The Attorney was asked to draft a petition prohibiting the hitching of horses to the Court House fence during the coming fair.

TOURISTS FROM STANTON TO HOME IN OKLAHOMA.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Hacker Praise Big Wells in Plainview Country.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Hacker and children passed through Plainview this morning en route to their home in Hollis, Oklahoma. They have been visiting Mrs. Hacker's sister in Stanton, Texas. They are traveling in a Ford car, and report a good trip.

"We passed about three of the irrigation wells," said Mrs. Hacker. "These wells are novelties to us Oklahoma people," she continued. "We haven't anything like them in our State."

"Why don't you move here?" she was asked.

"Mr. Hacker is the manager of the telephone exchange in Hollis, and he does not want to leave his work," she replied. "It is a wonderful country."

SETH WARD PRESIDENT WORKING HALE CENTER.

C. L. McDonald Received Sixteen into Church at Silverton Sunday.

Rev. C. L. McDonald, President of Seth Ward College, went to Hale Center to-day. He expects to secure a number of students from that vicinity. Mrs. McDonald and their two daughters accompanied him.

Mr. McDonald concluded the revival meeting Sunday which Rev. S. A. Barnes had been holding at Silverton. He had nine conversions and received sixteen into church Sunday morning. Brother Barnes reports 67 conversions up to the time he left. This is said to be the greatest revival ever held in Briscoe County.

Dr. Legg, of Abernathy, was in Plainview yesterday.

California Irrigation Man Would Locate Here

C. C. Myrele was comparing Hale County land with California to-day. Mr. Myrele has been in irrigation work in the "wonder state" for three years. He thinks the outlook here is just as good as it is in fabled California. In fact, he says we have some advantages.

Mr. Myrele urges that land be stirred after watering. He says it does not bake so badly here as in California. Yet stirring the top will prevent evaporation and gives plants a better opportunity to grow.

Our California visitor hopes to locate in the Plainview country. He believes in hogs, alfalfa and hard work for Hale County.

ON TO GALVESTON!

Charge of Youths from Plainview Is Irresistible.

"Commissary depleted; medicine chests taken." That was the sum total of the bulletin announcing details of the fall of Texas City. Captain Shropshire's men were invulnerable.

An uncensored dispatch advises that the gallant young soldiers from Plainview were driven back at the onset. They were deploying through a sandy field and out of the green a watermelon brigade opposed. "Charge bayonets," the captain ordered. The struggle brief but monumental.

The troops continued their advance when an owner of the field appeared in company with an angry bull dog. Medicine chests so far reformed the troops that they are anxious for other conquests. "On to Galveston!" is the cry. "We want food."

DONLEY COUNTY SHERIFF HERE.

South Plains.

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Putman and son and daughter stopped in Plainview this morning en route from Clarendon to Lubbock. They will visit there for a few days.

"I sure do wish that we had time to see some of the big wells and your pretty town," said Mrs. Putman.

"Why don't you?" they were asked.

"I am sheriff and tax collector of Donley County, and I haven't but a few days to be away from Clarendon," replied Mr. Putman.

SOCIAL SERVICE BUREAU NAMES ADVISORY BOARD.

By United Press.

NEW YORK CITY, Aug. 20.—Dr. William Carter, head of the Church and School Social Service Bureau, which has been organized for the purpose of putting high-class motion pictures in the schools and churches of the United States, announced his advisory board to-day. The list contains the names of a large number of men prominent in the religious and educational circles of the country.

"Our bureau seems to have arrived at a very encouraging state of being," Dr. Carter said. "We have a fine list of men who are all eager to see the movement succeed, and I have faith that every one of them will do his utmost to help along the movement which we have undertaken."

"First we will have the very great facilities of the International Education League, of which the Duke of Manchester is the head, and which is allied with our organization for mutual good, one to the other. Then we have Dr. Charles H. Pankhurst as Vice President and the Duke of Manchester as International Vice President."

Bishop E. R. Hendrix is to be the supervisor of our biblical department, Dr. Edward Judson is to have charge of the missionary department and Dr. Francis Brown will be head of the department of oriental manners and customs and President Hidden of Princeton will be at the head of our educational department.

"These men will pass on the subjects and the manner of presentation of them in the various departments of the work as we will take it up. They will, of course, be assisted by the members of the advisory board who are assigned to their respective departments."

Miss Prudence Bower was in this morning from Olton visiting Miss Claudia Quisenberry.

OLDEST SETTLER BUILDS TOWN'S FINEST HOME

B. T. Campbell Lived Here Since Eighty-Five; Lumber for First House from Ft. Worth

P. F. Bryan was in The Herald office yesterday. He came to renew his paper. "I have read The Herald since its first issue 25 years ago," Mr. Bryan said. "We can't miss an issue now."

Then Mr. Bryan told us a little history about Plainview. Mr. Bryan's father built the first wooden house in Plainview 27 years ago. It wasn't "Plainview" then. There was only a cow camp in 1887. The house stood 2 miles south of the court house. It may be seen now on Hall Brown's farm.

Lumber for this pioneer dwelling was hauled from Colorado City, nearly 200 miles south. Slow-moving freight wagons consumed a week making the trip.

Horatio Graves built the first house in the territory which later became Hale County. The Graves home was built in 1883 at old Epworth, about a mile southwest from where Hale Center was laid out later, Mr. Bryan says.

Lumber for Mr. Graves' house was hauled by freight wagons from Fort Worth. It required 3 weeks to make the trip! Mr. Graves went from Hale County to California, and Mr. Bryan is not sure whether he is living or not.

According to Mr. Bryan, B. T. Campbell is the "oldest settler" here now. He has been in the Plainview country since about 1885. Mr. Bryan's figures show, Mr. Bryan's father was the second settler and Hugh Burch the third—of those who still live here.

Mr. Bryan's father came from Dickens County here. He moved from near Nashville, Tennessee to Abilene and from Abilene to Dickens County.

It is interesting that B. T. Campbell, the oldest settler now resident, is building perhaps the finest home in our modern town. Plainview has grown from a trading post to a town of nearly 6,000 people in a little more than 7 years. Mr. Campbell's elegant brick home, on West Third Street, is one of nearly a dozen similar dwellings that have been built in two years. His is in many respects most pretentious.

FROM COLORADO IN OVERLANDS.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Beall and children and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Beall and children were here yesterday en route to their homes, in Sweetwater. They have been visiting in Colorado Springs and Denver for several weeks.

This party was traveling in two five-passenger Overlands, and stopped at Egge-Corlett's to get a tire repaired. They report good roads.

