A VERY NEEDFUL PRAYER

Show me thy ways, O Lord; teach me thy paths. Let integrity and uprightness preserve me: for I wait on thee.—Psalms 25:4, 21.

Lord, we are thankful unto Thee! For conscience and its voice of awe, Thy whisper when we break Thy law, For knowledge of Thy power divine, And wisdom mighty as benign; For all we are and hope to be, Lord, we are thankful unto Thee! —Charles Mackay.

Our Father and our God, we thank Thee for the sublime virtue of gratitude. We are grateful for gratitude itself, since we realize that it is a foundational and fundamental virtue. We know that without grateful hearts we can not draw nigh Thee.

We are glad that we have been admonished to be grateful in our prayers to Thee—"With thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God." It is he who prays with thanksgiving who receives the blessing, and it is he who appreciates it.

We thank Thee, our Father that thou hast given us talents and the means by which we can soften the sorrows of those about us; that it is our joy and privilege to comfort those we love in their troubles and sorrows; that we may remind them of Thy mercy, which endureth forever; that all those who really trust in Thee shall be rewarded for such trust, here and now; that Thou wilt reach down Thy right hand and uphold and strengthen them, for "The Lord's hand is not shortened that it can not save, nor His ear heavy that He can not hear."

We rejoice to know that we do not have to die to be happy, for not only "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord . . . that they may rest from their labours; and their works do follow them," but blessed are the living that live in the Lord, that they do not want to rest from their labors or doing good, for they know that therein shall they be blessed here and now; that they have joy in drying the tears of sorrow, in comforting the broken-hearted, in encouraging the depressed and disheartened, and pointing them to Thee, for we know that Thou art "a very present help in trouble," and we pray that such shall become ever conscious that they should be just as grateful to Thee when not beset by woe and difficulty as when they are not troubled.

Most of all, Our Father, we thank Thee for the gift of Thy precious Son, the Savior of the world. We thank Thee that we know Him as the Prince of Peace; that even now do we see manifestations of His teachings on every hand; that there are now gathered at the Capital of this great nation representatives of the great nations of the earth in an effort to at least begin that great movement which shall bring about peace throughout the world, which under Thy guidance and blessing shall usher in the time that it was prophesied would be brought about by Him when it was said, "And he shall rebuke among the nations, and shall rebuke many people; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up sword against nation neither shall they learn war any more." Oh, we thank Thee for this beginning of what we all pray shall be the end of the awful barbarity and terror of war—the slaughter of Thy children by Thy children. Surely the time must not be far distant when he who shall advocate such slaughter shall find no one who will bear him company, and that soon

Be thou, O God, with us in our sufferings, from sin, for there is none who do not sin, for "all have sinned and come short of the glory of God." Be with those who sin by doing those things which encourage others to sin, by standing by and encouraging or permitting without protest the doing of those things which can but result in wrong—those who hold the coats of the mob while they stone Stephen. Let them not become hardened in their hearts and repeat their wrongdoing and thereby suffer still greater sorrows. Let us realize, as sooner or later we must, that there is no real joy in material pleasure; not only so, but at last they bite like serpents and sting like scorpions. And oh, how thankful, how deeply grateful, we are that we have the promises: "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool. Let the wicked forsake his way, and the unrighteous man his thoughts; and let him return unto the Lord and he will have mercy upon him; and to our God, for he will abundantly pardon." "Praise ye the Lord."—Dallas News.

GOD'S PLAN FOR DISARMAMENT

The Vision Many nations shall come, and say, Come and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths.

And he shall judge among the people and rebuke strong nations afar off and they shall beat their swords into plough-shares, and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.

But they shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree; and none shall make them afraid; for the mouth of the Lord of Hosts hath spoke it.—Micah iv. 2-4.

The Omnipotent Ruler Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end.

I am God, and there is none else. Unto me every knee shall bow.—Isaiah ix: 6, 7 and xlv:22, 23.

