Unemployment rate remains unchanged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment remained unchanged in May at 5.8 percent of the labor force, showing that the slowdown in economic growth in recent months has not yet forced people out of work in large numbers. But Labor Department figures today showed that employment in manufacturing industries did decline slightly for the second consecutive month. These job losses were offset, however, by gains in other areas. The department said an additional 65,000 workers were employed in highway and street construction, "probably due to heightened road repair activity resulting from severe winter storms." It said employment rolls also were bolstered by the return of 50,000 workers who had been jobless in April as a result of the trucking strike and lockout.

The 5.8 percent unemployment rate in May, unchanged from April, remained close to the five-year low of 5.7 percent set in March. The unemployment rate seems to be defying other economic indicators showing that economic growth is slowing significantly as a result of Carter administration efforts to contain runaway inflation. Administration officials say unemployment will increase sooner or later this year as a result of the winding down of the economy, but the Labor Department figures showed this has not happened yet. The department's report gave this breakdown by population category in May, compared with April: —Adult men: 3.9 percent in May, down from 4 percent in April. —Adult women: 5.8 percent, up from 5.7 percent. —Teen-agers: 16.8 percent, up from 16.5 percent. —Whites: 5 percent, up from 4.9 percent. —Blacks and other minorities: 11.6 percent, down from 11.8 percent. —Minority teen-agers: 36.9 percent, up from 34.5 percent. —Full-time workers: 5.2 percent, down from 5.3 percent. —White-collar workers: 3.2 percent, down from 3.3 percent. —Blue-collar workers: 6.7 percent, down from 6.9 percent.

The nation's unemployment rate has been in the 5.7 percent to 5.9 percent range for the past 10 months. It was 6.1 percent in May 1978. The Labor Department said total employment in the economy increased by 140,000 in May following a sharp decline in April. Last month's increase raised the number of persons with jobs 96.3 million, up 2.4 million from a year earlier. Some 5.9 million persons were jobless. The department said its separate survey of industrial payrolls showed that employment in manufacturing fell by 31,000, the second consecutive decline in that sector. But those losses were offset by gains in construction, primarily of highways; transportation and public utilities and wholesale and retail trade. Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal said Thursday that unemployment undoubtedly will increase in future months as a result of the apparent slowdown in economic growth. In remarks at a State Department trade seminar, Blumenthal said, "We are in a world that is going through a very difficult transition" from an economy based on cheap energy to one of expensive energy. "It is very painful. ... No country is immune." Blumenthal projected economic growth for the year at between 1.5 and 2 percent, down slightly from the official administration forecast of 2.2 percent. Blumenthal said the outlook is being dimmed by a sharp increase in world oil prices — about 30 percent over the last six months. New statistics Thursday added evidence that the economy is slowing. The Commerce Department said the index of leading economic indicators, which is intended to forecast economic trends, dropped by a record 3.3 percent in April.

'It has helped in the past'

FBI adds $25,000 to reward

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Rewards totaling $125,000 will probably help flush out information on the assassination of U. S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr., says the FBI official who heads the intense federal investigation. The FBI put up $25,000 Thursday to go with $100,000 pledged by a group of local attorneys. "It has helped in the past. We believe it will be helpful in this case," said James Ingram, who heads the massive federal investigation into Wood's slaying. Meanwhile, about 1,000 mourners, closely watched by armed U.S. marshals, gathered Thursday for the funeral mass to hear Wood eulogized as a man who swore to uphold the law, even at the threat of death. Wood was later buried in his hometown of Rockport. FBI officials continued to shroud their investigation in secrecy, refusing comment on the case. "I am not at this point able to furnish any information to you regarding the FBI's progress in this investigation, period," Ingram told reporters Thursday in his only public statement on the case. Wood, 63, known as "Maximum John" because of the stiff sentences he assessed drug offenders, was gunned down by a sniper outside his townhouse as he prepared to leave for work Tuesday morning. The shooting was the second time in seven months a Western District of Texas official involved in narcotics smuggling cases has been attacked. Assistant U.S. Attorney James Kerr escaped with minor injuries after being ambushed Nov. 21. FBI officials have refused to comment on whether they believe the assaults were connected. FBI officials in Washington said Thursday that Wood was killed by a .243-caliber bullet. That caliber bullet is usually fired from a high-powered deer rifle. Wood died from a single shot to the spine. The FBI said it has not been able to determine from how far away the shot came. There was no powder residue on Wood's suit jacket, indicating the shot was not fired point blank, officials said. "It certainly appears it was a well executed job," said U.S. Attorney Jamie Boyd, who adds that it's "logical" to assume the assassination was connected to the drug smuggling cases. Boyd said he'll step up his federal grand jury investigation in El Paso into alleged multimillion dollar, interstate drug trafficking. He and Kerr have said they're convinced Wood's slaying is connected to those with high stakes in drug smuggling. "Any dope pushers in the Western District of Texas are fair game. We're going to make it hot on all of them," Boyd said before returning to El Paso with Kerr. Kerr, who has been given constant protection since the Nov. 21 attack, was among the mourners Thursday. Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, and 13 federal judges, including the four remaining, closely guarded jurists in the Western District, were also present in the crowd that spilled out of the Our Lady of Grace Church and onto the lawn. Those four judges, Chief Judge Adrian Spears and D.W. Suttle of San Antonio, Jack Roberts of Austin and William Sessions of El Paso, have been given constant protection since Wood's slaying.

State officer to probe child removal from foster family

Bill Woods, information officer for the Texas Department of Human Resources in Austin, said late Thursday that Commissioner Jerome Chapman is sending an officer to Big Spring to investigate events surrounding the removal of a 9-year-old foster child from a local foster family. The child was removed from the home of James and Donna Van Ness, longtime Howard County foster parents, after a court hearing May 21. The child was taken after the Van Nesses destroyed their foster parenting license following a disagreement with the state about regulations regarding the child's social security benefits. The state has indicated that the child, who is minimally brain-damaged, will be institutionalized. The Van Nesses report the child's I.Q. was raised from 42 to the mid-60's in less than a year and that an institution, according to a state psychologist, would cause her to regress. John Robinson of the Protective Services for Children with the Austin department will arrive in Big Spring Monday morning to confer with the local Human Resources Department and with the Van Nesses.

County auditor resigns on 12th anniversary

By CARLA WALKER Today marks the 12th anniversary for Virginia Black as County Auditor, and it was this morning that she presented her resignation to District Judge Jim Gregg. The judge has appointed Jackie Olson, now assistant county auditor, to replace Mrs. Black. "There have been a lot of good memories here and I'll be leaving a lot of friends, but I was given a real opportunity and I just couldn't resist it," said Mrs. Black, whose resignation is effective June 30. On July 1, Mrs. Black will begin working with the Texas Comptroller's Office in Austin the planning and research department. "In 1973, I implemented the 'Standard Financial Management System for Texas' in Howard County, and basically that is what I'll be doing for the state in other counties," Mrs. Black explained. She will be advising and working with auditors in Texas counties to revise their financial systems in compliance with state regulations. Mrs. Black, who was appointed by Judge Caton on June 1, 1967, was previously an assistant to George Thorburn, Big Spring Certified Public Accountant. She and her husband Ed, who is retired, will be moving to Austin as soon as her duties for the County are completed. Appointed to replace Mrs. Black, Jackie Olson has had six years experience in the County Auditors office. She worked in the County Engineers Office for one year prior to being appointed assistant County Auditor in June, 1973. "I guess I just dove in and learned by doing, because I didn't have a degree," said Mrs. Olson, whose husband, Craig is safety manager for MOVING TO AUSTIN JOB ...Auditor Virginia Black Price Construction. "I'm thrilled to death at getting this chance, and I'm a little scared, too. But, I do think I am capable of doing the job; if I haven't learned in six years under Virginia, I'd be in bad shape." Duties of the auditor's office include preparation of the budget under the direction of the county commissioners, keeping the commissioners' court informed of how much of their budgeted funds has been spent and preparation of the annual county financial report, among many others. In addition to the auditor and assistant auditor, a student is employed in the office as well. Mrs. Olson's assistant will be chosen soon, and the appointment will be made by Judge Gregg.

Federal plane investigator questions safety of DC-10s

WASHINGTON (AP) — A member of the government agency that investigates plane crashes says he would not fly on a DC-10 until experts get answers to some questions about its safety.

Philip A. Hogue, one of the five members of the National Transportation Safety Board, made the statement Thursday after the board was briefed by an expert who knocked down the idea that a broken bolt caused the fatal crash of a DC-10 a week ago.

The bolt, an early suspect in the accident, turns out to have been a victim.

"As far as can be ascertained so far, the bolt broke as a result of the accident," chief staff metallurgist Michael Marks told the board. The bolt, recovered from the runway of Chicago's O'Hare airport after the crash there, "had broken in an overstress condition, rather than a fatigue condition," Marks said.

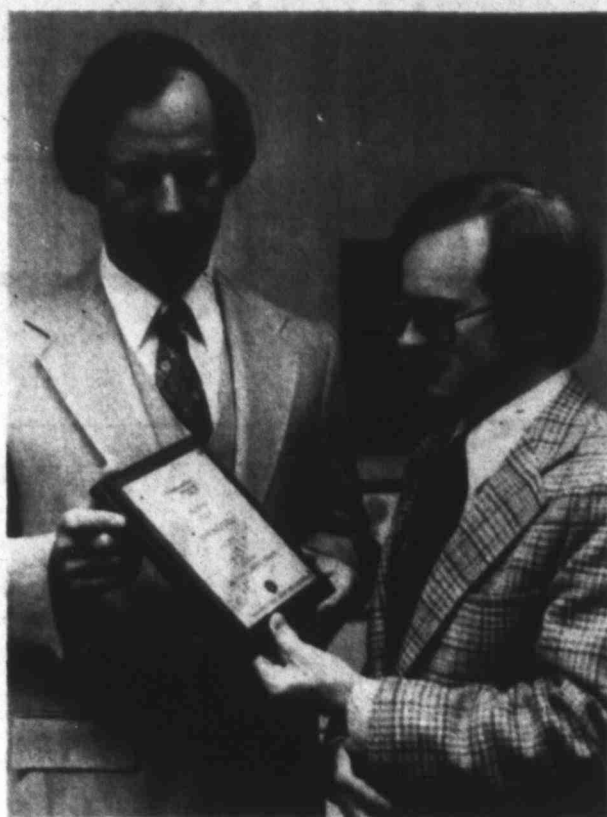

After the briefing, Hogue was asked if he would be a passenger on a DC-10. "No. No, I would not," he said, adding that if it were up to him, he would be strongly tempted to ground the big jets.

The NTSB's powers are limited to investigating accidents and making recommendations.

