OCEAN SPANNED IN SIXTEEN HOURS, 12 MINUTES

TRIP ACCOMPLISHED IN SIXTEEN HOURS FROM NEW FOUNDLAND TO CLIFDEN

London, June 15.—The final goal of all the ambitions which flying men have ventured to dream since the Wright brothers first rose from the earth in a heavier than air machine was realized this morning, when the young British officers, Captain John Alcock and Lieutenant Arthur Brown, landed on the Irish coast after the first non-stop flight across the Atlantic Ocean.

Their voyage was without accident, and without unforeseen incident so far as can be learned. It was a straight-away, clean-cut flight, achieved in sixteen hours and twelve minutes—from Newfoundland to Clifden, Ireland, a distance of more than 1,900 miles.

But the brief and modest description which comes from the airman at Clifden tells of an adventurous and amazingly hazardous enterprise. Fog and mists hung over the North Atlantic, and the Vickers Vimy machine climbed and dove, struggling to extricate herself from the folds of the airplane's worst enemy.

She rose to 11,000 feet, swooped down almost to the surface of the sea and at times the two navigators found themselves flying upside down only ten feet above the water.

Before coming to earth near the Clifden wireless station, Alcock circled the wireless aerials seeking the best spot to reach the earth. But no suitable ground was found so he chanced it in a bog.

The wireless staff rushed to the aid of the aviators. They found Brown and Alcock temporarily deafened by the force of the impact. As soon as they were able to be escorted to the wireless station they telegraphed the news to their friends and then had breakfast.

TURKS TO BE CALLED BY COUNCIL TODAY

Ottoman Emissaries Only Enemy Delegates to Meet Allied Statesmen in Paris

Paris, June 14.—No sooner will they have disposed of the reply to the German counter-proposals than the big four, sitting with the Foreign Ministers in a reconstructed council of ten, will delve into Turkish affairs. Turkish "experts," only slightly distinguished as plenipotentiaries, will be summoned before the allied statesmen in Paris Tuesday. Possibly because they are not regarded as full-fledged peacemakers, the Turks will receive the distinction of being the only enemy envoys to meet the allies in Paris. The conference will be held in the clockroom of the Quai d'Orsay, and the visitors from Turkey will get full opportunity to present their case.

Circle No. 3 of the Methodist church will meet with Miss Rebecca Ansley in a social and business session Monday, June 23rd, at 3 o'clock. All members are urged to be present, and all Methodist ladies within the district are invited.

Deacons of Baptist Church

And Wives Entertained

With true Christian hospitality, Mr. and Mrs. D. W. McGlasson threw open the doors of their home Friday night to the deacons of the Baptist church and their wives. It was a goodly gathering of representative men and women of the church.

After they assembled around the damask covered and flower bedecked tables, the real business of the evening began—the dissection of the up-lift and betterment of the church and in so doing the betterment of the cause of christianity. A prayer by Rev. A. E. Boyd was a prelude to the evening program.

Mr. McGlasson was not only host but master of ceremonies and right royally did he act his part. In response to his address of welcome, A. C. Hatchell acknowledge the courtesies of the occasion and also spoke on matters of great interest to the Baptist organization in Plainview.

In the talks that followed many good things were said. Some of them were wise, some pathetic, some instructive and all to the point.

The program speaks for itself: Office of Deacon and what it means to me—G. W. McDonald

Launching a program for the church—W. A. Donaldson

Oldest deacon in the church—J. H. Calvert

Youngest deacon in the church—Claud Powers

Opportunity of a young and old deacon—Jack Galloway

Enlistment and progress—T. W. Sawyer

A deacon's duty to the Sunday School—C. A. Pierce

What can I do to help the pastor as a deacon—L. J. Warren

Round up—Rev. A. E. Boyd

One of the most interesting numbers on the program was impromptu—a talk by Mrs. J. H. Calvert.

Mrs. Calvert supplemented Mr. Calvert's remarks by an irresistible tribute to her husband as a deacon and a christian. For forty-four years he has been a deacon in the Baptist church and forty-three years of that time they have spent together.

Mrs. Calvert then spoke of the women of the church and the faith that is their stronghold at all times.

Another non-scheduled feature was the talk made by Mrs. R. F. Jones (Mother Jones) characteristic of her example and life. So far only the intellectual position of the entertainment has been mentioned, but the material part of this delightful evening was not neglected. Far from it and to those of us, strongly imbued with the "earth earthly" perhaps it was of great importance, at least it was a gastronomical treat to all.

First Mrs. McGlasson assisted by her daughter, Mrs. J. M. Waller and a bevy of friends, served coffee and chicken sandwiches of the most delightful variety. Not the thin fashionable kind of infinitesimal size, but the satisfying species, but withal dainty and delicious. Then after another "feast of reason and flow of soul" came an interlude in which peach ice cream and two kinds of cake were offered the deacons, their wives and ye reporter. At a late hour the good nights were said and the guests departed strengthened for the cause of Christ and the welfare of the church.

AMERICAN CROSS TO JAUREZ SUNDAY NIGHT

VILLISTAS FLEE AS THE UNITED STATES TROOPERS CHARGE ACROSS BORDER

El Paso, Texas, June 16.—American troops that participated in the punitive expedition against the Villa rebels in and near Juarez last night and today, were billeted in barracks at the camps on the American side tonight and were asleep before dark after their 24 hours of preparation and execution. As a rear guard to the cavalry, artillery and engineers columns which wound over the mesa from the city, seven ragged, high hatted Mexican prisoners were herded towards the Fort Bliss stockade by a detachment of the fifth cavalry while another cavalry detachment drove a herd of 100 Mexican horses and ponies captured from the Villa forces to the remount station.

