Teachers ordered to end walkout

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cuyahoga County Common Pleas Judge Frederick M. Coleman ordered an end to the city's 75-day-old teacher strike today, saying he wants the teachers back in class at 8 a.m. Wednesday.

Coleman also ordered all members of the school board and leaders of the Cleveland Teachers Union to resume negotiations and "remain confined" until the pay dispute is settled.

There was no immediate comment from teachers on whether they would obey the order, but union sources had said earlier they did not believe teachers would return under court order.

Coleman issued the back-to-work order requested by the school board after receiving an arbitrator's report on the status of the bitter dispute. The report was prepared by Earle C. Brown, director of the Cleveland American Arbitration Association in Cleveland, who met with both sides under court orders for more than nine hours Saturday.

The 5,200-member Cleveland Teachers Union last week, in a vote ordered by the court, turned down by a 4-1 margin two pay offers of the board. The union has been asking for a 27 percent pay boost over two years.

Each of the board's offers would have cost about $30 million. One would have provided for a 7 percent raise retroactive to Sept. 1 and another 9 percent next September. The second offer would have raised teachers' salaries 10 percent immediately with another 10 percent in a year.

The 5,200 members of the teachers union currently are paid $9,887 to $20,072 a year, with the average at about $16,000.

The Cleveland school board, already mired in debt, must settle the strike or face the prospect of losing $63 million in state funds for being unable to meet a required number of school days for its 92,000 pupils.

Man fatally shot after argument

An argument that began between two men in a local bar Sunday night culminated in the death of one of them early this morning.

Carl Wayne Clanton, 32, Garden City Rd., arrived at the Malone-Hogan emergency room at 12:21 a.m. today. He died in the emergency room at 1:30 a.m.

Melvin Warneke, Wasson Rd., who voluntarily turned himself into police around 8:30 this morning, is being questioned in connection with the shooting.

According to witnesses, the two men had begun arguing inside of Joe's Place, a tavern on W. Hwy. 80. They were asked to leave the bar, according to Detective Lt. Claude Morris, and continued the argument in the parking lot.

Police received a report of a gunshot at 12:28 a.m. Clanton had been shot while sitting in his pickup. According to Morris, a single bullet penetrated the victim's left side, exited the right, and entered and exited his right forearm.

He was rushed to the hospital by a private vehicle.

Before a warrant could be issued, Warneke voluntarily surrendered himself and the alleged murder weapon, a .38 C. Special. According to Morris, only one shot had been discharged from the weapon.

Charges will not be filed until the police department has completed its investigation of the shooting. Charges are expected to be filed by Wednesday.

Man, out on parole, is charged in wife's death

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Melvin Johnson, freed on parole after serving a prison term for the 1966 killing of his first wife, has been charged with the stabbing death of his second wife, police say.

Johnson, 38, surrendered to Broward County sheriff's deputies Sunday in a hospital parking lot and was charged with first-degree murder.

Detective Mark Schlein said the couple's daughters, Sondra, 9, and Melita, 8, watched Saturday night as their father became enraged at their mother, 27-year-old Betty Johnson.

Johnson found his wife talking on the telephone, Schlein said, and "He suspected she was talking with a male friend."

Mrs. Johnson was hit in the face and stabbed, Schlein said.

The woman staggered into the street screaming, then collapsed. A neighbor, Virginia Banks, said she heard the two girls crying, "Help my mommy, help my mommy." Mrs. Johnson lay on the grass until paramedics arrived.

Johnson was being held without bond Sunday night. His daughters were staying with his sister, Ruth Johnson, until Mrs. Johnson's parents arrived from Alabama.

Sheriff's department records show Johnson was convicted of second-degree murder in the 1966 shooting death of his 23-year-old wife, Paulette.

According to trial testimony, the shooting occurred during a domestic quarrel.

Johnson was sentenced to 25 years in the state prison at Raiford, Fla., but his conviction was later reversed by the state 4th District Court of Appeal. He pleaded guilty to manslaughter charges and his sentence was reduced to 15 years. He was paroled in August 1970.

AT ANCHOR — U.S. Aircraft carrier "Forrestal" of the 6th fleet of the US Navy was anchored in Marseille harbor this morning. The carrier will leave Tuesday from this Mediterranean port and sailors on furlough have been ordered to board the ship in Naples (Italy), its next destination. The departure date of the ship was pushed up, without explanation or stated destination, officials said.

For economy in 1980

Forecast not rosy

ATLANTA (AP) — The new year will see unemployment increase to 8 percent and only a slight improvement in the rate of inflation, said some leading economists who met here.

They also said that if the country was not already in a recession, it soon would be and there was little chance of a cut in federal taxes.

The economists are members of the American Economic Association, one of 31 organizations in the Allied Social Science Associations, which met over the weekend.

"The rest of the world has declared war on us; we just don't want to admit it," said Albert Wojnilower, chief economist of First Boston Corp.

Oil "is the money of our day," he said, adding that the dependence on foreign oil represented a loss of power by the United States.

"The real price of oil will continue to rise in fits and starts," predicted Alan Greenspan, a former chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers and president of Townsend-Greenspan & Co.

Joseph P. McKenna, an economist and professor with the University of Missouri, said, "The economic machine is grinding to a halt."

Robert Eisner of Northwestern University predicted a "worldwide breakdown" in the competitive practices that make the economies of the Western nations go.

The economists said:

—A recession is expected by early next year if the country is not already experiencing one. The economy may decline anywhere from 0.5 percent to as much as 2 percent.

—Inflation will improve slightly from the current annual rate of 13 percent but will not drop to a level of 8 percent or 9 percent until 1981.

—Unemployment, which was at 5.8 percent in November, is expected to rise in 1980 to as much as 8 percent.

—Americans should not expect a cut in federal taxes, although the Congress may debate it. Michael K. Evans, president of Evans Economics, believes a cut might occur in the final quarter next year, but not in time to effect anything that happens in 1980.

More U.S. bases are recommended

NEW YORK (AP) — Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman says the United States should establish more military bases in the Middle East and that Israel would be happy to help.

Weizman, here to negotiate a new U.S. military and economic aid package for Israel, said Sunday that such bases would counter the Soviet Union's burgeoning influence in the area.

"If you do consider that there is a world conflict and struggle between the Soviet Union and the United States, we would very much like to see the United States more present in the Middle East, even physically," he said, in an interview on CBS's "Face the Nation."

On Saturday, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat was quoted in the weekly magazine October as saying the United States should have a military presence in the Middle East.

Future millionaire ordered taken off welfare rolls

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A 6-year-old boy, awarded $2.5 million in damages because he was severely burned, has been ordered taken off county welfare rolls.

Judge Spurgeon Avakian said it was unfair to taxpayers to keep Richard Grim on welfare following the settlement he was given last June for the burns he suffered two years ago in an apartment fire.

The Alameda County Superior Court judge also ruled that the boy's family could purchase an $80,000 home with some of the settlement money.

U.N. Council takes action against Iran

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The U.N. Security Council today adopted a U.S. resolution threatening economic sanctions against Iran unless the U.S. Embassy hostages in Tehran are freed by Jan. 7.

The vote was 11-0 with four abstentions — by the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia, Bangladesh and Kuwait.

The action came as U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim was departing New York for Tehran to try to negotiate the release of the 43 to 50 hostages, now in their 58th day of captivity.

The resolution calls on Waldheim "to intensify his efforts" to win freedom for the hostages. If his efforts prove unsuccessful, it says, the Council will meet again Jan. 7 "to adopt effective measures under Articles 39 and 41" of the U.N. charter.

Article 39 authorizes the council to find that there is a threat to or breach of international peace and decide what measures shall be taken to deal with it. Article 41 specifies that such measures may include cutoffs in diplomatic relations, economic relations and communications.

Before the vote, the United States amended the resolution to have the Council say it "deplores the continued detention" of the hostages, rather than "condemns" it.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance raised his hand to cast the United States' vote in favor of the resolution.

Price of Kuwaiti oil up 100 pct.

KUWAIT (AP) — Kuwaiti oil prices soared a full 100 percent in 1979 as the government ended the year with a 19 percent increase.

The $4.07 rise was announced Sunday by State Minister Abdul Aziz Hussein. It put the price of a 42-gallon barrel of Kuwaiti crude at $25.50, above the $24 a barrel price now being charged by Saudi Arabia, the world's largest oil exporter.

Kuwait, which was charging $12.27 a barrel at the beginning of 1979, ships about 150,000 barrels a day to the United States, considerably less than one percent of total U.S. consumption.

Kuwait was one of the few holdouts among members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries who hiked their prices prior to the cartel's meeting in Caracas, Venezuela two weeks ago. Those increases, including Saudi Arabia's jump from $18 to $24 a barrel, are expected to raise U.S. fuel prices by 5 to 10 cents a gallon.

While away on a trip, between Dec. 22 and 8:30 p.m. Saturday, vandals used a rock to break out a front window of the home of Juan Espinoza, 507 N.E. 6th. The window also appeared to have been shot with a BB gun. Apparently entry was not gained and nothing was reported missing. Damages were set at $30.

Several minor accidents were reported Saturday with only one reported on Sunday.

A vehicle driven by Cornelius Miller of Sikeston, Mo., struck a parked tractor trailer owned by Taylor Brothers Inc. of Springdale, Ark., in the parking lot of Rip Griffin's, 5:05 p.m. Saturday.

Ex-carnival barker sees his dreams come true

VULCAN, W. Va. (AP) — John Robinette, a 42-year-old barker who wanted a bridge linking this tiny community to Kentucky so badly he asked the Russians for help, is seeing his dream come true. After the former carnival barker's highly publicized plea for Soviet help two years ago, the state announced it would build the bridge, reconnecting the tiny Mingo County community with the outside world.

Vulcan's turn-of-the-century, wooden footbridge over the Tug Fork to Kentucky collapsed in 1974, leaving the community of about 50 families with no public route in or out. They have been using a railroad right-of-way ever since.

"It didn't dawn on me until they began pouring concrete," Robinette said recently as he stood by the railroad tracks and gazed at the nearly complete single-lane bridge. "I was driving up the road and it hit me. I just pulled to the side of the road and cried."

Afghans battle Soviet troops

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — Soviet troops are reported taking up the communist Afghan government's fight against Moslem rebels as diplomats report the Soviet Union's force in its landlocked Central Asian neighbor has risen to an estimated 45,000 soldiers.

A Pakistani newspaper reported Soviet troops were battling Moslem insurgents in one northern province of Afghanistan below the Soviet border. Western diplomats in Kabul said they had reports that Soviet troops had also been sent to the east and northeast to fight the rebellion that broke out after Marxists first seized control of the Afghan government 20 months ago.

The diplomats said in the wake of the third communist coup last Thursday two Soviet divisions totaling about 20,000 men crossed the Soviet-Afghan border Sunday, joining the estimated 25,000 Russian troops already in the country.