It was on the board's recommendation that the Federal Aviation Administration on Tuesday ordered the grounding of all 138 DC-10s in the domestic fleet to check the assemblies that hold the planes' engines to their wings.

At least 25 of the planes remained grounded Thursday after defects were discovered in their engine mount assemblies. On at least one DC-10, mechanics found a crack that one expert said could have caused an engine to eventually drop off the aircraft.

PUBLICATION WINS SECOND PLACE

Newsletter wins publication award

Citizens News, a quarterly newsletter published by Citizens Federal Credit Union, recently won second place in a state-wide publications contest sponsored by the Texas Credit Union League and Affiliates in Dallas. Over one hundred entries were received for judging in the contest and all federal and state chartered credit unions in the state were eligible to submit entries for consideration.

In a related area, the credit union also won the Universal Award for Distinctive Design in Match Book Advertising. Patrick H. Kaiser, Vice President of Sales for Universal Match in St. Louis, said "the actual production of this design has been so outstanding that we believed it desirable to send a sample of this to each of our 170 salesmen throughout the country." And went on to say that the match book would "be shown by our entire sales force as an outstanding example of match book advertising and sales promotion."

Prather said he was pleased with this award mainly because it drew attention to Big Spring, since the match book design is being shown to thousands of companies and businesses throughout the United States.

Mel Prather, editor of the News and the special publications, said "we've always done well in state competition and have never placed below second place. What makes the awards gratifying is the fact that all of our publications are produced in Big Spring. And even though our materials are printed locally, we consistently win over publications prepared by large advertising and public relations agencies in such Texas cities as San Antonio, Dallas, El Paso, and Houston. This year we placed second only to a large agency in Fort Worth, which placed third to us last year."

"I'm pleased that Big Spring printers are able to produce professional quality materials and I have no hesitations in comparing the publications done on the local level with those prepared by agencies in our larger cities," Prather said.

Fetus attached to abdominal wall of woman for 70 years

SWEETWATER — The calcified remains of a fetus that could be 70 years old was removed from the body of an 83-year-old Colorado City woman by a surgeon in the Rolling Hills Memorial Hospital about a week ago.

The attending physician, who asked not to be identified, said the woman had been married but never had children. The physician said he learned the woman had never menstruated in her life.

The woman, who speaks no English, came to the physician's office vomiting and experiencing abdominal pain. The fetus, about three months developed, was discovered attached to the front abdominal wall.

The fetus is being sent to the Texas Tech University School of Medicine for study. The doctor said the woman may have become pregnant at age 12 or 13.

The doctor, through the woman's adopted son, learned that she had been in the hospital five times but that apparently no x-rays were ever taken.

The doctor said that only about 50 such cases had ever been reported in medical history. The doctor has been practicing medicine three years.

Police beat GI robbed, two men captured

Compassion cost Donald G. Nelson, a traveling U.S. service man, worry, time and nearly $1,070 Thursday.

Nelson, an Army man stationed at Fort Bliss in El Paso, was headed east Thursday when he offered a ride to two male hitchhikers about 20 miles out of El Paso.

When the trio hit Big Spring, Nelson stopped at the FM 700 and Birdwell Lane 7-11 for a cup of coffee. His passengers remained in the vehicle until Nelson was inside the store and then sped away in the $900 station wagon and $170 in cash.

Nelson reported the theft to Big Spring Police at 11:45 p.m. who sent a teletype to Colorado City. The suspects were apprehended by Colorado City Police about 30 minutes later.

William Russell Ball and William Alfred Dahl were transported back to Big Spring this morning to face charges.

In another vanishing act, Big Spring Seed and Chemical lost a two-ton grain bed truck with a hydraulic lift, valued at $6,000. According to reports, the vehicle was parked by the business when employees left at 5 p.m. Wednesday. When they returned at 8 a.m. Thursday, it was gone.

ready to forgive what she thought was a practical joke until the joke cost her $30.

She reported to police Thursday that someone had punctured the rear tire of her car while it was parked in the street before her residence sometime between Mon. and 10 a.m. Tuesday.

She said she did not report it earlier because she thought some juveniles had just let the air out of her tire as a prank.

A clean getaway was made by a man who literally ran off with two six-packs of beer from a 7-11 Store, 4th and Franklin, 1:50 a.m. today.

Clerks told police that the man walked around the store and talked with them for a while before grabbing the Michelob and running from the store. He fled to his pickup, parked in back of the store, and drove off with a $3.94 of hot beer.

Police thwarted the attempts of a burglar Thursday evening. An unidentified caller reported that a burglary was in progress at the home of Charles Brooks, 7:44 p.m. Police arrived on the scene where they arrested a man in his early 20's found inside the home.

In traffic mishaps Thursday, R.A. Churchwell, 1607 Vines, collided with Lea Martin, Gail Rt., Box 257, at 5th and Gregg, 4:07 p.m.

Jo Reina Hamby, 2900 Melrose, was southbound on Gregg, 5:12 p.m., when a car without a driver rolled into hers from N. 3rd. The car, owned by Guillermo Jr. Rangel, 309 N.W. 11th, rolled into a business before continuing on its path toward the intersection.

A driver backed into a tire mart at Brown's Gulf Station, 1629 E. 3rd, before leaving the scene, 5:45 p.m. Thursday.

In a final mishap, Nicki Loray Tidwell, Garden City Rt., Box 162A, struck a light pole with her vehicle at the College Park Shopping Center parking lot, 9:25 p.m.

Hiring practices nixed

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The California Supreme Court has ruled that a public utility may not turn down homosexual job applicants unless it can show that an applicant's homosexuality makes him unfit for the job. The 4-3 decision announced Thursday held that a suit filed by two homosexuals and others had been improperly dismissed in a lower court.

The suit alleged Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co. discriminates against homosexuals. State law is violated "when a privately owned public utility, which enjoys a state protected monopoly or quasi-monopoly, utilizes its authority arbitrarily to exclude a class of individuals from employment," the court said.

Twenty-two grads of HC's nursing program honored

The 22 members of the Class of 1979 Associate Degree Nursing Program were among the graduates honored at the recent Howard College commencement exercises.

The new nurses, most of whom will be remaining in the Big Spring area, are now eligible for licensure as Registered Nurses, and will travel to Austin July 10-11 to write the required State Board examinations.

Immediately prior to the commencement exercises, these graduates were honored at a nursing convocation conducted by the faculty of the ADN Program. Each of the new nurses appeared for the first time in complete graduate uniforms, wearing the graduate cap of Howard College.

During the brief ceremony, the nurses were presented with the gold and white school pin: two interlocked circles, representing the entwined relationship of the nurse and the patient. Both the pin and cap, which will identify these nurses as Howard College graduates throughout their nursing careers, are long-time nursing traditions.

Members of the Class of 1979 Howard College Associate Degree Nursing Program are: Donna Adams, Elizabeth Arencibia, Selma Bailey, Wanda Brewer, Celestino Cisneros, Mary Franklin, Sharon Harbeck, Carolyn Krause, Alonzo Landin, Jo Anna Lopez, Pat McCutchan, Lisa McCutchan, Bruce Myers, and Shirley Nichols.

Insect problems can be stopped now

At this time of year your lawn may show dramatic signs of damage by insects, weeds, and fungus disease. And although your lawn's troubles may have started last spring, late summer and early fall are still excellent times to stop common lawn problems.

The cause of damage to your lawn can be accurately identified if you know what to look for. Light gray mold on the blades generally indicates the presence of powdery mildew, while a brown section of the lawn that rolls up like a carpet can mean underground insects are at work.

With a spray program and proper care you can correct lawn problems, even at this late date, and give your lawn a healthy start for next spring.

Your lawn may be troubled by two types of insects: the first lives in the soil damaging the grass root, while the second attacks from above ground.

Irregular brown patches are the first signs of damage by sod webworms. These insects, living in or close to the soil, cause damage throughout the summer. Upon close examination of the area, you'll find indirect evidence of the culprits: holes left by birds that have been eating the worms.

Check the edges of the damaged patches and you're likely to turn up the worms.

Sod webworms are about three-fourths of an inch long and light brown. They are actually the larvae of moths. As they grow larger they build burrows close to the surface of the soil. At night they feed on blades of grass. If you find three or four of them within a six inch square section, spray with an insecticide in the late afternoon. Water the following morning.

Grubs frequently cause serious damage to lawns during August, September and October before they burrow three to 12 inches into the soil to over-winter. So this is one of the best times to prevent grubs from ruining your lawn.

Grubs are the larvae of several species of beetles. They are whitish or grayish and usually lie in a curled position. They burrow around the roots of the grass and feed on them about an inch below the surface of the soil.

Grubs chew the roots of the grass and feed on them about an inch below the surface of the soil.

Grubs chew the roots of the grass off so cleanly that the dead turf can be lifted like a doormat. If your lawn looks dead in spots, break off a piece of the soil and check for grubs. Grubs are best controlled by spraying your lawn with an insecticide and watering immediately afterward.

According to H.D. Hudson Manufacturing Company, makers of lawn sprayers and dusters, a compression sprayer is best for the application of insecticides on lawns. The compression sprayer provides a precise, on-target, non-drift spray good for soil and lawn pests. Adjust the sprayer for a coarse drenching spray, one that penetrates the ground. Then sprinkle the lawn thoroughly.

Above ground insects pose another threat to the health and beauty of your lawn. Most common this time of year are lawn chinch bugs. If, no matter what you do, your lawn still looks brown, tiny chinch bugs may be the problems.

The young bugs hatch in the lawn and suck plant juices from the grass. They will continue to trouble your lawn throughout the fall if left untreated.

Many species of leafhoppers can infest your lawn and transmit plant disease. They suck the sap from the leaves and stems of grass. Damage to lawns is first evident in white patches, which is followed by yellowing and browning.

Above ground lawn pests are best controlled by spraying with an insecticide. After spraying, sprinkle lightly with water to wash the insecticide down around the crowns of the plants. One application should control the pests for several weeks.

Consult your local lawn and garden center, state university extension service, or county agent for advice on the exact pesticide to use for your particular lawn pest.

Not all lawn problems are caused by insects. Conditions caused by poor soils, high temperatures, excessive rainfall, fungus disease and weeds can seriously affect the well-being and appearance of your lawn.

Attractive fences create flourishing city gardens

The opportunities offered by urban life, and a surging interest in the restoration of older city residences, is attracting increasing numbers of young families to the city. And according to the International Fence Industry Association, well-planned fencing has permitted green thumbs to flourish in city gardens.

Whether on a rooftop or balcony or in a tiny courtyard, city gardens can provide tranquil havens and serve as expressions of their owners' personalities. They can be planned to consume as much as little time as the owners want to spend in maintaining them.