GOVERNMENT TO PURCHASE MERCHANT TRADE SHIPS

Bill Provides Twenty-Five Million for Purchase; "War Risk" Insurance To

By United Press.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 20.—Purchase of vessels by the Government to carry goods to Europe and South America and other markets is agreed upon as the best means to meet the present emergency.

A bill of this sort was ordered drawn after conference between the President and leaders in Congress. It was also agreed to introduce a bill for "war risk" insurance by the Government.

Twenty-five million dollars will be asked to purchase the needed ships. The vessels will be operated by a corporation controlled by the Government, in the same manner as the Panama railroad.

SOLDIER'S WEAR NAME TAGS.

Little Metallic Disks Identify the Dead After Each Battle.

From the New York Times.

What war means is grimly brought out and emphasized by a line in one of the dispatches referring to the little metallic disk worn by all the soldiers in one of the forces, bearing his name and regimental and company designations. The object of it is that after battle there may be no unidentified dead, and as a man slips the cord bearing one of these disks around his neck, it would seem excusable for him to feel a little chill as he realizes its only utility.

The device is neither new nor peculiar to any army, however, for the custom of wearing these tags beneath the clothing has long been followed in the armies of most civilized countries. Our own troops do it when on active service, and it is not reported that their spirits are appreciably dashed by this reminder of the death that may come to them.

Why should they be, for that matter? There are other trades, and not a few of them, in which death has to be risked without any of the excitement that anesthetizes the soldier when he makes a charge or withstands one.

Elder Highsmith came in yesterday to begin his duties as pastor of the First Christian Church.

Mrs. O. Dana Brooks, of Dallas, will arrive to-morrow to visit her sisters, Mrs. E. B. Hughes and Miss Effie Casey.

Misses Greenwood, of Colorado City, who have been visiting Miss Cora Rountree, left yesterday for home.

GOING TO CLOVIS IN PAIGE.

Oklahoma Parties Pass Through Plainview on Land Deal.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Summar and Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Hann were here this morning on route to Clovis, N. M., from their homes in Sentinel, Okla. They own land near Clovis, and are going there to close a deal.

They are traveling in a five-passenger Paige automobile. Mrs. Hann says that they had had very little tire trouble, but the roads have been so hilly toward Oklahoma that it is not so pleasant as touring on the Plains.

They came from Hollis, Okla., to Silverton yesterday. They left Hollis about ten o'clock. They left Sentinel Tuesday evening. "We are going to Clovis to-night," said Mrs. Summar. "It we have to run in the night."

Mrs. J. M. Forrest left to-day on her return to her home, in Sanger, Texas. Mrs. Forrest has been here for some time visiting her sister, Mrs. Frank Pearson.

United Press reported Pope's death 8 hours before any other news agency secured it. Herald bulletin placarded the event at 2:30 yesterday. Newspapers served by Associated Press did not get it until 10 o'clock last night.

By United Press.
NEW YORK CITY, Aug. 15.—Thousands of dollars were expected to be poured into the coffers of the New York State Suffrage organizations as a result of funds secured through observance to-day of "Denial Day." Women in every walk of life in the metropolis, from the daughters and wives of the wealthy to the feminine members of laborers' families, denied themselves either some delicacy or some necessity and sent the money to suffrage headquarters for use in a Nation-wide fight for the vote for women. Dr. Anna Howard Shaw gave up her vacation. She will spend the time making more than 100 speeches in the course of a sixty-day trip through the seven "campaign states" of North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Montana, Missouri, Nevada and Ohio. Scores of professional woman of New York sent the day's salary to headquarters.

PUPILS SEGREGATED IN SEATTLE SCHOOLS.

By United Press.
SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 20.—Educators to-day began work on the plan adopted by the city school board to segregate the boys and girls in the Broadway High School at the beginning of the fall semester. It will be the first time the experiment has been tried in Seattle. School officials deny that moral questions had anything to do with the adoption of the plan. Students whose parents oppose the segregate, separate class-room idea will have the privilege of attending any other high school in the city.

Not only is it planned to segregate the boys and girls, but Superintendent of Schools Cooper will assign, as far as possible, men teachers for the boys' classes. "Because of intellectual and temperamental differences in sexes," said Superintendent Cooper to-day, it is thought that each works more effectively in separate classes, and that they enjoy such separation."

Leaders in Europe's Great War

Lord Kitchener.

From the New York Times.

This is the second war in which Lord Kitchener has taken part against the Germans. He was on a visit to France in 1870 and joined General Chanzy's army of the Loire, which undertook to rescue France after Paris was under siege. He assisted in this war by starting several balloon expeditions, but had an attack of pneumonia soon after he joined the army and saw little actual service.

Horatio Herbert Kitchener is the son of Lieut.-Col. H. H. Kitchener, and was born at Bally Longford, County Kerry, Ireland, June 24, 1850. Entering the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich in 1868, he was appointed second lieutenant of the Royal Engineers in 1871. As a subaltern he was employed in the survey work in Cyprus and Palestine, and on promotion to the rank of captain, in 1883, was attached to the Egyptian army then being reorganized by British officers.

In the following year he served on the staff of the British expeditionary force on the Nile. From 1886 to 1888 he was commandant at Suakin. Kitchener learned Arabic and studied the people he was dealing with by disguising himself as an Arab and mixing freely with them. His passion for work, his energy, and his command of detail earned for him the recognition of Sir Evelyn Wood and Lord Wolseley, who were at the head of the British army in Egypt. He made a real army out of the Egyptians, and boldly grappled with the problems of protecting Egypt from the wild tribes.

Battles in the Sudan.

Kitchener's rise to notice was slow, because his army for a long period was only engaged in little fights. It was not until 1888 that he had trained his Egyptians until they could fight. In 1888 he attacked Osman Digna at Handub, the battle ending in a retreat. Kitchener himself leaving the battlefield with a bullet in his face. Later in the year he led a brigade of Sudanese over Osman's trenches at Gemalzeh.

Two years afterward he began the exploit, which laid the foundation of his great fame, of the slow conquest of the Sudan, accompanied by the building of a railroad, which enabled him to hold the territory from which he swept the Dervishes. In 1892 he succeeded Sir Francis Grenfell as sirdar or commander-in-chief of the Egyptian army, and entered upon the years of campaigning which utterly subdued the wild tribes of Egypt, pushing ahead his railroad to catch up with his military victories. In 1896 he won the notable action of Ferkeh and advanced the frontier and railway to Dongola, and was made a British major general. A series of victories and advances, with the railroad always building in his rear, brought him across the Sudanese Desert before Khartoum, the stronghold of the Mahdi, the semi-civilized tribes which had overrun Egypt. Here the victory of Omdurman finished the conquest and placed the Egyptians and English in Khartoum.

