THE PARTY'S OVER — If you were anywhere at all other than home last night, chances are you made use of any or all of these trappings to help see the old year out and the new year in — noise makers, plumed hats, balloons, appropriately decorated crowns, ribbons and noisemakers. And if you awakened this morning with a headache and a promise never to do all the things you did again — well, just wait until next New Year's Eve.

Sugar growers to be held responsible

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court upheld on Monday the right of agricultural marketing cooperatives to extract payments from farmers who fail to grow the crops they promised.

The high court ordered a new trial of sugar grower Ross Campesi's suit against Rio Grande Valley Sugar Growers, Inc.

Campesi sued the cooperative after it withheld $129,349 from its payment for his 1974-75 sugar cane crop. The money was withheld because Campesi had failed in 1973-74 to meet his contractual obligation to raise and deliver 26,121 tons of sugar cane. Campesi produced only 252 tons because his seed cane crop failed.

The cooperative withheld the money under terms of its standard marketing agreement with member growers.

Lower courts said the damages provision of the marketing agreement was not valid because the cooperative's by-laws did not specify it had the right to collect such damages.

But the Supreme Court said the association was within its rights under common law to include the damage provision in its marketing agreements and to enforce it.

The court observed that the cooperative spent $42 million — half of it borrowed — to set up the sugar industry in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

"It is usually necessary, as in the case before us, that enormous sums of capital be secured before the necessary mills or plants can be built to process the products. A secure supply of the raw product is required to attract this capital," the court said.

A member's failure to deliver his promised crop to the cooperative's mills can have a "disrupting effect" on the ability of the association to function, the court said.

The growers association said in its appeal that the court's decision would have a "far-reaching impact on the agricultural marketing industry throughout the state as well as on this association's continued existence."

It said Campesi, a third generation sugar grower, suffered his 1973-74 crop failure because he did not heed the association's advice to plant at the proper time. A freeze in early 1973 destroyed much of his available seed cane and left him without enough for the 1973-74 crop, the association said.

In another decision, the court ruled that a fireman's or policeman's ex-wife has no claim on his death benefits under a city pension program.

The court upheld a decision of the 5th Court of Civil Appeals in Dallas without writing a new opinion.

Margaret Lack, who was divorced from Dallas fireman Ralph Lack in 1965, and Nora Lack, his second wife, both claimed his death benefits after he died in 1975.

Only Nora is entitled to the benefits, the court held, because state law makes death benefits from firemen's and policemen's pension systems available exclusively to widows and children.

Soviets move into countryside; casualties reported in hundreds

Soviet troops, bloodied in their first encounters with the Afghan resistance, were fanning out into Afghanistan's rugged countryside to help government forces put down a stubborn rebellion by anti-communist Moslem tribesmen, diplomatic sources in New Delhi, India, reported Monday.

In London, representatives of the United States and five other Western nations declared they will recommend that the issue of "naked aggression" by the Soviets in Afghanistan be brought before the United Nations.

Moscow in turn accused the United States of providing support for the Afghan rebels.

One diplomat in New Delhi, quoting a reliable informant in Kabul, Afghanistan, said about 250 Soviet soldiers were killed or wounded last Thursday when Soviet expeditionary forces joined in the overthrow of one Marxist regime and replaced it with another.

"The Russians can get bogged down, and they'll be bloody fools if they don't pull out," said one Asian diplomat in New Delhi experienced in Afghan affairs about the fighting.

Western diplomats in Kabul said an estimated 45,000 Soviet troops are now in Afghanistan. State Department spokesman Hodding Carter put the Soviet commitment at between 30,000 and 40,000 men and said substantial additional troops are available in Soviet areas adjacent to Afghanistan.

International condemnations of the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan mounted.

Chinese officials summoned the Soviet ambassador to the Foreign Ministry in Peking and sternly demanded a Soviet withdrawal from Afghanistan, saying the "invasion" poses "a threat to China's security." The borders of China, Afghanistan and the Soviet Union meet in the heart of central Asia.

The Pakistani government issued its harshest denunciation of the Soviet intervention. Official sources in Islamabad said Pakistanis filed a protest with the Soviets demanding a quick withdrawal.

For the first time, India called for a speedy Soviet withdrawal, saying the operation would have "far-reaching consequences."

Deputy U.S. Secretary of State Warren Christopher met with envoys from five other Western allied nations in London to discuss a "joint response to the Soviet intervention. Afterward they issued a communique denouncing it as "a flagrant violation of international law and saying the issue should be raised before the United Nations "at an early time."

Goodbye 1979, hello 1980

Happy New Year and Happy New Decade!

Americans welcomed the arrival of the 1980s on Tuesday with parties, parades and some salutes to days gone by.

In Pasadena, Calif., people started lining up Saturday night to get a good view of the 91st annual Tournament of Roses parade. The final crowd was expected to reach 1.3 million. This year's theme is "Music of America"; the grand marshal is Frank Sinatra.

After the parade, in California and elsewhere, will be football. Four bowl games — Sugar, Cotton, Rose and Orange — were scheduled for New Year's Day. The Bluebonnet and Peach bowls were played on Monday.

Parties ranged from small private gatherings to huge celebrations like the one in New York's Times Square. Police said in advance they planned extra security to keep the revelers — expected to number 50,000 — under control.

A smaller celebration was planned atop Pike's Peak in Colorado. Fourteen members of the AdAmAn Club and 16 guests climbed up the 14,110-foot mountain. The annual New Year's Eve climb began in 1922.

Members of the Todds Road Stumblers of Lexington, Ky., meanwhile, got ready to "run out the old year and run in the new." Alex Campbell, who organized the running group about 10 years ago, said the club is "basically ... just a bunch of nice people who would rather be out running than spending time in some bar."

For those who prefer bars, police in a number of cities organized transportation for merrymakers too drunk to drive home. "We figure this service sure cuts down on the wrecks," said Sgt. Harry Hoppen of the Bogalusa, La., police force, which provides chauffeur service for New Year's Eve partygoers who have had one too many and call for help.

In Jamestown, Calif., 200 railroad buffs signed up for a nostalgic journey on the Sierra Railroad steam passenger train. The excursion service — featuring a pair of locomotives built in the 1920s — is closing down in 1980.

The Seamen's Inn in Mystic, Conn., also planned a nostalgic celebration — a New England New Year's Eve party patterned after events on Dec. 31, 1879.

Khomeini meets with council; Waldheim's visit anticipated

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini met with the ruling Revolutionary Council in the holy city of Qom on Monday as Iranian officials prepared for the arrival of U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim on his peace-seeking mission.

A spokeswoman for the Moslem militants occupying the U.S. Embassy for the 58th day said they would not meet with the secretary general "unless Imam Khomeini wishes so."

The militants, who insist they will not negotiate with Waldheim about the Americans they hold hostage, earlier had refused to comment when asked whether they would meet with him under any circumstances.

As Waldheim left New York for Tehran, the U.N. Security Council adopted a resolution threatening the Iranians with economic sanctions unless they release the Americans by Jan. 7. The militants say they will not free them until the deposed shah is returned to stand trial for corruption. The shah is in Panama.

In Tehran, Foreign Ministry spokesman Ebrahim Mokalla said Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh and other members of the Revolutionary Council would meet with Waldheim. But officials at Khomeini's office refused to say whether the religious leader would see the secretary general.

The afternoon Tehran newspaper Ettelaat quoted well-informed sources as saying Waldheim "most likely" would visit the hostages.

"We will not under any circumstances allow Waldheim to come visit the hostages," a student spokesman told The Associated Press. "We expect you to talk about the evil nature of the U.S. government and its savage crimes and its support for the executioner shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, instead of any other talk..." the students said in a broadcast statement directed at Waldheim.

"Our people, as a nation with a representative in your organization, will ask you as your duty to find a solution that realizes the rights of nations...not the interests of governments," the student statement said.

It said Waldheim failed to see the crimes committed in the shah's regime when he visited before the ruler was overthrown.

A student spokesman, asked whether the hostages had a special program for New Year's, said "nothing is planned. It's a quiet night, just like any other night."

Another Revolutionary Council member has spoken out on the possibility of a spy trial of the hostages. The council's policy has been obscured by contradictory statements about the trial in recent days, with Ghotbzadeh saying it was certain if the United Nations imposes economic sanctions on Iran.

"The trial is not out of the question," Hojatoleslam Javad Bahonar was quoted as telling Ettelaat in an interview.

A dispute over the number of Americans being held hostage remained unresolved. The State Department says there are 50, the students say there are 49, and three U.S. clergymen who visited them over Christmas said they saw only 43.

Action/reaction: Must comply, too

Q. Isn't it a law in Texas that all drivers must signal before turning left or right? If so, are police required to signal also?

A. "All vehicles, according to the traffic code, are required to signal their intention to turn when other vehicles are present. This also applies to police cars," said Big Spring Police Capt. Sherrill Farmer.

Tops on TV: Football, parades

Football and parades are the order of the day. At 9 a.m. the Cotton Bowl Festival Parade will air on CBS from Dallas. NBC will air the tournament of Roses Parade at 10:30 a.m. Football starts at 1 p.m. with Alabama playing Arkansas in the Sugar Bowl from the Louisiana Superdome in New Orleans on NBC and the University of Houston vs. the University of Nebraska competing in the Cotton Bowl from Dallas. This evening at 7, NBC will air the Orange Bowl from Miami with Florida State playing Oklahoma.

Colorado physicians cause HMO to fold

FORT COLLINS, Colo. (AP) — Insured medical care for 30,000 people in northeastern Colorado ends Tuesday because almost all the area doctors abandoned the local health maintenance organization.