Two things are essential for successful city gardening: careful design and appropriate fencing.

Simplicity is the key in designing gardens for small spaces, and the design should center on one main feature — a centerpiece of statuary, a rock garden, or a small sitting area.

Every element must be carefully planned, as mistakes loom large in a small space.

Since city gardens exist in very close proximity to the owner's living space, a garden design that reflects the character of the interior decor is most effective.

A good local nursery can suggest plants that grow well in the area's climate, and can give tips on preparing lightweight, self-contained flower beds for rooftops and balconies. Large pots and urns are not only attractive and space-saving containers for garden plants, they are also portable, enabling the gardener to rearrange a garden as he or she might rearrange the living room.

Critical to the process of designing a city garden is the selection of appropriate fencing. It is important to consult with a local member of the International Fence Industry Association at the earliest stages of planning.

An IFIA member is a good source of details on local codes governing fencing, and can provide information on the types of fencing best suited to the special requirements of a city garden.

Fencing should be carefully selected to help muffle street noise and help protect plantings from prevailing winds, exhaust from buildings and airborne soot and litter.

The fence will serve the garden as walls serve a room, acting as a background for the arrangement of plantings and furnishings, hiding unsightly utility connections and providing privacy for the people within.

Among the almost endless variety of wood fences are styles that will carry out an interior decor theme, ranging from the most rustic to the most formal. There are aluminum fences which mimic many wood or ironwork fence designs, and fences which incorporate fiberglass panels to create a more contemporary look.

Since the space available for city gardens is most often square or rectangular, fencing can be used to create a more interesting space. A curve inside a corner, convex to its angle, or a skillfully planned protrusion not only give variety to the garden's shape, but also create a space behind the fence that can be roofed for use as storage for garden tools and equipment for outdoor cooking.

Effective way to eliminate mosquitoes

It may be comforting to know that of the 2,500 species of mosquitoes in the world, only the females of a couple of clans regularly cause trouble. But each summer those few trouble makers appear in droves, and they stay until the first frost.

If mosquitoes are a problem where you live, the first thing to do is to find and eliminate their breeding places.

Mosquitoes generally lay their eggs on the surface of water. So when you move receptacles like barrels, pails, and buckets that collect rainwater, you eliminate a possible mosquito breeding place.

Drain any standing water around your yard that can harbor mosquitoes such as birdbaths, gutters, low spots and ditches.

Once the breeding places have been eliminated, adult mosquitoes can be eliminated with a spray program. Adult mosquitoes usually rest during the heat of the day under the leaves of shrubs, bushes, flowers, and on the ceilings and walls of porches and garages.

A spray applied to these spots will kill mosquitoes resting upon these treated surfaces. Consult your county agent, university extension service or local lawn and garden center for advice on the best insecticide for the control of mosquitoes.

According to H.D. Hudson Manufacturing Company, makers of sprayers and dusters, the best sprayer for the job is the compression sprayer. This sprayer can reach almost all places where adult mosquitoes may rest. The spray application, depending on rainfall, should provide effective control of mosquitoes.

According to H.D. Hudson Manufacturing Company, makers of sprayers and dusters, the best sprayer for the job is the compression sprayer. This sprayer can reach almost all places where adult mosquitoes may rest. The spray application, depending on rainfall, should provide effective control of mosquitoes from 10 days to two weeks.

Image of Texan is hard to change

Most people living in and out of the State of Texas think of the ideal Texan as rural, probably a cowboy and something of a free spirit.

According to Dr. Fane Downs, a history professor at McMurry College in Abilene, the majority of Texans live in cities and work the eight-to-five shift.

Dr. Downs, who was born in Lubbock and grew up in Fort Stockton, notes that the Texas esprit brings together those from the state.

"WHEN TEXANS are expatriates in New York or Paris, they seem more likely to get together than, say, Nebraskans," says the McMurry professor.

"Remember The Alamo" is still a rallying cry in Texas, a protest against tyranny and authoritarianism. The Alamo was besieged by a Mexican Army that was determined to spike a resistance movement that was swiftly getting out of hand. Until recently, most people have ignored the fact that there were "Mexican Texans" in the Alamo as well as those of English ethnic origins.

The typical Texan, as far as most people are concerned, is John Wayne, star of the film, "The Alamo." John has starred in dozens of films in which he portrayed a Texas rancher, a Texas oil well fighter, a Texas Indian fighter or a cavalryman from Texas. In truth, Mr. Wayne is a Californian who got his start as a movie extra after playing football for the University of Southern California. He never strayed far from his digs around Los Angeles, except to go on film location.

THE MOVIE ABOUT the celebrated battle at the Texas shrine was studied by Dr. Downs and members of her class recently. She said later that although there were a lot of minor inaccuracies in the vehicle, it didn't distort history nearly as much as she had thought it would.

"It was probably as true an effort of that kind can be," the professor said later.

Dr. Downs' classes are taking a look at Texas ethnic groups seldom celebrated in western paperbacks or Nashville ballads. The people of German, Polish, Czech and Irish extraction have contributed richly to Texas lore, not to mention the Mexicans and the Blacks.

According to Dr. Downs, there is a great deal of Texas history that has yet to be and should be written. Some concern me and thee.

Boys of summer

Around the rim

James Werrell

(Some of this is true, and some of it isn't. The names have been changed to protect the innocent.)

They call us the boys of summer... at least they used to. Now it's the boys of late fall, or even the boys of mid winter.

We have been toiling on the dusty diamond for two solid months, and that first sweet victory still eludes us.

"BUCK UP, KID," said Dick Canby, our third baseman. At least I think that's what he said. He was ripping the cap off a Lowenbrau with his teeth as he spoke.

I glanced over at our team: Hardy Hoover, catcher; experience was etched into every line on his jogging suit; Harry Spanquer, Tim Kegg, the bullpen; they can dodge screamers with the best of them.

Spanquer's son, Mink, has offered to play regularly for the team. The idea of paying him $50 a game costs a little, but we're hungry for a win.

And I spotted Dom Dischager, our Cajun utility infielder. Some players tape their legs before a game; Dom solders copper wire to his.

Nearby is Very Spent, our second baseman. He has a flaming red glove that seems to be an extension of his hand; his throwing hand.

Filling the hole at short is Burns Purgeus. With his catlike speed, his throws to first often don't even require the help of a relay man.

Brian Nothanks, our towering first baseman, holds the team's hitting record. I think he got the hit during the second game, but it may have been the third.

Right behind Brian is our right fielder, L.O.T. Twitchell. He took a lot of kidding about not being allowed to wear long pants to the games, but it has quieted down since he almost killed Hoover with a motorcycle.

Manny Nickel holds down the center field slot. And he's worth everything his name implies.

Next to Manny is our left fielder, Terry Murrin. He uses our games to get lubricated (you know, warmed up) for the church league battles later in the night.

AND THEN THERE'S me, Jake Peril, outfield rover. I had forgotten my glove that night (it may have been on purpose, I'll never know for sure).

"Here, take mine. You need it more than I do," said Murrin.

"Thanks," I said, acknowledging the compliment. "But I have this bushel basket here that I think will do the trick."

Several team members rushed off to buy bushel baskets of their own, leaving me a clear path to the cooler. I ambled over, and after chipping my tooth on a Lowenbrau cap, broke the bottle open on the side of my pickup.

"Well, coach, when do you think we'll win one?"

This was sort of a joke, since we have no coach, but Canby answered nonetheless: "Why, when Birnam Wood doth come to Dunsinane."

I have heard of stranger things. For example, I happen to know that Canby is not of woman born.

Why not Moynihan?

William F. Buckley, Jr.

Mr. Michael Novak, the distinguished sociologist and journalist, has publicly suggested that Daniel Patrick Moynihan run for President in 1980. Mr. Novak, who writes eloquently on every subject but specially so on ethnic nostalgia, is nostalgic about the Democratic Party. He wants desperately to continue to vote for it, but is having problems. It is on the order of being bright, and having, out of a respect for tradition, to act dumb. Very hard.

Surveying the political scene, Mr. Novak — and here he speaks for millions of Democrats — is dissatisfied, indeed alarmed by, the foreign policy of Jimmy Carter. And the dread alternative, a candidacy of Ted Kennedy, would be enough to drive Mr. Novak into the arms of Ronald Reagan, where he thinks he would be uncomfortable, though I am myself confident they would soon find themselves mutually endearing.

WELL, WHY SHOULDN'T Moynihan run?

When traditions in American politics change, they tend to do so with great intervals for corollary readjustments. The big political development in postwar American politics is the ascendancy of the presidential primary. Twenty years ago it would have been unthinkable to question the renomination of a sitting president. And, of course, there are still considerable inertial advantages available to the incumbent, as we saw the other day when the chairman of the Republican Party publicly chastised the five Congressmen who sowed a draft-Kennedy movement from which the Democratic Party might indeed reap a whirlwind.

But all the king's horses are less powerful than the voters of New Hampshire. They have merely to say it unambiguously — that they don't want Carter — and the identical people who are clamoring for party loyalty, will clamor for Carter to step down.

Now should that happen, there will be a single presence in the room, namely Senator Kennedy. He is the Prince of Wales, and Senator Moynihan himself publicly acknowledged the other day that Carter appears to be ruling only by surferance of Mr. Kennedy. The press has been trained, so to speak, to give Senator Kennedy equal time. It's a lot more fun journalistically. Moreover, it is hard to find any American who either takes seriously a politician's pledge not to run for a particular office, or one who is angered by that politician's going on to do so. If General Sherman said today what he made famous, it would be interpreted as an announcement that he was running for president. Thus one can expect more, not less, attention to Kennedy as the months go by and as the ratings of Mr. Carter idle about in the doldrums.

Now Senator Moynihan is the outstanding representative of the Democratic right. His credentials are in perfect order. He believes in everything the New Deal instituted, but inherits also a pragmatic intelligence that, for instance, led him to renounce his own family assistance plan.

IN FOREIGN POLICY, he is an aggressive globalist. He understands that what happens everywhere in the world deeply concerns us prospectively. Yet he is not the Wilsonian who would send the marines to bring democracy to Montezuma. He is in tradition of Dean Acheson, Harry Truman and, albeit ambiguously, FDR.

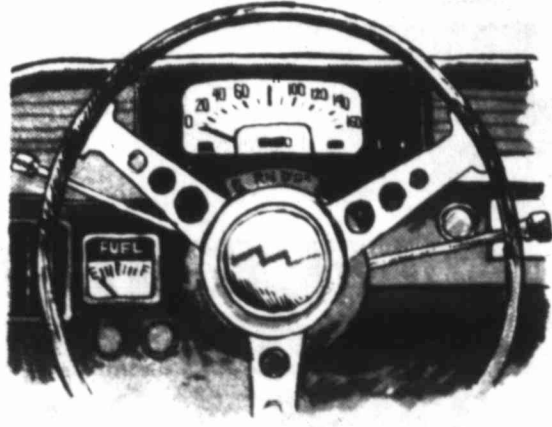

What is especially refreshing is that he is one of the truly brilliant, and lucidly brilliant, thinkers around.