The Law of Love We have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbor, and hate thine enemy. But I say unto you, Love your enemies; bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you. Matthew v: 43-44.

The Proclamation Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men.—Luke ii:14.

The Benediction The God of Peace make you perfect in every good work to do his will, working in you that which is well pleasing in his sight.—Hebrews, xii: 20-21.

Attorney General C. M. Cureton has been appointed by Gov. Neff to be chief justice of the state supreme court. The appointment is an excellent one. Mr. Cureton is a very able lawyer, and excellent man. He will grace the high position.

The super-battleship, the West Virginia, was launched Saturday. When completed it will cost the government $43,000,000. This money would build 8,600 homes costing $5,000 each, about the number of homes in El Paso or Galveston. Besides, each day it will cost a fortune to man and keep the ship in commission. In ten years it will have to be destroyed, as it will then become obsolete. It is hoped that the present arms convention will agree on disarmament, and the West Virginia will not then be completed.

It is said that Chauncey M. Depew, put $100 in a savings bank in Peekskill, N. Y., in 1860. It was the first $100 he had saved, and, in spite of temptations, he refused to draw upon it. As he became prosperous he had no need to draw it out and finally he forgot about it, and the $100 continued to draw interest, compounded quarterly and to mount higher and higher. Not long ago, Senator Depew entered the Peekskill bank to greet some old friends and was reminded of his "nest egg." He found his original deposit of $100 had grown to be $800 and, because of the long time it had been undisturbed, had achieved the distinction of being the bank's star account. Had Mr. Depew placed $100 a year in the bank, which is a small sum for a person to save in twelve months, the interest by now would have of itself netted him quite a fortune. A little money saved regularly and put at interest soon grows to large proportions. Saving and thrift should be the rule with everybody.

Railroads Want Wages Cut Seventy-five railroads in the western district have notified their employees that they will ask the Railroad Labor Board for permission to reduce wages. The Pennsylvania Railroad advised employees that it would ask for a reduction in wages but would not put the reduction into effect without the approval of the Railroad Labor Board. As the other roads probably will follow the Pennsylvania's lead, it is unlikely that the wage question will precipitate another strike order soon, since the Labor Board has enough work to keep it busy for several months without taking up requests in this connection is an announcement from the Association of Railway Executives, Washington, to the effect that the railroads earned $87,174,000 net during September, or at the rate of 4.6 per cent annually. Increasing traffic also is reported. The executives point out, however, that the roads failed to earn expenses in the early part of the year, earnings for the year to date being approximately 3 per cent.

ENTANGLING ALLIANCES

George Washington

Washington refused to be a candidate for a third term of the presidency; and, in May, 1796, he sent to Hamilton a rough draft of his farewell address, asking for his criticism. After much revision by both, the document was published Sep. 19th, and was read to the house of representatives. The advice contained in it has ever since exercised a profound influence on the policy of the nation. Washington says in part:

The great rule of conduct for us in regard to foreign nations is in extending our commercial relations, to have with them as little political connection as possible. So far as we have already formed engagements, let them be fulfilled with perfect good faith. Here let us stop.

Europe has a set of primary interests, which to us have none, or a very remote relation. Hence she must be engaged in frequent controversies, the cause of which are essentially foreign to our concerns. Hence, therefore, it must be unwise in us to implicate ourselves by artificial ties in the ordinary vicissitudes of her politics or the ordinary combinations and collisions of her friendships, or enmities.

Our detached and distant situation invites and enables us to pursue a different course. If we remain one people under an efficient government, the period is not far off when we may defy material injury from external annoyance; when we may take such an attitude as will cause the neutrality we may at any time resolve upon to be scrupulously respected. When belligerent nations, under the impossibility of making acquisitions upon us, will not likely hazard the giving us provocation when we may choose peace or war; as our interest, gained by justice, shall counsel.

Why forego the advantages of so peculiar a situation? Why quit our own to stand upon foreign soil? Why by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambition, rivalry, interest, humor, or caprice?