Raised to the Peerage.

Kitchener's work had received little recognition in England before Khartoum. Then the thorough administrative work on his part gained universal admiration for him. He was raised to the peerage as Baron Kitchener of Khartoum and received the thanks of Parliament and a grant of $150,000. Describing Kitchener at that time, George W. Stevens, the famous war correspondent, said:

"Maj. Gen. Sir Horatio Herbert Kitchener is 48 years old by the book, but that is irrelevant. He stands several inches over six feet, straight as a lance, and looks out imperiously above most men's heads; his motions are deliberate and strong; slender, but firmly knit, he seems built for tireless, steelwire endurance, rather than for power and agility; that also is irrelevant.

"Steady, passionless eyes, shaded by decisive brows; brick-red rather full cheeks; a long mustache, beneath which you divine an immovable mouth; his face is harsh, and neither appeals for affection nor stirs dislike. All this is irrelevant, too; neither age, nor figure, nor face nor any accident of person, has any bearing on the essential sirdar.

"You would imagine the character just the same if all the externals were different. He has no age but the prime of life, no body, but one to carry his mind, no face, but one to keep his brain behind. The brain and the will are the essence and the whole of the man—a brain and a will so perfect in their workings that, in the face of extreme difficulty, they have never seemed to know what struggle is."

Kitchener's work in Egypt was a great conquest with no great battles. Similarly, when in 1899 he was sent to South Africa against the Boers as chief of staff to Lord Roberts, he did not shine as a brilliant strategist, but did wonderful work in a practical way.

Gets Title of Viscount.

In June, 1902, when the long and harassing war came to a close, he was rewarded by the title of viscount, promotion to the rank of general and a grant of ¼ million dollars.

Immediately after the peace he went to India as commander-in-chief of the East Indies, and in that post, which he held for seven years, carried out many far-reaching administrative reforms. On leaving India, in 1909, he was promoted field marshal and succeeded the Duke of Connaught as commander-in-chief and high commissioner of the Mediterranean. He undertook a tour of inspection of the forces of the empire, and went to Australia and New Zealand to draw up local schemes of defense.

After his return to England in April, 1910, however, he declined to take up his Mediterranean appointment, owing to his dislike of its inadequate scope. He was appointed British diplomatic agent in Egypt.

Lord Kitchener has never distinguished himself so brilliantly in the field as many of England's generals, but there are many who consider him the greatest English soldier since Wellington. He has often been called by Englishmen "Our great patient general," a title which Lord Rosebery invented for him.

SUFFRAGISTS INVESTING

FORMER DIVORCE CENTER.

By United Press.

RENO, Nevada, Aug. 20.—This former seat of divorce activity is now one of the hottest suffrage spots in the West. With the Nevada Equal Suffrage League working hard for the women's right's amendment to be voted on in November and the Nevada Association Opposed to Equal Suffrage striving with equal energy to defeat it, the "votes-for-women" issue is becoming overshadowingly important in the present state campaign.

The "antis" policy has been to wage their fight by means of literature to voters throughout the State, and this will be supplemented late in the campaign by a series of addresses by representatives of the National organization. The suffragists have not despised literature, but they have made a speech-making campaign from the start. Thus far Nevada women have done most of the talking. Distinguished orators from other states are expected later.

Miss Jane Addams, of Chicago, is one of those who will tour the state late in the fall. Dr. Anna Howard Shaw is expected about the same time. Mrs. Grace Cotterill, of Seattle, will lend her aid, and Dr. C. F. Aked, of San Francisco, is scheduled to spend a week in the state just before the campaign ends.

One of the features of the contest has been the anti-suffrage activity of George Wingfield, a dominant figure in Nevada mining and banking circles, who says he will leave the state if the suffrage cause wins. Miss Anna Martin, state president of the Equal Suffrage League, declared to-day that the suffrage cause will win if the women work hard enough.

HAY FEVER SEASON

IS SNEEZED OPEN.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 20.—"Ker-choo," "Ker-choo!"

Followed by sniffing and snuffles, stentorian blowing of the nose and subdued maledictions, this was the Nation-wide acclaim to-day to Mr. Hay Fever. He arrived, officially, to-day to open the hay fever season of 1914. Not until frost will the old annual "pest depart," according to popular materia medica belief. Physicians say to-day is actually the dawn of the season of hay fever, marked by begirras to seashore and mountains.

FOOTBALL REPLACES

ENGLISH RUGBY BALL.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Aug. 20.—Returning from a three years' experiment with Rugby, the University of Southern California football squad filed the opening gun of the Pacific Coast to-day by assembling for its first pre-season practice. Rugby was abandoned in favor of American football largely because of lack of competition in this end of the state. The squad was in charge of Head Coach Ralph Glaze, former Dartmouth star and big league pitcher.

WISCONSIN PLANS

MAIL INSTRUCTION.

By United Press.

MADISON, Wis., Aug. 15.—To determine the relative effectiveness of correspondence methods of instruction as compared with residence study, the State Board of Public Affairs is to-day conducting a survey of education by correspondence as conducted by the State University of Wisconsin. The correspondence work of the university has grown to be one of the largest activities of the institution. Reports show that during the past school year 6,333 students took correspondence courses from the university. These courses are disseminated from six different centers, making it possible to gather the correspondence of certain localities into classes and bring them into touch with the instructor. If a student is too far removed from these centers to take advantage of class lessons, he does the work assigned, sending it to the university, where the instructor makes suggestions and returns the copy. It is the object of the present inquiry to determine what are the inherent advantages of the correspondence method of instruction, and whether the students asking he correspondence courses are as serious in their work as residence students. It will also be determined whether the ability of the instructor to judge by correspondence whether the student is fitted for the line of study which he is pursuing is unhampered. A long list of questions to be answered by the instructors has been prepared by the board, delving into every phase of the correspondence work.

WASHINGTON EXPECTS

FIGHT BILL TO PASS.

By United Press.

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 20.—It seemed assured to-day that a bill providing for a state boxing commission will be introduced into the State Legislature at its next session, in January, 1915. Dan Salt, a Seattle boxing promoter, is fathering the idea, and has drafted a model bill to be passed on the plan of the New York, Montana and Wisconsin laws.

