

Truck stops blockaded; convoy to capital begins

By The Associated Press

Amid growing threats of a nationwide truckers strike, some truck stops were blockaded today and some others shut down voluntarily as a convoy of big rigs rolled toward Washington to protest fuel prices.

A convoy of 10 to 15 trucks, led by driver Robert Somers of Colorado, left Frederick, Md., for a protest drive into the nation's capital.

Jim Archer, president of the Colorado Independent Truckers Association, which is supporting the shutdown, said, "Those drivers who are out on the road have until midnight Wednesday to get home."

"If they're about to leave now, they better think twice about it, because we're going to try to get as many truck stops as possible to go along with us this time."

Archer said the truckers want guaranteed 100 percent fuel allocation, equalization of weight limits throughout the nation and fuel prices rolled back and frozen.

Elsewhere, all major truck stops were reported closed in Oklahoma City and Tulsa, Okla. — either voluntarily or involuntarily — as independent truckers attempted to put the brakes to truck traffic.

About 20 tractor-trailer rigs continued to block the pumps at a truck stop in Newport, Ark.

"We might be here two days, two weeks or two months," said Henry Douglas, 43, of Tuckerman, Ark. "We can't leave. We don't have the money to buy fuel. When you're out of money and out of fuel, you're in trouble."

Operators at some truck stops shut down diesel pumps today and truck blockades impeded traffic at other service stations as independent truckers acted on a threat to shut down rigs nationwide.

A convoy of trucks led by driver Robert Somers of Colorado gathered in Frederick, Md., Sunday in preparation for a protest drive into Washington, D.C., today.

And about 350 truckers from 13 states vowed Sunday in Sioux City, Iowa, to park their rigs indefinitely to protest high diesel fuel costs.

The truckers are seeking an end to the high cost of diesel fuel and fuel surcharges, uniform length for trucks and suspension of the 55 mph speed limit which they say is not fuel-efficient for big trucks.

Somers said that when the trucks reached their capital they would disperse, with only three continuing into the city.

"We don't want to tie up the city's traffic," he said.

A 6-week-old organization of independent truckers, which claims about 2,500 members, mostly in the Southeast, called for a nationwide shutdown beginning Friday. A note on a bulletin board at a truck stop in Ontario, Calif. said:

"Attention: National shutdown June 8, 1979. Please go home and shut down and contact your local representative of Independent Double-O (Owner-Operators) Union of America."

Dave Edwards of Greensboro, N.C., head of the union, wrote, "We want everybody to be home. We want them to have their loads off. We don't want them to block any truck stops or any fuel pumps."

"Our idea is to get the general public behind us because they're getting the shaft as well as us when they pull up to get gas."

General strike aimed at Somoza

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Stores shut down and streets were deserted in this capital city today as Nicaragua's popular opposition launched a general strike aimed at toppling President Anastasio Somoza.

The city's main market, normally a beehive of activity, was a ghost town of empty stalls. Large department stores and other businesses were boarded up. Buses and taxis were not running.

The strike, called by Sandinista National Liberation Front guerrillas and backed by a number of moderate opposition groups, followed a night of violence in Managua and other cities while a conventional-style war raged along the Costa Rican border.

A similar nationwide general strike accompanied a Sandinista-led uprising that was crushed by Somoza's troops last September.

Heavy firing was heard in Managua Sunday night. Tracer bullets could be seen from the Intercontinental Hotel next to Somoza's headquarters.

Seventy-five percent of the stall owners in Managua's main market had said they planned to close today.

A number of moderate opposition groups endorsed the guerrillas' call for a general strike. Lines formed at supermarkets, banks and gasoline stations over the weekend as jittery residents stocked up.

The West German Embassy evacuated 74 persons, mostly women and children, from Managua Sunday night on a chartered Panamanian plane that flew them to Costa Rica.

A U.S. Embassy source said the State Department has issued no new advisories, but a warning against traveling to Nicaragua for other than essential business has been in effect since last March.

Fighting was reported in the northwest in the cities of Leon, Chinandega and Chichigalpa, and the guerrillas overran Chichigalpa Sunday.

Five foreign journalists who entered the town found the national guard, Somoza's army and police force, bottled up in its garrison.

The rebels barricaded the streets and set up ambushes. Most residents stayed indoors.

Somoza flew by helicopter Sunday to the hamlet of Sapoa, near the Costa Rican border, for a look at the fighting in the south.

Somoza said the guerrillas were well trained, dug in and "their mortar fire is very accurate." The president, whose family has dominated this lowa-sized nation for 42 years, said, "We probably will launch a major offensive in the south within 48 hours."

The guerrillas of the Sandinista National Liberation Front take their name from a rebel leader who fought the U.S. Marines who put Somoza's father into power in the 1930s.

Pope Paul continues to defy Eastern Communist leaders

CZESTOCHOWA, Poland (AP) — Pope John Paul II came to Poland's holiest shrine today, upbraided the Communist government for denying the late Pope Paul VI permission to visit, and assailed what he called "the great moral threats" to human rights. It was the second time in two days he defied Eastern Europe's Communist leaders.

"He was the pope that did so much for the normalization of the life of the church in Poland, particularly with regard to the present arrangement of the territories to the west and to the north," John Paul II said of Paul VI, who sought twice to come to Poland but never received permission.

"He was the pope of our millennium. It was for the millennium (of the Polish church in 1966) that he wanted to be here as a pilgrim together with the sons and daughters of the Polish nation."

On the third day of his historic pilgrimage to his Communist homeland, the pontiff celebrated Mass at the Shrine of Mary at the hilltop Jasna Gora Monastery, the symbol of Polish Catholicism, and prayed:

"Mother of the church, grant that the church may enjoy freedom and peace in fulfilling her saving mission and that to this end she become mature with a new maturity of faith and inner unity."

"Help us to overcome opposition and difficulties... Help us to overcome the great moral threats against the fundamental spheres of life and love."

The pope said that justice and peace can only be protected through a respect "for the rights of peoples and of nations" and not be solved through "hatred, war and self-destruction."

The pontiff, clad in glistening white robes and skull cap, walked to a red-canopied platform looking out over a vast field filled with the faithful as a choir sang hymns.

"Jasna Gora is, in fact, not only a place of pilgrimage for Poles of the motherland and of the whole world but also the nation's shrine," the pope told the thousands of Poles gathered before him.

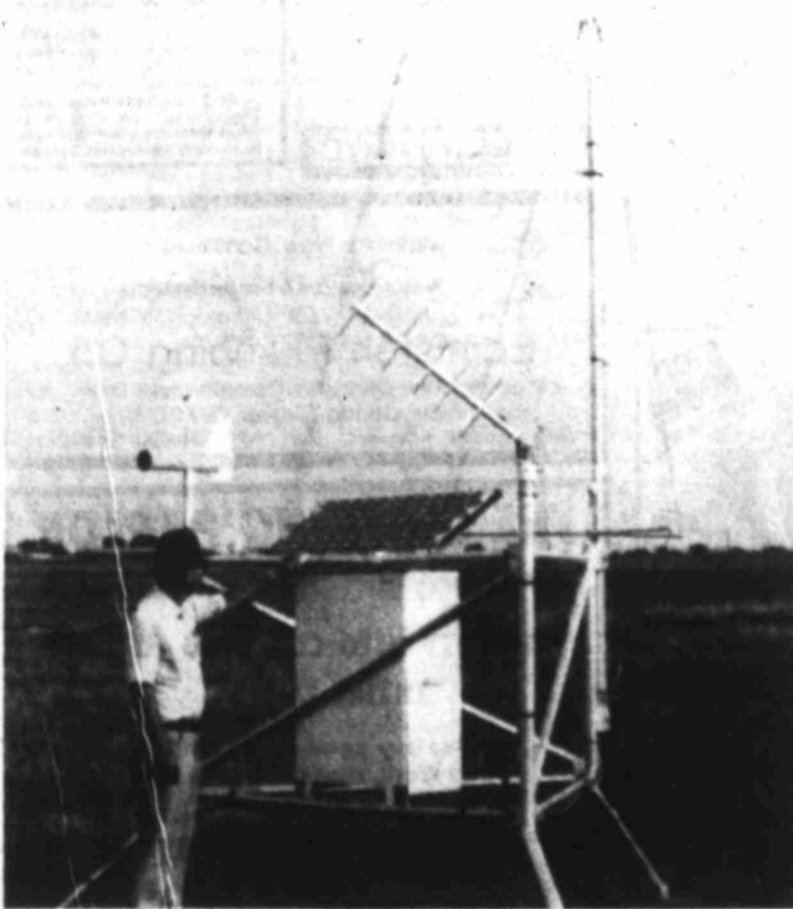

"One must listen in this holy place in order to hear the beating of the heart of the nation in the heart of the mother."

On Sunday the pope defied Eastern Europe's Communist rulers and their long campaign to promote atheism and hailed the Roman Catholics of the Soviet Bloc nations for preserving their faith and unity.