Water pills help Meniere's patients

Paul E. Ruble, M.D.

Dear Dr. Ruble: My doctor tells me I have Meniere's disease. I have attacks of dizziness when I move my head while lying down. During the day it is not so bad, but I have nausea. I can do my housework, but have no other drive. I am 61. My doctor has me on a salt-restricted diet. No medicine. Do you know of any treatment? Is there a cure? Surgery? — Mrs. A.G.

Meniere's is a disturbance of the balance mechanism of the middle ear. We don't know the specific cause, but the symptoms are plentiful and mighty disturbing. They include sound distortion in some, increased sensitivity to sound, hearing loss in the affected ear (usually one ear), and ear noises of the "sea shell" variety. Nausea, vomiting (which you don't mention) and profuse sweating are other parts of the unpleasant picture. Attacks may last up to a few hours — a sensation of whirling around in space, called "vertigo."

About 75 percent of Meniere's patients can control their symptoms with medicine. The most important part of treatment, though, is the low-salt diet your doctor has prescribed. Some doctors give diuretics (water pills) along with the diet. The idea is to reduce the liquid accumulation in the ear. Antihistamines, anti-dizziness pills, and certain drying drugs have been tried, and there are a number of others that may help interrupt attacks.

Your mention of dizziness when lying down and turning your head is interesting. That can indicate another ear problem — paroxysmal positional vertigo. But with this there is no vomiting. It's treated differently. I hope you have been able to describe precisely what brings on your attacks to your physician. It's important with any form of ear-related vertigo. You should probably be seeing an ear doctor.

The only comforting thought I can leave you with on this is that Meniere's disease does tend to improve with time, although hearing loss and noises persist. The typical patient is a male in his middle age. Surgery involving ear nerves is needed in from 10 to 20 percent of patients — those with severe and persistent symptoms. Emotions can be a contributing factor in attacks.

Dear Dr. Ruble: I was stricken with deafness in the left ear, loss of balance, dizziness, vomiting and heart palpitation. The doctors diagnosed it as vertigo, Meniere's disease and "we don't know." I still lose my balance, am dizzy and have loss of hearing in the one ear, also ear noises. They are the whistling kind. Can you come any closer than my doctors to diagnosis? — D.E.T.

You should be able to discount the "we don't know" diagnosis. See the answer to Mrs. A.G. (above).

Hardball in capital

Evans, Novak

WASHINGTON — Just as Sen. Charles (Mac) Mathias of Maryland was about to enrage business lobbyists May 8 by voting out the bill they most hotly oppose, he pulled back the curtain to permit a glimpse of the hardball still being played backstage in Washington in this post-Watergate age of reform.

In casting his vote, Mathias disclosed that a business Political Action Committee (PAC) had threatened to withhold contributions for his reelection campaign next year unless he voted against the bill in the Senate Judiciary Committee. Mathias refused then and still refuses to disclose the name, but it happened to be the PAC of Bristol-Myers Co., the famous pharmaceutical firm.

The PACs, part of the elaborate paraphernalia of financing politics, have been widely used by lobbyists playing hardball with legislators. What was different in this instance was that the Bristol-Myers man played the game with too much zeal and too little finesse, and that Mathias, by blowing the whistle, did not play the game at all.

THE INCIDENT ALSO casts light on the feisty, aggressive attitude of lobbyists in a Capitol Hill climate where neither the president nor the congressional leaders exercise much influence. "There is a kind of mood around about everybody getting a scalp," one business lobbyist told us, "and I think that Bristol-Myers was after Mac's."

Specifically at issue was "Illinois Brick," beyond the ken of the general public but at the top of the agenda for both the business community and the Judiciary Committee's expansive new chairman, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy. Kennedy has been pushing the bill to overturn a 1977 Supreme Court decision involving Illinois Brick Co. Applicable to thousands of companies, the bill would permit parties who are not direct purchasers to collect damages from an antitrust violator.

Besides involving billions in potential antitrust penalties, the bill also is a test case of whether chairman Kennedy can convert the committee, a fortress of reaction for 23 years under now retired James O. Eastland, into a battering ram of reform.

The committee's key vote was Mathias, a liberal Republican viewed by the business lobbyists as worse than any Kennedy Democrat. Oil industry lobbyists took the lead in 1977 when Mathias was maneuvered out of the senior Republican position on the Judiciary Committee, giving way to conservative Sen. Strom Thurmond.

Illinois Brick was in the air when William Greif, Washington-based vice president for governmental affairs of Bristol-Myers, recently conversed with one of Mathias' closest political supporters: Earl Brown, who owns a Bethesda, Md., advertising agency. As Mathias later reported it to the Judiciary Committee: "You tell Mathias if he doesn't vote my way on Illinois Brick, he won't get any of my PAC money."

Nobody this side of television documentaries actually talks that way, suggesting that Mathias was exercising senatorial license. But Brown did get the unmistakable impression that Greif was threatening grief for Mathias from corporate business interests in his 1980 reelection effort.

"Hell, Sen. Mathias is not the kind of candidate we support," Greif told us, adding that his vote on Illinois Brick would make no difference. But records of Bristol-Myers' contributions show that like most PACs, its endorsements are not always discriminating; beneficiaries have included such doyens of the left as former Rep. Bella Abzug of New York and Rep. Andrew Maguire of New Jersey.

GREIF ALSO TOLD US it was Brown who asked him for a Bristol-Myers PAC contribution to Mathias. "That is absolutely untrue," Brown responded to us. Actually, the Bristol-Myers PAC is not exactly Fort Knox. Its high contribution in 1978 was $900 for Thurmond (and a mere $100 for Ms. Abzug). But a number of business PACs linked together can generate real money, and that is what bothers Mathias advisers on the eve of a possible Republican primary challenge.

Despite his protestations of innocence, Greif's name is now linked by his lobbyist colleagues to choice four-letter words for having been clumsy. But the harsher curses are reserved for Mac Mathias whose vote provided the 9-to-8 margin by which a significantly watered-down version (suggested by Mathias) of Kennedy's Illinois Brick bill passed the committee.

That raises the question of why business lobbyist so adamantly resist compromises that would give senators a chance to cast a vote for the individual consumer without persecuting business.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: What kind of a body did Jesus have when He rose from the dead? How was it different from His physical body? — J.S.

DEAR J.S.: The Bible does not give us a full description of Jesus after the resurrection, although it clearly teaches that He was raised from the dead and continued to have a physical body. In other words, He did not just become some type of phantom or ghost or spirit, but truly had a physical body. This is one reason He could challenge the doubting disciple, Thomas: "Put your finger here; see my hands; Reach your hand and put it into my side" (John 20: 27, New International Version).

It is clear, however, that the body of Jesus after the resurrection was different in nature from the body He had before that time. It was what Paul termed a "spiritual body" (I Corinthians 15:44). He was not limited by the ordinary restrictions of time and space. He could, for instance, pass through a wall into a closed room (see John 20:19). More important, it was a body which would never again be touched by death and pain. It seems like it was different in appearance, Jesus' disciples did not always recognize Him immediately, as for example, when He walked with two of them on the road to Emmaus (see Luke 24:13-35).

For us, the resurrection of Jesus reminds that some day all who know Christ will be given new bodies also, and we will live eternally with Him in heaven. I am sure we cannot even begin to imagine the wonder of that. "Listen, I tell you a mystery, we will not all sleep, but we will all be changed — in a flash, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trumpet. For the trumpet will sound, the dead will be raised imperishable, and we will be changed" (I Corinthians 15:51-52, NIV).

All of that is as certain as Christ's resurrection itself, and it gives us hope for the future. But it also is a challenge to be sure we know Christ and live for Him in the brief time we have on this earth to serve Him.

Big Spring Herald Mailbag

Dear Editor:

Thank you for the fine coverage and consideration that you have given the Coahoma High School VOE (Vocational Office Education) program during the past school year.

Your newspaper coverage is such an asset to our program and means a great deal to the VOE students and teacher. You help us let the public know what we are doing. We do appreciate your help in supporting our program.

Mrs. Marie Ethridge,
Coordinator
Vocational Office Education
Coahoma High School

Dear Editor:

I was extremely disappointed by Eileen McGuire's May 30 front page story concerning the Van Nesses and the Dept. of Human Resources.

Being a licensed foster parent for some three years, a past vice president of the HCFPA, and being familiar with the events which precipitated the removal of the foster children from the Van Ness home and the principals involved; I feel that I can justly label the article as yellow journalism.

There is no denying that James and Donna are great foster parents and that their numerous awards and recognitions in the past years are deserved. Nor can it be denied that "Kelly" needs a home environment to develop her full potential or that the Van Ness home would probably be the best situation for her.

What needs to be dealt with is the biased reporting which presents DHR workers, especially the local ones, as heartless ogres who demand total subordination to the whims of the system. As foster parents my wife and I have taken children from Howard, Midland, and Ector counties. As a whole we have found the workers to be cooperative, supportive, interested in their work, interested in the children, and overworked.

There are, of course, exceptions. But the two caseworkers who acted so atrociously in the Van Ness affair have, in the past three months, responded to after-hour and weekend calls to help us deal with a child placed from Ector county, even though such placements from other counties do not fall within their responsibilities.

When my wife and I first became interested in working as foster parents the welfare office of Howard County and the county commissioners were engaged in a disagreement with the DHR (then DPW). The basic contention seemed to be that the state workers were over-stepping their bounds. In the past few years significant steps have been made toward resolving these differences and developing a more effective and coordinated child welfare program for Howard County.

I fear that poorly researched articles such as Ms. McGuire's will only serve to widen the breach and continue to hamper the efforts of welfare workers, both state and county.

Concerning some of the statements in the article:

I agree that Child Welfare is over-regulated, but, what state or locally licensed agency or service isn't? Schools, hospitals, nursing homes, building contractors and even police forces complain of over-regulation.

I have seen the Guidebook mentioned in the article only a few times, have only a small excerpt from it, and have never been required to show that my home or housekeeping meets the Guidebook standards after initial licensing. Considering this and that the regulations are set up to protect those children whose lives have been shattered by neglect, physical or emotional cause I find it difficult to get impassioned about the issue of over-regulation.

In taking children from the three counties we have yet to have a pre-placement visit program as set forth in the DHR manual and outlined in the article. Generally, when a situation develops which necessitates the removal of foster children from a foster home the ideal is replaced by the practical.