In Washington, U.S. National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski accused the Russians of "large-scale aggression" that "constitutes a serious problem for the international community." He said his government assured Pakistan, Afghanistan's southern and eastern neighbor, of U.S. aid including "the use of armed force" if the Soviets moved against it.

Brzezinski also had a warning for Iran, saying: "I should think that every sober-headed Iranian — even the most anti-American ones — ought to ask themselves what do the events in Kabul portend for Tehran. There have been Soviet troops in Tehran before. Tehran could be next."

U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher arrived in London to begin talks with West European officials seeking to formulate a joint Western response to the Soviet action. Brzezinski said the Carter administration was also consulting the Japanese, the Chinese and "Moslem countries."

President Carter used the Washington-Moscow hot line Saturday to warn that unless the Soviets withdrew their troops from Afghanistan, Soviet-American relations would be affected adversely. The White House said a reply was received from Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, but it would give no clue to what he said.

The Karachi, Pakistan, newspaper Jang said Afghan rebel sources in Pakistan reported Soviet troops battling Moslem insurgents in the northern province of Takhar, with 400 rebels, a Soviet general and large numbers of Soviet and Afghan army troops killed Saturday.

The rebels are conservative, fundamentalist Moslems opposed to the Marxists who took over the government in April 1978 after killing President Mohammad Daoud. The insurgents are said to control about half the country by day and more by night, and the coup last week was apparently the prelude to a Soviet campaign to end the rebellion.

The 1978 coup installed Nur Mohammad Taraki as president, and he lasted 17 months.

MERYL STREEP DUSTIN HOFFMAN

Odds-on favorites

NEW YORK (AP) — Meryl Streep and Dustin Hoffman appear to be odds-on favorites to win Academy Awards for their performances in "Kramer vs. Kramer," says Newsweek magazine in calling Miss Streep the first American actress since Jane Fonda to rival the power of such male stars as Hoffman and Al Pacino.

But in a five-page profile of the blond actress in its Jan. 7 issue, the magazine says the first choice for the role of Joanna Kramer in the film about a custody dispute was Kate Jackson, formerly of ABC's "Charlie's Angels."

Miss Streep was then not a major star, with "The Seduction of Joe Tynan," for which she won wide acclaim, still unreleased. But the producers who interviewed her for a minor role quickly tapped her for the lead.

"I loved acting with her," Hoffman told Newsweek. "It's like playing with Billie Jean King. She keeps trying to hit the perfect ball."

Church in a bar

DENNISON, Minn. (AP) — If people won't come to the church, the Rev. Richard Mork of the Denison Lutheran Church feels the church should go to the people.

So Mork has been holding his Wednesday morning Bible study sessions this month in a local bar.

And the turnout at Denison's Fireside Lounge has topped any Bible study, he said, with more than 25 people attending.

"You must have one foot in the Bible and one foot in the world," said Mork as the group met amid Schmidt beer lamps and pool tables.

Morning gatherings at the bar, where owners Gary and Susie Schuetzle serve hot cinnamon rolls and butter, are not unusual. But the Bible study group even brought Mrs. Schuetzle, a member of the congregation, out of the kitchen to listen.

Why did they come? Curiosity, said Evelyn Ellingboe, another member of the only church in Denison. "If they can't come to church, we'll go to the people," she agreed with a grin.

We're in need of good mass transit plan

Those in the administrative and legislative branches in the country are doing less than they should if they are not doing all they can to utilize fully the tools we have to combat the energy shortage.

What better way to reduce the problem than to expand the mass transit systems in this country?

A RETIRED TEXAS attorney, Emmett Thurmon, has written to President Carter's office a program which proposes, among other things, that railroads be subsidized and reconverted to coal, pointing out that such carriers can take care of at least 95 percent of all national freight matters.

"The railroads can easily deliver freight on long hauls from New York to the West Coast or vice versa at about 30 percent of what it costs to do the same job by truck," Thurmon wrote.

"The fuel saved would be about one-half of what is now being used in America for the same purpose. No job would actually be lost in the long run because workers would be shifted from one line of work to the other. For instance, the steel mills could use thousands of new workers in making steel rails, cars, and other equipment, more workers to repair, rebuild and/or reconstruct new rail lines."

The steel industry, of course, has long been ailing and needs a shot in the arm like the one Thurmon proposes.

According to Thurmon, there would be plenty of services for local truck lines in supplying proper service to the rail lines throughout the country, including thousands of new railroad workers. The Kerrville resident points out that the fuel saved would be billions of dollars now used by the long-haul truck lines. The railroads, he adds, could be converted to the use of coal which would thereby transfer a lot of workers thereto.

According to Thurmon, it takes about a $100,000 investment for one truck to convey what is now conveyed in one railroad freight car.

THURMON SAYS THERE would, in addition, be a savings of billions of dollars in the maintenance of highways and in not having to build and maintain so many more thoroughfares that would not be required inasmuch as one freight train can carry, in an open country, upwards to 200 times as much cargo as one truck-load.

Thurmon says railroads deliver freight at about one-third the cost of long haul motor transport, adding:

"It will virtually save enough gasoline to meet all other requirements when used in a sensible, practical and economical matter."

Most everyone agrees that the railroads are going to have to play an increasingly important role in this country, gearing up to move people as well as freight, if we are to solve our problems. The fact that Amtrak has lost money is no argument against the U.S. government financing the railroads in every way possible to re-establish the proper service for transportation of people.

Is there any other way to go?

Not for logic

Around the rim

I never in all my life understood why people are so happy to see the old year end when they were just celebrating its arrival 365 days ago. Well, holidays are not made for logic.

SO AT MIDNIGHT tonight we enter a new year and a new decade. I think it's time to make resolutions. I'll make them, but like every other year, I probably won't keep them. This is the first time, however, my resolutions are going public.

I should give up smoking. I'm not sure I really want to.

I should lose 25 pounds. I really want to. Besides, if I don't, Nathan Poss will be one bottle of vodka richer on April 11.

I resolve that when I make my gray from scratch, it is going to come out without lumps and it will taste right, both at the same time.

The phone bill will come down this year and my postage costs will go up.

I will live on a budget. I mean the type that is written down, no matter how depressing. From now on, on payday, I will not throw all the bills up in the air and pay the ones that land right side up (or the ones that land upside down, whichever is less).

My income tax return will be finished and in the mail by February 15.

I will buy all Christmas and Chanukah presents by Thanksgiving.

From here on in, my age is 21 and holding.

FOR THE NEW YEAR I have this from Father Bernard Gully of Immaculate Herat of Mary Church:

"Lord, you guide all creation with fatherly care. As you have given all men one common origin, bring them together peacefully into one family and keep them united in brotherly love."

"Grant that all people, rulers and ruled, may learn to live in peace, to be educated for peace, and to do what justice and respect for the rights of every human being may require if peace and harmony is to be achieved."

"In our country there are some people from many other nations: some undocumented, some refugees, some students, all seeking your gifts in abundance."

"We pray that as we safeguard the real completeness of rights for every human being without discrimination we can ensure peace at its very roots."

Happy New Year.

End of liberalism

William F. Buckley, Jr.

By WILLIAM A. RUSHER (Subbing for Wm. Buckley)

NEW YORK — Everybody has his own notion of the significance of the 1970s, and happily this is one of those situations in which a given interpretation is not necessarily exclusive of all the others. For Tom Wolfe, this may well have been "The 'me' Decade"—a time when an alarming number of people stopped worrying about their fellow men and concentrated on gratifying their own personal desires. For myself however, the 1970s seem likely to prove most memorable as The Decade When Liberalism Ended. Some sly liberal may contend that that amounts to the same thing. I disagree, but let him enjoy his little joke; his pleasures will henceforth be all too few.

NOBODY WILL DEPLORE my conclusion more, incidentally, than some of my fellow conservatives. Such people are positively programmed to suffer, and never feel more fulfilled than when resisting (unsuccessfully) some new metastasis of the Leviathan State. To point out that things are actually getting better, not worse, at least in certain respects, positively offends them. Let me concede it once, therefore, that there are plenty of things still around for pointing conservatives to complain about. To take just one large specific, the current energy crisis is resulting in government domination of the entire energy field on a scale beyond anything hitherto imagined. In due course, government will politicize the whole subject and then botch it.

But the very fact that that last sentence could be written in America today, and be almost universally accepted as a valid prediction, is the best evidence of how far we have come. Insofar as liberalism ever boasted a basic set of beliefs, those beliefs centered around the healing and fruitifying quality of government. The federal government in particular was conceived much as Don Quixote conceived himself—as an idealistic knight in armor, sallying forth to rout giants and protect the helpless. It would regulate rapacious industries, break up threatening monopolies and succor the poor. Naturally all this required the vesting of immense new powers in government, and its enlargement to previously unimaginable dimensions; and anybody who protested was dismissed as merely opposed to the objectives. (What, after all, did a democracy have to fear from a government that the people themselves controlled?) When the conventional objects to governmental attention and beneficence neared the saturation point, others were invented: protection of the environment and encouragement of the arts. And so the wonder grew.

AND I HAVE NO doubt it would be growing yet, if the grim results of all this Big Government were not coming in so thick and fast. Government regulations have progressively crippled job-creating industries. Government relief programs have given rise to a whole new welfare class. Most of our major cities—those "test tubes of the future"—are skidding toward bankruptcy, their acreage divided between abandoned ruins and fortresses patrolled by uniformed guards 24 hours a day.

The Postal Service to the public school system—and not forgetting the Armed Forces—there isn't a government-controlled activity in the land that is not deteriorating before our eyes.

Breast thickening usually harmless

Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have had a hurting in my right breast since last year. I went to the doctor several months ago for my annual check up and he said I had slight "thickening" in that breast but no lump. This hurting persists.

I notice the aching more at night when I have removed my bra. I am 39 and have never been sick enough to be hospitalized except during childbirth. I mention this to let you know that I'm not a chronic complainer or sickie. Can you comment?—B.A.

There are areas in the breast where the tissue is denser than the rest of the gland. This is especially true around the nipples and on the undersides. Further, many harmless conditions are referred to as "thickenings"—fibroadenomas and sclerosing adenosis. Thickening is a more understandable and less disturbing term for a doctor to use.

Perhaps your pain is caused by your bra. It may not be fitted properly. That can be true even though your pain is on one side only. Female breasts are seldom of the same size and a bra that fits comfortably on one breast might irritate the other. Some women may have unusually thick breast "tails"—the portion that extends to the underarm area. Bras can irritate this area.

The breast pain associated with menstrual onset is uncomfortable, but usually subsides shortly after menstruation. These are essentially harmless causes of breast pain, and, as I've noted here before, breast pain is seldom of itself indicative of cancer.

You should let your physician re-evaluate your symptoms. Persistent pain should not be ignored.