While no official report of the cavalry operations have yet been prepared by Brigadier General James R. Ewin and Major General ... was unofficially stated to night at Fort Bliss that approximately 50 Villa followers were killed and the prisoners, horses and mules captured.

The American casualties consisted of one seventh cavalryman, Corporal Chigas having been shot through the leg by a Mexican rebel on the south bank of the river and one cavalry horse killed and another wounded in the knee.

After crossing during the night the cavalry column, supported by a battalion of the 82nd artillery, advanced and at daybreak started scouting over the low, marshy fields in the elbow of the Rio Grande south of Ysleta, Texas.

Capturing the seven prisoners before reaching Villa camp, the cavalry was enabled to proceed, dismounted, to a short distance of the adobe headquarters when firing was begun by the Americans standing in water up to their knees, according to cavalry officers. Four Villa men were killed in the first assault and the entire force, numbering approximately 200 men, mounted and escaped toward the southwest with the cavalry troops in pursuit. Crossing the plains and reaching the mesa land, the rebels scattered into small bands and Colonel James J. Hornbrook's fifth cavalry pursued one band which continued toward the southwest and was pursued for a distance of 35 miles before returning toward the river.

In the meantime, Colonel Perkins' seventh cavalry, in temporary command of Colonel Howard R. Hikock, deployed to the southeast and pursued another band of the Villa men. During the pursuit troops A and C of the seventh cavalry executed a mounted pistol charge from the saddle and killed a number of the rebels. In the meantime the artillery placed shrapnel shells directly over the heads of the fleeing Villa fore and many were killed then. After the two cavalry forces had pursued the rebels over more than 30 square miles, they formed a junction and returned to the American side of the river, accompanied by the artillery and eighth engineers, who threw a pontoon bridge across the river.

ITCH!

A WAR-TIME ILL THAT'S SPREADING
HUNT'S SALVE CURES IT!

BRED in the war trenches of Europe, a wave of ordinary ITCH is spreading over the country. This skin disease, history shows, has always prevailed, following wars and the concentration of armies. It was common during the Civil War and following that conflict. There was an epidemic of the Itch after the Spanish-American war. It is repeating itself after the great European struggle.

Returned soldiers and those with whom they come in contact will find a recognized remedy for the Itch in Hunt's Salve, commonly known as "Hunt's Itch Cure." Many a veteran of the late '90's will testify to its merits.

If directions are followed HUNT'S SALVE will prove a never failing cure for all forms of the Itch, and your druggist will tell you so. He sells HUNT'S SALVE under a strict guarantee to refund the purchase price to any dissatisfied user.

A Medford, Oklahoma man, among thousands who praise HUNT'S SALVE, says:

"Some people dislike to call it the Itch, but candor compels me to admit I had it badly. Your Hunt's Salve, however, cured me after many other remedies had totally failed. One box completed the cure—the first application afforded wonderful relief. My advice to those who have to scratch, is to use Hunt's Salve. Hunt's Salve is especially compounded for the treatment of Itch, Eczema, Ringworm, Tetter and other itching skin diseases and is sold on your guarantee by all reliable drug stores, or it will be sent direct by mail if your local druggist cannot supply. Price 75c per box. A. B. RICHARDS MEDICINE COMPANY, INC., SHERMAN, TEXAS."

Starving in the Midst of Plenty

Acid-Stomach Steals Strength and Good Feelings From Millions

One of the worst features of acid-stomach is that very often it literally starves its victims in the midst of plenty. And the strange thing about it is that the people with acid-stomach seldom know what their trouble really is.

No matter how good or wholesome the food may be, or how much they eat, they do not gain in strength. This is clearly explained by the fact that an acid-stomach cannot properly digest food. Instead of healthy, normal digestion, the excess acid causes the food to sour and ferment. Then when this mass of sour, fermented food, charged with excess acid, passes into the intestines, it becomes the breeding place for all kinds of germs and toxic poisons, which in turn are absorbed into the blood and in this way distributed throughout the entire body. And that is exactly why it is that so many thousands of people eat and eat and keep on eating and yet are literally starving in the midst of plenty. Their acid-stomachs make it absolutely impossible for them to get the full measure of nourishment out of their food. And it doesn't take long for this poor nourishment to show its ill effects in a weakened, emaciated body.

You may say: "My stomach doesn't hurt me." That may be true because many victims of acid-stomach do not actually suffer stomach pains. Then again, there are millions who do suffer all kinds of aches and pains—head-aches, rheumatic twinges, gout, lumbago, pains around the heart and in the chest—who never dream that an

FOR ACID-STOMACH

His Official
Widow

By T. LEDYARD SMITH

George Skinner had tried his hand at various undertakings. His lack of stick-at-it-iveness bore, as result, that nervous, unsatisfied eye.

George had tried a little of everything. He had grown courageous once or twice and had attempted work, but soon reformed and went back to his former ways. He even tried matrimony.

He was willing to try anything except year in and year out industry. To do him justice, it might be said that he stuck closer to the general run of affairs surrounding horse-racing than anything else, but his investments at the track were not always made with his own cash.