"Is it not Christ's will, is it not what the Holy Spirit disposes, that this Polish pope, this Slav pope should at this precise moment manifest the spiritual unity of Christian Europe?" the pontiff said as he celebrated Mass at the cathedral in Gniezno, Poland's first capital.

"I greet the unity of Catholics; I thank God that after 1,000 years it still lasts, untouched by time," he said earlier after celebrating Mass for a throng of half a million in a field outside Gniezno, in western Poland.

It was a direct challenge to Eastern Europe's Communist governments, telling them in effect that the faith of more than 50 million Roman Catholics in their countries was still strong despite official harassment and repression of their church.

Poll reveals suspicion

Gas shortage not real to most Americans

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans say they would cut back on driving significantly if the gasoline shortage were real, but they remain overwhelmingly convinced the shortage is just a profit-making ploy by the oil companies, an Associated Press-NBC News poll shows.

This is not to say people are treating current energy problems as minor. In fact, they now say energy concerns are just about as serious a national problem as the rising cost of living.

It's just that Americans are deeply suspicious of the major factors in the energy situation — the oil-producing countries, the oil companies and the government.

This suspicion and deep concern about how their lives could be changed by energy problems combine to give the public a split personality on energy.

On the one hand, three out of four Americans haven't had any difficulty getting gasoline in recent weeks. But that hasn't stopped millions of drivers from "topping off" their tanks in fear of possible shortages, the poll found.

The special AP-NBC News poll on energy matters interviewed 800 adults across the country by telephone May 29, after the Memorial Day weekend.

Nearly three out of four American drivers — 74 percent — said they would cut back their driving significantly if they were convinced the gasoline shortage were real. Twenty-three percent would not and 3 percent were not sure.

But the public doesn't think the gasoline shortage is real.

Sixty-five percent said the shortage is a hoax to get consumers to pay higher prices, while only 25 percent said it is real. Ten percent were not sure.

Despite this suspicion about the sources for the current gasoline situation, Americans say energy is one of the nation's top problems.

Asked what is the nation's top problem, 32 percent named the cost of living, leaving it in the top spot it has held for many months. Energy was picked by 29 percent. That's up from the 18 percent who chose energy in the AP-NBC News poll taken at the first of May.

Because of the margin of error inherent in a sample survey of 800 adults nationwide, there is no significant difference between the 32 percent naming inflation and the 29 percent naming energy as the No. 1 problem.

Crime was named by 10 percent and morality by 9 percent. The remainder were scattered among other issues or were not sure.

Many Americans report that gasoline shortages have not touched them directly — yet.

Seventy-four percent of the nation's drivers said they have experienced no difficulties in getting gasoline in the past month.

Of those who have had trouble, 19 percent reported being unable to find gasoline or spending time hunting for a station with a supply.

Focalpoint

Action/reaction: Election laws

Q. Why are only people who reside within the city limits of Big Spring allowed to vote in our city elections? We have owned and operated our own business within the city for 15 years. We also own and pay taxes on three pieces of rental property. Our concern for city management is as great or greater than many city residents yet, because we do not live within the city limits, our voice is not heard. Shouldn't the voting list be made up of city taxpayers? Who sets the law concerning this? Is there any way it can be changed?

A. City elections are governed by state laws which include that residency requirement. The same guideline applies to state elections. If you live in Oklahoma but own property in Texas, for example, you still may not vote in Texas. The only way to change the residency requirement is to change the law and that isn't very likely. If you wish, you may write your state representative or senator.

Tops on TV: Red Sox vs. Rangers

Both the Boston Red Sox and the Texas Rangers are fighting seesaw battles for the top spot in their respective divisions, so tonight's televised battle will be important for both. The action starts at 7 p.m. on the premiere of ABC's Monday Night Baseball. Non-fans can tune in on a little sleeper about two shy New York teenagers experiencing the pangs of first love. "Jeremy" airs at 8 p.m. on NBC.

American economy no longer model for Western leaders

WASHINGTON (AP) — There was a time when the economic policies of the Western world could have been stamped, "Made in U.S.A." No more.

In the decade of the 1970s, the American economy is being hurt by decisions made abroad, and there is very little the United States can do about it, in the short-run at least.

It can be seen in long gas lines, colder houses, in inflation, and in unemployment. The American standard of living will shrink as a result, U.S. experts say.

Americans still look to their leaders to solve these problems, and the leaders often promise solutions. But the reality is that most of the rest of the world is suffering from similar ills and there is little that one country can do on its own to solve them.

Recognizing the need to develop joint solutions to common problems, U.S. presidents have attended annual economic summit conferences with leaders of six other industrial nations since 1974. President Carter will attend the fifth summit in Tokyo on June 28-29.

"We in the United States have been slow to realize the extent to which the economic health of our own nation depends on the economic health of the world as a whole," Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal told a congressional committee last week.

"The age where the United States could get its way in the world by imposing its will militarily or by economic pressure is past, if it ever existed," he said later.

The steady increase in oil prices by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is the most glaring example of how Americans are affected by decisions elsewhere. But there are others:

—Inflation was worse and the dollar was weaker last year because Japan and Germany refused to follow the U.S. lead in promoting greater economic growth.

—Aggressive and successful exports by other nations are dominating American products in markets around the world, including the U.S. market. The United States had a record trade deficit last year of nearly $29 billion, of which $12 billion was in trade with Japan.

—There are more U.S. dollars — $600 billion by one estimate — circulating outside the United States than inside the country. Misuse of even a small share of this money, which is beyond the reach of U.S. banking and currency regulations, could undermine the dollar.

The United States has always been influenced by other nations' economic policies, of course. But in the years after World War II, the U.S. economy was so strong that it was rare that other nations took actions that ran counter to U.S. interests.

However, the four-fold increase in oil prices in 1973 and 1974 shattered the image of the United States as self-sufficient and exposed a major weakness in the U.S. economy, as well as in the economies of other major industrial nations.

"The industrial nations are all too dependent on a small group of countries for energy, and that dependence threatens the health of our economy and imperils our national security," Blumenthal says.

The vulnerability of the U.S. economy is underscored by two major developments in the post-war period. The first has been the rise of other nations, notably Japan and Germany, as economic powers with domestic needs that often conflict with those of the United States.

The second development has been the growing reliance of the United States on imported oil to meet its energy needs. The U.S. economy had been structured to function on lowest cost oil, most of which was available from domestic wells.

STELLA TAYLOR

PAUL NEWMAN

Taylor to try it again

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Marathon swimmer Stella Taylor, who twice has conquered the English Channel, says she hopes this week to make her third try at becoming the first person to swim from Bimini to Florida.

"I'm getting slight heebiegeebies, but I feel terrific and I think it'll be better this time," said the 48-year-old Miss Taylor, who is waiting for the right sea and weather conditions before starting the 100-mile swim.

In her last effort, in October 1978, Miss Taylor set a world endurance mark of 51 hours.

Newman wins two races

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) — Actor and sometimes race car driver Paul Newman is getting more and more comfortable in the driver's seat.

On Sunday he won two races and broken a record he set here at the Sportscar Club of America Trans-Northeast Division Race.

Newman, 54, broke his own C-Production class record Sunday when he raced one lap in two minutes, 10.66 seconds. That broke his one-year-old record of 2:12.8. Driving a Datsun 280-ZX, Newman won the event with a nine-second margin in a 14-lap race. Driving a Datsun 200-SX, he also won the B-Sedan race by a five-second margin.

Irrigation water prices have startling difference

COLLEGE STATION — A team of Texas A&M University agricultural economists has put a price tag on irrigation water in 11 high-producing western agricultural states, including Texas.

Differences are startling. For instance, between the Lubbock area in West Texas and the Oklahoma Panhandle, there is a difference of 160 percent in value. It is a distance of less than 200 miles.

Figures quoted in the study are the maximum a farmer can afford to pay for water and still have any hope of making a profit on his crop.

The highest dollar value for an acre-foot of water was $44.03 in a Nebraska-Colorado region. The lowest value is in Montana where water is $7.89 an acre-foot.

Under a contract with the Department of Interior, the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station and a private organization known as Resources for the Future, the Texas A&M scientists tabulated the value of the irrigation water in terms of the maximum amount a farmer could pay for water and still make a profit.

Dr. Bruce Beattie, the economist in charge of the project, indicated that Texas irrigation water was worth $13.80 an acre-foot on the cotton-rich Southern High Plains around Lubbock in 1978. About 200 miles distant on the wheat and corn country of the Texas-Oklahoma Panhandle, water was valued at $5.97 an acre-foot.

In the Rio Grande Valley, irrigation water was $16.19 an acre foot.

Other areas:
—Arizona and Southern California, $40.75.
—Central California, $12.25.
—Western Nebraska and Colorado, $44.03.
—Northern Kansas and Eastern Nebraska, $22.73.
—Montana and North Dakota, $7.89.
Beattie says the figures reflect the value of water at the margin, the maximum amount a farmer could pay for the last increment of irrigation water he applies, assuming it is applied to a typical irrigated acre.

"There is no doubt, the actual value of water in the West is and will continue to go up," says Beattie. "It's simply a matter of what economists call the law of diminishing returns."

