

BARRIER TOWED TO MEET OIL — The work vessel Ada B. Callas tows an inflated barrier to a point in the Gulf of Mexico near the entrance to the Brownsville Ship Channel Monday in hopes of stopping some of the runaway oil spill moving toward the Texas Gulf Coast from Mexico.

First of massive oil spill hits Texas beaches today

PORT ISABEL, Texas (AP) — Tar balls washed ashore today on the sandy beaches of South Padre Island today, as the first oil from Mexico's massive oil spill hit the U.S. mainland.

"It isn't very dramatic at this point. The beaches are not black, like the Mexican beaches we've seen on television, but we do have the tar balls," said Mary Lou Campbell, who owns an art gallery on South Padre Island.

The island is a tiny stretch of land that varies in width from a quarter of a mile to a half mile and stretches along the Gulf of Mexico about 150 miles from the southern tip off Texas to near Corpus Christi.

A Coast Guard spokesman at Port Isabel said the oil was observed along a 40-mile stretch of the beach, from 10 miles north of Port Isabel to 20 miles north of the Port Mansfield cut.

"The beach is looking pretty normal, but the people are pretty upset. Our livelihood comes from tourists. If we do get oil on the beaches, if a large slick comes in that makes the beaches black, the people will not use the beaches," Mrs. Campbell added.

"Some of the hotels are saying they have a pool and still will have an ocean view, but what the tourists will decide, we don't know. Some will come out of curiosity, I'm sure. They have already had a number of cancellations."

The Coast Guard had a conference at 2 p.m. Monday with residents and merchants of South Padre Island at the Hilton Sea Island Hotel. Merchants, complaining of "bad press" in the past several days, excluded the news media from the meeting.

"That is the feeling of a lot of our business people — that erroneous reports are going out here that don't even resemble the situation and those are definitely hurting us," said Mayor Glenn McGehee.

Another major concentration of oil was sighted early today in the Gulf of Mexico 50 miles due south of Aransas Pass, Texas. Aransas Pass is located near Corpus Christi, Texas. The Coast Guard said this oil was 10 miles long and two miles wide.

Aid to road topping for fire protection

City, county agree to give and take

By DON WOODS

Howard County Commissioners will authorize county employees to seal-coat several Big Spring streets in exchange for protection of structure fires outside of city limits.

County Judge Bill Tune called the move, which came in a joint meeting of the county commissioners and city council this morning at the courthouse, "a step toward unity between the city and the county."

City Fire Chief Alvie Harrison stipulated that units would be dispatched to vehicle fires outside city limits only when human lives were in danger. Otherwise only structure fires will be covered. Truck and car fires endangering human life are already being covered by the city, said Harrison.

Though seal-coating of Wasson Road, Lancaster and Birdwell Lane will begin Wednesday, city officials must first determine whether insurance will cover city firemen handling fires outside of city limits before county wide protection officially begins.

Decisions on various details will be carried out at respective meetings of the governing bodies next week. "Details will have to be worked out as we go along," said Tune. "This is something new for both of us."

One problem brought up by City

Manager Don Davis was that most of the city's trucks are equipped with small water tanks but were mainly designed for use with hydrants. Tune said, however, that the county owns two 3,500 gallon tanks that could be dispatched if more water is needed.

Officials proposed a three-month interlude to allow for time to estimate how much fire protection will cost. Then there may be some exchange of money between the governing bodies. The officials of both bodies were committed, though, to a "give-and-take" situation rather than a dollar-for-dollar exchange.

Some opposition was voiced by Precinct 1 Commissioner Louis Brown because the proposed streets to be seal coated were not in his precinct. He voted for the proposal for the sake of cooperation with the other commissioners, he said.

Brown called the north and west sides of the city a "stepchild," because, he said, the areas were neglected by the city. Big Spring Mayor Wade Choate responded that some of the streets in Brown's precinct were relatively new.

Streets prioritized for seal coating were those with greater amounts of traffic that would be destroyed if they were not seal coated.

Davis said the news media would be contacted after the city and county meetings next week with statements including where to call for coverage of fires in the county. Results of other details to be worked out will be included in the release.

City Councilman John Massey and Commissioner Bill Crooker were not present at the meeting.

ESTES SENTENCED — Billie Sol Estes, left, and his wife Patsy, center, leave federal court in Dallas after he was sentenced to 10 years in prison for concealing assets from the Internal Revenue Service and for scheming to defraud investors, Monday. At far right is Dawn Bright of Abilene, Texas, Estes' daughter.

Horton draws 3-year term

Estes sentenced to 10 years

DALLAS (AP) — Billie Sol Estes, the former financial wizard whose big-time wheelings and dealings landed him in prison in the 1960s, stood outside a federal courtroom trying to comfort his distraught wife and four tear-eyed daughters.

Estes, 54, appeared calm, even though U.S. District Judge Robert Hill moments before had sentenced the West Texas con man to 10 years in federal prison for concealing assets from the Internal Revenue Service and for scheming to defraud investors.

Hill assessed the maximum penalty of five years on each of two convictions returned July 11.

"I don't feel like asking you for mercy. I know in my heart you'll do the right thing," Estes told the judge before he was sentenced.

"I'm sorry I've put this country through such great shame. But I want you to know that if you send me to prison, you won't be ashamed of me as a prisoner ... I'd rather be in prison in this country than free anywhere else," he added.

Co-defendant Raymond K. Horton, a West Texas entrepreneur, also was assessed a three-year prison term and fined $10,000 for concealing assets from the government.

"I've made some bad judgements. I have no one to blame but myself," the 51-year-old Midland oilman said.

Estes attorney, G. Brockett Irwin, said he "definitely" plans to appeal the sentence. However, Horton's attorneys said they have not made a decision yet.

Hill advised Horton that if he did not file a written notice of appeal within 10 days, he would be required to report to the U.S. Marshal on Aug. 20 for confinement.

Personal recognizance bonds for both men also were continued, pending appeal.

Among the eight witnesses asking Hill for leniency in his decision was J.H. Burkett, a Panhandle farmer whom Estes allegedly swindled out of $50,000 through documents bearing the forged signature of Tyler millionaire Billy D. Pyron.

Burkett, now a used car salesman in Abilene, told the judge he was not retracting the testimony he gave during the four-week trial. However, he said, he had reached a "satisfactory" agreement with Estes to repay the money.

"I hope you will give Mr. Estes that opportunity," he pleaded.

Attorneys for both sides are scheduled to meet with Hill next week to decide on a motion filed by Estes requesting a new trial. Accompanying the motion was an affidavit from juror Ray Loggins, who claimed he was coerced into voting for conviction during deliberations.

Also to be decided is whether the state will retry Estes and Horton on charges they bilked legitimate leasing companies out more than $600,000 through the sale of non-existent oil field steam cleaners.

The jury deadlocked on a verdict, and a mistrial was declared.

Estes, who at one time claimed his political clout stretched from the Texas plains to the steps of the nation's capitol, built a multi-million dollar fortune in the late 1950s by selling non-existent fertilizer tanks to the government and hundreds of West Texas farmers.

However, that empire crumbled when the "Boy Wonder of Abilene" was convicted and sentenced in 1965 to 15 years in prison.

Focalpoint

Action/reaction: Healthy farmers

Q. Who are the healthiest Americans, by vocation?

A. The Health Insurance Institute says farmers are. As a group, they have fewer days of restricted activity caused by illness or injury than ten other types of workers. Geographically, people in the Northeastern and North Central regions of the U.S., are healthier than those living in the West or South.

Vietnam wants talk on refugee situation

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vietnam today re-invited a U.S. congressional delegation to Hanoi to discuss the refugee situation in Southeast Asia, a day after it abruptly barred the delegation because one of the lawmakers accused Hanoi of human rights violations. In Bangkok, a spokesman for the Vietnamese Embassy announced that his country was again ready to welcome the delegation to the Vietnamese capital. The spokesman told The Associated Press that a cable from Vietnamese Vice Foreign Minister Phan Hien to the embassy indicated that the Vietnamese government had agreed to allow the delegation, led by Democratic Congressman Benjamin S. Rosenthal of New York, to visit Hanoi as scheduled.

On Monday, the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry had cancelled the trip, labeling as "slander" a statement by Rep. Robert F. Drinan, D-Mass., that the Vietnamese were driving out the refugees as part of a cruel policy that was one of the worst human rights violations. Today, the embassy spokesman said the decision to allow the congressmen to make the trip after all came after the Vietnamese government received a cable from Richard Holbrooke, U.S. assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific Affairs. In it, the spokesman said, Holbrooke asked Vietnam to consider a proposal by Secretary of State Cyrus Vance for a new invitation.

Phan Hien understood the proposal and agreed to welcome the U.S. Congressmen to Hanoi, including Congressman Robert F. Drinan, the spokesman said. "The Vietnamese Government hoped that both sides will respect each other and work together in a constructive manner," the spokesman said.

Earlier, the Vietnamese Embassy in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, said Vietnam had invited the delegation to Hanoi last Wednesday in hopes the trip would help clarify the refugee issue but the invitation was withdrawn because the legislators appeared interested only in criticizing Vietnam. Drinan made his charge during a tour of refugee camps in Hong Kong over the weekend, and repeated the charge today when the delegation arrived in Kuala Lumpur from Jakarta, Indonesia. "The whole world knows there are 400,000 Vietnamese people who are in detention camps, who are refugees, who are boat people. The conscience of the world has been shocked," Drinan told reporters. But delegation leader Benjamin S. Rosenthal, D-N.Y., said negotiations were going on at a "very high level" between the United States and Vietnam in hopes the visit could take place. "We're still very hopeful that the matter will be resolved since it is in the interest of both our governments, our peoples and the larger world community that our trip proceeds," he said.

Vietnam's acting foreign minister, Nguyen Co Thach, told The New York Times, meanwhile, that Hanoi and Washington reached full agreement on normalizing relations in secret talks in New York last fall but the Carter administration backed down.

Thach said in an interview in Hanoi that the breakthrough came Sept. 28 when Vietnam dropped its demand that the United States agree to a major aid commitment before relations were normalized, but that the United States was more interested in establishing relations with China first.

Hazardous jog conditions

CHICAGO (AP) — Mary Supera wants to open a riding academy and have horses return to Lincoln Park — wearing diapers if necessary. She is trying to get a zoning change to open the Lincoln Park West Riding Academy in a vacant warehouse. Chicago has not had a private stable serving Lincoln Park for 10 years.

Opposing Ms. Supera are hundreds of joggers who have taken over the old horse trails and bridle paths in the park. The don't want to have to "break stride to step around horse droppings" — let alone accidentally jogging through them. They also feel they would be menaced sharing their routes with horses.

Ms. Supera, trying to convince the City Council's committee on buildings and zoning, said Tuesday she already has diapers that would prevent horses of her proposed riding academy from making hazardous jogging conditions.

Communications difficult

CHICAGO (AP) — Antonio Melendez has indicated to police that he was abducted and injected with a drug. But authorities say they may never determine where he was because the 30-year-old handicapped man is deaf and speechless. Police found Melendez on Sunday — five days after he disappeared from a grocery near his home. He used signs to tell investigators what happened. "This is going to be a tough case to crack," said investigator Joseph Greco. "We have a 100 percent communication problem, because he can't even make the simplest identifications. We'll just have to be patient and hope for the best."