After some wear and tear of gray matter, he came to the conclusion that a man of thirty who has a wife should be insured; not for any small figure, but for something substantial; as high as he could stand for premiums.

Then he spoke to his wife. Why, yes, of course, a wife should be protected. Not that she wished him to be so soon thereafter robed in white and starting in the feather-wing business. Oh, no, not at all.

Instead, how much better if he could only die—just officially die—and then come back and enjoy that which they need not work for. Lovely!

And now his mind was too busy with plans and ways; his brain was working on full time and up to its full capacity; working out a scheme and a plan for the enjoyment of that scheme consummated. Then flight.

They could go to—well, far away, anywhere. George's application to the study of geography had been indifferent. They could go somewhere and be drowned in a new life as easily as he intended to be—officially—drowned in Long Island sound.

He little thought of extradition treaties, which are so broad that a United States citizen can be brought back for no greater offense than stealing a glance at his neighbor's wife, or shooting a man with a kodak. George was occupied with three ideas: to raise premiums; his widow (?) to collect the insurance; flight.

Through the generous odds offered by a bookmaker ten dollars on a lucky horse supplied him with a roll with which he took out a policy for ten thousand. And to celebrate the start of his get-rich-quick scheme he blew his wife to a swell a la carte dinner.

And right here, if he had used glasses with strong lenses instead of strong contents, he could have viewed his finish in the foreground.

In less than six months he had increased his insurance another ten thousand, the premium being acquired partly as before, but on a horse paying lower odds, and the balance on an outside matter, the detail of which he was not disposed to discuss, not even with his wife. Call it speculation, for he did speculate as to his safety in the matter.

The summer was closing and the water would soon be too cold for comfortable drowning, such as he intended doing—to all intents and purposes. It was time to act, but his insurance was not as high as he intended.

The necessity for bringing a third party into the game was unfortunate, but it was necessary and had to be done; not, however, until this third party had supplied cash to increase the insurance to forty thousand, from which, if they were successful, said third party was to have ten thousand.

They arrived at this conclusion after no little discussion, and after the third partner had been introduced to the second partner, who could, of course, as the widow and real beneficiary, draw the full amount, but in whom they looked for honesty when the divvy came.

For conceiving the scheme and carrying it out George was to have two shares—twenty thousand. For wearing mourning and looking sorry his wife was to have one share—ten thousand. For putting up the premium on twenty thousand and helping in other ways the third partner was to get one share. So it was settled.

The third partner in this game had been more fortunate in some ways than George, and more shrewd and saving. He had put his spare dollars and spent his idle moments in a launch.

So in his selection George had picked out the right man. This launch was necessary stage property in the play.

George's first move was to go east on a night boat, and again on another. He selected one that took a course through the middle of the sound.

After two trips east on this boat he calculated to the minute the running time from a certain lighthouse at the entrance of the sound to a spot east in the widest part, some ten miles from land on either hand, and bearing by his pocket compass due south from another lighthouse on the north shore.

This was the exact spot where he was to—officially—drown; ten miles from the nearest land. This was the place where his two partners were to be with the launch, waiting to see him drown.

to see him—officially—drown. By the aid of a whistle fastened to his waist he could call them, and with the two candle power light from a pocket electric lamp show at intervals his whereabouts, provided a boat from the steamer did not come on the scene before the launch and thus upset all his calculations.

This would truly be sad, and would necessitate planning a new way to die. But even now his drowning might be a reality in spite of all his careful preparations.

Accordingly, to prove the judgment of his third partner to steer a launch on a course due south from their lighthouse, George made two more trips, throwing overboard at the exact spot, timed from his own lighthouse at the west end of the sound, a counterbalanced bag which floated a small electric light, and on each occasion his partners were within a half mile of the floating lamp, which they rescued and returned to George at Bridgeport on his way back to New York by rail.

The night for the real act arrived. His partners left Bridgeport in their launch upon receipt of a wire.

On the steamboat George identified himself at the office to the purser, and also at the bar. He seemed in the best of spirits and made an appointment to meet the bartender on his next trip to New York, when he would give him some valuable tips on the races.

George was so friendly that he made the acquaintance of a stranger at the bar, with whom he talked races. They made an appointment to meet in New York. After an exchange of drinks the two strolled aft on the upper deck.

He said that just now he needed the air, for it was close, so he went and sat on the side rail. A most careless thing for anyone to do unless he wishes to make a widow of an otherwise satisfied wife.

He was talking a little thick. Then after looking at his watch once more—a habit people have who have drunk too much—he returned the watch to his pocket and then—then there was a cry and a splash.

The deck, save for one or two, was deserted, and in the commotion of a man overboard it was minutes before the steamboat was stopped and more minutes before a small boat was lowered, which was then a mile or more away from the place of the accident. After a search of a half mile astern the boat returned, and the officers used rude, impolite language to express their views upon a passenger who will delay a boat's schedule by falling overboard.

The stranger was much excited, as any stranger naturally would be who had not been let into the details of the drowning act.

For the rest, there were the usual notices. The widow was notified; she promptly had hysteria and could not be seen thereafter, except by the stranger, who two days after called and extended genuine sympathy and related all he knew of the sad accident. He spoke of the appointment they had made, and he offered his services, if needed in any way. They were accepted to the extent of giving his testimony to the insurance company.