All women should be familiar with breast examination because at least 90 percent of breast cancers are first detected by patients themselves. The American Cancer Society (listed in the phone book) can provide you with a pamphlet on how best to examine breasts.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My little grandson, who is 11, has Graves' disease. He was in the hospital for two weeks and had lots of blood tests taken. Now my doctor has moved to another city. Can you tell me of a clinic that would specialize in Graves' disease and thyroid problems?—Mrs. E.L.

I'm sorry, but I'm not that familiar with your area or the medical facilities available for you. Do one of two things (and other readers should take note): Call your county medical society and ask for a pediatrician or an endocrinologist, who is a doctor specializing in gland disorders; or contact one of the many fine medical schools in your state and arrange to have your grandson examined. Graves' disease (or overactive thyroid disease) should be closely followed in anyone, but especially in a youngster.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Our three-year-old daughter is plagued with attacks of coughing every night and early morning. She often chokes and occasionally vomits. It is a loose cough. She has had this for two months. She has had blood tests, chest X-rays and TB test. All were negative. However, we are still concerned. Being so young, we hate to put her through more lab tests. Are we overly concerned, and do you have any suggestions?—Mrs. G.L.F.

Persistent cough, loose or otherwise, in a three-year-old is a concern. I think you ought to go through with all lab tests until a cause is found. A nighttime cough often indicates allergy. Perhaps as simple a measure as having the youngster sleep in a different room and in a different bed for a few nights might tell you something. That might eliminate whatever she is coming in contact with in her own room.

Since there are so many causes for chronic cough—bronchitis, cystic fibrosis, sinusitis—it is important to rule them out both for early treatment and for your peace of mind. So, yes, complete her tests.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Would great pain cause a person's blood pressure to drop or go high? I have to know.—N.B.V.

Pain, by causing stress, could elevate blood pressure.

"You Can Stop Sinus Trouble!" is the title of Dr. Donohue's booklet explaining what sinus trouble really is and what can be done about it. For a copy write to Dr. Donohue in care of the Big Spring Herald, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

'Branding' system being developed

Many modern rustlers are not plundering the ranges for cattle, they're opting for what's in the ground.

The rush to seek new oil sources plus the expense and short supply of drilling equipment has created a black market for stolen drill bits, pipes and other parts, according to the Wall Street Journal. Whole rigs are being dismantled and carted off.

Industry and law authorities are developing a special "branding" system for equipment to thwart thieves, but it's a sticky proposition.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I am curious to know if you are making any New Year's resolutions and, if so, what they are.—Mrs. T.R.W.

DEAR MRS. T.R.W.: Normally, I do not make New Year's resolutions, although I do not believe the practice is necessarily wrong or useless. However, I believe each day should be a new step in our lives in which we seek to serve God more completely. If there are sins in our lives which are keeping us from being what God wants us to be, they should be dealt with as soon as they are discovered, no matter what time of year it is. If God is telling us to undertake some new task for Him, we should not hesitate to do so at any time.

I do, however, find that I have been thinking a great deal the past few months about the coming year, and one reason is that it marks the beginning of a new decade, the 1980's. We all wonder what will be in store for the world during those years. I must admit that in many ways the decade of the 1980's could be one of the most critical decades in our history as a nation—and perhaps in the history of the world. Every day the headlines seem to suggest that our world is hurtling out of control, poised on the brink of disaster at any moment. We need to pray "for everyone—for kings and all those in authority, that we may live peaceful and quiet lives in all godliness and holiness" (1 Timothy 2:1-2).

But the coming decade may also be a time of great opportunity for those of us who know Christ—an opportunity to proclaim the Gospel of Christ. Our world is desperately looking for answers—and answers that are only found in Christ. Many people today are discovering that materialism and pleasure-seeking do not satisfy. They are looking to God. May our New Year's resolution be to serve Christ and witness for Him with all our hearts during these coming days and years.

Reds move in

Jack Anderson,

WASHINGTON — While deploring the Iranian threat to world peace and orderly diplomacy, the Soviet Union has been moving quietly to exploit the situation to its own advantage.

By keeping a low profile and engaging in its usually cynical double-dealing, the Kremlin hopes to emerge as the dominant power in a weak, disunited Iran. To this end, the Soviets proclaim their support for the Iranian revolutionaries, while simultaneously working to undercut the new regime behind the scenes.

THE RUSSIANS obviously welcomed the ouster of the pro-Western shah — indeed, may have helped to foment the revolution that ended his rule. And the near-anarchy that has followed in Iran has been tailor-made for Soviet mischief-making.

But working both sides of the street can be a tricky business, even for such experienced dealers in duplicity as the Kremlin bosses. Intelligence sources tell me that the Russian are probably no more in control of events in Iran than we are.

Thus, the Kremlin is clearly delighted at the United States' discomfiture in the hostages situation, and its ambassador has been spotted inside the captured embassy compound, either as coach, cheerleader or privileged guest perusing secret documents.

In Moscow, meanwhile, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko assured Iranian Ambassador Mohammad Mokri that the Soviets "would not remain neutral" if the United States should attempt "armed aggression" against Iran.

But at the same time, the Soviets are believed to be counseling restraint out of concern that the situation might get completely out of hand. Soviet interests are best served by keeping the fuse burning without igniting the powder keg.

GROMYKO, THEREFORE, encouraged the Iranian ambassador to continue detaining the hostages — for another year if necessary—without harming them or provoking the United States to resort to military action.

The Soviets would like their oil-rich neighbor to be continually beset by turmoil, to remain militarily weak, economically drained and politically threatened.

Moving into the power vacuum in southwest Iran, the Soviet-backed Tudeh Party has quietly organized workers in the oil fields, which are the backbone of the country's economy. The Sovietized workers are resisting attempts by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini to solidify control of the vital region.

Clearly, the Soviets are torn between support for the ayatollah's revolution and a desire to undermine it. They are cautious, therefore, about encouraging autonomy among the Azerbaijanis, Kurds and other ethnic minorities.

An unpublished report, prepared for the Joint Congressional Economic Committee, also makes this point: "Soviet leaders probably fear that the evangelism of the Iranian revolution will cause... (Soviet) Muslims to demand more autonomy from the central government in Moscow."

On the other hand, the unpublished report notes, the Kremlin might "seek to take advantage of the discontent among the various Iranian nationalities by attempting" to establish pro-Soviet states among these people."

Interestingly, Iran's petroleum reserves figure as importantly in Kremlin strategic planning as they do in the White House. The Central Intelligence Agency, in widely disputed findings reported that before 1985 the Soviet Union will be unable to fill its own domestic oil and natural gas needs.

Under a 1975 agreement with the shah, the Russians were to build a pipeline for export of Iranian natural gas to Western Europe through the Soviet Union. The transit fee was to be paid in natural gas — 13 billion cubic meters a year. But since the revolution, work on the pipeline has stopped, and Khomeini is considering dropping the project altogether.

So for what cold comfort it may bring U.S. leaders, their opponents in the Kremlin are also faced with difficult decisions regarding the present and future course of Iran and its troublesome revolution.

CHRYSLER'S CRONIES: Log-rolling of a not-so-subtle variety helped push the Chrysler aid package through Congress last week. Three members of the New York delegation, for example, circulated a letter to their Empire State colleagues, noting that the Michigan delegation had supported another bailout not too long ago—for New York City.

"Good sportsmanship and future legislative influence require that, regardless of what our feelings may be, we should come through this time as a body," the letter explained. "Our own state isn't entirely out of the woods and a vote for Michigan could well pay big dividends for us later on."

MOBIL MIS-CUE: Which hat is Washington superflack Herb Schmetz wearing today — Mobil Oil's or Teddy Kennedy's? It's getting harder and harder to keep it all straight.

Schmetz is supposed to be on leave from the oil company to work on Kennedy's presidential campaign as a sort of technical adviser. But the other day, he popped in to see Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., with Mobil President William Tavoulares in tow. They tried, unsuccessfully, to get Dingell to withdraw charges he had made about Tavoulares' administration of Mobil.

Schmetz assured my office it was all on the up-and-up. He just broke his vacation to go back to work for Mobil — for one day.

U.N. is bargain despite the cost

Observers who point out that the United States is least responsive to its major contributors may not be far off the mark.

This is particularly the case of the United States, which is the largest contributor by quite a bit ($553 million to all operations in 1977).

Sweden was a distant runner-up with $109.5 million. Where was the Soviet Union? No higher than eighth place with $105.4 million.

On a per capita basis, the contribution profile looks very different. Norway leads at $23.34, followed by Sweden, $20.42; and Denmark, $18.10. The U.S. is 15th at $2.51 per citizen.

To look at it another way, the total expenditure of all U.N. bodies and operations came to about $3 billion.

As imperfect as its world peace efforts may be, the U.N. can be considered a bargain at that price. Americans spend more than three times that much just on soft drinks every year.

New Year's without resolutions would be like Christmas without Master Charge

By JO HARING
For The Associated Press
TULSA, Okla. (AP) — A list of New Year's resolutions is an American resolution. As a matter of fact, New Year's without resolutions would be like Christmas without Master Charge.

But for some who have passed a great many new years, the making of resolutions annually may have become something of a chore.

Consequently, the following list of resolutions, covering the most common areas of human resolve, has been compiled as a service to those who do not feel up to making a list of their own.

DIET (circle one)
1. In 1980, I hereby resolve to lose a 40 pounds; b 20 pounds; c 10 pounds; d all my calorie counters.
2. In order to allay health concerns, I further resolve to give up a red meat; b refined sugar; c table salt; d regular check-ups.

3. I resolve that in the coming year, I will consume only 600 calories a day; b eat sensibly; c give up between-meal snacks; d take no more than one bite at a time.

EXERCISE

1. In the coming year, I promise to take up a jogging; b swimming; c tennis; d slack.

2. Likewise, I resolve to a run 25 miles a week; b play tennis twice daily; c run in place for 15 minutes; d get out of bed as needed.

3. And 1980 will be the year that I win the a Boston Marathon; b club tennis tournament; c parks department badminton competition; d Pillsbury Bake-Off.

PERSONAL HABITS

1. Likewise, I resolve in the coming year to make myself a more attractive person to be around. Smoking, I will give up a smoking; b gossip; c knock-knock jokes; d ice chewing.

2. And, in 1980, to keep myself well-dressed, I will buy a new wardrobe; b remodel garments to current styles; c give away my where applicable miniskirts, hot pants, leisure pants, white patent loafers; d borrow clothes as needed from friends.

3. I promise in the coming year not to talk a politics; b religion; c money; d with my mouth full.

CHILDREN

1. In the new year, I firmly resolve to become a better parent. Therefore, I will make my children behave with a firm discipline; b reason; c threats; d bribery.

