CULBERSON BILL IS FAVORABLY REPORTED BY COMMITTEE.

Measure Provides for Appropriation of $50,000 for Establishment of Plainview Station.

On June 14 a message was received that Senator Culberson had introduced largest in the world. The cost of the of $50,000 to establish an experimental station at Plainview. A message received July 16th states that the Committee on Agriculture had decided to report favorably on the bill.

Provision is made in the bill for the implements and machinery "for the to the soil and climate of this section."

There is no doubt now that the bill will become a law. It will mean a to have an experimental station here, draped with vines and sweet peas. and, in a special way, will mean much to Plainview. The $50,000 is only a sisting of the following numbers: beginning of the amount to be expended.

GOOD RAINS FALL.

The south and east part of the country, as well as a large part of Floyd County, was visited by rain on Monday and Tuesday. The rain was light in Plainview, but enough fell to do considerable good to crops and to refresh the atmosphere. About eight miles south a 2-inch rain fell. and local showers reached as far west as Olton.

SOCIAL HAPPENINGS

Important Subject.

As soon as the oats or wheat has been taken off the field, it is desirable to double-disc the ground at once. It will pay well to disc immediately behind the binder or header. If after sooner this work is done, after harvest, the better. Every day's delay means that more moisture is lost.

In case the discing has been done any time later. Some will say, "Why not begin plowing at once, instead of wasting time discing?" This would be all right if we could hold the moisture long enough; but usually one or two weeks' hot, dry weather after harvest Mrs. J. O. Wyckoff was hostess to will dry out the ground too much for ing the moisture until we have time

> Thereis no question but that wheat plowed just before seeding time. Wheat requires a firm seed bed. On account of this, early preparation should be deeper than later work. Deep plowing just before seeding time is not desirable, as the ground will not have time to become well settled.

CHAPTER L.-The scene at the opening of the story is laid in the library of an old worn-out southern plantation, known as the Barony. The place is to be sold, and its history and that of the owners, the Guintards, is the subject of discus-tion by Jonathan Creneshaw, a business man, a stranger known as Bladen, and bob Tanoy, a farmer, when Hannibal Wayne Hasard, a mysterious child of the old southern family, makes his ap-pearance. Tancy tells how he adopted the boy.

CHAPTER II.-Nathaniel Ferris buys he Barony, but the Quintards deny any nowledge of the boy. Yancy to keep iannibal. Captain Murrell, a friend of he Quintards, appears and asks quee-tons about the Barony.

CHAPTER III.-Trouble at Scratch Mill, ancy's home, when Hannibal is kid-aped by Dave Blount, Captain Murrell's gent. Tancy overtakes Blount, gives im a thrashing and secures the boy.

CHAPTER V.

The Encounter.

Betty Malroy had ridden into the squire's yard during the progress of the trial and when Yancy and Hannibal came from the house she beckoned the Scratch Hiller to her.

"You are not going to lose your nephew, are you, Mr. Yancy?" she his horse's hoofs as he came pounding along the sandy road, and glanced back over her shoulder. With an exclamation of displeasure she reined in her horse. Murrell quickly gained a place at her side.

"I suppose Ferris is at the Barony?" he said, drawing his horse down to a walk

"I believe he is," said Betty with a curt little air.

"May I ride with you?" he gave her swift glance. She nodded indiferently and would have urged her torse into a gallop again, but he made gesture of protest. "Don't-or I shall think you are still running away from me," he said with a short laugh. "Were you at the trial?" she asked. "I am glad they didn't get Hannibal away from Yancy."

"Oh, Yancy will have his hands full with that later-so will Bladen," he added, significantly. He studied her out of those deeply sunken eyes of his in which no shadow of youth lingered, for men such as he reached their prime early, and it was a swiftly passing splendor. "Ferris tells me you are going to west Tennessed?" he said at length.

"Yes."

"I know your half-brother, Tom Ware-I know him very well."

"Bo you know Tom?" she observed, and frowned slightly. Tom was her guardian, and her memories of him were not satisfactory. A burly, unshaven man with a queer streak of meanness through his character.

"You've spent much of your time up north?" suggested Murrell. "Four years. I've been at school, you know. That's where I met Judith Ferris."

"I hope you'll like west Tennessee. It's still a bit raw compared with what you've been accustomed to in the north. You haven't been back in all those four years?" Betty shook

"Mr. Yancy will oblige this co't by her head. "Nor seen Tom-nor any setting still while I finish this case," one from out yonder?" For some reason a little tinge of color had crept Yancy has sworn to one thing, Mr. into Betty's cheeks. "Will you let me Blount to another. "Betty-if I might think-" he began, but his tongue stumbled. His love-making was usually of a savage sort, but some quality in the girl held him in check. Betty drew away from him, an angry color on her cheeks and an angry light in her eyes. "For give me, Betty!" murmured Murrell, but his heart beat against his ribs, and passion sent its surges through him. "Don't you know what I'm trying to tell you?" he whispered. Betty gathered up her reins. "Not yet--" he cried, and again he rested a heavy hand on hers.