The doctors' decision to pull out of Choice-Care Health Services Inc. left subscribers scrambling for coverage, federal officials fuming and creditors holding a debt of more than $1 million.

Physicians Service Corp., which represents all but 20 doctors in Larimer County, is the same group of doctors that set up the HMO four years ago.

The doctors say continuation of Choice-Care would divide the medical community.

Federal officials say the organization was poorly run and never really functioned like an HMO.

Other observers say Choice-Care offered subscribers too many services and was doomed to fail from the start.

HMOs have sprouted in the last decade, heralded as one answer to galloping medical costs. Subscribers pay a pre-set monthly fee, and for little or no extra fee they get all their medical care — including routine visits to the doctor's office.

Many HMOs were founded, like Choice-Care, on federal loans and grants. Their aim was preventative medicine, keeping patients healthy and out of hospital, and the method was to offer participating doctors financial incentive.

HMO doctors control some of the subscribers' monthly premiums and are responsible for paying their fees and patients' hospital bills from those funds. When money is left over after bills are paid, the doctors share it in the form of bonuses. But when expenses outpace premiums, the doctors are paid less for treating HMO patients.

The federal government — which began subsidizing HMOs in 1973 — next year will spend $60 million in loans and grants to HMOs.

Despite that financial show of interest, the Health, Education and Welfare department has only recently begun close examination of the HMOs to see if they are following federal regulations.

What it found has not, in every case, made officials happy. Choice-Care is a case in point.

HEW last summer sent a team of investigators to Fort Collins to find out why Choice-Care was running in the red.

"The team found that Choice-Care was not functioning like an HMO should. The physicians were sending their bills in to Choice-Care's administrative office, and the management was paying them," said Norm Lizotte, regional director in Denver of HEW's program for HMOs. "It was fee for service, like a private insurance company. I don't believe the physicians were participating in Choice-Care's financial losses."

The team also found that doctors weren't keeping track of how many Choice-Care patients they admitted to hospitals or how long they stayed. HMOs are based on the concept that doctors, given financial incentives, will reduce medical costs by admitting fewer patients to the hospital and getting them out of the hospital quickly.

HEW told Choice-Care's doctor-dominated board of directors that they would have to play by the rules. If Choice-Care patients exceeded a certain number of hospital days per thousand, the doctors would get less money for treating Choice-Care patients.

The doctors balked. Last month, they voted 87-24 against renewing the corporation's contract with Choice-Care for 1980.

Choice-Care quickly asked the remaining 20 doctors in the county of 150,000 residents to come in as participating physicians. They refused.

"We were already doing everything an HMO is supposed to do in this community," said Dr. John Maloney, chairman of Physician Service Corp. "The cost of health care and hospital utilization is low here to begin with. We decided Choice-Care would be divisive to the medical community and would serve no purpose."

Ted Weinberg, HEW's director of compliance for the HMO program, said from Rockville, Md., that he is "very upset" about the decision.

"Three years ago the physicians in Fort Collins had a much different sentiment," he said. "It is the medical community that makes an HMO program work. The (Choice-Care) physicians did not assume responsibility for the organization."

Times demand real thing in personal economics

NEW YORK (AP) — There was a time when Americans on election eve or New Year's eve were satisfied with the promise of change to come. They didn't complain very loudly either when the promises were forgotten.

But now the times seem to demand the real thing, at least in regard to personal economics. For many families the squeeze is on: Their credit is used up, and their paychecks don't match up to the expenses.

After listening to a panel of labor authorities from corporations, unions and academe, The Conference Board, a private sector research and educational organization, predicted today that American wage gains in 1980 will be erased by continuing high inflation.

The panel estimates that while first-year wage and benefit hikes in major contracts will average 9.5 percent in 1980, inflation will jump 10 percent to 12 percent, producing a decline in real wages.

"People simply won't stand for this," said Frank P. Doyle, General Electric vice president. Promises, that is, won't do. Americans dislike reducing their living requirements; it isn't an acceptable option.

Rather than do so, they will examine alternatives, including cost-of-living contracts. The Conference Board's panel expects plenty of COLA pressure, even on smaller companies that have so far avoided them.

But small companies and large ones too are complaining that they also need relief, and you know how they intend to get it: through price increases, lots of them, big ones and small.

When prices go up it adds to inflation; inflation takes back those new pay raises; COLA reinstates the raises; that forces more pay increases. In other words, the same old treadmill of promises.

During the decade of the 1970s, families faced up to the situation — or avoided it, if it suits your perspective — by using a number of devices:

—They borrowed — on their houses, on their good name.

—They went out to work in record numbers. Wives who hadn't held a job for years went back into the labor force.

—They improved their skills. Adult education, especially that which enhanced job skills, became an urban way of life.

—They turned over some of their expenses to group plans. Companies could buy life, medical, and dental insurance more inexpensively than could individuals.

—They cut into the budgetary fat.

But now these and other devices have been tried, and probably to the limit. Where do families go from here, especially in view of the dismal outlook of the labor panel, which the board summarized as:

"One of pervasive pessimism due to zero economic growth, zero increase in productivity, falling real wages, and continuing high inflation."

New year not promising for regulations writers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new year is not a promising one for the people who write federal regulations. In Congress and in the presidential campaign, the unelected bureaucratic rulemaker has become a handy target for political rhetoric.

The House has voted to send the regulator a message by curbing the authority of the activist Federal Trade Commission, and the bill awaits action in the Senate.

Under the House bill, either branch of Congress could veto any regulation the FTC proposes to apply on an industrywide basis. The vote for that measure was overwhelming, and there is substantial support in the Senate for similar action.

Ironically, some ardent advocates of deregulation say that would be a mistake. One of them is former President Gerald R. Ford who, like every president since Franklin D. Roosevelt, opposes the legislative veto.

That procedure is now built into more than 300 federal laws. It permits Congress or, in many cases, one house of Congress, to block specific executive actions. Presidents always have argued that is an improper invasion of their authority to administer the laws.

Now, in the clamor against federal regulators, the process could be expanded so as to apply across the board to the actions of one agency or another.

"Lately, the problem of unelected bureaucrats acting counter to the congressional interest has been highlighted dramatically at the FTC," said Sen. Harrison Schmitt. "Merely by knowing that Congress could veto a proposed rule, the FTC or any other agencies would be automatically deterred from straying outside their mandate...."

"It is time to admit that, properly confined, the legislative veto's time has come," said Schmitt, R-N.M. Republican Ford doesn't buy that. He says Congress should pass better laws in the first place, instead of writing into legislation a procedure to block results it decides it doesn't like.

His opposition to the congressional veto does not stop at the door of the Federal Trade Commission, even though he disagrees with the consumer activist policies of its chairman, Michael Pertschuk.

Ford says that if Congress didn't want the FTC intervening in the marketplace, the Senate shouldn't have approved Pertschuk's nomination to head the agency.

The former president said Pertschuk's activism should have come as no surprise to anyone at the Capitol, since he served as counsel to the Senate Commerce Committee before President Carter named him to a seven-year term at the FTC.

Now the same Commerce Committee is shaping legislation to rein in the agency. As an alternative to the veto plan approved by the House, its bill would require the FTC to notify Congress of any proposed rule 30 days in advance.

That way, Congress could pass a law forbidding anything it didn't want done.

BITTEN BOY RETURNS HOME — Frankie Scarborough, age 7, looks out from between his parents arms as he leaves Cedars of Lebanon Health Care Center in Miami 12-31 after 30 days hospitalization. He was mauled by a Pit Bull Terrier 12-1 almost to the point of death, and has undergone over 27 hours of surgery. His family welcomed him home today with a surprise party, at which he reportedly ate a lot of cake.

Have fiery speeches left?

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — What's become of the fiery locker room speech?

You hardly ever hear of football coaches making them anymore. Unless they're orating from atop the rubbing table while the TV announcer is giving his halftime pep talk for an insurance company or telling you how Old Siwash, the game of the day college, has an atomic reactor in the basement of the field house and six Nobel Prize winners who get paid almost as much as the assistant line coach.

Probably in this day of coaches wired for sound and spies in the press box, telephoning down enemy tactics and quarterbacks' audibulizing (that was the sportscaster's verb last week) all over the place, the art of steam room rhetoric is in serious decline.

Knut Rockne and Vince Lombardi, of course, were masters of the sweaty genre word wizards who could move the mountains of sweat arrayed before them to bust the hinges off the door in their zeal to trample the foe. The zealots of old weren't in the same league with them when it came to inflaming raw passions and inspiring slavish, suicidal obedience.

Rockne's nettlesome discourses to the flower of Notre Dame manhood are even more memorable than his five undefeated seasons at South Bend and his 12-year record of 105 wins, 12 losses and 5 ties. In that flat, nasal, metallic voice, issuing from a face that Westbrook Pegler said "looked like a battered oil can," he could be scolding, cajoling, ranting, pleading, even weeping, but most often acidly sarcastic.

One of his best speeches contained only two words: With favored Notre Dame trailing at halftime, Rockne didn't accompany the squad to the dressing room. They waited half-an-hour in dejected silence for the expected tirade. No Rockne.

An official put his head in the door and announced, "Team on the field in two minutes." Still, Rockne. With 30 seconds to go, he said, "The Lord gave you a body that can stand anything. It's your mind you have to convince."

"Winning is not everything. It is the only thing."

"Fatigue makes cowards out of us."

"The Lord gave you a body that can stand anything. It's your mind you have to convince."

