Economy finally moving downward

WASHINGTON (AP) — After months of fits and starts, the nation's economy apparently is finally moving into a long-predicted recession — its seventh since World War II. A range of economic indicators, from housing to jobs, say the downturn has begun.

"While there was a brief period of doubt earlier this year about which direction the economy was going, the preponderance of evidence in the last several weeks all seems to point toward the fact that a recession is now setting in," said William Cox, deputy chief economist at the Commerce Department.

Most analysts, including those for the Carter administration, predict the downturn will be mild. But they admit that before it's over, as many as 1 million or 2 million persons could lose their jobs.

A recession traditionally has been defined as two consecutive quarters of declining national output. Government statistics due for release Friday are expected to show that the economy continued to grow in the first quarter, leaving the "official" start of the downturn for the second-quarter — April through June.

But Nancy Teeters, a member of the Federal Reserve Board, told a gathering of bankers Wednesday that she thinks the recession has already started, probably in March or early April.

"I personally think the peak of the last cycle is behind us," she said, referring to the period of economic growth since the last recession in 1974-75.

There are many reasons for the current recession, which is expected to last six to nine months. They range from the rapid increase in world oil prices — which is diverting money from non-fuel uses — to high interest rates engineered by the Federal Reserve in an effort to get a tighter rein on money and credit.

The auto and housing industries began slumping last year. Drop-offs in those industries have increased, and signs now point to problems in other sectors.

While unemployment will be the cost of this slowdown, the benefit could be some relief from inflation, which has been soaring at an 18 percent annual rate in recent months.

Treasury Secretary G. William Miller told a Senate Finance subcommittee Wednesday that he expects the rate of increase in consumer prices to drop to an annual rate of 10 percent or less by early next year.

Among the signs that recession is finally at hand:

HOUSING: The Commerce Department reported Wednesday that construction of new homes fell 22 percent from February to March — to an annual rate of 1,041,000 units. That was 42 percent below the annual rate of 1,800,000 housing starts reported in March 1979 and the lowest construction level since the 1974-75 recession.

INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITY: The nation's factories operated at only 83 percent of capacity last month, the Federal Reserve reported Wednesday. That is down nearly a full percentage point from February and is the lowest level since March 1978. Earlier this week, the Fed said production at the nation's factories fell a sharp 0.8 percent in March following a 0.2 percent drop in February. "Reductions in output (were) widespread," the report said.

RETAIL SALES: Sales at retail stores — a key measure of consumer spending — slumped for the second consecutive month in March, the Commerce Department reported late last week. March sales of $77.2 billion were 1.3 percent below February sales, which, in turn, had been down 1.6 percent from January sales.

AUTOS: Industry figures released Tuesday showed domestic car sales got off to the worst start for an April since the recession year of 1975 and were down 25 percent from a year ago. Ford Motor Co. announced Tuesday that it was closing three plants and reducing work at four other locations, eliminating about 15,000 jobs. More than 200,000 auto workers already are on layoff because of poor sales. Then on Wednesday, General Motors announced 12,000 layoffs.

INTEREST RATES: The bond market, which had been depressed for weeks, rallied Wednesday after Henry Kaufman, chief economist of the investment banking firm of Salomon Brothers, said he thought the peak in interest rates had been reached as the economy was on the "precipice of another recession."

As bond rates plunged, the Chase Manhattan Bank lowered its prime lending rate from 20 percent to 19 1/2 percent in the first reduction by a major bank since December. Some smaller banks reduced their prime rates to as low as 18 1/2 percent.

EMPLOYMENT: Labor Department figures released earlier this month showed unemployment rose to 6.2 percent in March from February's 6 percent. The ominous signs were a drop in the total number of jobs in the economy and an increase in unemployment among adult males, which hints of trouble in the construction and manufacturing industries.

FRASER DEMANDS ACTION ON LAYOFFS — United Auto Workers President Douglas Fraser speaks to newsmen Wednesday after announcing that 800 union officials will go to Washington May 8 to demand action on industry layoffs. Layoffs by the Big Three automakers have exceeded 220,000.

Single voting box unlikely for local election April 28

Officials at City Hall are not optimistic today that Washington will give them permission to consolidate the five voting boxes into one in the upcoming April 28 runoff.

Tom Ferguson, City Finance Director and head of the city election, contacted the Voting Rights Division

Tuesday about a variance in the voting locations for the April 28 Place 2 runoff that has Hal Boyd running unopposed.

"I asked the Department of Justice about an oral variance," Ferguson said. He added that he was proposing to gain a verbal okay for consolidating the boxes and then approval for submitting the necessary paperwork to Washington later.

Ferguson said he did not get in touch with the head of the Voting Rights Division, John McCune.

He did speak with others within the division.

"They did not feel they could grant us one," City Manager Don Davis said of the opinion of other staff members within the division.

Ferguson said he will attempt to speak with McCune again today and get a final word on the variance.

Davis said, "If we don't hear anything today, then we are out." The reason for this is under law the city must advertise an election not less than 10 days prior to its taking place.

Because the runoff is set for April 28, the city must have an official notice in the Big Spring Herald on Friday.

The consolidation plan called for the city to have one polling place on April 28. This was to be at the Central Fire Station. In the April 5 election the city held the election at the Northside Fire Station, the 11th and Birdwell Fire Station, the 18th and Main Fire Station, Airport Elementary School, as well as at the Central Fire Station.

The cost to the city of holding the election at one location would be about $200, Ferguson said. This figure compares to that of $1,000 for having the runoff in five locations.

County census 1980—II

Are you in the picture?

By STEVE HERSBERGER

The U.S. Census Bureau has almost completed the largest peace-time mobilization this country has ever undertaken, Paula Marble, a public relations coordinator in the San Antonio office, said.

"Some 300,000 people have been used to paint a picture of this country," Marble said.

She added, "It is a portrait. You freeze everybody on April 1 and paint a picture of this country."

In painting this picture, the Bureau of the Census operated 409 district offices throughout the United States and used a total of 65,000 desks. The total number of questionnaires answered will be around 86 million, meaning 5,000 tons of paper.

All this translates into 3.3 billion answers, 300,000 pages of statistics and 5,000 miles of microfilm.

"It is a statistical picture of the community," Marble said. "This goes for the nation right down to the (neighborhood) block."

The cost for this piece of artwork will be $1 billion, Lubbock District Office manager Mitzi Jordan quoted the Herald.

Senator John Tower (R-Texas) said, "If our Founding Fathers knew what they had started when they called for a census every 10 years, they would be horrified."

The functions of the census are multifarious and have been evolving.

Marble said, "Basically census data is a political tool."

Jordan added, "First, census results determine our representation in government at all levels. From the U.S. House of Representatives, State, County and city government right down to the local school board seats in elected governing bodies are apportioned according to census population figures."

The census, as Marble said, is a statistical picture, and it has been used more as an indicator for government programs.

Marble said the census gives governmental leaders a break down of income levels, age and educational levels of the community. From these figures, needs can be determined; government policy can be created.

Over 100 federal agencies use census data to distribute money. Programs dealing with employment, health, education and agriculture are tied to census information.

Marble said this expansionary use of census data is demonstrated by the long form, which asks questions on fuel use, plumbing, insurance, employment, educational level and many more.

"The census is most reflective of the changes society is going through,"

Marble said.

For American business, which Marble said is a big user of the data, the census will give an indication of tastes and moods. From this information, businessmen will make marketing decisions.

What this means, Marble adds, is the type of products a consumer will have to choose from will be tied in some way to census data.

County absentee voting gauged

Absentee voting in the office of Margaret Ray, county clerk, shows Democratic voters outnumbering Republican voters in the May 3 primaries.

A total of three Republicans have voted in the office. Democratic voters total 54.

Mail-out ballots sent to Republican voters, however, out-number Democratic mail-out ballots, with 90 mail-outs for Republicans and 54 mail-out ballots to Democrats.

Absentee voting continues through April 29. Mail-in votes will be accepted until 1 p.m. the day of the election May 3. Mail-out ballots will be mailed to voters through April 29.

The county clerk's office will be open for absentee voting Saturday, April 26 from 2 p.m. until 8 p.m.

County development board formation urged by Chamber

The Big Spring Chamber of Commerce approved Wednesday an annual billing arrangement for membership dues.

The chamber will bill each January the members for their membership dues. Those members that join sometime during the year will bill on a pro rata basis until January.

Membership contributions in the chamber are based on three factors. These are number of employees, volume of business and floor space.

Each of these criteria is indexed and scored. From a business's score the amount of annual contribution is determined.

In other action, chamber president Jimmy Taylor named Johnnie Lou Avery to replace David Keiser as chairman of the administration committee. Taylor also named Howard Mott to replace Richard Doane as chairman of the health committee.

The chamber also decided to approach the Howard County Commissioners Court about establishing a county development board.

Executive vice president Leroy Tilley said enabling legislation is on the books for the county to place money into an industrial development program.

Tilley said, "There are several counties surrounding us that have a county development board."

The chamber also learned that on Monday Dr. John Key and his public affairs council will be meeting with representatives of the Midland-Odessa Symphony to finalize the May 15 concert, which is to take place in the Big Spring High School Auditorium.

Iranian firing squad executes four today

By the Associated Press

An Iranian firing squad today executed four alleged saboteurs, one of them a woman, after they were convicted in a string of bombings and attacks on officials in Iran's oil-rich southwest, Tehran Radio reported. Iranian authorities charged they had been trained in Iraq.