Beattie blames a major portion of a rise in water values on the crop values, energy requirements and depleted supply in many areas of high production.

The Texas A&M study can also date back the value of water in the 11 regions to 1969. During that time significant dollar value changes have occurred, particularly between the mid-1970s and the present, says Beattie.

In Texas the value between 1974 and 1978, for instance, dropped from $20.94 to $13.83 on the Southern High Plains; $50.66 to $35.97 in the Texas-Oklahoma Panhandle; and $19.30 to $16.19 in the Rio Grande Valley.

However, between 1969 and 1974 there was a sharp jump in value, says the scientist. In 1969 water was valued at $8.27 on the Southern High Plains, $21.53 in the Panhandle and $13.94 in the valley.

Beattie stresses that the major part in all the value difference is attributable to the crop price difference during those years.

"This study gives us some hard numbers to work with," says Beattie. "One fact is definite, though: if the water is cheap, then the farmers are going to use every bit they can to maintain peak production."

The Texas A&M water estimates will be forwarded to the Department of Interior and other agencies for use in water policy decisions, adds the researcher. It should be especially important in future considerations of water importation into water deprived areas of the West.

Indian women protesting dowry system

NEW DELHI, India (AP)

Indian women leaders have started campaigning against the outlawed dowry system, a tradition still practiced here despite charges it results in the murder of hundreds of young girls annually by dissatisfied husbands and in-laws.

"Women are not for burning," chanted 150 demonstrators last weekend outside the home of New Delhi family accused of fatally burning a young bride. The family refused to come out and talk to the protesters.

Satpal Singh and Tarvinder Kaur were married last December. In the tradition of Indian families, the 24-year-old bride moved into the home of her husband's parents.

She told the police just before she died two weeks ago she was watching television when her mother-in-law crept up behind her and doused her with kerosene and her sister-in-law set her ablaze. The screaming woman, her sari in flames, rushed out of the room and collapsed. Neighbors smothered the flames with a blanket and her in-laws took her to a hospital where she died.

Police said Tarvinder accused her in-laws of burning her because they didn't consider her dowry adequate. She said she had been subjected to weeks of "threats, abuse and torture."

Singh's family denied the charges and said Tarvinder was not watching television but was cooking when her sari caught fire.

Tarvinder's parents had given the bridegroom the equivalent of $2,500 in cash, a motor scooter, a television set, a refrigerator and gold jewelry. The police said the dead girl's family reported Singh's parents demanded more money.

Police are still investigating and have not made any arrests.

"Hundreds of young girls are burned or beaten to death every year by their husbands and mothers-in-law over the issue of dowry," said Suman Krishan Kant, head of the Women's Grievances Society.

In a recent interview, she claimed the number of women burned to death in the Indian capital has increased in the past three years. The 1975 figure of 350 was doubled by 1978. She acknowledged that some deaths were genuine accidents. But she claimed the most common explanation given by in-laws is the one the Singhs gave — the bride's sari, the traditional overgarment of flowing veil, caught fire while she was cooking. Although banned by law, the dowry system still is widely practiced with the bride's family giving cash and gifts to the groom and his family. The amount a bridegroom can get varies from area to area and depends on his qualifications, job and family status.

Prime Minister Morarji Desai's government says it is considering strengthening the law and has barred public servants from "accepting, taking or abetting dowry."

Tale of revenge, deformed man's plight win Tonys

'This is a cutthroat business-they has no choice'

NEW YORK (AP)

"Sweeney Todd," a bloody tale of revenge, and "The Elephant Man," the poignant story of a deformed young man, dominated Broadway's Tony Awards as the best musical and best play of the 1978-79 theater season.

"This is a cutthroat business — they had no choice," smiled Len Cariou, who took the top acting award in a musical for his portrayal of Todd, the demon barber of Fleet Street, who dispatches his victims with a straight razor.

"Sweeney Todd" picked up six more awards Sunday night including a fourth Tony for Angela Lansbury as best actress in a musical. It also won best director-musical, Harold Prince, best score, Stephen Sondheim; best scenic design, Eugene Lee, and best costumes, Franne Lee.

"The Elephant Man," written by Bernard Pomerance, also brought Tonys to Carole Shelley, who tied with Constance Cummings as best actress in a drama, and Jack Hofsiss, as best director.

Tom Conti, making his Broadway debut, took the best actor award for his role as a paralyzed sculptor in the English drama, "Whose Life Is It Anyway?"

Television news anchorman Walter Cronkite gave an old friend, composer Richard Rodgers, the Lawrence Langner Award for lifetime achievement in theater, saying, "Millions of persons around the world have sung, whistled, hummed and danced to Richard Rodgers songs. Richard, from them, well done."

Jane Fonda presented her father, Henry, with an unexpected special award. Fonda, a host of Sunday's award show televised nationally by CBS, made his Broadway debut in 1929 and only recently finished a tour as a Supreme Court justice in "First Monday" in October.

Joan Hickson and Michael Gough carried off Tonys for their roles in the English comedy, "Bedroom Farce," which originated at the National Theater of Great Britain.

Tonys for featured actress and actor in a musical went to Carlin Glynn, the madam, and Henderson Forsythe, the sheriff, in "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas."

Michael Bennett and Bob Avian received Tonys for best choreography for "Ballroom," now closed. They also won in 1976 for "A Chorus Line."

Thanking the man in charge of smoke and fog and the man who designed the lightning bolt machine, Roger Morgan accepted a Tony for the spectacular lighting effects in the now-closed "The Crucifer of Blood," a Sherlock Holmes mystery.

The show was the 33rd annual presentation of the Tonys — short for the American Theater Wing's Antoinette Perry Award.

Show me the wrong state

CHETOPA, Kan. (AP) — Drivers heading west out of Missouri on U.S. 166 might be a little shocked when, 30 miles into Kansas, they come upon a billboard of Missouri Gov. Joseph P. Teasdale welcoming motorists to the Show-Me State.

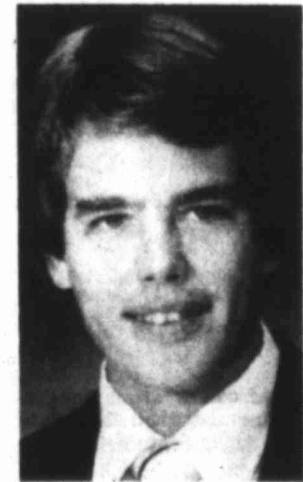

Not only is the billboard 30 miles from Missouri, but the governor is facing the wrong way.

Fred Parks, executive vice president of the Spomer Outdoor Advertising Co. in Joplin, Mo., explained somewhat sheepishly Friday that it was all a mistake.

The company, he said, often puts up public service signs on boards that go unrented for several days. The Teasdale poster was rolled up and labeled only, "Drive Safely."

The workmen that put the sign up apparently didn't bother to read it when they were finished, Parks said.

LOST WITHOUT A BOAT — Gale Andrews of Nacogdoches, Texas, looks lost in a "sea" which was provided by Saturday's four to six-inch rains. No injuries or deaths were reported, according to city officials.

Nacogdoches residents back home

Floodwaters gone Sunday

NACOGDOCHES, Texas (AP) — Most flood victims were back in their homes today, surveying damage from weekend rains that sent two streams spilling out of their banks and into homes and businesses.

Water was reported as deep as 15 feet in one part of town during the height of the flood Saturday. A day later, police said all floodwaters were gone.

"We've had sunshine all day long, and there is no water left," said dispatcher Deborah Adams. "Some roads are still torn up. But it's all over unless it starts raining again."

Storms unleashed four inches of rain early Saturday, and the runoff sent the Lanana and Banita creeks flowing into city streets, chasing many residents to higher ground. No one was injured as police and other law officers evacuated 300 to 400 persons by 1 p.m. Saturday.

"Most of them have gone back now," said Nancy Geny of the Godtel Ministry, one of the buildings used as a shelter for flood victims. "A lot of victims found other places to stay or were able to get back to their homes. We only have two left here tonight."

The flood raced through narrow corridors of low-lying land along each creek, swept away cars, twisted houses off their foundations and stranded persons on top of cars and on the second floor of apartment buildings.

Horsemen dragged away dead cattle — the only victims of the rapid current — from under bridges dammed by tons of debris.

Most of the evacuees came from the apartment complexes near the Banita Creek. But all along the two streams authorities worked for five hours to evacuate stranded residents.

The sheriff's department asked for volunteers with boats to help in the evacuation.

"One man was swept off a bridge," said Fire Chief Charles Duffin. "He turned over the boat of two men who tried to rescue him. So we had to pull three of them out."

Confusing discussion ended

AAM bylaws unanimously okayed

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Just when it appeared delegates to the American Agriculture movement's national meeting would be leaving for home in disunity and disgust, Genie Schroder pulled at some familiar heartstrings.

Delegates had voted by 12-8 Sunday to approve bylaws that structured the AAM into a nonprofit corporation, but several states had cast their negative votes because no agreement could be reached on how policymaking decisions would be determined.

Harvey Gardner of Oklahoma City, one of the dissenters, said AAM members in his state would be skeptical of the entire structuring.