'Tis our true policy to steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world; so far, I mean, as we are now at liberty to do it; for let me not be understood as capable of patronizing in fidelity to existing engagements. But in my opinion it is unnecessary and would be unwise to extend them.

Taking care always to keep ourselves, by suitable establishments, on a respectable defensive posture, we may safely trust to temporary alliances for extraordinary emergencies. Harmony, liberal intercourse with all nations, are recommended by policy, humanity, and interest. But even our commercial policy should hold an equal and impartial hand; neither seeking nor granting exclusive favors or preferences; consulting the natural course of things.

In offering to you, my countrymen, these counsels of an old and affectionate friend, I dare not hope they will make the strong and lasting impression I could wish, that they will control the usual current of the passions, or prevent our nation from running the course which has hitherto marked the destiny of nations. But if I may even flatter myself that they may be productive of some partial benefit; some occasional good, that they may now and then occur to moderate the fury of party spirit, to warn against the mischiefs of pretended patriotism, this hope will be a full recompense for the solicitude of your welfare, by which they have been dictated.

Mr. Harold Boyce and Miss Doletta Sey of Silverton were married Nov. 6.

OLD GOBBLER KEPT PEACE

Intelligence Displayed by Turkey Proved Him the "Right Bird in the Right Place."

Unlike the ordinary run of turkeys, Ben, a mammoth bronze gobbler that one of our contributors owned, had a great deal of sense. One day, our friend writes, our nearest neighbor's entire flock of turkeys invaded our farmyard and soon started a "free-for-all" fight with our birds. The two old gobblers engaged in combat; young gobblers fought young gobblers; and old turkey hens clashed.

A week later one of the women of our family saw the same flock coming down the road, and ours going across the farmyard apparently to meet them. She turned back into the house to get her sunbonnet and the broom, but when she went out not one of the home flock was in sight. A moment later Ben emerged alone from behind the big straw stack in the barnyard, crossed the yard and met the intruders. Seizing the leader firmly by the neck, he marched him up the road toward his home. The visitor's numerous family, evidently too much astonished to do anything else, meekly followed.

Looking behind the straw stack, she saw Ben's flock crouched perfectly still in the straw. Not one of them stirred or made a sound until Ben returned and led them into the farmyard, where he strutted proudly before them with the air of one who had done his duty well. Could anyone have handled a difficult situation more intelligently? —Youth's Companion.

SNOW PENITENTS OF ANDES

Remarkable Illusion Which is Brought About by the Action of the Elements.

In the higher Andes of Argentina and Chile, within a very limited region, where there is a polar climate in which no human beings can dwell, the so-called Snow Penitents assemble.

The traveler comes unexpectedly upon a great throng of them, gathered on the barren slope of a mountain peak. Seen from a little distance, they have the appearance of a crowd of hooded monks, all in white and kneeling in serried lines. It is a remarkable illusion, for the "monks" are not human at all, nor alive. Each one of them is a block of snow and ice. One theory of this phenomenon is that the fallen snow may be of uneven density and that the powerful rays of an overhead sun first melt those parts of it around the denser spots, leaving the latter still frozen, to assume the form of snow men.

As the snow continues to melt, water trickling down from the blocks may help to deepen the surrounding hollows, while prevented from accumulating in the latter by the slope of the mountains. The arrangement of the white figures in rows may be explained by the slope, the water all draining in one direction. This, however, is only one of several theories offered in explanation of the "Snow of the Penitents," as it is called in that part of the world.

Retired Persons.
The proverbial "busman's holiday" is nothing to that of the man who retires from business. Some months ago the manager of a London bank retired. Since then he has looked in most days "just to see how they are getting on." Equally bad is the case of a provincial theater manager, an old actor well known in London's theatrical world. He also retired, bidding his staff a long farewell with much emotion. It was understood he was going to live in a quiet little place in Surrey. A fortnight later he turned up in his old theater as director of a traveling company. Worst of all was the impotence of a printer, who, after being pensioned, appeared every morning at the office door at the usual time to watch the others go in to work. Nor did he come to go out. He envied.—London Times.