Finally, as to the harassment charges, agencies can be harassed as well as individuals.

Stamps will celebrate 50 years of marriage

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Lavell (Red) Stamps, 1018 Bluebonnet, will be honored on their 50th Wedding Anniversary Sunday afternoon from 3-5 p.m. in the parlor of the First Presbyterian Church.

The couple's children and grandchildren will serve as hosts and hostesses for the event.

Mr. Stamps was born to Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Elwin Stamps in Wiley, Tex., and Mrs. Stamps (Olga) is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Sebastian Wolf. She was the ninth of 10 children born on what is now the Powell Ranch near Coahoma.

While attending junior college in Marshall, Stamps was recognized for his outstanding football playing ability. He worked as a lumberman for over 20 years for the Burton Lingo Company.

Mr. Stamps has lived in several towns and it was while he was working in Coahoma that he met his future wife.

The couple were married in Pecos, June 2, 1929 and honeymooned in Carlsbad, N.M.

Two daughters, June and Margaret Ann were born to the Stamps while they were living in Fort Stockton. They then returned to Coahoma where they made their home for many years. In 1957, the family moved to Big Spring.

In addition to being the parents of two daughters, the honored couple are the grandparents of four grandsons and one granddaughter. They have four great-grandchildren and two step-grandchildren.

Mr. Stamps has served as an elder or deacon in the Presbyterian Church since 1932 in Fort Stockton, Coahoma, Seminole and Big Spring.

All friends and relatives are invited to attend the reception.

A List of 'Don'ts' For Recent Widows

DEAR ABBY: My problem is that I am getting so much advice I am dizzy, and here I am asking you for more advice yet, which only proves how mixed up I am.

My husband dropped dead of a massive heart attack three weeks ago. He was only 55 and never had any kind of heart trouble, so you can imagine how shocked I was when he died in the middle of a poker game.

Now I am getting advice from all sides. My sister tells me to sell my house and move into an apartment. My brother tells me to keep the house—it will be worth more next year. One friend tells me to take a trip. Another friend says, "Stay home. You can't run away from yourself."

I'm also getting business advice. Some say, "Sell the business and put your money into securities." Others say, "Hang on to the business and run it yourself."

Abby, how does a widow know who to listen to? CONFUSED IN BUFFALO

DEAR CONFUSED: The best advice I can give you is to take no advice while you are in a state of confusion. You have suffered an enormous shock and need more time to think things through before making any decisions.

In the meantime, don't sell anything, don't buy anything, and don't sign anything. And good luck.

DEAR ABBY: I am 57 and John is 62. We have been going together for nearly four years. I've been married and so has he, and neither of us wants to get married again, but we do enjoy each other's company. We do NOT live together, but I'm not saying we haven't spent some nights together.

We also have taken some wonderful trips together. What I am saying is that we are very close—like a married couple, only we don't live together.

What do I call him when I introduce him to people, or refer to him? It sounds so foolish to call him my boyfriend. He's not my fiancé because we have no plans to marry. He's more than an escort, but I certainly wouldn't call him my lover.

Please advise. OUT OF IDEAS IN BIG D

DEAR OUT: Introduce him as your friend. The nature of your relationship need not be explained.

DEAR ABBY: You made the statement that a child cannot be darker than his darker parent.

That is correct, Abby, if only ONE parent has Negro genes. Skin color has no dominance but is a blending of genes.

It is possible, however for a child to be darker than either of his parents if—and only if—both parents carry Negro genes.

Your answer needs to be clarified. I have known such occurrences to cause husbands to unjustly accuse their wives of adultery.

My authority is "Principles of Human Genetics" by Curt Stern, published by W.H. Freeman & Co., San Francisco, Calif. (1956), pages 325 to 332.

REPROVING YOUR POINT

CONFIDENTIAL TO "RT. IN THE VALLEY": If you love something, set it free. If it comes back to you, it's yours. If it doesn't, it never was.

Who said the teen years are the happiest? For Abby's new booklet "What Teenagers Want to Know," write Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Enclose $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope, please.

TWEEN 12 and 20—Observe bike safety month all year long

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

Teens: This is Bike Safety Month and the National Safety Council has a few suggestions for safer riding.

1. Always drive with, not against, the traffic.
2. Properly maintain your bicycle.
3. Obey all traffic signs and signals.
4. Never drive with a passenger on your bike, and never hitch a ride from another vehicle.
5. Drive single file.
6. Watch for drain gates and other bad road surfaces.
7. Find out local ordinances and register or license your bike with the police department.
8. Make sure your bike has the proper reflectors and wear light-colored clothing, particularly at night.
9. Drive your bike defensively. Always watch out for the other guy.

Dr. Wallace: I have a 2-year-old son. About 10 months ago his daddy was sent to prison for 20 years for killing an off-duty policeman. His daddy and I were never married, but lived together for over three years.

Actually, there is a chance this man will get out in 11 years for good behavior.

Here is my problem. He wants to get married, and I don't know what to do. I love him very much, and it would give my son a name. — Brenda, Fresno, Calif.

Brenda: I see no advantage in getting married to this guy. The name you would be giving your son wouldn't be much to brag about.

You are young and should not let his prison sentence be yours, too. Don't marry him.

Write to Dr. Robert Wallace, TWEEN 12 and 20, in care of this newspaper. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Mother and daughter feted on birthdays

Eula Belle Bowen, a pioneer citizen of Snyder, known to her many friends as "Granny Bowen," will celebrate her 100th birthday Sunday at the Snyder Coliseum from 1 to 6 p.m.

Mrs. Ethel Herrington, Granny's daughter of Snyder, will also be honored on her 76th birthday.

Granny Bowen, the former Eula Bell Wesson, was born Jan. 2, 1880 in Pike County, near Arkansas.

"I rode in an ox-drawn wagon and moved to Hill County, Tex., near Hillsboro in 1885," Mrs. Bowen recalls. There, she lived with her parents and worked on the family farm until she married Jim E. Bowen on Aug. 31, 1902. She moved with her children to Snyder in 1929.

Mrs. Bowen attributes her longevity to her interest in people and her community.

At age 93 Granny Bowen took a horseback ride for the first time in 74 years in California while visiting a son.

Mrs. Bowen made her own living and that of her children, four of whom are living, until she retired at 65. She worked in the government sponsored sewing room at Snyder during WPA days. Up until two years ago, Mrs. Bowen flew to California periodically to visit her two sons and a daughter, J.C. of Bakersfield, J.O. of Ventura and Mrs. Raymond Wise of Taft.

MRS. ETHEL HERRINGTON and EULA BELLE BOWEN

She makes her home with a daughter, Johnnie Lynch.

Granny Bowen kept busy making scrapbooks, writing poems and recording tapes for her family during her retirement years. She made a scrapbook of the Dionne quintuplets which they prize.

Besides her four living children out of 6, Mrs. Bowen has 23 grandchildren, 83 great-grandchildren and approximately 34 great-great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Herrington has four children, 17 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren. She and her husband formerly operated John's Place grocery and fruit stand in Snyder.

Mrs. Herrington's three daughters and son with many of the grandchildren are hosting the surprise birthday party, and cordially invite the many friends of the two honorees to attend.

Big Spring relatives are Frank Bordofski, Granny Bowen's nephew, and Fran and Calvin Bordofski, great-nephews, Mrs. Garland Land, Mrs. Herrington's daughter and Mrs. Frank Vigus, granddaughter, and Denise, Lisa, Amy and Teresa Vigus, great-granddaughters of Mrs. Herrington are also Big Spring residents.

Angela Ruth born to Chappells

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Chappell, Anderson, Ind., announce the birth of a baby daughter, Angela Ruth, born May 26 at 4 a.m. in the Community Hospital at Anderson. Angela weighed 8 pounds and measured 20 inches in length.

The paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Paul R. Chappell, 1809 Owens, Big Spring. Mrs. J.M. Chappell of Oklahoma City is the great-grandparent.

Maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert James of Lubbock.

Six-year-old Jason Chappell welcomes his little sister home.

THE LIGHT TOUCH

By Sherry Wegner

Anyone who thinks marriage is a 50-50 proposition... isn't married.

Moms, if you're looking for an inexpensive summer camp... you'd best pass up the one that lists the weenie roast as a "frankfurter flambe".

The first half of our lives are ruined by our parents and the second half by our children.

When I was young my family's mealtimes offered two choices — take it or leave it!

There are more than two choices of cotton seed at Big Spring Seed & Chemical, 402 N.E. 2nd, whether you choose Lockett; 77 or another brand, we've got it. We also have your choice of herbicides/fertilizers or whatever you need. Come by or call 267-1318.

Disease will rob couple of their last two children

BOYNTON BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Jason Davis, 2½, died in his father's arms 3½ years ago, victim of a blood disorder so rare a doctor says chances of being stricken by it are less than one in a million.

Jason's parents, Doug and Sandy Davis, thought they could never endure such grief again.

Then this past winter, the disease struck both their young daughters.

In December, their daughter Jessica, who is now 2½ years old, developed the recurrent fever and enlarged liver and spleen that signal the disease. In February, their third child, 16-month-old Janessa sickened.

Both daughters were born after doctors told the Davises that girls were not considered susceptible to the fatal sickness. The Davises say they are prepared for Janessa's imminent death, and they know Jessica may not live much longer.

The tragic cycle began five years ago for Davis, 33, and his wife, 27, when their 8-week-old son was hospitalized. It was the first of 27 hospital visits for Jason, who died when he was 32 months old.

Davis said that blood tests taken of the girls showed the same results as those which had been taken of their son. The girls' illness was diagnosed as familial erythrophagocytic lymphohistiocytosis, (FEL), which led doctors to assume the boy died from the same ailment, the father said.

"There's no way of testing for this," says Dr. Julie Blatt, a researcher at the National Institutes of Health in Maryland.

"We don't know enough about it to know what we'd be looking for."

Ms. Blatt says the illness behaves like cancer and is thought to run in families. She recalls only four other cases believed to be FEL and says none survived past early childhood.

Dr. Euan Robertson, director of a special prenatal unit at Jackson Memorial Hospital in Miami, said the odds are more than one in a million that two people carrying the disease would bear children.

Davis said that, although he and his wife have had "every test possible," doctors have not been able to determine whether he or his wife carry the disease.

Robertson said only 100 confirmed cases of FEL can be found in medical literature. The two Davis girls are the only victims in whom the disease has been diagnosed prior to death, he said.