Commissioners probing

WESLACO, Texas (AP) — State legislators want to hear answers Jan. 10 from officials of the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission about why they nixed plans for a gasohol plant in Santa Rosa.

The Senate Interim Study Committee on Gasohol will conduct a hearing on the issue and expects to question commission director Sherman McBeth. McBeth did not attend a November hearing in Austin on the scuttled plant.

At that time, the state liquor lobby was accused of using its influence with the commission to block the plant.

Area sugar cane growers support such a plant to produce alcohol that can be blended with gasoline for fuel.

Midwest solvents of Atchison, Kan., planned to build the plant with $10 million guaranteed federal loan but backed out after saying it received "many conflicting rulings" by the ABC.

Butane practice deadly

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A Texas Railroad Commission official said Monday Texans filling their butane tanks with high-pressure propane may be inviting serious injury or death.

Guy Mathews, director of the liquefied petroleum gas division, said some consumers have switched to propane because of rising butane costs.

Mathews warned butane tanks are not made to handle the high-pressure propane.

"If properly handled, both fuels are safe. But, injecting propane into a butane tank is an invitation to disaster, if not death," he said.

Mathews said a recent investigation in Northeast Texas found propane stored in butane containers.

The investigation also found residential gas systems filled through improperly buried lines. Investigators also found containers too close to homes and improperly repaired leaks.

Mathews also warned homeowners to check vents on their systems. Driving rain and ice can clog and back up the vents, Mathews said.

He said 42 Texas homes were destroyed by fire last year by such blockages.

El Paso judge suspended

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — An El Paso municipal judge, named in a federal bribery indictment, has been suspended indefinitely by the State Commission on Judicial Conduct.

Glen Sutherland allegedly accepted bribes "for the purpose of influencing his official behavior," the commission said.

Sutherland was suspended without pay pending further commission action. He was indicted on Dec. 18 along with two other men.

The three-count indictment alleged 37 overt acts in violation of federal law.

STANTON — A consideration of an ordinance regulating the operation and location of oil and gas wells within the corporate city limits will be discussed at the regular meeting of the Stanton City Council, in the Council Chamber at the City Hall, Wednesday, 7:30 p.m.

Other business to be discussed are:

—Consideration of a resolution authorizing the city administration secretary to advertise for bids for the purchase or lease-purchase of new sanitation department equipment.

—Consideration of a request from Josephine Jones, executive director of the Stanton Housing Authority for payment of a charge by Pioneer National Gas Company for new line construction to Housing Authority units.

—Consideration of an ordinance regulating weed, tall grass, rubbish, junk, brush or any other unsightly objectionable or unsanitary matter of whatever nature on lots or premises within the city limits.

—Discussion of the progress of the program to remove dilapidated structures and junk cars from the city.

—Consideration of a claim of $25 by Hilario Urbina against the city.

Peanuts from Gorman, Weather Tex., Russia bound

AUSTIN — Fifteen hundred metric tons of Texas peanuts (that's 3,307,500 pounds) will soon be arriving in Russia, Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown has announced.

Birdsong Peanuts of Gorman made the sale and has completed a shipment of over two million pounds. The remaining tonnage is expected to be shipped soon.

In order for the peanuts to be accepted in Russia, phytosanitary certificates had to be issued by the Texas Department of Agriculture. Inspectors check the shipment for diseases and pests and certify the product to be free of both.

"This is a service we provide on exports such as seed, nursery products, fruits and vegetables, cotton, and other products," Brown said. "There are several thousand shipments checked by the Department each year.

"Every country and every commodity has different requirements. Some countries may require certification that a shipment is free of a specific disease or pest," Brown said. "Without these certificates, the shipments wouldn't move.

"We want to provide the most efficient service we can to exporters. Last year the U.S. farm exports rose 4 percent over 1978, up to 137 million metric tons. The $32 billion in export receipts improved the country's balance of trade by 18 percent.

"This peanut shipment is a large one for Texas. Exports are important to the economy of the nation and they are certainly important to peanut growers in the state," Brown said. "We hope that this shipment will be followed by many more."

Cool, sunny weather prevails into 80's

By the Associated Press

Cool, sunny weather prevailed over most of Texas on the last day of the 1970s.

Forecasters said the good weather was expected to continue New Year's Day.

A few scattered clouds drifted over parts of South Texas and the Edwards Plateau.

At 1 p.m., readings were mostly in the 40s and 50s, ranging from 43 at Amarillo to 60 in San Antonio.

WEATHER FORECAST — The National Weather Service predicted flurries today over much of Idaho and adjacent areas and over eastern Michigan. Showers were expected over western Oregon and Washington and in parts of Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York.

Security Council okays U.S. resolution Monday

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The Security Council approved a U.S. resolution Monday threatening economic sanctions against Iran unless American hostages in Tehran are freed by Monday.

The resolution — which says the Security Council "deplores the continued detention" of the hostages — was approved by a vote of 11-0. The Soviet Union and its ally Czechoslovakia abstained, as did Bangladesh and Kuwait, two overwhelmingly-Moslem countries.

A half hour after the vote, which gave Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim a mandate to negotiate the hostages' release, the Austrian diplomat left for Paris enroute to Iran.

Waldheim, who is expected to arrive in Tehran Tuesday afternoon aboard a U.N.-chartered plane, said before leaving: "There is enough reason to hope that the new year will bring the release of the hostages."

Speaking with reporters as he left his apartment, Waldheim said he was "very encouraged" by some reports that he will be able to see Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, U.N. diplomats believe Khomeini holds the key to releasing the hostages.

But Waldheim cautioned: "This mission will not solve the whole problem."

Waldheim has been trying to end the U.S.-Iranian crisis under a resolution the council adopted unanimously on Dec. 4 calling for release of the hostages, held at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran since Nov. 4.

Their freedom has also been called for by the U.N. judicial organ, the International Court of Justice.

The new resolution, submitted Sunday after Waldheim's trip was announced, requests that Waldheim "intensify his efforts" to gain the hostages' release and "in this connection takes note of his readiness to go personally to Iran." Shortly before the vote, it was amended by the United States to say the council "deplores" rather than "condemns" the hostage situation, language used in the past.

The resolution says the council agrees to meet Jan. 7, next Monday, "in order to review the situation and in the event of non-compliance with this resolution, to adopt effective measures under Articles 39 and 41" of the U.N. Charter.

Ezell will speak here

State Rep. Mike Ezell of Snyder will return to Big Spring Jan. 15 for a speaking engagement before the Permian Basin Medical Society.

Ezell, who represents Howard County in the State Legislature, has scheduled three other public appearances during the first half of the month. They include:

Jan. 8 — Executive committee meeting of the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation Board in Austin.

Jan. 9 — Permian Basin Council of Governments, Dawson County Community Center in Lamesa.

Jan. 10-11 — HEW Contractor's Meeting, Coolfront Center, Berkel Springs, Va.

Khomeini has far greater worries

There was method in the madness of the Ayatollah Khomeini when he gave his blessings to the siege of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. They say that if the students had not moved in to take hostages of the Americans who worked there, Khomeini would have provoked trouble with the U.S. with some other confrontation.

Khomeini has often referred to the U.S. as 'satanic,' its government as insidious and imperialistic.

IN TRUTH, KHOMEINI and what passes for the Iranian government has far greater worries than America. The Iraqi, with bulging military muscle, are sitting on the Iranian border waiting for a signal to invade. In fact, the Iraqi have already made an incursion inside Iranian borders. Such raids have long been common between two very unfriendly neighbors.

The Iranians recently amended their constitution in order to make Khomeini leader-for-life. There's only one thing wrong. A lot of people didn't like the edict, so the Ayatollah is having his problems imposing his will upon the recalcitrants.

In Tabriz, for instance, ethnic Turks have rallied behind Khomeini's rival, the Ayatollah Shariat-madari. As many as half a million turned out for a rally demanding greater autonomy for their province of Azerbaijan.

Elsewhere, the Kurds are as restless as ever, and the military establishment, which might be expected to keep the lid on, has been decimated by executions of the shah's old officers and is currently in a state of chaos.

ON TOP OF EVERYTHING else, the Iranians must also exercise maximum precaution in dealing with their new-found friend, the Soviet Union. With Russia due to become a net importer of oil in the not too distant future, the Russian embrace could easily become all too tight.

The unemployment rate in Iran is in the millions and going higher, with no relief in sight.

All things considered then, the outlook for revolutionary Iran is anything but promising. With internal dissension and external aggression confronting him, the Ayatollah Khomeini might well decide that a confrontation with the United States is not exactly what the doctor ordered — if he were a rational human being. Sadly, the evidence in hand thus far all argues in the opposite direction.

Happy New Year and New Decade! It hardly seems as though one year has passed, much less ten! Not that I remember that much about the events that changed the course of history ten years ago, but it really doesn't seem as though I have experienced an entire decade, of which I can recall most of the years.

Ten years ago I was worried about graduating into high school and the changes it would bring. (Was that really ten long years ago?). I thought I had really hit the big times when I entered high school. Little did I know at the time that I was just a little nobody getting in the upperclassman's way.

THERE WERE TOO many other things like boys, football, spirit contests, clubs and homework, to pay any attention to what was going on in the outside world. I had to learn about them in my freshman history course in college.

And, my senior year in high school was filled with decisions about what career to pursue, what college to attend, how to finance college and worrying about the change from high school to college in terms of atmosphere. And, as far as I can tell, the decisions I made then were good because I came out liking the college, the field of study and my career.

Of course, while in high school, not everything escaped me. I do remember Watergate, the ending of the Vietnam War, the Patricia Hearst ordeal and all the talk about the future of energy. Not bad for a kid only interested in the frivolities of life.

