Khomeini to allow questioning

By the Associated Press

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini said today the U.N. commission can question U.S. Embassy hostages involved in crimes against Iran, but the panel cannot see all the captives unless it issues its report in Tehran, the state radio said. "We shall fight against the U.S. government to the end of our life," Khomeini said.

His statement appeared to repudiate the decision by the ruling Revolutionary Council, its chief, President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, and Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh that the militants holding the approximately 50 hostages for 128 days allow the panel to meet all the hostages or hand them over to government custody. However, Ghotbzadeh denied it was a setback.

Khomeini's statement also ordered the embassy militants "to deliver copies of all documents concerning the U.S. intervention and the traitor shah" to the U.N. commission. The statement was issued after 10 members of the council met with him in hopes of resolving the deadlock with the militants.

"The panel can meet with those hostages involved in the crimes of the U.S. and the shah for questioning," Iran's 79-year-old revolutionary leader said. "If the panel issues its report on the crimes of the deposed shah and interventions of the invading U.S. in Tehran it will be allowed to see all the hostages."

Khomeini concluded by saying, "I express my support for the Revolutionary Council and the honorable president and ask all the nation to help and support them." There was no immediate comment from Bani-Sadr, the militants, or the U.N. panel, whose mission appeared in very shaky straits.

But Ghotbzadeh, interviewed by ABC-TV News in Tehran, called Khomeini's ruling a positive development. He said he hoped the U.N. panel would stay in Tehran for two or three more days to meet with several of the hostages, as Khomeini outlined, then issue a "declaration, not a report" of its findings so it could then meet with the rest of the captives. Asked when the hostages might be freed, he reiterated, "This is a decision of the Parliament," which won't be in a position to discuss the issue until May.

The U.N. commission arrived in Tehran Feb. 23 to investigate the revolutionary regime's charges of mass murder and plunder against Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and to try to ease the crisis between the United States and Iran over the hostages.

The Carter administration hoped the commission's visit would result in the speedy release of the Americans. But after the panel got there, Khomeini said the hostages' fate would be decided by Iran's new parliament, which won't be fully elected until April 3, and the secretary-general of the Revolutionary Council said no decision could be made until mid-May.

Hoping to attract new industry

$15 million bonds authorized

By DON WOODS

Sale of bonds totaling $15 million was authorized by Howard County Commissioners this morning for building renovation and equipment rental for a potential new industry.

The bonds are between the Howard County Industrial Development Corporation and the new industry. "We don't know they're going to move in yet," said Industrial Development Corporation president Jack Redding. The new industry, if it locates here, will occupy a building in the Big Spring Industrial Park.

State law currently limits bond sales to $10 million; however, there is a possibility that limits will rise to $20 million. Industrial Development Corporation members wanted commissioners to raise the bond amount in case state law is amended.

Commissioners had set the bond amounts at $10 million at a previous meeting.

County Treasurer Jackie Olson said county bills due today would put a county office over its budget, but did not identify the office. The item was not brought up in time for publication today.

Surveyor Rim Crim said he was willing to relinquish his office to the county tax appraiser. The appraiser's office is expanding.

Crim said, though, that commissioners must provide him an office with a vault for field notes. These are county records that he said are his responsibility. The office is "more fitted to my business than to his (county appraiser Earl Dean)," said Crim.

County Judge Bill Tune called a closed meeting for discussing a personnel matter with Justice of the Peace Bob West.

West also asked commissioner court approval for a carnival sponsored by the Immaculate Heart of Mary Parents' Club. Proceeds will go to the church school. The carnival is scheduled for April 21 through 27. Festivities will be held on fair grounds only April 21 through 24. During the April 25-27 weekend food will be served.

West said the city prohibited the carnival on church ground because it isn't zoned commercial. The Rodeo Association will have to approve use of the grounds, said commissioners.

A Xerox machine used by the county agent's office was discussed. Commissioners had thought the addition of the machine was costing the county more than the Xerox representative said it would. Mrs. Olson said, though, that it wasn't.

The machine costs an extra $12 a month unless more than a certain number of copies are used. Commissioner David Barr said the district clerk's office uses 2,200 less copies than it pays for. He suggested that Mrs. Olson ask the Xerox representative if the 2,000 copies allotment could be transferred to the county agent's office.

County Engineer Bill Mim asked commissioners to advertise for bids for a new service truck with a radio. "We've got the money in the budget and we set it up," said Mrs. Olson. She said, though, the election supplies needed by the county clerk's office must be bought also and are not on the budget.

The necessity of election materials may jeopardize purchase of the truck, she said. Election supplies must be bought by Oct. 1. The county will buy the supplies in June or July.

Connally withdraws from race

HOUSTON (AP) — John B. Connally, who spent an estimated $10 million and won only one delegate, withdrew from the race for the Republican presidential nomination Sunday and pronounced Ronald Reagan "still the champion."

Connally, beaten badly Saturday in South Carolina, where he said he would seriously begin his bid for the GOP nomination, quit one year from the time he announced his candidacy.

With his wife at his side, the former Texas governor told a Houston news conference he had been unable to dent the built-in strength of Ronald Reagan.

He said of Reagan, "We challenged him in South Carolina and he won. We finished second, and not a very good second."

"My future continuation as a candidate will not be good for my party nor for the nation."

In South Carolina, Connally had the backing of GOP patriarch Sen. Strom Thurmond and former governor James Edwards but was buried by the solid campaign force Reagan had built in 1976.

Reagan won all six of the state's congressional districts, capturing 54 percent of the vote and all 25 delegates to the July Republican National Convention in Detroit.

Calling Reagan "still the champion," Connally said the former California governor could win against President Carter in November.

"President Carter's popularity now is a fantasy," he said.

Connally told the news conference, attended by several hundred of his supporters, that he had no desire to be a vice-presidential candidate and that he could not endorse any other GOP candidate at this time.

"I want to retain that option," he said, adding he would consult with supporters before making any endorsement decision.

In Florida, campaigning for Tuesday's primary, Reagan said he did not think Connally's decision would affect his own campaign and he did not know where Connally backers would turn.

In fact, Reagan predicted the Connally supporters would scatter in different directions, adding however, "There aren't too many directions to go any more."

Connally, a major figure in both Democratic and Republican politics, made no serious effort in the early New England primaries and caucuses. He had pinned his hopes on South Carolina and Tuesday's primaries in Georgia, Alabama and Florida.

Reagan appears to be far in front in Georgia and Alabama, and running a two-man race with George Bush in Florida.

Bush, the third-place finisher in Fort Lauderdale that he would benefit in Florida from Connally's withdrawal, picking up some votes that would have gone to the former Texas governor.

Connally said he knew when he first announced that "the odds were overwhelmingly against us. I am disturbed that we failed to bring into clear focus to the voters the issues that will have a profound effect on this nation in the future."

"I knew at the outset we had to overcome the lead of Ronald Reagan. We did not do it."

Connally said that although he was withdrawing as a candidate, he would continue to speak out on the issues.

He was elected governor of Texas as a Democrat but changed party affiliations in the early 1970s, saying the Democratic Party had moved too far to the left for him to remain comfortable in it.

Appreciation program scheduled

Local banks to honor farmers

Area banks are sponsoring an Agriculture Appreciation Program Tuesday night at the Howard County Fair Barns at 8 p.m.

The banks have sent out invitations to their farm accounts for the program. Speaker will be the President of Cotton Incorporated, Duker Wooters.

Farmers will come from Howard County and the surrounding area. Duker Wooters has been the president of Cotton Incorporated since its founding in 1971.

Cotton Incorporated is the fiber company which conducts worldwide research and marketing activities on behalf of approximately 100,000 U.S. cotton producers in 19 cotton-growing states. The organization is known as an aggressive marketing company representing cotton farmers in the marketplace.

Wooters came to the newly-established cotton organization after 14 years with Reader's Digest. A dedicated exponent of sound marketing and creative selling, he had served in several executive capacities in the magazine's sales divisions and its international operations. In 1969, he was named managing director of the Reader's Digest Brazilian company head-quartered in Rio de Janeiro.

With the goal of making Cotton Incorporated "the most creative fiber company in the country," Wooters and his staff have introduced new products and finishes to improve the marketing of cotton from the field to the retail consumer. The company's New York headquarters is home to its sales and marketing programs, the international marketing division, and marketing services. Research and technical facilities in Raleigh, North Carolina, comprise agricultural research, textile research and development, and economic research divisions.

Wooters was raised in Larchmont, New York. He is a graduate of Lehigh University and the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration.

During World War II, he rose from the rank of private to captain in the Army Quartermaster Corps. He resides in Connecticut with his wife and five daughters.

The program is sponsored by First National, State National, Security State, Coshoma State Banks, the agriculture Committee of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, and Extension Service Crops Committee.

Computers leave U.S. ill-prepared for war

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. military, which owns and operates nearly half the government's computers, is saddled with thousands of obsolete machines that leave the services ill-prepared for a modern war, according to outside experts and high-level sources within the Carter administration.

A study solicited by the president's Office of Management and Budget (OMB) from a team of outside specialists found that Air Force computers, in particular, "offer vulnerable targets to either a nuclear attack or sabotage." The systems already are operating at or near capacity, and "it is unlikely that they can accommodate war-time surges in load," the panel said.

A summary of the group's findings, prepared for President Carter a year ago but never delivered, said: "The Defense Department cannot fly a modern airplane, drive a ship, issue paychecks, assign an officer or issue an item from inventory without using its computing resources."

"In a future conflict, intelligent computer management could have a major impact on the success of the national defense and would extend far beyond the purely military areas."

But the team found that the Pentagon's top management has largely ignored its growing dependence on computers and has forfeited the military's position as a world leader in computer technology.

The Defense Department's official response to the National Security Team's report said top management involvement had been increased and that many of the recommendations were under study.

One of the team's findings was that previous reports similar to its own had been ignored.

Data compiled by OMB show that the Navy and Air Force have some of the oldest computers in government. Several in the missile-tracking North American Air Defense Command are more than 20 years old.

A team of government auditors has concluded that one Defense computer system — the worldwide system built to warn the president of an enemy attack or international crisis — is fundamentally deficient and cannot be used effectively for military command purposes.

Gasohol sparking enthusiasm in divided halls of Congress

WASHINGTON — Politicians love nothing better than to grab hold of an appealing issue and make it their very own. In the eternally divided halls of Congress it is a rare prize to be able to champion a cause that elicits almost universal enthusiasm from your colleagues.

Gasohol — as an alternative fuel for automobiles and machinery — is increasingly becoming such an issue.

And as chairman of the Alcohol Fuels Commission and a sponsor or cosponsor of twenty gasohol-related measures, Indiana's senior senator, Birch Bayh has embraced the cause of gasohol development like no other legislator on Capitol Hill.

Bayh speaks of gasohol with the passion of a fundamentalist preacher. During a recent press conference, the Indiana Democrat called gasohol a "salvation" from the nation's energy problems, and vowed to "help nurture it and see it get up and walk and run and play."