Wishing Wells and Well-Wishers

Few wishing wells left. Those that remain are preserved more by sentiment than superstition. Lots of well-wishers, though! They guild the day with their cheery platitudes. They just know everything will work out right — without their getting involved. Lord, grant me grace to be a friend — not a well-wisher. Give me courage to stand for something, and to stand with others who share the belief. Prime me with vision to build tomorrow... faith to know it will come... patience to await the dawn. Deliver me, Lord, from the sentimentality of simply wishing... the polite indifference of well-wishing the numbing temptation not to get involved. Lead me! To church... conviction... commitment.

Federal judges fail to see need for use of security measures

WASHINGTON (AP)—Federal judges do not always see the need for security measures available to them, from surveillance to electronic doorkeeping devices.

U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. was shot and killed as he left his San Antonio apartment Tuesday.

He had received special protection after an assistant U.S. attorney prosecuting drug cases in the district escaped a shooting attack last fall. Wood recently told officials he did not need the extra security any longer.

"We work in consonance with the federal judges," a spokesman for the U.S. Marshals Office, main custodian of their security, said Thursday. "If a federal judge says he doesn't want a certain type of security, then we have to respect his wishes."

Wood's slaying apparently has not touched off a rush for cover or an intensive new examination of security needs.

The marshals' spokesman said, "We are continuing to provide protection for the federal judiciary. That's one of our prime missions."

The office has requested additional funds and personnel for 1980, but the request stems from an increase in the judiciary.

Congress added 152 judgeships last year.

Marshals are presently responsible for 811 trial judges and full-time magistrates. Extra security was provided for all other judges in the Western District of Texas after Wood's death.

"Each district's security situation is evaluated," the marshals spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said. "Whatever steps necessary to provide security in light of the San Antonio shooting would be taken, he added.

An FBI spokesman said the agency on occasion has helped to protect federal judges but the marshals office has the major share of the responsibility.

In addition to providing manpower to protect judges and their families if necessary, the office participates in deciding what physical security devices are necessary to protect federal courtrooms and judges' chambers.

The discussions may be with the General Services Administration, responsible for all federal buildings, or with the U.S. Postal Service, frequently a fellow tenant.

Barrett McGurn, the Supreme Court's public information officer, said security for courtrooms and judges' chambers has been upgraded in recent years as part of a general increase in federal building security.

"Over the past five or six years, various protective devices have been added to various of the federal courts around the country," he said.

"It's all part of a security program paralleling increased security which we've had at airports and other federal buildings over the past half dozen years," McGurn said.

Among the devices are an electric door release system for judges' chambers that includes a closed circuit television. The system is "designed to avoid having people burst in," he said.

Some judges are able to push distress buttons to summon help if needed. Bulletproof materials are sometimes added to the benches in the courtrooms. The window glass on other courtrooms, particularly those located on a ground floor, has protective glazing.

"Some judges just don't see the need for these various measures. Others on occasion accept them," McGurn said. "They are available to the judge should he need the help."

The decision on physical alterations rests primarily with the judges. McGurn said they have "a wide degree of specific authority over their own premises."

Joe Spaniol, deputy director of the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, said the security devices are not necessarily a result of technological advances or increased concern for security.

Bulletproof materials, for example, are part of the standard design for courtrooms.

"That kind of material has been added to benches for the last 50 years," he said. "That particular phase has been something that's always been installed or built into the general plans."

The administrative office handles the business of the courts and not their legal issues. Spaniol said the decisions about what types of security to install usually are made by the marshals office, the FBI and the General Services Administration.

A decision to increase security for judges after Wood's death would not originate at the administrative office, he said.

"We're always concerned about security, of course. Whether the shooting will result in any further measures being taken will depend on what's recommended by the security agencies," Spaniol said.

Social chaos results in religious potpourri

NEW YORK (AP) — The "religions" of America have become a vast, miscellaneous swarm, ranging from the historically rooted faiths to the new and strangely exotic ones.

Among the many peculiar brands: The "Discordian Society" worshipping Eris, the

REV. AND MRS. E.R. MITCHELL

Church of God plans revival

Revival services will be conducted June 6-10 at College Park Church of God, 603 Tulane.

The Rev. and Mrs. E.R. Mitchell will be the presiding evangelists for the 7:30 p.m. nightly service.

Annointed preaching, prayer for the sick and special singing will accompany each service.

The Rev. Earl Akin, pastor, invites the public to attend.

Junior Altar Society honored for efforts

Pins were presented to members of the Junior Altar Society of Immaculate Heart of Mary Parish at Ascension Thursday Mass, May 24, by Jewel Lyeer, President of the Altar Society.

The junior society is responsible for seeing that vessels, furnishings and vestments for the priest are set out for school liturgy. Members assist the Altar Society in its various functions.

In the spring, the junior society made two vestments goddess of chaos, and dedicated to anarchy; the "Psychedelic Venus Church" idolizing drugs and sex; the "Never Dies" who maintain they are endlessly reincarnated with their same identities.

"I haven't verified whether they've been able to pull that one off," says the Rev. Dr. J. Gordon Melton, a United Methodist minister who is probably the most widely and directly informed expert on the nation's modern religious potpourri.

"We've got all kinds," he says. "A lot of them have been hidden."

He's spent the last 16 years in research, mingling with witches' covens, combing occult publications and ads, checking out Satanists, Druids, Flying-Saucer believers and others around the country, gathering facts about their lifestyles, organizations and ideas.

It's like "detective" work, he notes in the foreword of his two-volume, 1,200-page "The Encyclopedia of American Religions," published this spring by McGraw-Hill Publishing Company, Wilmington, N.C.

The compilation, the most comprehensive, modern summary yet amassed of religious groups in this country, their concepts and methods, deals with 1,203 of them, five times more than the 223 listed in standard directories.

He said a "new push" of religious proliferation characterized the early 1970's. Such periods occur cyclically about every 25 years, he said, typically accompanied by economic pinch, high birth rates and in the wake of social stresses, such as the late 1960's.

Father Gully blessed and wears for school liturgy.

Members of the society are Sandra Arellano, Michelle Castillo, Martha Flores, Rosita Garcia, Laura Gilbert, Pam Martinez, Monika Miranda, Cynthia Puente, Marie Ramirez, Jennifer Ross, Lisa Salazar, Nelda Saldivar, Mollie Thompson and Modesta West.

Their religion teacher is Mrs. Kenneth (Gretchen) Sprinkle.

FIRST SUNDAY — Members of Hillcrest Baptist Church will worship in their new church for the first time Sunday. The congregation has spent the last month painting and renovating the former Grace Baptist Church, across from Malone-Hogan Hospital, for the move from S. Lancaster. Present at formal ribbon-cutting ceremonies Thursday were Bill Rogers, behind the group at left, and from left, Rex Greenwood, Terry Carter, Willard Hendrick, Mark Hyatt, Sam Robertson, the Rev. Phillip McClendon, Gary Phillips and Johnnie Lou Avery.

Trinity Baptist has Bible school

Toddlers through teens may attend Daily Vacation Bible School at Trinity Baptist Church, June 4-8.

Teachers and workers will be employing the theme "God's Hands" in teaching from the Bible and work-books. The week begins 8:30 a.m. Monday when participating children will assemble in front of the auditorium and march into their classes to register. The students will go directly to their departments

Tuesday through Friday, 9:11:30 a.m.

Awards will be given in each department and the Attendance Plaque will be awarded according to rules.

There will be singing and contest in daily assemblies and refreshments will be served daily.

Participants who need bus service may call 267-6344, 267-6055 or 263-0775.

Lecture open to public

Wanda Justice, Snyder, vice-president of the Eagle's Forum, will speak to the men and women's groups of the First Church of God, 2009 Main, at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday. The public is invited. Mrs. Justice's subject will be "The International Year of the Child."

The Eagle's Forum organization opposes the Equal Rights Amendment. Mrs. Justice spoke in Big Spring in an open meeting at the Pioneer Natural Gas Company Feb. 2.

Summer Bible school begins

Hillcrest Baptist Church, newly relocated at 2000 West FM 700, across from Malone-Hogan Hospital, will conduct Vacation Bible School.

The classes meet 8:30-11:30 a.m. June 4-8. The weeklong school will include Bible projects, games, songs, recreation and refreshments daily.

The week will conclude with a picnic, Family Night and open house June 8.

The school consists of three children's departments and two for pre-schoolers.

For more information, call 263-8309.

Three to be confirmed at St. Paul Lutheran

A public examination and confirmation will be held at St. Paul Lutheran Church for three youths Sunday.

The Rev. Carroll C. Kohl, pastor, will officiate at the special service.

The youths are Rodney Jonas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rudy Jonas; Diane Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guil Jones, and Scott Nelson, son of Mr. and Mrs. J.D. Nelson.

Their confirmations follow two years of extensive instruction in the Christian faith. During Sunday ser-VICES, they will make public confessions of their faith and take vows of continued faith and service to God and their fellow man.

Special musical selections are being prepared by the choir under the direction of Mrs. Rene Brown.

Pope John Paul II returns home

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Throngs of Poles headed for Warsaw today to welcome Pope John Paul II, the first Polish ruler of the Roman Catholic Church who comes home Saturday for the first time since his election seven months ago.

At least a million visitors are expected in the Polish capital, a city of 1.3 million. The government set up an elaborate system of roadblocks to bar non-essential traffic that with the vast crowds expected would cause chaos in Warsaw and the other major cities on the nine-day papal itinerary.

The government appealed to travelers to use buses, trains and other forms of public transit. Special traffic controls for Warsaw extended as far away as Sochaczew, 32 miles from the capital. Parking lots were set up as much as eight miles from places the pope is to visit.

Special detours were laid out for drivers, and police circulated instructions on how to get from place to place.

They issued passes to motorists with pressing reasons to drive into blockaded areas.

Officials also hoped limited alcohol sales would control the crowds. Liquor stores will be closed throughout the country Saturday for a regular monthly day off and on Sunday as they always are for the Sabbath. In addition, officials in Krakow ordered the liquor stores closed while the pope is visiting the city where he was archbishop when he was elected.

St. Norbert's Church in Krakow urging parishioners to pledge total abstinence.

The pope will be welcomed at an airport arrival ceremony in Warsaw Saturday morning, then cheered by crowds lining the streets as his motorcade travels to the Warsaw Cathedral. He will meet with Communist Party chief Edward Gierek and celebrate Mass and speak in Victory Square.

He goes to Poznan, in western Poland, on Sunday and then to Gniezno, Poland's first capital, for another Mass and meetings with young people and dignitaries.

From Monday to Wednesday he will be in Czestochowa, site of Poland's most sacred shrine, the Jasna Gora Monastery. On Thursday, he visits his birthplace, Wadowice, and the Nazi death camp at Auschwitz for a memorial service, then returns to Krakow.

Next Friday, June 8, he goes to Nowy Targ to celebrate Mass, then returns to Krakow in the afternoon. On Saturday he visits the Holy Cross Sanctuary in neighboring Mogila and again returns to Krakow.