"Let me go-let me go!" cried Betty indignantly.

where he intended to spend the night, and perhaps a day or two in looking around, when the meeting with Betty and Murrell occurred. The girl's face remained with him. It was a face he would like to see again. He was still thinking of the girl when he ate his supper that night at Cleggett's Tavern. Later, in the bar, he engaged his host in idle gossip. He had met a gentleman and a lady on the road that day! he wondered, as he toyed with his glass, if it could have been the Ferrises? Mounted? Yes, mounted. Then it was Ferris and his wife-or it might have been Captain Murrell and Miss Mairoy. Miss Malroy did not live in that part of the country; she was a friend of Mrs. Ferris', belonged in Kentucky or Tennessee, or somewhere out yonder -at any rate she was bringing her visit to an end, for Ferris had instructed him to reserve a place for her in the north-bound stage on the morrow.

Carrington suddenly remembered that he had thought of starting north in the morning himself.

The stage left at six, and as Carrington climbed to his seat the next morning Mr. Cleggett was advising the driver to look sharp when he came to the Barony road, as he was to pick up a party there. It was Carrington who looked sharp, and almost at the spot where he had seen Miss Mairoy the day before he saw her again, with Ferris and Judith and a pile of luggage bestowed by the way-ide. Betty did not observe him as the coach stopped, for she was intent on her farewells with her friends. There were hasty words of advice from Ferris, prolonged good-bys to Judith, tears-kisses-while & place was being made for her many boxes and trunks. Carrington gathered that she was going north to Washington; that her final destination was some point either on the Ohio or Mississippl, and that her name was Betty. Then the door slammed and the stage was in motion again.

All through the morning they swung forward in the heat and dust and glare, and at midday rattled into the shaded main street of a sleepy village and drew up before the tavern where dinner was waiting them.

Betty saw Carrington when she took her seat, and gave a scarcely perceptible start of surprise. Then her face was flooded with a rich color. This was the man who saw her with Captain Murrell yesterday! There was a brief moment of irresolution and then she bowed coldly. It was four days to Richmond. Four days of hot, dusty travel, four nights of uncomfortable cross-road stations, where Betty suffered sleepless nights and the unaccustomed pangs of early rising. She occasionally found herself wondering who Carrington was. She approved of the manner in which he conducted himself. She liked a man who could be unobtrusive.

The next morning he found himseit seated opposite her at breakfast. He curt litti and distant, as he took his seat. "You stop in Washington?" said asked eagerly, when Yancy stood at her side. "No, ma'am." But his sense of elation was plainly tempered. "I am very glad. I rode out to the Hill to say good-by to Hannibal and to you, but they said you were here and that the trial was today." Captain Murrell, with Crenshaw and the squire, came from the house, and Murrell's swarthy face lit up at sight of the girl. Yancy would have yielded his place, but Betty detained him. "Are you going away, ma'am?" he asked with concern. "Yes-to my home in west Tennessee," and a cloud crossed her smooth brow.

"But ain't you ever coming back, Miss Betty?" asked Hannibal rather fearfully

"Oh, I hope so, dear." She turned to Yancy. "I wonder you don't leave the Hill, Mr. Yancy. You could so easily go where Mr. Bladen would never find you. Haven't you thought of this?"

"That are a p'int," agreed Yancy slowly. "Might I ask you what parts you'd specially recommend?" lifting his grave eyes to hers.

"It would really be the sensible thing to do!" said Betty. "I am sure you would like west Tennessee-they say you are a great hunter." Yancy emiled almost guiltily."

"Mr. Yancy, if you should cross the mountains, remember I live near Memphis. Belle Plain is the name of the plantation-it's not hard to find; just don't forget-Belle Plain."

"I won't forget, and mebby you will ee us there one of these days. Sho', I've seen mighty little of the worldabout as far as a dog can trot in a couple of hours"

Betty glanced toward the squire and Mr. Crenshaw. They were standing near the bars that gave entrance to the lane. Murrell had left them and was walking briskly down the road toward Crenshaw's store, where his horse was tied. She bent down and gave Yancy her slim white hand. "Good-by, Mr. Yancy-lift Hannibat so that I can kiss him!" Yancy swung the child aloft. "I think you are such a nice little boy, Hannibal-you

"No-not yet!" He urged his horse still nearer and gathered her close. You've got to hear me. I've loved you since the first moment I rested my eyes on you-and, by God, you shall love me in return!" He felt her struggle to free herself from his grasp with a sense of savage triumph. Bruce Carrington, on his way back to Fayetteville from the Forks, came about a turn in the road. Betty saw a tall, handsome fellow in the first flush of manhood; Carrington, an angry girl struggling in a man's grasp.

At sight of the new-comer, Murrell, with an oath, released Betty. who, striking her horse with the whip, galloped down the road toward the Barony. As she fled past Carrington she bent low in her saddle.

"Don't let him follow me!" she gasped, and Carrington, striding forward, caught Murrell's horse by the bit

"Let go!" roared Murrell, and a murderous light shot from his eyes.

"I don't know but I should pull you out of that saddle and twist your neck!" said Carrington hotly. Murrell's face underwent a swift change. "You're a bold fellow to force your way into a lover's quarrel," he said quietly. Carrington's arm dropped at his side. Perhaps, after all, it was that.