When farmers from across the nation, including dozens from Texas, descended on Washington this month to lobby their special interests, gasohol was high on the list.

Farmers believe that if gasohol, which is partially made from grain, is promoted nationwide it will become a lucrative market for their excess supply of grain.

The Hoosier Democrat's rhetoric and the farmers' lobbying efforts have not fallen on deaf ears.

After initially viewing gasohol with something less than enthusiasm, the Carter administration recently jumped on the alcohol fuel bandwagon — some say in order to offset the negative impact of the Soviet grain embargo.

And Congress, mired in the increasingly complex job of trying to solve the nation's fuel crunch, has become more and more receptive to the idea of gasohol.

In the past two years, House and Senate lawmakers have passed a wide range of legislation — some of it Bayh's — including tax exemptions, credits and other economic incentives aimed at encouraging gasohol production.

Bayh's message has been carried with fervor by his large press office, which issued no less than 50 gasohol-related press releases last year, all touting Birch Bayh as "one of the Senate's leading proponents" of alcohol fuels.

"I could write about gasohol in my sleep," chuckled Bayh press aide Rich Paul.

The Hoosier Democrat's campaign on behalf of alcohol fuels dates back to late 1977, when he helped a group of Montana farmers and research technicians stage a gasohol-powered tractor parade in Washington.

Florida cold snap costly

LAKELAND, Fla. (AP) — Last week's cold snap in Florida did its worst damage to the Valencia crop, the primary variety used for frozen juice concentrate, preliminary surveys indicate.

It's estimated this will cost the state's citrus industry between 5 million and 6 million gallons of the concentrate. Before the freeze, the Valencia crop had been expected to yield 113 million gallons.

Spokesmen for Florida Citrus Mutual, a giant cooperative that conducted the survey, could not put any dollar figure on the loss.

Inmates cause disturbance

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The channeling of "aggressive" inmates into an institution built as a minimum-security prison led to an hour-long disturbance in which police countered with tear gas and dogs, a city official says.

Riot police were called to the city workhouse Saturday night after inmates set fire to mattresses on the second floor. The police cleared the way for firefighters to enter the building. Five policemen were treated for inhalation of smoke or tear gas.

More power sought for laity

MILWAUKEE (AP) — A new organization is seeking more power for lay men and women in the Roman Catholic Church.

The Association for the Rights of Catholics in the Church decided at its first meeting Saturday to write a charter of Catholic rights and to campaign for its adoption on local, national and international levels.

Leonard Swidler, a professor of religion at Temple University in Philadelphia, said, "Now, legally, the power of decision-making is in the hands of the bishops and the papacy... We would like to see a redistribution so that adults in the Catholic church play the role of adults and not children."

Busy railway restored

CINCINNATI (AP) — Once a busy railway hub, Union Terminal has been restored as a commercial center, and its first business — a French restaurant called Les Palmiers — opens Wednesday.

In the terminal there's space for 150 stores, and the grand opening for the whole center is set for Aug. 1. The developer, Joseph Skilken Organization, began the "adaptive reuse" of the national landmark in March 1977.

"We're talking about something which will make people say they're getting the very best of yesterday," said James M. Gould, the project's leasing, marketing and development director.

Farm Here's how to take soil sample . . . step by step

Taking a soil sample is not a difficult or complicated job if a few basic "do's and don'ts" are followed, according to County Extension Agent Don Richardson. "Soil tests can be only as accurate as the samples on which they are made," he said. "Proper collection of soil samples is extremely important. Chemical tests of poorly taken samples may be actually misleading."

Here are three basic steps in the selection of site and actually taking the sample:

1. Take one soil sample from the lawn and one from the garden.
2. The sample should be taken from over all the area. This can be done by taking a small amount of soil from 5 to 10 different places. Place these in a clean container (plastic bucket, paper sack, etc.). Mix thoroughly and take approximately one pint for the composite sample.
3. When taking the small samples, use a spade, soil auger or soil sampling tube. Scrape the litter from the surface. To use an auger or tube, make the boring six inches deep in the soil. To use a spade, dig a V-shaped hole and take a one-half inch slice of soil from the smooth side of the hole. Repeat in 5 to 10 different places.

When the sample has been placed in the sample box, the box should be numbered to correspond with the number on the soil sampling sheet. Be sure to keep a record or sample numbers and where they were taken.

The sample, along with the information sheet should be mailed to the Soil Testing Lab, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Route 3, Box 213AA, Lubbock, Texas 79401. Materials needed for a soil test are available at the Howard County Extension Office located in the basement of the County Courthouse in Big Spring.

Texas agriculture labor force rises

AUSTIN — The Texas agriculture labor force on farms and ranches registered an 18 percent increase above totals a year ago, Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown has announced.

The agriculture labor force numbered 192,000 during the survey week of January 6-12, 1980, compared to a force of 163,000 a year ago. These figures were released earlier this week in a quarterly report by the Texas Crops and Livestock Reporting Service.

The total figures are derived from the categories of hired workers and farm- and ranch operators and family workers. The number of hired workers showed an increase of 34 percent from 44,000 a year ago to 59,000 earlier this year. Farm and ranch operators and unpaid family workers totaled 133,000, up 12 percent from last year's 119,000 workers.

Although Texas' agriculture labor force was up considerably over neighboring states Louisiana, Oklahoma and New Mexico, Brown said the number of workers is "extremely static" because the farm labor force is "dependent upon the season, harvests and weather conditions."

Texas farm and ranch wage rates were up 43 cents an hour from a year ago, and 19 cents an hour above October figures. All hired workers averaged $3.47 an hour during the survey week in January, compared to $3.04 a year ago.

Zero bracket expected to help many taxpayers

"We estimate that over three-fourths of all taxpayers will find it to their advantage to use the zero bracket amount method of computing their taxes this year," said Sharon L. Wrublesky, chief, Taxpayer Service Division for the Dallas District of the Internal Revenue Service.

"The zero bracket amount, or 'ZBA' may sound complicated, but it has simplified filing federal tax returns for over 1 1/2 million taxpayers in Northern Texas. Actually, ZBA is a variation of what used to be called the 'standard deduction.'"

Increased from $2,200 to $2,300 for single taxpayers and from $3,200 to $3,400 for married taxpayers who file joint returns, the zero bracket amount is often higher than the total of itemized deductions for many taxpayers. Taking the ZBA eliminates the need to complete a Schedule A and, thus, means a simpler return.

"Our advice to taxpayers is to complete their tax liability both ways — using the ZBA and totaling their documented itemized deductions. This way a taxpayer can determine which method is more advantageous for him," Ms. Wrublesky reported.

The IRS telephone tax assistance operation is in service Monday through Friday, 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., to answer taxpayer's filing questions. In Dallas, dial 742-2440; in Fort Worth, 335-1370; in Lubbock, 747-4361; in Wichita Falls, 723-6702; elsewhere in Texas, 1-800-492-4830.

High heels, tension cited Lack of exercise can help cause backache

Special to The Herald

Backache has haunted humanity ever since the first caveman picked up a big rock the wrong way.

Modern society has not made any advances in avoiding backache. In fact, there probably are more things to cause it now than there were in ancient times.

Some shoes, tension, overly soft beds and chairs, lack of exercise and bad posture are some major causes of back pain that people can do something about, the Texas Medical Association (TMA) said.

Currently fashionable high heel shoes can be one hazard to backs. The high heels change the way the foot strikes the ground and can cause muscle pain from the legs on up. The possibility of twisted ankles and other assorted tendon, ligament and muscle injuries adds to the excitement of wearing these shoes.

Lack of exercise can help cause backache when people try to pick up loads that are too heavy. People who are not used to picking up heavy loads also often make a mistake by lifting with their backs bent. Bending from the knees to pick something up and then lifting with the back straight can help avoid back pain. Not only will lack of exercise rob the body of muscles for lifting, back muscles that are out of shape can ache just from carrying the body around.

Lack of exercise also can contribute to poor posture. It takes muscles and remembering to sit and stand straight to correct sloppy posture but the effort will pay off in appearance and avoiding pain, TMA said.

Overly soft beds and chairs often do not encourage good posture. Any chair someone spends a lot of time in, especially one for work or watching a lot of television at home, needs to be firm enough to provide some support and the right height to avoid putting the neck or body at odd angles.

Once back pains strikes, simple remedies such as avoiding the thing that caused it will help in many cases. Usually resting, taking pain relievers available without prescription and applying heat will help many back pains. If pain does not go away after a few days or if it is severe, see a physician.

Save oil, save money

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conserving oil — and money — often can be accomplished at no cost to the homeowner, according to the National Oil Jobbers Council.

The association for the country's heating-oil dealers and distributors says that, for example, lowering the thermostat just 10 degrees over an eight-hour period each day can save a minimum of 8 percent on the fuel bill.

Simple measures, such as turning back the thermostat, making sure the windows are tightly shut, and securely closing the chimney flue all can help bring down each month's heating bill.

Janie Harmon named Artist of the Month

Janie Harmon always liked to doodle on paper when she was in elementary school. That doodling has led her to become a participant in the world of talented artists.

The Big Spring Chamber of Commerce recognizes her as the March Artist of the Month.

Mrs. Harmon took her first art lesson 3 1/2 years ago when she and her family first moved to Big Spring. She has taken workshops with Sherry Nelson, MDT, Bill Huffaker, J.D. Keep, Paul Kime, Jerry Seagle and Bill Zaner.

She also studied for a short while with Jean Smith Hensley.

"As a member of the Big Spring Art Association," said Mrs. Harmon, "I have seen demonstrations by artists including Vicky Clark, Myrtle Jeiner, John Krump, Roberta Ross, Bill Zaner, Glenda Morrow and James Campbell."

Mrs. Harmon enjoys working with oils, acrylics and water colors. She likes to paint old barns, wind mills and rustic things.

"I enjoy painting anything that is pleasing to others," she concluded.

In addition to being a housewife and mother, Mrs. Harmon teaches tole and decorative painting and is employed part-time at the Hobby Center and Frame Gallery. She is also the treasurer of the Big Spring Art Association.

Planters Garden Club views wild life slides

The Texas Electric Reddy Room was the meeting site of members of the Planters Garden Club at 3:30 p.m. March 5. Mrs. Pat Highley served as hostess.

President Mrs. Paul Guy presided. Members answered roll call naming new plants they are putting in their gardens that are beneficial to birds.

The council report was presented by Mrs. Vernon Kent. She stated that the council recommended each club volunteer to water the rose garden at Comanche Trail Park for one month intervals.

The Planters Garden Club voted to water the garden the month of June.

The District I Convention will be held March 18-19 in Amarillo. Each club will take $10 worth of articles to sell at the convention as a money-making project.

The program was presented by Mrs. J.O. Murphy. She showed slides on birds and wild flowers she had taken in Colorado.

Mrs. Murphy stated "Birds are important in the world of wild life. They help control the many insects that plague us and they eat many wild seeds."

Most birds have two homes, one for winter and one for summer. Migrating birds follow the same routes year after year, sometimes over vast stretches of ocean, Mrs. Murphy revealed.