Origin of Gunpowder.
The Chinese were long credited with the invention of gunpowder, but not long ago evidence was adduced to indicate that the Arabians did not, as commonly supposed, introduce gunpowder into Europe during the Eighth and Ninth centuries. It is believed by the most competent authorities now that the manufacture of the first gunpowder was based upon the "Fire Book" of Marcust Graecus, which appeared in Constantinople about the middle of the Thirteenth century. This was the source from which Robert Bacon, Albertus Magnus and Thomas Aquinas derived their knowledge of gunpowder. The first use of gunpowder to drive projectiles is ascribed to a monk, Berthold Schwartz, whose discovery was made accidentally while preparing the mixture for medicinal purposes.

Tribute to Laughter.
Every giggle is worth a thousand dollars if not more. A good genuine laugh is worth a thousand. Doctors recognize the medicinal value of laughter. It is a tonic that benefits both body and mind. A hearty laugh is an aid to digestion. While the movies are capable of putting over many funny scenes and situations, I believe that the best laugh of all is that which follows a bit of cleverness in spoken lines. The ear seems to record faster than the eye; that is why the spoken jest gets over quicker than the one that must be read. Yet no matter how it is produced, the laugh is the king of all things always.—Exchange.

THE MORE EMOTIONAL

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt Contradicts Opinion Long Held as to Qualities of Sexes.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the International Equal Suffrage association, has a theory that men are more emotional than women, in illustration of which she tells the following story, according to the New York Sun:

"I once visited a small village in New England which was bordered by a small river, so that farmers coming into the village from either way had to ford the stream.

"Year after year the town meeting debated laying a bridge over the stream, but it was always decided that local finances would not stand the additional strain of the necessary tax, and that the farmers would just have to wait until the stream got low in the spring and then ford, as usual.

"One year, shortly after this annual decision, an elderly village pauper died. He was a veteran of the Civil war, but the village folk had never paid any attention to him in his life. They had never tried to find out what they could do to help him to a better way of life nor contributed in any way to his well-being. However, as soon as he died, the town began to have a tender conscience about the manner of his burial. They were unwilling that the man they had neglected all his life should have a pauper burial. So they tried to hire a hearse from a nearby town to give him what they call a christian burial. Not being able to hire a hearse, they decided they ought to have a hearse of their own, and consequently they bought one costing several hundred dollars.

"Then they said: 'What good is a hearse without horses?' And so they bought horses. And then they said, 'Now, that we've a hearse and horses, we must have a place to keep them,' and so built a stable and carriage house for the horses and the hearse. Altogether the expenditure was very much greater than would have been necessary for the bridge, and all because they had emotionally decided that they must give what they regarded as a fine burial for a man whom they had never helped to happiness while he was living."

If there are any men present when Mrs. Catt relates this instance of the emotional qualities of men she always smiles agreeably and adds:

"Although I am quite convinced that men as a whole are more emotional than women, of course, there are exceptions."

Bottled Fireflies Lure Fish.

Anyone would have supposed that fish were immune to demoralization of modern scientific progress, but even fishing is coming under the sway of advanced and entirely original ideas of bait and fish hooks.

Izaak Walton would have shuddered at the thought of using the storage battery in the tail of a firefly to lure why bass at night, yet the contrivance has been used to good advantage by William P. Osborne of the New York State College of Forestry.

By imprisoning fireflies in a small glass vial and rigging the container with an ingenious arrangement of hooks, black bass have been found to succumb to the scintillations of the insects and to swallow with great rapidity hook, line and sinker.

An ordinary tubular pill bottle is fitted with a harness to which are fastened three pronged hooks, two on the sides and one on the end. The bottle is then equipped with a swivel similar to that used on a wooden minnow. Four or five good-sized fireflies are placed in the bottle and the bottle sealed.—Milwaukee Journal.

Vienna Still a Music Center.

