STATE PRIMARY COMES AND GOES TILE FACTORY IN OPERATION.

FOTE GIVEN SHEPPARD AND COL-QUITT SURPRISES OF CONTEST.

Several County Offleers Get Nomina tions by Close Decisions-Huff Wins Over Graham.

The primary election went off very smoothly in Plainview, last Saturday A great deal of interest was manifested in the race for Governor, United States Senator and Congressmen-at-Large, as well as for the county offices. In the affternoon the crowd increased until there was about two thousand people on the streets. Most of the crowd stayed until after the polls were closed, hoping to get some inkling of the result.

The Willis Drug Company had a large bulletin board built against the east side of the Ware building, and R. A. Long erected one in front of his store. News began coming in about seven o'clock, from the Hale County boxes, but the returns were not complete enough nor decisive enough to satisfy, so the crowd stayed until a late hour.

On account of the great number of Sunday, and not until Monday about 10 o'clock were the results in some of the closer contests known. The race for County Judge was a close one. The first returns indicated the nomination of J. M. Bull. He caried the Plainview box, and for a while it seemed that he would be nominated. Later returns, however, showed that the race was between S. W. Meharg and W. B. Lewis. As the count progressed, first one and then the other was ahead a few votes. When the final returns were in the face of the returns indicated that Lewis had wou over Meharg by 9 votes, but a mistake of three votes was discovered, making it six a complete

Pains All Over!

"You are welcome," says Mrs. Nora Guffey, of Broken Arrow, Okla., "to use my letter in any way you want to, if it will induce some suffering woman to try Cardui. I had pains all over, and suffered with an abscess. Three physicians failed to relieve me. Since taking Cardui, I am in better health than ever before, and that means much to me, because I suffered many years with womanly troubles, of different kinds. What other treatments I tried, helped me for a few days only."

TAKE The Woman's Tonic

Don't wait, until you are taken down sick, before taking care of yourself. The small aches and pains, and other symptoms of womanly weakness and disease, always mean worse to follow, unless given quick treatment.

You would always keep Cardui handy, if you knew what quick and permanent relief it gives, where weakness and disease of the womanly system makes life seem hard to bear. Cardui has helped over a million women. Try it.

For the benefit of the girls and !adies who did not get to visit the canning demonstration, Mrs. Jackson asks us to publish the following: Peaches.-Select nice, ripe fruit, pare, and fill your jars full; if extra large fruit, cut in quarters; if medium, cut in half. For fancy eating, make a syrup by dissolving sugar in cold water, using only enough to dissolve all the sugar. Pour syrup in jars to 1-8-inch of top; put on caps lightly, turn only as tight as can be done with your thumb and little finger. Place your jars in a canner or boiler; fill with water to within 1 inch of bottom of cap, bring to boil and let boil 15 minutes if quarts, and 20 minutes if half gallons. For ordinary peaches use water instead of syrup to fill cans. Okra.-Select only nice, tender okra; boil until tender; fill jars with okra; pour in water to 1-8-inch of top; put in a teaspoonful of salt to quart jar. Put on caps as above; put in boiler and boil 35 minutes if quarts, 45 minutes if half gallons.

Cornfield Peas .- Fill cans same as okra, and boll 45 minutes, if in quart jars.

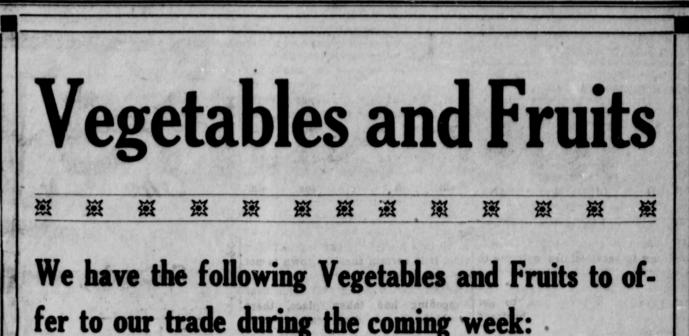

Beans .-- Use only tender, stringless varieties; cook 15 or 20 minutes; fill cans same as for okra; boil 1 hour if quarts, 11-2 hour if half gallons. Seal tight, set back and next day put in boiler, loose caps, bring to a boil and boil one hour. Screw caps tight and set away in a cool, dark place.