The Revolutionary Court of Khuzestan province handed down the sentence Wednesday, the same day that six persons were killed and 31 others were injured in the latest attack in the province, a bombing in the refinery city of Abadan, on the Iraqi border.

Iran and Iraq are locked in a tense border confrontation, but the government radio did not say immediately whether Wednesday's bombing, which destroyed several shops, was believed to be the work of supporters of Iraq.

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolutionary regime has repeatedly accused Iraq of fomenting unrest among the Arabs who comprise the majority in Khuzestan province.

Tehran Radio said the four "gang members" executed today had been trained as guerrillas in Iraq, had blown up oil pipelines and made other attacks on oil-industry installations and had tried to assassinate an official of the revolutionary guards in the Khuzestan city of Khorramshahr.

The small-scale border warfare and the war of words between Iraq and Iran continued, with Radio Tehran reporting an Iranian border police post attacked and sporadic clashes continuing along the frontier. No casualties were reported.

But heavy fighting was reported between government forces and the rebellious Kurds of northwest Iran who have been fighting for autonomy ever since the overthrow of the shah 14 months ago.

Pars, the official Iranian news agency, reported three battles. It said three revolutionary guardsmen were wounded near Paveh; four soldiers were killed and 25 were wounded in an army assault that inflicted heavy casualties on the rebels in the Qasemlu Valley, and six troops were killed and 20 wounded in Ourmyeh.

Turkey's largest independent newspaper, Hurriyet of Istanbul, reported on Wednesday that Iranian troops killed at least 500 Kurds in recent fighting. But no such large-scale actions were reported by Iran's government-controlled media.

Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh was Iran's big gun in the war of words today. Radio Tehran said he had written the Arab governments asking their help in the "rescue and liberation" of Ayatollah Mohammad Bager Sadr, a pro-Iranian Iraqi religious leader who has been arrested by the Iraqi government.

Echoing previous calls from Khomeini and President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr for the Iraqi people to overthrow the Baath Socialist government of President Saddam Hussein, Ghotbzadeh said: "It is now time for the destruction of the Baathist Iraqi regime, another puppet of world-devouring imperialism."

The official did not say what the sanctions might be, but it was assumed the embargo on U.S. exports to Iran would be extended to food and medicines, the only items exempted from the trade ban ordered April 7.

Stenholm feels sting

Area predator control opposed by Carterites

WASHINGTON — Carter administration officials Wednesday lined up against a collection of Texas congressmen pushing for increased control of coyotes and other predators on western rangelands.

The stage for the battle was the Agriculture subcommittee on investigations, oversight and research chaired by Rep. Eligio de la Garza, D-Mission.

There, officials of the Agriculture and Interior departments and the Environmental Protection Agency argued against bills sponsored by the Texans to allow use of a poison to control coyotes that destroy an estimated $53 million worth of livestock in the U.S. each year.

In similar bills filed early last month, Reps. Thomas Loeffler, R-Hunt; Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford; Marvin Leath, D-Martin; Abraham Kazen, D-Laredo; and de la Garza called for use of the poison Compound 1080 while research on its long-term effects continues.

A strychnine-based substance, Compound 1080 would generally be used in a "toxic collar" worn by sheep. The predators, chiefly coyotes, Golden Eagles and bobcats, would die from ingesting the poison after attacks on the stock.

predator control were banned by Executive Order in 1972, after the EPA found the substance "posed unacceptable hazards to humans and other non-target species."

Between 1977 and 1979, Interior Department scientists studied the compound, testing, among other things, whether the poison could be transmitted by carrions from the dead predator to other species, including humans.

A report issued by a California scientist last December concluded that the active chemicals in Compound 1080 "remaining in the tissues of poisoned animals would probably be too small to poison an animal which ate the carcass."

The report said concern about a possible epidemic of poisonings is "unreasonable."

The director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service called for expanded study of Compound 1080, but Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus said no, arguing the wider study would require three to five more years at a cost of an additional $1 million.

Angry at what he said was a "political move" by Andrus, de la Garza said Wednesday he will call the secretary to testify at a future subcommittee meeting to explain his decision.

Compound 1080 and two other poisons used in tients reside in a state with the largest sheep and goat production in the nation. Statistics show a gradual increase in wool and mohair production in Texas in recent times, along with rising income for producers.

During the same period, with coyotes leading the list, more than 70 percent of all goat and kid losses and more than half all sheep and lamb losses in Texas were due to predators.

Losses in the cattle industry, according to material submitted to the subcommittee, have totaled more than 250 million pounds of beef in the last 12 years because of predators.

"I hasten to point out that if we would but allow the producer the opportunity, he could very easily take care of his own problem," said Leath. "But, as you are aware, the Department of Interior has severely restricted or eliminated the most efficient and cheapest controls known to the livestock producer."

Loeffler said Texas predator statistics combined with those from other states show the wild animals to be "in direct competition with man for food."

"The federal predator control program, once firmly based on clear statutory authority, has more recently come to be guided by policies which are outlined in conferences, speeches, letters, and memoranda rather than new legislation of even binding administrative regulations," he said.

Stenholm drew subcommittee members a mental picture of his district compared to Loeffler's for a portrait of Texan concern about predators.

Wool production in Loeffler's Sterling, Coke, Runnels and Coleman counties is worth almost eight times that of Stenholm's Mitchell, Nolan, Taylor and Callahan counties. Stenholm excluded the small portion of Coleman County in his district to Loeffler's for this scenario.

Mohair production was valued at more than twice as much on Loeffler's side of an "imaginary line" between his and Stenholm's district.

"Why then does the major portion of sheep and goat production stop at that imaginary line?" Stenholm asked in his testimony. "It's just not worth the economic gains, with the large population of predators in our area."

TO BE ON SALE — "Comanche" is the title of this bronze work by Jim Thomas to be auctioned off at the Rehab Round-Up on Saturday at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Sculptor donates bronze 'Comanche'

Jim Thomas of Amarillo, who enjoys working in sculpture more than paintings, has donated a bronze titled "Comanche" to be auctioned off at the Rehab Round-Up Saturday at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

The auction, which will begin at 6 p.m., will be held in conjunction with a barbecue dinner and a dance after the auction featuring Fiddlin' Frenchie Burke and the Sound Masters.

A founding member of the Texas Cowboy Artists Association, Thomas has twice been recipient of that organization's Gold Medallion Award for his sculpture. He was one of the Texas Cowboy Artists chosen to illustrate "XIT — The American Cowboy," an art book published in 1974.

Thomas began his serious interest in art in 1966, gradually changing over from agricultural advertising and marketing to full time artist by 1970. Since that time his work has gained national acceptance, becoming a part of the collections of ex-Presidents Gerald Ford and Lyndon Johnson; Texas Governor John Connally; Congressmen Jack High-tower, Lloyd Bentsen, and Bob Price; the Chancellor of Austria; the University of Texas, West Texas State University, and numerous other prestigious institutions and private collectors.

Tickets for the Rehab Round-Up can still be purchased at the Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center or by calling 267-6387.

Police beat Gasoline thief flees

The Seven-Eleven Store at 18th and Gregg was doubly unlucky Wednesday.

Early in the evening, a car drove into the lot, loaded up with five gallons of unleaded gasoline, and drove off without paying. Later that evening, someone broke the glass on the store's pinball machine while the attendant was inside a back storeroom.

Loss for the day was estimated at $40.

While Trinidad Arsiaga, 710 N. Scurry, was inside the Sunflower Lounge, Wednesday, someone stole four wire-spoke hubcaps from his Cadillac. Loss was estimated at $472.

Earl Permenter, 701 E. 16th, heard a pickup pull into his driveway, 8:30 p.m. Wednesday, and then drive away. When he checked his two cars, they were covered with broken eggs. According to Permenter, this is the fifth time this has happened in two weeks.

Thieves stole two wheels and tires from a pickup; stole a luggage rack from a station wagon; and broke the windshield of a car all belonging to Bill Moser, 1806 Johnson, while they were parked at 701 W. 3rd, Tuesday night. Loss was estimated at $200.

Auda Vee Tatum, 207 E. 2nd, reported that someone sneaked into his room at the Palmer House Hotel and stole $25 cash, four cans of beer and a can of biscuits. Loss was estimated at $26.85.

While Gladys Bryant, 1104 S. Scurry, was out of her laundry room, 9:15 p.m. Tuesday, someone slipped in and stole her wallet from the top of a clothes dryer there. The wallet had contained $187 in cash, a credit card and a driver's license.

Four mishaps were reported Wednesday. Vehicles driven by Sherri Mitchell, 1425 E. 11th, and Teddy Molina, 408 Owens, collided at 1400 E. 9th, 7:15 a.m.

Vehicles driven by William Kayser, 1404 Johnson, and Jerry Moore, 1003 E. 16th, collided in the lot of the First Christian Church, 8:07 a.m.

Vehicles driven by Jutta Guensch, Arizona, and Johnnie Scott, 3709 Hamilton, collided at 1700 E. 4th, 9:45 a.m.

A vehicle belonging to David Broisig, 4205 Bilgeer, was struck by a vehicle that left the scene on the 1600 block of S. Gregg, 9:30 p.m.

Texas solon fighting oil spill 'superfund'

WASHINGTON — An administration-backed bill to establish a super fund to pay for oil and chemical disasters could not legally be made retroactive to cover victims of past environmental mishaps, a Texas congressman said Wednesday.

Rep. Ray Roberts, D-McKinney, said if the proposed bill — to protect future victims of oil spill and toxic waste accidents — were retroactive "it would tie up the courts until the cows come home."