About the only thing that may be said to flourish in the Austrian capital these days is music. Despite the hard times and the almost worthlessness of Austrian money, the concerts are largely patronized. The capacity of the concert halls is taxed to the utmost. Music-making starts early in the day and lasts till night, one hall frequently having as many as five concerts in one day. And most of the halls are sold out, although where the money comes from is somewhat of a mystery.

This artistic life speaks well for Vienna as a music center, as that city is attracting not only native talent, but musical artists from many outside countries. Even Sweden is sending musicians, and a seventeen-year-old Chilean boy pianist was a recent artist who took that city by storm.

Progress in New Guinea.

It is 13 years ago that Zahn of the Evangelical Lutheran synod went to New Guinea and began his work among the natives, who were then largely heathen. There were many cannibals in the territory. A letter recently received from Morobe, shows wonderful spiritual progress. A large proportion of the islanders have renounced heathenism and given up their instruments of witchcraft. It is estimated that 8,000 of them have been received into the Christian church.

Aerial Mail Service.

Ecuador and Nicaragua are establishing aerial mail service, and in China 40 planes are operating 800 miles from Shanghai to Peking, according to the Nation's Business. Passengers and parcels are carried as well as postal matter and on letters thus delivered in Old Cathay are stamps bearing by way of fitting contrast a

MYSTERY OF LOST ATLANTIS

Believed by Many to Be Merely Legend, but Idea Can Not Be Entirely Uprooted.

Will the mystery of "lost Atlantis" ever be solved to general satisfaction? The story has been told for centuries, and is still accepted as true by numbers of people on both sides of the Atlantic.

The original idea was that an island of immense size and great beauty existed beyond Africa, with many large cities, and nations having strange laws and customs. Some writers have even gone so far as to describe the kind of clothing the people wore and the money they used.

Then the story goes that the inhabitants of this great island of Atlantis grew bold and warlike, and that they invaded Europe and Africa. But fate was unkind to them—because of their wickedness, it is said; terrible earthquakes and floods occurred, and in a single day and night Atlantis was swallowed up and sank into the depths of the Atlantic ocean.

In the attempt to find some ground for the persistent belief, one famous scientist fell back upon the time, thousands of years ago, when great tracts of the earth were covered with a sheet of ice of vast thickness.

In this ice were imprisoned such enormous quantities of water that the level of the oceans sank quite low, with the result that large areas of land were left uncovered. One of these uncovered portions, he suggested, was the island or continent of Atlantis, which, on the melting of the ice, was covered again by water to a great depth.

The western mountains of Europe and the eastern mountains of North America are supposed to be fragments of the high mountain ranges of this mysterious "lost Atlantis."

Pig Clubs Flourish.

Wall Street has many club and fraternity men, but probably no members of the Pig club. Indeed, such a club could not flourish in lower New York. Yet, it is one of the greatest clubs in the country. The promoters are usually country banks. Membership is obtained by borrowing money from the bank to buy a pig of distinguished ancestry. Little freckle-faced farm boys make up the membership. The notes are always paid in full and the embryo farmer becomes a producer of thoroughbred live stock. One little member in Oklahoma who started with a pig and a debt at the bank recently walked out of the fairground with a big cash prize in his pocket, and now he owns a herd of purebred Poland China's and a bank account. The Middle West is swarming with such members and still new clubs are forming. Wall Street is interested because in one year the packers alone paid the farmers $1,758,000,000 for hogs, and these little club members are adding immensely to the value of the future production.—Wall Street Journal.

Dunsany a Fast Writer.

Lord Dunsany, who, despite the slump in theaterland, has had a new play produced in London recently, appears to be well nigh as facile a playwright as Lope de Vega, remarks the Manchester Guardian. From the preface to "Plays of Birds and Men" we learn that the longest of these, a three-act tragedy, took him only three days to write; a two-act play took two days; a one-act play one day. The time allowance of an act a day was exceeded only in the case of "The Queen's Enemies," the single act of which took six days, and most readers of the volume will agree that it is the least effective play of the four. Mr. Pond, the lecture agent under whose auspices Lord Dunsany toured the States two years ago, says: "To see Lord Dunsany at work—a thing which he seldom permits—is to see a ceremonial. He uses large, square-cut enameled paper, and he writes with a quill pen. On one side he has a great stack of fresh blotters, and when he finishes a page he blots it and throws the blotter away."