2. On no account will I tolerate my children's a bickering; b screaming; c fighting; d RAWING BLOOD.

3. I will insist that my children a clean their rooms regularly; b do their homework; c refrain from excessive television watching; d stay out of sight.

MONEY

1. To make myself financially secure in the coming decade, I will a save 10 percent of my income; b invest in municipal bonds; c buy gold; d marry wealth.

3. I resolve to choose one keep-or-establish a good credit rating by a paying bills regularly; b paying bills on time; c avoiding late charges; d robbing Peter and paying Paul.

Finally, in 1980, I resolve to become, if not wiser, at least older.
Happy New Year.

Dear Abby

Will Power Is Habit-Forming

DEAR ABBY: Last New Year's Eve you published some New Year's resolutions. I cut that column out and taped it on my bathroom mirror where I could read it every morning. I want you to know that it helped me to become a better person. I'm not saying that I kept every one of those resolutions every single day, but I kept most of them, and they are now habits which have improved my personality, my character and my self-esteem.

I'm not a teenager, Abby. I'm a 30 year old mother of two. Please make it an annual column; some of your readers may not have seen it. I hope it will help others the way it has helped me.

FAITHFUL FLORIDA READER

DEAR READER: These New Year's resolutions are based on the original credo of Alcoholics Anonymous. I have taken the liberty of using that theme with some variations of my own:

Just for today I will try to live through this day only, and not set far-reaching goals to try to overcome all my problems at once. I know I can do something for 12 hours that would appall me if I felt that I had to keep it up for a lifetime.

Just for today I will try to be happy. Abraham Lincoln said, "Most folks are about as happy as they make up their minds to be." He was right. I will not dwell on thoughts that depress me. I will chase them out of my mind and replace them with happy thoughts.

Just for today I will adjust myself to what is. I will face reality. I will try to change those things which I can change and accept those things I cannot change.

Just for today I will try to improve my mind. I will not be a mental loafer. I will force myself to read something that requires effort, thought and concentration.

Just for today I will do a good deed for somebody — without letting him know it. (If he or she finds out I did it, it won't count.)

Just for today I will do something positive to improve my health. If I'm a smoker, I'll make an honest effort to cut down. If I'm overweight, I'll eat nothing I know is fattening. And I will force myself to exercise — even if it's only walking around the block, or using the stairs instead of the elevator.

Just for today I will be totally honest. If someone asks me something I don't know, I will not try to bluff. I'll simply say, "I don't know."

Just for today I'll do something I've been putting off for a long time. I'll finally write that letter, make that phone call, clean that closet, or straighten out those dresser drawers.

Just for today, before I speak I will ask myself, "Is it true?" "Is it kind?" And if the answer to either of those questions is negative, I won't say it.

Just for today I will make a conscious effort to be agreeable. I will look as well as I can, dress becomingly, talk softly, act courteously and not interrupt when someone else is talking. Just for today I'll not try to improve anybody except myself.

Just for today I will have a quiet half hour to relax alone. During this time I will reflect on my behavior and will try to get a better perspective on my life.

Just for today I will be unafraid. I will gather the courage to do what is right and take the responsibility for my own actions. I will expect nothing from the world, but I will realize that as I give to the world, the world will give to me. P.S. Have a happy, healthy New Year. And pray for peace!

LOVE, ABBY

There is help for acne

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

Dr. Wallace: I am 13 and have a serious problem — pimples. My mom said every teen gets them and that there is nothing I can do to get rid of them.

Dr. Wallace, I'm miserable. Isn't there anything that can help me? — Sonja, Santa Rosa, Calif.

Sonja: There is a lot you can do. Wash your face at least three times a day with a mild soap. Eat sensibly, get the proper amount of sleep, exercise and sunshine.

Then, most importantly, have Mother take you to a dermatologist. Many new advances have occurred in helping teens with pimples and acne.

Dr. Wallace: I'm 16 and my parents won't allow me to date this certain boy because he is of a different religion. The boy now attends my church but my parents still say no. Also, they open my mail and they listen to all my telephone conversations. Never do I have any privacy.

They tell me that what they are doing is for my own good, but I'm going crazy. Are my parents really helping me? — T.R. Sidney, Ohio

T.R.: A teen needs privacy. Opening teens' mail and snooping on the telephone by parents shows a lack of trust between parent and teen. There are times when parents must know what the teen is doing but only when the teen demonstrates that he is going astray. In this situation, snooping is acceptable. In all other situations, it is not.

I think your parents are making a mistake.

Time to thank old friends and new for their loyalty and patronage in '79.

One worked for Dr. George Stolfuss

Apprentice programs helping small towns

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — George Stolfuss knew by the time he hit high school that he wanted to be a country doctor.

So he picked a medical school where he could sample the life, a school set amid green fields instead of city streets, a school whose curriculum was oriented towards farm communities and small towns.

Stolfuss, 34, is now the only doctor in Friendsville, Md., a town of 650. He lives on a farm.

The Hershey Medical Center, taking a cue from its pastoral surroundings, is sending students to the country and hoping they'll like it enough to return as full-fledged physicians.

The 7-year-old Hershey preceptorship program, affiliated with Pennsylvania State University, is among 94 apprenticeship programs, at medical schools in 10 states, according to a 1978 study by the American Academy of Family Physicians.

But Hershey appears to be a leader. The school has recruited 288 doctors around the country to work with medical students. None of the doctors is paid for participating.

The school has sent more than 500 students out to live and work with family doctors in rural areas plagued by skimpy medical care.

The breadth of the program is tied to Hershey's rural setting.

"Penn State is more committed than other schools," said Richard Hill, who until two months ago was chief of the Health Education and Welfare Department's health manpower branch in Region III.

"They felt it was necessary in their location and they went after it. The medical school is in a much more rural setting than most."

Stolfuss chose Hershey precisely because of its location. The nearest city is Harrisburg, population 63,000, about 10 miles away.

"There's no other school in the country as firmly oriented towards small towns as Hershey," Stolfuss said. "Just about every other medical center is in the middle of a big city and tends to be oriented towards big city practices."

Stolfuss chose Friendsville after a search committee contacted him. The old lumbering town had been without a doctor for 10 years.

"Everyone in the Friendsville area that I know is just tickled to death. It's one of the best things that ever happened," said Bruce Jenkins, a retired school superintendent.

"A lot of doctors ... just can't see coming into the sticks," Jenkins said. "Dr. Stolfuss didn't come in with that idea. He came in with the idea that this is the kind of community he knew and understood and would like to be a part of."

Dr. Eugene Engle, 28, said the Hershey program "cemented" his decision to go into family practice. He is practicing with a partner in Manheim, a town of about 5,400 near Lancaster.

"It was an under-served area when we came here six months ago," Engle said. "Three doctors died in the last four years. We picked up their practices."

Michael Mesoras, a fourth-year student at Hershey, plans to open a rural practice in western Pennsylvania, where he grew up. He is apprenticed to Dr. Jon Schiller of Windber, a Pennsylvania coal mining town of 5,000.

Windber has five doctors, but should have eight, Schiller said.

Schiller, who has helped train about 10 students from Hershey and the University of Pittsburgh over the last five years, said the program benefits all involved, not just the students.

"The patients are glad to see them," he said, "and it makes for a stimulating atmosphere. We learn, they learn, our practices are questioned and we have to keep up."

Dr. Fergus Pope, who serves the 500 people of Bakersville, N.C., said exposure to rural patients helps students adapt to the realities of country medicine.

"It doesn't really matter what their specialty is," said Pope. "Gradually, they suit their practice to fit into the lifestyle and economics of rural people and generally poorer people."

The Bakersville Community Clinic takes 10 medical students a year from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. State law requires medical students to spend a month at a small clinic.

Pope said three local doctors — including two of his partners at the clinic — are Californians who returned to the Carolina mountains after working at the clinic as students.

But Bakersville hasn't always been so lucky.

"We started originally with a nurse practitioner clinic. We didn't have any doctors," said James Henline, a funeral director who helped found the 6-year-old clinic.

"For our area we have plenty of doctors now. We're in really good shape. We have better medical care now than we've ever had."

Just how many medical students follow through and set up rural practices is not known. Officials have been unable to measure the impact of such programs as Hershey's and North Carolina's.

Dione Mahoney, an HEW health education specialist, said more doctors are going into primary care residencies — hospital training for the front-line, generalized care best suited to small towns and rural settings.

Badly burned boy, 2, flown to Galveston

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — An Air Force plane flew a critically burned 2-year-old Mexican boy 800 miles from El Paso today for treatment that might keep him alive.

The boy suffered second- and third-degree burns over 65 percent of his body when he fell into a burning pit of garbage Saturday in Juarez, Mexico — across the Rio Grande from this border city.

Space was found late Sunday in the Shriners Burns Hospital in Galveston for Jose Luis Romero after officials at an El Paso hospital said their burns unit lacked the facilities to treat such a severe burn.

Shriners got him admitted into Sun Towers Hospital in El Paso, which has a burns unit, but officials said the boy's hopes for survival hinged on getting him to hospital such as Galveston's with its larger facilities for burns treatment.

The boy lost his nose and ears because of the burns, and officials said he was in danger of losing his hands.

U.S. Air Force officials agreed to fly the child to a military installation near wherever treatment could be obtained, and a C-9 air evacuation plane designed to carry patients was dispatched late Sunday from Scott Air Force Base in Illinois.

The plane left El Paso International Airport with the boy about 12:30 a.m. today for Ellington Air Force Base in Houston, where a Coast Guard helicopter stood by to take the burns victim to Galveston.

A tracheotomy was performed on the boy earlier Sunday to assure an open air channel, since hospital officials feared swelling of facial burns might otherwise prove a problem.

Officials at the El Paso hospital worked frantically Sunday trying to find a hospital that would agree to treat the boy, whose parents have little income.

The Shriners hospital at Galveston said first that it had a waiting list of about a week, but hospital officials said that might be too late.

Another Shriners hospital in Boston said it had space, and while hospital officials and Shriners began trying to line up transportation, officials at the Galveston hospital said they had found space.

"The biggest problem right now is infection. If any kind of infection were to set in, we couldn't transfer him at all and he'd probably die right away," an official at the El Paso hospital said Sunday afternoon.

"Our problem is we don't have the capability to take care of this severe a case," said Susan Sandoval, an information official with the El Paso hospital.

She said the first 72 hours is the critical time for a burn patient.

HEAVY TRAFFIC CATCH — Miami Dolphins Duriel Harris, center, scoops in a Don Strock pass to pick up 33 yards and a first down in final quarter of AFC semifinal playoff game Sunday at Pittsburgh. Harris caught the ball in spite of efforts by Steelers' defenders Dwayne Woodruff (49) and Mel Clount (47). Steelers won the game, 34-17.

Great weekend for underdogs Rams pull off 'miracle'

By The Associated Press
The last time the Los Angeles Rams visited Tampa, they got their heads handed to them — but, then again, the last time they visited Dallas...