As a result, the bill cannot be used to help victims of the Campeche Bay oil spill, a Roberts aide said.

The aide said that without a retroactive provision the bill could only help persons who were injured in an environmental disaster after enactment of the law.

Roberts, who is chairing oil spill hearings before the House subcommittee on water — resources, has sponsored separate legislation to authorize $88 million to pay persons and business harmed by the Campeche Bay mishap.

The 1979 well break, which was capped earlier this month, spewed oil onto Texas beaches last summer hurting tourism and possibly causing long-term damage to fish and ocean vegetation in the gulf.

At the hearings Tuesday, Roberts, a 14-year congressman who has announced his retirement, spoke out against attempts to link compensation for injured Texans to federal aid for victims of toxic waste disagree with the idea of a superfund, said Roberts. "I think the oil industry and chemical industry are different and each one should police itself. Why should an oil company pay to clean up a chemical dump? The superfund would be paid by oil refiners, petural gas producers, hazardous chemical companies and the federal government.

Also pending before the House Public Works committee is a bill to establish a $200 million national fund — to be paid by oil transporters and producers — for the cleanup of oil-related mishaps only.

Blakeman Early, a spokesman for the Sierra Club, told the committee Wednesday that it is virtually impossible for anyone to recover damages from pollution incidents by means of a civil suit. Recent governmental studies concluded that case law simply does not meet the needs of the many citizens.

Monje's attorney asks for change of venue

Bob Moore, defense attorney for manslaughter defendant Rogelio Monje, has filed a motion for change of venue. The hearing on the motion will be Friday in Stanton.

11th District, Probation Office here. District Attorney Rick Hamby withdrew himself from the case because of his association with Monje.

Prosecuting attorney will be Midland County District Attorney Vern Martin.

Monje is accused in the pistol slaying of Joe Garcia in 1978.

Young boy pleads guilty

SPRING VALLEY, N.Y. (AP) — A 12-year-old Spring Valley boy faces up to 18 months in a juvenile correctional facility after pleading guilty to assaulting his infant stepbrother by biting him. The infant later died.

The battered body of Maurice Adolphe Jr. was found by a babysitter on Oct. 2. A medical examiner's report said the child died of injuries to the head and body caused by a blunt instrument.

Teeth marks on the infant's body led police to arrest the baby's stepbrother. The 12-year-old, whose name was not released, entered the guilty plea after plea bargaining.

Coalition fighting KKK

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP) — An anti-Ku Klux Klan coalition is pressing for legislation that would bar the incorporation of a KKK group in West Virginia.

Terry Robbins, chairman of the West Virginia Human Rights Coalition Against the Klan, said there is no current law to block the pending incorporation of a Klan group in Kanawha County.

Secretary of State A. James Manchin says the application for incorporation as the Ku Klux Klan Inc., is legal and he has no choice but to grant it as soon as a $10 fee is paid.

Three arrested, released

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii (AP) — Three Honolulu residents were taken into custody, questioned and then released after an incident in which the American flag that flies over the U.S.S. Arizona Memorial was hauled down and thrown into the water.

A naval base police officer stationed on the long white memorial, which stands over the sunken bulk of the battleship Arizona, subdued the three after a scuffle Wednesday, officials said.

Authorities said no charges were filed against Rae S. Seitz, 26, said to be a member of the Revolutionary Communist Party; Joanne K. Kishii, 27; and Masaaki Hirota, 29.

'10' lookalike back on job

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Kellie Duffin is back on the job at First Federal Savings & Loan in suburban Menomonee Falls, although she refused to change her Bo Derek hairdo.

However, her mother said the 18-year-old teller was given a different assignment, out of sight of the public. "She went to work this morning, and they put her down in the basement doing microfilm work," Karen Duffin said of her daughter.

After she got her hair done in the braided style popularized by Miss Derek in the movie "10," her employer told her it would have to go. She was suspended for the hairdo Monday.

position as area three director, too.

She was elected unanimously by the 65 to 70 delegates from 26 West Texas counties.

She said a county clerk from a neighboring county offered to buy the green ticket for a dollar, but Mrs. Ray jested that she knew the ticket would win. The TV set is a 19-inch portable, donated by Business Records Company.

This will be her first time as area director. She was the only nominee.

She will preside at periodic associational board meetings where the area three board members will plan meetings set in Brownsville for June and a March seminar at A and M. The meetings will serve as schools for the clerks.

Brown dog ticks warning issued

By DAVID G. FOSTER
County Extension Entomologist
Martin, Howard, Glasscock, Upton, and Reagan Counties

An increasing number of calls concerning ticks on family dogs has been reported in the Big Spring area. Spring is here and so is the brown dog tick.

When feeding, the tick makes a small incision in the skin of the host and inserts barbed mouthparts to remove the blood. Most species cause little or no pain to their hosts at the time of feeding.

Many disorders and diseases can be traced to tick bites, including: 1) dermatitis, or inflammation, itching and swelling at the site of the bite; 2) envenomization, or inoculation of toxic fluids; and 3) exsanguination, or anemia resulting from the loss of large amounts of blood because of a severe tick infestation.

Ticks can transmit diseases by infesting hosts with microorganisms carried on their mouthparts or in salivary fluids. Brown dog ticks carry diseases to humans and animals in Africa and the Mediterranean region, but are not known to transmit human disease in the U.S.

Because tick movements and bites are seldom felt, careful and frequent examination for ticks is imperative. Early removal is important since many disease organisms are not transferred until the tick has fed 2 to 8 hours. Always remove the tick with its mouthparts intact. Hasty removal of an attached tick can break off the mouthparts. Mouthparts left in the skin can transmit disease organisms or cause secondary infections. To relax tick mouthparts for easy removal, touch the tick with a hot needle or a few drops of camphor, alcohol, turpentine, kerosene or chloroform. Sometimes the best method is to grasp the tick firmly with tweezers or fingers and remove it with a slow steady pull. Always treat the wound with a germicidal agent.

If a tick infestation occurs, treat the home, yard, and pets at the same time. Examine dogs frequently for ticks. Control light infestations on dogs more than 4 weeks old with weekly applications of dusts containing 5 percent carbaryl (Sevin R). Rub the dust to the skin and apply to the animal's sleeping quarters. Continue treatments for as long as needed. Heavy infestations on pets should be handled by a veterinarian.

Light infestations in buildings usually can be controlled with a household spray containing 0.5 percent diazinon.

building foundations, in crevices between porch floorings and sittings and beneath porches.

Ticks are parasites of warm-blooded animals. Their bites are not only annoying, but can be painful, causing localized skin inflammation and infection and possible introduction of disease-causing microorganisms into host animals.

Ticks are not insects, but are closely related to mites, spiders, and scorpions. Adult ticks have eight legs, while adult insects have only six.

Ticks have four developmental stages — egg, six-legged larva, eight-legged nymph and adult. Ticks usually mate on the host animal. The female then drops to the ground and deposits from 3,000 to 6,000 eggs, which hatch into larvae or "seed ticks."

Larvae climb nearby vegetation where they collect in large numbers while waiting for small rodents or other vertebrates to pass within reach.

After a blood meal on the host, the engorged larvae drop to the ground, shed their skins (molt) and emerge as nymphs. The nymphs locate a host, engorge themselves with blood, drop to the ground, molt and become adults.

Male ticks usually mate with one or more females and then die, although some may live for several months. Females die soon after depositing their eggs. The life cycle requires from about 2 months to more than 2 years, depending on the species.

This life cycle is characteristic of the tick species which commonly infest humans and pets in Texas.

The most common species of tick in Texas which is a problem to the homeowner is the brown dog tick. The principle host is the dog, although known to attack numerous other animals; it rarely attacks man.

Adult brown dog ticks are reddish-brown. Unfed adults are 1/4 to 3/16th inch long. They feed almost exclusively on dogs, where they attach to the ears and between the toes. Although widely distributed in Texas, these ticks prefer areas near human habitation or dog kennels. Inside the home, the ticks hide behind baseboards, window casings, window curtains, ceiling and picture moldings, bookcases and cabinets, as well as inside upholstered furniture and under the edges of rugs. Outdoors, they hide near

High interest pokes holes in pocket of prosperity

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Phillip Jason left a $22,500 annual salary in New Jersey 18 months ago to bring his wife and six kids to an economic pearl in a country of dull pebbles.

Wichita was a city of opportunity. A national magazine called it a "pocket of prosperity."

Today Jason has a rented home full of empty stomachs, $2.24 in the pocket of his faded blue jeans and no job. His ambition: "To get things back together and book my way out of here and back to Jersey."

A 20 percent prime lending rate and 18 percent annual inflation rate have poked a hole in the pocket of prosperity.

The changes in Wichita have been sudden — and surprising. Six months ago, this city of 270,000, largest in Kansas, boasted a 2.6 percent unemployment rate and local aircraft builders were scouring the country for more workers.

Today, unemployment stands at more than 4 percent and is growing.

Jason, 33, and his wife, Mary, were sheet metal mechanics at Cessna Aircraft Co., the world's largest builder of small planes. They were pulling down $6 an hour each by helping churn out twin-engine planes costing up to $2 million. "Things were looking up," said Jason.

But declining small planes sales, blamed on high interest rates and tight credit, caused extensive cutbacks at Cessna in the past two months. More than 3,700 workers have been laid off — including Phillip and Mary Jason.

The Jasons were comfortable and happy in Woodbury, N.J., two years ago. Phillip was an engineer at Du Pont, Mary worked part-time as a waitress.