The next meeting will be held April 2 at 3:30 p.m. in the home of Peggy Rogers, 1500 E. Cherokee.

Tell macho man to grow up or get out

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D.

Dr. Wallace: I'm 15 and so is my boyfriend and I care for him very much. My problem is that at times he acts very childish.

When he is with his friends he treats me like dirt and it really hurts.

But when we are alone, he kisses me and tells me how much he loves me and is sorry for the way he acts when he is around his friends.

Please tell me what's wrong with him. — Cindy, Battle Creek, Mich.

Cindy: Your boyfriend suffers from that old problem, "lack of maturity." He really does care for you but the peer pressure to be a macho guy is just too great.

Help him grow up! Tell him that the next time he "does his act" with his friends, that he won't be seeing you again, either with his friends or alone.

Dr. Wallace: I would like to have a disco or a '50s party but Mom thinks only cheap girls have such parties. Is this true? — Linda, Everett, Wash.

Linda: It's not the type of party that is important. It's what goes on at the party that counts. The answer to your question is no.

Dr. Wallace: I'm a 13-year-old girl who got into trouble because my parents are too strict. A couple of weeks ago, a girlfriend and I skipped school, took a car and went joyriding. Naturally, we got caught.

My parents told me they thought they had taught me better than that, but the only reason I could think of is that my parents are too strict.

My friends come and go as they please and their parents don't make them come home at a certain time. Some of them are allowed to ride around in cars and go out with boys.

When I go somewhere, my parents take me and pick me up. I feel trapped. They say that they love me and that's why they care where I am and how late I stay out. I told them that if they really loved me, they would let me have a good time and gain self-confidence.

My mom keeps telling me not to grow up so fast, but I'm grown up and want to do things.

Who do you think is right, my parents or me? — Lori, Rock Island, Ill.

Lori: I can't believe you would ask me such a question. It's not even close. Your parents are 100 percent correct and you are completely wrong.

A change of friends, weekly visits to the church or synagogue of your choice, and a belief that your parents do love you and their rules are necessary and fair, will do wonders for your self-confidence.

For Dr. Wallace's teen booklet, "Happiness or Despair," please send $1 and a 28-cent, stamped, large, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Wallace, in care of this newspaper.

Looks Like Dad Has Settled In

DEAR ABBY: Help! Last year my husband asked if I would mind having his recently widowed father come to stay with us "for a while," giving him a chance to meet new friends, become familiar with our area, and get a fresh outlook on life away from sad memories of an ill wife and her death. I agreed.

It has been a year since Dad arrived, and he makes no mention of finding a place of his own. Our privacy is gone, a child gave up his room, Dad expresses no gratitude, and he's not all that clean! In fact, his room is smelling up the house.

I've told my husband that I'm very unhappy with this setup. Our family doctor says Dad is healthy and strong, and we as a young family deserve our privacy. I know deep down that my husband feels as I do, but he refuses to anything about it because he feels sorry for him.

I sometimes question my right to want Dad out of our house; I came into this marriage with children from a previous marriage. My husband adopted them and has been a wonderful provider. Now I feel guilty because I can't do the same in his father's case. However, my husband knew I had children when he married me, but I didn't know our marriage would include a father-in-law. Is there a solution?

MISERABLE

DEAR MISERABLE: Would a marriage that included a father-in-law who expressed his gratitude occasionally and didn't smell up the house be tolerable? If so, your husband should speak frankly to Dad. If your resentment at having lost your privacy is what is really gnawing at you, you must discuss it calmly and candidly with your husband. Unresolved anger seldom disappears with time. It grows, and erupts eventually.

DEAR ABBY: I've been going with this guy for a year. I'm 20 and he's 22. We get along really well and I'm in love with him. I'm the only girl he dates, and he's the only guy for me. We've been intimate, and there's no problem there. The problem is that he's never said, "I love you."

He's not cold or anything like that. He's very affectionate, and he's told me he thinks I'm "the greatest." He's paid me lots of compliments, so I know he really cares for me, but he seems to carefully avoid saying those three little words I want to hear.

I haven't told him I love him yet because I've been waiting for him to say it first.

Abby, how can I get him to say "I love you," and why do you think he's been holding back?

NO I LOVE YOU'S IN VEGAS

DEAR NO: I don't know about your guy, but most guys are reluctant to say "I love you" because they aren't ready to make a commitment.

DEAR ABBY: I have worked for 10 years for the same company. I am going to be married in June and, as you know, wedding invitations are very expensive.

My fiancé and I both have large families and intend to send invitations to all our aunts, uncles, cousins, etc.

There are 500 people in my department at work, all of whom are located on six floors of the main building. It has become a custom for each employee who gets married to place an invitation on the bulletin board of each floor. I was told that this was very tacky. Is it?

DON'T USE NAMES

DEAR DONT: If you can't afford to send an invitation to all the people you know and want, invite them verbally. But tacking up an invitation as a general public announcement for 500 people (most of whom must be strangers) seems tacky to me.

CONFIDENTIAL TO DOUBTING DONNA: It's true. The Wall Street Journal reported (as a business item) that available for sale is a tiny tape-playing device that fits inside a refrigerator, and every time the door is opened, a voice says, "Are you eating again? No wonder you look the way you do. Do yourself a favor and shut the door!"

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How To Write Letters for all Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby: 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

The Alpha Tau Rho chapter of Beta Sigma Phi met March 3 at Alberto's Crystal Cafe.

Kathy Nichols presented a program on crafts, displaying several items from the Hobby Center.

Members made tentative plans for the April Spring Rush and they discussed the Bake and Craft Sale scheduled in May.

The next meeting will be held March 17 in the home of Arlene White. Election of officers for the coming year will be held and balloting for Girl of the Year and Pledge of the Year will be conducted.

The date for the next social has been set for April 28 in the home of Jan Nichols. A salad supper will be served in observance of Founder's Day. Chapter awards will be presented at that time.

Top teenage scientists win $12,000 scholarships

WASHINGTON, D.C. — For the first time in the history of the nation's oldest and largest high school science scholarship competition, students from New York and Michigan, Lisa Randall and John Michael Andersland, have tied for top honors in the Westinghouse Science Talent Search. Both have been awarded identical $12,000 scholarships.

Mathematician Lisa Joy Randall, 17, of Stuyvesant High School in Manhattan, is the second girl ever to win top honors in the competition. The other winning student is botanist John Michael Andersland, also 17, of East Lansing, Mich.

For her project, Lisa Randall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard C. Randall, Fresh Meadows, Queens, N.Y., submitted a sophisticated paper on perfect numbers, a subject which has fascinated mathematicians from the ancient Greeks to the present. A perfect number is a positive integer equal to the sum of its positive integral divisors, other than itself. (The number 6 is a perfect number: 1 + 2 + 3.) Her paper develops conditions about the form a special classification of numbers known as Gaussian integers must possess to be perfect.

Lisa is co-captain of her school's math team and editor of its math magazine and plans to major in physics or chemistry at Harvard College and pursue a career in research.

John Michael Andersland, who attends East Lansing High School, Michigan, submitted a project which attempted to define the mechanism by which white leaves are produced in African violets. To do this, he investigated two possible sources of the mutation: the chloroplasts contained in the leaves, which possess the mechanism for production of the material causing the green color, and the plant's nuclear genetic material (DNA). John also compared mutations artificially induced with those occurring spontaneously.

An Honors winner in varsity debate, John participated in the Summer High School Honors Science Program at Michigan State last summer. Gardening, photography and clock repair are among his hobbies. The son of Drs. Orlando and Phyllis Andersland, he plans to pursue his study of botany at Michigan State University and seek a career in research.

These two $12,000 scholarships along with a number of other scholarships and awards are provided by the Westinghouse Educational Foundation.

Mexico not always easy to understand

In some ways, Mexico is a riddle inside an enigma, as Winston Churchill used to say of problems which appeared to have no solutions. Mexico is predominately of the Catholic faith, yet the clergy and the laity there are not always responsive to the dictates of the Church of Rome. Mexico is a republic still suspicious of the motives of the mother country, Spain, and which works diligently to control the influence of the Marxists.

THANKS TO ITS new-found wealth in petroleum, Mexico is feeling more self-assertive now perhaps than ever before. Indeed, it is actively seeking a role as a leader of the Third World. What's more, the history of the U.S.-Mexican relations is so rich in instances of Yankee condescension, arrogance and rapacity that it is only natural that the Mexicans should want to get back some of their own.

Still, it is not easy to understand why Mexico's views are not compatible with those of the United States on the matter of boycotting the Summer Olympic Games.

Mexican leaders apparently are conforming to the idea that politics and sports should be kept separate. In fact, it is so threadbare that it doesn't even hold up under a passing glance, much less close scrutiny. Ever since Der Führer, Adolph Hitler, made political hay out of the 1936 Olympic Games in Berlin, the proposition that the games are non-political has been a transparent sham.

Americans around the world cheered so loudly over the U.S.'s recent hockey victory over the Soviet team not because they were rooting for a bunch of college kids who had beaten a team of mercenaries but because it was grist for the propaganda mill. The Russians had tried to intimidate a group of Americans and it hadn't work.

FURTHERMORE, MEXICO'S studied indifference to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan — which is the whole point behind the Olympic boycott movement — is in marked contrast to Mexico's long and honorable tradition of upholding human values. That tradition dates back at least as far as the Spanish Civil War, when Mexico generously afforded asylum to refugees from the battered Republican forces.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen may have come pretty close to the mark recently when he offered a theory for Mexico's baffling behavior. "The Mexican government is acting as if it had to prove daily that it was not in the hip pocket of the U.S.," he said. "They don't have to. Anyone who thinks that is foolish. We ought to be able to live in the present and look to the future."

As Bentsen pointed out, the U.S. and Mexico have been able to cooperate on such diverse matters as controlling the illicit marijuana trade, hoof and mouth disease prevention, and the Mediterranean fruit fly eradication. Mexico of all nations would be concerned with defending the rights of the small country being ground beneath the heels of the powerful neighbor.

Rhodesian envoi

William F. Buckley, Jr.

Try, if you will, to describe a worse bungle than our Rhodesian policy. If you succeed, you qualify as Anglo-American director for African Affairs.

1) Among other things, we have got ourselves the first "country" that ever "voted" by a majority for communist rule. (Allende passed himself off as a Constitutional Marxist, and in any event, fetched only a plurality of the Chilean vote.) The qualifications are instantly apparent: Rhodesia isn't a consolidated country, rather a tribal aggregation haphazardly united by historical vagaries. Second, the vote is more likely an expression of the power of intimidation than the sober reflection of the noble savage meditating the advantages of Marxism in the bush. Even so, that a democratic ritual will be honored, and the zeitgeist will be said, in the Third World, to have taken an important turn to the left.