On Sunday, the Rams taught Roger Staubach and the Cowboys a lesson in miracle comebacks and earned another trip to Florida's Gulf Coast — where the Tampa Bay Buccaneers are planning on another miracle of their own.

It was a weekend of upsets. In three of the four National Football League playoff games, the underdogs won, putting a few new faces in the Jan. 6 conference championship games.

In the National Conference, the Bucs kept their Cinderella season alive Saturday by beating the Philadelphia Eagles 24-17. And on Sunday, the Rams, 30-6 regular-season losers in Dallas last Oct. 14, shocked the Cowboys 21-19.

In the American Conference, the battered Houston Oilers rode an extraordinarily aroused defense to a 17-14 victory Saturday over the San Diego Chargers. And on Sunday, in the only "expected" outcome, the defending Super Bowl champion Pittsburgh Steelers mauled the Miami Dolphins 34-14.

So the Bucs, winless in 1976, their first season, but the NFC Central Division champions this year, take on the NFC West champion Rams, whom they beat 21-6 last Sept. 23. And the AFC Central champion Steelers, who flattened Houston 34-5 in last year's AFC title game, take on the Oilers, their division's wild-card team, again.

Vince Ferragamo, who had thrown touchdown passes of 32 yards to Wendell Tyler and 43 yards to Ron Smith in the first half but had seen the Rams' 14-5 lead turn into a 19-14 deficit, teamed with Billy Waddy on a 50-yard TD pass play with 2:06 remaining for the victory that avenged last year's 28-0 NFC title-game loss to the Cowboys.

Coach Ray Malavasi was still savoring the dramatic triumph when someone asked him when he'd begin thinking about the Bucs.

"Soon," he replied. "In about two hours. We'll enjoy the win here, but when the plane touches down in Los Angeles we'll start planning for Tampa Bay."

"We've played them before this year and didn't do too well," Malavasi understated, "but I'll tell you this — if we play our next two games like we did today, we'll win it all."

Ferragamo's day started inauspiciously with a safety when he slipped and fell in his end zone trying to escape Dallas' rush. But he responded with his TD pass to Tyler and, after Rafael Septien made it 7-5 with a 33-yard field goal for Dallas, Ferragamo found Smith on the end of his "Hail, Mary" bomb into the end zone three seconds before halftime.

Roger Staubach, who brought the Cowboys back from the brink of defeat in the final two minutes of three games in 1979, guided Dallas into position for Ron Springs' 1-yard TD run in the third period and beat a Rams' blitz by passing two yards to tight end Jay Saldivi to put the Cowboys on top 19-14 with 12:47 to play.

The Steelers were awesome in their triumph over Miami, scoring touchdowns the first three times they got the ball. First Sidney Thornton capped a drive with the opening kickoff by piling in on one yard out. Then Terry Bradshaw hit scoring passes of 17 yards to John Stallworth and 20 yards to Lynn Swann.

The Dolphins, totally out-gunned in virtually every department, got a TD on Bob Griese's seven-yard pass to Duriel Harris after an official gave Miami the ball — apparently mistakenly — because he believed a member of the Steelers had touched it after a Dolphin punt. But that only closed the margin to 20-7 and the Steelers quickly put to rest any thoughts of yet another upset when Rocky Bleier and Franco Harris ran for short-yardage touchdowns.

Now come the Oilers, who found themselves so badly outplayed in the snow, sleet and freezing rain in Pittsburgh a year ago.

"The two best teams are in it," Bradshaw said of the AFC title rematch. "It doesn't snow in Houston (where the Oilers beat Pittsburgh 20-17 on the regular-season's next-to-last Monday night). If it snows here, that's an edge we'll take."

"Next week will be the game of the decade," added Swann, "and the Steelers have always been able to meet that challenge."

On Saturday, the Oilers, with NFL rushing champion Earl Campbell and quarterback Dan Pastorini benched with injuries, beat the Chargers, thanks to five interceptions, a playoff record four of them by safety Vernon Perry. He also blocked a punt and returned the ball 57 yards to set up a field goal while cornerback J.C. Wilson's interception preceded Gifford Nielsen's game-winning touchdown pass to Mike Renfro on a play covering 47 yards.

"Bum" no bumpkin

SAN DIEGO (AP) — He is an owl man in his 50s, with crewcut hair and jowly cheeks. He can't see the 50-yard line with thick-lens spectacles. His jaw is usually crammed with chewing tobacco. He wears brightly colored cowboy boots and a wide-brimmed Texas hat with an ostrich feather around the brim.

But no country bumpkin is O.A. "Bum" Phillips, head coach of the Houston Oilers football team. He's got a football mind like a steel trap.

Phillips, rancher, horse trader, defensive genius, has emerged as the most captivating personality in the National Football League playoffs, counting down to the Jan. 20 Super Bowl.

If the victories of Tampa Bay and Los Angeles were surprises, Houston's 17-14 upset of the highly touted San Diego Chargers was nothing short of a miracle.

The Oilers entered the game with their veteran quarterback, Dan Pastorini, and star ballcarrier, Earl Campbell, rendered hors de combat. Ken Burroughs was aching so much he could only be used as a decoy.

"If we run out of players, we will just punt and play defense," lamented Phillips before the game, noting that the game was so much in the bag for the Chargers that Las Vegas refused to establish a line on it.

The Oilers didn't run out of players. Instead, it must have looked to Dan Fouts, San Diego's 4,082-yard passing genius, as if Oilers were coming out of the ground by the dozens — especially Vernon Perry, the rookie refugee from the Canadian League who intercepted four of Fouts' passes, blocked a field goal attempt and ran the ball back 57 yards.

It was a day that the sheer grit and guts of the battered defensive unit spoiled the dreams of a team many expected to go all the way.

And behind it all was the deft hand of the rugged yet fatherly figure they call "Bum," whose trademark in close to 30 years of coaching has been defense.

Phillips was asked afterward how many pairs of boots he kept in his closet.

"Lots," he replied. "Are they all blue?" someone queried, calling attention to his azure, high-heeled, pointed-toe footwear.

"Naw, I got all colors," he replied, suggesting — perhaps justifiably — that he saw no reason to that line of questioning.

"Don't forget, you've become a TV personality," someone said.

"Don't know why," he said, still attempting to shift attention from himself. Referring to his familiar 10-gallon hat, Phillips said, "When you're on the eastern side of the field, you need something to keep the sun out of your eyes."

Bluebonnet battle fought tonight

HOUSTON (AP) — Purdue defensive end Keena Turner and Tennessee safety Roland James will play key roles in trying to stop quarterbacks Mark Herrmann and Jimmy Streater in the 21st Bluebonnet Bowl tonight.

Turner, the Boilermakers' all-time leader with 57 tackles for losses, will try to restrict Tennessee's Streater to the pocket while James will be eyeing the passes of Herrmann, the Big 10's all-time passing yardage leader.

Purdue, 9-2 in its third season under Coach Jim Young, went into the 7 p.m. kickoff in the AstroDome with the favorite's tag but Tennessee, 7-4, has played what Coach Johnny Majors calls "some of the best football I've been associated with."

Herrmann and Streater will be the primary targets of each opposing defense.

"He's the most dangerous when he gets into the open field," Turner said of Streater. "He is so quick and it helps him in both running and passing. He sets up so quick on his passes, he's hard to get to. That accounts for his completing 60 percent of his career passes."

James will go after Herrmann from a safety position after starting earlier in the year at cornerback.

"Earlier in the year they were avoiding me," James said. "But when I moved to safety, that gave me a little more freedom to go for the ball."

"That's what James expects to have to do against Herrmann, who has passed for 6,431 yards during three seasons at Purdue."

"We've worked a lot on our reaction to the ball," James said. "That's about all you can do because we know he's going to throw it."

The Boilermakers, 9-2 in their third season under Coach Jim Young, are attending a bowl for the second straight year. Purdue blasted Georgia Tech 41-21 in last year's Peach Bowl to complete a 9-2-1 season.

Turner and defensive tackle Calvin Clark spearheaded a Purdue defense that led the Big 10 in defense against the rush, allowing an average of 101.4 yards per game.

Tennessee, 7-4, also is in the third year of a rebuilding program under Coach Johnny Majors. The Vols' record was the first winning season in the Majors era and marked Tennessee's first bowl trip since 1974.

Tennessee's running attack is led by Hubert Simpson, a 6-1, 204 junior from Athens, Ga. Simpson gained 792 yards on 157 carries that included 100-yard plus performances against Notre Dame, Mississippi and Kentucky.

Fueled by his late season surge, Simpson set school records for most rushes in one game with 35 against Kentucky, tied the record of four touchdowns in one game and most points in one game at 24.

Wally Jones led the Boilermaker rushing attack with 742 yards on 178 carries and eight touchdowns.

Purdue tight end Dave Young, who operates as an unusual tight end in motion, led the Big 10 with 51 receptions for 512 yards and eight touchdowns.

Malmquist wins event

STEAMBOAT SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Pre-meet favorite Walter Malmquist won both rounds of the jumping competition to move into third place overall at the Nordic combined trials for the 1980 U.S. Olympic ski team.

After a 15-kilometer race and two jumping events, Malmquist had 600.45 total points, trailing leader Kerry Lynch, who had 612 points, and runner-up Mike Devecka, who had 605.75.

Malmquist earned 221 points in the morning round and 229.5 in the afternoon to rally from his poor showing in the opening cross country race, where he finished sixth — nearly seven minutes behind the winner Lynch.

SWC teams secure

By The Associated Press
Southwest Conference basketball teams, despite a "lost weekend," have assured themselves another winning intersectional season going into family feudin' beginning Thursday with Southern Methodist at Arkansas in the feature game.

Other SWC matchups show Rice at Houston in the television special, Texas Tech at Texas and Texas A&M at Texas Christian.

The SWC was 51-36 for a winning percentage of .586 with only four intersectional games left.

The league suffered a severe sinking spell last week, going 5-10 and harvesting no first place tournament trophies.

Vanderbilt's 88-77 upset of SMU knocked the Ponies to 8-2, still the league's best.

Texas shined Thursday night with a four-point victory over San Francisco, and then took a 77-61 flogging from New Mexico State Saturday night. The Longhorns led 35-31 at halftime, then shot a miserable 28 per cent from the field in the second half.

Texas is 7-2 against intersectional foes.

The Texas Aggies took the second place medal in the Pillsbury Classic when Minnesota muscled Shelby Metcalf's crew 69-63 Saturday night. Metcalf played only his starting five in the game. Vernon Smith and Rynn Wright both made All-Tournament honors at forward.

While the Aggies dipped to 8-5, the Texas Tech Red Raiders lost all three games in the Far West Classic including a 47-46 loss to Penn State Saturday in a joust for seventh place. Tech is now 6-4.