Corn.-Corn is very hard to keep. and should never be canned in halfgallon jars. We can them that way and keep them, but it requires so much boiling that I do not recommend their use at all. The smaller the can the easier it is to sterilize. Use only tender corn; hard corn will not keep. Fill cans full of corn, put teaspoonful of salt to quart jar, fill with water, put in boiler and boil 6 hours, or boil 3 hours first day, 1 hour second day, and 1 hour third day. Seal tight; set in cool, dark place, where it will not have to be moved often. If you like corn and tomatoes, fill half full of corn, then fill up with tomatoes or tomato juice and boil one hour and ten minutes. The acid in the tomatoes helps to preserve the corn.

Beets.-Boil until they will peel easily; cut up and pack in cans and boil 1 hour in quart jars, 11-2 half hour in half-gallons.

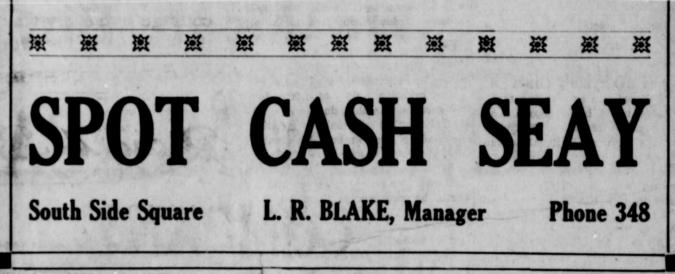

Sweet Potatoes .- Cook until tender; cut up in small squares, pack closely. pour light syrup made of sugar and cold water over them, and boil 1 hour and 15 minutes, in quart jars. L want to impress upon all the girls,

If all the accidents that came near cream supper, or any plan to get happening had taken place, there money, is looked upon as a business would be a sentiment against speedtolerated. How many toddling babies have came near meeting their death in Plainview as a result of reckless driving? The editor has seen several in the past six months, and one little boy was actually knocked down. Why is it always necesary for two or three persons to be sacrificed before a dangerous practice can be stopped?

WHY JAWBREAKERS.

The latest discovery of medical science to be announced is an etymological hummer with large and sightly horns.

Dr. Davis, a scientist who evidently has the gift of tongues and the art of the mystification of us common folks down fine, announces in the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal that as a substitute for skin grafting in the healing of wounds "organic dyeinteresting descriptive matter. It also stuffs" may be used, and proceeds to name the following, so long and so ing that the editor was not alone in successfully, if innocently, used by his efforts to get out the big boosting our forebears in changing the color of stockings and other articles of attire: "Sodium salt of diazo-azobenzenedisulphonic acid Beta naphthol; benzene-azobenzene-azo Beta naphthol; tolueneazotoluene-azo Beta naphthol; Granger and then 'Watch Granger the sodium salt of xyleneazo Beta naphthol monosulphic acid."

Beta napthol is the noun; the preceding hyphenated word the adjective.

The curative value of these jawbreakers is probably due to the fact pointed a committee to visit Texas and that if they do not make the patient investigate our agricultural advan- too mad to stay in bed, by creating tages indicate that at last our labor the impression upon his mind that he problems are nearing satisfactory and is being thoroughly cussed out in an unknown tongue, or scare him to troubles in this life that Texas soil death, he may accept them on faith and climate can not relieve when and get well.-Roswell Morning News.

"BUSY LITTLE BEES."

The Junior Philathea of Calvary Baptist Church served delicious cream and cake to an appreciative crowd on Monday afternoon, on the church lawn, under the direction of their teacher, Mrs. J. C. Finley.

These little girls are making substantial progress along all lines. Soon you will hear from them again. They are indeed "Busy Little Bees." The liberal patronage given them by the community and the ladies of the Federation is very, very much appreciated by them and their teacher.

The proceeds are to be used in helping to pay for the plano.

"I consecrate myself to his destruction! Judge Slocum Price cannot be humiliated with impunity!"

"I should think you would save your wind, Price, until you'd waddled out of danger!" Mahaffy spoke gruffly.

"How are you going to get me out of this, Solomon-for I suppose you are here to break jail for me," said the judge.

"Well, Price, I guess all we can do is to go back to town and see if I can get into my cabin-l've got an old saw there. If I can find it, I can come again tomorrow night and cut away one of the logs, or the cleats of the door."

"In heaven's name, do that tonight, Solomon!" implored the judge. "Why procrastinate?"

"Price, there's a pack of dogs in this neighborhood, and we must have a full night to move in, or they'll pull us down before we've gone ten miles!"

"You're right, Solomon; I'd forgotten the dogs."