Speeding ticket protested

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Joey Staats says he plans to fight the speeding ticket he received last weekend. His excuse: He and his brother-in-law, John Rossi, were rusing Cecelia Dean to a hospital because she was in labor.

About 1 a.m. Sunday, Ricky Dean discovered his car wouldn't start. So he raced next door. Staats, an ambulance driver, and Rossi rose to the occasion and sped off. They were stopped by police near the hospital and escorted to the emergency room. But shortly after Ricky Dean Jr. was born, Staats was ticketed. Rossi protested and was arrested. "Good guys always finish last," Rossi lamented.

Fishermen return to work

SEATTLE (AP) — Washington state fishermen, recently returned to work, are going to court to forestall next month's five-day ban on trolling. The ban is similar to a 10-day closure, which expired Saturday, intended to ensure Indians would get their share of chinook salmon. A Scott Stafne, attorney for the Washington Trolls Association, said the group wants the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals to consider whether U.S. District Judge William Schwarzer of Portland, Ore., had authority to order the bans and whether he properly interpreted a recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling on Indian fishing rights.

Support for Kennedy

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Saying President Carter lacks the necessary leadership, the Pennsylvania Committee for a Democratic Alternative has begun raising money and support for Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., as a 1980 presidential candidate. The committee filed documents with the State Election Commission on Monday allowing it to raise funds. In a letter to prospective donors, the group said, "We have come together for the purpose of demonstrating that a true grass roots movement exists to draft Senator Edward Kennedy as the Democratic nominee next year." Kennedy has said he expects Carter to be the party's nominee.

Simple exercise cures

BOSTON (AP) — A few days of a simple exercise will cure the misery of waking up at night with a charley horse, a physician says in a report published in the New England Journal of Medicine. Patients were told to stand with their shoes off and their hands on a wall two to three feet away. They were asked to lean forward with their heels on the floor, stretching their calf muscles for 10 seconds, Dr. Harry W. Daniell of Redding, Calif., said in Thursday's edition. The stretch was repeated after a five-second rest.

Wage, price guidelines may be adopted soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration today strongly suggested it is likely to adopt cumulative, two-year wage and price guidelines to help fight inflation, with a goal of limiting wages to 15.5 percent over two years.

"Unless we receive comments with compelling arguments to the contrary, we intend to adopt the two-year (price) standard with such adjustments as may be required to overcome the problems that we have identified," said a report from the Council on Wage and Price Stability.

As for wages, the council's 52-page "issues paper" said: "The pay standard could alternatively be formulated as a two-year, cumulative limitation...Symmetry between the pay and price standard may be desirable."

Nine bankers sue Lubbock

LUBBOCK — Nine Lubbock banks and their presidents have filed suit against the City of Lubbock, the Lubbock Independent School District, the city-school board of equalization and city-school tax assessor-collector John Brooks, claiming unfair taxation.

The bankers want either a ruling freeing them from payment of any personal property tax or a reduction in the taxes the bankers must pay.

The class action suit claims city and school officials have adopted a "wrongful, unlawful, unjust, discriminatory, arbitrary and capricious plan of taxation" which denies bankers their rights of due process.

ERIK ESTRADA

Estrada hurt in cycle mishap

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Erik Estrada, the dark, smiling highway patrolman of television's "CHiPs" series, was in critical condition today after being tossed from his motorcycle during the filming of a chase scene.

Estrada, 30, who plays patrolman Frank "Ponch" Poncherello in the NBC series, was flown to UCLA Medical Center by helicopter after emergency treatment Monday at Holy Cross Hospital in San Fernando.

The popular actor spent at least six hours in the emergency room at UCLA Medical Center before he was moved to a surgical intensive care unit, according to Jim Powers, nurse staffing clerk.

"They're still watching him to see if he'll need surgery," Powers said early today. Powers said the area of primary concern was Estrada's upper torso.

The accident happened about 4:35 p.m. Monday about 25 miles north of downtown Los Angeles, as the "CHiPs" crew filmed the first episode of the season, a two-hour special titled "Disco."

Carter continues road show for energy plan

BALTIMORE (AP) — President Carter, continuing a one-a-week road show on behalf of his energy program, took a short train ride to Baltimore today to inspect a renovated solar-heated row house.

Carter scrapped plans to make the 37-mile trip from Washington to Baltimore by helicopter and instead took a regularly scheduled Amtrak train. The change in transportation apparently was an effort to demonstrate presidential concern for energy conservation.

The president and his wife Rosalynn rode aboard the last car, which had been reserved for the presidential party.

The train arrived here on schedule at 8:38 a.m. EDT. After a greeting by city and state officials and a crowd of 200 or so, Carter went to the home of Genitha Rhyne, a 30-year-old clerk for the Baltimore department of social services, who for $165 a month rents the solar-heated row house that the city rehabilitated for $40,000.

Carter later planned to inspect a boarded-up, abandoned school that is being converted into apartments, and to address the national convention of the Order of the Sons of Italy in America.

For the latter appearance, he brought along Benjamin Civiletti, his attorney general-designate, a Baltimore native of Italian descent. It is a standard political practice to bring a Washington celebrity back to his hometown at a presidential visit.

With Congress on vacation, the president is trying to use the month of August to rally support for his energy program, which he wants to get through the House and Senate as quickly as possible in the autumn.

White House staff members hope that while they are back in their home states, the representatives and senators will begin feeling the heat Carter is trying to generate for congressional action on energy.

The recent spate of presidential travel began with Carter's return from the Camp David domestic summit conference three weeks ago. It has been directed not only at securing support for his energy proposals but also at building up his flagging presidency.

Reports of estimates incorrect

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Department of Energy has described as "totally inaccurate" a published report that it underestimated by $9 billion the additional oil company revenues allowed by its recent "gasoline tilt rule."

The Washington Post reported such a "miscalculation" Monday, based on a department estimate published last January. The newspaper report did not note, however, that a revised, higher estimate was published in February, prior to the rule's March adoption. Before that date, federal price controls required that crude oil and refining cost increases be spread proportionally among all refined products.

The "tilt" rule, adopted to reflect more realistically the higher costs of refining gasoline, allows companies to "tilt" more of their costs into the price of gasoline. The Post, based on the department's January figures, said the Carter administration estimated that the rule would add 1.6 cents per gallon to the cost of gasoline in 1979 and 1.8 cents in 1980, for a two-year increase of 3.4 cents per gallon.

It said the administration estimated this would increase oil company revenues by some $3.7 billion over those two years. But the Post said companies have already increased gasoline prices by four to six cents a gallon this year and the result "will balloon the price tag of Tilt up to $12.9 billion by the end of next year."

AFL-CIO's Meany man for a decade

No. 2 man interested in top job

CHICAGO (AP) — Lane Kirkland, the AFL-CIO's No. 2 man for the past decade, says he's a candidate for the labor federation's top job — if 84-year-old president George Meany ever vacates the post.

"I believe George Meany is mortal, although that remains to be proven," Kirkland said with a smile Monday in announcing for the first time that he would run for president if Meany steps down because of health problems.

But Kirkland, AFL-CIO secretary-treasurer and Meany's heir apparent since 1969, left no impression that he expects the ailing federation president to end his 24-year reign when his current term expires in November.

"If you're talking about some hypothetical future time, undated, when there might be a vacancy, if nominated, I will run; if elected, I will serve," Kirkland, 57, told reporters in Chicago, where the AFL-CIO's executive council is holding its annual three-day summer meeting.

Kirkland, regarded by most officials in the 14-million-member federation as a shoo-in for Meany's job, said the federation president "is well on the road to recovery" and later this week may return to his Washington office for the first time since mid-April.

Temperatures to be hot; skies to be clear

By The Associated Press
Widely scattered showers and thunderstorms were forecast for the Texas coast today, but most of the state was to have clear skies and hot temperatures.

Highs were to be mostly in the 90s. Readings were expected to approach or reach the 100-degree mark in the Wichita Falls area of North Texas and in the Big Bend area of Southwest Texas. Showers and thunderstorms were reported along the Texas coast during the night and in far South Texas along the Rio Grande. All the thunderstorm activity had ended by 3 a.m. today.

One more office joins probe of university

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The attorney general's office has joined five other state and local agencies investigating possible criminal misuse of state funds at North Texas State University.

Lonny Zwiener, head of the attorney general's education division, said Monday he would work with the state auditor in reviewing records of a private foundation that supports the Denton university.

The House General Investigating Committee, the Department of Public Safety and the district attorneys of Denton and Austin also are looking into university finances.

Some timely hints for keeping cool

The Owens-Corning Fiberglas people send along ten suggestions for keeping cool this summer — timely hints in view of the fact that we have had temperatures consistently in the 90s for weeks now and the hottest part of the summer is still ahead of us.

Owens-Corning insists you not only can make good use of the hints but keep the utility bills down, too.

Some of the suggestions are simply common sense. If you haven't already thought of them yourself, you'll wonder why you didn't. Some can't be executed immediately but will help over a period of time, years maybe.

SOME OF THE IDEAS will cost money, but will offer a savings to you in the long run. Insulation doesn't come free in this day and time. Neither do ceiling fans (which are not adaptable to every household).

No one would and could use all the suggestions, nor implement everything on any list he or she would see. The whole list, however, offers a pretty good picture of what's ahead if we really want to conserve energy. Combine a little common sense with some planning and money and they're bound to help.

- Here's the list:
1. Check the amount and R-value of insulation in your attic. A local utility or building-supply dealer can tell you the recommended R-Values for your area.
  2. Set cooling thermostats at the highest comfortable level. Each degree a thermostat is raised in summer reduces fuel consumption by about 3 per cent.
  3. Change or clean air-conditioner filters once a month.
  4. PLANT SHADE trees on the east, south and west sides of your home to

5. Use appliances late in the evening when temperatures are lower.
6. Make sure clothes dryers are vented outdoors to avoid heat buildup.
7. Open attic windows to create ventilation, thus reducing attic temperature.
8. Check caulking around windows and doors.
9. If your house has central air conditioning, keep heat-producing appliances away from thermostats.
10. Keep draperies or shades drawn during the warmest daylight hours.

Funny, funny

Around the rim

Marie Homeyer

The previews interested me. The movie itself truly entertained me. "Meatballs," starring Bill Murray, is one of the best movies I have seen this year.

In the previous a summer camper for school-age kids with some rather unusual counselors is portrayed. The only thing that bothered me about the previews was that it tended to pick out the scenes that had sexual overtones and made you think that was what the movie was all about. Not so.

"Meatballs" makes you laugh and the plot ties together to keep you interested to the end — even as the credits are being given, the story still goes on — the result of a prank is unfolding.

THE BEST part of the movie comes when the members of Murray's camp, north star, compete with the members of another camp just down the road. The camp is only open to the richer class of people. Trying to retaliate against the upper crust's nastiness and poor sportsmanship, the members of North Star prove that being the underdog can be fun when it comes time to "get even."