2) THE RESPONSIBILITY of the British government really ought to be somewhat less to form than to substance. It isn't as though the British, along with the Americans, took a creative role in setting up a government in West Germany which specifically banned Nazi parties and even Nazi literature. The government of Konrad Adenauer banned the Communist Party itself. Such proscriptions don't always work, but they provide a useful ideological gyroscope. One that says: No party is free to wage a political campaign the objective of which is to eliminate freedom. The end of political freedom, said Edmund Burke, is personal freedom. The notion that Robert Mugabe, endorsed now by the majority of the Rhodesians, is therefore sacralized, is a democratic black mass. Mugabe's participation in the elections should not have been tolerated. To have done so even after Mugabe himself said he would recognize them as legitimate only if he won reveals their intrinsic fraudulence.

3) LET US GET one thing absolutely straight, and let us not let anyone forget it. Mugabe rules Rhodesia because he fought a terrorist war with Soviet weapons. His debt to the Soviet Union is absolutely plain. Not only does he worship Soviet gods, he must worship Soviet leaders. He won the war because during the period when he was shooting missionaries and torturing children, we were complaining about a constitution that had been ratified by the overwhelming majority of Rhodesian voters, white and black, because it contained certain protections for the white minority. While we argued the inadequacy of this constitution, imposing sanctions that all but broke the back of Rhodesia, the other side was passing the ammunition.

Mrs. Thatcher, though not in so many words, all but promised that if elected her government would recognize Muzorewa's Rhodesia and lift the sanctions. Instead she temporized, as intimidated by Mugabe and his supporters as the many black Rhodesians who voted for him. Along came Lord Carrington and the famous Constitutional Convention with its eristic provisions for this and that. Carrington was hailed as a great hero, as also Lord Soames, who went down to Rhodesia to preside over the end of Rhodesia's brief experience with Kerenski.

4) Now the British will get out. Mugabe will probably go through some motions of conciliation, even as Castro did after knocking off Batista. Then he will exercise the power he has fought so dearly to achieve. The whites will begin to leave, preferably before they are butchered.

"Don't look so amazed... if left unchecked, we breed like flies!"

Should she leave 'Margaritaville'?

Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Please don't laugh. I am very serious. My husband thinks it's funny and I simply could not ask a doctor face to face.

I am not a drinker and have never been "drunk." Once in a while when we go out to dinner I will have a drink, like a Margarita. When I take one or two sips I immediately feel a numbness in my knees, then after another sip my lips feel numb and tingly. It scares me, and I feel funny the next day. Is this serious? — M.B.

A few people respond to alcohol this way. Their body chemistry will not allow them to handle it. In some, alcohol causes a profound drop in blood sugar, with symptoms similar to those you describe.

Alcohol can also cause blood vessels of the skin to expand, bringing the flush sometimes seen after drinking. Others develop severe headache after sipping a bit of alcohol because the alcohol causes a release of certain body substances.

I don't know if any of these mechanisms are involved in your problem. You do not mention taking any medicine. There are some that can cause peculiar reactions when taken with alcohol. Ask your doctor about any you may be taking.

Remember, too, that the effect of alcohol on the brain is more marked while the concentration in the blood is rising. If it is absorbed too quickly from the stomach into the blood the effect on the brain can be dramatic, from even a small amount. Are you drinking on an empty stomach?

I would not experiment further. If you are really curious, you might, under a doctor's watchful eyes. But why go to all that trouble. Leave Margaritaville behind and ask the waiter for a "Shirley Temple" next time. My mixology text has a good recipe. Shame on your husband!

Dear Dr. Donohue: Please tell me what to expect for my husband. He has been in a nursing home for a year. He is 71 and has been going down in health. The doctor at the nursing home said he has Alzheimer's disease. What is this and can anything be done? He does not recognize me most of the time. — Mrs. M.S.

With increasing age there is some loss of brain tissue in us all. When this loss occurs at a relatively early age

(and 71 might be considered early), and is extensive it is called Alzheimer's disease. The causes of the early deterioration are not known.

I wish I could offer some encouragement in the area of treatment. Presently there is none. That doesn't mean your husband's mental status will rapidly become worse or necessarily worse at all. I am sorry to say that what has happened will most likely not be reversed.

I think that in understanding what has happened physically to your husband you will be more able to cope with the results.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I am told I have two small stones in my gall bladder. They used a censor to locate them. What is a censor? — J.E.B.

It doesn't mean they were looking for X-rated gallstones. The word is "sensor," a device that detects sound waves — part of the work in the new medical field called ultrasonography. The sensor detects gallstones, among other things, by the same principle that enabled surface ships to detect subs during World War II. The sound waves were sent out through the water and bounced back from metallic objects, like submarine hulls.

In medicine, the waves are aimed at particular areas of the body. The sensor detects dense structures from which the waves bounce off (like stones), and a picture is made, sort of an "X-rayless" X-ray. In special cases ultrasonography is used to detect suspected fetal abnormalities during pregnancy, something that would hardly ever be done with X-rays because of the potential damage. What do you plan to do about the stones?

Dear Dr. Donohue: After breast surgery, can the breast be reconstructed? Is the reconstruction surgery after covered by Blue Cross? — Mrs. T.Y.

Yes, reconstruction can be done, and it is my understanding that most Blue Cross (and other) insurers do cover reconstruction in their contracts. You would have to check with your specific insurer, though, to be sure.

Are you having a gall bladder problem? To find out how the gall bladder works and what kinds of trouble to look for, send for the booklet, "You and Your Gall Bladder." Write to Dr. Donohue in care of the Big Spring Herald for a copy, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 35 cents.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I love to read your column. You are so funny sometimes! My question is about the stomach. Why would the stomach suddenly get covered with little black and blue spots? My friend has a doctor book that says this could be serious. The spots have left now, but I'm concerned. Should I have a blood test? — M.A.

Thanks for the compliment (I think). I don't believe medicine always has to be so almighty grim.

The little black and blue spots you had may have been a harmless rash, or they may have indicated a more serious problem. This sometimes results from a deficiency of blood platelets, which help the blood to clot. That might have been a temporary situation, but whatever the cause, it is a symptom that needs to be looked into. Mention this to your doctor. A blood test will determine your platelet level.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: How can I get my neighbor interested in spiritual things? He has no church background, and just doesn't seem to be interested in God or feel any need for religion. — C.L.

DEAR C.L.: God has given you an opportunity to share the Gospel with this man. Take this responsibility seriously; you may be the first real Christian he has ever had an opportunity to observe.

What can you do to get him more interested in Christ? First of all, only God can give him a hunger for spiritual things, and that is why the first thing you will want to do for your neighbor is pray for him. Pray that God will touch his heart and show him his need of Christ. And then pray that God also will give you wisdom as you deal with him. The Apostle Paul, speaking of his own countrymen who did not know Christ, declared, "Brothers, my heart's desire and prayer to God for the Israelites is that they may be saved" (Romans 10:1).

Then remember that the quality of your life will speak to him more impressively than anything you can say (at least at first). Does your life reflect something of the joy and peace of Christ? Is there any evidence that such things as material possessions are not as important to you as serving God? Incidentally, as you get to know your neighbor more fully you may see that his life is not as full and rich as it seems at first. He may have anxieties or fears he hides from most people, or he senses that life is uncertain and death overtakes people of every age group. Does he detect a quietness about your life that comes from trust in God? "In quietness and trust is your strength" (Isaiah 30:15).

Also, pray that God will help you build bridges of friendship with your neighbor. Ask God to show you practical ways you and your wife can demonstrate your love to them, so they know you care about them. Then as God opens the door, share what Christ means to you.

Cinch sales

Around the rim

Andrea Cohen

This has certainly been a week of indigestion for all of us. Virtually everywhere we all went, there was at least one box of Girl Scout Cookies lying around, usually empty.

But the funny part about it is, I never saw any Girl Scouts selling them. I saw the parents doing all the asking.

I hate to use the phrase, when I was a kid. But tough. When I was a kid, we used to go door to door. I can't remember the folks doing our dirty work for us.

And everyone, it seems, bought them. Anyone who didn't was considered an old grouch.

I NOW SEE why the majority of people bought these overpriced boxes from us. Guilt. When the people in the neighborhood heard the cookies went from 50 cents to 65 cents a box, they formed looks of horror on their faces. Then they gave a look of despair that said, "Well, it's for the Girl Scouts and I guess they can get away with it."

I always had this great desire to blackmail anyone who wouldn't buy a box. After all, this was for our troop. And the neighborhood was always full of enough scandal to do it.

For instance:

Knock on the door. Mr. Smith a middle age man, answers it.

GIRL SCOUT: Sir, would you like to buy a box of Girl Scout Cookies?

MAN: No!

GS: Please sir?

M: No!

GS: But sir, you wouldn't want me to tell people you stand in front of an open window at night in Mrs. Johnson's underwear, would you?

M: You're crazy kid. Now beat it.

M: Give me that!

GS: Buy a box of cookies and I'll give it to you.

M: Okay, Here's the money. Now give me the picture and beat it!

Door closes.

Door opens again.

M: Hey, the neg...

GS: Yes sir! The negative! You just buy four complete cases so I can win the award for selling the most cookies and I'll give you the negative.

M: What an excuse for birth control! Here's more money. Now give me the negative and scam!

GS: Why thank you sir. And sir?

M: Yes?

GS: There are more negatives where that one came from for next year.

M: Blackmail!

GS: And sir?

M: Yes!

Dear Editor:

It is amusing when an "expert" from over-fed America undertakes to tell the under-fed people of the world, their dietary failures. Your recent editorial (3-3-80) sounded like a page from Planned Parenthood. It was too simplistic, addressing only one phase of the world food problem, offering a solution meant to swell the coffers of those who deal in contraceptives.

There are sufficient "experts" other than the ones you refer to who agree there's really enough food for all but it is too unevenly distributed and too wastefully used by the few who have it in abundance.

Americans comprise roughly six percent of the world's population, but buy and use about 40 percent of the world's resources. It's as if 16 people went to a restaurant. One of those persons would get to spend $4 on a meal for himself, while each of the other 15 would get to spend 40 cents!

After making a two-year investigation of the daily garbage of 3,000 households in Tucson, Ariz., a University of Arizona study group found that each family discarded up to $100 worth of good edible food each year. Chunks of meat, untouched TV dinners, fruits and vegetables constituted most of the waste. The study estimated that Americans toss in the garbage cans as much as $10 billion worth of good edible food annually. There are some who fear that the U.S. may some day drown in its own garbage.

One of the reasons for population growth in poor nations is the hope that if parents have enough children, sufficient offspring will survive to provide for these same parents in their old age. Based on that assumption, population would decline quite naturally if these people had enough food so that more would survive to maturity.

You quoted a Spanish proverb. There is also a proverb which says: "Give a man a fish and you feed him for one day. Show him how to catch fish and you feed his family for life."

Economists (also experts perhaps?) at the U.S. Department of Agriculture point out that the world has come through at least five global food scares in modern times, going back to the dire predictions of overpopulation and mass starvation issued by Thomas Malthus in 1789. They insist the world will survive this scare, too — if governments will give top priority to growing food instead of madly producing more and costlier armaments, and getting it to places where it is sorely needed and at a price the people can afford.