But then came college. I was like a little child who had lost her mother in a large shopping center on my first day of classes at Texas A&M. The place was so big and I didn't know where any of my classrooms were. Also I didn't have anybody in any of my classes that I knew. There were enough people walking around on the campus to have created my home town five times over.

BUT WITH THE help of a friend, I found my way to classes, made new friends and buckled down to the somewhat harder academia. And, as each of the four years passed, I made so many new and good friends that I was somewhat sad to have to leave them all. But I didn't want to become a professional student and neither did they. So, we went our separate ways and I entered a new and challenging environment — a career woman, four hundred miles from friends and family.

I survived the move and met the challenge. I have made a new sphere of friends and acquaintances and succeeded (I hope) as a journalist and as a person.

The past ten years have held lots of changes for me and a lot of growing up. So far, the next ten years look just as promising. I wonder what I will be doing, where I will be living and what events will be taking precedence when 1990 rolls around?

Lots of changes

Jack Anderson,

WASHINGTON — Taking advantage of the traditional, if unwritten, provision of the First Amendment that gives newspaper columnists the privilege of offering unsolicited advice to presidents, I'd like to suggest a list of New Year's resolutions for Jimmy Carter to follow in 1980. (My own resolutions are, of course, a closely held secret.) Here are some of the things I wish the president would do:

Resist the temptation to put political considerations above statesmanship in an election year. It may drive the campaign managers up the wall, but it might just turn out to be persuasive to the voters. And it would be a refreshing contrast to the behavior of your opponents.

TRY TAKING THE public into your confidence on vital issues that affect every American, such as foreign policy. Remember that you were elected as a man of the people, an outsider who would bring a fresh approach to the nation's problems. Every time you descend to us and imply that government is too complicated for the ordinary citizen to understand, you sound like Richard Nixon.

Make a choice between pious public pronouncements of high moral rectitude and stubborn loyalty to unsavory intimates. If you need these characters around, okay. But then lay off the preaching.

Tune out Zbigniew Brzezinski once in a while. Your defense of human rights looks hypocritical when such Cold War revivalists maneuver the United States into support of repressive dictators whose only virtue is anti-communism.

While you're at it, curbing your family's antics. The voters elected you, not your wife, your brother or your mother. If you rely on Rosalynn's advice, that's one thing, but don't let the impression get out that you're just a hapless Dagwood Bumstead. If you could prevail on Miss Lillian to limit her public pronouncements to once a year — say on Mother's Day — it would be a big help.

GET TOUGHER with Congress on the energy crisis. They may be scared of Big Oil, but there's no reason for you to be. Take your case to the people — gasoline lines and staggering fuel prices have put Americans in a receptive mood.

Ignore whoever persuaded you that a president should be an Olympic-caliber athlete. No one expects this of a chief executive; at 55, you should have risen above such boyish fantasies. Leave the heavy-duty jogging to others.

Broaden the range of your advisers. Solicit the views of community leaders from every spectrum of American life, as you did at Camp David — and listen to what they tell you. Let your Cabinet members run their departments as you promised you would, and save your Georgia joy boys for political planning and social relaxation.

While you're getting tougher with Congress, recognize that it's a co-equal branch of government, with members whose viewpoints need start from a different perspective. Holier-than-thou attitudes turn most congressmen off.

DON'T GET suckered into any more rash international confrontations because of pressure from self-interested manipulators. The non-crisis over Soviet troops in Cuba was merely a harmless fiasco that made you look foolish. The real crisis in Tehran could have been avoided if you had heeded warnings from the professionals about the danger of letting the shah into this country.

Finally, don't be dismayed or discouraged by criticism from us in the press. Always remember, we're right behind you... digging, digging, digging.

BOMB BREAKTHROUGH?: Hit-and-run terrorists may not have such an easy time of it in the 1980s. The explosives they use could contain tiny little "identification tags" the size of grains of sand, with which investigators can trace a bomb's ingredients back to the purchaser.

This is the gist of a hush-hush congressional report due out shortly on the feasibility of such tagging of non-military explosives. The tagging appears to be safe, the report says, and the process not as costly as the munitions lobby, which is opposed to the program, has been claiming. The report states that more data is needed for an absolute determination of the program's practicality, however.

The study was requested seven months ago by Sens. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., chairman of the Senate Government Affairs Committee, Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., and Ted Stevens, R-Alaska.

The explosive makers opposed the idea, claiming that the tiny "tags" would be unrecoverable at the site of a bomb blast. But the telltale particles sparkle and glisten when exposed to black-light scanners — as was proven in a case where the experimental i.d. tags enabled authorities to trace the explosive in a bomb back to the factory and ultimately to the man who bought the deadly stuff.

Why holiday?

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — It is ironic that although we celebrate New Year's Day with such joy, no one knows how it was started or who was responsible for it.

This is the story, and I'm sticking to it, until someone can prove me wrong.

ABOUT 35,000 B.C. there was a tribe of cave people who lived in what is now France. Although they knew the difference between day and night, they had no idea of what a year was. To them it was an eternity. On his deathbed, a man might say, "Well, it's been a good year," meaning the entire span of his life.

But one day (WE know it was January 1st — but THEY didn't know it) a man named Stone woke up with a tremendous headache and could hardly talk.

Stone's wife, Stick, said "Well, you certainly made a fool of yourself last night."

"You put an iron on your head, took off your bearskin and danced all night with Ladle."

"I don't remember a thing. It must have been something I drank. What did you put in the boar soup?"

"Don't give me that. I saw you drinking from the clay bowl of rotten grapes that was standing outside for the last six months."

"I was thirsty and I thought it came from the Perrier spring."

"Well, what do I tell the people in the cave about your behavior last night?"

"Tell them I was celebrating the New Year."

"Wat do you mean 'New Year'?"

THE STRANGE name of a new holiday I just made up. Why should we spend all our lives with just one year? If we had a new year every 365 days we could all drink rotten grape juice the night before and put on silly hats made of leaves, and say next year will be better and then feel terrible the next day.

"But why every 365 days?"

"It's just a figure I came up with. It could be 220 days if you want."

"And I'm supposed to tell everyone in the cave that that is what you were doing?"

"I don't care what you tell them. I don't want to talk to any of them today — not with this headache. By the way, if you're going outside bring me a piece of ice."

In order to save face Stick told everyone in the cave that Stone had been celebrating the New Year, except for Ladle to whom she wasn't speaking. The men who had nothing to do that day except make paintings on the walls and drag wood in for the fires thought it was a great idea to have a holiday and congratulated Stone for thinking of it. Now they didn't have to die to decide whether it was a good year or not.

Other caves heard about it and the next year on the night before New Year, they decorated their walls with goats' udders, and each cave vied to see who could make the rottenest grape juice. One enterprising caveman made everyone pay a piece of coal to get into his cave, and this became the first cover charge in the history of mankind.

One small footnote: About two years after the Cro-Magnon people began to celebrate New Year, a group of men started throwing dried belly of pig around on the afternoon of New Year's Day.

The women became very angry and said, "What are you men doing?"

They didn't have an answer until one of them saw Ladle walking by with a bowl of roses.

"We're playing for Ladle's Rose Bowl," one of them jokingly said.

And that joke was the thing that finally made New Year's Day official.

Hormones not sole answer to Menopause

Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I hope you have the courage to print this letter. I'm wondering how many women are existing in a living hell called menopause with no apparent help?

After seeing many doctors (five to be exact) and being told to do differently by all of them, I wonder. The awful symptoms are there — depression, crying, constant nausea, chills, loss of appetite, frequent urination, dry mouth, etc. I've had EKGs, blood tests and urinalysis, and at quite an expense. My blood pressure rises slightly from time to time when I am extremely nervous. The tests all show normal. I am presently taking hormones and would certainly appreciate some comment by you on that subject. I am 48 and have one ovary left after my hysterectomy 18 years ago. — B.A.

Of the host of symptoms ascribed to menopause, only two respond well to female hormone supplements. These are the flushing and vaginal membrane changes (thinning). The other symptoms associated with menopause are so varied and individualistic that treatment for them must be on a 1-to-1 basis.

I don't know, nor can I hazard a guess about whether all your symptoms can be blamed on menopause alone. Psychological symptoms, like depression, may occur at the time of menopause, but they should not persist for the length of time or to the degree you speak of.

You need a frank discussion with your doctor regarding the desirability of some psychological help, which might be in order for you. Your letter paints a picture of a high-strung personality, and that can contribute to many of the symptoms you may be laying at the doorstep of menopause. If you want to read more on the subject, see the booklet, "Make Menopause Easier." If you want a copy you can order it by mailing 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me care of the Big Spring Herald.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am a senior citizen in my 70s and I swim as often as I can for the exercise in our condominium pool. I have trouble with ringing ears. When I finish swimming I shower and make a point of washing out my ears in hopes of loosening some of the wax inside. But none seems to come out. Can you suggest anything? — B.E.C.

There's a good chance that the ear ringing results from the swimming. I suggest you try earplugs while swimming and further, that you avoid getting the hot shower stream in your ears.

Swimming is fine exercise, especially for elderly persons who might be limited in mobility. I'd hate to see you have to give that up, especially since your pool is so handy.

It's dangerous and next to impossible to remove wax from your ears by yourself. Heat from your shower will not melt the wax.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have a problem, and that is freckles. I am 15 and have had them for seven years now. I have heard that lemon juice might make them disappear. Will this work? How do freckles begin anyway? Will they disappear as I get older. I haven't touched them yet. I hope you can help. — Miss G.B.