MURRAY PLAYS the part of the practical jokes instigator of such acts as suspending the head counselor — asleep in his cot — in mid air, between two trees and having him awake there as parents are driving by on their way to visit their children. Apart from the practical jokes, the character Murray portrays is that of a caring person. He takes special interest in one of the older boys who is very depressed and feels isolated. Subtly and humorously, makes the boy feel liked and needed.

"Meatballs" is a very funny film — film that lets you escape from the troubles of the world that are pressing on your mind. It entertains you without making you work to find the moral of the movie or figure out the social statement it is trying to make.

Two other characters made the movie entertaining — one was the bumbling young male counselor with his glasses held together by tape who is spurred to victory by the backing of a young female counselor; the other was the over weight male counselor who thought that holding hands with a girl in the dark was just super and celebrated by stuffing himself with food.

The best part of the movie is the end. Although it is not as humorous as other scenes in the movie, the underdogs come from behind to finally overcome their snobbish competitors.

Tangled web

Jack Anderson,

WASHINGTON — An imperiled Jimmy Carter, trying desperately to climb out of the cellar, has opened his re-election campaign a year ahead of schedule. He is defending his national stewardship in a style calculated to project a sincere, serene, competent image.

But behind the scenes, Jimmy and Rosalynn have been conducting the nation's business like a mom-and-pop affair. They seem to perceive the White House not as the headquarters of the vast federal establishment but as a neighborhood store going against the great chains.

Nonetheless, they designed the organizational chart for the Carter administration in the shape of a wheel, with the president at the hub. Instead, it has come to resemble a spider web, full of those strands and snarls.

THE LINES of authority soon became so tangled, indeed, that it precipitated internecine warfare between the Cabinet and the White House staff. But Carter floated placidly above the squalls, with an air of pious magnanimity, smiling benevolently on both sides.

At length, he was stirred to take action in April 1978. According to the secret Cabinet minutes, he gave no advance hint of his displeasure; it merely bubbled to the surface and quickly subsided.

On April 10, the president cordially invited the Cabinet to spend the following Sunday afternoon with him at Camp David. The minutes record blandly that he "wanted to take some time to reflect on important issues with the Cabinet and senior White House staff under more relaxed circumstances than are usually available."

Once they were assembled at the mountaintop, according to the minutes, they joined the president for a sit-down dinner. Then some attended a special showing of the movie "Annie Hall," others watched the first installment of the television drama "Holocaust" and a few drifted to their cabins to read. Later they were lulled to sleep by the call of the crickets.

rising and falling on the night air. But the next day, to their total astonishment, the president gave them a tongue-lashing. He lashed out at them like lightning from a cloudless sky. He scolded them for their failings; he admonished them to work harmoniously together; he laid down the law.

The president's heroics were solemnly witnessed by his wife Rosalynn, son Chip and chum Charles Kirbo. They nodded siently amidst the fitting evangelical performance, witnesses recall.

THEREAFTER, CARTER resumed his former tranquility, except for a brief outburst over our access to the secret Cabinet minutes. He took out time from affairs of state on Aug. 7, 1978, to deplore the leak and to urge Cabinet members to "treat the minutes of Cabinet meetings with the care that should be given confidential documents." These minutes have been marked for their "eyes only," he reminded them sternly.

There was no indication from on high that the president was dissatisfied with anyone in the Cabinet. On Feb. 26, 1979, for instance, the minutes record:

"The President reported that he has been getting good reports from around the country about the competence and performance of the Cabinet members and various senior officials in the departments. He commended the Cabinet and asked them to keep up the good work."

Not until they were summoned upon the mountaintop for the second time were the Cabinet members aware of the president's disapproval. They knew only that his honcho, Hamilton Jordan, had bad-mouthed them.

Sources close to Carter say his Cabinet purge was a reaction to his own plunge in the polls. But the president, himself, has had little to say to them about his action.

He has the instincts of a turtle: He pulls in his head when he's under attack. In this embattled state, he relies heavily upon the whisperings of his wife, Kirbo and Jordan.

Starts in Florida

Art Buchwald

(NOTE TO EDITOR: Art Buchwald is being reevaluated by the White House to see if he is worthy of staying in Washington. While waiting for a decision, he left behind some of his favorite columns.)

Of all the communities in the United States there is probably none as social as Palm Beach, Fla. This sun-drenched, diamond-studded, Rolls Royce-clogged stretch of real estate has more cocktail and dinner parties per capita than any other town in the Free World.

There is a society editor for every five families in the colony, as opposed to the national average of one for every hundred families. But Palm Beach is not social just for the sake of being social. All the social activity down here has to do with raising money for some charity. It is very gauche to have a party for the sake of a party and, therefore, everyone is in the business of giving a party for a cause.

IT'S GOTTEN so that two people can't have breakfast together without making a donation to an orphanage.

As a matter of fact, while there is no shortage of parties and balls in Palm Beach, there is a shortage of diseases to give them for. The old-timers in Palm Beach have all the good diseases tied up. The first families of the city have a monopoly on heart, cancer, cerebral palsy and mental health, and a newcomer who is trying to crash society down here has very few illnesses left to choose from.

The other day I asked four friends to have lunch with me and one of them, Mrs. Paul Ames, asked, "What's it for?"

"Nothing," I said. "We just want to have lunch."

"You can't just have lunch without a reason," she said. "If you can come up with a good disease, we'll accept."

I called the local Palm Beach hospital and asked them if there were any diseases for which there hadn't been benefits held this season.

"You're calling awfully late," the woman said. "The only thing we still have open is malaria and yellow fever."

"Is arthritis taken?" I asked.

"IT WAS ONE of the first to go. We can't give you diabetes or hay fever, either."

"Well, is there some hospital I could raise money for?"

"We have an animal shelter in Cheyenne, Wyo., that hasn't been spoken for."

"Okay, I'll give a luncheon for that. What do I do now?"

"You have to form a committee."

"What for?"

"To get your wife's picture in the newspaper. Why else would you want to give a benefit?"

"That's true," I said.

"Just call the local newspaper and they'll send a photographer over in 10 minutes."

I formed a committee consisting of my wife as honorary chairman, Mrs. Ames as program chairman and Mrs. Howard Gould, of Cincinnati, as decorations chairman.

After the newspaper photographers took their pictures, I took the women and their husbands to lunch in the coffee shop of the Palm Beach Towers where we all were staying.

Unfortunately, the coffee shop was very crowded and we had to share our table with three other couples whom we didn't know.

But it worked out fine because the three couples each pledged $1,000 for our animal shelter in Cheyenne and our party in turn bought $3,000 in raffle tickets that they were selling for a retired lifeguards' home in Seattle, Wash.

Is there best time to take medicine?

Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Unless one is told specifically, when is it best to take medications and vitamins — before, during, or after meals? — S.R.

This has been a favorite topic of conversation for many a bridge session, but the fact is that with most medicines it matters little whether they are taken before, during, or after meals. Most are well-absorbed, as intended, at any time. There are exceptions, but generally any drug that can be dissolved in water or oil is well-absorbed at any time. The antibiotic tetracycline should be taken on an empty stomach for maximum effect. Take that a half hour before a meal or two hours afterwards. Some medicines, specifically iron preparations and digoxin — a heart pill — seem to be poorly absorbed when taken with antacids.

Other medicines are best taken with food to reduce stomach lining irritation. One example is aspirin. The anticoagulant warfarin is not well-absorbed when taken with cholestyramine, a bile-binding medicine. This is not by any means the complete list of exceptions.

All vitamins are well-absorbed at any time, but the aftertaste some have with the B vitamins, for example, can be less if taken with food in the stomach. Some doctors recommend this.

Because of the exceptions (those listed above and others) you can see that there is no general rule that works. Some medicines are taken on retiring others on arising. You are safest to ask the doctor or the pharmacist when in doubt. You are also wise to give your doctor a list of other medicines you may be taking, either prescribed or over-the-counter. It can be important to him in prescribing any new drug.

Dear Dr. Donohue: What is the difference between losing pounds and losing inches? I mean inches around the hips. I weigh only 95, but want to lose some of the inches around my hips. — P.L.

Lots of difference. You can lose inches by losing weight if the inches are in notorious fat deposit areas. The common ones, of course, are the waist, breasts, neck, and hips, not to mention the abdomen. You won't lose a millimeter in your hips if the present girth is part of your body frame. Nothing alters that.

At 95 pounds you probably have precious little of either — pounds or inches — to sacrifice from either calorie restriction or exercise. Other readers with real weight problems can read a more in depth discussion in the booklet, "Lost Secrets of Reducing." For a copy, send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me care of the Big Spring Herald.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My husband had a heart attack recently, from which he seems to be recovering nicely. But I worry. His illness did nothing to change his appetite. He was quickly back to his old tricks. He eats like a horse, and he is already overweight. I try to tell him that a heavy meal puts more physical strain on his heart than a smaller one, but he refuses (as usual) to listen to me. I'm too young to be a widow. Can you straighten him out? — Mrs. P.N.

You have set him straight and I hope he starts believing what you tell him. It is true that the process of digestion does involve a considerable increase in blood demands — by the stomach, the intestines, and various gland systems. This new demand must be met by the heart ultimately. In fact, some people with heart problems, angina for example, have to be careful. Some find they may get pain attacks after a heavy meal. Your husband ought to lose some of his excess baggage, too. That very likely contributed to his initial heart attack.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My brother-in-law was told he has temporal arteritis. How serious is this and shouldn't he be getting medical attention for it? I am told by my own doctor that it is serious, and I believe he said it meant inflammation of the arteries. Am I correct, and what about my brother-in-law? — Mrs. T.J.

It is inflammation of the temporal artery, an important one serving the temple area of the head. It has to be treated before complications arise, especially those involving the eyes. It often means that other arteries are inflamed as well. Temporal arteritis usually produces pain, which brings patients in for treatment, but even if your brother-in-law has no pain, he should be getting treatment. Another danger is stroke.

Much heart trouble is preventable. Write to Dr. Donohue, in care of the Big Spring Herald, for a copy of his booklet, "How to Take Care of Your Heart." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dear Dr. Ruble: Please tell me about syringomas. Are they "tumors" of the skin? A biopsy confirmed mine. Is there anything that can be done for this condition? I understand it is quite rare. — Mrs. C.D.

They are harmless skin tumors, usually numerous and frequently on the neck, eyelids, and upper chest. They are common in adolescence and are more common in females. They grow from the sweat ducts, which have a sudden spurt of activity among young people at puberty. They don't require treatment unless they become cosmetic nuisances. They can be removed by burning (cauter) if they are a nuisance. Their precise cause is not known. They tend to grow to a certain size and remain that size.

CONFIDENTIAL TOM S. — Skin tags are harmless, but who's to say whether that is really what you do have? I can't, and the only one who can is your doctor, who's seen thousands of them. The "tags" are actually small, overgrowths of outer skin layers. Don't guess, and don't tinker with them. We don't know what causes skin tags.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Please pray for my husband. I guess you could say he is a workaholic, because he spends almost all of his time with his job. He says he does it because he wants to provide for us, but I would rather have less money and more of his time. — H.H.

DEAR H.H.: There has been a great deal of attention given to this the last few years. Psychologists have discovered that many people (not only men) are workaholics; they seem to be addicted to their work to the virtual exclusion of almost any other interest.