The bill provides, among other things, for five commissioners to constitute the State Boxing Board; that all bouts shall be ten rounds, no-decision affairs; that all promoters shall deposit $2,500 with the commission, to be forfeited if the law is violated; that no boxer shall be matched with a man outweighing him more than 10 pounds, and that the commission shall exact a fee of five per cent of the gross receipts, thus guaranteeing the state a profit whether the promoter wins or loses.

BLESSINGS OF DISCONTENT.

Happy is the man who is discontented! At first thought this statement seems paradoxical. Healthy discontent is the basis of all growth and development. When a man becomes contented with self or with the conditions that exist around him he ceases to advance. Notice that man who is in a position which he considers below his ability. Should he become despondent or contented with himself and his achievements, development and growth cease, and he grows "down" to his job.

Discontent does not imply impatience. A present impatience is not only no good reason for seeking a change; its very existence is an especial reason for postponing it.

The discontented man's ideal is continuously changed. He will never approximate it. As he progresses the ideal enlarges, and each old one achieved is a nucleus for the newer and greater. With developing ideals and constructive ideas man's greatest advancement is possible.

READING A NEWSPAPER.

The current of educational thought which is pouring into the human mind through the medium of the modern newspaper is something to be properly valued.

Service to the world at large, service to those whom we may never meet, is involved in the slight act of sending out a copy of a good paper.

In the columns of a large paper there is food for the many. If read attentively, each issue is one of a series of education.

This mental food is as necessary to the men of to-day as is bread, "the staff of life." Such bread cast upon the waters must return to us in double measure, for with the right spirit of appreciation we read with understanding the pages that before we had skimmed over too lightly.

In the pages of the modern paper are things worth thinking about; events that are bigger and broader than the petty, personal concerns of our own life. Here is the union of good thinking the world over—the thoughts of most of the great men of the day.

In some of the public schools of the United States the pupils are required to read and study some of the best and cleanest of the daily papers. This is well. What broader education can a child have than to thoroughly understand the political, educational and religious topics that are a part of life around him and built upon all ages?

So many people do not know how to read a newspaper understandingly. This does not mean the paper of the yellow-journal variety, whose glaring headlines are an offense to the eye, but the clean and wholesome sheet, whose aim is to uplift and educate the public.

Such a paper should be read carefully and thoroughly. If so read, it will be helpful in every pursuit of life.

The Best Editorial of the Day

THE MASTERY OF PEACE.

(From the New York World.)

Facts rule the world. Facts are fortune to those who recognize them. Three facts at this moment appeal mightily to the United States.

With the formal organization yesterday of the Federal Reserve Board this country has an assurance for the first time in its history of a banking and currency system just, powerful, scientific, sound. There is to be no more crazy inflation. There is to be no more political or speculative finance. There is to be no more monopoly of credit or of money. On the good faith and the true wealth of the republic, fairly safeguarded and made available not to a few, but to all, our business transactions are now to be based.

Bottomed on this rock, American enterprise finds itself challenged at once by world-wide commercial demoralization resulting from a continental war in Europe. As a result of these hostilities, thousands of ships have been swept from the seas. Exchange is destroyed. Industry is halted. Trade is paralyzed. Yet markets once closed to us have opened. The channels of communication with the Orient, with South America, with Europe itself, long almost unknown to our shipping enterprise, abandoned by those who recently controlled them, invite us to enter.

This week the Panama Canal, constructed by the United States at a cost of hundreds of millions, will be ready for use. It is open on equal terms, but a beneficent fortune has decreed that the nation whose generosity and whose far-sighted vision pierced the isthmus may be, if it will, the one to receive its first and its richest rewards. While Europe abandons commerce to make its awful sacrifices to war gods and war lords, we are urged by every consideration of self-interest, as well as by our colossal investment in behalf of international trade, to put the canal to the most urgent and most profitable uses of peace.

These are three momentous facts, indeed, all harmonizing, all coordinating toward a great end; but there is another which was not foreseen. War has silenced faction among neutrals no less than among belligerents. In respect to certain great economic problems the people of the United States are in more complete accord to-day than ever before.

The seas are ours if we care to possess them. The markets of the world are ours if we choose to enter them. On our intelligence must the result depend.

NO EXCUSE FOR FLY BREEDERS.

From the Minneapolis Journal.

A campaign against the fly pest has been begun by Dr. C. C. Dutton, city health commissioner, with an attack on stable refuse boxes in particular and on unkept alleys and other fly-breeding places in general. The commissioner announced after consulting the municipal judges on enforcement of the ordinance requiring frequent removals of stable refuse that prosecutions will follow violations.

"Under the old system a notice giving ten days to clean up was given, and at the expiration of that time excuses for further delays began to come in," said Doctor Dutton. "These conditions will not be tolerated this year."

The commissioner plans to urge fines of $1 for the first offenses and from $10 to $25 for subsequent violations.

LITTLEFIELD.

LITTLEFIELD, Texas, Aug. 18.—Major George W. Littlefield, of Austin, Texas, who is spending the summer with his family at Yellow House Ranch headquarters, near Littlefield, has just been advised that he has been appointed Assistant Adjutant General on the staff of General Bennett H. Young, General Commanding U. C. V., conveying the rank of Brigadier General. Major Littlefield accepted the commission with pride. He served the greater part of the war with Terry's Texas Rangers, being promoted to Major upon being wounded. He is active in business interests and is enjoying good health.

A car load of hogs were unloaded here this morning, arriving from Roswell, New Mexico. They will be fattened at the various farms over the Littlefield lands off the watermelons and truck, for market purposes.

Maize and kaffir corn are being harvested here and placed in the silos.

Cantaloupes of the most delicious flavor are being shipped out of Littlefield, having been raised on sod land this year.

HALE CENTER.

Dr. Bridges' drug store was burglarized on the night of the 11th and about $7 taken. The entrance was made through a window at the south end of the store. The wire was torn loose at the bottom of the screen frame and the window raised. The next day a party went to the hardware store to buy spike nails. Dr. Bridges had bought all they had and nailed the screen frame in with them, which left the window looking like a silver mine. When he left the store the following evening he went out at the south door and left the front door open. The burglars were run down by Cagel and Bailey, two of the most noted detective sleuths on record.

Temp, John and Will Currie passed through Hale Center the 11th on their return trip from Big Springs to Denver, Colorado. They said crops are better in Hale County than anywhere on the trip. They were in an automobile.