Baylor beat Davidson 76-67 and Texas Christian walloped tiny Northeast Missouri State 89-71 to even their records at .500.

Houston earned the consolation crown of the Sun Bowl Classic with an 83-75 victory over Alabama behind cousin guards Robert and Kenneth Williams.

Arkansas fell to 6-3 with a loss to Memphis State Friday night and a 66-57 defeat at the hands of Kansas State Sunday.

SKI JUMPING — Walter Malmquist, 23, of Post Mills, Vermont leaves the jump in 70 meter ski jumping competition Sunday at Steamboat Springs. Malmquist won both rounds of jumping Sunday during qualifying for the U.S. Nordic Combined Olympic Ski Team Tryouts.

Friends go head-to-head

DALLAS (AP) — When Nebraska tight end Junior Miller encounters Houston linebacker David Hodge in the 44th Cotton Bowl Tuesday, it will be more than a meeting of two rivals.

Miller and Hodge, both key members of their respective units, met a couple of weeks ago in San Diego, where they were honored for making the Kodak All-American team.

Because of that activity, the two Texas natives are now good friends and each speaks highly of the other. But for three hours on Tuesday, they'll be trying their best to beat each other.

"I got to know David Hodge pretty well in San Diego," said Miller, who is from Midland. "He and I and (Oklahoma linebacker) George Cumby went to Sea World together."

"He's an All-American and I'm an All-American and to be able to compete against him is a big thrill. I'm looking forward to it."

Adds Hodge, who comes from Clute, "You always look forward to playing against someone who's the best. He's kind of like Ronnie Lee (former Baylor tight end now with Miami), but he's quicker. He seems to be as strong, but he's a lot faster."

"You want to work extra hard against a friend. It will be fun to play against him."

How well Miller and Hodge perform could have a lot to do with the success of their teams in the New Year's Day Classic, which starts at 1:10 p.m. Both teams are 10-1, with Nebraska rated seventh and Houston eighth.

Miller, a 6-foot-4, 245-pounder, is a big play man. Although his 21 receptions were 12 fewer than last season, he averaged nearly 20 yards per catch and scored seven touchdowns. He also averaged 11 yards per carry on seven reverses.

"We're going to try to get the ball to Junior as much as we can," Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said. "But it doesn't always work the way we want it."

"We may call six or seven passes on which he is the primary receiver, but don't always throw it to him. Sometimes the defense has something to say about what you do."

Hodge will be doing all he can to keep Miller under wraps. The 6-3, 210-pounder led the Cougars with 125 tackles, intercepted two passes and recovered two fumbles. He's the heart of a defense that limited opponents to an average of 11 points per game.

Nebraska has other weapons besides Miller, most notably, Iback Jarvis Redwine, who rushed for 1,042 yards. Redwine made a second-stringer of I.M. Hipp, the school's all-time rushing leader.

Hipp still gained 577 yards and No. 3 I-back Craig Johnson added 530 and scored six touchdowns.

Halfback Terald Clark led

Houston with 1,063 yards and fullback John Newhouse, cousin of the Dallas Cowboys' Robert Newhouse, had 678.

Houston is playing in its third Cotton Bowl in four years. Nebraska is a three-point favorite to beat the Cougars, who lost to Notre Dame 35-34 in last year's game.

Winners named in Elks tourney

Winners in the Elks Lodge Hoop Shoot free throw contest were determined at a shoot-off held Saturday in the Big Spring High School gymnasium.

First place winners included Mary Guevara, girls 8-9; Shanna Fowler, girls 10-11; and Gloria Bustamante, girls 12-13 years of age. Winners in the boy's division were Tyrone Foster, 8-9; Carey Fraser, 10-11 and John Tinnerstet, in the 12-13 year age bracket.

Runners-up were Aimee Walker, 8-9; Ellen Crane, 10-11; and Anna Jackman, 12-13. Boys runners-ups were Donnie Paige, 8-9; Kathy Williams, 10-11 and Derek Logback, 12-13.

The local winners will compete in the district tournament to be held Jan. 26 in Big Spring. First place winners from El Paso, Pecos, Midland and Odessa will participate. The regional tournament will be held in Temple in February with those winners eligible to win scholarships sponsored by the Elks National Lodge.

Last year over 500,000 youngsters participated in the Elks Hoop Shoot contest.

Scanlon faces Crimson Tide

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Despite what Lou Holtz says, Arkansas quarterback Kevin Scanlon is no joke.

For instance, Holtz was asked how Scanlon had developed so quickly from his so-so performance of 1978.

"I'd have to say it's a miracle," said Holtz, the Arkansas coach.

When asked about Scanlon's ability as a runner, Holtz will use throw-away lines such as:

"When he runs the ball, we use a lot more film."

"Our offensive linemen always say they have to hold their blocks longer when Scanlon's carrying the ball."

"If he runs outside, we get a delay of game penalty."

The object of this affection is a Beaver Falls, Pa., product who majors in speech communications and has a B-plus average. He's a smooth talker who worked at the state Capitol in the governor's office last summer.

"I don't mind not being known as a runner," Scanlon said Sunday. "But I'm not as slow as people think. I know he's just kidding when he says those things."

He played behind Ron Calcagni last year and threw four interceptions in 49 attempts.

This year, he completed 92 of 139 passes for 1,212 yards and nine touchdowns while leading the Razorbacks to a 10-1 season and Tuesday's Sugar Bowl date with second-ranked Alabama. Scanlon threw only six interceptions and Holtz says only one was Scanlon's fault.

For his performance, Scanlon was named Offensive Player of the Year in the Southwest Conference.

Scanlon said the fact that he had three cracked bones in his back hampered his performance last year.

That, and the fact that he played sparingly, Scanlon said. "I'd get in and feel like I had to do something great," Scanlon said. "I'd have a receiver open short and I'd throw deep and get it picked off. This year, I'd hit the open man and we'd hit a long one now and then."

Scanlon has a good arm but Holtz is most impressed by his ability to read defenses.

"With most college quarterbacks you can't use all of your playbook," Holtz said. "For instance, if you have a pass pattern and it will work against eight coverages but not the other two out of any 10, and maybe it will get intercepted against those other two, you'd better be careful about putting it in."

"With Kevin, you don't have to worry. If you call that, he will get you out of the play if he reads the two coverages it won't work against."

Scanlon says he enjoys reading defenses.

"I feel real comfortable in our passing game," Scanlon said. "Being a senior helps. I used to come up to the line of scrimmage and only see part of the defense. Then I came to see more and more. Now, it's just like watching it on film."

Scanlon says preparation for Alabama's blitzing defense has been thorough.

"We've covered everything that could possibly be. We've even been over things that Alabama has only done once during the season so that when I walk up to the line of scrimmage I won't be surprised."

Holtz says Arkansas must be versatile against Alabama's defense.

National champion decided on New Year's Day?

By The Associated Press

Purdue, Tennessee, Clemson and Baylor all had hopes of ending 1979 in style. Ohio State, Alabama, Southern California, Florida State, Oklahoma and Arkansas harbored hopes of beginning 1980 by making itself the college football champion of the year that ends today.

On New Year's Day, the national championship figures to be decided in one of three bowl games. The Rose Bowl pits No.1 Ohio State against No.3 Southern Cal, the Sugar has second-ranked Alabama against No.6 Arkansas and the Orange features fourth-rated Florida State against No.5 Oklahoma. The Cotton Bowl, the only one of the Jan. 1 games that doesn't appear to have a bearing on the national title, pits No.7

Nebraska and No.8 Houston. Before those heavy battles take place, Clemson and Baylor had a date in the Peach Bowl this afternoon and Purdue was to take on Tennessee tonight in the Bluebonnet Bowl.

In the only games this weekend, North Carolina edged Michigan 17-15 in the Gator Bowl and Missouri took the Hall of Fame Bowl, 24-14 over South Carolina.

Clemson, 8-3 and ranked 18th, went into the Peach Bowl a slight favorite over Baylor, 7-4 and ranked 19th. The Bears, of the Southwest Conference, played one of the toughest schedules in the country this season: their four losses were to Texas, Arkansas, Houston and Alabama.

"We knew we were going to be a good football team this year," noted Baylor

Coach Grant Teaff. "We could have finished 9-2 except for the losses to Houston and Arkansas, which we should have won."

"I think our turnaround was in the minds of the public and the media," he added, noting that the Bears were 3-8 in 1978. "We had a good team a year ago. The goal was to win our first four games by losing our first four games by a total of 14 points."

It was Baylor's second trip to a bowl since Teaff took over eight seasons ago — they won the SWC and went to the Cotton Bowl in 1974, losing to Penn State.

Clemson beat Ohio State last year in the Gator Bowl.

The Purdue-Tennessee matchup in the Bluebonnet looked as a wide-open offensive display with Purdue's junior quarterback Mark Herrmann, already the Big Ten's career yardage leader, battling Volunteers' all-time total offense leader, signal-caller Jimmy Streeter.

"He's the most dangerous when he gets in the open field," said Boilermakers defensive end Keena Turner of Streeter. "He sets up so quick on his passes, he's hard to get to. That accounts for his completing 60 percent of his career passes."

The Bluebonnet was the first postseason appearance for 7-4 Tennessee since 1974. Purdue, 9-2, blasted Georgia Tech 41-21 in the Peach Bowl last year.

Although any of six teams might wind up No.1 in The Associated Press poll, the winner of the Ohio State-Southern Cal Rose Bowl seems to have the inside track.

The Buckeyes, 11-0 and champions of the Big Ten in their first season under Coach Earl Bruce, will have to stop a high-powered Trojan offense led by Charles White at tailback and quarterback Paul McDonald.

"McDonald, if he weren't at USC, would have been close to winning the Heisman," said Ohio State defensive coordinator Denny Fryzel.

The Buckeyes also have a topnotch QB in sophomore Art Schlichter.

"Comparing Schlichter and McDonald is like comparing Terry Bradshaw and Kenny Stabler," said Trojans' Coach John Robinson, whose team was 10-0-1. "One (Schlichter) is very physical, he can dominate the game by scrambling or throwing a long pass.

"Paul has been more caught up in the confines of our system. I don't think there's a better college quarterback in the country as far as running a team."

Alabama, 11-0, was ranked No.1 for most of the season but dropped to second in the final regular season poll. The Crimson Tide, defending national champions, probably need an impressive victory over the Razorbacks in the Sugar Bowl to move back to the top. Arkansas also might rate a shot at No.1 if they can convincingly beat the Tide.

In the Orange Bowl, 11-0 Florida State is the kind of passing team Big Eight champion Oklahoma rarely plays.

SUGAR BOWL FOES — Alabama Coach Paul "Bear" Bryant (right) and Arkansas Coach Lou Holtz give the Sugar Bowl trophy a look as they met for a news conference in New Orleans Saturday morning. Their teams meet Jan. 1 in the Sugar Bowl.