A person may do this for various reasons. Some may have a deep-seated drive for financial security, and want to earn as much as possible. Others, some studies have suggested, secretly fear that they are not worth anything unless they are producing in their job. Others have a hunger for the approval of others. Many other reasons could be cited.

This overemphasis on work is wrong for several reasons, I believe. For one thing, it sometimes means that a person has allowed his work to take the place of God. In a real sense, work becomes an idol which demands the full attention and "worship" of the person. But this is wrong, because God is to have undisputed first place in our lives. Also, such a motive as greed is wrong in the eyes of God. The Bible says: "People who want to get rich fall into temptation and a trap and into many foolish and harmful desires that plunge men into ruin and destruction. For the love of money is a root of all kinds of evil" (1 Timothy 6:9-10, New International Version).

You will need to discuss this frankly with your husband. You need to assure him of your love for him — a love which loves him for himself, and not merely for what he can provide. He should realize also that God has given him opportunities at home; work is only one part of his God-given responsibility. My prayer for you both is that you should commit your lives to God afresh. Christ wants to become the center of your marriage. When He does, your husband will be more concerned about his responsibilities.

TWINS — Leukemia victim Mrs. Debbie Andrew Allen holds her twin baby girls, (l), Tracy Erin and Leighanne, she gave birth to Sunday in Macon. The effects of the disease subsided four years ago, but doctors believe leukemia victims are not out of danger for at least five years. A physician who treated Mrs. Allen said there is no evidence that leukemia patients transmit the blood disease to their offspring. Mrs. Allen's twins appear to be healthy and she and her husband Bobby hope to take the girls to their home in Forsyth in a few days.

Pork production reaching record

Meat prices should remain lower

WASHINGTON (AP) — Grocery shoppers should find that, for the rest of the year, meat prices are a little lower than they were in the spring, the Agriculture Department says. Meat prices are expected to drop because pork production is reaching near-record levels, and consumer incomes are lagging, the department said Monday. Retail pork prices this fall should average 12 percent to 15 percent below the levels of a year ago, said the department's outlook board.

Commercial hog slaughter should average as much as 20 percent higher between now and the end of the year, the board said. As for beef, the forecasters said retail prices have started "to ease off" and should continue to do so through the fall. No specific retail price predictions were made. But the department did forecast a drop in prices for fattened cattle from the average $72.51 per 100 pounds during the April-June quarter, to a range of $65 to $68 during the current quarter and $64 to $67 during the final quarter. The department's latest preliminary figures, for the week ending July 21, show a national average retail price of almost $2.28 a pound for an "all-cuts" mix of choice-grade beef, compared with $2.34 in June and $2.40 in May.

The average retail pork price was $1.42 a pound for the first three weeks of July, $1.45 for June and $1.49 in May.

Animal behavior during earthquake 'significant'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Five minutes before one of the strongest earthquakes to hit Northern California this century began jostling the region, an elephant at a wild animal park in Redwood City almost tore her barn door from its hinges. Scientists studying Monday's outburst by the normally docile beast — and similar behavior among other animals — say it could provide more evidence for a growing belief among Western seismologists that animals may some day help humans predict the fearsome quakes.

The earthquake, which registered 5.9 on the Richter scale as it raced along the Calaveras Fault, did relatively little damage and injured only a handful of people. But it set off strange reactions in many animals. "It's very interesting, very encouraging news," said Dr. Jack Evernden, a U.S. Geological Survey research geophysicist studying the impact of earthquakes on animals. "With documentation like that, it makes it so much easier to believe. It gives more credibility to the whole thing." The reactions of the animals at the 65-acre Marine World Africa U.S.A. in Redwood City south of here will be added to a daily record of their behavior being kept to determine, after the fact, whether animals do sense quakes. The quake began in late morning. Two waves lasting more than 15 seconds each jolted the state over a 350-mile wedge from a point north of here to Encino just north of Los Angeles, according to the California Institute of Technology. Two aftershocks, registering 3.0 and 4.0 on the Richter scale, came shortly before and shortly after 3:30 p.m. PDT.

Towns near the epicenter, like Hollister 100 miles south of here, reported damage to buildings, glass and store merchandise. One Santa Cruz County woman fell and broke her leg, and three people in Hollister were hospitalized for symptoms of heart attacks. In addition, Pacific 1 & Electric reported a few minor power outages, and Pacific Telephone said service was delayed for a time, mostly due to overloaded circuits. At Marine World, spokeswoman Mary Jo O'Harran said there were reports Sunday night of unusual behavior by llamas, a baby cougar and a 5-week-old tiger. Evernden said there has been a lot of skepticism about a link between quakes and animal behavior, especially because there has been little documentation of animal behavior before an earthquake. "There's been a lot of anecdotal things, people saying what their animals did after an earthquake but nothing has been recorded on a daily basis," said Evernden. "This is essentially the beginning of this kind of research. It's nice to get some good examples." He said similar research is now under way at UCLA and Stanford, trying to validate claims advanced by Chinese scientists, who use animals in their often-successful quake prediction program.

Elvis Payne

Elvis Payne is the 14 year old son of Yvonne Payne, 509 Johnson. Elvis has been a Herald carrier for route 224 since March. The route encompasses homes in the 600-1000 blocks of Johnson to Nolan.

Elvis is learning the fundamentals of business through daily practice. His Herald route teaches him responsibility and how to manage money. Elvis is saving his route profits to buy a bike as well as a trip to Six Flags.

Young people should be learning the value of money like Elvis is doing. He's learning what's involved in earning it and how to handle it once he has gotten it.

Elvis has plenty of free time after delivering his route. He likes to draw animals and finds he has plenty of time for art after his daily deliveries are through.

If you would like to earn generous route profits and still have plenty of time for summer fun, call 263-7331 or write the Herald circulation department for a route application.

HULA HOOPING TO A NEW RECORD—Mary Howe, 17, grabs a snack while swinging a hula hoop around her legs in Napa, Calif. Sunday, on her way to earning a place in the Guinness Book of Records after her marathon 60 hours of continuous hoop swinging. ## Workshops teach bird cleaning skills

WASHINGTON (AP) — Workshops are planned this week in Corpus Christi, Texas, to teach bird cleaning skills in preparation for the imminent approach of oil from a blown out Mexican well.

"Cleaning birds is not like washing dishes. It requires a certain amount of skill," Columbus Brown, a national pollution response coordinator for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, said Monday.

Officials are hoping, however, that the bird cleaning crews will never have to swing into action.

"Prevention is No. 1," Brown said. Even the best cleaning program after oil coats birds' plumage could hope for only a fairly low survival rate.

Among other variables, the amount of damage to the waterfowl population depends on where the oil goes and not how big the spill is. A 25,000 gallon spill of No. 6 fuel oil last year in the Chesapeake Bay killed far more waterfowl than the recent crash of two supertankers in the Caribbean.

"Our people probably have to respond to a lot of oil spills people never hear about," Megan Durham, a public information officer for the service, said.

The Coast Guard's efforts to forestall the spill's penetration to the estuaries and sheltered areas of the Laguna Madre where most of the bird habitats are located therefore are crucial.

"First of all, we want to make sure that as little oil gets into these areas as possible," Brown said. "In the event that doesn't work, the option would be to keep the waterfowl out of the area."

Fish and wildlife workers would use "hazing" techniques to disperse the birds from their usual nesting grounds for a time.

Ms. Durham said a 30 percent survival rate would be good if bird cleaning needs to be performed.

"There's a whole lot of things that can affect their survival rates," she said. "They would be lucky to save 20-25 percent."

State and federal employees will be trained at a workshop Wednesday. A session is planned Thursday to train a group of volunteers.

Alice Berkner, executive director of the bird rescue research center that formed after the famous 1969 Santa Barbara oil spill, is scheduled to assist with the training and the cleaning.

Ms. Durham said the techniques of bird cleaning are complicated enough to mean that trained workers are significantly more successful.

The science, after all, is only 10 years old.

The Texas Gulf Coast species causing the most concern right now are the brown pelican, on the endangered list, and the state-protected least tern, Ms. Durham said.

The situation should become more complicated if the oil continues in its present direction in the fall and winter when the area's population of migratory birds grows.

The rare whooping cranes which winter in the Aransas Pass area hopefully will be far to the north of the oil-stricken sections, or they may arrive after the cleanup ends.

"It's something that we've thought about, but it's pretty hard to tell whether they would be affected," Ms. Durham said. A massive protective campaign would roll into gear if the whoopers appeared in any danger, she added.

The bird rehabilitation center now being set up in Corpus Christi is under the direction of the fish and wildlife service's regional headquarters in Albuquerque, N.M.

Washington officials said as many of the workers as possible will be coming from nearby.

The oil spill's effect on the Texas Gulf Coast waterfowl population remains impossible to predict.

Sniper's shots ignored; last bullet takes life

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A 58-year-old man who worked as a dishwasher and told a neighbor he was a CIA agent fired 20 pistol shots from a downtown apartment before taking his own life, police say.

Police said some of the shots Monday apparently were ignored by those who heard them. There were no other injuries or damage.

It was not until a passing motorcycle patrolman, Ray Golden, heard shots that police became aware of the shooting and blocked off the area.

"He apparently had been shooting earlier. Some people in the bar (near the apartment building) heard them," said police Sgt. Thomas Hawkins, who rushed to the scene after Golden's radio call and said he heard the final shot, which apparently killed the man.

The man was identified by police Sgt. John Shawkey as Virgil Hanes, a dishwasher at a cafe. Police said there were about 20 fired cartridge casings in the apartment.

George Selig, who lived in an apartment near Hanes, said that earlier on Monday, "He pointed a gun at me. He said, 'I'm a CIA agent and licensed to kill.' He mentioned this CIA thing before. Whether he was drunk or crazy, I don't know."

Culligan Water system removes salt impurities

If you think you have to put up with the taste of Big Spring's water, you don't. And you don't have to haul bottled water either.

"That's too expensive," says Richard Wright, owner of the Culligan Water Conditioning Company of Big Spring.

"Our H-5 Aqua-clear drinking water appliance will make this salty Big Spring water taste as good as expensive bottled water and for only 70 cents for five gallons," he says. "The Aqua-clear can be piped to your automatic ice maker, too!"

This is the only appliance Culligan uses in Big Spring for drinking water. Culligan has an activated carbon or charcoal filter, but it will not remove the salt taste from Big Spring water.

The Aqua-clear is a reverse osmosis for your own home. Your bottled water is probably made by the process. Check your bottle. If you're paying more than Culligan's 14 cents per gallon you're paying too much.

The Aqua-Clear unit fits under your sink, out of your way, and the special faucet fits into your present sink.

The Culligan Company also offers free water analysis for your private well or in your home. The Culligan man can recommend the precise unit to remove the dissolved rock that causes burned out water heaters, scale build-up in dishwashers and clothes washers, and tarnished sink fixtures.

You can do something about your water problems. Conditioned water will give more suds with less soap in your dishwasher and clothes washer. No more scale and film build-up on appliances and in clothes.

Soft water can help prevent red, itchy or dry skin. Shaving is easier and blades last much longer.

