There—you are tired, old chap; take 40 winks with me."

Voyou was a little tired. He stretched out on the leaves at my feet, but whether or not he really slept I could not be certain, until his hind legs twitched and I knew he was dreaming of mighty deeds.

Now I may have taken 40 winks, but the sun seemed to be no lower when I sat up and unclosed my lids. Voyou raised his head, saw in my eyes that I was not going yet, thumped his tail half a dozen times on the dried leaves, and settled back with a sigh.

I looked lazily around, and for the first time noticed what a wonderfully

"But the nearest settlement is Cardinal, probably 1½ miles from where we are standing."

"I do not know Cardinal," she said.

"Ste. Croix in Canada is 40 miles least—how did you come into the Cardinal Woods?" I asked amazed.

"Into the woods?" she repeated a little impatiently.

"Yes."

She did not answer at first but stood caressing Voyou with gentle phrase and gesture.

"Your beautiful dog I am fond of, but I am not fond of being questioned," she said quietly. "My name is Ysonde and I came to the fountain here to see your dog."

I was properly quenched. After a moment or two I did say that in another hour it would be growing dusky, but she neither replied nor looked at me.

"This," I ventured, "is a beautiful pool—you call it a fountain—a delicious fountain! I have never before seen it. It is hard to imagine that nature did all this."

"Is it?" she said.

"Don't you think so?" I asked.

"I haven't thought; I wish when you go you would leave me your dog."

"My—my dog?"

"If you don't mind," she said sweetly, and looked at me for the first time in the face.

"Is that a scar?" she demanded drawing nearer.

"That crescent-shaped mark? No." "No? Are you sure?" she insisted.

"Perfectly," I replied, astonished.

"A—birthmark?"

"Yes—may I ask why?"

As she drew away from me, I saw that the color had fled from her cheeks. For a second she clasped both hands over her eyes as if to shut out my face, then slowly dropping her hands, she sat down on a long square block of stone which half encircled the basin, and on which to my amazement I saw carving. Voyou went to her again and laid his head in her lap.

"What is your name?" she asked at length.

"Roy Cardenhe."

"Mine is Ysonde. I carved these dragon-flies on the stone, these fishes and shells and butterflies you see."

"You! They are wonderfully delicate—but those are not American dragon-flies."

"No—they are more beautiful. See, I have my hammer and chisel with me."

She drew from a queer pouch at her side a small hammer and chisel and held them toward me.

"You are very talented," I said; "where did you study?"

"I? I never studied—I knew how. I saw things and cut them out of stone. Do you like them? Some time I will show you other things that I have done. If I had a great lump of bronze I could make your dog, beautiful as he is."

Her hammer fell into the fountain and I leaned over and plunged my arm into the water to find it.

"It is there, shining on the sand," she said, leaning over the pool with me.

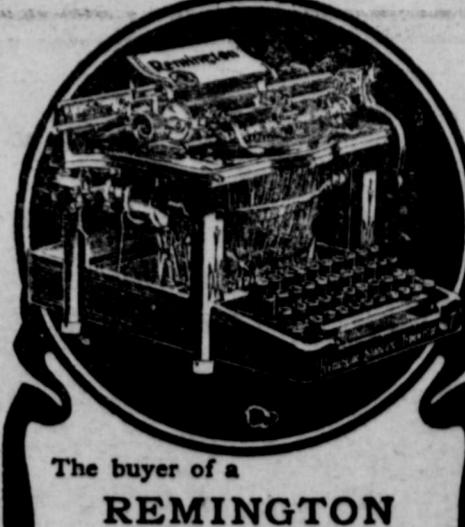

"Where," said I, looking at our reflected faces in the water. For it was only in the water that I had dared, as yet, to look her long in the face.

The pool mirrored the exquisite oval of her head, the heavy hair, the eyes. I heard the silken rustle of her girdle. I caught the flash of a white arm, and the hammer was drawn up dripping with spray.

The troubled surface of the pool grew calm and again I saw her eyes reflected.

"Listen," she said in a low voice, "do you think you will come again to my fountain?"

"I will come," I said. My voice was dull; the noise of water filled my ears.

Then a swift shadow sped across the pool; I rubbed my eyes. Where her reflected face had bent beside mine there was nothing mirrored but the rosy evening sky with one pale star glimmering. I drew myself up and turned. She was gone. I saw the faint star twinkling above me in the afterglow. I saw the tall trees motionless in the still evening air. I saw my dog slumbering at my feet.

The sweet scent in the air had faded, leaving in my nostrils the heavy odor of fern and forest mold.

A blind fear seized me, and I caught up my gun and sprang into the darkening woods. The dog followed me, crashing through the undergrowth at my side. Duller and duller grew the light, but I strode on, the sweat pouring from my face and hair, my mind a chaos. How I reached the spinney I can hardly tell. As I turned up the path I caught a glimpse of a human face peering at me from the darkening thicket—a horrible human face, yellow and drawn with high-boned cheeks and narrow eyes.