Weekend NBA action — 63X used to beat Pokes

By The Associated Press

The Seattle SuperSonics are rolling ... the Portland Trail Blazers are reeling.

Those two National Basketball Association teams were dramatically going in opposite directions, helped along by Sunday's developments.

Seattle's 107-100 victory over Portland accounted for the SuperSonics' 24th triumph in 30 games and the Trail Blazers' 15th loss in their last 19 starts.

Jack Sikma was the big gun for Seattle, scoring 32 points as the Sonics held on to a slim half-game lead over Los Angeles in the Pacific Division.

"Sikma just played a great game," said Blazers' Coach Jack Ramsay. "He did everything a center can do in the NBA. That was the difference tonight."

The Lakers kept pace with the Sonics by beating Phoenix 113-105. In the only other NBA game, Utah whipped Milwaukee 95-88.

Sikma scored 26 of his points in the second half to help the Sonics pull away. Seattle trailed 86-81 with 9:11 left but took the lead two minutes later by scoring seven straight points to take an 88-86 edge with 7:05 remaining.

The Blazers tied the score at 88 and 90, but after Portland center Tom Owens left the game with his sixth personal foul, the Sonics took control. Sikma had 16 points in the fourth quarter, including 12 in the final 5:49. His jumper with 5:07 left to play gave Seattle the lead for good at 92-90.

"We just didn't have enough aggressiveness in the fourth quarter," said Ramsay.

Lakers 113, Suns 105

Jamaal Wilkes and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar combined for 58 points as Los Angeles stopped a nine-game Phoenix winning streak. Wilkes scored 18 of his season-high 30 points in the first half and Abdul-Jabbar had 12 of his 28 points in the fourth quarter as the Lakers recorded their third straight victory.

"Jamaal Wilkes was good early and overall it's the best we've ever seen him," said Phoenix Coach John MacLeod. "When we got close we seemed to push a little too hard and would make a bad pass or some other turnover to take us out."

Jazz 95, Bucks 88

Utah beat Milwaukee behind 23 points by Adrian Dantley and 21 by Terry Furlow. Reserve Tom Boswell scored seven points in the fourth quarter for the Jazz, who won their third game in four starts. It was their fourth road victory of the season, matching their total for all last season, and their second in as many nights.

Marques Johnson scored 23 points to lead the Bucks, who dropped their third consecutive game.

IRVING, Texas (AP) — A play called 63X and a daring defensive play that caused the Dallas Cowboys' Shotgun Offense to backfire carried Los Angeles into the National Football Conference title game where the Rams have a chance to punch a ticket to their first Super Bowl.

The Rams, who were eight-point underdogs, stunned the Cowboys 21-19 Sunday thanks to a seven-back defensive secondary that helped neutralize Dallas' two-minute offense and an amazing show by a quarterback who was third string when the season started.

Los Angeles travels to Tampa Bay for the NFC title game and Ram Coach Ray Malavasi flat put it on the line, saying, "If we play our next two games like we did today, we'll win it all."

Quarterback Vince Ferragamo, who started the year behind Pat Haden, delivered the killing thunderbolt on a 50-yard pass and-run play to fleet Billy Wadley with just 2:06 to play in the game.

Waddy caught the tipped pass on play 63X at the Dallas 27 and outran the Cowboy defenders for the touchdown.

The victory surprised even some of the Ram players.

"Rich Saul (Ram center) told me after the game they didn't expect to win," said Dallas linebacker D.D. Lewis. "They thought they were gonna get beat."

Waddy said of the winning touchdown pass: "Someone tipped the ball a little but I kept my eye on it. On 63X, Ron Smith is the primary receiver but Vince came to me over the middle. It boiled down to one big play."

The Rams hoodwinked the Cowboys at the start of the game by taking out linebackers and inserting seven defensive backs on obvious passing downs.

Malavasi said, "We tried to match speed with speed. Linebackers don't have the speed of receivers. It was Bud Carson, our defensive coordinator, who came up with the idea. We had planned to use it here against Dallas in October, but we had too many defensive guys hurt. It was very effective."

The Cowboys couldn't get untracked and Los Angeles built a 14-5 lead — on Ferragamo touchdown passes of 32 yards to Wendell Tyler and 43 yards to Ron Smith, who leaped between two Dallas defenders.

Dallas' only points came on a safety when Randy White trapped Ferragamo and Rafael Septien kicked a 33-yard field goal.

Ron Springs' one-yard touchdown run and Roger Staubach's two-yard touchdown pass to Jay Saldi put the Cowboys ahead 19-14 early in the fourth quarter.

That's when Ferragamo went to work. Dallas still had a chance after the final Ram touchdown but Staubach failed to complete a pass in four downs.

Iowa whips Dallas

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — Doris Draving scored 29 points and Molly Bolin added 26 to lead the Iowa Cornets to a 125-93 victory over the Dallas Diamonds in Women's Basketball League action Sunday.

After being tied momentarily at 2-2, the Cornets pulled away almost at will, leading 53-41 at the half in the game Dallas never led.

Connie Kunzmann had 19 points and Pat Hodgson chipped in 17 as the Cornets raised their WBL season record to 9-3.

Cathy Shoemaker scored

20 points and Alfreda Abernathy had 19 to lead Dallas, which dropped to 3-12 on the year.

Willodean Harris, the 6-5 player Iowa picked up from the defunct Washington Metros, joined the game in the last four minutes, scoring two baskets and a free throw. Harris arrived in Iowa only Saturday and hadn't even practiced with the team.

The Cornets will travel to New York Thursday night, where they will play the Stars in Madison Square Garden, before playing in Chicago on Friday.

With LARRY D. SHEPPARD SHEPPARD FUNERAL HOME

HOW CAN I HELP THE NEWLY WIDOWED?

It doesn't matter whether one's husband or wife died after a prolonged illness or whether it was a sudden death. The resulting widowhood is a deep-seated impact which may last for days, weeks, even months.

During this period of initial shock, you must help the widow or widower to be ACTIVE. By occupying his or her time with the important details of "getting things together" for everyday living, he (or she) is forced, thankfully, into activity.

With our professional responsibilities and experience, we as funeral directors can be of immediate help. We assist in processing the many personal papers such as Social Security and V.A. We handle literally hundreds of details for the family throughout the total service. And we try to help as best we can with the widow or widower in their emotional adjustments.

One of our chief goals is to bring peace and comfort to the living in their hours of need. If we can help you in this, please let us know.

Lawmakers will keep eye on census takers

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — While Texas legislators are talking politics this spring, they will be keeping an eye on census takers. Census-taking and lawmaking are closely akin in Texas. The results of the 1980 census will tell the 1981 Legislature how legislative and congressional districts should be changed to accommodate a 15 percent increase in population and a shift from rural and central city areas to the suburbs. Some legislators think the 1981 Legislature will give big city lawmakers the edge when it divides up the 150 state House seats, 31 Senate positions, and 24 congressional seats after the census. Others think the century-old dominance of rural legislators over their big city brothers will continue. Census questionnaires will be mailed on March 28 to 90 percent of Texas households. Door-to-door counts will be made of the 10 percent not reached by questionnaires. Where forms are not mailed back, the census bureau will collect the information door-to-door. The census bureau promises it will give the Texas legislature by April 1, 1981, the necessary information for redistricting. From then until the regular legislative session adjourns at the end of May, it will be up to state legislators to reshuffle legislative and congressional districts. "I think we will be able to handle it in two months. We have done it in the past," said Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas. "Everybody will just have to buckle down and work like hell. It will be especially interesting if we have a tax bill at the same time." If the 1981 session does not handle state Senate and House redistricting, the job will pass to the Legislative Redistricting Board—made up of the House speaker, lieutenant governor, attorney general, comptroller and land commissioner. "If we cannot agree on congressional redistricting, we may be in trouble," Mauzy said. "A veto from the governor of the congressional bill might bring on a special legislative session or put the whole matter in the courts." "I think there is a good chance of redistricting before adjournment," said Rep. Gerald Hill, D-Austin, vice chairman of the House committee handling redistricting. He said the census bureau has promised Texas "reasonably good data" on county populations even before the April 1 deadline. A special report by the House Study Group says Texas' population grew about 15 percent from 11,198,655 to 12,830,000 from 1970 to 1977. If this growth is projected into redistricting plans it would mean that House districts with more than 15 percent gain would gain representation and those will less than 15 percent growth would lose representation, said the group, which is financed by about 100 House members. The report warns that "substantial changes are sure to occur between 1977 and 1980." In fact, a separate 1978 estimate calls for a state population of 13,112,000. However, the 1970-77 figures quoted in the report was disturbing to those who have predicted big cities will come into their own in 1981. According to 1977 figures, only two of the state's most populous urban counties would gain House seats. Harris County would go from 23 to 25 state representatives and El Paso from four to five, according to 1977 figures.

Dallas would lose one representative, from 18 to 17. Jefferson, McLennan, and Nueces counties also would lose one each. Galveston, Tarrant, Travis, Bexar, Hidalgo, and Lubbock would remain the same. The House Group report indicated that the fastest growth is not in the big urban counties, such as Dallas and Houston, but the suburban counties surrounding them. Collin County grew at a 51 percent rate. Rockwall County had a 38 percent growth rate. Both are in the Dallas-Fort area. Montgomery County, near Houston, had a 94 percent growth rate.

Feeling intense in 'Corridor of Hate'

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Take a walk along Tehran's "corridor of hate" and find out how venomous the anti-American campaign has become.

Elsewhere in this pseudo-modern metropolis people smile and weep and go about the daily routine of life. But outside the U.S. Embassy the hate-filled faces staring moodily through the steel-grilled gates into the courtyard beyond reveal another aspect of the Iranian national character.

"Americans are bad," an old woman muttered in response to a reporter's question, a black chador pulled across her face. "Bad Americans! Bad Americans!" the crowd around her roared, faces flushed with excitement and exertion.

American television crews routinely staking out the gate didn't bother shooting the scene. A voice roared over a loudspeaker: "Hey, you TV people, this is for you." The crowd switched its epithets from English to Farsi when the cameramen remained indifferent.

The "corridor of hate" is a quarter mile of Telegraph Street, festooned with banners that hang like yellowing washing from the plane trees outside the embassy's southern wall and the tall buildings across the street.

"The American tradition is murder may it be in Vietnam, Jaleh Tehran or in Mecca," said one in English, referring to a massacre of demonstrators by the shah's men in Tehran in 1978 and the recent attack on the Grand Mosque in Mecca.

The forest of banners is supplemented by displays of gory pictures attributing to "American imperialism" and the CIA much of the carnage of recent years, including the Vietnam War, the Lebanese civil war, the rebellion in Nicaragua and the attempts of the shah's forces to suppress the Iranian revolution.

Visiting Americans, who generally are treated politely elsewhere in the Iranian capital, are greeted by raised fists and burning effigies of President Carter.