Sanders & Quisenberry, coal and grain dealers, have shipped four cars of wheat, one of oats and seven of hay and handled four cars of coal since August 1st. Most of the grain and hay is being held by farmers.

Mr. McCabe, while driving a hack, got his arm broken between between the wrist and elbow. Both bones were broken. The trouble was caused by the horse he was leading pulling back and one of the singletrees breaking, pulling him over the dashboard.

"MILITARY STYLES" IS SEASON'S FORECAST.

By United Press.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug. 20.—"Military in mode and tone," is the dictum of Cleveland manufacturers for fall and winter styles in ladies cloaks and suits. No longer will milady appear in the sheer blousy waist and peg-top skirt. Present styles in coats and jackets are doomed, for war-mad Paris has decreed that ladies' wear must be military.

Skirts will be plain, and only straight lines will be tolerated. Jackets and coats will also be plain and button close about the throat. Low or "V"-necked waists, too, will be replaced by stiff military collars and cuffs to match. Milady's walk and carriage must conform strictly with her new mode in dress. A long straight step and stiff carriage of the body will be the only mode approaching good form. Meanwhile buyers and other people who lay down the law of dress are marooned in Paris, becoming fully imbued with the military spirit. They will be back soon with their trunks of samples. With them will come the "military."

PSALM 6.

1. O Lord, rebuke me not in thine anger, neither chasten me in thy hot displeasure.
2. Have mercy upon me, O Lord; for I am weak; O Lord, heal me; for my bones are vexed.
3. My soul is also sore vexed: but thou, O Lord, how long?
4. Return, O Lord; deliver my soul; oh, save me for thy mercies' sake.
5. For in death there is no remembrance of thee: in the grave who shall give thee thanks?
6. I am weary with groaning; all the night make I my bed to swim; I water my couch with my tears.
7. Mine eye is consumed because of grief; it waxed old because of all mine enemies.
8. Depart from me all ye workers of iniquity; for the Lord hath heard the voice of my weeping.
9. The Lord hath heard my supplication; the Lord will receive my prayer.
10. Let all mine enemies be ashamed and sore vexed; let them return and be ashamed suddenly.

"OBEY ORDERS," SAYS COLONEL.

Ex-Confederate Veteran Tells Militia to "Shoot Low."

As Company L was leaving for Texas City last Saturday, Colonel J. M. Shropshire, an ex-Confederate veteran and grandfather of Lieutenant Otis Shropshire, made them a talk, containing the following pithy advice:

"Boys," the Colonel said, "always obey orders, keep your guns clean, boil your drinking water and shoot low."

This counsel, so tersely given, will come into play at the camp, as the boys will be drilled while there in regular army tactics.

CANAL TOLLS REACH TOTAL OF $100,000.

Sum of $25,000 Is Taken in First Day After New Highway Is Opened.

PANAMA, Aug. 20.—The sum of $25,000 was taken in Sunday in tolls by the Panama Canal, which was officially opened August 15.

Three steamers are already going through the waterway and four more probably will start before nightfall.

The total receipts in canal tolls up to the present time amount to $100,000. The balance has been obtained from the barge line, which has been using the waterway for some weeks past. The balance has been obtained from commercial steamers.

AMUSEMENTS.

The seventh picture in the Lucille Love series was shown Tuesday at The Ruby. After stirring adventures by land and sea, Lucille and Loubeque find themselves without the papers in an open boat at sea.

They are finally cast upon the coast of China, where they are the center of a number of dramatic situations in which each of them are striving for the possession of the papers that involve the honor of Lucille's father.

"Dolly of the Dailies," featuring Mary Fuller, was shown at the Mae I Saturday. This is a newspaper story full of vim and interest.

Saturday's pictures were the first and second of a series that will be watched with interest by lovers of good pictures.

RURAL SCHOOL TEACHERS BECOMING CONDUCTORS.

Poor Pay Driving Them in Cities, Says Report from Cedar Point, Ohio.

A news dispatch from Cedar Point, Ohio, says:

"That men teachers in rural districts are quitting their jobs to become street car conductors in cities because they need the money, was the statement of State School Superintendent Frank W. Miller, advocating higher wages for teachers, at the annual convention of the Ohio Teachers' Association here."

The fact that the University of Texas is unable to supply the demand made upon it by the schools of Texas for teachers is one evidence that teachers' salaries in this State are not satisfactory, and do not attract the best talent.

The Committee on Teachers at the State University received applications during 1911-12 for 559 teachers, and was able to furnish only 224; 1912-13 schools over the State applied for 510 teachers, and the University was able to supply only 235; in 1913-14 there were 656 applications for teachers, and the available supply was but 278.

Note the rapidity with which the demand is increasing and the comparative sluggishness of the supply. This can mean but one thing, viz., that the inducements for entering the teaching profession are not sufficiently attractive. It means further that but a small per cent of the teachers of the State have had any training at all in higher institutions of learning.

There is a movement on now among higher institutions of learning in the State to obtain funds for keeping open during the summer months to offer courses of instruction especially designed for teachers.

Higher salaries for teachers, greater facilities for their training in the higher institutions of learning, are two imperative demands which the educational system is making upon the people of the State.

CHAPTER XIV.

A Double Escape.

On Nauset Beach, in the shank of a midsummer night, two men sprawled on the sands, some distance back from the water, and listened to the heavy thumping of their overtaxed hearts, and panted.

Now and again one would lift his head and stare out over the black face of the waters at a little line of reddish flames about a mile off shore, all that remained to witness to the fact that, an hour since, these two had been in command of as trim a small schooner as ever ventured the coastwise trip from Portland to New York.

As far out again shone the starboard light of a becalmed schooner, whose people had been directly responsible for the disaster which had overtaken the smaller vessel.

In the course of time, beginning to breathe with more ease, one of the two garrooned gentlemen said:

"What I can't understand—anyway—is why these damned thugs out there thought we'd be asses enough to stay aboard the Seaventure and get burned."

The other replied: "Did they?"

"Look! that way—doesn't it? If they didn't, why were we permitted to swim ashore at our elegant leisure? Where was nothing to prevent their paying round to cut us off?"

"Maybe they did, at that, and missed us, Mr. Law and Order!"

"But—"

"We were a wee mite excited you've got to admit. It's just possible we didn't hear the noise of their oars. And it's black enough for them to have overlooked us. A man's head in the water isn't really a conspicuous object or a dark night."

"Tell me, Barcus, what's the nearest symptom of civilization?"

"Chatham village," said Mr. Barcus, "six miles to the northwards, and out off by an inlet a mile or so wide at that."