Plumbing and pipes benefit from soft water because it prevents the formation of rock-like hard water scale. And it gradually removes old scale that was present before your Culligan water conditioner was installed.

For the complete story about Culligan and a free water analysis right in your own home, call the people who treat water seriously: The Culligan Water Conditioning Company.

Just dial 263-8781 and say "Hey, Culligan Man."

On the Light side

Good comes from bad

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — A Toms River man's adversity has turned to his advantage. James Naso, 54, had been bald for about 30 years. But this week, fuzz has appeared on the top of his head, showing the start of a full head of black hair. Naso was severely burned over 50 percent of his body, including his scalp, on when his boat exploded July 1. He has been recuperating at St. Francis Medical Center Burn Facility, said a spokesman for the National Burn Victim Foundation in Orange. Dr. John Flood, Naso's physician, says there isn't any medical explanation for Naso's new hair.

Come on up and buy it

NEWTON, Mass. (AP) — A white and gold baby grand piano that once belonged to Mae West, along with six packets of fan letters dating back to 1940, are up for grabs in an auction featuring items collected by the actress. Ms. West, who celebrates her 88th birthday this month, recently sold her Malibu Beach, Calif., home and its contents to Louis Douglas, who decided to place the contents on sale tonight as the Mae West Collection. Among the furniture on auction is the Steiff baby grand, valued at $10,000 and an antique French Baccarat-cut crystal mantel clock and a brass stand, said Paul Sadows, promotion director for C.B. Charles' Galleries, the firm holding the sale. "People think of Mae West as a flamboyant, not-so-intelligent blonde bombshell. But actually, she is extremely knowledgeable about collector's items and quite a businesswoman with an eye for investment," said Sadows. Ms. West has been in seclusion in her Beverly Hills apartment since finishing her last movie, "Sextette," three years ago.

A summer camp by any other name . . .

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — In most ways, it looked like any other summer camp — kids munching hot dogs and playing volleyball. But the guard at the gate was dressed in white robes and packed a pistol, and the kids took time from their games for rifle practice.

A counselor at the camp told the youngsters they were being taught how to fire a rifle because, "Some day you'll be Klansmen in robes and you'll be fighting beside us."

The camp, somewhere north of Birmingham, is run by the Invisible Empire of the Ku Klux Klan. The 47-acre site is owned by Roger Handley, Alabama grand dragon of this particular Klan faction.

Reporters who visited the camp Sunday, at the Klan's invitation, were taken to it in convoys, over a roundabout route of country roads that made its exact location hard to pinpoint.

Reporter Bob Bray of the Birmingham News was among those who visited the camp. His story appeared in Monday's editions.

Bill Wilkinson of Denham Springs, La., imperial wizard of the faction, said in addition to usual summer-camp activities, target practice and karate lessons, campers attend weekly classes on "what it means to be white. We want to make what the liberal media would call racists out of them."

Tony Anderson, state director for the Klan's Youth Corps program, said after Life magazine printed several pictures of camp activities in its August issue, it was decided that the camp should be opened to other media.

So on Sunday, NBC News showed up. So did a crew from CBS' "60 Minutes," the American correspondent for the Danish national television network and a reporter from a New York newspaper.

They waited for hours under a blistering sun to see youngsters heft a rifle and take two shots apiece at paper plates lined up in a ravine.

"There are people, particularly communists, who would stoop to anything, even attacking kids," Wilkinson said.

Some of the youngsters told reporters that they joined the corps because of harassment and physical attacks from blacks in schools.

"Let's face it," Anderson told the group. "You're Youth Corps. You stand together and you fight together."

Wilkinson said members of the youth group, which is open to 12- to 18-year-olds, are not Klan members. He added that he expected most would join the Klan when they are grown.

Wilkinson said his Klan group, one of several in the nation, operates 12 such camps in six states. Also, he said, plans are under way to construct a family recreation club for Klan members, with a lake and artificial beach, roller rink, game room and bowling alley.

Chagra's pick of associates not good, testimony reveals

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Las Vegas gambler Jimmy Chagra would go broke if his luck shooting craps were as bad as his choice of associates in alleged drug operations, according to testimony in his narcotics smuggling trial.

A Florida boat captain said Monday he ran out of gas and drifted for three days while guiding two small Colombian freighters laden with marijuana to their rendezvous with vessels chartered by Chagra for unloading.

Another witness testified he not only cheated Chagra but also betrayed a close friend to narcotics officers in order to save himself from a prison term. The friend is now in prison.

Hamilton Jud Myers of South Florida said he helped Chagra locate and partially unload the Colombian freighters before they were confiscated by the Coast Guard.

Myers, 30, testified he ran out of gas while searching for the fishing boats that were to take the cargo off the Bahamas.

He said Chagra located him in an airplane and sent gasoline, enabling the unloading to begin.

The confiscation of the "Miss Connie" and the other freighter was big news in Florida at the time, Myers said.

Myers said he worked for Chagra for more than a week around Christmas 1977 locating the freighters and helping unload them.

He said he watched Chagra board the freighters and inspect the marijuana.

"I saw him take a knife and cut open the bales and take samples of marijuana. . . . What he was trying to do was cut them down in price," Myers said.

He said he made a number of 49-mile runs in a speed boat with Chagra between Fort Lauderdale, Fla., and Bimini in the Bahamas in connection with trying to unload the freighters.

On Christmas night, he said, Chagra brought "a small vial of cocaine" with him in the boat and "he did some and I did some, just before we got stopped by the Coast Guard" for running without lights.

Myers said Chagra paid him $12,000 "for driving the boat and doing what I did."

He said he accepted "an opportunity to cooperate with the government" in exchange for not being prosecuted "for my prior smuggling operation."

Chagra, 34, is accused in a four-count federal indictment of conspiring to import marijuana and cocaine from Colombia and of supervising a "continuing criminal enterprise" involving at least five underlings. He could receive 10 years to life in prison, a $100,000 fine and confiscation of his alleged drug profits if convicted of the "continuing criminal enterprise" count.

Paul Taylor, 40, a Denver salesman, testified that he and Dudley Connell, 31, an El Paso travel agent, obtained a kilo (2.2 pounds) of cocaine from Chagra on a consignment but never paid him the $70,000 purchase price.

He said he and Connell were allowed to buy the cocaine because Taylor went to Colombia and provided "moral support" and paid some expenses of Chagra's alleged accomplice in a cocaine smuggling venture, Henry Wallace.

U.S. District Judge William Sessions of El Paso, presiding over the trial, signed an order granting Taylor immunity from prosecution shortly before the tall, bearded, well-tanned man testified.

Taylor told basically the same story as Connell.

Wallace had invited them to invest in a plan to smuggle 13.2 pounds of cocaine, worth about $32,000 a pound, from Colombia. They made no investment, but Taylor went to Colombia on Oct. 21, 1977, to "check on the operation." He paid a few bills for Wallace and viewed a large amount of cocaine at the home of a "Colombian connection."

Taylor claimed he never had tried cocaine before meeting Wallace in Colombia.

"Did you know what cocaine looked like?" defense lawyer Oscar Goodman of Las Vegas, Nev., asked.

"I went to the library and looked things up," Taylor replied.

On Nov. 26, 1977, Taylor said, he and Connell went to Fort Lauderdale, Fla., where Chagra gave them a kilo of cocaine on credit, with a purchase price of $70,000. Aware they would make very little if any profit at that price, Chagra promised to give them 5,000 pounds of marijuana he expected to receive from Colombia by sea, Taylor said.

The cocaine sold poorly, both Connell and Taylor said, so they decided to double-cross Chagra and not pay him the $70,000.

Taylor changed his phone number, and Connell told Chagra he had skipped out with all the money and the unsold cocaine, the two witnesses said.

But their were marked discrepancies in some of the details of their story.

Connell said he did not know Chagra was involved until he turned out to be their contact in Florida for the kilo of cocaine.

Taylor said Connell told him before they left El Paso for Florida that they would meet Chagra.

12-year vet or rookie, camp is still a challenge

Vet Charlie West hoping to play one more year

By NATHAN POSS

Charlie West was a three-sport star at BSHS in 1962-64 seasons. He later starred as a defensive back at Texas Western (now UTEP), before being drafted by the Minnesota Vikings in the draft of 1968. The talented West even served in the Cincinnati Reds baseball organization the summer before joining the Vikings. He played six seasons and participated in two Super Bowls, while in Minnesota, was traded to Detroit, where he served for four years, and played with Denver last year. He still is a co-holder of the NFL record for the longest punt return, as he sprinted 98 yards for a touchdown in his rookie season against the Washington Redskins.

Charlie West sat in his locker at Texas Stadium Saturday night, slowly unraveling the yards of tape from his body after pulling his uniform off following Denver's 7-6 loss to Dallas in a rugged exhibition game. "Beat up," he replied, glancing down at his well-deflated body, answering a question concerning his present feelings.

West had played two quarters at his free safety position in the game against Dallas, and also played on all of the specialty teams during the contest.

Watching the 12-year veteran closely during his playing time in the game, West had looked extremely sharp, both mentally and physically. He appeared to still possess the speed he had in his younger days with the Minnesota Vikings and the Detroit Lions, and was obviously a leader on the field to the younger members of the second team Denver secondary during their playing time in the second and fourth quarters. He was constantly around the ball, making numerous tackles and recovering a fumble that was nullified.

"Hey, Charlie you looked good tonight," I replied, unconsciously trying to pick up what I sensed were down-trodden spirits.

"Yeah, but I don't know what's going to happen. We've got some good young defensive backs here this year," he said softly, motioning to a couple of obviously young defensive backs undressing close by. "They all are real quick, like our whole defensive team, and that guy right there will knock you in the dirt," he continued, nodding toward Maurice Harvey, a 23-year-old second year man who is competing with West at the safety positions.

"So Charlie, I was going to ask if these pre-season games become monotonous when you've played so long, but I guess that's not the case." "No way. I've got to play extremely well in each game. I need to show that I'm a good influence on the younger players and can help them. I also can't allow myself to make any mistakes when I'm playing, because I'm not as fast as I used to be. The four operations have taken their toll," he continued, looking down to railroad tracks covering both sides of his knees. "I've become very critical of myself."

"But I guess you have to be," I said in agreement.

"Yeah," he said thoughtfully, as Lyle Alzado walked by on the way to the shower.

"I've worked so hard from January until now to prepare myself to make it this year, as hard as I have ever worked."

"I'll do anything I can to prove to these people that I can still contribute to this team. In order to make it, I'll have to play both strong and free safety, and also play all the specialty teams, something that most guys my age won't do."

"In order to make it, I'll have to play both strong and free safety, and also play all the specialty teams, something that most guys my age won't do."

"Have you always been so critical of yourself?" I inquired.

"Just the last couple of years."

After showering, West continued the conversation. "I know what my position is. I've got to do the job that I was talking about, but a great deal of what happens will concern money. The organization must decide if they want to keep me and my contract, hoping that my influence on the younger players, and my experience in game situations will pay off for the team; or if they want to take a much less experienced player with a smaller contract."

"But that man likes me," he continued, pointing to Bronco head coach Red Miller. "He's a player oriented man that you can talk to, and he knows what I can do and what I'm willing to do for the team. That's one thing going for me."