George maintained a temporary residence in Bridgeport—not that Bridgeport is a first stop between here and the hereafter, but it was just now convenient. He communicated with his widow through the third partner.

Finally, after a long delay, the company agreed to settle. Then the third partner evolved a new idea. The widow must become his wife. His wife? Why, she was the wife of George!

"George nothing. George is dead." "Yes, but we know that George is not dead."

"True, but the law, represented by the company, says he is dead. He is legally dead, and you are his widow. The company has agreed to pay. Now this is your position—my wife and forty thousand, or the wife of George and exposure."

"Do you mean—"

"Exactly," and the following day they were quietly married in Jersey City and returned to New York, where as the widow she collected her insurance of forty thousand.

Then, with her new husband, they went to an uptown hotel. On the way they discussed in low tones their plans, and agreed to bank the money the next day, he in the meantime to hold the bag in which it was carried.

George could do nothing, he assured her. He dare not even turn up in New York. She felt very sorry for George, and cried—this time because she had lost him.

They entered the hotel and she waited in the reception room while her new husband went to register his Mr. and Mrs. He still carried the bag of money.

While he was gone he developed two new ideas, both of which he put into immediate execution.

He returned to inform her that he had just sent word to George that they were married, and then he excused himself to go on another errand, leaving her thinking and blinking over this new announcement.

His exit to the street by another door caused no commotion whatever. Nor could she complain to anyone about his remaining so long.

The poor widow and poor bride waited, and if she were waiting for the return of the groom she would still be waiting. She did, however, wait a long time, until her patience was exhausted, her nerve gone, also her money, her two husbands—

NOTHING NEW IN WARFARE

Methods Employed During Great Conflict Merely Copies of Those in Use Long Ago.

By the use of trenches in the great war the opposing forces adopted means of offense and defense that long antedate the invention of firearms. The steel helmet reappeared after more than 2000 years of absence and many a soldier owes his life to the fact that the curved surface of his head-covering deflected a bullet. The trench periscope is an adaptation of a device that was invented nearly three centuries ago. The barbed wire entanglement is only another form of the ancient abatis, and the fact that it is now often painted green to make it less easy to see is a link that joins it even more intimately to its prototype. The pits with sharp spikes at the bottom and the caltrops—four-pointed iron instruments that always stand with one point upward however they may fall—are survivals of medieval warfare. The catapult of the Romans that once threw stones recently cast explosive grenades from trench to trench. The German flame projector goes back to the days when armies deluged each other with burning oil and burning pitch, and the use of poisonous gases was anticipated by the Chinese, who for centuries used "stinkpots."

Paradoxical Action.

"Why do those two speak so coolly to each other?"
"Because they've had warm words."

LESSON ENDED RIGHT THERE

Third Answer to His Question Must Have Left School Superintendent Gasping for Breath.

Superintendent of Schools Shiels Los Angeles, while endeavoring to teach a class of boys the composition of sentences, said to them:
"If I ask you 'What have I in my hand?' you answer 'A piece of chalk,' but compose a complete sentence such as, 'You have a piece of chalk in your hand.' Now we will continue.
"What have I on my feet?"
"Boots," was the immediate answer
"Wrong, you haven't listened to my directions."
"Socks," ventured another heedless one. "Wrong again; worse than ever," protested Shiels in exasperation.
"Well?" as another pupil raised his hand.
"Please, sir," then he paused. Perhaps he thought his answer might seem funny, but convinced that it was right, he gasped out recklessly "corns!"

Monkeys Die of Flu.

Monkeys are the latest victims of the Spanish influenza scourge which has been sweeping the world, according to a letter received by a resident of Albany, Ore., from a relative who is a banker in a South African city. Thousands of monkeys have perished in the forests of South Africa from influenza the latter declares. Moreover the plague is prevailing among the white and black population, with high mortality.

PEOPLE TALKED ABOUT

IS NICHOLAS ROMANOFF ALIVE?

Is Nicholas Romanoff, former Russian czar, alive or dead? Bernard Naumberg, a New York lawyer, has been named by Supreme Court Justice Benedict in Brooklyn as a committee of one to find out. The Marine Transportation Service corporation early in the war transported a large quantity of sugar to Russia on the then czar's order. Before collection was made Nicholas was deposed and, according to generally accepted reports, slain. Mr. Naumberg learned that the czar had $1,000,000 on deposit in the National City bank. He obtained a court judgment for $117,450, but upon presenting it to the bank was informed the bank could not pay out any of the fund unless Nicholas either was served with notice or proved dead. He then applied for appointment of a receiver for the fund. Justice Benedict denied the application, telling Mr. Naumberg it would be necessary first to serve Nicholas with notice or, after proving him dead, serve notice upon his next of kin. The next of kin would be his wife, if she is alive; if not, his children if alive; if not, Michael Romanoff, his brother, who at last accounts was alive.

The Giornale d'Italia of Rome prints an interview with Stefania Turr, the daughter of a Hungarian general, who quotes Prince Obolenski, former captain of the Russian imperial guard, as expressing his firm belief that the Russian royal family is still alive and "perhaps hidden in northern Russia."

OPPOSED TO LEAGUE OF NATIONS

The joint debate at Boston over the league of nations covenant between Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts and President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard university puts the former, whose portrait is given herewith, in the limelight as perhaps its foremost opponent. The debate was doubly important because of the personality of the debaters. President Lowell represents the pure student and theorist. He is author of a standard treatise on the government of England and other contributions to the science of government, which has been his special subject. He is one of America's distinguished scholars and brings to the consideration of any public question a formidable body of knowledge.