Mr. Law growled soufully.

"Then there's the lighthouse on Monomoy point," Mr. Barcus pursued, "three miles to the south."

Mr. Law said nothing whatever to this.

"Of course," his companion reflected morosely, "this had to happen in midsummer! A month earlier we'd have had the life-saving patrol to look to for protection. But the service is suspended in June and July."

A silence commenced eloquently on this assertion, broken only when Mr. Law voiced a thought bred of long and malignant observation of the schooner's green eyes:

"I'd give a deal to know who's aboard that vessel."

"You don't mean you think your regular young woman—?"

"It's possible. Judith kidnaped Rose in Portland. That's not so far from Gloucester; a motor car could have caught that schooner before she called to waylay us, this morning, and what better way to take care of an aide-bodied, full-tendered girl you've kidnapped than to ship her somewhere by sea, in the care of trustworthy bellhops?"

"Don't ask me—I've done very little kidnaping for one of my years."

"For tuppence," said Mr. Law, "I'd risk a swim off to that boat and see for myself."

"For two million dollars—I would not!" Barcus affirmed with great decision.

A moment or so later, the line of little flames went out altogether and unexpectedly; and the owner of the late Seaventure fancied he could hear, even at that distance, the hiss of charred and smoldering timbers sucked under and drowned out.

"Exit," he announced plaintively, "exit Seaventure," with heroic gesture.

"R. I. P. a good little ship!"

Alan Law sat up, abstractedly scrubbing a crust of sand from his cheeks and commented soufully: "Oh—damn!"

"That goes double here," his companion rejoined. "And the way I see it, I've got a right to do all the cursing at this juncture of our hero's foolish, but fascinating adventures. I'm the injured party—it was my boat, and now it's gone. I'm broke for fair. Go!" he pursued vindictively.

"Oh, let up, can't you?" Mr. Law exclaimed peevishly. "I'm sorer than you are—and after all, it's my loss; I've got to buy you another boat. All you've lost is your temper."

"And my susceptibility to the charms of the well-known sex," Mr. Barcus corrected. "Nothing can ever restore my lost faith in gentle woman's gentleness. When you brought that young woman aboard I thought butter wouldn't melt in her mouth, and for a while I actually contemplated doing her the kindness of tipping you over into the drink, so she could lavish her tender affections on a regular guy, someone able to appreciate her—meaning me, of course. And first thing I know, she ups and points a gun at my head and tips me overboard, and then makes a pretty bonfire out of my sailboat. And all the excuse you can produce is that she's crazy in the signals of other shipping sounded a concert of discordance—the man-power horn of a catboat crying the warning back to the deep-throated whistle of a coastwise steamship and the impertinent drumming of a motor-boat's exhaust with the muffler cut out.

This last boxed the compass, sounding now near, now far, though the complaints of other shipping diminished in volume and died away in the distance, giving place to others still, the plutter-plutter of that motor was never altogether lost; if at times it faded, it seemed certain always to return in even louder volume.

Vainly straining his vision against the blank pallor of the encompassing fog, Alan wondered, worried, dreading!

At irregular intervals, starting from preoccupation, he would manipulate the brass pull on the wheel-box, provoking the horn's stuttering blasts of protest. But the need for unremitting vigilance and exercise of the fog-signal failed none the less to reconcile Alan to that blatant clamor which so widely and so hideously advertised their whereabouts.

If there were anything still to be feared from Judith and her crew—if, for instance, as Barcus had suggested, they had sought out one of the life-saving stations on Nauset beach, appropriated its power-driven lifeboat and renewed the pursuit, if ever they heard that horn there would beyond question be the devil to pay!

The loneliness of his vigil was eventually relieved by the appearance on deck of the woman Alan loved.

The tableau that greeted her vision as she emerged from the companionway, of the haggard, unshaven wretch at the wheel and the other who lay at his feet, where he had fallen, in a stupor of fatigue, instantly wrung from Rose a little cry of solicitude. And she was quick to do what little she could to alleviate their discomfort. For Barcus she fetched a pillow and blanket from the cabin, and this one suffered her ministrations without once rousing from his slumbers. Then hastening forward, she got the galley fire going and prepared a makeshift breakfast for her half-famished lover.

Warm food and hot coffee—such as they were—lending a little tone to Alan's spirits, he was presently able to discuss their situation with some optimism. Yet nothing could gloss the fact that the problem confronting them was one whose solution baffled their utmost ingenuity—one the simple contemplation of which taxed their courage and intelligence to the extreme.

He summed up: "I can't see anything for it but father and Judith are determined to have my scalp, and I'm hanged if I can see how to protect myself without taking a leaf out of their books. What I'm most afraid of is that some time I may forget it's a woman I'm defending myself against. When a fellow's fighting for his very life he can't always stop to calculate the weight of his blows."

The young man sighed, shook his head, laughed uncertainly, and held her closer to him. "Don't fear; I'll find some way out without injuring either of them. I promise you that!"

He sealed the pledge upon her lips. And in that moment of their oblivion to the world from some point forward a muffled crash sounded simultaneously with the dull shock of a collision with a smaller vessel, and a strange voice cried out with an accent of high exultation.

Before either Alan or the girl could disengage the decks rang loud with a rush of booted feet pounding aft.

The figures of the boarding party were already taking shape through the fog as Alan sprang toward the companionway to fetch the rifle. And in this action his feet slipped on planks greasy with moisture deposited by the surcharged atmosphere. He went down with a stumbling thump, and an instant later two men fell bodily upon him—active, strong fellows in the dress of fishermen. He was suffered to rise only as a prisoner, helpless in the grasp of two pairs of powerful hands.

He saw Barcus, rudely roused and still dumb with sleepy confusion, in no better case—jerked to his feet and held captive by two more fishermen. A fifth had taken charge of Rose, clamping her wrists in the vise of one big hand.

He saw Barcus, rudely roused and still dumb with sleepy confusion, in no better case—jerked to his feet and held captive by two more fishermen. A fifth had taken charge of Rose, clamping her wrists in the vise of one big hand.

The sixth and sole other member of the boarding party, likewise in the rough-and-ready garb of a fisherman, was Judith Trine.

Down the side a heavy life-boat ground its way astern, the loose end of its painter slipping over the rail even as Alan caught sight of it. (So it seemed Barcus had guessed shrewdly!)

Observing this, one of the men in charge of Alan made as if to leave him to the other, addressing Judith for permission to prevent the loss of the lifeboat. She stopped him with a peremptory gesture.