CHAPTER VI.

Betty Sets Out for Tennessee.

Bruce's first memories had to do with long nights when he perched beside his father on the cabin roof of their keel-boat and watched the stars or the blurred line of the shore where it lay against the sky, or the lights on other barges and rafts drifting as they were drifting, with their wheat and corn and whisky, to that common market at the river's mouth. Bruce Carrington had seen the day of barge and raft reach its zenith, had heard the first steam packet's shrieking whistle, which sounded the death-knell of the ancient order, though the shifting of the trade was a slow matter and the glory of the old did not pass over to the new at once. but lingered still in mighty fleets of rafts and keel-boats and in the Homeric carousals of some ten thousand of the half-horse, half-alligator breed that nightly gathered in New Orleans.

After the reading of the warrant that morning, Charley Balaam had shown Carrington the road to the Forks, assuring him when they separated that with a little care and Carrington. Betty shook her head. "No, I am going on to Wheeling."

"You're fortunate in being so nearly home," he observed. "I'm going on to Memphis." Betty exclaimed: "Why, I am going to Memphis, teo!" "Are you? By canal to Cumberland, and then by stage over the National Road to Wheeling?" Betty nodded. "It makes one wish they'd finish their railroads, doesn't it? Do you suppose they'll ever get as far west as Memphis?" she said. "They say it's going to be bad for the river trade when they're built or something besides paper," answered Carrington. "And I happen to be a flatboatman, Miss Malroy."

No more was said just then, for Betty became reserved and did not at tempt to resume the conversation. A day later they rumbled into Washing ton, and as Betty descended from the coach Carrington stepped to her side "I suppose you'll stop here, Mist Malroy," he said, indicating the tav ern before which the stage had come to a stand.

"Yes," said Betty briefly. "If I can be of any service to you-" he began, with just a touch of awk wardness in his manner. "No, I thank you, Mr. Carrington,' said Betty quickly. "Good night good-by." He turned away, and Betty saw his tal form disappear in the twilight. A month and more had elapsed since Bob Yancy's trial. Just two days later man and boy disappeared from Scratch Hill. Murrell was soon on their trail and pressing forward in hot pursuit. Reaching the moun. tains, he heard of them first as ter days ahead of him and bound for west Tennessee; the ten days dwindied to a week, the week became five days, the five days three; and now as he emerged from the last range o! hills he caught sight of them.

Yancy glanced back at the blue wall of the mountains where it lay alons the horizon.

"Well, Nevvy," he said, "we've put a heap of distance between us and old Scratch Hill." For the past ten days their journey had been conducted in a leisurely fashion. As Yancy said, they were seeing the world, and it was well to take a good look at it while they had a chance.

Answering your call on me to become a candidate for Alderman of this city, to fill out the unexpired term of R. A. Long, resigned, I beg to say. I will make the race, and if elected will serve the interests of the city to the best of my ability.

AUSTIN BUILDING ACTIVITIES.

Austin, Texas, July 15 .- The sum of one milion, seven hundred thousand dollars is soon to be disbursed in this city for labor and material in building various public enterprises. Work on the Austin dam is now under way, and it will require $750,000 to complete it. The city recently voted bonds for the improvement of streets, sewers, hospital and school, amounting in the aggregate to $750,00, and the Federal Government will erect a $200,000 building in this city. The street railway is also building several miles of new lines, and public highways leading into the city will be reconstructed.

The bonds have all been sold on the Eastern market, and there will be at least two million dollars of outside capital spent in this city during the next twelve months.

A spirit of optimism prevails, and many private enterprises of an industrial nature are being planned.

CONSTRUCTION WORK STARTS.

Fort Stockton, Texas, July 13 .- The Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railway will start work at once on the extension of the line from Granada to this city, and on to Alpine. Engineers of the line have been here for the past few days organizing the different crews and arranging for supplies.

POTASH FOUND AT SPUR.

Spur, Texas, July 17 .-- A State geologist has been in this city investigating the particles of potash which were discovered in a well near here. An analysis of the mineral shows the potash to be of good quality, and if found in sufficient quantities will be worked extensively. The world's production of potash is confined almost exclusively to the mines in Germany, and the price is very high, caused by the scarcity of the mineral.

Pains All Over!

"You are welcome," says Mrs. Nora Guffey, of Broken Arrow, Okla., "to use my letter in any way you want to, if it will induce some suffering woman to try Cardui. I had pains all over, and suffered with an abscess. Three physicians failed to relieve me. Since taking Cardui, I am in better health than ever before, and that means much to me, because I suffered many years with womanly troubles, of different kinds. What other treatments I tried, helped me for a few days only."

TAKE Woman's Tonic

Don't wait, until you are taken down sick, before taking care of yourself. The small aches and pains, and other symptoms of womanly weakness and disease, always mean worse to follow, unless given quick treatment.

You would always keep Cardui handy, if you knew what quick and permanent relief it gives, where weakness and disease of the womanly system makes life seem hard to bear. Cardui has helped over a million women. Try it.