Senator Lodge, by comparison, represents the practical and realistic. He is himself a historian of note, a man of high culture and informed intelligence. And, in addition, while President Lowell has been studying the science of government, Senator Lodge has been practicing it. He was the ranking Republican member of the senate committee on foreign affairs in the last congress and will be its chairman in the next.

ARMY COURT-MARTIAL SYSTEM

Senator George E. Chamberlain of Oregon had a good deal to say in the last session of the Sixty-fifth congress in criticism of the war department and more especially of the alleged injustice of the army court-martial system. The hostilities between Senator Chamberlain and Secretary Baker have not ceased with the adjournment of congress.

In the latest encounter Secretary Baker sent a telegram to Senator Chamberlain laying the blame for failure to correct the evil in the court-martial system upon congress. He declared he had proposed a remedy a year ago, but congress had not acted. The senator promptly retaliated with a letter in which he declared Mr. Baker's remedy would have made the system "even more reactionary, if possible, than it is now." He charged that Mr. Baker's proposed remedy was not made in good faith. The senator then proceeded to cite statements recently made by Mr. Baker stanchly defending the court-martial system against the attacks by General Ansell and congress and continued:

"ARMY OF THE GREAT WAR"

The United States is to have an American association of veterans of the world war under the name of "Liberty league," "Army of the Great War," or something of the kind. A convention to be called November 11 in Chicago will pass upon various preliminary steps of organization taken in the meantime, both abroad and at home.

Six hundred "doughboys," "medics," "birdmen," engineers, artillerymen, "noncoms," captains, colonels and generals assembled in Paris and formed a tentative organization. An executive committee of six, equally divided between officers and enlisted men, was elected, with Col. Milton J. Foreman of Chicago chairman. A similar organization is being formed in this country among the soldiers who did not get overseas, under the lead of Lieut. Col. Theodore Roosevelt, whose portrait is herewith printed. A tentative constitution thus defines membership in the proposed organization: "Those eligible for membership shall be all the officers and enlisted personnel of the military and naval services of the United States at any time during the period from April 6, 1917, until November 11, 1918, excepting those persons who failed or attempted to evade the full performance of such service." The provision is interpreted as including the members of the nursing corps, girl telegraph operators and field clerks, but not the members of auxiliary welfare organizations. The Chicago convention is set for November 11, in the hope that it is sufficiently late to allow for the return of the expeditionary force.

Egyptian Girls Marry Young.

Among modern Egyptians girls generally marry when twelve or fourteen years of age; at eighteen they are regarded "unmarriageable" and "unmanageable."

True Optimism.

His Ice Cream Bucket.

They were on the back platform of an outbound Irvington street car. One was carrying a small paper bucket, which was labeled all over with the words, "Ice Cream."

From the way the other passengers eyed the bucket it was evident they either thought the ice cream season was past or wondered why the carrier hadn't bought it in Irvington instead of carrying it such a distance.

"I guess people think I'm dippy, carrying a bucket of ice cream from downtown when it can be bought out here," said the man with the bucket. "But it's not ice cream. It's chili."

"Well, they say ice cream is chilly, so you should worry" said the other. —Indianapolis News.

A Double Header.

Wesley had been told that two engines pulling one train is called a double header. Recently he attended a wedding where two sisters married two brothers, both brides being given away by their father. As the wedding procession advanced with the brides in the lead he excitedly exclaimed: "Oh, look, mamma! Here comes a double header of brides."

Had Orpheus Beaten a Mile.
"Dad," said the eight-year-old of the family, "here's a book that says that Orpheus was such a fine musician that he made trees and stones move." "Son," said father, solemnly, "your sister Bess has Orpheus beaten. Her piano playing has made twenty families move out of this building in the last three months."

The National Capital.

The site of Washington city as the national capital was selected in 1791, the corner stone of the capitol was laid in 1793 and congress met there for the first time in November, 1800. Prior to that congress had met at Philadelphia, New York, Baltimore, Lancaster, York, Princeton, Annapolis and Trenton.

Poachers Kill Off Big Game.

Pisgah forest, United States government preserve and one of the few remaining big game sections of the country, is about to be denuded of its game by poachers, according to statements by Rudolph Diefenbach, forest supervisor. WOMAN WORKS 15 HOURS A DAY

Marvelous Story of Woman's Change from Weakness to Strength by Taking Druggist's Advice.

Peru, Ind.—"I suffered from a displacement with backache and dragging down pains so badly that at times I could not be on my feet and it did not seem as though I could stand it. I tried different medicines without any benefit and several doctors told me nothing but an operation would do me any good. My druggist told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it with the result that I am now well and strong. I get up in the morning at four o'clock, do my housework, then go to a factory and work all day, come home and get supper and feel good. I don't know how many of my friends I have told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—Mrs. ANNA METERIANO, 36 West 10th St., Peru, Ind.

Women who suffer from any such ailments should not fail to try this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Ought To. "Why do the market reports sometimes say that wheat is nervous?" asked Lucy. "I know," said little Willie, quickly. "It is because they thrash it."

I grew so weak I couldn't eat, and so dizzy and faint and every time I stood on my feet I had the most miserable and heavy feeling in the lower part of my body.