Crowds large and small march by with banners flying each hour of daylight and into the early evening. Usually the shouted messages are the same: "Down with Carter" and "Yankees go home." The voices rise to a screeching pitch as they pass the main gate, possibly to be sure of reaching the ears of the Americans held captive somewhere inside.

Some of the demonstrators are perennials. "We're making a star of that bow-legged lad with the whining voice," said one TV cameraman.

An apoplectic-looking old man made one evening news show in the United States three nights in a row. The embassy compound itself is an intimidating place. Built over a whole city block with high, thick brick walls to keep people out, it is the perfect place to keep captives in.

Prowling the streets outside are the all-pervasive revolutionary youths with their camouflage trousers, military jackets and shining weapons.

American reporters agree that while there is some orchestration of the crowds, there is also a deeply rooted sense of anger and barely veiled threat.

VAIN ATTEMPT — Using a helicopter to reach the top of an overturned ore freighter, Lee Wang Zin, Alaska state policemen at Kendrick Bay Saturday pound on the hull and listen to response in an attempt to find out if some of the 30 Taiwanese crew members might have been trapped inside and survived in an air pocket. A diver failed to find bodies or survivors inside the crippled ship which capsized Christmas Day.

On ship that capsized

Hope abandoned for crewmen

KETCHIKAN, Alaska (AP) — The freighter Lee Wang Zin, which capsized Christmas Day in the cold seas off Alaska, was headed today for an unceremonious burial in Canadian waters that may sink forever any clues to the whereabouts of its crew.

But early today, 16 rounds fired from five-inch cannons on the Coast Guard cutter Munro missed the vessel, probably because of darkness, a spokesman said. A commercial diver was called in to plant charges inside the ballast tanks, reducing the danger of a hit to the fuel tanks.

There had been hope that some crewmen might have survived the Dec. 25 accident, when the ship, carrying 30 Taiwanese sailors and a load of iron ore pellets for Japan, rolled over.

Searchers turned up two bodies and a life raft, but divers found no signs of the crew aboard. Aerial flights showed only traces of fuel oil that spilled when the ship rolled.

Coast Guard and Navy officials Sunday were forced to scuttle plans to sink the vessel in open seas and hastily arranged to sink it in Canadian waters when a tow line snapped, sending the ship and its estimated 200,000 gallons of fuel drifting toward Canada's Queen Charlotte Islands.

The Canadian government concurs with our decision to sink the vessel in about 1,200 feet of water, said Coast Guard Petty Officer Philip Franklin. "They'd rather have us sink it there than have it drift into Queen Charlotte Islands."

Authorities said the ship carried bunker C-type oil, which solidifies in cold weather and will remain trapped inside the ship when it is dispatched to the ocean floor.

It has not been determined what caused the 741-foot Lee Wang Zin to capsize off the southeastern Alaska coast. Only one distress signal was received, indicating the ship inverted suddenly. The Coast Guard and U.S. Navy found a 160-foot-long gash on the vessel's hull and believe it may have smashed into a reef during a storm that hampered the search for survivors.

The weather broke Saturday and Alaska state troopers landed atop the exposed hull by helicopter to listen with stethoscopes, but heard no responses. It was presumed that crew members would have suffocated or died of exposure in the frigid waters.

Del Hansen, a Ketchikan diver and salvager, also entered the ship and reported after two hours that he saw no bodies. The ship was severely damaged, he said.

"There was no wheelhouse, the upper decks were all gone, and a good portion of the boiler room was opened up," Hansen said. "The staterooms were opened up. The galley was intact and I took a long look in there and there was nobody in it. I looked at a great deal of ragged, tattered, ripped-up steel."

The funeral is expected to be Wednesday, Mrs. Pittman said, because of KKK officials from throughout the country who have indicated they want to pay their respects.

"I have gotten calls from Georgia, Kentucky, Alabama, South Carolina, Arkansas, all over the United States," she said.

Mrs. Frazier is survived by a daughter, Erma Frazier of Carrollton; two granddaughters, Mrs. Pittman of Carrollton and Becky Davis of Arlington, Texas; a grandson, Jimmy Barnes of Houston; and seven grandchildren.

Mrs. Frazier was in good health until a few weeks ago, her granddaughter said.

After KKK funeral refused

Klan picketing mortuary

DALLAS (AP) — A granddaughter of longtime Ku Klux Klan spokesman Addie Barlow Frazier said Klansmen would picket again today outside a Dallas funeral home which refused to allow a KKK funeral for her.

Mrs. Frazier, 72, who helped organize a Klan rally in downtown Dallas on Nov. 3, died Saturday night in a Dallas hospital, where she was admitted Dec. 7 with viral pneumonia.

Beverly Pittman, who lives in the north Dallas suburb of Carrollton, said her grandmother bought a pre-need burial policy in January 1976 with Laurel Land, a Dallas funeral home and cemetery, through monthly payments that totaled $685.51.

They flatly refused to give her a Klan ceremony, because of the robes. They wanted no robes. Klansmen there. They said they wanted no trouble," said Mrs. Pittman, who said these were "four or five" KKK members picketing the funeral home Sunday and said others would return today.

"We're working off a little anger and frustration," said Dan Smith of Dallas, one of four robed Klansmen demonstrating at the funeral home Sunday.

"To deny somebody their last rites is pretty low down," he said.

"They allow robes at funerals of Shriners, beanie at Jewish funerals, and it's a military funeral, they allow uniforms, but they flatly refused to give her a Klan ceremony because of the robes. They wanted no robes. Klansmen there. They said they wanted no trouble," said Mrs. Pittman, who said these were

At the family's demand, the funeral home returned the money for the policy, and another Dallas funeral home agreed to allow a Klan funeral, she said.

Robert McNatt, general manager of the funeral home, said they refused to Compensation payments for veterans boosted

Checks reflecting a 9.5 percent increase in Veterans Administration compensation payments are being mailed to more than two-and-a-quarter million veterans, 235,000 surviving spouses and more than 85,000 children of deceased veterans, Jack Coker, Waco VA Regional Office Director, said recently.

The increased payments were authorized by Congress earlier this month and were signed into law by President Carter November 28. They are retroactive to October 1. A separate adjustment check covering the increased amount due in November and December will be mailed during the latter part of December.

The new rates mean that a veteran with a service-connected disability rated at 10 percent will receive $48 a month, up from $44. The rate of a 50 percent disability goes from $232 monthly to $255, and a veteran with a 100 percent disability will receive $889 monthly, an increase of $80.

Additional amounts providing up to a maximum payment of $2,536 a month (up from $2,308) are paid for specific severe disabilities. The new legislation also increases by 9.9 percent the added amounts paid for dependents to veterans rated 30 percent or more disabled.

The clothing allowance paid disabled veterans whose use of a prosthetic or orthopedic device wears out or damages clothing was increased from $218 to $240 yearly.

Also increased were the rates of Dependency and Indemnity Compensation paid survivors of veterans whose deaths were due to service-connected causes or veterans totally disabled from service-connected causes whose deaths were not the result of such disabilities.

Certain children of those deceased veterans also receive increased compensation under the new legislation. They include unmarried children under 18 as well as certain older helpless children and those between 18 and 23 who are attending VA-approved schools.

Turn down offer in Kansas City

Firemen still on strike

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — A work slowdown by Kansas City firefighters entered its 11th day today after firemen turned down a city offer of another $600,000 in wages and benefits.

"We have stretched and stretched to the point where we can't stretch any further and we're not going to," Mayor Richard Berkley said Sunday as police and National Guardsmen manned fire stations in this city of 500,000.

No major fires were reported Sunday or early today.

Only 37 union firemen reported for work in the three shifts from 7 a.m. through 11 p.m. Sunday and eight of the city's 32 fire stations were closed during the three shifts. A normal shift has 190 men. Jim Treece, police spokesman, said 35 pieces of fire equipment were manned for the 316 square miles of the city. At full strength, the fire department uses about 53 pieces of equipment.

Berkley called the city's fire protection "quite good, although it's obviously not quite the same." John Germann, president of Local 42 of the International Association of Firefighters, described the city's defenses against fire as "practically non-existent."

Since the slowdown began, police confirmed 11 cases of arson, including the firebombing of a city car assigned to Fire Chief John Waas. However, Treece said the number was not abnormally high.

Firefighters launched the work slowdown Dec. 21 after rejecting the city's "last and final" wage offer. During the first stage of the job action, firefighters refused to work non-emergency overtime. The day after Christmas, firefighters began a "sickout," and the action escalated Saturday when firemen who reported for duty refused to do work not required of their job classification.

The city has retaliated by firing 42 firefighters who refused overtime and by issuing deferred three-day suspensions to 278 others. Police, supported by about 700 guardsmen, staffed 16 fire stations while fire department battalion chiefs staffed five and regular firefighters manned two stations. The airport was protected by an independent company.

The firefighters have been working without a contract since their three-year contract expired May 1.

The city's contract offer proposed a 48-hour work week, instead of the current 40-hour week, and a 19.3 percent increase in wages and benefits over the next two years.

Citing the increase in working hours, the union demanded an immediate 20 percent pay increase. Annual pay for firefighters currently ranges from $12,132 to $17,982.

Carson County sheriff wounded by prisoner

PANHANDLE, Texas (AP) — The sheriff of this rural Panhandle community was in serious condition at an Amarillo hospital today after his gun discharged during a scuffle with a prisoner, authorities said.

A spokesman at Amarillo's Northwest Texas Hospital said Carson County Sheriff Connie Reed, 59, was in serious condition after undergoing surgery for a perforated intestine Sunday.

The prisoner was being escorted from his cell to a telephone at Carson County Jail when he grabbed Reed's .357-magnum pistol, officers said.

The prisoner was treated for facial lacerations and taken to Potter County Jail in Amarillo. Officers said he was to be taken today to Panhandle — 28 miles east of Amarillo.

Eyadema named Togo president

LOME, Togo (AP) — Running unopposed, Gnassingbe Eyadema has been re-elected to a new seven-year term as president of this tiny West African nation.

Nearly one million voters cast colored ballots in Sunday's election, renewing the president's mandate and backing up his control with a one-party Parliament and a tough new constitution, ensuring his oneman rule.

Eyadema, an army general, seized power in a coup in 1967 and was elected to his first seven-year term as president in 1972. Togo, an exporter of coffee and cocoa about the size of West Virginia, is sandwiched between Ghana and Benin on the African coast and has an estimated population of 2.3 million.

Ro Tae Ok is dead at 60

TOKYO (AP) — North Korean Vice Premier Ro Tae Ok died today in a "mishap," the official North Korean news agency reported. He was 60.

The report from Pyongyang gave no details of his death.

In addition to serving as vice premier, the report said Ro was chairman of the State Planning Commission and a member of the Central Committee of the Korean Workers' Party.