Birth control as you speak of it, would not be effective as a means of helping the food problem until some future time. (By the way, how come you didn't mention Natural Family Planning? Even Planned Parenthood is reluctantly aware of it). Better methods of food distribution, less consumerism, by rich nations, and less waste by all of us would be far more immediately helpful. But it's far easier to fault the other fellow!

Someone said: "Some day 200 million or 300 million underprivileged people are going to start walking west, and I don't see how anyone is going to stop them." West is where all the food is!

Dear Editor:

Hip, hip, hooray for Gov. Clements. In last Thursday's paper it was reported that Clements would veto any bill passed by the Texas legislature giving Texas State Teachers Association the right to bargain collectively. Much of the public believe that TSTA speaks for all teachers in Texas, but it does not, this includes myself and many other teachers who belong to other teachers organizations. If TSTA had the right to bargain collectively that would be comparable to telling the public they could join any political party but that only the Democratic party could be heard!

There are other teachers' organizations in Texas, including the one I belong to (Texas Professional Educators). These other organizations came about several years ago for various reasons, one being that many teachers were opposed to TSTA being an associate of and adopting the controlling by-laws of the National Education Association (NEA). NEA is a very powerful union (and TSTA for that matter) and if one doubts that is a union, all one has to do is watch television and read past newspaper articles and Readers' Digest articles where the leaders of NEA and TSTA have openly called the organizations unions. It seems to me there are many teachers being misled by their own organizations.

NEA is so powerful that there have been teachers fired because they did not join NEA. I have been to teachers' meetings where teachers have told of receiving a low evaluation because they did not join TSTA. Some administrators refuse to give out any information to their teachers about teachers' organizations other than TSTA. I have been told by teachers (in other school districts) that their local TSTA units always make their school counselors officers because they do not have anything else for them to do.

Did you know that NEA spent $13,000,000 in 1975 to pass legislation that would give NEA exclusive representation and NEA will not release figures on what they have spent since then? No wonder NEA finally got their Department of Education! Education is the most important thing a society can do for its citizens, but spending more money for a new department doesn't mean the quality of education is going to improve, especially when the department was started because one organization wanted it.

Since the increasing growth of concerned teachers' organizations who oppose many things that TSTA-NEA do, TSTA-NEA have come out with slanderous remarks against these organizations. Some of the remarks have been so bad that I have been apologized to by some TSTA members who were embarrassed by the remarks of their own organization.

I agree that TSTA has done some commendable things for teachers and education in the past, but it has turned power hungry and the monster just keeps growing and growing. Their concern has turned to how they can control education more instead of how they can really improve the quality of education.

This letter is intended to be a message to the public. There are teachers' organizations which believe in teachers belonging to all or none of the professional organizations they choose, schools should be controlled locally by school board members and state legislators who are elected by the public, and that forced teachers' strikes are not commendable.

If anyone would like information about an organization other than NEA-TSTA please write to me at the following address:

Re the Action-reaction question posed in Wednesday's Herald, Westex Board Co., is now in the process of cleaning up the Polystyrene foam scattered in the area of the old Howard County Airport.

A large pile of scrap foam was left beside the terminal hangar by American Thermo Custom Molding Co. Most of this has been removed by Westex Board Co. The foam scattered around the perimeter is being removed — as help is available.

We appreciate the concern of all and assure you the area will be cleaned.

Iranian students won't cooperate

MONROE, La. (AP) — Forty-seven jailed Iranians, on the fourth day of a hunger strike, claim they were arrested in retaliation for the seizure of the 50 Americans held hostage in Iran, and will not cooperate at their arraignment today, their lawyer says.

"Apparently the officers were trying to get the magic number of 50," lawyer Marion Overton White said Sunday.

"The arrest is political and racial. They were singled out as Iranians and arrested. Some of them were arrested off of the campus, others were arrested in the parking lot, others were arrested in their cars," he said.

The 47, and another Iranian who was released on $100 bond Saturday, were arrested after they broke up a speech by a former Iranian diplomat Thursday at Northeast Louisiana University.

They were held on charges of trespassing and resisting police officers after they shouted down Fereydoon Hoveyda, Iran's ambassador to the United Nations under the deposed shah.

White said they had broken no laws and had not heckled, but only asked questions the audience did not like.

He said two Americans, an Italian and an Arab were arrested with the Iranians, but released without being charged when police learned their nationalities.

Police officers on duty Sunday night were unable to confirm or deny his claims. "I don't know. I wasn't there," said Sgt. Don McClanahan, the supervisor on duty.

The Iranians were scheduled for arraignment today, but White said they would not cooperate because they felt doing so would condone the arrests. "Based on their religious belief they cannot condone a wrongful act," he said.

"I don't expect them to go in unless they're brought in. They're not going to volunteer. And if they are brought in they will remain silent," he said.

City Attorney Patrick White said that would not stop the arraignment. Those who refuse to walk to court would be carried in one by one, he said. The refusal by the only woman in the group and 34 of the men to give their names will not stop the hearing either, he added.

"They'll be arraigned as John Doe One, John Doe Two and so forth," he said. "They've already been photographed and fingerprinted. Their pictures and their prints will be attached to the affidavit that sets out the charge against them. They will be arraigned."

State law requires court officials to enter pleas of innocent for defendants who say nothing, he said.

Earlier Sunday, a group of 30 to 40 Iranians was refused permission to visit the jailed students, who have refused to eat or drink anything but sugar water since their arrest.

Family tradition stumps Social Security people

What's in a name, besides confusion?

MORRIS PLAINS, N.J. (AP) — A family tradition of naming the first son after his father has produced at least five different Ernest Peias and a very confused Social Security Administration.

Ernest Peia of Morris Plains was issued three different Social Security numbers over 30 years due to the confusion. He celebrates his 66th birthday next month and hopes officials can straighten out the mess so he can collect his Social Security benefits when he retires.

Besides Ernie, named for his father, other Ernest Peias are Ernie's son and grandson. Several relatives also are named Ernie, including his sister-in-law's son, her son's son, his brother-in-law, his brother-in-law's son, and his brother-in-law's son's son.

"And believe it or not, I have a sister named Ernestine," Peia says.

And if that weren't enough to fuel the bureaucratic confusion, he's got a cousin — another Ernest Peia — also living in New Jersey.

Both men had mothers named Josephine and married women named Anna.

"It's possible, even probable, that some of my lifetime earnings may have been credited to my cousin," Peia said.

The trouble started in 1951, when Peia, an independent milk dealer, began paying into the Social Security system for the first time.

Within weeks, the Social Security Administration issued him a second number, explaining that he might have been using the wrong number for the previous 14 years.

Over the next 16 years, Peia answered many requests from the agency for additional personal information, always giving his most recently issued number.

In 1967, the Internal Revenue Service told Peia he had been using the wrong Social Security number. So the Social Security Administration promptly issued Peia another number, his third, advising him it had no record of any number besides the one issued in 1937 — his first.

Worried about what might become of his Social Security benefits when he retired, Peia searched for other Ernest Peias and found his cousin in Hawthorne.

Peia of Morris Plains was born April 6, 1914, while his cousin's date of birth was April 5 — two years earlier.

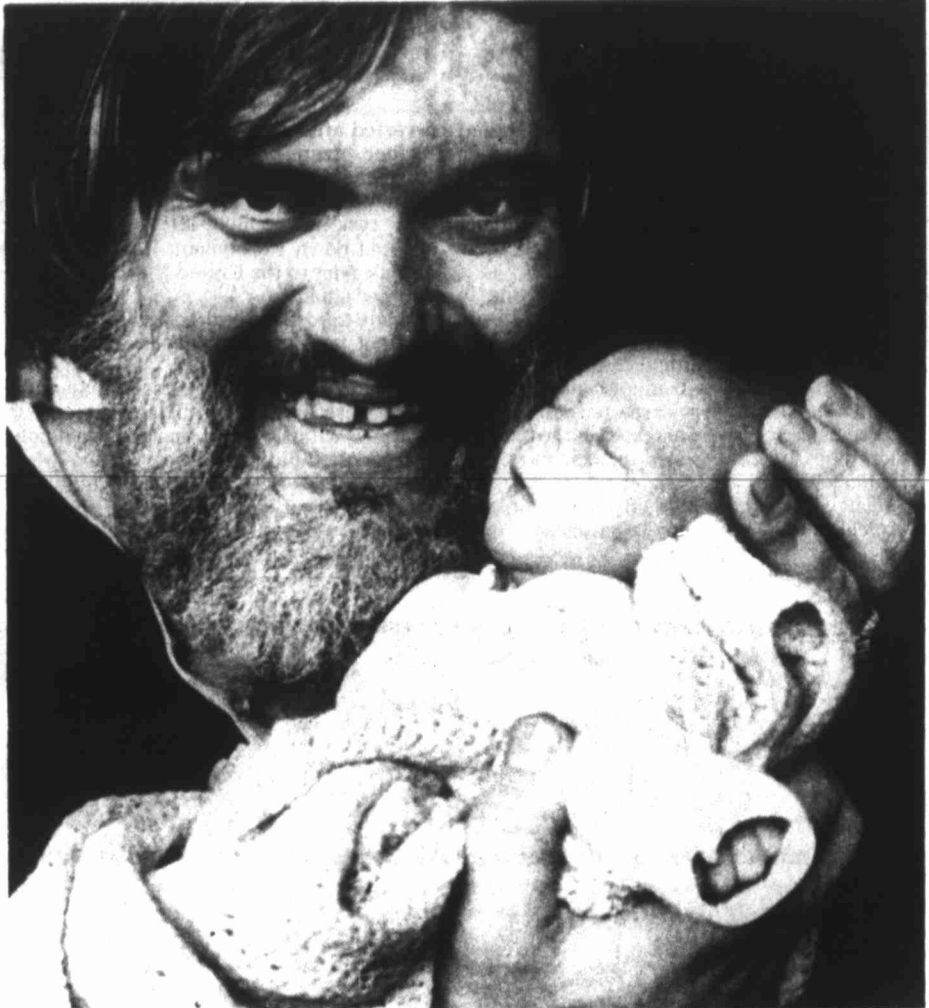

"And with our wives and mothers having the same first names, well, you don't see that happening too often," the Morris Plains Peia said.

His cousin, Peia said, also had been questioned on occasion about his Social Security number. The only difference was in middle initials.

"I've never used my middle initial — 'P' — on anything," Peia said. "If I had, maybe all this could have been avoided."

Meanwhile, Rep. Millicent Fenwick, R-N.J., calling Peia's problem "truly amazing," has asked the Social Security Administration to investigate and clear up the problem.

"I may yet get a chance to retire," said Peia.

LIKE FATHER, LIKE SON? — Actor Richard Kiel, whom audiences most remember as the steel-toothed "Jaws" in two recent films about British agent James Bond, holds his infant son Christopher Martin, for recent picture taking at the actor's home in Los Angeles. The baby, born in late February, weighed 7 pounds 10 ounces, a long way from the 335 pounds and 7 feet 2 inches of his father.