But Jason had spent his boyhood in Wichita, and he remembered it as "a nice, quiet and inexpensive place to live where you could really raise kids good." He asked the Wichita Area Chamber of Commerce about the job situation.

"They sent me a whole lot of stuff," he remembers. "Follow the yellow-brick road to gold land," it said. And I'm not exaggerating."

The couple saved $2,000 and set out on that road in 1978. At first, Jason, a trained pipe-fitter and mechanic, could only find work in plumbing and construction. He made $8,000 his first year.

Last fall, he and his wife got jobs at Cessna. But today, Phillip is laid off permanently and Mary is on a temporary furlough.

About 1,500 of those laid off at Cessna are expected to be called back later this spring.

This Midwest city, nestled at the juncture of the Arkansas and Little Arkansas rivers, still has some jobs for skilled workers and more are expected. But there are nearly 10,000 persons out of work.

The Chamber of Commerce has shelved a year-old national recruitment program; the $60,000 earmarked for it this year will be used to help create new jobs.

Livestock projects for 4-H'ers shaping

It's that time of year again for youngsters that would like to learn-by-doing with a 4-H livestock project.

April, May, and June are the three busy months of the year when 4-H kids, and those who want to join 4-H, plead with their parents and invest in a fantastic learning project and a big responsibility.

Parents, youth, leaders and County Agents work together and decide on the type of project which best suits a family, what facilities are needed and literature and training toward the production of a prize winning project.

Now is the time to contact Howard County Extension Agents Andy Vestal or Don Richardson about your projects or your youngsters' project.

Pigs are now being purchased by 4-H'ers to exhibit at the Howard County Fair in September, the South Plains Fair in September and the State Fair of Texas in October.

Steers are filling the feed lots of 4-H'ers wishing to exhibit at Texas State Fair — October, Odessa Livestock Show, January, Ft. Worth Stock Show, San Antonio, El Paso, Houston and San Angelo Shows in October.

An exciting project is in store for these youth. Unlimited learning experiences and responsibilities exist in a livestock project.

For information about a 4-H project call 267-1821 or 267-6671 and talk with Andy or Don about upcoming project events and happenings.

Death would have been justifiable

NEW YORK (AP) — G. Gordon Liddy, the Watergate conspirator, said today that killing columnist Jack Anderson would have been justifiable homicide because the writer's articles were endangering U.S. intelligence operations abroad.

"You were a pain in the butt" to the White House, Liddy told Anderson as the two men met for the first time in a television studio.

"But you also were seriously damaging American ability to conduct foreign policy," he added.

Liddy, promoting his newly published autobiography, "Will," was interviewed with Anderson on the ABC "Good Morning America" program.

Anderson shook hands with Liddy and questioned the one-time White House operative who says he advocated the columnist's murder in the early 1970s.

Anderson asserted that neither Liddy nor anyone else could name a CIA agent whose torture or death he had caused.

"It never happened," Anderson said. "You were prepared to kill me because of a wild rumor. Did you ever try to check it out?"

Liddy replied, "... I didn't say CIA agent. I don't limit it to that."

But another man Liddy thought ought to be killed refused to be in the same room with him today. He was another talk show guest, Howard Hunt, a White House insider who was a lookout at the Watergate break-in. Hunt questioned whether Liddy was mentally competent.

Liddy later appeared on NBC's "Today" show, followed by Hunt after he had left the studio set.

Good rail system would help enormously

West Texas has again been ignored in the planning but a new age in rail travel could ultimately come to Texas.

The House Interstate and Foreign Committee has been studying an $850 million plan which, among other things, proposes to upgrade rail passenger service on a 'Texas Triangle' route — linking the Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio areas. Envisaged is a 722-mile loop, passing through an area with more than seven million in population.

IF THE HOUSE OF Representatives could agree and if congress could provide the appropriation, the plan could very greatly improve and expand rail service in the Southwest. The project would be financed beginning in 1982 by proceeds from the windfall profits tax. It is projected that such a rail route would save 4.3 million gallons of gasoline a year.

The system would have to have riders. The potential is certainly there. Luring them back from the highways may be quite a challenge, however.

The train service would have to be competitive in both price and time with private automobiles and the airlines if it is to succeed. The increasing cost of gasoline — and of jet fuel for the airline fares — indicates the economics are relatively sound. Convenience and comfort problems can and must be licked, too — if we take advantage of the technology already commonplace elsewhere in the world.

The Japanese have rail travel down to a fine science. Their 'bullet trains' zip along at speeds in excess of 120 MPH with relatively little sense of motion for passengers. Operated with sophisticated computer controls, they have admirable safety records — and invariably they run on time, swiftly from station to station.

By contrast, American rail systems are still in the 1800s. They are, because of neglect and failure to modernize, in many ways far worse than at the end of WW II. Amtrak has maintained some semblance of rail passenger service, but it is woefully inadequate except along certain Eastern Seaboard commuter routes.

TAKING ADVANTAGE of the technology available will demand a huge investment of funds. It can't be done on existing roadbeds, not with the equipment now being used. The investment, however, seems worth it.

A first-class rail system in Texas and the remainder of the country could contribute heavily to freeing ourselves from petroleum dependency. It could also contribute to the over-all economy by allowing more efficient movements of goods as well as people.

If the Texas project could be approved, it shouldn't be anything but the best now available. A Texas train route could deliver its passengers from Dallas to Houston, or from San Antonio to Fort Worth, competitively with airlines (given the distance of airlines from civic centers. And it would save not only gasoline but dollars for those who must otherwise drive. We must aim high — but the goal is worth shooting for).

Are we ready?

Around the rim

Steve Hershberger

My grandfather once told me if something is too good to be true, you better check it out to see if it really is ... true.

This time-worn cliché is applicable to Incumbent Railroad Commissioner John Poerner and his rapid rail system.

The idea of rail service connecting the Dallas-Fort Worth metropolis with San Antonio and Houston is outstanding. I certainly agree with Poerner's pronouncement that the bullet-train's day has come.

I, however, believe that Poerner's projections as to the cost of constructing the system are inaccurate.

In a press conference here on April 8, Poerner said the cost of constructing the system would be $6 billion.

POERNER ALSO maintained that the investment money would come solely from private enterprise. He said that the system would have a $1.5 billion annual rate of return.

But, this $6 billion figure is much too low when one looks that the bullet train would be an elevated, two-way, electric-powered 750-mile rail system that would connect the so-called "Texas Triangle."

This figure of building this system from scratch appears even more incredulous in view of a Department of Transportation estimate that to upgrade the existing track for an Amtrak Metroliner would be at least $1.2 billion.

Poerner's opponent in the May 3 Democratic Primary holds that to build the system, the cost would be around $15 billion, and the supertrains themselves would amount to $6 billion.

The source of funding the bullet-train is another point of contention. Poerner said that the rapid-rail system would require no government subsidy.

"The numbers look good enough," Poerner said, "where private enterprise can finance this system."

The Japanese bullet-train has succeeded only because of subsidy. This may well be the case with the proposed Texas-Triangle railroad.

POERNER SAID that a $1.5 billion annual return could be made on an investment of $6 billion. To have a gross income of this amount, the train would require 45 million passengers a year. That is three times the population of the entire state.

Poerner's opponent, Buddy Temple, said that for the train to have a 10 percent profit on the sales volume, 454 million passengers would be required. That is 30 times the population of Texas.

There are currently two proposals in Congress designed to improve passenger service between Texas' three major population centers.

The Department of Transportation estimated that with $200 million existing road tracks and beds could be improved, and equipment allowing speeds up to 79 miles per hour could be installed.

Congress and the Department of Transportation are considering acquiring new right of way in some areas of Central Texas and building new tracks and rebuilding much older trackage. New higher-speed equipment would also be installed. This proposal would cost about $1.2 billion.

The Department of Transportation in this study found that neither proposal would generate sufficient ridership for the rail service to operate without a government subsidy.

I assume most everyone agrees a backup system of transportation is needed to protect the state against a possible energy shortage.

The bullet-train idea is certainly a good one, but the figures of our Railroad Commissioners is tossing around are simply not realistic. The rapid-rail system in all likelihood will require government subsidization.

I suppose the question is whether the public is willing to underwrite a massive public works project.

Washington novels

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — The newspaper editors were in town last week, and one of the more interesting panels dealt with the "Washington Novel." The members of the panel were William Safire, who wrote "Full Disclosure," Marilyn Sharp, who authored a mystery entitled "Sunflower," Les Whitten of "Conflict of Interest," and Barbara Howar, who wrote "Making Ends Meet."

Their conclusion was that the Washington novel is alive and well, mainly because all the ingredients for the novel are here — power, suspense and sex.

I'VE BEEN TRYING to write a Washington novel for some time, but have not been successful, mainly because every time I think I've got a good fiction plot, someone else has already done it.

Here are some of the false starts I've had, which never got off the ground.

Congressman Blevens Bombast got into his new Toyota, which was parked in front of his modest Georgetown home. He looked forward to the drive up to Capitol Hill, as it gave him time to think about how he was going to balance the budget. Just as he was going to put his key into the ignition, Blevens noticed a large, unmarked manila envelope on the front seat. He opened it, and found 600 fresh $100 bills. He looked around fearfully, and then got out of his car and placed the envelope in the trunk.

WIPING THE perspiration from his face, he got back into the car and started the most fateful journey of his life. He could go straight down Pennsylvania Avenue to FBI headquarters, or turn left for the Beltway and keep driving until he hit Las Vegas. He thought of the trust the people in his district had in him. Then he thought of his wife and five children. There was no question about what he would do. He made the left turn and was surprised at that hour to find so few cars on the Beltway.