I began on Cardui. It strengthened me after a few doses and diminished the . . . after the first bottle. I commenced to feel better. I regained my appetite . . . I took the Cardui right along . . . I am well and strong. That has been four years. I can do all my work and feel fine."

American Triumph.

Before the war, exports in dyestuffs from the United States were $500,000 a year. In 1918 the figures ran to $17,000,000. American textile manufacturers, when the war broke out, were panic-stricken, because they believed that Germany was the only country that could produce fine dyes. American chemists, however, came to the rescue and are now producing dyes better than the German.

For Colds, Catarrh or influenza

Do you feel weak and unequal to the work ahead of you? Do you still cough a little, or does your nose bother you? Are you pale? Is your blood thin and watery? Better put your body into shape. Build strong!

An old, reliable blood-maker and herbal tonic made from wild roots and barks, is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This "nature remedy" comes in tablet or liquid form. It will build up your body, cure your cold, and protect you from disease germs which lurk everywhere. One of the active ingredients of this temperance alternative and tonic is wild cherry bark with stillingia, which is so good for the lungs and for coughs; also Oregon grape root, blood root, stone root, Queen's root, — all skillfully combined in the Medical Discovery. These roots have a direct action on the stomach, improving digestion and assimilation. These herbal extracts in the "Discovery" aid in blood-making, and are best for scrofula. By improving the blood they aid in throwing off an attack of influenza.

Catarrh should be treated, first, as a blood disease, with this alternative. Then, in addition, the nose should be washed daily with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. Send 10c for trial pkg. of Medical Discovery Tablets or Catarrh Tablets to Dr. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

MILITARY DEFEAT HAS WROUGHT NO CHANGE OF HEART IN GERMANY

Dr. Alonzo Taylor Investigates Conditions in Land of Hun—Same Old Gang in Government Offices—Take Attitude That They Are Much Abused Nation—Believe Themselves Guilty of No Misdeeds.

By LLOYD ALLEN,
Western Newspaper Union Staff Correspondent.

Paris.—That Germany has experienced no change of heart as a result of her military defeat is the message Dr. Alonzo Taylor has just brought to Paris after three weeks in Germany, where he inspected the food supply, the stocks of raw materials, briefly, and made a remarkably concise survey of the political and economic situation.

Probably no one in America was better fitted to size up Germany than Doctor Taylor.

While America was neutral, during those first months of the great war, Taylor was traveling through the length and breadth of Germany inspecting the allied prison camps. He was attached to the American embassy. He gained, during the days before we were in the war, an intimate knowledge of German war methods, German official procedure, German intrigue, German lies, German cruelty, and came to know all about the condition of economic Germany.

You would never pick Taylor out of a crowd as one of our leading Americans, because he does not look like a statesman, a college professor, a political economist, or a diplomat—and he is all of these things.

When he hurried out of Mr. Hoover's office in the Hotel de Crillon, on his return from Germany, Taylor carried, without a passport, into the heart of his talk with a group of American newspaper men that had assembled to learn the truth about the Germans. He actually talked one hour and forty-five minutes. He answered half a hundred questions.

"Same Old Gang."

"They've got the same old gang in the government offices at Berlin that we knew before and during the war," Taylor began. "Some kind of a revolution actually started in Germany before the armistice was signed. For the time being that revolution is being held up. The politicians are bending every effort to get a governmental machine working smoothly, in order to present some kind of a solid front to the allies when the time comes to settle final peace terms. While the government is shaping itself the old civil servants are being kept in the government offices. The men in control do not intend taking untrained men into the government, because they have the concrete example of the failure of the Russian government that took untrained officials into the government machine. The Germans in control won't allow Germany's government to fall to pieces like the Russian government."

As soon as peace is actually declared the Germans will start out settling their internal difficulties and can be expected to introduce many socialistic reforms—possibly the socialization of many of the leading industries, such as the large factory groups and the coal and potash and iron mines. In the meantime, the men in control at Berlin are endeavoring to get their people back to work, back to the industrious and non-political ways of 50 years ago before the militaristic crowd started preaching world conquest and "kulturation" of the globe.

Militarism is Gone.

And it is now appreciated that the Germans have a long way to go before they come out of this war experience as even a half-way decent nation.

Militarism as a world menace in Germany is gone, Doctor Taylor believes. He found sufficient evidence to satisfy him that the German army of the old days is a thing of the past.

As to the men at the helm in Berlin who are trying to solve the present urgent problems of the country—they have had no change of heart, no conversion to the doctrines of President Wilson unless they are permitted to retain their original boundaries.

Falling to hoodwink the world into giving them territory that never belonged to them rightfully, the Germans are going to take the attitude that they are a much abused nation. And they are going to hint broadly that no good can come of abusing a nation of 70,000,000 people. In fact, they are already beginning a propaganda to make their people believe the allies are eager for an unjust peace.

Non Compos Mentis.

Today the German has figured out a kind of new philosophy of life. He wants to eat his cake and have it too. He admits that he would have been overjoyed had the central powers won the war and enslaved the world. He sees no wrong in a kulturized world. He believes that any means the military party took to win the war, no matter how cruel, and no matter what suffering these methods caused innocent populations, were justified.

Now that the Germans have been defeated and see some of their stealings of the past half century going out of their hands, they say, "The military party deceived us," and then take the attitude that they are not to blame for present misfortunes.