"I'll really become anxious just before the final week before the regular season starts. That's when the biggest cut occurs. If I get past that, I'll be okay."

Logback announces new fem coaches

Big Spring Athletic Director Ron Logback recently announced the signing of two coaches to the staff at BSHS for the 1979-80 school year.

Barbara Fletcher, who graduated from Western State College in Gunnison, Colorado, will assume the position of Head Girl's Basketball Coach. She will also assist in volleyball and track.

Fletcher began her coaching career at Gunnison, Colorado in the 72-73 school year. She stayed there for three years, then departed to Platte Canyon, Colorado, from 1975-78. Fletcher served last year at Weslaco, Texas.

Mikki Rogers, who graduated from Angelo State, will begin her second year of coaching. She served her first year at Tulia High School, where she took four girls to the state track meet.

Rogers will assume the position of Head Girl's Track Coach.

Barbara Moffett served as the track coach last year, while Joe Allen was the girl's basketball coach.

Rookie Tom Sorley bidding for third spot as Denver QB

By NATHAN POSS

Tom Sorley played his high school football at BSHS, where he passed for over 2000 yards in his senior season. He then signed with the Nebraska Cornhuskers, where he was a two-year starter, leading the Big Red to a Liberty Bowl berth in his junior year, and a Big 8 Championship and a berth in the Orange Bowl during his senior season last year.

As usual, Tom Sorley was his usual cheerful and optimistic self. Despite the fact that he didn't play in Denver's first pre-season game against the Dallas Cowboys, he was looking on the bright side as he talked to Danny Valdes and me in the quarterback corner of the Broncos dressing room in Texas Stadium late Saturday night.

"The coaches told me before the game that I wouldn't play tonight. Dallas has an excellent team and throws a lot of different looks against you defensively, and they felt that playing against Washington next week would be better for me," the former BSHS and Nebraska Cornhusker said.

Norris Weese had played the first half for the Broncos and moved them quite well at times, but Craig Penrose and Fred Mortenson, Sorley's competition for the number three spot on the team, had not looked sharp in the final half. Aging veteran Craig Morton had suited up, but Morton played due to an injury to a hip.

"Norris just told me that I may have improved my status by not playing tonight," Sorley said, obviously referring to the woes that Penrose and Mortenson had encountered. "I'm glad now that my first shot will be against Washington at Mile High." (Mile High Stadium is the home of the Denver club.)

"I feel that I've had a good camp so far, but things aren't coming naturally for me yet," he continued. "I had a real good scrimmage last weekend, and that helped." Sorley declared, talking about the final intra-squad affair before the pre-season started in which he completed four of four passes for over 80 yards.

"The toughest part has been adjusting to the mental part of the game," the husky signal caller continued. "It's been much tougher than adjusting to college. At camp I will get up at 6:30, study, eat breakfast, go to a meeting, go to practice, go to study, eat lunch, go to a meeting, go to the afternoon practice, go back to study, eat supper, attend another meeting, and finally go back and study some more before going to bed. And, he added, breaking into his infectious grin, "my stinkin' dorm room was up on the fourth floor."

"I had all of the plays in the playbook down before I came to camp," Sorley revealed. "But then I got here and they handed me a lot more to learn. So thus far, I haven't been able to play without thinking what I have to do first. If I can start reacting naturally, everything should fall into place."

Saunders finishes third in state

KILLEEN — The Saunders Angels of Big Spring, after winning their first two games, dropped encounters to Houston Spring-Klein and Brownwood to finish fourth in the State Teenage Baseball Tournament.

Spring-Klein took advantage of seven Saunders errors, six of them with two outs in an inning, to take a 9-4 victory and hand the Angels their first loss in the tourney.

Losing pitcher Tommy Gutierrez limited the Houston suburb team to only five hits, but fell victim to his teammates errors.

Robert Rubio, Tony Ontiveros, Blake Rosson and Adriel Saldivar each had hits which resulted in runs batted in for the Angels. Brownwood scored an unearned run in the top of the seventh inning to then eliminate the Angels from the affair. The loss ended the Saunders season, and gave them a final record of 17-2.

Big Spring scored in the first inning on hits by Tony Ontiveros and Blake Rosson. Gerald Green also hit safely for the Angels.

Losing pitcher Tommy Olague limited the Brownwood crew to six hits and whiffed six. Both of the runs he surrendered were unearned.

CGA Tourney winners

The team of Joe Trevino, Ben Garcia Jr., David Gomez, and Juan Montelongo carded a round of 70 to take the championship honors in the Chicano Golf Association's Selective Drive Tournament held Sunday at the Comanche Trail Golf Course.

Second place winners were Ben Garcia Sr., Ray Subia, and Juan Ortega, who finished with a score 71.

Finishing in third place were the quartet of Albert Gonzales, Julio Barrera, Jesse Hernandez and Raul Hernandez.

Red Sox sweep pair

The Big Spring Red Sox swept a doubleheader from the Sonora Red Sox Sunday at the Roy Anderson Complex.

Mike Gamboa, with relief help from Milo Hernandez, hurled the win in the opener. The pair were aided in the 5-4 win by three hits from Fernie Paredes and pinch-runner Pete Amaro, who scored the go ahead run in the eighth inning.

Vicente Garcia, John Morelton and Tony Lujan paced a torrid Red Sox hitting attack in the win in the second game. Garcia went four for four and picked off four runners from his catcher position, while Morelton chipped in with three hits, and Lujan blasted two homers.

David Cruz, the winning pitcher, increased his record to 8-1, while the Red Sox, are now 24-7. They travel to San Angelo this weekend for a tournament.

Murcer's bat honors Munson

When Bobby Murcer thought about his friend Thurman Munson, baseball was the furthest thing from his mind.

Then he thought about Munson again. "If we had been sitting on the bench, and I had said, 'Well, we're not going to play today,' Thurman would have said, 'Hey, you guys are crazy,'" said Murcer.

So the Yankees played a game Monday night — and the result was just as much a tribute to the departed New York captain as the sensitive eulogies that Murcer, among others, had delivered earlier in the day at his funeral.

Emphasizing that "everything I did was for him," a grim and determined Murcer knocked in all the Yankee runs with a three-run homer and a two-run double as New York beat the Baltimore Orioles 5-4.

In the night's other American League games, Kansas City beat Toronto 16-12; California whipped Oakland 5-2 and Seattle defeated Minnesota 7-4. Murcer's first AL homer since 1974, in the seventh inning, brought New York within one run of the Orioles, at 4-3. And in the ninth, after Bucky Dent walked and Willie Randolph's sacrifice bunt was thrown into right field by Baltimore reliever Tippy Martinez for a two-base throwing error, Murcer slapped an 0-2 pitch to short left to win the game.

Giants break streak

LOS ANGELES (TP) — Ed Whitson, a 24-year-old righthander, is often questioned about the pressures of justifying the trade that brought him to San Francisco nearly two months ago.

"The only thing I want to do is prove that I'm as good a pitcher as Bill Madlock is a hitter," said Whitson after pitching the Giants to a 7-1 victory over Los Angeles in one of two National League games Monday night. In the other, Cincinnati defeated Atlanta 3-1.

LaCoss hurls Reds win

Mike LaCoss pitched a four-hitter for his 12th victory and Hector Cruz' run-scoring double scored the winning run as Cincinnati beat Atlanta.

LaCoss, 12-4, allowed a run-scoring single to Bob Horner in the first and held the Braves to two hits in the last eight innings as he lowered his ERA to 2.69, second in the National League to Steve Rogers' 2.66.

Garden City sets physical dates

GARDEN CITY — Garden City Athletic Director Jessie Smelley has announced that all athletes, both male and female, from the seventh through the twelfth grades should report to the new high school gym at 11:00 a.m. on Thursday, August 9 for physical examinations.

Smelley emphasized that all athletes must have a physical in order to be eligible to compete in the upcoming school year.

The physicals will be administered at the Cowper Clinic in Big Spring.

Yankees, friends bid farewell to departed hero Munson

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — A battered red car with the words "Thank you No. 15" scrawled in white paint on its doors pulled slowly into the parking lot of the Canton Civic Center.

A young couple got out and walked toward the police barricades where several hundred other Thurman Munson fans watched many of baseball's great and mighty arrive for the funeral of the New York Yankees' catcher and captain.

Those two, along with many other of Munson's fellow Canton residents, quietly mourned for their friend and hero Monday as the private service began inside the huge auditorium.

Suddenly, out of the side door of the Civic Center, came 4-year-old Michael Munson, dressed in a replica of his father's No. 15 Yankee uniform. Tears began to flow among both men and women as the youngster, fiddling with his baseball cap and looking awed by all the attention, held the hand of a family friend and walked toward a car.

Inside, in a makeshift chapel, Munson's family, friends and teammates were saying a final farewell to Michael's father, who was killed last Thursday in the crash of his private jet.

The flower-draped casket stood, closed, in the midst of a sea of floral displays and beneath a gold-framed color portrait of Munson, 32, who died when his twin-engine jet crashed and burned short of a runway at the Akron-Canton Airport.

The Yankees and their wives, flown in by team owner George Steinbrenner on a charter flight, filled more than half the seats as Lou Piniella — Munson's teammate and close friend — read from Ecclesiastes and began a short eulogy.

"Thurman was a great competitor, a great baseball player. He was rough and tough, but he was always fair," he added. Murcer continued haltingly and, finally, began to sob, tears streaming down his face.

Munson's grief-stricken widow, Diane, sat near the speakers, alternately weeping and consoling her daughters, Tracy Lynn, 9, and Kelly, 8. Michael, too young to understand, had been sent home.

Murcer reflected on the tragic loss of another Yankee leader, Hall of Famer Lou Gehrig, who died in 1941 of a degenerative nerve disease after serving as captain of the Yankees before Munson.

"Thurman was a great competitor, a great baseball player. He was rough and tough, but he was always fair," he added. Murcer continued haltingly and, finally, began to sob, tears streaming down his face.

Munson's grief-stricken widow, Diane, sat near the speakers, alternately weeping and consoling her daughters, Tracy Lynn, 9, and Kelly, 8. Michael, too young to understand, had been sent home.

MUNSON FAMILY LEAVES SERVICES — Kelly Munson, younger daughter of New York Yankee catcher Thurman Munson, looks out the window of a limousine as her mother Diane wipes a tear at left after leaving services Monday. Thurman Munson was killed in a plane crash last Thursday, piloting the plane that he used to travel home to Canton.

It struck with the suddenness of a clap of thunder, sending shudders up and down the spine.

One moment, Thurman Munson was here — an American hero, captain of the New York Yankees, a marvelously gifted athlete in the prime of his life.

And the next moment, he was gone, killed in the mindless crash of his private plane.

It was a frightening, instant reminder of the slender thread by which we all live every day of our lives.

How can this be, you wonder. How can fate be so cruel as to cut down a man so suddenly, a man who meant so much to so many?

The reaction was disbelief as people heard the news. It was almost as if this could not have really happened — not to one of our heroes.

But it could and it did because Munson was a human being, with the same strengths and weaknesses as the rest of us. He dealt with life as all of us do, facing its ups and downs and twists and turns the same way ordinary people must.