That's when Schroder, one of the movement's founders, stepped to the microphone and proposed to the weary group that the only policy the newly formed delegate body should make for the time being was to stand for 100 percent parity in the market place.

The delegates responded to the change by taking another vote on the bylaws. This time, all 20 voters approved the proposal and brought an end to eight hours of discussions so confusing that at one point, floor chairman Marvin Meek of Plainview, Texas, was calling for a vote on an amendment to an amendment to a proposal.

The call for parity in farm prices — bringing prices into line with costs as they were said to be earlier in the century — was the rallying theme of Schroder and other Springfield, Colo., area farmers who formed the AAM in the fall of 1977.

It was their intention that a farm strike — no buying, selling or producing — would spur Congress to effect immediate price improvements. But few farmers heeded the strike call.

The movement continued its spread into other areas and that expansion, coupled with an inequitable method of funding the AAM's national lobbying efforts, spurred the call to organize.

As a result of the weekend meeting, the loosely knit farm protest group became the American Agriculture Movement, Inc., a nonprofit corporation with formal membership, dues and a governing body that will operate from a Washington, D.C., headquarters.

Only states that have met their assessment obligations will be members of the corporation. Individual farmers who pay their dues of $50 a year will be members of state groups.

The fear that formal restructuring will turn the AAM into a bureaucratic organization weighed heavily on the minds of many who attended the two-day meeting.

Kansas delegate Bill Nicholas of Johnson had been warned that some of his state's members would drop out if any form of organization were adopted. And Bud Bitner of Springfield, another founder, predicted that Colorado will lose some members as a result of Sunday's vote.

"I hope it's the right approach," Bitner said. "It will have to be a very unique organization not to become like other farm organizations. Most farm organizations have become very bureaucratic with most of their efforts spent on how to perpetrate their own existence."

'As is' clause of used car deal confusing to consumers

By The Associated Press

What are you really getting when you buy a product "as is?"

The Federal Trade Commission says many people are confused by the term, particularly when it comes to used cars.

In most states, the FTC says, if you buy a car marked "as is," the dealer is not legally responsible for any repairs needed later on. And later on can come as quickly as five minutes after you drive away.

"Most consumers either don't realize they've purchased their car 'as is' or they can't understand what the term means," the FTC said. The agency said a survey showed more than one out of three consumers thought that even if a car was purchased "as is," the dealer still would have to pay for at least some of the repairs if the car broke down within 25 days.

Other people believed "as is" meant "as equipped," without additional accessories. Some said the term implied that the dealer would not do any more reconditioning. And some thought an "as is" car came with the defects they had been told about; they thought that hidden defects would be covered by the dealer.

"Unless a consumer is assertive and persistent," the FTC said, "he or she will generally not receive any detailed warranty coverage information until after the decision to buy has been made."

It is easy to overlook the warranty — or lack of one — when you have to sign several papers at once. The terms of the sale may be described in confusing legal terms.

The warranty clause might read like this, according to the FTC:

"Merchant X hereby expressly disclaims all warranties either expressed or implied, including any implied warranties of merchantability or fitness for a particular purpose, and neither assumes nor authorizes any other person to assume for (it) liability in connection with the sale of this vehicle."

The translation would read like this: "We won't make any repairs after the car leaves the lot."

Do not take a dealer's word about a warranty. Get the promise in writing. A court will look only at the written contract.

Once you have signed the papers for an "as is" car, you can't change your mind. You have greater flexibility when it comes to some other types of purchases, however.

An FTC regulation called the "cooling-off" rule gives you three days to change your mind about things costing $25 or more which you buy from door-to-door salespeople.

To cancel a sale, sign and date one copy of the cancellation form and mail or hand deliver it to the address on your contract. You can do this at any time up until midnight of the third business day after the contract date. You may want to send the letter "certified, return receipt requested," from your local post office. There is a small fee, but your proof of the mailing date could be important.

Kansas senator changes his tactics

In the presidential sweepstakes four years ago, Vice-presidential nominee Bob Dole of Kansas went for the throat from the very start. Gerald Ford, who headed the ticket, had already staked out claims to being Mr. Nice Guy, so Dole had no choice but to play the hatchet man.

Early on, Dole scored very effectively with his jabs and hooks, as they're prone to say in ring parlance, but he eventually began to irritate some of the independent voters, not to mention the portion of the Democratic party which had been enamored of Jimmy Carter from the start.

HIS SLASHING and sniping became so vicious, he became something of an embarrassment to the Ford campaign. Some say he cost Mr. Ford the election, though such things are invariably decided on the pluses and minuses or the main events. Dole's televised debates with Walter Mondale are credited with having more than a little to do with Carter's narrow victory.

Dole, seeking his party's presidential nomination on his own this time around, hopes his Mr. Hyde image has been buried for good. In announcing his candidacy in his home town, Russell, Kan., recently, Dole emerged as a candidate for Mr. Congeniality honors.

"We're not going to mow down my opponents," he said. "We're going to speak out on the issues. I will neither attack my opponents in the Republican Party, nor the incumbent president."

If Dole insists on pulling his punches, the race could turn into a bland affair. His only hope may be to assume the role of the character assassin because, outside of Kansas, he doesn't have much of a political base from which to work.

He can't move to the right without bumping into John Connally and the territory Big John staked out a long time ago. He'll find Ronald Reagan and Cong. Philip M. Crane out there somewhere, too.

GEORGE BUSH and a host of other Republicans are to his left so he must travel right down the middle of the road. Too many GOP moderates and liberals tend to look back on Dole's 1976 performance with anything but enthusiasm.

Carter entered the race as a country bumpkin and he took everyone to the cleaners, including some stalwarts in his own party. Dole's party controlled the White House when he agreed to serve as Ford's running mate. Now, he's just another challenger, and facing overwhelming odds before he can even be declared the standard bearer. It may be too tall a mountain to climb.

Saving Carter

Evans, Novak

WASHINGTON — A daring scenario to save Jimmy Carter's presidency is being sketched by high officials in his administration who glumly concede chances are he would never accept it.

This scenario for survival would have President Carter go on nationwide prime-time television in the very near future and say, in effect:

"This country can ill afford dependency on Persian Gulf oil, subject to OPEC's constantly rising prices and the politics of Arab sheikhs. The only real alternative is coal, but that requires radical relaxation of the environmental standards. Therefore, tonight I am suspending the Clean Air Act for four months and asking Congress to suspend it for a full five years."

EVEN IF Congress went along, the proposal would enter a thicket of state environmental regulations. No details for this hazardous journey have been worked out.

But the dramatic impact is undeniable. Carter could declare that by unleashing this nation's potential as the Saudi Arabia of coal, he had struck a blow for U.S. freedom, both economic and diplomatic. Over those five years, coal would yield the equivalent of millions of barrels of oil. The American people at long last would be making a practical sacrifice with a concrete payoff. Instead of being begged to limit trips to the supermarket to no avail, they would be asked to endure more air pollution in order to enjoy great benefits.

If frosting be needed for this rich cake, the president might accompany it with a cabinet reshuffle, putting new faces in charge of economic and energy policy. A new Look Economic Policy Group is, therefore, part of the scenario.

THIS SCENARIO, or one quite similar, is regarded as essential to the president's survival by knowledgeable cabinet members, presidential advisers and well-wishers outside the administration. Nor is there much room for variation, coal is the only answer, and that means environmental relaxation.

Yet, pessimism pervades among them that the president will act this way at all, much less in time. The reasons help explain Carter's present fix.

The heart of the problem is Jimmy Carter himself, the fact he is so many persons at once. While by instinct a conservative and by education an engineer who can appreciate the coal-environmental-energy equation, he is also a populist — and an environmentalist. Air pollution would be too high a price for Carter the environmentalist to pay.

The president's aides agree, partly because they — perhaps alone in all the world — simply do not see the need for drastic action. "There is a sense of lethargy, not energy" at the White House, reveals one insider who sees the aides there as "worn-down" and "desensitized."

Moreover, these aides stubbornly insist that Carter's principal peril lies within the Democratic party and, consequently, requires that liberal constituency groups be handled with care. Yet, all evidence is that these groups are lost to him now. In Democratic congressional cloakrooms, Carter is savaged not by conservatives and moderates, but by liberals.

THIS IS what up-and-coming Rep. James Jones of Oklahoma tried to tell the president in a half-hour private meeting May 25. Having shared the agony of one Democratic president a decade ago as an aide to Lyndon B. Johnson, Jones told Carter he is committed to the success of presidents — especially this one.

The moral equivalent of defeat

Not Routine Yet

Paul E. Ruble, M.D.

DEAR DR. RUBLE: Please write something about complete knee-joint replacement, which I am considering. What are the advantages? I have pain when walking and must use a cane for support or I don't get very far. I am only 57. Also, I am overweight. — A.J.M.

It would be nice to just replace "worn-out parts," but it's not as simple as pulling in to your nearest operating room to have it done. Complicated surgery is involved. But if you really need it, and it's available, and you can afford it, why not? Disabling pain is sufficient justification, the more so for a person in productive years who might suffer economically from disability.