"No—let it go. We're better off without it. Hold that man fast till I fetch a rope. We'll make sure of them both this time!"

Straining forward in the grasp of her guard, Rose implored her sister: "Judith, in pity's name, think what you are doing!"

"Hold your tongue!" Judith snapped viciously. "Another whimper out of you, and I'll have you gagged!"

The balance of her threat, though accompanied by the exhibition of an automatic pistol, was drowned out by the sudden roar of a steamship fog-signal, so close aboard that it seemed almost to emanate from the forepart of the schooner herself.

As it was answered by shrill and hoarse cries of terror or of warning from a dozen throats, Alan found himself released, his captors leaping for their lives to the taffrail.

He caught an instantaneous glimpse of the knife-like bow of a great steamer towering above the two-master—sweeping toward it at a speed which raised a smart jet of white under the outwater.

Someone aboard the schooner, with the voice of a stentor, bellowed a terrified appeal:

"Stop your engines! Shut off your propeller! Stop your—"

Then, like the wrath of God, the steamship overwhelmed the lesser ship; its bow seemed to slice through the schooner as a knife through cheese. And the two halves were fairly driven under water by the frightful force of the blow.

Thunders deafening him, Alan was hurled bodily through the air fully twenty feet.

When he came up he struck out at random, blindly tormented by the vision of Rose caught in the suck of that gigantic wheel, drawn under, crushed and mangled by the propeller of the vast black hulk whose flank was sliding past, like the face of a cliff, ten yards behind his shoulders.

Aware of several dark objects dotting the surface within a radius of several yards, he swam for the nearest; the head was a woman's, the face turned toward him, the face of Rose.

He gasped wildly: "Keep cool! Don't struggle! Put one hand on my shoulder and—"

What happened then was never quite clear to him; he only knew that he was forced to fight for his very life—that the woman, as soon as he came within reach, flung herself upon him like some maddened animal, clutching his throat, winding her limbs round his, dragging him down and down.

Primitive instinct alone saved him. He remembered later, most vaguely, the culmination of that duel beneath the waters—remembered freeing an arm, drawing it back, delivering a blow from his shoulder, with all his strength, flinging himself free, struggling back to the air.

Then a boathook caught the back of his shirt and dragged him for some distance, until two strong hands caught him beneath the armpits and held his head above the water.

He looked up wretchedly into the face of Barcus, and, still bewildered, struggled feebly.

The other's voice brought him back to his senses. "Easy, old top! Take it easy! You're all right now—reat a minute, then help me get you aboard."

He obeyed, controlling his panic as best he might; and presently, with considerable assistance from Barcus, contrived to scramble in over the gunwales of a boat which proved to be the stolen lifeboat.

Aside from Barcus and himself it held one other person only—the woman he loved, crumpled up and unconscious in the bow.

He strove to rise and go to her, to make sure that still she lived. Barcus restrained and quieted him.

"There! Easy, I say! She's all right—fainted—that's all! She and I took the water in practically the same spot, and luck threw this blessed boat my way within half a dozen strokes. No trouble at all—in a manner of speaking!"

"But the steamer—"

"Why fret about her? At the pace she was making she couldn't have stopped within half a mile. We'll be all right now—with power to fetch us to land."

"But the others—Judith!" Alan sat up and leaned over the gunwale, searching an oily, leaden expanse spotted only with a few splinters and bits of wreckage. "I left her out there—unconscious—she'll drown, I tell you!"

"And I'll tell you something!" said Mr. Barcus severely. "You'll lie quiet and shut up or I'll dent your dome with the shaft of an oar. Let her drown—and a good job, I say! Don't you know the meaning of 'enough'? Merciful heavens, man, you're the most insatiable glutton for punishment ever!"

But Alan wasn't listening. His face was as lightless as the waters that swam beneath his lack-luster gaze. There was a horror in his heart that numbed even the sense of relief, of deliverance, that penetrated his being like a shock of mortal pain.

Dead! Judith dead! Back there, in the fog and the cold . . . dead by his hand!

"Nothing—wind too fresh. Make yourself easy on the soft side of a plank here. I'll land you a kick in the slats when so minded—or when it's your trick at the wheel."

With a chuckle, Alan obediently stretched himself out on the deck.

"I say—Law!"

"Well?"

"You seem pretty easy in your mind about this young woman below. To me, she's the same that tried to send me to Davy Jones' locker. How does she explain her presence aboard?"

"Much as I surmised," Alan replied. "I fancy they chloroformed her while she slept in that hotel in Portland. Whether or no, Rose woke up in a closed motor car—bound and gagged, of course—and was brought aboard at Gloucester about midnight."

"Simple when you know how," Barcus commented. "Of course, I always did say that truth was a stranger to fiction. Cuddle down, now, and I'll talk you insensible."

His accents already merging in with the swish of the longside waves, the bubbling of the wake, and the many-toned composite voice of the ship in being, unconsciousness like a cloud had despoiled the victim of the sky's ill-faith.

"Here."

"Then—let's go to it! Give way!"

A dozen lusty strokes brought them alongside the schooner, and as the dory scraped the waist of the larger vessel the two young men dropped oars, rose, and seizing the low gunwales, lifted themselves to the deck.

Nothing opposed them; the deck was ignorant of other footsteps than their own, the schooner as silent as only a becalmed ship can be.

Without further consultation, Alan led quickly aft and down the companionway to the cabin, where a dim light burned—a smoky lamp swinging in gimbals above a cluttered table.

Of the two stateroom doors one disclosed an empty cabin, the other was locked.

Trying the handle roughly, Alan fancied he heard a sound within. Pausing, he called, with a thrill of fearful hope:

"Hello, in there!"

The response was cry of incredulous delight: "Alan!"

By way of answer Alan hurled himself bodily against the door. At the descended upon Alan's overwheeled faculties.

He woke mutinously, with a yawn and a shiver in the gray of a tarnished daybreak, to find that fog pressed heavily upon the face of the waters, a mist so thick that from the stern the waist of the vessel was almost invisible, the bows completely so.

Barcus stood over him, at the wheel, fairly reeling with weariness, his eyes blood-shot, swollen, and half-closed in a face like a mask of fatigue.

"Can't keep this up much longer," he apologized thickly; "stood it about as long as I can. Take your trick and give me forty winks."

Grateful solicitude brought Alan instantly to his side, though he himself was sluggish and stiff and sore in all his limbs.

"You're a brick!" he protested. "Why didn't you call me sooner?"