He happened to be able to play a little boys' game called baseball better than others, and that made him a national figure. But the bottom line is, off the field, he was just a person, not unlike the rest of us.

We as a nation attach a special significance to our sports heroes. There is a tendency to separate them from the status of mere mortals. They are treated as some kind of superbeings. And then, every so often, a Troy Archer is killed in a car accident, a J.V. Cain dies on the football training field, a Thurman Munson crashes his plane and dies.

And that's when the joy goes out of the games. That's when the reality hits that athletes are just people, too.

Yankee heroes have died before but never has it happened quite this way. When Lou Gehrig died, there was warning. His fans, his contemporaries knew he was a sick man. The same was true with Babe Ruth. But Munson was a strong, young athlete, one of the top performers in the game.

Yankee Stadium was an eerie place last Friday night. At a time of mourning, you expect solemnity, respect for the memory of the man whose life was snuffed out so suddenly. But Yankee fans did not accept that traditional moment of silence and reflection. Instead, they offered cheers — nine minutes of unbroken, thundering noise.

They cheered the memory of Munson, the thrills he had provided in his 10 years as the Yankee catcher. They cheered his home runs, his aggressive style on the bases and behind home plate. They cheered the way they did when he would stretch a single into a double before the constant crouching up and down behind the plate began to take its toll on his knees.

They cheered and they cried.

It was a macabre scene, irreverent and yet, in some ways, entirely appropriate. A minute of silence would not have permitted the fans to express their total feelings for this man. So they chose nine minutes of noise instead.

The shouting, the clapping, the cheering seemed to help the fans cleanse themselves of their emotions, to get their feelings out there in the open. It was as if the roaring was the crowd's denial of the cruel trick fate had played on the Yankee captain, as if the people felt that cheering long enough and loud enough could reverse the finality of death.

Munson's Yankee teammates had to handle their loss in silence. Through it all, they stood motionless, heads bowed, a hand occasionally wiping away a tear ... sometimes wiping away a lot of tears.

Teammates are like members of a family. They live together, travel together, win and lose together. It is a complex arrangement that often creates deep and meaningful relationships between players.

On Monday, the Yankees flew to Canton, Ohio for Munson's funeral. It was one of the shortest trips of the year for the club but none could have been harder.

They gathered to say goodbye to a man who was a teammate and a friend. And a human being, just like the rest of us.

Jurors hear Newlin in Tomjanovich suit

HOUSTON (AP)—Mike Newlin, a guard on the Houston Rocket professional basketball team, told a jury Monday his teammate Rudy Tomjanovich lay on the floor with blood "gushing out with every beat of his heart" after being struck during a game with Los Angeles Lakers.

Newlin was the first witness called by attorneys for Tomjanovich and the Rockets in a multimillion dollar lawsuit against the Lakers.

The former Utah University star testified he never saw the blow that hit Tomjanovich, but "I heard it. It sounded like someone slapping a board on the floor."

Tomjanovich is suing the Lakers for an unspecified amount of damages from the blow he received Dec. 9, 1977 from Laker Kermit Washington. The Rockets are asking $1.4 million from the California organization for the loss of Tomjanovich during most of the 1977-78 season.

Both suits are being heard concurrently by U.S. District Judge John V. Singleton.

Nick Nichols, an attorney for Tomjanovich, told the five-man, one-woman jury that his client was the "victim of one of the most vicious blows ever landed in American sports history" and deserves at least $1 million in damages.

Nichols said the Lakers "were blase about this slugging, this fighting, this violence."

Bob Dunn, attorney for the Lakers, told the jury that Tomjanovich "had rushed into a fight and Washington had thrown a punch only because he thought he was being attacked."

Newlin testified he saw Tomjanovich "ambling toward the fight. I did not see him hit."

The legal actions were filed after a Rocket-Laker game in Inglewood, Calif., on the night of Dec. 9, 1977.

Washington, then a member of the Lakers and now with the San Diego Clippers, allegedly hit Tomjanovich during a fight in the early seconds of the third quarter.

Tomjanovich, 31, suffered fractures of the nose, jaw and skull; facial lacerations; brain concussion; and leakage of spinal fluid from the brain cavity.

Singleton warned the prospective jurors "that this is a rather celebrated lawsuit and I guess most of you have either heard or read something about it. Now you must put aside all of that say a verdict can only be reached on what you hear in this courtroom."

Inflation affects your electric bill even more than your grocery bill.

Every time you go to the grocery store you can see what inflation's doing to your food bill. But because you don't buy electricity by the can, you probably don't realize how inflation affects the cost of electricity.

Fuel costs are up, particularly natural gas. Equipment costs are up. Power lines, transformers and poles cost us more every day. Just like milk costs you more every day.

The millions of dollars we must borrow to build plants to ensure your electricity needs in the future are costing us more.

The cost of building these plants is higher, too, because of inflation. And because of the time and money it takes to comply with an ever-increasing number of government regulations. The longer it takes to build, the more inflation takes its toll.

Inflation, overregulation and rising fuel costs are all making your electricity cost you more. But by using electricity wisely you can do your part in keeping that cost down in your home.

At Texas Electric, we want you to know what you're paying for.

CAPTIVATED BY DESERT AT NIGHT — Martha Ames, a volunteer guide at the Arizona-Sonoran Desert Museum in Tucson, Ariz., looks at a Colorado River toad recently near Tucson, Ariz. Martha Ames has helped organize a night walk in the desert for the museum.

Only a snake might disagree Moonlight desert walks reveal nature secrets

SONORA DESERT, Ariz. (AP) — The last act of the setting desert sun is to gild the needles of the saguaro cactus, giving it a halo, as of a giant martyr, arms upraised in thanks that day is done.
"If you lived in the desert, you would be grateful for nightfall, too," Martha Ames said.
Martha Ames is head of Special Events at the Arizona-Sonoran Desert Museum, near Tucson. One event she put on recently was special indeed: a night walk in the desert.
"It's an experiment," she said. "If it works, we'll make it a regular part of our schedule."
"People are reluctant to go out in the desert at night, afraid of snakes and things. That's a shame. At night, the desert is an entirely different place. It comes alive. If you want to know the desert, you must witness it at night."

Night fell. The dry air turned cool suddenly as if a switch had been thrown.
The 50 or so who had gathered, some carrying flashlights, split into a half-dozen groups. A museum specialist shepherded each group to tell of the magic that night time works on the desert's creatures, great and small.
When you discover, for instance, that cactus flowers are pollinated not by bees, but by bats, you begin to sense the wonder of the night.
The moon made its appearance, an orange ball rising above the black veil of the Tucson mountains. Flashlights became excess baggage in the moonlight. Now the cactus glowed silver.
"We wanted a full moon for two reasons," Ms. Ames said.

"First of all, the light. We don't want anybody backing into a cactus or tripping over something."
"Besides, in the full of the moon the large animals are more active. That means the small animals, the prey, tend to stay hidden. So snakes become less active, too. Since there isn't much to eat, they stay in their lairs." Comforting.
Martha Ames is a native of Virginia, about as far removed from desert dust as you can get. She is a geologist and archeologist and came to Tucson to work in a lab, dating tree rings.
"When I saw the desert," she said, "it captivated me. I wanted to learn everything about it. I began hanging around the museum, first as a visitor then as a volunteer."
"It was 10 years ago, when I was a student, though, that I got the idea for a night walk.
"My ecology class went on a night toad watch. I was utterly fascinated. The activity at the pond was as different as, well, as different as night and day. So is the desert."
Quite. Even if no profound secrets of nature reveal themselves, a walk in the desert by moonlight is its own reward. Only a snake might disagree.

Scientist study stoned monkeys

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

Teens: I came across an Associated Press article that I thought you might find interesting, especially if you have definite thoughts on the use of marijuana.
A conference held at New York University, sponsored by the American Council on Marijuana, brought forth scientific data that showed prolonged daily use of marijuana by monkeys made these animals become tense, irritable and unable to cope.
Dr. Loring Chapman made this observation based on seven years of work with 35 rhesus monkeys at a university medical school.
Chapman said the monkeys got a daily dose equivalent to three marijuana cigarettes a day.
The drug-treated animals lived in cages with up to a half-dozen monkeys who were free of the drug. At first, the drugged animals acted sluggish and intoxicated. They fell in the rigid social ranking that rhesus monkeys establish for themselves.
"But within two to four months, all of these intoxicated symptoms were considered part of being 'stoned' and disappeared. The animals at that point looked normal to gross inspection," he said in an interview.

With further use came a surprising rise in what Chapman and his colleagues called "irritable aggression." The drugged monkeys bit, hit and chased their fellows with minimal provocation. Many of them rose in the monkey social order as a result.
One female, who jumped from No. 5 in a six-animal cage to No. 2 after drug treatment, "had such furious fights with the previous No. 2 animal that we had to take him out of the cage because he was going to get killed," Chapman said.
Other times the drugged animals overmatched themselves and were themselves killed or badly injured, he said.
Chapman said that humans, many who are heavy marijuana users, feel that the values of other people are meaningless to them and they develop their own value systems and drop out of the social game.
Teens, if you smoke marijuana, reading this probably won't inspire you to quit. I realize that.
I just want those who might be thinking of trying pot to realize that much research is being done on this psychoactive drug. More and more, the results indicate that marijuana harms the mind and body — now and later.

Dr. Wallace: I'm a 13-year-old girl who really likes a neat 17-year-old guy.
My parents think that he is too old for me to date, but I'm the one who likes him, so why should they care? — A.R., Gatesburg, Ill.
A.R.: They care because you are their daughter and they love you. I'm in agreement with them. 17-year-old guys should not be dating 13-year-old girls and 13-year-old girls should not be dating!
Dr. Wallace: I'm a 16-year-old girl who is involved in athletics. Do you think "girl jocks" are a turn-off to boys? — Teri, Fullerton, Calif.
Teri: Girl athletes turn on many more boys than they turn off.

She Bares Past, Finds a Future

DEAR ABBY: From time to time you print a letter from a woman asking if she should reveal to her fiancé that she isn't a virgin. I say, take the risk and tell him. If he drops her, it will hurt, but she will be spared a difficult marriage. A man who is rigid on virginity is bound to have rigid attitudes about everything else. If he feels he must have a perfect bride, will he settle for less than a perfect wife?
I had an abortion at age 18. In subsequent years there were other boyfriends. The ones I wanted to marry, I told. It seemed I was always saying goodbye until finally a man came along who said, "Forget it. The past doesn't matter. As far as I'm concerned, our lives began the day we met."
This man was worth the wait. We've been married for 25 years and I have never known the fear of wondering what my husband would do when he found out I wasn't perfect; he's known all along.
Acceptance "as is" is the most beautiful compliment a man can give his wife. It's wonderful to know that one doesn't have to be perfect to be loved.
HAPPY "AS IS" IN BONITA, CALIF.
DEAR HAPPY: One who is loved has probably earned it. Congratulations.