The medical name for freckles is "ephelides." Freckles is just as good. Freckles originate when granules of skin pigment become exposed to certain sun rays. They often fade during the winter and with age.

Freckles not brought on by sunlight this way are called lentigines. Again, freckles is just as good a name. These kind of freckles remain permanently. They are harmless.

Since both kinds are usually widespread it is very difficult to remove them. For a small patch here or a bothersome one there, careful application of a chemical (phenol) by a doctor can be tried. The lemon juice treatment I had not heard of.

Why are you trying to get rid of them? Freckles are not so very difficult to get to love. I like them. A

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: Life has been very cruel to me. I have had a lot of troubles but the worst has been the way my son and daughter have abandoned me and left me completely alone. How can God help me? — N.J.

DEAR N.J.: I am sorry that you have had so much difficulty in life, whatever the reasons may be. Now the important thing is to do what you can to discover how your life can be useful and filled with meaning. I believe that can be your experience as you turn to God.

First, I think you need to face the bitterness in your life, realize that it is wrong and will continue to keep you unhappy. As long as you are dwelling on what has gone wrong in your life, you will never be able to be happy in any lasting sense. The Bible says, "Get rid of all bitterness, rage and anger" (Ephesians 4:31). It also warns us, "See to it... that no bitter root grows up to cause trouble and defile many" (Hebrews 12:15). God can take away the bitterness you feel by replacing it with peace and love as you turn to Him.

The real answer to your feelings is to discover that God loves you and has not abandoned you. Your letter suggests that you have never paid much attention to God, but it is never too late to turn to Him and seek His forgiveness and help. Your greatest problem is your sin, which separates you from God. But Christ died on the cross to take away your sin. By turning to Him in faith and repentance you can know that you are God's child. I urge you to put your life in the hands of Christ — not just that He might solve your problem, but that He would become your master and Lord every day. He wants to become the center of your life.

Then let your children know that you have given your life to Christ. If there have been harsh words between you in the past, ask for their forgiveness. Pray for them, that they also might come to know Christ. Also, know that you are not alone when you become a Christian. Christ is with you and you also have many brothers and sisters in the faith — other Christians who want to help you grow in your relation to Christ.

Soviet southward urge long-felt

MOSCOW (AP) — The new Soviet involvement in Afghanistan is a variation on a theme written centuries ago when the rulers of imperial Russia looked longingly to the south and their frontiers with Turkey, Iran and Afghanistan.

In late 17th-century Russia, in the days of Peter the Great, the Russian Empire was looking for an outlet to warm southern seas and trade with the Orient.

Peter fought great battles with the Ottoman Turks. By the early 19th century his successors were engaged in major disputes with the British Empire, which held sway in two of Russia's southern neighbors — Persia (modern-day Iran) and Afghanistan. Afghanistan was highly prized by the Russian czars as a path into India's rich bazaars.

But India was embraced by the British and their far-flung empire. Tensions over Afghanistan continued to mount in the mid-19th century as Czar Nicholas I was consolidating the Russian Empire in Central Asia.

As his armies neared Afghanistan in 1855, the last year of his reign, British-Russian tensions reached a peak. Delicate diplomatic maneuvers averted a full-scale confrontation over the Afghan-Iranian region, but continued Russian designs on the area kept tensions high.

The two empires settled their dispute in 1907 when Britain ceded much of Iran to Moscow's control, while extracting a promise that Russia considered Afghanistan "outside its sphere of influence."

Afghanistan continued to serve as a buffer between the Russian and British empires until the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution. From then on, Afghan socialists began finding refuge in the Soviet Union.

After World War II and with Nikita S. Khrushchev's climb to power in the mid-1960s, the Soviets embarked on a new course — trying to win friends in the non-aligned Third World with economic aid. Afghanistan was at the top of the list.

The Soviet attentions toward Afghanistan paid few dividends until Mohammad Daoud toppled the monarchy in a 1973 coup. Within a month the Soviets signed more than 30 aid agreements with the new Afghan regime.

Soviet involvement in Afghanistan escalated sharply in April 1978 when staunchly pro-Soviet Nur Mohammad Taraki grabbed power from Daoud.

Taraki received substantial Soviet support, but he was ousted by his prime minister, Hafizullah Amin, last September. The Amin regime was publicly endorsed by Moscow but the Soviets reportedly lost faith in it because of its lack of success against anti-communist guerrillas.

About a month ago the Soviets began massing combat troops on the Afghan border. On Christmas Day they started moving into Afghanistan in large numbers, and by Dec. 27 the Amin government had been toppled and he was executed.

COTTON MAIDS — Melissa Mock (left), daughter of an Altus, Okla., cotton farmer, was chosen 1980 Maid of Cotton in Memphis the past weekend. First runner-up was Dulce Stephania Kingsman of Atlanta (center) and Nan Andrews of Marianna Ark. (right). Miss Mock will spend the next year representing the American cotton industry. Her first official appearance will be at Tuesday's Cotton Bowl parade in Dallas.

Every state experiences tornado during 1970s

Every state in the union had at least one tornado in the 1970s, but Texas had three of the worst and had twice as many as any other state, according to statistics released by the National Weather Service.

Texas' third killer tornado of the past decade — the one which devastated the Wichita Falls-Vernon area last April — followed nine years behind the two others which claimed lives in the Lone Star State.

The state's first major tornado of the 1970s hit on April 18, 1970 at Clarendon, killing 16, many of them in trailer homes beside Greenbelt Reservoir.

Then, less than a month later on May 11, 1970, came the tornado that tore up much of downtown Lubbock and killed 26. It triggered a downtown revitalization program that resulted in the bulldozing of a low-income residential area and replacing it with a convention-center complex.

The tornado that swept through North Texas and southern Oklahoma last April 10 killed 42 in Wichita Falls, 11 in Vernon and 3 in Lawton, Okla.

From 1970 through 1979, there were 8,560 tornadoes nationwide, and Texas had more than a sixth of them. Texas' 1,425 tornadoes over the 10-year period was almost as much as the next three states combined — Florida 658, Oklahoma 428 and Nebraska 381.

But Texas was runner-up to Mississippi to tornado deaths. Of the 986 persons killed in twisters, Mississippi had 145, Texas 137 and Alabama 121.

"By far the worst tornado disaster of the decade occurred on April 3-4, 1974," said Fred Ostby, acting director of the national severe storms forecasting center in Kansas City.

WE ALWAYS ASK: WHAT ELSE CAN WE DO TO HELP?

At Nalley-Pickle Funeral Home, we know that we are helping families when they simply cannot help themselves. That's why we are ever alert to finding new ways to do more than merely what is required, or even expected, to ease the burden of those left behind.

"What else can we do to help?" is the philosophy that guides us each time we are privileged to serve.

Inflation hits your electric bill just as hard as it does your grocery bill.

Every time you go to the grocery store you can see what inflation's doing to your food bill. But because you don't buy electricity by the can, you probably don't realize how inflation affects the cost of electricity.

Fuel costs are up, particularly natural gas. Equipment costs are up. Power lines, transformers and poles cost us more every day. Just like milk costs you more every day.

The millions of dollars we must borrow to build plants to ensure your electricity needs in the future are costing us more.

The cost of building these plants is higher, too, because of inflation. And because of the time and money it takes to comply with an ever-increasing number of government regulations. The longer it takes to build, the more inflation takes its toll.

Inflation, overregulation and rising fuel costs are all making your electricity cost you more. But by using electricity wisely you can do your part in keeping that cost down in your home.

At Texas Electric, we want you to know what you're paying for.

Schlitz plans major campaign to back United Cerebral Palsy

United Cerebral Palsy (UCP) will get a nationwide boost in its annual fund-raising drive as Jos. Schlitz Brewing Company and its wholesalers again conduct a major campaign to help the fight against cerebral palsy. Schlitz is coordinating a program to increase awareness of a UCP effort that will culminate with the "Weekend with the Stars Teletthon for Cerebral Palsy" on Jan. 12-13. Research by UCP has led to a 50 percent reduction in the number of children born with cerebral palsy and has dramatically improved the lifestyles of persons who have the condition, according to Allin W. Proudfoot, Schlitz executive vice president — marketing. He has been a member of the UCP national advisory board for two and a half years. "It's very fulfilling to see the positive results of UCP's work. Nearly three-quarters of a million American families are affected personally and directly by cerebral palsy, and UCP is dedicated to providing help and hope to all of them," Proudfoot said. Last year Schlitz was a major sponsor of UCP's initial national fund-raising telethon and, with Schlitz wholesalers, helped raise $170,000. Schlitz will also sponsor the second annual telethon and hopes, again with the help of its nearly 900 independent wholesalers, to raise a million dollars. As a start, 50,000 collection canisters, accompanied by Schlitz material supporting UCP's effort, are going into retail stores across the country. "If shoppers drop only pennies into the canisters, they will add up to a small fortune for UCP," Proudfoot said. Schlitz's UCP material carries a photo of the UCP poster child and John Ritter, star of ABC-TV's "Three's Company" and host of both the past and upcoming UCP telethons.

A Schlitz "Weekend With the Stars Sweepstakes" intended to increase awareness of UCP and to encourage further donations, will take place in all states where permitted by law. Three grand-prize winners will receive trips for two to Los Angeles, New York or Las Vegas, from which segments of the UCP national telethon will originate.

Virgin, 55, Needs Bridal-Path Guide

DEAR ABBY: I am a 55-year old woman, about to be married for the first time to a man who lost his wife last year. (He is 58.) We have a lot in common. In fact, we are both ministers of the same church.