In other words, had the military party succeeded in defeating the allied nations and the United States the German people would have taken the spoils and admit that they would have levied terrible peace terms on their vanquished enemies. Now they are defeated they refuse to shoulder any of the blame for the situation. And they are going to believe that they are abused if Alsace-Lorraine is given to France.

Believe Selves Guiltless.

The widespread belief that the Germans themselves are guilty of no misdeeds is being emphasized by a new school of writers who first came into prominence about the time President Wilson gave the world the covenant of the league of nations at Paris. What astounded Americans in Germany in those days was the fact that these very writers admitted with perfect candor that Germany intended keeping Belgium permanently, had Germany won the war.

Topics such as these occupied the German mind when the peace conference was making its preliminary survey of European affairs. While German papers printed columns about the probable outcome of the peace conference there were 238,000 men in Berlin without jobs drawing a pension of six marks a day from the government. In Hamburg the pension roll amounted to 78,000. Both figures represent a state of unemployment several times greater than the worst periods of industrial depression Germany ever knew before the war.

The men were being paid just enough to live on, and as a consequence would not work.

Hate for Kaiser.

Among the intellectual circles in Germany the blame for the silent rebellion of the workmen, their refusal to work, was placed on the military party—on old Von Tirpitz, and on Ludendorff, and some more of the war lords. The Kaiser and his son, the crown prince, were generally despised. Both ran away when trouble started and were hated for that. But the people of Germany were not disposed to blame either the crown prince or the Kaiser for starting the war.

"Both of them lack the brains to plan a war," was the common expression heard on the streets and reflected in a number of the newspapers.

Doctor Taylor had one general explanation for Germany's strangely perverted state of mind.

"Germany today is suffering from an intense moral disintegration," he declared. "You see it in a dozen different phases of German life. Men who served in the army and are now demobilized, though still in uniform, will leave their families for days at a time—simply wander off without warning. They seem to have lost their sense of responsibility toward their families.

"There are comparatively few producers in the population, most of the people being spenders; spenders of the government's printed money.

"In the Berlin playhouses shows are running which are of such a low moral level that no American postal authority would permit even private letters to describe some of the scenes. Before the war such shows were not permitted.

"Robberies have increased greatly. The people blame the bolsheviks, but know in their own minds that these crimes might well enough be committed by anyone—because the increase in crime is one of the notable phases of life in Germany today."

In all Germany there is no danger of a rehabilitation of the military machine, according to Doctor Taylor. This view is verified by other Americans competent to judge, who have just returned from the other side of the Rhine.

Without desiring in any way to antagonize the French, who are carrying on an active campaign preaching

Committee to Help Soldiers Get Jobs

Washington, D. C.—Governmental agencies called together by the council of national defense organized the emergency committee on employment for soldiers and sailors as a step toward filling a gap caused by demobilization of 80 per cent of the field force of the United States employment service, for which congress failed to provide funds.

A committee on plans was appointed to collect immediately all available information as to work being done and prepare a comprehensive plan of operations.

Grosvenor B. Clarkson, director of the council, is chairman, the other members being Col. Arthur Woods, special assistant to the secretary of war; John W. Hallowell of Boston, and E. H. Greenwood of the council.

Colonel Woods told the committee: "Many of the men feel that they have been improved by their experience in the army and are ambitious for something better than before. I feel that this ambition should be encouraged."

The possibility of Germany "coming back," Doctor Taylor and his associates believe firmly that the German is finished in a military way; that the German people are disgusted with the "star" idea, which has brought them nothing but misery and hunger, and just about all other things the French, and of course the other allied nations and America, are not in any danger of a resumption of the war.

This does not mean that any amiable feeling is growing among the American officials here in Paris toward the Germans, and it does not mean that an unfriendliness toward the French people is developing. The Americans who have been in Germany and who know the Germans from long experience before as well as during the war, are convinced that the German today is the same swine he was in and before 1914.

Doctor Taylor and Dr. Vernon Kellogg, also of the Hoover staff and competent to speak of the situation in Germany, are both of the opinion that Germany has no great amount of manufactured goods waiting to be shipped to the markets of the world ahead of allied goods.

It now seems that the economic blockade that shut raw materials from Germany during the last two years of war just about finished the nation in an industrial way.

URGES 13 MONTHS !! YEAR

Cincinnati Man Brings Forward His Plan for Simple Perpetual Calendar.

Cincinnati.—"Printed calendars would be a thing of the past if the perpetual calendar were adopted," said C. B. Braunstein, who has a plan for simplifying dates.

"Let the year be divided into 13 months of 28 days each. This would make 364 days. As there are 365 1/4 days in a year, the odd day could be placed anywhere in the calendar and be a 'universal thanksgiving day.' The other extra day would come every fourth year and could be placed after the last day in leap year and be known as 'Zero day,' 'Leap Year day' or 'Gala day.'"

"Under this plan Monday would always come on the 1st, 8th, 15th and 22d days of the month; Tuesday on the 2d, 9th, 16th and 23d; Wednesday on the 3d, 10th, 17th, 24th; Thursday on the 4th, 11th, 18th, 25th; Friday on the 5th, 12th, 19th, 26th; Saturday on the 6th, 13th, 20th, 27th; Sunday on the 7th, 14th, 21st, 28th. Everybody would know upon what date any day of the week would fall."