Farm on End of Lake.

It seemed impossible to read the heading, "A Cultivated Lake," without wondering whether any of the inhabitants of the lake were cultured, like some oysters. The lake in question is Lake Cirnitz in mid-eastern Europe. The most cultured occupants turned out to be the human beings who sow and harvest on the lake bottom in summer, the waters having departed suddenly through great fissures in the bed of the lake. In the autumn the waters return as rapidly as they went, throwing up cascades of foam as if from blowholes. Presumably the lake is fed in winter by water coming to it underground from a body of water higher in the mountains and, in turn, empties into some lower lying basin.—Christian Science Monitor.

Oysters' Liver Complaint.

Two professors in physics at London university, England, are conducting exhaustive tests on behalf of the Daily Mail, with a view to finding a possible difference between ordinary and Japanese pearls. A Japanese pearl is produced by inserting a seed pearl or mother of pearl into the liver of the oyster.

Mr. Alfred E. Calvert, a fellow of the chemical society, stated recently that the several specimens of Japanese pearls he possesses are identical in weight, color and luster with ordinary pearls, and they are produced by the oyster from the same material

Big Results From A Small Outlay of Money

The News carries the largest volume of Want Ads of any paper in this section. There is a reason for this, for if satisfactory results were not obtained people would not continue to spend their money for Want Ads in this paper.

The News is read by more farmers and other people in Plainview trade territory than any other newspaper, and these people buy lots of things. They sell lots of things. They rent rooms and houses, etc.

A Want Adv. in the News costs only 15c for fifteen words and 1c for each additional word, but it is read by possibly six to eight thousand people. Isn't that very cheap publicity? Can you beat it?

If you have anything to sell or trade, a room or house or farm to rent, there is something you want to buy or trade for; something lost or found; a cow or horse strayed, some notice you wish to give publicity to, you will get results if you use the News Want columns.

All Children in the Charles Page Home Have Been Adopted By Their Benefactor

At Sand Springs, seven miles from Tulsa, Ok., lives the world's largest family. Only about one hundred of the children are at home now. The older ones, well educated and with a millionaire father to help them in emergencies, have gone away and are making their own way in the world.

But a family reunion would bring back some three hundred more young persons to the comfortable group of buildings at Sand Springs, where they spent part of their childhood. The family totals about four hundred, including little tots, boys and girls, young men and women.

All of them from the youngest to the oldest, are legally the children of Charles Page, multi-millionaire oil man, because they were formally adopted by Page. They do not assume his name, but become his wards as long a time as they care to remain such.

Not An Orphan Asylum

One fact should be clearly borne in mind; the buildings at Sand Springs are not an orphan asylum, thinly disguised as something else. It is a real family, although the youngsters were originally orphans they became and remain the children of Page, in the eyes of the law, and the conduct of the home is very different from that of the typical asylum.

Besides the different status of the children, under the supervision of a legal father instead of a guardian or board of trustees, the home atmosphere is preserved as far as plenty of money makes it possible, and money will do a lot.

For one thing, the children enjoy the same freedom in choosing their own clothes as children in any family do, and probably a little more, considering the well filled purse of their father.

The other children occupy separate rooms, the smaller ones sleep two or three in a room, but each has his or her own little brass bed. The big chambers are dormitories, which give the children a flavor are unknown at anywhere else.

Now, are the Page children to have a place in school, or do we must have a stable a boys and house for the horses and by first. Altogether the expenditure in its much greater than was the Page necessary for the bridge is considered because they had emotional training that they must give who a special garded as a fine burial with whom they had never help according piness while he was living.