Mahaffy closed and fastened the shutters, then he and Hannibal stole woods. The judge went to bed. He was aroused by the arrival of his breakfast, which the sheriff brought about eight o'clock.

"Well, if I was in your boots I couldn't sleep like you!" remarked that official admiringly, "But I reckon, sir, this ain't the first time the penitentiary has stared you in the face." It was nearing the noon hour when the judge's solitude was again invaded. He first heard the distant murmur of voices on the road and passed an uneasy and restless ten minutes, with his eye to a crack in the door. He was soothed and reassured, however, when at last he caught sight of the sheriff.

"Well, judge, I got company for you," cried the sheriff cheerfully, as he threw open the door. "A hossthief!"

He pushed into the building a man, hatless and coatless, with a pair of pale villainous eyes and a tobaccostained chin. The judge viewed the newcomer with disfavor. As for the borse-thief, he gave his companion in misery a coldly critical stare, seated himself on the stool, and with quite a flerce air devoted all his energy to mastication. He neither altered his position nor changed his expression until he and the judge were alone, then, catching the judge's eye, he made what seemed a casual movement with his hand, the three fingers raised: but to the judge this clearly was without significance, and the borse-thief manifested no further interest where he was concerned. He did not even condescend to answer

Belle Plain.

"Now, Tom," said Betty, with a little air of excitement as she rose from the breakfast table that first morning at Belle Plain, "I want you to show me everything!"

"I reckon you'll notice some changes," remarked Tom.

He went from the room and down the hall a step or two in advance of her. On the wide porch Betty paused, breathing deep. The house stood on an eminence; directly before it at the bottom of the slight descent was a small bayou, beyond this the forest stretched away in one unbroken mass to the Mississippi.

"What is it you want to see, anyhow, Betty?" Tom demanded.

"Everything-the place, Tom-Belle Plain! Oh, isn't it beautiful! I had no idea how lovely it was!" cried Betty, as with her eyes still fixed on the distant panorama of wood and water she went down the steps, him at her heels-he bet she'd get sick of it all soon enough, that was one comfort!

"Why, Tom! Why does the lawn look like this?"

"Like what?" inquired Tom. "Why, this-all weeds and briers, and the paths overgrown?"

Mr. Ware rubbed his chin reflectively with the back of his hand.

That sort of thing looked all right, Bet," he said, "but it kept five or six of the best hands out of the fields right at the busiest time of the year." "Haven't I slaves enough?" she asked.

The dull color crept into Ware's cheeks. He hated her for that "!!" So she was going to come that on him, was she?

"Don't you want to see the crops, Bet?"

The girl shook her head and moved swiftly down the path that led from terrace to terrace to the margin of the bayou. At the first terrace she paused.

"It's positively squalid!" cried Bet ty, with a little stamp of her foot.

Ware glanced about with dull eyes. "I'll tell you, Betty, I'm busy this morning; you poke about and see what you want done and we'll do it," he said, and made a hasty retreat to his office.

Betty returned to the porch and seating herself on the top step, with her elbows on her knees and her chin sunk in the palms of her hands, gazed about her miserably enough. She was still there when half an hour later Charley Norton galloped up the drive from the highroad. Catching sight of her on the porch, he sprang from the saddle, and, throwing his reins to a black boy, hurried to her side.

Tom seized the opportunity to swear back. "Sent you off the place, did she:

well, you'll have to eat crow. I'll do all I can. I don't know what girls were ever made for anyhow, damned if I do!" he added.

Hicks consented to eat crow only after Mr. Ware had cursed and catoled him into a better and more forgiving frame of mind.

Later, after Hicks had made his apology, the two men smoked a friendly pipe and discussed the situation. Tom pointed out that opposition was useless, a losing game; you

Then one day when she had decided forever to banish all memory of him from her mind, he presented him self at Belle Plain.

She was in her room just putting the finishing touches to an especially satisfying toilet when her maid tapped on the door and told her there was a gentleman in the parlor who wished to see her.

"Is it Mr. Norton?" asked Betty. "No, Miss-he didn't give no name, Miss."