I need someone to fill me in on a few things so I won't be so dumb on my wedding night. I don't have a mother or sister or anyone I can ask. As you can guess, I am a virgin, having saved myself for the man I was to marry.

Should I undress in front of him? I read in a novel once that a man loves to undress his bride. (It's an old novel; do you suppose the idea is outdated, too?) Also, do you think he would laugh if I asked for total darkness at first? I would just die with the lights on. Also, is it possible to get pregnant at my age? We've never discussed it, but I'm sure we don't want any children at our ages.

Any help you can give me will be appreciated. I hope you won't think my questions foolish. I'll sign my name, but don't use it.

ANONYMOUS IN CANADA

DEAR ANONYMOUS: First, see a physician and ask him if you can get pregnant. (If he says, "Maybe," don't take chances — take precautions!) As for the undressing, lights on or off, just let your husband take the lead, and if you're embarrassed, let him know it.

Problems? You'll feel better if you get them off your chest. For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. Please enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Hot tea could be a hazard

WILMINGTON, Mass. — Special precautions should be taken when brewing tea to prevent severe burns and scars which may last a lifetime, Daniel J. Pender, MD, Wilmington Regional Health Center writes in a letter to the editor of The New England Journal of Medicine.

Dr. Pender suggests that the tea be brewed in a safely placed pot where it might cool for a while before being poured into a teacup. "This precaution may not reduce the number of spills," he writes, "but it should reduce the incidence of third-degree burns and deformities in children."

"Tea, prepared with boiling water and allowed to steep in a cup undiluted, is probably the hottest drink served in most households," Dr. Pender states. Coffee and cocoa are generally not served boiling and are frequently cooled with milk or cream.

Help for the childless

NEW YORK, N.Y. — The chance of finding a solution to an infertility problem is now over 50 percent and rising, according to the authors of We Want To Have A Baby, a new book published by E. P. Dutton in both cloth and paperback. Authors James T. Howard, Jr., MD and Dodi Schultz describe the complex process of conception in "The Couple's Complete Guide To Overcoming Infertility" (sub-title and explain what can go amiss. They provide information on possible factors within the control of the couple involved, and recent medical findings that may help even those who believe they have had "all the tests."

A complete checklist of examinations and tests is provided, and a full range of "remedies" now available with pros, cons, rates of success, and possible alternatives. It is estimated that one in seven couples hoping to have children experience a difficulty.

Free pamphlets give you all the facts

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

Teens: I'm constantly on the lookout for information that is useful and informative. Very recently I came upon a group of pamphlets that are free and are chock-full of information. The pamphlets are distributed by the Addiction Research Foundation, 33 Russell Street, Toronto, Ontario, Canada M5S-2S1 and are entitled "Facts About..."

The series includes "Facts About LSD," "PCP," "Cannabis (marijuana)," "Hallucinogens," "Amphetamines," "Aerosols," "Barbiturates," "Tobacco" and "Tranquillizers."

The pamphlets give a background of the drugs, the short-term and long-term effects, who uses the drugs and the legal ramifications of each drug.

If you want the facts, write to the foundation and request one or all of the pamphlets. So you won't lose this address, do it today!

Dr. Wallace: I know that there is a very slight chance that this will be printed but I'll feel better just putting this in writing.

My mom and I have difficulty communicating. She tells me to express myself, but when I talk to her we get into an argument.

Many times when I ask her to explain something she ends up saying "You will do it my way because I said so. And don't forget, I'm the boss."

To prove her point, she called the lady I baby-sit for and told her that I couldn't make it that day. Do you think this is right?

Mother also insists that I will not be allowed to date or drive a car until I am 18. I'm now 15. Your thoughts please.—Gina, Merced, Calif.

Gina: It's true that parents are the boss and teens should do as they are asked, but parents have the responsibility of setting an example and by showing love and patience.

I personally think the "because I said so" approach by parents is weak. Teens deserve an explanation, but an argument should never be the result of that explanation.

Son's birth announced

Mr. and Mrs. Luther Howard Britton II, 202 Austin, announce the birth of their first child, Luther Howard III, at Malone-Hogan Hospital.

The infant made his debut Dec. 24 at 10:20 a.m. weighing 9 pounds 3 ounces. He measured 20 inches in length.

Maternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Paul N. Hodges, 1409 Oriole. Mr. and Mrs. Luther Howard Britton, Hobbs, N.M., are the paternal grandparents.

Great-grandparents include Minnie Moore, Brinkley, Ark.; Helen Hodges, Flagstaff, Ariz.; and Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Thornhill, Big Spring.

Dr. Wallace: I am 16 and have a handsome, sweet, kind and almost perfect boyfriend. He is 20 and is a college sophomore and is planning to be a physician. When I graduate from high

Sports in the 70s: A time for revolution

Athletes gain financial success by utilizing capitalist system

By The Associated Press

Two hundred years after the American Revolution, the American athlete has won his freedom. Sports and its financial structure will never be the same.

The 1970s was a decade of revolution in sports. Players, formerly restricted to one prospective employer, were finally able to utilize the capitalist system and sell themselves to the highest bidder.

And no group of athletes benefitted more than baseball players, who turned the tables on their conservative owners via a landmark arbitration decision.

Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Baseball Players Association, and Dick Moss, the union's lawyer, engineered the attack against the reserve system, rules that gave ownership sole control over a player's destiny.

Arbitrator Peter Seitz, ruling in 1975 in the famous Messersmith-McNally case, said that players were free one year after their contracts expired. This was contrary to the owners' interpretation that said a player was bound to one team until he was cut or traded.

In the four years of free agency, many stars have utilized the new system and many have benefitted from its spectre.

After becoming free agents, Nolan Ryan signed a three-year, $3 million contract with Texas, Reggie Jackson signed a five-year, $2.9 million contract with the New York Yankees and hustling Pete Rose signed a four-year, $3.2 million contract with Philadelphia.

Then again, some teams opted to pay their stars top dollar in order to keep them from testing the free-agent market. Rod Carew (California), Dave Parker (Pittsburgh) and George Foster (Cincinnati) each signed long-term contracts for $800,000-a-year-to stay home.

The two dominant teams of the 70s — the Oakland A's and the New York Yankees — took different positions on free agency. The A's owned by pennypinching Charles O. Finley, won three straight world championships (1972-74) but were short of many of their star players by the new system. The Yankees, owned by the ambitious George Steinbrenner, won successive World Series titles in 1977-78 because of the presence of several big-name free agents on their roster.

Baseball's average salary is now over $100,000, which puts it on the same level as basketball. Hockey and basketball players, with more restrictive escape routes, were able to use new, competing leagues as leverage in salary negotiations.

The real or threatened exodus to the American Basketball Association or World Hockey Association skyrocketed salaries in the National Basketball Association and the National Hockey League.

Because of the greater cost of running franchises, the expansion boom of the 1960s stopped, giving way to the contraction of the 1970s. Except for the growth of the North American Soccer League, the direction was definitely toward consolidation. Basketball's two leagues joined in 1976 and hockey merged in 1979.

But the owners gained a lucrative new ally to help defray some of their higher costs — television. More than anything else, TV created the sports boom of the '70s. Its world-wide exposure made instant heroes and heroines out of Olympic stars. Mark Spitz won seven swimming gold medals in 1972; Bruce Jenner took the decathlon gold four years later. Olga Korbut, the gymnastic darling of the '72 Games in Munich, was succeeded by Nadia Comaneci in Montreal.

And ABC, which became the leader in international sports broadcasts, turned its cameras away from the Games to cover the killing of 13 Israeli athletes by Arab terrorists in Munich.

ABC also made the first breakthrough into prime television for team sports with its highly rated "Monday Night Football." Post-season and then regular season baseball followed suit, but pro football benefitted the most from TV. Watching football on Sundays and Monday nights became a national ritual. So did the annual Super Bowl, which was dominated by the Pittsburgh Steelers, Dallas Cowboys, Miami Dolphins and Minnesota Vikings during the decade.

Commissioner Pete Rozelle worked out an incredible four-year contract with all three networks that will net each team $5.2 million a year for the life of the agreement.

The man who profited the most from TV was Muhammad Ali, the most visible sports figure of the decade, who won the heavyweight title twice — for a record total of three times — and fought three classic battles with Joe Frazier in the '70s. Ali, with the help of TV and bankrolling countries like Zaire, The Philippines and Malaysia, made the multi-million dollar heavyweight title fight commonplace.

After being stripped of the heavyweight crown for refusing induction into the army, Ali stopped George Foreman in Zaire in 1974. Then the self-proclaimed "Greatest" avenged his defeat to Leon Spinks with a 15-round decision in 1978, Ali's last bout before retiring.

Boxing was not the only individual sport to prosper in the '70s. Tennis and golf boomed, with multi-million dollar tours backed by commercial sponsors and TV.

Billie Jean King raised the equal rights banner to gain top purses for the women just about the time Chris Evert began winning all the top tournaments. Evert's former fiancé, Jimmy Connors, was equally dominating in the mid-70s before Bjorn Borg became the No. 1 male player, winning an unprecedented four straight Wimbledon crowns.

In golf, Jack Nicklaus continued to build on his record haul of victories in the Big Four major tournaments, although Tom Watson became the dominant player in the last half of the decade.

And, oh yes, there was one more individual sport that had a big impact — possibly the greatest — on the 1970s since it affected athlete and non-athlete alike. A running boom swept the country, helping firm America's midsection and, possibly, pointing up a trend for the '80s of more participation in sports and less watching.