Secretary of State Clem Hapsted picked up the phone, and a man with a heavy foreign accent said, "This is Fotopick calling. We have the pictures you ordered."

"Oh, my God," said Hapsted. "How did you get them?"

"With a telephoto lens opening of 8 at 200th of a second." "What will it cost me to get the negatives?"

"Jerusalem."

The man in the slouch hat and dirty raincoat pretended to be studying a portrait of Mary Washington in the National Gallery when the uniformed guard took out his .45 pistol and fired three shots at him. The man fell to the floor with a thud. People rushed from all over as the guard hurried away to a phone booth. We dialed a number and then hung up. Ten seconds later, his phone rang. All the guard said was, "The deed is done." The voice on the other end of the line said, "Good. Now for your next clue, go to the Air and Space Museum and follow the instructors hidden in John Glenn's space capsule."

"You sure I'm going to win a prize?"

"Of course. Everyone wins a prize in the Reader's Digest Sweepstakes."

'Splits' injury shouldn't last 3 years

Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: About three years ago I was pushed down into the splits. I had severe pain from the knee all the way up the inner thigh. I stopped exercising my leg for about a month, then started again. The pain was still there. Recently, I tried to stretch my leg again and had some severe pain. My thigh is still painful and tender. Should I go to a doctor? Should I give up trying to stretch my leg? I have signed up for karate. — C.C.

Yes, you should see a doctor. You should not be having pain three years after a simple muscle strain.

Use of stretching exercises to prevent injuries was a topic of a sports medicine meeting I attended recently. Many sports injuries result from a lack of flexibility of the muscles and joints initially. It is good to include stretching exercises before actively participating in any sport. You apparently missed that phase of your "splits" training.

Sudden overstretching, as must have occurred in your case, is to be avoided. Muscles and tendons can be yanked away from the bones.

Are you having pain when you don't stretch — in ordinary activity, for example? I'm sorry I cannot come up with a diagnosis by letter. But I'm interested in this subject and I am anxious to know what is causing your pain after three years. Please write me back after you have seen your doctor, will you? Meanwhile, forego the karate lessons until you know what's going on in that leg.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Three months ago a doctor diagnosed my symptoms as enterocolitis. I also found out I was pregnant. Due to my pregnancy he did not take X-rays to confirm the diagnosis or treat me. Could you tell me please what causes enterocolitis, the treatment and also if it will have any adverse effect on my pregnancy? — J.W.

Enterocolitis is a combined irritation of the small intestine, the upper one, called the "enteron," and of the lower intestine (the colon). It can be due to infections, from toxins made by germs (food poisoning), drugs or radiation treatment. The treatment depends on the cause and is usually limited to simply lessening the symptoms.

The rule, of course, is to avoid any unnecessary medication during pregnancy. However, fluids should be replaced if lost through diarrhea or vomiting. And you have to be sure that your intestinal problem is not depleting vital stores of vitamins needed for your own and your baby's health.

In normal circumstances, drugs to calm the irritated intestine would be used, and perhaps pain medication, if that were necessary. In most cases, enterocolitis is a "self-limiting" illness, meaning time is its own cure.

So long as you can nourish yourself sufficiently during your pregnancy, the baby will not be affected by your intestinal condition. For a more detailed discussion of such problems, see the booklet, "Colitis and Kindred Complaints." For a copy, send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to me care of the Big Spring Herald.

Dear Dr. Donohue: There is a diet clinic in town that advertises a shot each day for 14 days with a hormone (HCG), also a 500-calorie diet. A young friend of mine is sold on it and is going to take the course. They claim it breaks down fat into liquid and expels it from the body. I say she can lose weight on the 500-calorie diet without the shots. What do you think of such a program? — D.F.

I agree with you. So does every study I've seen. There is no evidence that HCG (human chorionic gonadotropin) has any benefit in weight reduction. This substance is produced by the placenta during pregnancy. It is advertised as a "fat mobilizing" hormone. No proof of that. The 500-calorie diet should be enough of a hardship without having to shell out cash for shots of doubtful (at best) value. The 500 calories a day over any extended period is dangerously low without medical need or medical supervision.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I've had several friends tell me they drink grapefruit juice every day to lose weight. They claim the juice burns up or eats up calories. I would like your opinion on this idea. — Mrs. P.S.

Grapefruit juice does not burn up calories. You can lump that idea into the same category as that in D.F.'s letter above.

How to get rid of leg cramps and foot pains? The answer may be simple — write to Dr. Donohue, in care of the Big Spring for a copy of the booklet, "How to Stop Leg Cramps and Foot Pains." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: If God knew that Adam and Eve were going to rebel against Him and there was going to be so much evil in the world, why did He create the world that way? — F.C.S.

DEAR F.C.S.: I do not believe we can fully understand how and why evil has been permitted to come into this world. The Bible talks about "the mystery of iniquity" (2 Thessalonians 2:7), and that is because evil is a mystery in many ways.

Nevertheless, the Bible does give us some indication of why sin entered the world and why God permitted it to happen. The Bible says that God created the world, and when He finished with creation He declared that "it was very good" (Genesis 1:31). Adam and Eve, as part of that creation, were also good, untouched by evil. But God created them with complete freedom — including the freedom to turn against Him and rebel. Why did He create them with that kind of freedom? To understand this, think of what the alternative might have been. Instead of giving Adam and Eve full freedom, God could instead have created them without freedom. In other words, He could have created them so they could never rebel against Him and sin. But think about that a minute. If God created the human race in that way, they would have been puppets. They would have had no choice but to love God and serve Him — and that would not have been true love or true service.

But God created Adam and Eve in His image, and that meant they had the ability to love God. That love would have been meaningless if they were like puppets. But because they had the freedom to choose, their love for God was true love. God did not want puppets — He wanted people who could love Him fully and freely. And that is what Adam and Eve did in the beginning.

You know the story (which you can read in Genesis 3) of how Adam and Eve were tempted, and turned their backs on God. But the greatest wonder is not that God permitted evil, but that HE still loves us in spite of our sin. And that is why He sent His Son, Jesus Christ, into the world, so we could be forgiven and restored and love God throughout eternity.

Grim work

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — Virginia Ison is nobody you would expect to read about in the newspaper. She is usually reported as just another statistic, one of 16 million Americans over 65 with a yearly income under $6,999.

Rampaging inflation and other economic monsters are slowly circling in on Americans like Virginia. I think it is important to look behind the statistics, to put faces on the numbers, to tell the living stories of the American economic crush.

Not long ago, thieves broke into Virginia Ison's trailer, which sits alongside highway 50 in Orlando, Fla. The thieves stole everything they could carry — from her family trinkets to cooking pots. It was the best thing that could have happened to Virginia.

SHE HAD MOVED with her husband to Florida from Worcester, Mass., because of his heart condition. They dreamed of a golden life in the Florida sun. That was 24 years ago. He died in 1975, leaving her the trailer they'd scrimped to buy for their last years.

Now that trailer is all she has, and ironically, the burglary may have saved it. Property taxes had crept up until she could barely afford her simple home. The government slapped a tax lien on the trailer. The lien "took away all my feelings of independence," she said, almost choking on the emotion.

But one day while she was out, burglars struck. Luckily, Virginia had been able to keep up her insurance payments. The company paid her $600 for what the thieves stole. She used the money to pay the taxes and fines.

This left her with nothing but small change and a shortage of cooking pots. But at least the trailer is now unencumbered. Until next time.

There probably will be a "next time." Virginia's income is a pitiful $4,179.12 a year, her total payment under Social Security disability laws. She started drawing disability payments seven years ago because she has arthritis of the spine. Like the burglary, ironically, the painful arthritis has been her good fortune.

Virginia's tin roof leaks. In rainy Florida, that can be a major problem. She is poor enough to qualify for home-repair help from the county. She was told last August the county would fix her roof. That was eight months ago. The leaks are still unrepaired.

RAIN WATER drips into the gas heater in her living room, the same heater which heats her bedroom. She doesn't dare use the heater when it's raining. She also doesn't use it much when the weather is dry. Because of the terrible cost of fuel, she kept her house as cold as she could stand it all winter.

Cold weather bites arthritis victims with a meaner pain than the rest of us feel. Even in Florida, winter can be bitter. On cold nights, Virginia slept with a hat on to keep her arthritic body as warm as possible.

The mercilessly high cost of fuel in America is cloaked in an illusion of equality. All of us are hit with the same price, but those on tiny, fixed incomes like Virginia ache the most from the price squeeze.

She applied under a new federal grant program for money to help pay her fuel bills. But the bureaucrats are using up too much of the money for the paperwork that they generate to justify their high salaries. So far, she hasn't collected a penny of the new government assistance.

Forbidding as her fuel bills are, Virginia's biggest problem is paying for her medicine. She attends a free clinic for treatment, but the prescription drugs must be paid out of her own pocket. She may soon need to choose between food and medicine. "I don't need to eat so much, I guess," she told my reporter James Brady.

She can't turn to her family for help. Her sister came up with $200 to pay for fixing Virginia's septic tank. "If she hadn't been here and able to help, I'd have to go out and scratch the ground like a dog," said Virginia. But now her sister has retired and faces money problems of her own.

Virginia is one ace up her sleeve, one last desperate hope. If her situation gets really bad, she'll go to her church. But she won't ask her friends from church to help with things like the leaky roof because, "I'm saving them for real emergencies."