If they may men of a grammar grades, the Page children attend high school in Sand Springs. The children who show some special aptitude, as for music, may continue their studies at the finest schools in the land, still at Page's expense.

Early everything used in the big kitchen comes from the home farm. Meat from animals fattened there, served daily during most of the year, but in the hot months the menu is largely upon fruit and vegetables, with meat but twice a week. They drink rich milk from one of the best dairy herds in the state at breakfast and supper, and have buttermilk at luncheon. The older children have tea or coffee if they prefer to milk.

A Widow's Colony, Too

At home the discipline is kind, but firm. The children march in a body to eat. Before retiring at night they say their prayers, the little ones repeating the familiar "Now I lay me down to sleep." There is Sunday school, some of the older boys and girls as teachers. Each child, as soon as he is able to read, is given a Bible. But there is no discrimination as to church or creed.

Page's charity has not been confined to children, despite the gigantic scale of his legal fatherhood. From the early days he gave a home to several poor elderly women and to some penniless widows. Now there is a "widows' colony" of neat, comfortable cottages in Sand Springs, and at present one hundred such women live rent free in homes built by Page, with frees gas, milk and water, besides transportation on the little railway between Sand Springs and Tulsa.

The Story of Page's Life

Page's childhood was one of poverty and hard work, and while yet a young man he became filled with a desire to do something for poor and friendless children. Bereft of his own father when he was 9 years old, and being the oldest of several children in a humble home at Stevens Point, Wis., he had to leave school and go to work. From that time until Fate began showering him with wealth he knew nothing but hard work and self-sacrifice.

In the course of time he worked his way westward and was among the first to enter the rich gold fields of Washington, after the precious metal had been discovered there. He made one fortune there, and lost it. Then he went to the Colorado fields, made another rich strike, and this time managed to keep it.

About twenty years ago he decided to quit gold mining and go to Oklahoma to try his hand at the oil game. He located at Red Fork, four miles west of Tulsa, where oil had been brought in, and later he made his home in Tulsa. From the first he was successful, even more so than he had been at gold mining. Some of the leases which he secured for small sums grew immensely valuable later on. He became one of the richest of the Oklahoma oil men.

A few years ago all the Page enterprises and holdings were in trust for the children's home at Sand Springs, which will enter upon the full possession of them at his death. These properties include the 10,000-acre farm on which the home is located, the interurban railway to Tulsa, an electric light and power plant, a natural gas system, with leases on 105,000 acres in Osage county, a splendid hospital at Sand Springs and the Shell Creek water system, which is nearing completion.

Walcott, Iowa, has three distinctions—it is the richest town per capita in the state, and has neither a jail or a church. Nor has it had the latter for sixty-five years. Its population is composed of only infidels, or "freethinkers" as they call themselves.

John D. Rockefeller's income for 1918 was approximately $33,000,000. But he didn't have any more fun than we did with our paltry $3,000,000.

The eight gins in Lubbock county have ginned 10,215 bales of cotton up to the tenth of November.

The weather report Saturday shows a temperature of 14 to 18 degrees below zero in North Dakota and Montana.

Discovery in Jerusalem Gives Much of Mystery Connected With King Solomon's Temple

How often great discoveries spring from trifling incidents! The trite reflection comes to mind naturally on hearing how the quarries of King Solomon were found. Dr. Allen Moore, for 17 years a resident of Palestine, tells the curious tale.

For many many years, says Doctor Moore, travelers and archeologists were puzzled to know where the enormous blocks of stone still standing in the ruins of Solomon's temple at Jerusalem were quarried. One day a little dog chased a lizard down a hole among the debris. The next instant the dog also disappeared.

His master, coming to the opening, peered down in vain. He called, and to his amazement his voice came back as from great depths. He summoned assistance, and a passage was opened into immense subterranean quarries. There were found huge masses of stone almost ready to be hoisted above ground.

"And don't you remember," asks Doctor Moore, "that we are told in our Bibles that the temple was built without sound of saw or of hammer? The fact that the quarryman worked underground partly explains that."