The surgery is not always successful, and the results are better for some joints than for others. Hips and other "ball-and-socket" joints are easier to replace than complicated knee joints. Even finger joints can be replaced with the plastic prostheses.

In your letter, you tell me you are being treated for blood pressure. You have to bring that under reasonable control before surgery, and you might have to lose some of your weight. In fact, obesity can cause or contribute to weight-bearing joint problems. Nor do you mention arthritis, which at your age might be a factor. Are you trying to control that?

Generally, joint replacement surgery has improved greatly, and pain relief is expected in about 90 percent of patients who have it, depending upon which joint is involved, proper post-surgery therapy and other factors. Serious complications are reported in from 10 to 20 percent of cases of knee replacement (infection, rejection, loosening of the implants, etc.). It's an exciting field of medicine, but much has to be known about such things as long term 10-to-20-year results before it falls into the "routine" category. There's always danger of letting enthusiasm get ahead of performance.

DEAR DR. RUBLE: I am a 28-year-old married woman with two kids. A few months ago I noticed some hairs on my breast around the nipples. Now they have grown larger. I don't know what to do. Please advise me. I am really worried. — Mrs. K.

Growth or breast hair is almost always a matter of heredity, with little to do but remove the unwanted hairs. Everyone has hair follicles about the areola — the dark-pigmented area of the nipples and these may be more developed in some women than in others. But there are other matters to be considered in your specific case.

At your age, any sudden appearance of hair of this kind should be reported. Glands, such as the ovaries or adrenals, can affect such hair growth. Sometimes, a doctor can tell be other non-hair symptoms (and special tests) whether something more than heredity is involved. Because of this and your anxiety you should set up an appointment. I don't want to scare the wits out of millions of women who have a few unwanted breast hairs. Many natural events can be involved, such as menopause in some women or, in young girls, puberty. It is the sudden, unexplained growth of such hair that I am concerned about.

Mailbag

Dear Editor:

One of the very pleasant things of living in Big Spring the last 49 years has been the friendship which we have had with the many fine people who have managed and worked with the Big Spring Herald. It has been a joy to know all of the important personnel down through the years.

I frequently have expressed my opinion to the members of your organization that we have just about the finest newspaper to be found anywhere. Needless to say, whenever I hear criticism, it gives me a great opportunity to open up and expound on just what a fine newspaper we do have.

I especially want to thank you and other members of your staff for the part you played in making my day, Sunday before last, one of the greatest days in all of my life. It has been interesting to clip out various things which have been printed in your paper for many years, and I can assure you that I appreciate all the considerations that have been shown me down through the years. Please express to all of your people my great love and appreciation for all their efforts in behalf of our community.

P. W. Malone, M.D.

Dear Editor:

I'd like to express my surprise and delight to find such good religious editorials in the "Rim" column. Don Woods seems to be well instructed and sound in his articles. It's very refreshing to see such in the newspaper and I commend you for having the courage to print such in this day and age.

I also appreciated Eileen McGuire's editorial on Sweden's "no spanking" law. I couldn't agree with her more.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I have always lived a carefree life, but now that I am older I fear death more and more. What can I do to get over this fear? — C.W.

DEAR C.W.: It is tragic how much of our time is spent preparing for things, such as a career, without ever giving five minutes to prepare for the greatest challenge we will ever face: our death. We dodge it, or refuse to think about it realistically. I am glad you are becoming aware of the fact that some day you will die.

Frankly, you are right to fear death, because right now you have no reason for any hope. But I want you to know something very important. Death, the Bible says, is not the end, but the beginning of a whole new type of existence. The Bible tells us that every person will continue to live after death — we have no choice about it. (That is why, incidentally, suicide does not solve anything, really.) The question is only where we will spend eternity. Either we will spend eternity in heaven with God, or in hell, separated from God and in total abandonment.

Hell is a reality, no matter how much people may laugh about it or use it as a swearword. The Bible calls it a place of "destruction" (Matthew 7:13), of "fire" (Matthew 13:50), of "outer darkness" (Matthew 22:13). Not one reference to hell in the Bible gives us any hint that it is anything other than horrible.

But the good news is that you can be saved. You can be assured that you are going to heaven. Heaven is the destiny of the child of God, and you can become a child of God by faith in Jesus Christ. You deserve to go to hell because of your sins, but Jesus Christ took the punishment you deserve upon Himself when He died on the Cross. "For Christ died for sins once for all, the righteous for the unrighteous, to bring you to God" (1 Peter 3:18, New International Version).

Trust Him as your personal Lord and Savior. Invite Him into your life and you will be saved. He wants you to come to Him and has done everything possible to open the way, not just for your salvation some day but for your life right now. "Everyone who calls on the name of the Lord will be saved" (Romans 10:13, NIV).

Rustic living

Around the rim

Mickie Dickson

The energy shortage that is in the news forefront reminds me of the time in the 1940s when this city gal decided to become a country gal to save money.

We rented a one acre tract eight miles south of Oklahoma City with a four-room house on it that needed re-decorating. It had a kitchen sink and a bathroom with beautiful orchid bathroom fixtures in it, but not one drop of water. A good well was on the place, 360 feet deep with a bucket on a rope — one bucket at a time. It also had a big cistern outside which was full 'when' it rained. Evidently someone had dreamed of putting an electric pump on the well to supply those fixtures with water.

IT WAS necessary to haul water in oil barrels from Oklahoma City to take care of two small children.

The first traumatic thing to happen was the 3½ year old coming toward the house screaming. Looking out, I saw him running from a flock of turkeys led by the biggest turkey gobbler I had ever seen. Being a city boy, and never having seen a live turkey before, Derrell was terrified.

It wasn't long before the same thing happened with a small herd of goats with a billy goat in the lead.

The neighbors were fortunately cooperative in penning up the fowls and animals.

Another city girl moved in next door on 15 acres, so we planted a one-acre, two girl garden. It was quite an experience planting seeds and plants and watching them grow, and canning them by cold pack, neither of us having a pressure cooker.

Another child was born, our youngest boy, Jerry, while we were there.

An Oklahoma tornado decided to hit one-fourth mile north of us and tear up Capitol Hill, the south part of Oklahoma City. My cellar being water-logged, we drove next door, waking the baby out of a sound sleep, to the neighbors' cellar.

The neighbors milked 15 cows by milking machine. The storm knocked out all electricity, so the cows had to be milked by hand that night.

Her husband, district manager for T.G.&Y., was out of town. Coming back that evening, traffic was blocked to his home through Capitol Hill, so he was one scared man when he reached home, where he found his family safe.

One of my projects was to buy a baby pig and hopefully to raise it to have little pigs to sell. My husband bought a B-B gun for Derrell, and, since the boy was too young for it, my husband played with it. He shot sparrows into the hog pen and my pig got a taste of blood. One day when all the men of the neighborhood were gone, the pig started eating my sister-in-law's chickens.

I had heard that a hog will eat anything alive once it gets a taste of blood, so we kept the children locked in the house while saving the chickens and isolating the pig in the chicken pen until the men got home.

That tame pig that nibbled on my skirts as I slopped him, had to be isolated so that no one would have to go in her pen to feed her. Finally, I sold her and just barely broke even.

My experience as a West Texas farmer's wife have been much more tranquil than this first experience I can tell you.

Storm the bill

Jack Anderson,

WASHINGTON — To judge by the newspaper ads and television commercials, Coke, Pepsi and Seven-Up are in a no-holds-barred battle for the soft-drink consumer's not-so-small change. But the cutthroat competition fizzles out completely when the major bottlers come to Capitol Hill.

Faced with the loss of their lucrative franchise system — which grants territorial monopolies to chosen bottlers — the $11.5 billion-a-year soft drink industry has mounted one of the slickest lobbying operations Washington has ever seen.

The Federal Trade Commission ruled last year that the franchise system violated antitrust laws, and the National Soft Drink Association naturally appealed the ruling. But the manufacturers have been advised by their legal experts that the chances of winning the appeal are remote.

right. An aide to one of the co-sponsors, Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., explained the presence of the senator's name of the list to our reporter David Carpenter: "Frankly, we don't know much about the bill, but it already had a lot of co-sponsors and it seemed like a good way to mend some fences."

ABOUT THE only chance of stopping the soda pop people, a senate aide told us, is a strong appeals court ruling upholding the FTC, coupled with some fancy legislative footwork by people like House Judiciary subcommittee chairman Peter Rodino, D-N.J. in 1976. Rodino succeeded in derailing a similar bill that would have granted the soft drink industry exemption from antitrust laws in their franchising system. But two-thirds of the Congress weren't co-sponsoring the legislation that time.

Footnote: The Justice Department, which fought exemption bills in previous sessions, is drafting a report which, sources say, will probably oppose this model as well.

WATCH ON WASTE: The four green-and-blue buses of the Department of Transportation used to shuttle employees between office buildings in Washington have apparently offended the aesthetic sensibilities of someone in charge. Despite the fact that three of the buses were bought only last year, all four will be repainted — white with red identifying lettering. The idea, according to a spokesman, is to make the buses "more attractive and easier to see." Just how expensive a ride the taxpayers are being taken for is not yet known; bids for the paint job are still being solicited.