Virginia Ison is just one face in a vast, anonymous crowd. There are 16 million Americans no better off than she is. But if all the others are like Virginia, they can at least smile about their adversity. "If you're going to cry," she shrugged, "who is going to listen to you?"

ILLEGAL GUN TRADE: One reason that attempts to regulate the sale of handguns draws such vigorous opposition is that enormous profits are made in the illicit pistol trade.

No firm statistics exist on the underground gun merchants, because almost anyone can get a permit to own or sell a gun. But statistics show that hundreds of shooting deaths each year are traceable to guns bought illegally. Treasury officials have estimated that fewer than 30 percent of federally licensed firearms dealers actually conduct bona fide business operations. And a study by the respected National Coalition to Ban Handguns supports this official estimate.

The coalition's study, centered on the New Haven, Conn., area, showed that more than 77 percent of the licensed gun dealers were in "direct violation of at least one federal, state or local law or regulation." Furthermore, the group concluded, "more than two-thirds of the gun sellers 'did not appear to be bona fide businesses.'"

Over 80 percent of the federally licensed gun dealers who were willing to sell handguns to telephone callers didn't even have a local firearms license, the coalition found in its sampling.

Counterfeiter of nature: The trap that few elude

WATERFORD, Conn. (AP) — The mayfly hatch is on Latimer's Brook and the brook is running fresh. The mere contemplation of it is balm to Henry Dougherty's winter-stiffened bones.

Day after day of late, and night after night, Henry has bent over his work table, focusing his one good eye on tiny bits of fur and feather, arranging them with fingers that are thick and tobacco-stained but as supple as a surgeon's.

Henry Dougherty is a counterfeiter of nature, a maker of trout fishing flies. At that so fine a craft, he has few peers.

"I don't know the real names of these bugs, the names the professors give them," he said. "I just go to the river, catch the bug the fish are eating, bring it home and try to match it."

"Sometimes I think the flies you buy in the store were tied by people who never saw the bug. That's why I began tying my own 20 years ago. All I know is, mine work."

The people who fish with Henry know it, too. Henry catches fish when nobody else does. Fish take his lures at any time of the day, any time of the season, and, to the dismay of everyone else, with maddening frequency.

The reason has to do not only with the artistry of Henry's fly-tying but the nature of Henry himself.

He is one of those rare species of human animal who blends with nature, is of a piece with nature. He detects color, movement, scent, sound that others do not see or hear or smell.

He knows that fish are not caught in anger or in malice and he harbors neither. He knows that fish are not lured by complex technologies that seduce modern day seekers of easy solutions, but by meekness and patience. He personifies both.

Henry was a cabinetmaker during his working days. He is 71 now, but when he closed his shop some years ago it was more because of health than age.

Arthritis had crippled his right arm and shoulder. Doctors tried ointments and potions and liniments but none worked.

They could not have known, because Henry didn't know it himself, that in this case the remedy would be poles and strings and hooks.

"I had spent my whole life in the woods with my bird dogs," he said, "but for some reason I had never gone fishing."

"When my arm went bad, a pal of mine said, 'Henry, all that wing needs is some exercise and the best way to get it is with a fly rod.' It worked. I got into fishing and fishing got into me. I would fish eight days a week if I could."

In the hierarchy of anglers, the dry-fly purist tends to look with smug disdain upon all other types, and the one who ties his own flies looks up to none, the ultimate fishing snob.

Henry Dougherty, though, ties his own flies with about as much snobbery as when he rolls his own cigarettes.

"I just try to suggest to the trout, this is it, this is the meal you can't resist — then hook him, then turn him loose. And remember, the trout is smarter than I."

Maybe, but not wiser.

11.7 miles of sealcoating okayed for Howard County

The State Highway and Public Transportation Commission has approved a $58.7 million program to improve almost 2,000 miles of state-maintained highways in Texas.

The 1981 State Highways Safety and Betterment and Farm to Market Road Improvement Program will include a wide variety of work in all sections of Texas.

Types of work include widening, new surfaces, improved signs and signals and other means of improving the safety characteristics, traffic capacity, riding quality, and ease of maintenance of the highways involved.

The program proposes improvement of 1,997.7 miles; 64 percent of the work on U.S. and State-Numbered Highways, and the remainder on Farm to Market Roads.

The program contains a total of 334 separate projects located in 140 counties. Included in the program in Howard County, according to Roger G. Welsch, district engineer in Abilene, is SH 350 northeast from Big Spring. The project will receive a sealcoat (one course of asphalt and aggregate overlay) for a total distance of 11.7 miles.

Carter facing tough fight Tuesday

Reagan survivor amid GOP graveyard

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan is beginning to look mighty lonely out there, but that doesn't necessarily mean he's unhappy.

Reagan, who at one point faced 10 opponents for the Republican nomination, today was up against but two challengers who could at all be considered serious.

One, Rep. John Anderson, has dropped off the campaign trail for the week and is considering dropping out of the GOP race to run as an independent. The other, George Bush, admitted Wednesday he is "far behind" Reagan in the crucial primary next week in Pennsylvania.

And the withdrawal of Rep. Philip Crane from the race today adds another marker to the political graveyard Reagan is leaving behind as he battles his way toward the GOP nomination.

Crane, like Reagan a conservative, was the first Republican to announce his candidacy, way back on Aug. 2, 1978. Sources said the Illinois congressman would formally drop out today and throw his support to Reagan.

On the Democratic side, President Carter faces a much more substantial fight in Pennsylvania next Tuesday, though challenger Sen. Edward M. Kennedy remains far behind in delegates selected to the Democratic National Convention.

But Kennedy is steadfastly maintaining he will not drop out before the convention in August. "I'm in the race right up until the roll call," he told reporters Wednesday before he set out on a busy day of campaigning for Pennsylvania's 185 national convention delegates.

Some polls show Kennedy now ahead in Pennsylvania, and his backing from the United Auto Workers gives him a boost in Michigan, which will choose 141 national convention delegates in caucuses next Saturday.

Carter is far ahead in delegates — with 896 of the 1,666 needed for nomination to Kennedy's 440 — and it probably would be necessary to change party rules at the national convention for Kennedy to win the nomination.

Reagan would appear to have no such problem. He has 372 of the 998 delegates needed for the Republican nomination, and the nearest challenger is Bush with 72.

A poll by Philadelphia radio station KYW indicated Wednesday that Reagan was ahead of Bush in Pennsylvania by 43 percent to 27 percent. But the poll also shows 30 percent undecided, and Bush said he hopes to pull off a come-from-behind victory.

"I realize I'm far behind," he said. "But I'm going to hang right in there really hard."

"We were behind in Connecticut and, bam, we turned it around," he added, referring to his victory last month in the state where he grew up and had close political ties.

Left in the GOP race now — in addition to Bush and Anderson — are two men who are no real threat to Reagan: Los Angeles Congressman Benjamin Fernandez and Harold Stassen, the former Minnesota governor whose trademark has become his many unsuccessful jousts for the presidency.

Clements crosses party lines to back Green's re-election

ODESSA — Gov. Bill Clements, a Republican, has crossed party lines to support Democrat John Green in Green's bid for re-election as the Ector County District Attorney.

Clements said he had no qualms about supporting Green because he felt the incumbent "was the best man for the job." Clements appeared here at a $25-a-plate dinner for Green at the Ecor County Coliseum.

In 1978, Green crossed party lines to endorse Clements' gubernatorial campaign. Clements later won 73 percent of Ector County's popular vote in the general election.

Police reveal evidence for Dallas murder

DALLAS (AP) — Evidence that led to the arrest of repairman in the "Lipstick Murder" of an attorney's wife includes a handwriting analysis and a neighbor who reported seeing a man wearing a white eye-patch, police records show.

The handwriting analysis was made of a message written in lipstick on a bedroom mirror. "Now we are even Don." Nearby lay the nude body of Debera Martinson, 28, wife of attorney Don Martinson.

She was strangled March 31. Police arrested Donald Wayne Hemphill, 30, a television antenna repairman, Sunday and charged him with murder in the woman's death.

In 56 comparisons over the last three years, certified Lockett 77 from Pioneer produced an average gross income of $309* per acre ... giving it a $42 per acre advantage over competitive varieties.

Why such an advantage? Outstanding seedling vigor with excellent cold tolerance and seedling disease escape help Lockett 77 make a good stand. Added to that are multiple disease tolerance, hardy plant characteristics, and early maturity ... a combination that helps Lockett 77 deliver outstanding performance.

Farmers who've grown certified Lockett 77 are well pleased with results. Jack and Paul Hopper at Knott recorded a lint yield of 1,553 lbs./planted acre in 1979. Ben Roming at Lariat got 830 lbs./A. State power over railroads decelerated

By DANA PALMER
Herald-News Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Common sense tells you the Texas Railroad Commission regulates railroads. To an extent, you're right. In 1891, when the first three railroad commissioners were appointed by Gov. James Stephen Hogg, the agency worked exclusively to correct abuses created by an unchecked and powerful railroad industry. Now, however, the commission retains little control over rail lines operating in the state. State power over railroads decelerated as more and more rail lines in Texas came under control of the Interstate Commerce Commission and Federal Railroad Administration. These days, most of the commission's time is spent on regulating the oil and gas industry and strip mining, as well as trucking firms and bus lines, a commission spokesman says.