"No good; I knew the way—you didn't. That is, I did until this accursed fog closed down a couple of hours ago. Now—God knows where we are—by my reckoning, somewhere in Nantucket sound, west of Monomoy."

Grasping a small brass handle affixed to the wheel box, he jerked it sharply three times, and the automatic horn blared raucously a threefold response up forward.

"Keep that going," he begged, "three blasts in a row and a minute interval—and if the devil takes care of his own we may possibly escape being run down."

With a sigh, relinquishing the wheel, he collapsed upon the deck and was almost instantly asleep.

The wind had fallen until barely enough air stirred to keep way on the vessel; she moved in silence, a spectral ship upon a spectral sea of long, oily swells and the complexion of lead. Hither and yon in the obscurity, fog second impact of shoulders backed by a hundred and eighty pounds of solid flesh and determination, the lock splintered away from its socket, the door flew open with a bang—and Alan landed the room with a cry: "Rose!"

His sweetheart met him half-way, her arms uplifted, her countenance transfused.

And Mr. Barcus turned and slowly ascended the companionway, his nose wrinkled with misgivings.

"Blest if I know how he thinks he can tell 'em apart," he remarked. "Not that I blame him for taking a chance; it wouldn't pain me any to find out I'd kissed the wrong girl by mistake—not, that is, unless she didn't care for my technique."

"In that case," he allowed, "I guess the sequel would be apt to prove tolerable agonizing!"

Some ten minutes later a hail from the deck broke the embrace of the lovers:

"Below there! I say—Law!—wind a-coming!"

"Right-o! Half a minute!"

But that stipulated delay was several times multiplied before Alan showed up on deck to find Barcus bending a laborious back to the capstan.

"Lend a hand, can't you?" Barcus complained, blowing heavily. "I didn't interrupt your amours just to get an audience. The sooner we get this anchor in—"

Alan checked him with a hand on his arm. "What's that?" he demanded in a tone tense with apprehension.

The muffled running of a heavy-duty marine motor drifted down on the wings of the sluggish wind.

"Don't ask me—I'm afraid to guess!"

"But they couldn't possibly!"

"Since when did you set up to be a judge of possibilities? Nothing probable ever happened to you in all your young life—'s far's I can make out. As for me—I know there are at least two life-saving stations on Nauset, both with modern equipment—motor lifeboats and all; and nothing will ever persuade me that pack of wolves would stick at breaking in and confiscating one of the same. It's as likely as not—only more so. Our present business is to get the h—l out of here—and not advertise our exit, either. Take that port light in and douse it, while I do the same by the starboard. Then duck below, warn your Dulcinea, and put out the cabin lamp. That way—"

"If this blackness and our bull-luck only holds—we may manage an evasion!"

There followed an exceedingly busy quarter of an hour for two constrained in pitch darkness to grope their way about the decks and familiarize themselves with the idiosyncrasies of a strange two-master. Nevertheless, the end of that period found the schooner with canvas full and sheets taut, a good easterly breeze abeam, swiftly weaving a wake southwards—the light on Monomoy point watching her curiously from over the starboard beam.

"Hear anything more of that power boat?" Alan asked, joining Barcus by the wheel. (To be continued.)

Most Honorable Women and Misses Will Very Enjoy the Much Beautiful Show of

Fall Suits of Newness and Richness and Beauty Unwritable at a Price Very Low

In the big city markets weeks before this, when manufacturers were much wishing for orders to keep plenty help busy through the dull season, Carter-Houston's buyer of clothes of loveliness for women of Plainview chose much right materials of a softness and fineness unusual and of colors new and gracious, and after much consultation ordered for these fine suits to be made up as he said.

From the maker's they are here now and of a smartness and style and beauty to delight fashionables.

Styles of a charm only ever to be conceived by artists of right knowledge, which is easy seen in the long and half long jackets, unusual tunics and plaited skirts, military capes and collars, artistic buttons and the new use of braids.

Shades of a ravishingness unusual, of the greens, browns, prunes, wistaria, purple, blues, taupe and black.

Materials with a softness as the snow on Fujiyama, of the broadcloths, gabardines, poplins, wool crepe cheviots, wide-wale serges, mannish and medium weave serges.

Linings of beautiful silks and satins of guaranteed quality.

Suits for which you would generally expect much more money to pay--at $15.00

TO

$45.00

This is, I am much convinced, the most wonderful display of new, beautiful, stylish suits for Women and Misses you will see.

A general idea seems to prevail that all merchandise is to be advanced in price because of the war between European peoples. This is not true. America does not depend upon the countries across the sea for any great amount of her "dry goods," and while Carter-Houston's offer a number of imported lines we are going to continue giving you the same wonderful values in merchandise that we do every year. Of course, in some instances where our purchases have not arrived from abroad, and if we are compelled to buy them in the New York markets at a higher rate than formerly, our prices will have to advance correspondingly.

THE ICELESS REFRIGERATOR. Real First Cousin to the Fireless Cooker and the Dustless Duster.

The iceless refrigerator had to follow the fireless cooker, wireless telegraph, horseless carriage and dustless dusters. It was expected as a matter of course. The only real piece of news about it is that it has materialized. "The very newest thing" awakens the adage, "There is nothing new under the sun," for it is founded on a refrigerating idea known to the Mexicans as "the Mexican monkey."

The American invention consists of a circular frame of closely meshed, galvanized iron wire covered with a porous fabric. The frame is large enough to have a water tank at the top and an upper and lower section, divided by a shelf, and a drip pan at the bottom. The tank is filled with water and the fabric encasing the mesh thoroughly saturated with water. The interior of the refrigerator is said to be kept cool and dry, this being effected by exterior evaporation and the prevention of hot air from entering it. The iceless refrigerator must be kept in a cool place.

"THE LITTLE FOXES."

Rev. Caldwell to Speak to Young People at Presbyterian Church.

The open-air meeting on the Presbyterian Church lawn continues to grow in interest and attendance from day to day. We had the largest crowd last night we have had, and Brother Caldwell preached an excellent sermon on "The Adoption of Sons." As each thought was developed some apt illustration more deeply impressed it upon the mind and heart of the hearers.

The subject of the sermon to-night will be "The Little Foxes," and on Friday night the sermon will be addressed particularly to the young people, the subject being "Sowing and Reaping."

Don't fail to hear Brother Caldwell to-night on "The Little Foxes," as this sermon has attracted particular attention over the State.

We are to hold a children's service Saturday morning at ten o'clock, and the parents are urged to bring their children to this service.

The day services are best of all, and you are urged to attend the morning as well as the evening service.