Upon some of the stones were found inscriptions that perplexed the explorers until one scholar pronounced them Phoenician. The stones were wrought by some of that army of workmen sent by King Hiram of Tyre to aid King Solomon in his task.—Youth's Companion.

GROUSE LIVES LIKE ESKIMO

In Cold Weather the Bird Finds a Safe and Warm Retreat in Snow House.

In the temperate months the grouse has an excellent choice of food consisting of a great variety of berries, small fruit, seeds, buds, clover, beech-nuts, grasshoppers and a multitude of young, tender leaves. In the winter one wonders at their survival; for now the fall flight of the robins completely exhausts the berries, which were wont to linger and ripen well into winter, compelling the grouse to depend largely upon yellow birch buds, with many a forced meal on an evergreen.

Fortunately, whenever the temperature is far below zero the sky is usually clear and the grouse are active and unconcerned, but if the days and nights are dark and cold or the air filled with merciless pellets, they have the habit of plunging into deep snowdrifts, where a foot below the surface the heat and weight of the body form a globular retreat, in which they remain comfortably until the storm clears or hunger forces an exit.

Sometimes in winter or the early spring there may come a rain or a warm day that melts the surface snow followed by severe weather, and then thousands of grouse are imprisoned and the heretofore safe retreat becomes their tomb, should weeks pass by before the seal is broken.—National Geographic Magazine.

Who Made the Alphabet?

If it takes a genius to make great words, it was also a genius who made the alphabet which makes the words. The pedigree of our alphabet can be traced continuously for nearly 3,000 years, and then comes a hiatus, says a recent writer. The genesis of writing must naturally be sought in pictures. Cave-man, when he painted his women or beasts on rock walls, or carved elk and elephants on antlers and tusks, was laying the foundations of one of the great human inventions. Behind all this apt artistic effort we must see some esoteric motive, for it was not due merely to the striving of the creative soul after expression. Doubtless, adds our authority, when cave-man held an exhibition of his works, his friends praised the ingenuity and beauty of his pictures, but there is something more than the desire of simple reproduction hidden in his handwork.

Down on the Farm.

A young man spending a vacation was walking about the country lanes in an endeavor to hide from himself entirely all town life or anything which reminded him of town life.

Chancing across a country postman, he stopped him and asked what time it was.

Pulling out his watch, the postman deliberately replied:

"It's four o'clock in the afternoon by the railway time."

"By railway time!" ejaculated the young man. "I should say that you country folk, living in the open air, in the heart of the country, as you do, would take your time from the sun."

"What for?" asked the rural postman. "Been't we much closer to the railway—even if it be 12 miles—than we be to the sun?"—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

Wye Island Home.

The original home of the Paca family on Wye Island, Queen Anne county, passed at a recent sale of the estate of William B. Paca, the last male descendant of Governor William Paca, to an owner not connected with the family, for the first time since long before the Revolutionary war. The Wye Hall farm of 367 acres, with the Paca mansion, brought $64,300 an acre, the purchaser being John Kinnaman, Governor Paca, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and later a federal judge, is buried near the farm.—Centerville Observer.

Today we, too, have had our reverses, but they are insignificant when compared to the suffering of some European countries.

If we will stop to reflect we will realize that in spite of adversity we have lots for which to be Thankful.

Here is a singular incident showing how easy it is to mistranslate an overheard remark.

Said Mrs. A, one of the overhearers: "They must have been to the zoo, because I heard her mention 'a trained deer.'"

Said Mrs. B: "No, no. They were talking about going away and she said to him, 'Find out about the train, dear.'"

Said Mrs. C: "I think you are both wrong. It seemed to me they were discussing music, for she said, 'A trained ear' very distinctly."

A few minutes later the lady herself appeared and they told her of their disagreement.

"Well," she laughed, "that's certainly funny. You are poor guessers, all of you. The fact is, I'd been out to the country overnight and I was asking my husband if it rained here last evening."