More than two dozen small railroads still operate solely within the state, however, and the Texas Railroad Commission sets the amount they can charge for hauling particular commodities. That's about it for railroads, though. Owen Kinney, head of the Railroad Commission's transportation division, says in the past they have tried to do more, such as ordering safety improvements at rail crossings. The railroads, however, have obtained court injunctions preventing the commission from enforcing the orders, arguing that the federal government now has sole jurisdiction under the 1970 Railroad Safety Act. The Railroad Commission is appealing several such cases, Kinney said. "The Texas Department of Highways and Transportation does administer a program for railroad crossing safety devices," Kinney said, but that's about the limit of state authority over railroads. Earlier this year, a legislative staff report noted that railroad crossing accidents in Texas in 1979 caused 96 deaths, 589 injuries and at least $2.6 billion in damages. According to the House subcommittee report, part of the problem may be that few of the state's railroad crossings are adequately marked. Less than one-fourth, or 3,424 of the state's 14,616 railroad crossings, are marked by flashing lights, bells or gates that block the crossing when a train is approaching, according to a 1976 U.S. Department of Transportation survey. Rail safety regulation is one area that Kinney and his division would like to see controlled by the state. Kinney said the commission asked the 1979 Legislature for funding to participate in a federal program that allows states to take back some control over rail safety. State inspectors, commission staffers say, are more likely to be concerned with the safety of all rail lines, while inspectors in Washington might forget the line from Waxahachie to Fort Worth. Under the program, state inspectors would have received extensive, as well as expensive, training. The Legislature said no. "One disadvantage to the federal program would be that we could only report safety violations to the Federal Railroad Administration," Kinney says. "It would be a tiger without teeth." He adds, "We do have a rail planning staff that's federally funded in part. We're looking at the needs for the next 15 years to make sure improvements are made in the state's rail system and the problems of railroad abandonments are taken care of."

The staff also is studying the problem of shipping hazardous chemicals through heavily populated areas and the potential for derailment disasters. One area of transportation that the commission has more control over is the bus industry. Among the items regulated by the commission are rates for bus tickets and bus shipments, as well as driver safety, equipment certification and depot cleanliness. Surprisingly, Kinney says, the problem of bus lines abandoning service to small, out-of-the-way towns is not a big one for the commission.

When complete abandonment of a city is contemplated, the commission conducts a hearing to determine how important bus service is to the community. "They don't just walk out and leave a city," Kinney says.

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Waddling like a duck and hooting like an owl, the San Diego Chicken crowed with delight after a judge dismissed a court action that could have plucked his feathers. Radio station KGB filed suit to stop Ted Giannoulas. The station fired Giannoulas, who had clowned around inside the costume for years as KGB's promotional chicken, for wearing the costume — with the KGB logo covered — on his own time. Giannoulas' costume has a yellow head topped with an ostrich plume and an orange body. The KGB Chicken had a red body and a gold-brown head crowned with a comb. KGB charged that Giannoulas' new suit, unveiled before more than 40,000 spectators at a San Diego Padres baseball game June 29, was "substantially similar" to the KGB Chicken suit, now stuffed by Gabriel Velasco. Still pending is a Superior Court trial on a $250,000 lawsuit KGB brought against Giannoulas for alleged breach of contract and service-mark infringement. Giannoulas asked Wednesday that the radio station drop the lawsuit.

Three men hit with charges

Charges were filed against three men Monday in Justice of the Peace Bob West's office. Two were charged with burglary of Gibson's Discount Store and one with theft by appropriation of stolen property. Wallace Terry Viasana, 25, 1515 Wood; Carmen Viasana, 17, 604 Abrams, were charged with theft. Edward Chavarria, 27, 1210 Marijo, was charged with theft by appropriation of stolen goods. All three were arrested and transferred to county jail. Chavarria was arrested, transferred and released on bond Monday. The two Viasana's were arrested Thursday and transferred today. Chavarria is accused of buying guns allegedly stolen from Gibson's by Carmen and Wallace Terry Viasana March 20. The two Viasana's were arrested on suspicion of attempted burglary of R.L. Gun Shop, Wasson Rd., Thursday. They were allegedly arrested on the roof of the building at 10:47 p.m. Chavarria was arrested at the Big Spring State Hospital Monday at 5:41 p.m. He is an aide there who works with patients in the adolescent unit. The two Viasana's are also suspected of burglary of Fox's Pawn Shop, W. 4th. Bond was set on Chavarria at $20,000 by Justice of the Peace Bob West. Bond was set on Carmen and Wallace Terry Viasana at $20,000 each by Justice of the Peace Lewis Heflin.

Lamesa arsonist fined $500, receives 5 years probation

LAMESA — A Lamesa resident, Richard Sustaita, pleaded guilty here last week to a charge of arson. He allegedly set fire to his own home. The residence, valued at $20,000 was totally destroyed.

According to investigating officers, Sustaita had argued with his wife earlier in the evening.

Sustaita was sentenced to a probated term of five years in the penitentiary and was fined $500. Sustaita reportedly had no insurance on the house or its belongings. According to Police Chief Lee Bartlett, the residence was completely paid for.

COYOTES HEARING — Texas Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown, left, talks with Martin Wardlaw, president of the Texas Sheep & Goat Raisers' Association, prior to a hearing in Washington Wednesday before a House Agriculture subcommittee. Subcommittee members are looking into the loss of sheep and goats to predators in Texas.

Use of banned chemical brings positive results

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Texas rancher is scheduled to tell a congressional panel today about his success in protecting livestock from coyotes by using the banned chemical compound 1080.

Charles Howard of Meridian works under an Interior Department contract to study the chemical's effects in a "toxic collar" program.

"To date, the results have been positive and I feel they will continue to be so," Rep. Marvin Leath, D-Texas, said in testimony Wednesday before the House agriculture subcommittee studying the Interior Department's predator control program.

"The toxic collar appears to be effective and is very restrictive," the Marlin congressman said.

The collar, filled with poison, can be strapped around a sheep's neck. The coyote or other predator aiming for the jugular vein breaks the collar and gets a mouthful of poison in the bargain.

The system is billed as an improvement over the once commonly used method of leaving poisoned bait in the wild because the collar kills only the animal for which it is intended, a predator that attacks livestock.

Compound 1080 was banned in 1972.

Livestock producers claim new evidence shows the chemical does not have secondary killing effects. When banned, one argument used was that compound 1080 is so powerful that it lingers in the environment and kills animals other than the targeted predator.

Last November, Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus called a halt to further federal research and experimental use programs on the chemical that livestock producers say could be their best tool against predators.

Federal research programs using the toxic collar could continue with other chemicals.

Sheep and goat producers claim the highest losses from predators, particularly coyotes.

Texas is the No. 1 producer of sheep and goats, and some of the state's congressmen are taking leading roles in complaining that the Interior Department's new predator control policy is too mild.

Hearings on the program started Wednesday in the oversight and investigative agriculture subcommittee chaired by Rep. E. "Kika" de la Garza, D-Texas.

The Mission congressman joined Rep. William Wampler, R-Va., in calling for Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus to explain for himself why compound 1080 research was halted.

De la Garza said he would subpoena Andrus if necessary.

An assistant interior secretary testified that Andrus excluded 1080 research in favor of using available funds to find a less controversial substitute.

"After considering all sides of the issue the secretary decided that continuing to study compound 1080 would be a waste of taxpayers' money, and even if its use were to be tentatively approved, that decision would almost certainly be subject to long and costly litigation," Robert Herbst, the assistant secretary for fish, wildlife and parks, said.

He said the secretary overruled the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service's recommendation that the compound 1080 research program be expanded to resolve the questions surrounding it once and for all.

Andrus estimated it would take at least three to five years and $1 million to determine whether the chemical could be used safely and effectively for animal damage control programs.

De la Garza and Rep. Tom Loeffler, R-Texas, have introduced a bill that would allow compound 1080 to be used until a more effective substitute is developed.

Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, and Rep. Abraham Kazen, D-Texas, have introduced a similar bill.

They would give more authority for the federal predator control program to the Agriculture Department.

They also stipulate that the program balance lethal and non-lethal methods.

Vernon to host district Demos

By WALT FINLEY
Several Big Springers are expected to attend a 30th Senatorial District Democrat meeting Saturday in the Canton Cafe in Vernon, Texas.

Following a roll call of counties and luncheon at the Canton, delegate selection process for 1980 will be discussed.

Other reports on the agenda include:

State Democratic Executive Committee.

State convention at San Antonio, June 20-21. District 30 will elect three delegates and one alternate to the national convention.

National convention, New York City, Aug. 11-14.

It's another election day on May 3. Go ahead and vote — it can't hurt anything worse than what happened the last two or three times you did it.

Challenger Larry D. Shaw of Big Spring is outspending Rep. Mike Ezzell of Snyder in the District 63 House race.

According to campaign finance reports filed with the secretary of state's office 30 days before the May 3 Democratic Primary, Shaw had spent $5,461 compared with $3,351 for Ezzell.

Shaw reported collections of $8,239, but $5,461 of that came from three loans to the campaign from himself. The only major contribution was $1,000 from a group called the Voter Action Project.

Shaw spent $3,727 for the reporting period, including $3,446 to Interface Communications, Inc., for billboards, media work and radio ads.

Ezzell's personal campaign report listed $1,585 in contributions and $1,162 in expenditures. Major contributors were Ralph Mahoney of Big Spring, $500, and a committee for pharmaceutical manufacturers, $250.

A special committee called Friends of Mike Ezzell reported contributions of $1,510 and expenses of $2,189. Jim Baum of Big Spring is treasurer.

Principal contributors to Friends of Mike Ezzell were the political action committees of real estate interests, $500; of cattle interests, $300; and of Consumer Finance Association, $100.