On Sunday, his last day in Poland, he celebrates Mass in Krakow and delivers an address and then departs for Rome in the afternoon.

Halina Kwiatkowska, 57, a leading Krakow actress described by an Italian magazine as the pope's youthful love before he was ordained a priest, said Wednesday they were just "good friends" in high school.

AMERICA'S SWEETHEART REMEMBERS — Silent film star Lillian Gish and Douglas Fairbanks Jr., stepson of Mary Pickford, leave memorial services for film star Mary Pickford Thursday at the Forest Lawn Memorial Park in Glendale. Miss Pickford, who was known as "America's Sweetheart," died Tuesday at age 86. It was a "very, very private" funeral which had been requested by the star who was once the most famous in the world.

New judges begin work

HOUSTON (AP) — Four men and a woman became new U.S. District judges Thursday at the same time funeral services were being conducted some 300 miles away in San Antonio for federal Judge John H. Wood, the victim of an assassin's bullet in the back.

During the investiture of the new judges, the murder of Wood was mentioned in prayer, in a minute of silent honor, and in the speech of Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen, D-Texas.

Both Bentsen and Chief Judge Reynaldo G. Garza called it a day of gladness, but one tempered with sadness.

Among those taking the oath was from Garza was Gabrielle K. McDonald, 37, a Houston lawyer and the first black ever named to a federal judgeship in Texas.

Others were Norman W. Black, a U.S. Magistrate from Houston; George P. Kazen, 39, a Laredo attorney and nephew of Rep. Abraham Kazen, D-Texas; State Civil Appeals Judge George E. Cire, 56, and James DeAnda, 53, a McAllen attorney and a member of the Mexican-American Legal Defense and Education Fund.

Bentson Music Hall were conducted under tight security.

U.S. Marshal T.R. Conner conducted under tight security.

U.S. Marshal T.R. Coney conducted under tight security.

U.S. Marshal T.R. Coney said abated under tight security.

U.S. Marshal T.R. Coney said about 100 Houston policemen, including members of the SWAT teams, the Criminal Investigation Department, and the uniform squad, patrolled the building and the nearby streets.

At least 20 marshals moved through the large crowd. Coney said there were also U.S. Secret Service and FBI agents on the scene.

Bentson told the crowd of about 500 the death of Wood, nicknamed "Maximum John" for the stiff penalties he handed down on drug-related cases, "was a senseless, tragic killing of an able, very good man."

"The murder of Judge Wood was not only the taking of a human life, but an assault against the judiciary. It was an act of terrorism. It was a reflection of that attitude of everything goes."

"The slaying of the judge attacked the very foundation of our country," he said.

by Nathan Poss

Johnny "Lam" Jones donated his Olympic gold medal that he won in the 76 Montreal games to the Texas Special Olympics for the handicapped earlier this week.

Jones, an All-Southwest Conference receiver and track sprinter for UT, ran a leg on the United States winning 400-meter relay team in 76. He dropped out of school this semester, but plans to return to the Austin campus next fall.

"I wanted to find a way to help. People out here give their time and their love, but this thing needs funds, too," Jones said.

Jones apparently wanted the gold medal to be sold to help the Special Olympics, but Denis Poulos, director of the state meet, said: "That medal is too special to us (To sell it). It's a part of that man's life. It says something about the guy that he can do something like this."

Eunice Shriver, president of the Special Olympics, said: "It's amazing when you consider how much time he spent to win that medal, you know how much it means to him."

Jones spoke in a way that I wish many of us, including myself, could look at life: "The thing is, you come out and watch these kids, and you realize how lucky you are," Jones said. "Athletes don't always appreciate their own gifts, but coming out here makes you think. It makes you want to do whatever you can to help. Right now, I don't have a whole lot of money, but I have the medal."

For any of you basketball fans that couldn't stay awake to watch the fourth game of the NBA championship series between Washington and Seattle, you missed one helluva game.

Tuesday night at 10:30 is usually no time to be watching the roundball sport, and I did fall asleep there for a little while early in the third quarter. But luckily, the loud Seattle fans awoke me from my dreamy state, and a bowl of sherbet and wheat germ kept me going until the end.

And anyone that claims that today's pro basketballers are overpaid should have watched the slugfest. Man, after watching Gus Williams and Dennis Johnson race up and down the court, and Wes Unseld and Jack Sikma perform legal warfare, I was even tired.

The Bullets now find themselves in the unenviable position of trying to become the first team in NBA history to rally from a 3-1 deficit to win the championship series. And although it's possible, it is highly unlikely against a team with the great depth that Seattle has.

Washington, however, became the third team in the NBA history to rally from a 3-1 deficit and win in a playoff series when they knocked off San Antonio. But as Bullet guard Kevin Grevey acknowledged: "This is about the toughest position we can be in. You never want to get down this far to any team, especially a team as good as Seattle. We came back against San Antonio, but Seattle is much better."

Speaking of the NBA finals, there is another bit of controversy involving the officiating that has marked the playoffs this year. Earlier, San Antonio Coach Doug Moe was fined $3,000 for letting his feelings known after the Spurs lost to Washington in the Eastern Conference finals.

Fines have been known to have been levied against NBA coaches, players, and management. However, when Mrs. Sam Schulman, wife of Sonics owner Mr. Schulman, raised a little havoc of her own, it left most everybody a little confused.

Mrs. Schulman allegedly accused referee Ed Rush of being blatantly dishonest on his call at the end of game one when he whistled Dennis Johnson for fouling Bullet guard Larry Wright. Wright then made two free throws to give the Bullets a two-point victory.

This raised the question: Can the NBA league office discipline the wife of a clubowner? Simone Goudine, a top aide to NBA Commissioner Larry O'Brien, stated: "My personal view is that the comments of a man's wife are outside our jurisdiction."

Which is only fair. I mean, how many coaches' wives to unobjectively take the side of their bedmate's.

Jack Kent Cooke's selling of his sports empire (the Forum, the Los Angeles Kings of the NHL, and the Lakers of the NBA) appears to have made him a handsome $43 million. Cooke bought the Forum for $16 million, the Kings for two million, and the Lakers for five million. Together, he sold the sports estate for about $67 million. Which makes it easy to understand why he could lure Earvin "Magic" Johnson to sign with the Lakers.

SPORTSHORTS...One of the details that is seemingly keeping Indiana State star Larry Bird from signing with the Celtics is that he feels that he could be paid more than Magic Johnson. Personally, if I had to make a choice between paying to watch the two, I'd choose Magic. Bird, however, could be a financial bonanza for the Celtics, as he is the first white superstar since Bill Walton to enter the NBA. Bird appeals to the more conservative ticket buyers, too, as he is a small town, All-American type, while Walton is an political activist that enjoys wine and The Grateful Dead...San Francisco Giant pitcher Bob Knepper recently hit his first major league homer against the Atlanta Braves in the fourth inning. Celts try again to sign Bird

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics and the attorney for college basketball star Larry Bird will meet Tuesday in an effort to sign the Indiana State college player-of-the-year to a National Basketball Association contract.

A meeting between the two sides had been scheduled for today, but Red Auerbach, Celtics president and general manager, said Bird's agent, Bob Woolf, "had to be away and I had to be away."

"We won't even be talking about it again until Tuesday," Auerbach said Thursday.

"Both sides are taking the weekend off," said Woolf.

WHAT DID YOU SAY? — Milwaukee Brewers catcher Charlie Moore argues with home plate umpire Alan Clark after the Yankees Buckeye Dent was called safe on a close play at the plate during Thursday night's game in Milwaukee. Moore didn't win the argument but the Brewers won the game 5-4. Only three umpires worked the contest due to a collision in Wednesday night's game which sent umpire Lou DiMuro to the hospital.

Tony Mann named all-star

Tony Mann, former Big Spring High School baseball stalwart, recently was honored on the First Team All-Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference baseball squad.

Mann, who was a freshman at Western New Mexico University the past year, played both football and baseball while attending Big Spring High School. He was an all-district performer for Coach Tommy Collins Bovines in 1978.

Mann earned the All-Rocky Mountain honors by hitting .389, with 11 homers and 28 runs batted in. His 11 homers led the conference in that category.

Mann is playing both football and baseball for Western New Mexico.

Panola is triumphant

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — Robert Culley saved his best for last. After being touched for two runs in the seventh inning and getting himself into a tight spot in the eighth, Culley reared back and struck out the last five batters he faced.

It helped preserve a 4-2 victory for Panola, Texas, over Middle Georgia Thursday night and force a second championship game tonight between the same two teams in the National Junior College World Series.

Entering Thursday night's contest, Middle Georgia was undefeated in the double-elimination tournament and could have wrapped up the title with a victory over once-beaten Panola.

But Culley had other ideas. The right-hander, who was throwing mostly sliders, fired a six-hitter and struck out nine, while walking just one batter. Both Middle Georgia runs were unearned.

Panola took a 1-0 lead in the bottom of the fifth. Mark Farrah, the tournament's leading hitter with a .556 average, doubled, and Brian Harwell stroked a run-scoring single to left field.

In the sixth, the Texas team added three more runs. First baseman Chris Campbell doubled to open the inning, and Burk Goldthorn followed with a home run. Eric Smith tacked on another homer later in the inning. Campbell's hit was his 14th of the tournament, tying the World Series record.

Middle Georgia rallied in the seventh. Mike Swain laced a two-run double, scoring Tommy Dunbar, who had reached on an error, and Bobby Roche, who had walked.

Culley was in trouble again in the eighth when Jerome Whitfield singled and went to third on an error. But the Panola pitcher then fanned Dunbar and Roche to end the threat, and struck out the side in the ninth to preserve the victory.

Middle Georgia pitcher Dennis Alvarez, who went the distance, suffered only his second loss in two seasons. His combined two-year record is 17-2.

Club plans tourney

The Big Spring Country Club is gearing up for the annual Big Spring Partnership Golf Tournament, which will be held June 9-10 over 36 holes.

Two tourneys slated here

Bill Moore has announced that the Waterhole Lounge, located at 3204 W. Hwy. 80, will be the scene Saturday of the City-Wide Pool and Shuffleboard Tournaments.

The eight competitors in each tournament will be shooting for $1,000 in prize money. Competition will get under way about noon and will continue until about 9 p.m.

Entries in the pool tournament include Buck McMullan, Tano Chavarria, Wayne Jonke, Rodney Martin, Johnny Martin, Frank Garza, Ben Brown and Clay Harris.

Playing in the shuffleboard tournament will be James Christmas of Chandler, Ariz., Ray James and Kenny Ellis, both of Big Spring; Willie Hull, Midland; Mike Mosley, George Sewell and Larry Mosley, all of Lubbock; and Junior Atkinson, Amarillo.