Assassin of Larry Flynt still eluding police two years later

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga. (AP) — The $1 million reward for information has never been claimed and a team of detectives still is assigned to the case. But two years later, police admit they don't have much hope of catching the mysterious assailant who gunned down sex magazine owner Larry Flynt.

It happened in broad daylight, during a lunch break in his trial on charges of distributing obscene materials.

The Hustler magazine owner and his attorney Gene Reeves were strolling back to the courtnouse on March 6, 1978, in this small Georgia town some 25 miles northeast of Atlanta when a gunman opened fire.

Flynt, 36, remains paralyzed below the waist. Confined to a wheelchair, he suffers chronic, excruciating pain, his associates say. Rarely seen in public, he recently completed therapy in a Los Angeles hospital to kick his addiction to painkilling drugs.

Reeves recovered from his wounds.

"There are no new developments," said Gwinnett County Police Sgt. Terry Johnson.

Even with a squad of homicide detectives still on the case, the investigation has slowed.

"Nobody had been picked up. All leads have virtually been exhausted," he said.

"As far as I know, in conversations I've had or overheard Larry having, the authorities have pretty much wound down the investigation," said Jan Rogers, the director of Flynt's public relations organization.

"Who knows why? Perhaps if Larry wasn't who he is they would have expended more energy," she said.

Clearing Customs -- I do declare

By the Associated Press

The U.S. Customs Service is trying to get people who travel overseas to plan for their return before they ever leave home.

The Customs Service, which is a branch of the Treasury Department, is responsible for checking and collecting duty on the billions of dollars worth of foreign goods brought into the country each year by businesses, overseas visitors and returning U.S. residents.

The agency has started a campaign to get travel agents to distribute customs forms and brochures along with airline documents and hotel reservation slips. If your travel agent doesn't volunteer the information, ask for it.

Individuals can get the same package of information by writing to U.S. Customs, P.O. Box 7118, Washington, D.C. 20044. Among the pamphlets available are "Customs Hints for Returning U.S. Residents," "Know Before You Go," "Importing a Car" and "Travelers' Tips," which deals with bringing foods and other plant and animal products into the country.

As a general rule, U.S. residents returning from a foreign country can bring in up to $300 worth of merchandise, duty-free, per person, including infants and children. That works out to $600 per couple or $1,200 for a family of four. If your purchases total less than the maximum, you can make an oral declaration. You do not have to list each item on the customs form. You do, however, have to fill out the identification section of the form, listing name, address, etc. There is a higher limit — $400 per person, duty-free — for residents returning from the U.S. Virgin Islands, American Samoa or Guam.

There are several strings attached to the $300, duty-free exemption. You must be returning from a stay of at least 48 hours abroad. You are not entitled to the exemption, for example, if you drive across the border to Mexico or Canada to spend the day. In addition, you can use the exemption only once every 30 days. If you have used any part of the exemption in the preceding 30 days or have stayed out of the country for less than 48 hours, your duty-free limit drops to $25.

If you are bringing in more than a liter of alcoholic beverages, a carton of cigarettes or 100 cigars, you must make a written declaration, no matter what the value. You also must make a written declaration if you have items not for your personal or household use.

If your purchases add up to more than $300 per person, you will have to list them all. The first $300 worth will be exempt from duty. The next $600 worth will be taxed at a flat rate of 10 percent. Suppose a husband, wife and one child are returning from abroad. Their purchases total $1,100. The first $900 — $300 per person — is duty free. The remaining $200 is subject to a duty of 10 percent — $20.

Goods worth more than $900 per person are taxed on a sliding scale. Still cameras, for example, are subject to a duty of 7 1/2 percent. Most jewelry is taxed at 12 percent.

It's time for a comeback

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — America is inching toward taking a giant step backward, returning to 50-year-old technology to help ease the energy squeeze of the 1980s.

The technology in question is energy "cogeneration," in which electricity is generated by "fuel" that would otherwise be wasted — industrial steam that spews into the air or wood chips and trash that can be burned to create more steam.

The steam can then be channeled into turning power-generating turbines.

The net effect is almost a doubling in fuel efficiency. From a level of 35 percent to 40 percent in a normal plant to 75 percent to 80 percent with cogeneration. By getting double duty from fuel, half as much is needed.

It's all part of the trend to alternate power sources such as solar and wind power, and experts say cogeneration promises a drastic reduction in U.S. dependence on imported oil and nuclear power.

"It is the immediately available energy alternative to coal and nuclear plants," says Jim Harding of the environmental group, Friends of the Earth.

"It will be energy at bargain prices, compared to building big new power plants," says Bob Burt of the California Manufacturers Association.

"There is a 6,000-megawatt potential in cogeneration in California alone — the equivalent of six 1,000-megawatt nuclear plants," says Claire Dedrick, a member of the state Public Utilities Commission.

Cogeneration is not some new trend being touted only by "California-type" conservationists. The huge Dow Chemical company has taken to cogeneration in a big way, according to Andy Hoch, manager of Dow's plant in Pittsburg, about 40 miles east of San Francisco.

"In all our Dow sites, we have gone to cogeneration," he said. "It doubles our efficiency and cuts our costs. You end up using half the fuel."

The Pittsburg plant has been self-sufficient in electricity and steam used in processing since the cogeneration system was completed in 1977 for about $12 million, Hoch said.

In the 1930s, U.S. industry got 25 percent of its electricity from cogeneration. Now cogeneration provides only 4 percent of the country's generating capacity.

Observers say that starting 50 years ago, utilities turned from cogeneration to the "economy of scale," favoring the construction of ever bigger power plants because that was cheaper — until the prices of oil and natural gas skyrocketed.

"It's an idea whose time has come back," says the PUC's Ms. Dedrick, a major supporter of cogeneration.

"If taken to its logical conclusion, cogeneration can make this country self-sufficient in energy — if included with municipal waste use and renewal fuel such as wood and alcohol.

"It has a number of environmental and economic advantages," Ms. Dedrick adds. "It is relatively inexpensive, a conventional technology. Cogeneration plants can be on-line in three to five years, as opposed to 10 years for a large nuclear or coal-fired power plant.

"Properly developed, cogeneration could reduce our dependence on imported oil by 30 percent in three years. And the overall air pollution would be less with cogeneration."

The PUC is pushing power companies to use cogeneration. Last December it penalized the giant Pacific Gas & Electric Co. $7 million in a rate decision because commissioners were dissatisfied with PG&E's attitude on cogeneration.

The PUC says the utility can recoup the penalty if it moves aggressively toward cogeneration.

"Cogeneration is a significant energy source and is going to become more important in the future — no doubt about it," says Charles Peterson, spokesman for PG&E, which provides electricity and natural gas to most of northern and central California.

Joseph Orlando, president of the year-old International Cogeneration Society in Washington, D.C., says Congress should offer tax credits to further encourage cogeneration.

"There are a lot of uncertainties about the future because of marginal economics," says Orlando. "There are too few incentives for plants to invest in cogeneration, but that is starting to turn around as the price of energy goes up."

Half of the potential Ms. Dedrick sees for California would come from steam that would be used to liquify an extremely thick crude oil in California's Kern County so it could be pumped from the ground.

Goldfish sell for $10,000

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP) — Marvin Johnson believes he has the largest and only fancy goldfish farm outside the Orient, raising its stock from Japanese pedigreed specimens worth $10,000 or more.

Johnson's prize $200,000 orange and white ranchu — a bulky, 4-pound, short-bodied fish that appears to wiggle rather than swim — recently won an unprecedented triple crown, the grand awards in Japan, London and North America.

Johnson has spent at least two months in Japan every year since 1958 studying and raising Japanese gold fish.

He now sends fish by the truckload to 300 pet shops in North California. Thousands more are airfreighted to shops as far away as Chicago.

Last year the farm raised 1.5 million goldfish in 12 varieties.

By the Associated Press
Snow was falling in the northern part of the nation, and rain pelted the Ohio Valley and parts of the South.

There was scattered snow over Minnesota into the Dakotas, as well as over the lower Great Lakes and northern Rockies. Strong, gusty winds blew through northern Wyoming.

It rained in the Ohio Valley, and showers and thundershowers fell over northern Florida. It was foggy along the Gulf Coast.

Rising waters were washing out roads circling the lake and threatened to isolate some homes. Since a series of devastating rainstorms began in February, 250 homes have been evacuated and 650 mobile homes have been moved, authorities said.

Chickenpox pops up across Texas

By mid-February, 149 more chickenpox cases had been reported to the Texas Department of Health than during the same time last year. Since this highly infectious disease usually occurs during winter and early spring, Texas may expect more cases before the outbreak subsides, the Texas Medical Association says.

The association is urging parents to help control this problem by keeping the chickenpox victim isolated for at least six days after the first blisters appear.

People catch the disease during the infectious stage from virus in droplets from the victim's nose and throat or by contact with contaminated clothing. Although mainly a childhood disease, adults who never have had chickenpox can get it unless they have had the disease already. Having it once almost always makes a person immune.

Symptoms may not appear until two or three weeks after exposure to the disease. Then 24-36 hours before the first skin signs appear, mild headache, fever and fatigue may overtake the victim. The contagious stage starts at this time and lasts until about six days after the first blisters appear.

Early skin symptoms can imitate allergic rashes, insect bites or other skin problems. But in 24-48 hours they develop into the characteristic itchy, clear, often oozy chickenpox. Two to four crops of blisters appear within two to six days of each other and can show up anywhere on the body, including the inside of the mouth. Most appear on the chest and back.

Keeping victims isolated while they are contagious is important because there is no vaccine and nothing can be done to shorten the length of the disease.

Something can be done to relieve itching and possible side effects. Wet compresses and baking soda baths (add about 1/2 cup to a bathtub) will help relieve most itching. Gargling with salt water will soothe blisters in the mouth. Severe itching may require treatment by a physician.

A doctor also should be consulted if blisters become infected and run pus. Although other complications may occur occasionally, infected blisters are the most common complications of the disease. To prevent scarring from scratching and infected blisters, the patient's fingernails should be kept short and clean. The patient also should be bathed regularly to decrease the possibility of infecting the blisters.

Texas Business and Industry Week' proclamation issued

Gov. Bill Clements has issued a proclamation which designates the week of April 1-7 as "Texas Business and Industry Week" (TBIW).

Sponsored annually by the Texas Association of Business (TAB), through the cooperation of Texas chambers of commerce, TBIW is a time chosen to honor Texas companies for contributions made to state and local economies.

The theme chosen for this year's celebration is Texas: Golden Buckle of the Sunbelt - TAB leading the way in the '80s. The Governor's Proclamation states, "Business and industry is one of Texas's greatest resources: During 1979 alone, 396 new and expanded plants created countless additional jobs for Texans and invested hundreds of millions of dollars in the state's economy."

The celebration will include a variety of activities such as community-wide promotions of seminars, plant tours, special newspaper sections, radio and television interviews, career days and industrial fairs.