DON MAYNARD SET NFL PASS RECEIVING RECORD IN 1972 — Don Maynard of the New York Jets, shown here catching a touchdown pass against the Baltimore Colts in 1972, established new NFL records for pass receiving during the 1972 season. Maynard caught 633 passes for 11,834 yards and 88 touchdowns during his sparkling career to set the career NFL record for receiving. After he retired, Washington Redskins Charley Taylor took over the career lead in receptions with 649, but Maynard still holds the records today for most yards receiving and the most touchdown receptions. Maynard, a key figure in the Jets stunning yard of 1968 that was capped by a 16-7 upset of the Baltimore Colts in the Super Bowl, played his high school football in Colorado City.

Sugar, Rose Bowls the main affairs

National title decided today

By The Associated Press

There may be a lot of silling on Tuesday as the nation's top college football teams, under the watchful eye of the television cameras and the pollsters, not only go out to win, but go out to win big in the New Year's Day bowl games.

Second-ranked Alabama meets No. 6 Arkansas (10-1) in the Sugar Bowl at 2 p.m. EST on ABC, kicking off the final jockeying for the national championship.

Alabama, led by quarterback Steadman Shealy and its rugged defense, is favored by 9½ points. A victory — big or small — may be enough for the 11-0 Crimson Tide to win the national title for the second year in a row.

Then again, it might not be since Ohio State, also 11-0, pulled ahead of Alabama by a mere 1½ points to occupy the No. 1 spot in The Associated Press' final regular season poll early in December. An impressive victory by Ohio State over No. 3 Southern California (10-0-1) in the Rose Bowl, or by Southern Cal over Ohio State, for that matter, might crown either of these teams champion.

Ohio State, which is guided through the air by quarterback Art Schlichter, is a 7½-point underdog against the Trojans and their Heisman Trophy-winning tailback, Charles White.

The Rose Bowl game kicks off at 5 p.m. EST on NBC, so Ohio State and Southern Cal will know where each stands. Both these teams can't lose, so one will probably capture the national title should Alabama lose or win unimpressively.

In winning Peach Bowl

Baylor outscores Clemson

ATLANTA (AP) — Freshman quarterback Mike Brannan, who threw only two touchdown passes during the regular season, equaled that Monday striking for a pair of quick secondquarter scoring tosses to power the 19th-ranked Baylor Bears to a 24-18 victory over No. 18 Clemson in the nationally televised Peach Bowl.

Mickey Elam, who replaced Brannan at quarterback when the freshman suffered torn ankle ligaments later in the second quarter, sparked Baylor to 10 third-quarter points in the Bears' upset over the Atlantic Coast Conference Tigers.

Elam set up a 29-yard field goal by Robert Bledsoe with a 63-yard pass play to Walter Abercrombie and connected on a 7-yard scoring pass to Raymond Cockrell.

Clemson, 8-4, scored on its second possession of the game on a 1-yard run by Lester Brown and added a 40-yard field goal in the third period by Obed Ariri.

The Tigers scored with 20 seconds remaining on a 1-yard plunge by Chuck McSwain following a blocked punt that was downed on the Bears 1-yard line. Clemson then made the two-point conversion and recovered the ensuing on-side kick. But two plays later, Lott was intercepted Doak Field, preserving the victory for Baylor.

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RICHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR WEDNESDAY, JAN. 2, 1980

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today finds you in considerable tension if you try to do more than you can handle, so stick to the tried and true for best results. Maintain a cheerful manner at all times.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Try to be more helpful to those who have been good to you in the past and begin their goodwill. Think constructively.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Spend less for entertainment than you have lately and build up your assets. Be careful with facts and figures.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Make things better for family members, but do so unobtrusively. Take time to improve your surroundings. Be logical.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Study plans in which you stand to make a big profit. Obtain the data you need from the right sources.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) A good day for contacting good friends and business associates and getting excellent results. Be kind in dealing with others.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Plan how best to cut down on expenses and don't trouble others who may be having financial problems. Be more optimistic.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) State your aims to others and gain their assistance. Avoid one who is greedy, selfish, untrustworthy and unpleasant.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Take time to entertain good friends and repay social obligations that are important. Persevere and gain your aims.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get busy on career matters early in the day and get excellent results. Show others that you have wisdom.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) New projects appeal to you from a monetary standpoint. A new contact could prove helpful to you at this time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) It's important you show more affection for the one you love and forget those hobbies you have for now. Be wise.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Converse with those who can be of assistance to you and state your aims clearly. Steer clear of a troublemaker.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one of those fascinating young persons who easily comprehends details pertaining to projects and can thereby make a success of them. Give as fine an education as you can afford. Sports are a must.

WHERE NEGLECTED GIRL FOUND — Police found a 12-year-old girl weighing less than 40 pounds in second-floor back bedroom of this abandoned house in West Philadelphia early Monday. She was found in a fetal position, screaming, according to Police Capt. Dorothy Cousins. The child was extremely malnourished and unable to talk, Capt. Cousins said. A newsman peers in back window of the locked house.

Retarded girl found abandoned

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A "grossly retarded" 12-year-old girl who weighed only 39 pounds was found early Monday in an unheated and abandoned house. Police said the screaming child was curled into a fetal position among debris infested by roaches.

Officers responding to a report of a possible burglary discovered Kimberly Bowie in a rear upstairs bedroom of a two-story brick rowhouse, said Capt. Dorothy Cousins of the Juvenile Aid Division. Neighbors told police that the mother had left with her four other children Sunday afternoon.

The house had no electricity or heat. The temperature was in the low 30s overnight.

The mother, identified as Denise Bowie, about 26, called the Juvenile Aid Division on Monday afternoon but did not say where she was, Ms. Cousins said.

"She contacted us. She said she was coming down here," the policewoman said. Ms. Cousins said the woman did not explain her actions or ask about the girl.

Detective Jerry Whartenby said there was no sign of physical abuse, just neglect. He said the child does not talk, but screams.

She was admitted to Hahnemann Hospital for tests and her condition was termed "good," said Phyllis Fisher, a hospital spokeswoman. Ms. Fisher described the child as "grossly retarded." She said that the child had eaten at the hospital, but had not spoken any intelligible words.

"She's malnourished. She was extremely malnourished," said Ms. Cousins. "She's unable to talk." "She's in the fetal position. That's how she was found," the policewoman said.

Randi Sykes, 22, a neighbor, said the family had lived in the house since last summer. He said he had sometimes heard screams but had assumed they were the sounds of children playing.

Sykes said he had heard noises in an adjacent building and notified a passing patrolman about 4 a.m. Officers responding to his report found the girl.

"The mother was really nice. The kids, really nice," Sykes said. "I'm not taking anything from that lady as a human being. Everybody has their frustrations. I guess this was one of hers." Eric Brockenborough, who lives two doors away, said he had once asked one of the girls about her brothers and sisters.

"She told me then she had a little sister, but that she never came outside," he said.

Report dims outlook for American economy

WASHINGTON (AP) — The outlook for the U.S. economy in the new year dimmed as the government reported on Monday that an index designed to forecast economic activity fell sharply in November for the second consecutive month.

The drop of 1.3 percent in the Composite Index of Leading Indicators in November followed a 1.4 percent decline in October, according to a Commerce Department report.

It was the worst two-month drop since the ones that ushered in the 1974-75 recession, according to senior Commerce Department economist William Cox.

He added that it was "in accordance with our general perception that we can expect some limited contraction of gross national product in 1980."

Gross national product is a measure of the nation's economic well-being because it is the total value of all U.S. goods and services.

There had been a sharp drop in inflation-adjusted output in the second quarter of 1979, leading many analysts to conclude that a recession had begun. But the economy rebounded in the third quarter and was expected to show slight growth in the fourth, postponing what many believe is an inevitable downturn because of rapidly rising foreign oil prices and the Federal Reserve's tight-money policy.

The November decline in the index confirmed predictions both in and out of government that the long-forecast recession was probably imminent.

"It seems to be flashing some correct signals at the moment," said Robert Gough, director of national forecasting for the nation's largest private forecasting firm, Data Resources Inc. of Lexington, Mass.

Data Resources is predicting that national output will decline about 2 percent from the peak of the recession to its end, less than half the severity of the 1974-75 economic plunge.

Gough and other forecasters expect that as industrial activity declines, unemployment will increase by some 2 million persons by late 1980. Inflation, most analysts predict, will continue at double-digit levels well into 1980.

Recovery is expected to begin in the third or fourth quarter and progress slowly into 1981.

The November decline was the fourth in the last five months and pushed the index down to 126.6, or only 38.8 percent ahead of its 1947 base of 100.

That was the lowest level since July of 1977 and the weakest since the index peaked at 143.6 in October of 1978, Commerce figures showed.

Culligan Water offers free 30-day trial use

If you think you have to put up with the taste of Big Spring water, you don't. And, you don't have to haul bottled water either.

"That's too expensive," Richard Wright, owner of the Culligan Water Conditioning Company of Big Spring says. So start off the New Year and the New Decade right. Wright is offering a January special 30-day free trial on his Aqua-clear drinking water appliance. A deposit is required, but unless you are 100 percent satisfied with the appliance, your deposit will be refunded and you can return it.

"Our H-5 Aqua-clear drinking water appliance will make this salty Big Spring water taste as good as expensive bottled water and for only 70 cents for five gallons," he says.

"The Aqua-clear can be piped to your automatic ice maker, too!"

This is the only appliance Culligan uses in Big Spring for drinking water. Culligan has an activated carbon or charcoal filter, but it will not remove the salt taste from Big Spring water.

The Aqua-clear is a reverse osmosis for your own home. Your bottled water is probably made by the process. Check your bottle. If you're paying more than Culligan's 14 cents per gallon, you're paying too much.