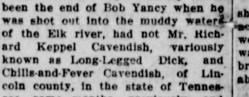

When Betty entered the parlor a moment later she saw her caller standing with his back turned toward her as he gazed from one of the windows, but she instantly recognized those broad shoulders, and the fine poise of the shapely head that surounted them. "Oh, Mr. Carrington-" and Betty stopped short, while her face grew rather pale and then crimson Then she advanced boldly and held out a frigid hand. "I didn't knowso you are alive-you disappeared so suddenly that night-" "Yes, I'm alive," he said, and then with a smile, "but I fear before you get through with me we'll both wish I were not. Betty. "Do you still hate me, Betty-Miss Malroy-is there anything I can say or do that will make you forgive me?" He looked at her penitently. But Betty hardened her heart against him and prepared to keep him in place. "Will you sit down?" she indicated a chair. He seated himself and Betty put a safe distance between them. "Are you staying in the neighborhood, Mr. Carrington?" she asked, rather unkindly. "No, I'm not staying in the neighborhood. When I left you, I made up my mind I'd wait at New Madrid until I could come on down here and say I was sorry." "And it's taken you all this time?" Carrington regarded her seriously. "I reckon I must have come for more time, Betty-Miss Malroy." spite of herself, Betty glowed under the caressing humor of his tone. "Really-you must have chosen poorly then when you selected New Madrid. It couldn't have been a good place for your purpose." "I think if I could have made up my mind to stay there long enoug it would have answered," said Car rington. "But when a down-river boat tled up there yesterday it was more than I could stand. You see there's danger in a town like New Madrid of getting too sorry. I thought we'd better discuss this point-" "Mayn't I show you Belle Plain?" asked Betty quickly.

"Please-you won't let him take me away, judge-I want to stop with you!" cried Hannibal. He slipped from his chair, and passing about the table, seized the judge by the hand. The judge was visibly affected.

"Can such things be," he murmured at last. Then he remembered what Mahaffy had told him of the man on the raft. "Hannibal," he said, "Solomon Ma-haffy, who was here last night, told me he saw down at the river landing, a man who had been fished up out of the Elk-a man who had been roughly handled."

"Were it my Uncle Bob?" cried Hannibal, lifting a swollen face to his.

"Gentlemen-" began the judge blandly.

"Get the well-rope!"

The judge was rather at loss properly to interpret these varied remarks. He was not long left in doubt. The sheriff steped to his side and dropped a heavy hand on his shoulder.

"Mr. Slocum Price, or whatever your name is, your little game is up!"

"I can explain-" "Speak to them, Solomon-you know how I came by the money!" cried the judge, clutching his friend by the arm. Mahaffy opened his thin lips, but the crowd drowned his voice in a roar.

A tall fellow shook a long finger under Mahaffy's nose. "You scoot!"

Mr. Mahaffy seemed to hesitate. Some one gave him a shove and he staggered forward a step. Before he could recover himself the shove was repeated.

"Lope on out of here!" yelled the tall fellow. Mahaffy was hurried toward the road. Twenty men were in chase behind him. Then the woods closed about him. His long legs, working tirelessly, carried him over fallen logs and through tangled thickets, the voices behind him growing more and more distant as he ran.

"I reckon we'd better lift him on to one of the beds-get his wet clothes off and wrap him up warm," said Polly.

"Oh, put him in our bed!" cried all the little Cavendishes.

And Yancy was borne into the smaller of the two shantles, where presently his bandaged head rested on the long pillow. Then his wet clothes were hung up to dry along with the family wash, which fluttered on a rope stretched between the two shantles.

The sheriff had brought the judge's supper. He reported that the crowd was dispersing, and that on the whole public sentiment was not particularly hostlie; indeed, he went so far as to say there existed a strong undercurrent of satisfaction that the Jall should have so speedily justified itself.

Presently the sheriff went his way into the dusk of the evening, and night came swiftly to fellowship the judge's fears. A single moonbeam found its way into the place, making a thin rift in the darkness. The judge sat down on the three-legged stool, which, with a shake-down bed, furnished the jail.

Where was Solomon Mahaffy, and where Hannibal? He felt that Mahaffy could fend for himself, but he experienced a moment of genuine concern when he thought of the child. Then-there was a scarcely audible rustle on the margin of the woods, a dry branch snapped loudly. Next a stealthy step sounded in the clearing. The judge had an agonized vision of regulators and lynchers. The cautious steps continued to approach. A whisper stole into the Ital

"Are you awake, Price?" It was Mahaffy who spoke.

"God bless you, Solomon Mahaffy!" cried the judge unsteadily.

"I've got the boy-he's with me," said Mahaffy. "God bless you both!" repeated the judge brokenly. "Take care of him, Solomon. I feel better now, knowing he's in good hands."