This annual statewide observance was established in 1951 as Texas Industrial Week by a concurrent resolution passed by the Texas Legislature. It was during 1979, in the 66th session of the Texas Legislature, that the name of the week was changed to Texas Business and Industry Week - to broaden the scope of the celebration.

Plan now to salute your local business and industry. For more information concerning this worthwhile celebration, contact: TBIW-TAB, 800 Fannin, Suite 240, Houston, Texas 77030, or phone (713) 790-1010.

Established in 1922, TAB, headquartered in Houston, is one of the largest and oldest state associations comprised of some 7,000 members and 4,000 member-firms.

Reagan testing domino theory

WASHINGTON (AP) - Ronald Reagan is testing the domino theory in three Deep South states that cotton to his kind of conservative politics.

The theory: as South Carolina goes so, perhaps, go Alabama, Georgia and Florida. It's not a bad bet in the South, although it didn't work that way for Reagan in New England.

The theory was propounded by former Texas Gov. John B. Connally before the South Carolina primary election that made him a former candidate as well. He should have bitten his tongue.

"I believe that what happens in South Carolina will have a tremendous impact on Florida, Alabama and Georgia," said Connally, who quit in defeat Sunday.

That left Bush to contest Reagan alone in the southern primaries Tuesday and Bush hardly is dealing from a position of strength. Reagan overwhelmed Connally and left Bush a distant third in the opening of the southern primary competition.

Connally, who quit after getting twice as many votes as Bush did in the South Carolina primary, had been saying for weeks that his campaign would begin with the South Carolina primary. It ended there, too.

Despite a costly, all-out campaign effort, Connally got only 30 percent of the vote. Reagan won with 54 percent.

Bush had said a respectable finish would suffice for him. He didn't define respectable, but it doesn't reach down to 15 percent of the vote, which is where he wound up. The shakier Bush looks, the more certain it is that former President Gerald R. Ford will move in soon for an effort to stop Reagan.

There's never been much doubt about Reagan's dominance in Alabama and Georgia. In the 1976 Republican primary in Georgia, Reagan got 68 percent of the vote; Ford, 32 percent.

Alabama didn't have a primary, but Reagan men dominated its 1976 delegation. In the Florida primary that year, Ford beat Reagan, 53 percent to 47 percent.

At the time that seemed likely to be a death blow to a staggering Reagan campaign, but he came back - with major assistance from other southern states - and narrowly lost the nomination to Ford.

Reagan swept the 25 delegates awarded in Saturday's South Carolina primary, and ran his national total to 62 of the 998 it will take to gain the 1980 GOP nomination. Bush is second with 36.

Connally was the second Republican to quit in a week. Sen. Howard H. Baker of Tennessee got out Wednesday. That left Bush and liberal Rep. John B. Anderson of Illinois, who is bypassing the South, as the only challengers to Reagan - until Ford is ready to take him on. Reagan said Connally's supporters would probably split among the other candidates, then added, "There aren't too many directions for them to go anymore."

Black exec is no token

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — It was a news item that went virtually unnoticed recently: "Elston Howard, longtime coach of the New York Yankees, elevated to administrative assistant by owner George Steinbrenner."
 It was a story that deserved greater attention. Howard is black. Baseball has been shaken recently by charges on the part of influential black stars — Hank Aaron, Frank Robinson and Lou Brock, particularly — of discrimination in the appointment of blacks to administrative and responsible positions.
 "When a black man's playing career is over, he has no place to go in the game," says Brock. "There's not even a black third base coach much less a manager," argues Robinson. Aaron, the all-time home run king, spurned an award ceremony attended by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn because of what he called inequities in the sport.
 Now a black man has moved into the executive quarters of one of baseball's most successful teams, and both employee and employer contend it is not a token gesture.

 "George assured me I wouldn't have to stand in the corner," says Howard. "I believe him. I wouldn't take it under such circumstances."
 "I never thought about color," insisted Steinbrenner. "Color should never be a factor. The only thing one should consider is qualifications. Howard filled the qualifications I wanted for the job."
 Howard has no reason to believe otherwise. After all, this wasn't a spontaneous act, spurred by the rising black protest. Steinbrenner had tried to lure the former All-Star catcher into the front office five or six years ago. "It was 1974 or 1975, we were still playing out games at Shea Stadium," Howard recalled. "Mr. Steinbrenner came to me and asked if I would be interested in an administrative assignment he had in mind. "I turned him down. I told him at the time that I'd prefer to stay in the field. "Okay, Ellie," he told me. "Let me know if you change your mind."

 The Yankee owner reinstated the proposition over the winter. Howard, who was away from the club last season, seriously ill with an infection in his chest, listened, thought the matter over carefully and agreed. "You will be with me," Steinbrenner told him.
 "For a long time I have admired Ellie's character and executive potential," Steinbrenner said. "I have four areas I want him to work in. I don't wish to specify. But when we are planning our teams and programs, he is at my side."
 Howard was elated over the prospect.
 "I will visit the farm club cities, such as Columbus, Nashville, and Fort Lauderdale," he said. "I will do some public relations things — speeches and dinners — and work with the organizations.

Aggies make NCAA semifinals

Big, bad Bruins shock critics

By the Associated Press
 The critics said UCLA, once the greatest dynasty in the history of college basketball, didn't belong in this year's NCAA Tournament, even though it seemed that every school under the sun was invited to the expanded 48-team field.
 But even after a disappointing 17-9 regular-season record and a dismal — for UCLA — fourth-place finish in the Pacific-10 Conference, Coach Larry Brown insisted that "our kids are one of the best 48 teams."
 On Sunday, the much-maligned Bruins became the big, bad bears again, regaining some of their past glory with a stunning 77-71 upset of once-beaten DePaul, the nation's No. 1-ranked team, in a second-round game at Tempe, Ariz.
 That left the Bruins one of 16 teams still in the race for the national championship and sent them on to the West Regionals at Tucson, Ariz., where they will meet 10th-ranked Ohio State Thursday night. The Buckeyes made it by eliminating No. 18 Arizona State 89-75 in the other half of the Tempe doubleheader.

 DePaul wasn't the only heralded team to taste defeat over a weekend in which seven of the 16 teams that received first-round byes were embarrassingly dispatched. Homeward-bound besides DePaul are fifth-ranked Oregon State, No. 9 Notre Dame, No. 12 Brigham Young, No. 13 St. John's, No. 15 North Carolina and unranked-but-seeded North Carolina State.
 In Sunday's Midwest doubleheader at Denton, Texas, third-ranked Louisiana State ended the nation's longest winning streak at 27 games by ousting Alcorn State 98-88, while Texas A&M knocked off North Carolina 78-61 in double overtime.
 In the Midwest at Bowling Green, Ky., fourth-ranked Kentucky flattened Florida State 97-78 while No. 7 Indiana turned back Virginia Tech 68-59. And in the East at Providence, R.I., sixth-ranked Syracuse whipped Villanova 97-83 and No. 11 Georgetown nipped No. 19 Iowa 74-71.

 On Saturday, eighth-ranked Maryland defeated Tennessee 86-75 and Iowa trimmed N.C. State 77-64 at Greensboro, N.C.; second-ranked Louisville edged Kansas State 71-69 and No. 16 Missouri outlasted Notre Dame 87-84 in a pair of overtime contests at Lincoln, Neb.; No. 20 Purdue trounced St. John's 87-72 and No. 14 Duke turned back Penn State 52-42 at West Lafayette, Ind., and Lamar shocked Oregon State 81-77 while Clemson upset Brigham Young 71-66 at Odgen, Utah.
 The next round looks like this:
 Midwest, at Lexington, Ky., March 13-15 — Kentucky-Duke and Indiana-Purdue.
 West, at Tucson, March 13-15 — UCLA-Ohio State and Clemson-Lamar.
 East, at Philadelphia, March 14-16 — Syracuse-Iowa and Maryland-Georgetown.
 Midwest, at Houston,

March 14-16 — Louisville-Texas A&M and LSU-Missouri.
 The East-Midwest and Midwest-West survivors play for the national championship March 24 at Indianapolis.
 A young UCLA team fought off several DePaul challenges in ousting the sentimentally favored Blue Demons of 66-year-old Coach Ray Meyer. Freshman Rod Foster scored 18 points and Mike Sanders added 15 in the Bruins' balanced attack.
 After a basket by DePaul All-American Mark Aguirre tied the score at 67 with 1:38 left, UCLA scored its last 10 points on free throws — six by sub Cliff Pruitt and two each by Sanders and Michael Holton.

 It was a tremendous triumph for Brown, in his first year as UCLA's coach. His predecessors, Gene Bartow and Gary Cunningham, both departed after two years in the pressure-packed shadow of the legendary John Wooden.
 In his thrill of victory, Brown took time to feel some of Meyer's agony of defeat.
 "Coach Meyer has meant so much to this game. Brown said. "It's kind of special to be on the same court as him, but sad to know his season is over. I told him I felt kind of funny about him losing.

Teenaged Net scores like old golfer

By the Associated Press
Elderly golfers are happy to shoot their age so you can imagine the elation felt by young Cliff Robinson Sunday when he shot more than twice his age as the New Jersey Nets clobbered the Detroit Pistons 140-100 in a National Basketball Association contest.

The 6-foot-9 rookie, who in three days will lose the distinction of being the NBA's only teenager, celebrated prematurely by gunning in a personal-high 45 points. He didn't start but played 36 minutes, canning 19 of 28 shots and 11 of his last 13.

"It's a pretty good birthday present," said Robinson, who played two seasons at Southern California but went hardship and was selected in the first round of last June's draft. "It's a great feeling. I really wanted to just go in there and help the team off the bench."

In other action, the Washington Bullets nipped the Boston Celtics 133-128 in overtime, the Philadelphia 76ers trounced the San Antonio Spurs 134-118, the Kansas City Kings whipped the Seattle SuperSonics 113-93, the Atlanta Hawks downed the New York Knicks 98-82, the Cleveland Cavaliers topped the Indiana Pacers 113-107, the Portland Trail Blazers thrashed the Los Angeles Lakers 142-121, the Phoenix Suns defeated the Chicago Bulls 113-103 in overtime and the Golden State Warriors flattened the San Diego Clippers 125-107.

Bullets 133, Celtics 128
Washington got help off the bench from an ex-Net. John Williamson, who scored 21 points, including seven in overtime, as the Bullets won for the eighth time in the last 10 games in their late-season push for a playoff berth. The Celtics, who had won nine games in a row, led 115-108 with 1:13 left in regulation time but Williamson's 10-foot jumper tied the score at 115. Washington's Elvin Hayes took scoring honors with 35 points. Rookie Larry Bird paced Boston with 13.

76ers 134, Spurs 118
Julius Erving and Doug Collins scored 24 points apiece as Philadelphia handed San Antonio its eighth consecutive defeat. The victory moved the 76ers to within two games of first-place Boston in the Atlantic Division. George Gervin of the Spurs led all scorers with 31 points.