Teams can enter either of two flights. Scratch or Handicap. The Handicap division will tee off at 9 a.m., while the Scratch division will not get away until 2 p.m.

Entry fee will be $60 per team. The first place team in each flight will share $700 in merchandise and the tournament committee, which is headed by Don Osborne, has decided to play eight places in each division.

Fifty-five teams are now entered in the meet and no more than 100 tandems will be accepted, according to C.G. Griffin, club pro.

Among top threats in the tournament are the duo of Ron and B. Broadrick, along with Pat Weaver and Mike Hall.

All tournament entries are eligible to attend a Saturday night barbecue and dance. Those planning to take part in the two-day event should contact Osborne or the club house no later than Thursday at 5 p.m.

Clements resurrects presidential primary issue

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements has resurrected the presidential primary issue by saying he might include it in a special legislative session if other states join Texas in a regional primary.

"If things start bearing fruit, ... it's possible that I will consider it sufficiently important that we might call a special session to accomplish this," the governor told a weekly news conference Thursday.

Clements said a regional primary would give Southwestern states greater influence in national politics.

"It would realign the focus and perspective of what's happening in a state like New Hampshire," he said of the state with the earliest primary. "That thing is blown up out of all proportion to its importance."

A presidential primary bill died in the regular legislative session that adjourned Monday. However, the state Republican Party officials say they will hold a 1980 primary under their own rules regardless whether the Legislature passes a bill in special session.

The governor earlier announced he would call a special session sometime before 1981 on initiative and referendum.

Clements called Speaker Bill Clayton from the audience and invited him up to the microphones.

"It depends on a lot of legwork," Clayton said in assessing chances for holding a presidential primary on the same day as Oklahoma and Arkansas.

The speaker said he has talked with his counterparts in both states. Oklahoma officials especially are interested in holding their primary with other states in March, he added.

"Texas has 26 electoral votes and with Oklahoma and Arkansas, that would be sufficient strength to get the attention of any presidential candidate," Clayton said.

The speaker said he has also talked with officials in Louisiana, Alabama and Georgia, but those states were less interested than Oklahoma and Arkansas.

A bill that would hold a presidential primary separately from the May general primary elections died largely because of the five-day boycott by 12 "Killer Bees" senators who broke a quorum.

The dozen rebels claimed the bill would encourage cross-over voting and was rigged to help former Gov. John Connally's campaign for the Republican presidential nomination.

The Killer Bees also said the proposal, pushed strongly by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, would continue the edge that conservative Democratic legislators hold in most districts over liberal Democratic and Republican challengers.

Clements agreed furor over the primary was a fight between liberal and conservative wings of the Democratic Party.

"We in the Republican Party are going to have a primary," he said. "The Democratic Party is going to make a very bad mistake if they don't give the people of Texas the opportunity to vote in a presidential primary."

He dismissed arguments the Hobby-backed proposal was tailored to Connally.

"I don't think it has anything to do whatsoever with a single presidential candidate," he said. "You know we hear that certain people are going to be hurt and certain people are going to be elected."

Clements said he had not ruled out moving general primary elections to March on the same day as a regional presidential primary.

Both the state Republican and Democratic parties oppose scheduling a presidential primary separately from the general party elections.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, JUNE 2, 1979

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You are able to reduce your various ambitions to a detailed and workable success. Get needed rest and build up your sagging energy.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You can accomplish a good deal at whatever your tasks are. Take time to improve your state of health so you feel better, look better.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Fine day for making yourself look more attractive and coming to a better understanding with loved one. Steer clear of the social for the time being.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Good day to make home improvements and establish more harmony with kin. Study into new projects also. Evening is for enjoying the cultural side of life.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Shop and do other errands for which there is little time during the work week. You can deal with others satisfactorily now.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Fix your budget and make any needed repairs to your home during the day. Ask for advice of one who is an expert. Take no risks with money; don't invest heavily.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Get busy at whatever will bring you more happiness and success. Don't argue with a good friend. You can gain some aim easily if you are clever with others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Contact an adviser who has the right slant on whatever is most important to you. Plan to be with a loved one. Drive with utmost care.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Get together with good friends at enjoyable places and be happy. Gain personal goals that mean much to you. Don't neglect business matters that can be handled today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be sure to handle public matters to which you have been committed. Plan how to have more success at your regular work. Don't neglect any marketing you have to do.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Plan some new course that can make you more successful in the future. You can easily comprehend more modern methods at this time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Keep promises and you benefit. Please loved ones and get good results. Avoid one who is double-dealing, not trustworthy.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A good time to have long talks with associates and plan better with them. Handle civic duties early for best results. Relax tonight and build up your energies.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have every ability at whatever profession requires much attention be given to details. Teach early the finest religious principles of which you are aware, and still leave room for individual thought.

AUSTIN — Politicians who like to paint journalists as pinko liberals would have a hard time putting their brush to Dan Malone.
 Dan was editor of the University of Texas student newspaper last year and was criticized by some students for his conservative ways. He joined us nine months ago as a part-time intern while working on a master's degree in business.
 Dan ends his internship this month, no less conservative but more concerned about the mixing of business and politics.
 As his internship project, Dan spent hundreds of hours going through campaign-finance files in the secretary of state's office. That led to a three-part series on special-interest contributions to 1979 legislators.
 The stories show how special-interest groups gave 55 percent of all contributions to legislators. A few lawmakers received 100 percent of their political money from these groups. A few others refused all special-interest money.
 As he bent over his calculator and card files working on the stories, Dan occasionally was heard to murmur, "I can't believe this."
 If you read Dan's series, you understand why.
 Political action committees of special-interest groups undoubtedly are the dominant force in Texas politics today. Their contributions are critical to politicians who face ever-rising costs of campaigns.
 Both contributors and recipients are quick to say that there is no deal cut for the money — or the free meals and booze that lobbyists hand out in Austin.
 Votes can't be bought, they say.
 That probably is true in most cases.
 But to ask us to believe that thousands are raised and spent on particular legislators without the expectation of a future repayment is like asking us to buy ocean-front property in the Panhandle.
 Special-interest contributions and lobby spending are business decisions — investments based on presumed future actions.
 The lobbyists who make the decisions have to get results to keep their jobs.
 At the very least, the money buys attention, and often that is enough in the hectic world of lawmaking.
 Business interests in one form or another have dominated the Texas Legislature throughout its existence.
 It could be argued that the development of political action committees in recent years is democratic in that their funds often come from

'Killer Bees' fiasco scars Hobby's image

By SCOTT CARPENTER

AUSTIN — When the 1979 Legislature began, Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby seemed to have everything going for him.
 Liberals, moderates, conservatives and lobbyists all considered Hobby their protector.
 Armed by his dominance of the Senate, Hobby would be able to shield them from an unpredictable Republican governor and the always unpredictable House.
 As the 1979 session ended, liberals and moderates are bitterly disappointed, and conservatives and lobbyists are wondering exactly how much control Hobby has over the Senate.
 The Killer Bee fiasco is the latest in a series of scars on Hobby's image.
 The first concerns developed when Hobby threw a party for lobbyists to enlist help in his fight against initiative and referendum efforts — attempts to give Texans the right to enact or repeal laws on their own.
 All wondered why Hobby needed help in defeating such a proposal if he really controlled the Senate. On those proposals, which require constitutional amendments, Hobby needed only 11 of the 31 senators on his side.
 Liberals and moderates were angered that Hobby would go to the lobby, possibly making commitments they didn't like.
 And, Hobby went a step further, getting the automobile dealers' lobbyist to pick up the tab.
 Consumer interests were angered when Hobby aided passage of business-backed amendments to the Consumer Protection Act. Civil libertarians were irked that Hobby would cut a deal with Gov. Bill Clements to allow passage of the first wiretap bill, even though it was watered down to allow taps only in hard drug cases.

 Organized labor and hard-core Democrats are upset that Hobby would push so hard for a presidential primary bill aimed at helping Republican presidential hopeful John Connally and conservative Democrats.
 But, as Katy Davis, lobbyist for the Texas Consumer Association, and others point out, Hobby hasn't changed colors.
 He has operated behind the scenes during his six previous years as lieutenant governor.
 In 1972 Hobby rode on a tide of reform of the Texas Legislature, but in 1973 he was behind delaying tactics on reform bills pushed by Common Cause. He also tied up the original consumer protection act until then Attorney General John Hill threatened to go public with the matter.
 This legislative session was different, Hobby has been catapulted into the spotlight now that he is the top elected Democrat, and the most likely Democratic gubernatorial nominee in 1982.

While the liberals and moderates are irritated, and the conservatives and lobbyists wonder about Hobby's power, it is unclear whether this will have any effect on 1982 elections.
 Were the election held today, Hobby would be in trouble.
 But, as one labor representative observed, "You know things change daily in the world of politics."

many small contributions.
 But there also is a good argument that political action committees narrow the vision of political institutions.
 Committees tend to have limited interests and try to focus legislative attention on them. When they succeed, there is less time for legislators to consider and pass laws of a general nature.
 The current session seems to be dominated by special-interest bills, with the leadership of both houses pushing them.
 Perhaps there is no relation between the growth of special-interest contributions and the legislative time spent on special-interest bills.
 But Dan Malone wonders about that. And so do we. And so should you.

On the light side

Airborne 'I dos' renewed

MIAMISBURG, Ohio (AP) — Gladys Moore recently made her second airplane flight in a half century, and for the same reason: she married Owen Moore in a plane and renewed the vow 50 years later.
 The ceremony was performed by their son, the Rev. Charles Moore, on a 1½-hour flight from his home church in Chicago.
 They were married in 1929 in a one-engine Fairchild cabin monoplane on a flight between South Bend, Ind., and Middletown.
 A crowd of 2,000 showed up at South Bend, but the couple had to ask five ministers before one, the Rev. Elmer Ward Cole, agreed to perform the original service.
 "All of them seemed to be afraid to go, except this one," Moore said Sunday.

Gourmet goat eats antiques

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Don't sneak any hacksaws into the newest occupant at the Huntington Animal Shelter — he'll eat 'em.
 The culprit, a pygmy goat, is accused of eating $50 worth of house plants and cushions on an antique chair.
 Shelter director Pat Thomas says she picked up the animal Thursday after receiving a complaint from Joan Hensley. She says Mrs. Hensley told her the goat suddenly appeared on her porch and proceeded to devour the plants and cushions.
 "That goat can do more damage in an hour than a bunch of kids can do in a week," said Mrs. Hensley, who complained that the animal butted her front door and generally made her "a nervous wreck."
 Unless the owner shows up, Ms. Thomas said she would keep the pesky pygmy under lock and key for five days, then put it up for adoption.