'Please, judge-" it was Hannibal.

pened to Mahaffy!

Standing before the window, the udge watched the last vestige of light fade from the sky and the stars appear. Would Mahaffy come? The suspense was intolerable. Suddenly out of the silence sounded a longdrawn whistle. Three times it was repeated. The horse-thief leaped to his feet.

"Neighbor, that means me!" he cried.

The moon was rising now, and by its light the judge saw a number of horsemen appear on the edge of the woods. They entered the clearing, picking their way among the stumps without haste or confusion. When quite close, five of the band dismounted; the rest continued on about | while Hicks stood looking on with his the jail or cantered off toward the road.

"Look out inside, there!" cried a voice, and a log was dashed against the door; once-twice-it rose and fell on the clapboards, and under those mighty thuds grew up a wide gap through which the moonlight streamed splendidly. The horse-thief stepped between the dangling cleats and vanished.

The judge tossed away the stool. He understood now. With a confident, not to say jaunty step, the judge emerged from the jail.

"Your servant, gentlemen!" he said, lifting his hat. "Git!" said one of the men briefly, and the judge moved nimbly away toward the woods.

"Inspecting your domain, Betty he asked, as he took his place near her on the step.

"Why didn't you tell me, Charleyor at least prepare me for this?" she asked, almost tearfully.

"How was I to know, Betty? haven't been here since you went away, dear-what was there to bring me? Old Tom would make a cow pasture out of the Garden of Eden, wouldn't he-a beautiful, practical, sordid soul he is!"

Norton spent the day at Belle Plain; and though he was there on his good behavior as the result of an agreement they had reached on board The Nalad, he proposed twice.

Tom was mistaken in his supposi tion that Betty would soon tire of Belle Plain. She demanded men, and teams, and began on the lawns. This interested and fascinated her. She was out at sun-up to direct her laborers. She had the advantage of Charley Norton's presence and advice for the greater part of each day in the week, and Sundays he came to look over what had been accomplished, and, as Tom firmly believed, to put that little fool up to fresh nonsense. He could have booted him!

As the grounds took shape before her delighted eyes, Betty found leisure to institute a thorough reforma tion indoors. A number of house servants were rescued from the quarters and she began to instruct them in their new duties. Betty's sphere of influence extend ed itself. She soon began to have her doubts concerning the treatment accorded the slaves, and was not long in discovering that Hicks, the overseer, ran things with a heavy hand. Matters reached a crisis one day when, happening to ride through the quarters, she found him disciplining a refractory black. She turned sick at the sight. Here was a slave actually being whipped by another slave hands in his pockets, and with a brutal, satisfied air.

"Stop!" commanded Betty, her eyes blazing. She strove to keep her voice steady. "You shall not remain at Belle Plain another hour."

Hicks said nothing. He knew it would take more than her saying so to get him off the place. Betty turned her horse and galloped back to the house. She felt that she was in no condition to see Tom just at that moment, and dismounting at the door, ran upstairs to her room. Meantime the overseer sought out

Ware in his office. His manner of stating his grievance was singular. He began by swearing at his employer. He had been insulted before all the quarter-his rage fairly choked

But Carrington shook his head.

"I don't care anything about that," he said. "I didn't come here to see Belle Plain."

"Then you expect to remain in the neighborhood?"

"I've given up the river, and I'm going to get hold of some land."

"Land?" said Betty, with a rising inflection.

"Yes, land."

"I thought you were a river-man?" "I'm a river-man no longer. I am going to be a planter now. But I'll tell you why, and all about it some other day." Then he held out his hand. "Good-by," he added.

"Are you going?-good-by, Mr. Carrington," and Betty's fingers tingled with his masterful clasp long after he had gone.

A LIVER MEDICINE THAT BEATS CALOMEL. Dodson's Liver-Tone Does the Same Work as Calomel, Without Making You Sick.—It is Vegetable

Tastes Good, and Never Fails.

Everybody who has ever taken calomel knows what a strong drug it is. Calomel spurs the tired liver as if it were a tired horse, and, while the liver works harder for a little while, it is soon weaker than ever. Dodson's Liver-Tone is a vertable tonic that gently induces the most sluggish liver to work. Taking it is followed by no bad after-effects. No. restriction of habit or diet necessary. For either children or grown people. R. A. Long Drug Co. sells a large bottle of Dodson's Liver-Tone for fifty cents, and guarantees it to be a perfect substitute for calomel, and will give you your money back if it disappoints you.