Frocks for Little Girls

The very pretty styles in dresses for little girls have tempted many mothers this spring into buying ready-made outfits for their small daughters. The utmost that can be done with gingham, chambrays, dimities, and all the thin white fabrics as well, has been done by the designers of these enticing frocks, and that is saying a great deal. Busy mothers of to-day, no matter how exacting their taste in clothes, are able to buy an entire outfit for the little girl's summer wardrobe; for among the displays there are frocks of all varieties of material in abundance of differing designs and prices.

There is a saving of the cost of labor in making children's frocks at home and this is an item that is considered in many households where the sewing is done by members of the family. The three pretty dresses shown here are examples of good designing and the materials they are made of may be found in all dry goods stores. They are not at all difficult to make. One of the frocks is a checked gingham with a white ground and crossbar in a color. Light green, pink, maize and blue are the most popular color combinations with white, but there are tan and white, red and white, lavender and white, and others to select from. The gingham frock is made with a plain waist and short sleeves. It has a "baby" neck, with a wide plaited frill of organdie and a surplice front with a short band set on it having three flat buttons at each end. Dimity or an English print will make a pretty frock like the figured cotton dress pictured. This also has a plain waist with a wide frill of the goods and a sailor collar with a narrow lace about the edge. Flat tabs stitched to the waist at each side make a very neat finish besides adding strength and durability to the dress.

There are many sorts of white goods that will serve to make the white frock shown in the picture. The box-plait at each side and short sleeves, odd pockets and organdie collar and cuffs, decorated with fancy stitching, make this pretty model interesting.

Covert Cloth Popular.
Covert cloth riding habits are said to be the thing for the coming season.

Ruffles and Frills.
Blouses except for sport wear show more and more ruffles and frills.

A Charm to Summer

There is a lot of satisfaction in a plain and becoming silk hat, and they are made in many shapes of different character so that every one may be suited. They tide one over from season to season, and stand a little buffeting by the weather, without much injury. They are always ready for motoring, traveling by land, and make a good sea-going bit of headwear. One smart silk hat at the beginning of the spring season will prove a good millinery investment. Two of these silk hats are shown here, with a third hat of hair braid, very different from them in every way.

A pretty tam of navy blue taffeta places itself in the ranks of jaunty shapes, with a small tam crown placed at a rakish angle on a wide head band. This model is shown with narrow braid of silk or chenille, couched on in a crossbar pattern as pictured, or having this decoration replaced with narrow, crossbar tucks. A long silk tassel at the side dangles in the most irresponsible manner possible. This is a saucy hat. The other model in black taffeta is much more dignified. It has a brim covered with kulfe-plated silk and a full, soft draped crown. Its trimming is a short length of silk fringe set on at the side of the top crown. This is a sensible and serviceable hat made on a becoming shape.

The remaining example of headwear for summer is a wide-brimmed hair braid model made with a bandeau of the braid. It has a wide flange of georgette about the under-brim, and is made in white and light pastel colors with the flange matching the braid. Velvet ribbon is extended from the top of the hat to the bandeau and there is a wreath of flowers about the crown. Once more we have flower trimmed millinery along with other revivals of beautiful styles of the past. Hats like this add a charm to summer.

The principal feature of georgette dresses for spring is their loose, almost sloppy looking blouse waists.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects uric acid troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Adv.

HOW CAN YOU TELL YOUR FAVORITE TOBACCO?

As Plain as the Nose on Your Face—Just Smell It

Smokers do not have to put tobacco in their pipes to find out if they like it. They can just rub the tobacco between the palms of their hands and smell it. The nose is an infallible guide to smoking enjoyment.

All smoking tobaccos employ some flavoring "to improve the flavour and burning qualities of the leaves", to quote the Encyclopedia Britannica. Naturally, there is considerable difference in the kind of flavorings used, and the nose quickly detects this difference. TUXEDO Tobacco uses the purest, most wholesome, and delicious of all flavorings—chocolate. And the almost universal liking for chocolate in a great measure explains the widespread popularity of TUXEDO Tobacco.

Carefully aged, old Burley tobacco, plus a dash of pure chocolate, gives TUXEDO Tobacco a pure fragrance your nose can quickly distinguish from any other tobacco. Try it and see.

Miss Maud Dotson Married
To Mr. Kearby Nash

Sunday afternoon at three o'clock, Miss Maud Dotson of Olton, was married to Mr. Kearby Nash of this city.

The marriage was to have taken place at the home of the bride's parents, but owing to the rain and the condition of the roads, the ceremony was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Brashear in this city.

Dr. E. E. Robinson, pastor of the Methodist church sealed the vows. The bride and groom entered to the strains of Mendelsson's wedding march played by Miss Brashear and stood before a back ground of ferns and flowers. The bride was gowned in white Georgette crepe with becoming accessories.

An ice course was served the bride and groom and immediate relatives, who were the only guests present.

The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Dotson of Olton, and is one of the most popular girls in that community. She is prominent in musical and social circles. Mr. Nash is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Nash of Plainview, and has recently returned from Suffolk, Va., where he was employed by the Ulen Contracting Co.

For the present Mr. and Mrs. Nash are at home at the R. E. Mitchell home, 401 West Eleventh street.

The presents were packed in a large hamper and distributed amidst exclamations of delight from the guest of honor and her coterie of friends. Later, refreshments of tea and cake were served.