Under summer sun, put safety, self-care first

In the next ten minutes, two people will be accidentally killed and about 200 will suffer a disabling injury, according to statistics from the National Safety Council. Related costs will amount to about $1,200,000.
These calculations are based upon year-round accident rates, but paradoxically, the most beautiful months of the year — June, July and August — annually claim the greatest number of reported accidental deaths and injuries of any season.
To offset this distressing trend, Congress and health-related agencies — the American National Red Cross, the National Safety Council, the American Heart Association, the International Rescue and First Aid Association, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, and the Boy Scouts — have united to support the proclamation of June of every year as "National First Aid Month" and, consequently, to elevate the nation's safety and self-care consciousness.
Knowing the facts about warm weather hazards can alert people to the need to exercise particular caution throughout this active season. And to ensure their ability to cope with injuries that may occur, enlightened Americans are honing their self-care skills in Red Cross first aid courses. Another precautionary measure recommended is the maintenance of first aid kits in the home, car, camper, everywhere there is a potential need for emergency treatment. Some kits come pre-packed with a first aid guidebook, adhesive bandages, large-sized adhesive pads, non-stick sterile pads, rolled gauze, first aid tapes, sterile absorbent cotton and first aid cream.

Other useful supplies to have on hand are antiseptic soap, an ice bag and — or hot water bottle, sterile eye-wash solution, a thermometer, bland mineral oil, rubbing alcohol, a triangular bandage and aspirin or acetaminophen (non-aspirin substitute).
For Swimmers Only
Since drowning is the third leading cause of accidental deaths, it's essential that water sports enthusiasts know how to resuscitate a drowning victim. Send for help immediately, of course. Then if the victim is breathing, place him (or her) on his stomach and turn his head to one side. If he's not breathing, begin administering artificial respiration. Lay him on his back, open his mouth and press down his tongue to check for obstructions which might be blocking his air passage. Then tilt his head backward with your hand under the neck. Kneeling by his side, expand his chest slowly, blowing hard into the mouth — about ten times for an adult — while you pinch his nostrils shut.
A less serious but very common swimmer's affliction is sunburn. Naturally, it's best to avoid painful overexposure while enjoying the beach or pool. But when circumstances or human error thwart good intentions, try mixing two tablespoons of rubbing alcohol into a quart of cool water, then dipping sterile gauze pads or compresses into the mixture and gently applying them to the burned skin. The pads can be remoistened and reapplied until the pain subsides. Finally, remove them from the skin, allowing it to dry without rubbing. Follow up with a gentle application of moisturizing lotion.

Soothing Cuts, Scrapes and Burns
Every fan of Mother Nature is well acquainted with the minor cuts, scrapes and burns which inevitably result from "roughing it." But common as they are, these tiny injuries are too often ignored and left open to infection and other complications.
To avoid such problems, simply remember the four-step wound care process recommended by many doctors: cleanse, treat, cover and tape. Start by gently washing in and around the wound to remove dirt and germs. Then rinse the area thoroughly with clean water and blot dry with a sterile pad or cotton ball. Apply medication and a fresh, dry non-stick sterile pad, securing it on all sides with first aid tape. If the wound is small, an adhesive bandage will probably provide sufficient coverage. But whatever dressing is used, don't forget to replace it as often as necessary to keep the wound clean and dry.

Interim head inaugurated in Bolivia

LA PAZ, Bolivia (AP) — Senate President Walter Guevara Arce will be inaugurated interim president of Bolivia on Wednesday to serve for one year and to hold elections for a new president and vice president next May.

Ending a six-day political crisis, Congress elected Guevara Monday night by a show of hands and postponed the showdown between deadlocked presidential candidates Victor Paz Estenssoro and Hernan Siles Zuazo for nine months.

This cleared the way for the presidential inauguration postponed Monday and with it the restoration of democracy after a decade of military rule.

Guevara, 68, is a member of Paz's party, the centrist National Revolutionary Movement, and like Paz and Siles was a leader of the 1952 revolution that resulted in major political and economic reforms. He has been foreign minister twice as well as interior minister and ambassador to the United Nations.

He was elected to the Senate in the national elections July 1 in which Paz, Siles and six other presidential candidates all failed to get the majority of the vote required for election. This threw the decision to the new Congress which was required to hold a runoff election with the three high men as candidates.

The three were Siles, who led with 528,695 votes but whose leftist Popular Democratic Union won only 45 of the 144 seats in both houses of Congress; Paz, who ran a close second with 527,184 votes but whose party won 64 seats, and Gen. Hugo Banzer, a former military dictator who won 218,587 votes and 22 seats for his right-wing National Democratic Action Party.

The resolution that was finally adopted was worked out Monday by representatives of Paz, Siles and Banzer. It was based on an article of the constitution designating the president of the Senate first in the line of presidential succession in the absence of the president and vice president of the republic.

The resolution also specified that Guevara will call elections for a new president and vice president on the first Sunday in May 1980.

Graham dispels myths

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham says his closeness to presidents of the United States has been exaggerated and from now on, he "won't get close enough to any president or presidential candidate for people even to suspect who I am for."

In an interview with the Milwaukee Journal, Graham also said he has wrongly been portrayed as a supporter of the Vietnam War.

"I don't ever recall making a statement supporting the Vietnam War or being against it," he said. "I just didn't take a position. And I was kicked by both sides — hawks and doves."

Hess lawyers complain

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — Lawyers for Rudolf Hess, the Nazi convicted of helping Adolf Hitler launch World War II, contends that his client is being deprived of his human rights.

Hess, now 85, was sentenced to life imprisonment by the Nuremberg tribunal at the end of the war. He is the only Nazi war criminal still held in Berlin's Spandau Prison, maintained jointly by Britain, France, the United States and the Soviet Union.

A spokesman says attorney Alfred Seidl has filed a formal complaint with the European Human Rights Commission, saying that the former Nazi deputy's continued imprisonment is a violation of his rights.

Twins' outlook bright

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Siamese twins Lisa and Elisa Hansen, who were separated in a 16 1/2-hour operation in May, will likely regain full use of their leg and arm muscles, doctors say.

On Monday, members of the medical team that separated the twins brains and skulls told reporters they believe the twins' muscle strength and coordination will gradually improve.

Dr. Theodore Roberts, chief of neurosurgery at the University of Utah Medical Center where the operation took place, said, "We're rather optimistic." Because the girls are young and because the brain is flexible, it is likely that the twins will regain the motor and sensory abilities affected by the operation, he said.

Pope commemorates death

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II flew by helicopter from his summer palace in Castel Gandolfo to Vatican City to pay his respects to Pope Paul VI on the first anniversary of Paul's death.

Before leaving Castel Gandolfo, the pope said a memorial Mass on Monday in a chapel adjoining the bedroom in which Paul died on Aug. 6, 1978, after 15 years as head of the Roman Catholic Church. In the Vatican grotto, John Paul knelt and kissed Paul's marble tomb.

Series star payed well

NEW YORK (AP) — How much is an episode of "Diff'rent Strokes" worth? Well, to Gary Coleman, the 11-year-old star of the hit NBC television series, each show is good for $30,000, the New York Daily News says.

The paper says "the word in Hollywood is" that NBC, hurting badly in the ratings, wants to keep Gary — who started at a mere $1,600 per episode — at all costs.

Jury selection in Davis retrial moves slowly

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Jury selection in the murder solicitation retrial of millionaire Cullen Davis continues at a snail's pace as defense attorney Richard "Racehorse" Haynes resumes his individual questioning of panelists.

After a two-hour opening speech to the 51 potential jurors, Haynes spent the better part of Monday interrogating the panelists. None of the 11 was excused, but a woman questioned by prosecutor Jack Strickland last week was dismissed.

The woman said that after reflection, she felt she already had an opinion in the case.

Davis is being tried a second time on charges he conspired to solicit the murder of State District Judge Eidson, who was presiding over Davis' turbulent and bitter divorce trial. Eidson, who was not harmed, withdrew from the case and another judge granted the divorce earlier this year.

In his opening remarks, Haynes told jurors what would be expected of them, calling the trial "Phase Three" of "the millionaire's marriage, misery and misfortune."

"You are about to embark on one of the most unique experiences a human being can have," the dapper attorney said, emphasizing the great amount of time jurors will be thrown together.

"It is somewhat akin to being adrift in a lifeboat for two months, or whatever period of time it takes," he said.

Most of the 11 jurors queried said they were familiar with Davis, his wife, Priscilla, and his present wife, Karen Master Davis. But they said they knew little of the details of the case, despite wide news coverage of Davis' first trial on the same charges.

A Houston jury, hearing the case on a change of venue, was unable to reach a verdict in the first trial and mistrial was declared. The jurors deadlocked 8-4 for conviction.

Although prosecutors moved to change the location of the retrial from Davis' hometown in May, State District Judge Gordon Gray said he would attempt to seat a jury in Fort Worth before considering relocation to another Texas city.

Haynes repeatedly asked jurors if they would "hold (Davis) to a higher standard of accountability because of his wealth."

"I believe the evidence will show you ... that Mr. Davis is a wealthy man," Haynes said, his voice rising as he addressed the panel. "It might be said 'so rich it's vulgar or obscene or rude.'"

But none of the panelists questioned felt Davis' bank account would play a part in their deliberations. Several panelists, however, said the anticipated length of the trial might be work a hardship on their jobs. Several said their employers refused to pay them during the trial if they were seated on the jury.

The Houston trial lasted four months, and attorneys have said it is possible the new trial will go that long.

Judge rules statements inadmissible evidence

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — A state district judge has refused to allow oral and written statements made by a capital murder defendant to be admitted into evidence, saying the documents did not comply with the law.

The alleged confession of Jimmy Paul Vanderbilt "didn't meet the law. It didn't comply. It didn't meet the burden of proof," Judge Larry Gist said following Monday's session.

Gist's ruling marked the second time the statements have been ruled inadmissible as evidence.

State District Judge Howard Fender in Fort Worth ruled them inadmissible during a second attempt to try Vanderbilt last February. Charges were dropped at the request of Potter County District Attorney Tom Curtis.

However, a Potter County grand jury reindicted Vanderbilt in March, and the case was moved to Beaumont.

Vanderbilt, who is charged with the April 1, 1975, kidnapping-slaying of a 16-year-old Katrina Moyer, was convicted of that killing in 1976 and sentenced to death. However, the conviction was overturned by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

The appeals court threw out the conviction, saying Curtis had promised Vanderbilt he would not seek the death penalty if the former officer confessed.

Burk Burnett man charged with murder

WICHITA FALLS, Texas (AP) — A 24-year-old Burk Burnett man has been charged in the slaying of a young man that apparently occurred from an argument over the size of a catfish, authorities said.

Terry W. Kirkpatrick was arraigned Monday before Justice of the Peace R.L. Stewart on a charge of murder in the death of Phillip W. Hopkins, 28, of Wichita Falls.

Kirkpatrick was ordered held in the Wichita Falls County jail in lieu of $50,000 bond.

Police said the victim and several friends were frying a 35-pound catfish at a local park Saturday night when the incident occurred.

Witnesses told police Hopkins had left the park on an errand. Kirkpatrick and a companion drove up in a pickup and tried to pick a fight over the size of the fish, police said.

Police said Kirkpatrick allegedly pulled a .357 magnum on the gathering. However, his companion took it away and the two men got back into the pickup.

A short time later, witnesses told officers, they heard shouting and then gunfire. Hopkins had been shot in the chest and was pronounced dead at a local hospital, police said.