The Aqua-clear unit fits under your sink, out of your way, and the special faucet fits into your present sink.

The Culligan Company also offers free water analysis for your private well or in your home. The Culligan man can recommend the precise unit to remove the dissolved rock that causes burned out water heaters, scale build-up in dishwashers and clothes washers, and tarnished sink fixtures.

You can do something about your water problems. Conditioned water will give you more suds with less soap in your dishwasher and clothes washer. No more scale and film build-up on appliances and in clothes.

Soft water can help prevent red, itchy or dry skin. Shaving is easier and blades last much longer.

Plumbing and pipes benefit from soft water because it prevents the formation of rock-like hard water scale. And it gradually removes old scale that was present before your Culligan water conditioner was installed.

AQUA-CLEAR DRINKING WATER
 ...special free trial offer

For the complete story about Culligan and a free water analysis and free 30-day trial, call the people who treat water seriously: The Culligan Water Conditioning Company. They are a complete sales and service operation. Just dial 263-8781 and say

"Hey, Culligan Man." He will be glad to install an appliance for 30 days for free.

Ernie's Automotive is expanding staff size

Ernie's Automotive stands behind their work and will try to offer prompt and courteous service to the best of their ability.

In business for almost a year now, Ernie's Automotive, owned by Ernie McCullation, has grown in staff size. When first opened, Victor Blackburn was the only other employee. Then Jesus Rios joined the team about four months ago. Before then he was a long-time Chrysler mechanic working at that job for 30 years.

Ernie now has Oscar Franco, a member of one of the cooperative education programs in the Big Spring Independent School District, and Doug Wagner completing his staff of mechanics.

The mechanics at Ernie's Automotive do general repair service to almost all makes of automobiles and trucks. They also do some work on some foreign automobiles. All of their work is guaranteed. The price they ask is fair.

They also have diagnostic equipment for automobile and truck tune-ups. And, they try to work on them all.

Ernie's Automotive is located at 1107 E. Second Street. They stock Motorcraft, AC and some GM automotive parts and accessories.

So the next time when your car or truck won't start, call Ernie's Automotive for courteous assistance. They are open five days a week and closed on Saturdays. Call them if your car gives you trouble. Their number is 267-7391.

Mexican waters offlimits

BROWNSVILLE, Texas (AO) — Mexican waters will be off limits to American shrimp fishermen beginning Tuesday as a three-year-old U.S.-Mexican shrimp treaty expires.

At the time, Texas shrimpers caught 10 million pounds of shrimp annually in the winter fishing grounds south of the border.

Since the treaty took effect in 1976, Mexican fishing officials gradually have cut back the number of American vessels permitted in their waters.

In the last few months of 1979, only 95 boats were allowed to haul in 759,000 pounds.

The Mexican government maintains there is not enough shrimp for both American and Mexican boats. American officials have reached similar conclusions — that not enough shrimp abound off 7 U.S. waters to allow Mexican trawlers in on the catch.

Texas Shrimp Association Director Ralph Rayburn says American and Mexican scientists agreed at a meeting held earlier this month that a surplus of shrimp exists off the coast of Tampico, about 250 miles south of Port Isabel, Texas.

Between 1,500 to 2,000 metric tons of shrimp could be harvested in the rich fishing grounds without jeopardizing the Mexican shrimp fleet, Rayburn said.

"Although I hesitate to be very optimistic, I think it's a good sign, at least on the part of the scientists, that they could see that there's a surplus," he added.

"But we don't know yet, on the political side, what the government of Mexico wants to do with this surplus," he said.

Mexico established a 200-mile fishing limit off its coast when the treaty took effect. The United States at the time extended its 12-mile fishing territory to 200 miles offshore.

Rayburn says the Mexicans have not shut the door on a possible second treaty.

"We would hope that through the historical fishing of our fleets and the Mexicans' desire to fish surplus stocks, that we could work out some kind of fishing treaty," he said.

Want service in uniforms

Klansmen picket mortuary

DALLAS (AP) — The granddaughter of a longtime Ku Klux Klan member says if a funeral home allows Shriners and other groups to hold funerals in ceremonial uniforms it has no grounds for denying a "Klan funeral."

Four Klansmen picketed the Laurel Land funeral home during the weekend after it refused to allow the group to attend services dressed in Klan robes and hoods for Addie Barlow Frazier, 72.

Mrs. Frazier's granddaughter, Beverly Pittman, said Monday more demonstrations would be held at the funeral home, but she said the time had not been decided.

Mrs. Frazier, who helped organize a Klan rally in downtown Dallas on Nov. 3, died Saturday night in a Dallas hospital, where she was admitted Dec. 7 with viral pneumonia. Mrs. Pittman, who lives in suburban Carrollton, said her grandmother had paid $685.51 for a burial policy with the funeral home in January 1976.

"They allow robes at funerals of Shriners, beaties at Jewish funerals, and if it's a military funeral, they allow uniforms, but they flatly refused to give her a Klan ceremony because of the robes," she said.

"They wanted no robes Klansmen there. They said they wanted no trouble," she said.

At the family's demand, the funeral home returned the money for the policy, and another Dallas funeral home agreed to allow a Klan funeral, she said.

Robert McNatt, general manager of Laurel Land, said it refused to allow the Klan funeral because "by them being dressed as Klansmen, that would have created a disturbance."

"We could not have them robed in the chapel and in the park," he said.

Mrs. Pittman said her grandmother joined the Ku Klux Klan in 1952 and was on a first-name basis with Klan leaders throughout the United States.

She said KKK members from across the country had indicated they want to attend the funeral, now expected to take place Wednesday.

Mrs. Pittman said she was not a member of the Klan, but after the experience with the funeral of her grandmother, she said she was going to join.

"If I am fortunate enough to be extended an invitation for membership, I will take up the work of my grandmother," she said.

Most dangerous period still ahead

Traffic deaths below predictions

Department of Public Safety officials, buoyed by a holiday traffic toll running behind predictions, warned Monday the most dangerous driving period of the long New Year's weekend was yet to come.

Sixteen persons have died on Texas highways so far since the count began Friday night. Before it ends Tuesday night, DPS officers had estimated 56 persons would be killed.

"It sounds good, but we're keeping our fingers crossed," a DPS spokesman said.

"We are pleased to see the toll is not higher than it is through the halfway point," said DPS spokesman Richard Grimm.

"We have had all our available troopers on duty since the holiday period started on Friday."

He said a major emphasis was being placed on keeping drunken drivers off the roads, especially New Year's Eve. "Traffic will still be heavy tonight and through the late hours on New Year's Day," Grimm said.

The deaths included: Hubert Owen, 83, victim of an auto-pedestrian accident in Jacksonville Saturday; Ronald Bernard Daniels, 42, of Corpus Christi, whose car hit a cow, ran off a bridge and burned Sunday east of Sinton.

Manuel Gonzales Torres, 33, of Van Horn, the victim of an apparent hit-and-run auto-pedestrian accident in Van Horn Sunday.

James D. Hebert, 40, of Nederland, killed Sunday in Beaumont. He was struck by a car while changing a tire on his van, police said.

Joseph A. Puenta, 23, killed early Sunday in a one-car accident in Dallas.

James B. Newman, 27; Tommy Plummer, about 20; and John Mader, 19, all of Lolita were killed Sunday just north of Edna on Texas 111.

Dennis Jack Brown, 23, of Belton was killed in an accident Saturday. A two-car head-on crash in Irving killed Sharon McKinney Murdock, 30, of Bedford Saturday.

Three one-car accidents were reported Saturday. They claimed the lives of Rose A. Webb, 73, of Mercedes on U.S. 77 a mile north of Raymondville; Mark Darwin Johnson, 18, of Lone Star on U.S. 259 in Lone Star; and Johnny Lee Mikes, 24, of Cuero on a road in Lockhart. Lauagh Cook Jr., 23, and Michael Wayne Campbell, 18, were killed Friday night in an auto-pedestrian accident in Houston. Danna Marie Broussard, 26, was killed in another accident Friday night in Houston.

Colleagues, hometown mourn Richard Rogers

NEW YORK (AP) — Richard Rogers, the composer who helped revolutionize the American musical theater and spread the songs of the nation around the world, was mourned Monday by his city and his colleagues.

"Richard Rogers, through his music, will live forever," said Mayor Edward I. Koch. "He was a good friend to this city and we shall never forget him."

"Rogers' contribution was gigantic, when you think of the span of years, the enormous variety of music that influenced the whole musical world," said Yul Brynner, star of the original production of Rodgers' "The King and I" and now in London with a revival of the 1951 hit.

Composer of some of the most towering successes of stage history — including "Oklahoma!" "South Pacific" and "The Sound of Music" — Rodgers died Sunday night at his Fifth Avenue apartment at age 77.

His wife of 49 years, Dorothy, was at his side at the end of what was described by a spokesman as a long illness. Rodgers was operated on for cancer of the jaw in 1955 and underwent a laryngectomy in 1974. Five weeks ago a pacemaker was installed for his heart. He was too ill to attend the opening Dec. 13 of a revival here of "Oklahoma!"

The funeral will be private.

His great collaborators, Lorenz Hart from 1920 to 1942 and Oscar Hammerstein II from 1942 to 1960, preceded him in death, but Rodgers continued working, both alone and with other outstanding lyricists right up to this year, when "I Remember Mama" was mounted.

Brynner recalled that "The King and I" was in desperate trouble in its out-of-town tryout but "Rodgers and Hammerstein rolled up their sleeves and went to