When military brass hats take off in the small jet planes made available to them, they don't always worry about empty seats. On a recent flight from Washington to Wright-Patterson Air Force Base at Dayton, Ohio, the only passengers were Assistant Air Force Secretary Antonia Chaves and an aide. Three seats were empty, while three lesser Air Force personnel were left on the ground holding duty orders to Wright-Patterson. The Military Airlift Command told us, "This seemed to be an unfortunate set of circumstances, and the Air Force regrets it occurred." The three stranded airmen had to fly commercial — at public expense.

It's getting rough on most classes

If you are the head of a household, you can make $500 more this year than you did last and still be classified as poor.

Anyone with an income of $6,700 annually used to be considered reasonably well off. That is no longer the case. That's the cutoff point between being poor and being barely able to make ends meet.

For a single person, the poverty level goes from $3,140 to $3,600 annually. Similar increases for statistical purposes were announced for households of other compositions.

The inflation monster — he spares no one but he is especially rough on the needy.

San Antonio girl Israeli prisoner

'I'm no terrorist'

DALLAS (AP) — To the State Department, she's a young American woman locked up in an Israeli prison.

To Dr. Catherine Edwards, her former political science professor, she's an idealist with strong beliefs but a person who could never harm anyone.

To the Israeli government, she's a terrorist spy guilty of "aiding and abetting" the enemy.

But to those who have been fighting the past 19 months for her release from Ramla Prison outside Tel Aviv, Terre Fleener is a human rights issue.

On a Middle East tour in 1976, Miss Fleener took snapshots of beaches, hotels and public buildings and then, Israeli prosecutors said, gave them to a member of Al Fatah, the terrorist arm of the Palestinian Liberation Organization.

Upon returning to the area in October 1977, the 24-year-old San Antonio, Tex., woman was arrested at Ben-Gurion Airport and charged with conveying information to enemies of Israel, conspiring to convey information and rendering service to an unlawful organization.

It was not clear if the charges against her resulted from actions outside Israel. But under the nation's security laws, a person can be tried for offenses committed against Israel in other countries.

In a one-day secret trial in January 1978, a three-judge panel sentenced the former University of Texas coed to five years in prison for a crime that carried a maximum penalty of 15 years imprisonment.

"I'm convinced they (the Israelis) overreacted," said Maury Maverick Jr., a San Antonio lawyer who has written several letters on her behalf as a representative of the local chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union.

"At most, she was guilty of a misdemeanor, not a felony," Maverick said. "It would be the same as if you or I took a picture of a Dallas hotel. It wouldn't mean a thing."

But the judges that sentenced the former Kuwait Airline hostess to prison disagreed, saying the ruling was intended to "give expression to the utmost gravity to which the court views anyone who helps murderers and terrorists."

Arthur Avnon, vice-consul of Israel, reiterated the Israeli's case in a letter to the editors of the Dallas Times Herald recently.

"It should be noted that Miss Fleener was charged — and she admitted the charges — with having aided terrorist groups by supplying them with vital information relating to civilian population, know that such information would be helpful to them," the letter said.

"Miss Fleener, who spent long periods in Arab countries, was fully aware of the plans and evil intent of Israel's enemies and she acted with the knowledge that her activities would bring harm to innocent people," Avnon continued.

"In light of the gravity of the charges and Miss Fleener's confession, the sentence she received should be considered a light one."

Her lawyer, Felicia Langer, had argued that the young woman was being used as a scapegoat. But before the Israeli Supreme Court could hear her appeal, terrorists attacked the beach road between Kaifa and Tel Aviv, a road she allegedly photographed. The appeal was denied.

Shortly afterwards, rumors of her imminent release began and have continued for more than a year.

"There's been a lot of speculation from high places, nothing official," said Ms. Edwards, who testified as a character witness at Miss Fleener's trial. "It seems that as time goes by, support for Terre grows. Samuel Lewis (U.S. Ambassador to Israel) is deeply committed to her release, and both Amnesty International and the ACLU are investigating the case."

A third appeal for clemency was filed recently by Mrs. Langer, a communist who has represented several Arabs and Palestinians.

A spokeswoman for the State Department said in a recent telephone interview there was reason to believe the Israelis might consider the request more favorably now that the Middle East peace treaty has been signed.

"Right now, we're hoping the Israeli government will respond favorably to the appeal," she said. "But since this is not a judicial matter, there is no time limit."

"The logical time would be between May 2 and May 14 — the period when Israel's independence is celebrated," the spokeswoman said. "During this period, the Israeli government sometimes grants such things to countries it considers to be good-will nations."

Ms. Edwards replied, "I hope she's right. In any case, I'll continue to work for Terre's release."

"She has made it no secret that her sympathies were with the Palestinians in refugee camps," she said. "But I've also heard her criticize the Arab States, Israel and the PLO."

"Shortly after she was imprisoned, she wrote a letter to relatives back home and told them 'You have nothing to be ashamed of. I'm no terrorist.'"

"I believe her."

for the Webb AFB Federal Credit Union the summer of 1972. While attending Anderson College he was a shipping clerk for the Bill Gaither Music Company in Alexandria, Ind.

He served as a deputy court clerk for the Hon. William S. Myers, Jr. in Oklahoma City, Okla., 1977-

78. He served as Minister of Youth for the Westridge Hills Church of God in Oklahoma City until his graduation.

The Texas Study of Secondary Education Research Journal published an article by Chappell entitled "What Level Consciousness," in the winter 1972-73 issue.

Chappell has been a member of the American Bar Association, law student division and of the Oklahoma Trial Lawyers Association.

While in Big Spring, Sam served as City Traffic Commissioner from September 1971-May, 1972.

He served on the Lakeside Academy School Board of Trustees in Oklahoma City during April, 1978.

Chappell is now in Anderson, Ind. where he is with the law firm of Davison, Davison and Davison. He will take the Indiana Bar exam in July.

He and Becky, his wife, are the parents of a new baby girl, Angel Ruth, as of May 26, and a 6-year-old son, Jason.

Becky will be teaching woodwinds in the Anderson College Music Department part-time.

A New Look At Old Girls

DEAR ABBY: You printed a letter from UPSET IN BALTIMORE whose 28-year-old son was in love with a 62-year-old woman. Besides telling the mother to stay out of her son's love life, you should have informed her that this asinine prejudice against older women is an American cultural hangup.

Winston Churchill's mother is said to have been alluring to young men when she was in her 60s. In fact, she married a man younger than her son.

SENSIBLE IN GA.

DEAR SENSIBLE: The younger man-old woman combination has had some notable successes. Ask Gloria Swanson, Merle Oberon, Ruth Gordon, Mary Pickford, Sybil Burton, Lucille Ball, Cher's mother and Gloria Steinem.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 12-year-old girl and I'm being forced against my will to go to summer camp again. I went last year and hated it.

My folks keep telling me how lucky I am that they can afford to send me, but I don't feel lucky. I feel like a girl whose parents want to get rid of her for two months.

My mother says if I don't go to camp I will have to sit on the porch all summer. What should I do?

HATES CAMP

DEAR HATES: Go, dear. But first get rid of that negative attitude. Most people have about as good a time as they make up their minds to have.

DEAR ABBY: My husband dresses up in a shirt and tie and vested suit for work every day. He really looks sharp. But the minute he comes home he changes into ragged jeans and a dirty T-shirt. Then he comes to the dinner table in those grubby clothes.

I once asked him if he couldn't be a little more presentable for dinner, and he said: "What for? Nobody's here." (We have two teen-age children.)

Yesterday I again said something about the way he looked at the dinner table, and one of the kids said, "Don't hassle him, Mom. He has a right to wear what he wants."

Who is right?

LEXINGTON LADY

DEAR LADY: Not you, Mom. Your husband has the right to be comfortable at home, but why must he wear ragged jeans and a dirty T-shirt? They make some sharp looking jeans and T-shirts. Surprise your man with some good-looking leisure clothes for Father's Day and you'll all be happier. (P.S. And when he's in a good mood, inform him that you and the children are "somebody.")

Are you a bore?

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Do people fail to respond when you talk to them? Do they agree blindly with everything you say without contributing anything of their own? Both are methods of cutting a conversation short in order to get away.

Most of us have occasionally wondered if we bore others. And even if you realize that people are yawning through your conversations, it is possible to change, says the May issue of Seventeen Magazine.

When you speak, wait for a response. Then respond to what was said. As you talk, focus your attention on the other person. See if he really seems interested.

Pick people who get along with others as you'd like to, and study their conversational style. Then gradually work something of their pattern into your own conversation.

Find subjects that make for interesting conversations. Read newspapers, magazines, best sellers. Or if you hear something fascinating or funny, make a mental note to use it in your conversation.

Essentially, the charmer — the opposite of the bore — is a person who shows he is as interested in others as he's interested in himself.

"Not being a bore," says Dr. Lucien Rose, an Oklahoma City psychologist, "is basically being a better listener than talker."