Kings 113, SuperSonics 93
Gus Gerard and Scott Wedman led six Kansas City players in double figures as the Kings increased their lead over Milwaukee in the Midwest Division to two games and dropped Seattle one-half game behind Los Angeles in the Pacific. They swept to a 64-46 halftime lead and were never threatened. Gerard scored 19 points and Wedman added 18. The Sonics shot a cold 35 percent.

Hawks 98, Knicks 82
Dan Roundfield scored 31 points and grabbed 19 rebounds while John Drew added 28 points for Atlanta as the Hawks increased their Central Division lead over Houston to nine games and reduced their "magic number" to three. Drew's 21-foot jump shot with 28 seconds left snapped a 92-all tie and Drew and Eddie Johnson added two free throws apiece.

Cavaliers 113, Pacers 107
Randy Smith and Mike Mitchell combined for 57 points as Cleveland handed Indiana its eighth straight loss. The Pacers led by five points with four minutes left before Mitchell started the Cavaliers' winning 17-6 burst. A three-point play by Smith tied the game at 101 and there were three more deadlocks before a basket by Mitchell put Cleveland ahead to stay with a minute to go. Smith scored 29 points and Mitchell had 28.

Trail Blazers 142, Lakers 121
Dave Twardzik ignited an 84-point second-half outburst that propelled Portland to its highest output of the season and fourth triumph in five games against Los Angeles. The Blazers pulled one-half game ahead of San Diego in the race for the final Western Conference playoff spot.

The Lakers were outscored 41-26 in the third quarter as Portland's Calvin Natt scored 13 points.

Johnny is a winner again

LAUDERHILL, Fla. (AP) — Johnny's back. He may never again be the Johnny Miller he once was. But he's a winner again. And Johnny Miller is very happy with it.

"This was really special," the 32-year-old Miller said after a front-running, 2-under-par 70 had given him a 2-shot victory in the Jackie Gleason-Inverrary Classic.

It marked his first American triumph in four years, made him once again a factor to be considered in a game that desperately needs its heroes, and wrote an end to one of the game's most puzzling slumps.

"The key is that Johnny Miller has grown up," he said. "And it's great to win again."

Miller opened the final round with a 2-stroke lead. Three quick birdies put him in 5-shot command. It seemed as if it would be a breeze.

But, with veteran Charles Coody and Bruce Lietzke putting on the pressure, the margin began to dwindle in the muggy heat.

When Johnny bogeyed the 14th — the only green he missed — the margin was cut to two. And he missed birdie putts of eight feet or less on the next two holes.

But a par on 17 sent him to the last tee with a 2-shot lead and when he put his approach on the green the victory was his.

He was applauded by Lietzke and Coody, who tied for second, two shots back of Miller's winning 274 total, 14 strokes under par on the Inverrary Golf Club course.

"Johnny Miller playing well and winning again is a definite asset to the tour," Lietzke said after his closing 66. Coody, who shot a 67, said "We're all glad to see Johnny playing well again."

Bill Rogers and defending champion Larry Nelson, each with a final round 69, trailed Lietzke and Coody by a shot at 277.

The group at 278 included Mike Hill, Doug Tewell, Jim Simons and Dave Eichelberger. Simons shot a 68, Eichelberger 69, Tewell 70 and Hill 72.

Jack Nicklaus, trying a comeback of his own, scrambled to a one-over-par 73 and was well back at 292. It was only the third time in nine tournaments on this course that Nicklaus had not finished fourth or better.

It wasn't Jack's day. This one belonged to Johnny and brought back memories of the golfer he once was.

Game very interesting, or . . .

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — If Texas' 6-10 center LaSalle Thompson gets into foul trouble during tonight's second-round National Invitation Tournament game with Southwestern Louisiana, the contest will get "very interesting."

"Or, it could get very uninteresting, depending on your point of view," says Texas assistant coach Barry Dowd.

"Brad Olson, the freshman we were using as a backup for LaSalle, broke his foot in practice Friday," Dowd said. "Rob Cunningham, who we have used during the year, has a virus that has given him an enlarged spleen and he is out now. So we don't have much depth at center," Dowd concluded.

Texas, 19-10, finished third in the Southwest Conference to earn its NIT berth, while Southwestern Louisiana, 20-8, was runnerup in the Southland Conference.

The Longhorns defeated St. Joseph's University 70-61 Wednesday night in first-round action and will have the home floor advantage against the Ragin' Cajuns, a cat-quick guard, says Paschal, who's "the second all-time leading scorer in the history of the school, one of the top scorers in the nation and probably one of the best guards in the country."

Toney was injured much of the season and sat out many of the games his team lost. Neither team is promising any surprises for the contest.

"We'll do what we have been doing all year," Dowd said. "We won't make any changes because we can't. This club is young and it's taken a long time to learn some things and this is not a good time to be teaching them anything new."

"We don't try to make any big, wholesale adjustment for any one team," Paschal said. "We just try to make the little ones. We don't worry as much about the other team. . . . We just try to do what we do as well as we possibly can."

Christina's marriage ends

LONDON (AP) — He got a ship and she kept a cocker spaniel when the marriage of Christina Onassis and husband No. 3, Sergei Kauzov, ended, the Greek shipping heiress was quoted as saying in a London newspaper today.
The Daily Express said Miss Onassis divorced her Russian husband of 18 months in Switzerland two weeks ago. "It was quite amicably arranged," she said.
The London tabloid had reported Kauzov was suspected of being a Soviet police agent, ordered to pursue Miss Onassis, marry her and get information on Western oil reserves and supplies.
But Miss Onassis told the paper: "I still don't believe that Sergei was a spy. Anyway, what could he get out of me? Do you suppose we talked about oil in bed together?"

Phillips fired from series

NEW YORK (AP) — Mackenzie Phillips was fired from television's "One Day at a Time" last week because of "a drug-related medical problem," People magazine says.
The magazine quotes Barbara Brogliatti, a spokeswoman for Norman Lear's T.A.T. Productions as saying, "I consider this firing a step toward saving a child's life. The kid's in real trouble."
Pat McQueeney, manager for the 20-year-old actress, said, "Mackenzie has been railroaded out of this series, and that's shabby treatment for the success she brought it."
McQueeney said Miss Phillips was recently taken off the set in hysterics and given tests for drugs. "When I finally got my hands on the lab reports, they showed she had nothing in her blood and a minute trace of cocaine in her urine. My God, the kid has been exposed to coke since she was 12. It could have been left over from God knows how long ago."

Pope John Paul II ailing

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II canceled a visit to a parish church in Rome because of a mild form of influenza, the Vatican said.
It was believed to be the first time the robust 59-year-old Polish pontiff had taken ill since his election in October 1978.
On Friday, the Vatican said the pope would be forced to cancel all activities until Monday. But he appeared at the window of his apartment overlooking St. Peter's Square for his usual Sunday blessing.

Death threats net jailing

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Alleged death threats in a letter to actor Henry Fonda and his two children, Jan and Peter, have led to the jailing of an unemployed West Los Angeles man.
Raymond Bradley, 31, was held in lieu of $10,000 bail after being booked Saturday for investigation of making terrorist threats, a state charge, said police Sgt. Jack Wells.

Demos to tackle preference poll

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Members of the State Democratic Executive Committee decide today whether voters at the May 3 Democratic primary will take part in a "beauty contest" of presidential candidates.
Technically, the 62-member committee's main task today was to certify all Democratic candidates whose names will appear on the primary ballot.
However, the first order of business was expected to be a much-discussed presidential preference poll.
The committee decided last July against picking national convention delegates on the basis of a presidential straw vote, as Texas Republicans will do.

Ford to feel new pressures?

By The Associated Press
Fourteen months, $10 million and one delegate after entering the Republican presidential derby, John Connally is out of the race.
He quit Sunday, a day after losing badly to Ronald Reagan in South Carolina, and two days before primaries in Georgia, Alabama and Florida — all states where Reagan is heavily favored.
Connally called Reagan "still the champion."
With Connally out, former President Gerald Ford is sure to feel new and heavy pressure to challenge Reagan, whom Ford considers too conservative to win the White House. Ford has said there is a 50-50 chance he will step in to try to deny Reagan the nomination.
But Connally, who entered as Reagan's major conservative challenger, in effect disagreed. Connally said he thinks Reagan could wrest the presidency from Jimmy Carter, who is seeking a second term, because "Carter's popularity is a fantasy."
As for the three states with Republican primaries Tuesday, Reagan seems clearly the front-runner.
Former U.N. Ambassador George Bush, who finished a distant third in South Carolina behind Reagan and Connally, has hardly campaigned in Georgia and has had an Alabama organization only since Thanksgiving. In Florida, a poll published Sunday by the Miami Herald gave Reagan the lead.
Reagan, campaigning today in Florida, said he did not think Connally's departure would affect his own campaign. Connally's backers would probably split among the remaining contenders, Reagan said, adding, "There aren't too many directions for them to go any more."

Meanwhile, an ABC News-Lou Harris poll taken last week and released Sunday said Ford would defeat Carter if the election were held today and that the former president may be a slight favorite over Reagan among Republicans and independent voters for the GOP nomination.
The poll gave Ford a 54-44 percent margin over Carter, with the other 2 percent not sure. But Carter would defeat Reagan by a 58-40 margin, the same poll showed. Two percent were not sure.
Among Republicans and independents only, Ford was favored by 33 percent and Reagan by 27 percent for the GOP nomination. The ABC-Harris polls generally have error margins of about 6 percentage points either way, and thus Ford and Reagan may have split the vote, with Ford perhaps slightly ahead.
Bush, heading for last-minute campaigning in Alabama, said he may get some votes Tuesday that would otherwise have gone to Connally.
Even if he loses in the three primaries Tuesday and in the Illinois primary next week, Bush said, he will stay in the race through the party's national convention in July.
Bush has said he is the most viable Republican alternative to Reagan and on Sunday, addressing himself to the prospect of a Ford candidacy, he said he's convinced "the American people are not interested in any rerun of the 1976 election."
Of Connally, Bush said he felt sympathy for the man whose 30 percent of the South Carolina doubled his own 15 percent. Reagan, however, dwarfed both with 54 percent, enough to capture all of the state's 25 convention delegates.
Connally, at his Houston news conference, noted that he had finished "not a very close second," and said he would do some things differently, if he had it to do over again, but added "I don't know if it would make any difference."
He had stayed out of the New England primaries to concentrate on South Carolina. But toward the end, the former Texas governor, who had rejected federal matching funds in favor of private support, was in financial trouble. And despite an earlier effort in lowa and the all-out South Carolina push, Connally had won only one delegate, 67-year-old Ada Mills of Clarksville, Ark.

Connally, with his wife at his side, told an audience of reporters and several hundred supporters that he was "disturbed that somehow we have failed to bring into focus the issues that will affect this nation in the future." He entered the race Jan. 24, 1979.
Campaigning in Wisconsin, meanwhile, John B. Anderson predicted Connally's pulout would have no effect in the Midwest. "The Midwest is a different story...I do not believe that Connally was much of a factor in Illinois anyway," said Anderson, who is concentrating his efforts on the March 18 primary in his home state.