Lots of kids have crushes on teachers

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

Dr. Wallace: I'm a 16-year-old girl and I have a most unusual problem. I have great respect, adore, like very much and I think I love this guy. The only thing is that this guy is my high school French teacher who happens to be single.

We get along fantastically, and I really enjoy our private conversations.

I really don't know if he feels the same way about me as I do for, Ontario, Canada.

Connie: It's not unusual for girls to "fall in love" with their teachers. Male teachers (females also when boys fall for them) are aware this happens and handle the situation professionally.

The very few teachers who do not handle the situation professionally are usually dismissed from education.

So, my dear, do nothing. Your teacher is interested in your education, not your love.

Dr. Wallace: I am writing to you because I need the answer that no one else seems to know. I am 18 and my problem concerns a boy that I love very dearly.

He lies continuously, about everything to everyone. I thought that if he'd lie to me that my feelings toward him would change, but they haven't.

At first, I thought it was for recognition. But he's very likable and his friends like him. So why does he lie? Is there a cure? — Kimberly, Wellsburg, W.Va.

Kimberly: People lie for many reasons: the main ones being a lack of confidence and insecurity. What they can't do physically, they overcome by lying. Since lying is not a disease, a cure is not applicable, but if this boy wanted to quit, he would.

Kim, you can help him.

For Dr. Wallace's teen booklet, "Happiness or Despair," please send $1 and a 28-cent stamped, large, self-addressed envelope to Dr. R. Wallace, in care of this newspaper.

ARRESTED PROTESTER — The Virginia Electric & Power Company's North Anna nuclear reactor looms in the background as state police drag a protester away after he and more than 100 other anti-nuclear demonstrators trespassed the property Sunday in Mineral.

Nuclear protester killed in Spain demonstration

Hundreds of anti-nuclear demonstrators marched, chanted and sang their way from nuclear power plant sites to jail during worldwide protests against atomic energy.

The protests were generally peaceful, but a woman was killed Sunday in Spain when a policeman fired his submachine gun into a crowd of anti-nuclear demonstrators who started throwing rocks.

One hundred demonstrators — many chanting "Two, four, six, eight, we don't want to radiate!" — were arrested in Limerick, Pa., after they scaled a snow fence around the construction site of a Philadelphia Electric nuclear power plant.

And consumer advocate Ralph Nader told a rally in Boston: "No country or civilized society can tolerate a form of energy so linked to potential disaster that an area thousands of square miles could be rendered uninhabitable to future generations."

More than 900 demonstrators representing loosely allied antinuclear and environmental groups were arrested Sunday, bringing the weekend total to more than 1,200. Most were charged with minor offenses ranging from trespassing to disturbing the peace.

Two thousand demonstrators hurled stones at police in Balboa, Spain, during a protest over the construction of a $1 billion American-supplied atomic power plant. Police responded with rubber bullets and smoke grenades, and the woman was killed when a civil guard opened fire, authorities said.

On Saturday, as a prelude to Sunday's International Anti-Nuclear Day, approximately 30,000 persons participated in protests in 12 states, Canada, the Netherlands and Japan.

The demonstrations were held three months after an accident released a radioactive cloud and shut down the Three Mile Island plant near Harrisburg, Pa.

More than 600 persons were arrested Sunday at a nuclear plant site near the Long Island community of Shoreham, N.Y., where 15,000 demonstrators took part in an anti-nuclear rally. Former Chicago Seven defendants Jerry Rubin and David Dellinger and Joyce Berland, a daughter of former U.S. Defense Secretary Clark Clifford, were among those arrested.

At least 119 persons were arrested at the North Anna power plant near Louisa, Va., 100 at the Marble Hill nuclear plant in southern Indiana, and 29 at the site of a plant near Moscow, Ohio.

About 8,000 persons turned out for a demonstration in Kalkar, West Germany, and 3,000 for a rally at a plant site in Brittany, one of several rallies in France.

Meanwhile, West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, in an interview in this week's Time magazine, warned of the possibility of war over oil and gasoline if nuclear energy is not developed quickly.

"I think that the scarcity of oil and the rising prices for crude, which are a menace to the functioning of our economies, can lead to wars," he said. "This problem has to be understood as a grave one for the last two decades of this century."

About 5,000 persons attended a day-long rally near Plymouth, Mass., listening to speeches and dancing to rock bands in the shadow of the Pilgrim I nuclear plant. There were no incidents or arrests.

At many demonstrations, protesters carried signs reading "Hell No, We Won't Glow," and at the Indiana site they released balloons with cards attached that read: "If this balloon reached you, so can radiation from the Marble Hill nuclear plant."

A hearse lead a caravan of about 50 cars to a protest rally at Shippingport, Pa., where balloons were also released.

Other demonstrations were staged Sunday at nuclear facilities near Red Wing, Minn.; Berwick, Pa.; North Perry, Ohio; Hartsville, Tenn.; Nashville, Tenn.; Sargonsville, Tenn.; and Wiscasset, Maine.

In Natchez, Miss., members of the Mississippi Alliance, an anti-nuclear group listened to lectures against the spread of nuclear plants. In Buffalo, N.Y., speakers told a rally it was time to stop dumping nuclear wastes in western New York. Protesters also marched through downtown Seattle.

And at the site of the Seabrook, N.H., plant where more than 1,400 persons were arrested in demonstrations three years ago, 30 persons held a candlelight vigil Sunday night.

Police beat Colorful vandals tracked

COULDN'T STAY AWAY — Two juveniles suspects were apprehended today after this mess and three other vandalized classrooms were discovered in a portable building behind Goliad Junior High School, 8:05 a.m. The vandals broke windows, poured blue and green paint over furniture, walls and the floor of this classroom, emptied drawers, and then stirred it all up with dirt bikes. The suspects left a tire track trail for police to follow.

Police were sent in search of two small-footed persons wearing blue and green paint-splattered tennis shoes early today.

Two suspects, both juveniles, were apprehended in connection with a free-for-all which resulted in extensive damage to four portable classrooms at Goliad Junior High School.

When police arrived to investigate at 8:05 a.m., they discovered windows broken in each of the four rooms, tire tracks of two different dirt bikes leading to each classroom and two sets of small footprints in a blue and green paint mixture that had been used to "decorate" one room.

Total damage has not yet been determined but it is extensive, police say.

A burglar made off with trousers and a billfold containing $420 cash while Danny Austin slept in his home between 4 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. Saturday. The uninvited visitor also stole Austin's car keys.

Eloa Reyes reported $200 damages received when someone slashed all four tires on her vehicle, parked at Northcrest Apartments, sometime between 9 p.m. Saturday and 1 a.m. Sunday.

A trusting woman lost $165 when she gave a man money to buy her a car around 9 a.m. Friday. Juanita Miears told police the man never returned.

Norma Flores told police that her brother had let an unknown woman into the house between 6 a.m. and 7 p.m. Friday. When the guest departed, she took with her a box of dishes, a pair of drapes and a pair of shower curtains. Value of the missing items has not been determined.

Sometime between Saturday and 9:30 a.m. Sunday, Smith and Coleman Oil Co., 201 N. Benton, was illegally entered through a bathroom window. The culprit then made a hole in the wall to enter the business and made off with several cigar boxes of sales receipts. Damage to the window and wall was set at $75.

A home was also entered via the bathroom window. The window discovered to have been forced open at the home of Dennis Heffington sometime between 9:30 p.m. Saturday and 1:55 a.m. Sunday. It has not yet been determined if anything was taken.

Bogart's will press charges against a person seen stealing two beer glasses at 12:45 a.m. Sunday. The glasses were valued at $2.50.

A 20-year-old Dallas man was arrested for possession of marijuana under 2 ounces at 3:10 a.m. Sunday. The man was arrested by police at a disturbance. While emptying his pockets before entering jail, the marijuana was discovered.

Two persons reported being threatened Sunday. Frances Sharp told police that an acquaintance threatened her at Town and Country Grocery, 3104 Parkway, 3:40 p.m.

Windol Lunsford reported that a person known to him made several phone calls, the last received around 11:30 p.m., during which his life was threatened.

Conseption Juarez escaped unharmed when a person she knew fired a shot at her while she was standing outside Fina's Cafe around 11:30 p.m. The suspect fled. The weapon is believed to have been a .22 caliber pistol.

Three males were arrested following a report made by Jane Marie Allen that a man had hit her in the eye during a fight at the parking lot of Jo Boys Restaurant, 3:15 a.m. Sunday.

The parking lot of Pollard Chevrolet was the scene of a minor collision between vehicles driven by Anthony Ginnett, Rt. 1, Box 177 and Norman Samsen, 1318 Sam Houston, 6:48 p.m. Saturday.

Another parking lot collision occurred in the east lot of Howard College when Robert Don Williams, Rt. 1, Box 469, struck a fence cable with his vehicle, 10 p.m. Saturday.

Three minor mishaps were reported Sunday.

The 1200 block of S. Gregg was the scene of a collision between Robert Allen Bowman, 1804 Mittle, and Troy M. Hogue, Box 391, 1:14 a.m.

Vehicles driven by Cathy Baird, 3201 Cornell, and Manuel Jabor, 611 N. Gregg, collided at 3201 Cornell, 12:45 p.m.

A car owned by Ignacio Mendoza, parked at his residence, 1611 E. 6th, was struck by a vehicle driven by Martin Mata, 1304 Birdwell, 2:27 p.m.

Local delegation 'brands' county panel at Texas A&M

The search is on throughout Texas for outstanding cattle brands to include on county panels at the Kieberg Center's "branded stairway" at Texas A&M University.

L.A. Maddox, chairman of the unique branding project, said that some 3,500 brands, or more, are expected to be imprinted on the 254 "county oak panels" in the University's new $9.5 million Robert J. Kieberg Animal and Food Sciences Center.

"County Extension agents are working with their local beef cattle and Program Building Committees to select eight brands per county, and with historical societies to select other brands for the panels," Maddox, Texas Agricultural Extension Service beef cattle specialist, said.

Recently, a delegation from Howard County added local brands to the county's oak panel. Participating were Mrs. Hamlin Elrod, Mrs. Susan Alexander, H.K. Elrod, Mr. and Mrs. Loy Acuff, John Echols, Mr. and Mrs. Steve Lazarus and Mike, Jack Buchanan, Mr. and Mrs. David Guitler and children, Mary Guitler, Mr. and Mrs. Repps Guitler and John Guitler. The group was accompanied by County Extension Agents Andy Vestal and Janet Rogers.

Brands were also added for five others who were not able to be present at the ceremony. These brands belonged to E.W. Lomax, C.C. Slaughter, O.E. Hamlin and the historical brands of W.T. Roberts and the Aylesford Brothers.

There are some 20,000 brands recorded in Texas and on file with the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association in Fort Worth. This is the state's most complete record.

The "branding" was an idea of Dr. O.D. Butler, for many years head of Texas A&M's Animal Science Department and now associate vice president for agriculture and renewable resources. He said that not only are cattle brands a rich part of Texas livestock history but a prized possession of ranchers in identification of their cattle.

"We felt that the branding ceremonies would bring about a closer tie-in between cattlemen and our animal science facilities on campus as well as with research and educational work throughout Texas," Butler said.

Maddox said that branding ceremonies will be conducted by Extension district groups until "all panels are branded."

COLORADO CITY — This city's application for a grant to build a boat ramp at Lake Colorado City has been granted by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission.

The city will receive $16,100 from the commission to construct the ramp. In return, the city will have to provide 30 percent of that figure to qualify for the grant. Colorado City's share of the project will cost $6,900.

The ramp will be located on the southeast side of the lake in Fisher Park near the store. It will be about a half mile from the boat ramp already in use at the lake.

Square dance by troupe tops Starlight Special

Threatening weather Sunday evening did not keep an appreciative audience from attending the Starlight Specials program, held in the amphitheater in Comanche Trail Park.

Featured were enrollers in the Faulkner Talent World. Their dances and gymnastics inspired several curtain calls.

Perhaps the highlight of the entertainment occurred when a troupe performed a square dance.

Teacher of the group is Sherrie Faulkner, herself a multi-talented dancer.

Next Starlight Specials program will be at 8 p.m. Saturday, also in the amphitheater. It will feature gospel singing groups from the Midway and Phillips Memorial Baptist churches and from Midland Church.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, JUNE 5, 1979

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The daytime is fine for thinking out ways to have increased abundance in the days ahead. This is not the time to strut and attempt to impress others with new ideas.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) You have excellent judgment today and can easily gain your aims. Handle a civic affair in a clever way and gain the benefits.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Take time today to study your home situation and know how to have everything to your liking. Clear up whatever is in error.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Your talents are working more efficiently now and you can accomplish a great deal. Strive for greater prestige in public life.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You need to economize more and build up a reserve to be free of worry. Your hunches are accurate at this time.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Helping associates to gain their aims brings fine returns for you, also. Find a better way of being more productive at work.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study your financial status well and know where to make changes. Contact a most successful person who can give you good ideas.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't do anything that could jeopardize your fine reputation. Avoid one who is detrimental to your best interests.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study whatever has been puzzling you lately and gain the support of associates. Come to a better understanding with your mate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You are tempted to be too extravagant now, so take steps to control this urge. Take no risks with your health at this time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Attend to those outside tasks early in the day for best results. Not a good day to engage in a new interest.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have fine ideas that should be put in operation quickly for good results. Sidestep one who is very tricky.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Plan how best to handle important obligations before carrying them out. Strive for increased harmony with the one you love.

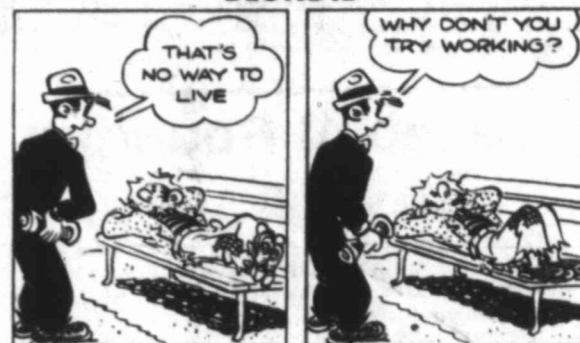

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will have charisma so teach to use this quality to help make conditions better in the world, otherwise much of the fine promise here will be lost. There is musical ability in this chart which should be trained early in life.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Hustle 3

Just thought you'd like to know
 By Bill Albright
 Executive Vice President, Big Spring Area Ch. of Commerce Industrial Growth and Development

A recent news report referred to Senator John Tower commenting on a bizarre situation regarding the energy crunch and the California gasoline shortage. In essence, Senator Tower took California Governor Jerry Brown to task for his sustained efforts in countering energy production. Tower noted the governors active fight over a 5 year period to oppose development of nuclear power plants, coal and lignite facilities and his resistance to off-shore drilling.

He further commented that California has imposed the strictest EPA regulations in the country - there by costing the American people an even higher degree of inefficient energy use. In addition, California's unreasonable EPA restrictions prohibits the building of the California to Texas pipeline which would provide an increased source of oil for this area and the Midwest. If that isn't enough, Los Angeles citizens voted down a proposal for mass transit.

And then with California's cars lined up at the pumps, a result of their own governmental blunders, the governor "marches" to Washington, with complete media coverage to demand from the President - more gasoline.

But wait, that's not the only fiasco. There's another at federal level that merits your attention. First lets establish some background facts.

1. There is an energy crisis in this country.
 2. As a result, we are importing almost 50 percent of the oil we use.
 3. The expense of exorbitant payments for that foreign oil has us in a real tight squeeze with our balance of payments abroad.
 4. All this serves to increase inflation - our number one ENEMY.

So you'd think we'd be doing everything possible to produce more oil and gas and to switch, where possible, from oil and gas to coal, nuclear, thermal and solar power! Wrong! - The federal bureaucracy seems to be working in an opposite direction.
 The USDA has proposed wilderness designation for 62 million acres. Such designation simply means no motor vehicles - no mining, no oil and gas activities and basically no agriculture grazing allowed. The president has further recommended to the congress that a major portion of that land be "locked up" thus denying its resources to the American public. In another similar action "Alaska Lands" are being locked up by the Congress in wilderness designation and setting aside for parks, preserves, and conservation and recreation areas, over 120 million acres are involved and the US Geological Survey has estimated 30 billion barrels of oil and 76 trillion cubic feet of natural gas are at stake. The question here, should be, "How can we allow this to happen, Mr. Congressman?" or maybe, "Is there really an energy crisis, Mr. President?" or maybe, "What are you doing to help, Governor Brown, or are you a part of the problem?"

 Just thought you'd like to know.
 Rodeo time is approaching and this year's Big Spring Rodeo and Cowboy Reunion promises to be the best yet. The event is scheduled for June 20-23 at the Howard County Rodeo Arena and will feature the top rodeo contenders in the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association from all over the country.

Tight security ordered in second murder trial
 CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) - District Judge Noah Kennedy has ordered tight security for the second murder trial of Elmer Wayne Henley, 23, accused in a two-year homosexual torture and death spree in Houston.
 The case, which gets under way today, was moved here after a new trial was ordered by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.
 Henley was 18 when he was convicted of murder the first time and sentenced to six 99-year terms. He won a new trial when the appeals court ruled the judge in that trial should have allowed a defense motion for a change of venue hearing.
 Prosecutors have said they do not anticipate much difference in their strategy from the first trial.
 Kennedy said spectators will be allowed in and out of the courtroom only during recesses. The judge also said Nueces County Sheriff Solomon Ortiz has ordered metal detector inspections.
 The murders of 27 youths came to light in August 1973 when Henley called police to tell them he had shot and killed Dean Arnold Corli, a 33-year-old Houston Light and Power employee.

 Henley told police the shooting came after a night of terror during which a teen-age boy and girl were handcuffed to a "torture board" where they were to be sexually abused by Corli.
 The Corli death was ruled self-defense after Henley disclosed his relationship with the older Corli.