Emmitt Threadgill of Dallas contributed $250.

The committee listed expenditures for various campaign activities and materials.

Okay folks, just remember April 29 is the last day for absentee voting in the Democratic primary.

The Texas Supreme Court has rejected an attempt by the Bexar County Republican Party to get two candidates for sheriff on the May 3 primary ballot.

GOP County Chairman Lamar Smith described the case as one of "statewide importance" that had never been considered by the Supreme Court.

Smith asked the high court to compel the San Antonio Court of Civil Appeals to reinstate William "Bill" Siebert and Bill Jonas as sheriff candidates. The court refused.

The appeals court dropped the names of Siebert and Jonas from the list of candidates after Rudy Garza, one of three Democratic sheriff candidates, and three non-candidates complained that the Republicans' petitions did not include the voters' city of residence.

Siebert and Jonas had tried to get on the ballot through petitions rather than paying the $300 filing fee.

Each needed at least 500 names, Jonas got 765 names and Siebert 666.

Smith argued the name of the voter's city is not required by the Texas Election Code.

In a similar case, G.S. "Jerry" Connell, also of Bexar County, lost his appeal to the Supreme Court in an effort to get on the Democratic primary ballot as a candidate for Constable, Justice of the Peace, Place 2.

CONNIE, WILLIAM AND TAJ MAHAL — These three pushed and pulled a covered wagon from coast to coast in 1949. Taj, their boxer who suffered sore paws, rode 20 to 25 miles a day in the wagon. They averaged 30 miles a day.

Deja vu! Lecturer had been here

By DON WOODS
William Stockdale, a lecturer who spoke at Howard College last Thursday, may have felt like he had been in Big Spring before.

Harry Vold to furnish stock at Western Texas College rodeo

SNYDER — Harry Vold of Fowler, Colo., top PRCA producer, will furnish the backing stock for the Western Texas College NIRA rodeo April 24-26. The rodeo will be held in the rodeo arena on West 30th Street, with performances at 8 each night. Tickets may be purchased from WTC Rodeo Club members or at the gate. Admission is $3 for adults and $2 for students.

Bob Doty, WTC rodeo sponsor, said that WTC is very fortunate to have Vold produce the rodeo.

"Normally we would not be able to afford such a contractor," he added.

"However, Vold winters his stock in the West Texas area and is able to help us out."

In 1979, the Vold company had both the co-saddle bronc of the year and the bucking bull of the year as voted by the top 15 cowboys in the PRCA. The bronc was

Affirmative Action Committee to meet

The Affirmative Action Committee of Howard College will meet at 1:30 p.m., Friday, April 25, in the Administration Building Testing Room to monitor the practices of the college in hiring, training, and promoting personnel, and to assist the administration in its efforts to execute the Affirmative Action Plan of the college, according to Doris Huihregtae, director of mid-management at Howard College.

Members of the committee are Wanda Reese, Paul Ausmus, Julia Trevino, Gilbert Hilario, and Doris Huihregtae, chairman. Ex officio members include Dr. Bobby Wright, affirmative action officer, and Mary Dudley, personnel director and affirmative action coordinator.

"The first 15 miles almost got us," Connie said, "but since we got loosened up every mile has been a pleasure."

They had logged 2,000 of those pleasurable miles by the time they got to Texas and it took them nearly six weeks to walk through the Lone Star State. Big Spring and Sweetwater were on the route then as they are this month for the lecture circuit.

These lectures are his first ones in Texas.

Both organizations are long-standing supporters of the Big Spring VA Medical Center's recreation program contributing some 1200 to 1500 volunteer hours per year as well as an annual sum of $1,000 for the welfare and entertainment of veteran patients.

Wallace signs with Lamar

By NATHAN POSS
Howard College Hawk scoring extraordinaire Mike Wallace took a big step toward fulfilling a long time dream Wednesday afternoon when he ended a hectic recruiting battle by signing a national letter of intent with Lamar University. "My dream has been to play in the final four and have basketball fans all over the country see me play on TV," said Wallace after inking the scholarship agreement. "Lamar has made the NCAA Tournament three of the last four years, and that's what I'm looking for, to have an opportunity to get into the tournament and win it."

Wallace inked with Lamar, which is located in Beaumont, Texas, in the presence of the local media, Howard College Coach Harold Wilder and new Lamar mentor Pat Foster. Foster, who recently took the Lamar job after being the top assistant for the famed Eddie Sutton at Arkansas, made it known that Wallace was somewhat special to him. "We're happy to have a player of Wallace's caliber coming into our program," said Foster. "He's my first signee as a head coach. I've signed many before as an assistant, but this feels much different."

Foster comes from a program at Arkansas that has developed a reputation for defense and controlled rebounding with a game average of just under 14. The All-Western Conference Wallace narrowed his list of choices down to Lamar, the University of New Mexico, Wyoming and East Texas before inking with the Cardinals.

"I went and visited Lamar," Wallace, who is also known as Bird, explained, "and they had a great bunch of guys. I just want to keep it in Texas." Wilder lauded Wallace's choice, and also the fact that he will be playing for Foster.

"I think Lamar will be a school where he can reach the goals he set," Wilder said yesterday. "Coach Foster is a solid basketball coach who will be able to help Mike succeed."

The confident Wallace appeared ready to work toward his NCAA final four goal, as he signed the scholarship agreement in a workout uniform. "I believe I can help (continue Lamar with its recent success)," Wallace said before leaving the meeting to resume working out.

Sonics in must win situation

The Seattle SuperSonics are on the verge of starting the 1980s the same way every defending National Basketball Association champion finished in the 1970s—as a loser.

No NBA champion has put together consecutive titles since the 1968-69 Boston Celtics, and the Sonics, despite the homecourt advantage in the NBA Western Division semifinals against the Milwaukee Bucks, trail 3-2 in their best-of-seven series. The sixth game will be in Milwaukee Friday night.

"We've really got our backs to the wall now," Sonics Coach Lenny Wilkens said Tuesday night after his team lost 108-97 before a Seattle Kingdom crowd of 40,172, an NBA single-game record.

"We're playing the world champs," said Bucks Coach Don Nelson. "I know the way they can play. Friday night is another game."

The Seattle-Milwaukee series is the only one in the second round to go beyond five games.

The Los Angeles Lakers eliminated the Phoenix Suns 4-1 and will meet the Sonics-Bucks winner in the Western finals. The Philadelphia 76ers beat the Atlanta Hawks 4-1 and the Boston Celtics defeated the Houston Rockets 4-0; the two winners will meet Friday night in the first game of the East playoff final.

If the Sonics can turn the tables and beat the Bucks at Milwaukee Friday, the seventh game will be Sunday in Seattle. Otherwise, the Bucks will head to Los Angeles to start the Western finals against the Lakers.

"Sunday would be a good day to start, but Tuesday would be fine, too," said Los Angeles interim coach Paul Westhead, who saw the Lakers beat the Suns 126-101 to end that series Tuesday night.

Westhead would prefer to win a long battle like the one that followed the end of the NBA regular season.

"I guess Seattle would cause me and Magic more problems because they are more guard oriented," said the Lakers' Norm Nixon, who teamed with rookie Earvin "Magic" Johnson to form a backcourt combination that rivaled the Sonics' Gus Williams and Dennis Johnson as the best in the NBA.

But Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who celebrated his 33rd birthday a day early with 35 points and 16 rebounds in Tuesday night's victory, was thinking about the problems he would have if Milwaukee wins and he has to face Bucks center Bob Lanier.

"Milwaukee jelled after they got Bob," he said, referring to its 20-6 record after Lanier arrived in a trade with Detroit.

Success pays off for Hawk Queens

COACH DON STEVENS Howard College Hawk Queens team of 1979-80 set numerous schools records, as well as winning the Western Conference with an 11-1 mark and advancing to the finals of the Region V Tournament.

The Queens were a joy to watch because of the balance that was displayed, and it appears that the teamwork is paying off for many of the sophomores off Stevens' latest crew.

Shawn Smith has already signed with Arizona State, and Stevens has indicated that all-everything Joanne LeFrige, as well as Susan Martin and Robbie Freeman, will also join the four-year ranks of women's basketball.

LeFrige has been recruited by a number of name schools, with the University of Texas hot on the trail for the two-time All-Conference and All-Region V star.

Martin, according to Stevens, will probably attend either Angelo State or Texas Tech on a basketball scholarship, and Freeman will do the same at one of the Abilene colleges. Freeman hails from Trent, which is located just outside of Abilene.

Smith, who signed with the Sun Devils last week, will be entering a situation that is on the rise.

The Sun Devils team finished at 12-13 in the 1979-80 season, but it was the first year that the Arizona State women had had a full-time basketball mentor.

She's no slouch, either, as Coach Julie Simpson has excellent credentials. A member of the 1976 US Olympic team, Simpson began her coaching career at Amarillo College in the 76-77 season. She then moved on to tutor the University of Cincinnati women for two years, and has just completed her first season at ASU.

Arizona State Sports Information Director Greg Harney called Tuesday afternoon to give the inside story on the Sun Devils women's program, and said that he felt that Shawn had an excellent chance to play quickly.

"Coach Simpson lost most of her front line to graduation after this past season," said Harney, "and she said that she recruited Shawn for her inside game. But Shawn has some tough competition," Harney added, "because she (Simpson) recruited three other girls that are all over 6'1".

In the Herald story on Tuesday concerning Shawn Smith's inking with ASU, it was reported that they play in the Pac-10. Harney informed me that the ASU women do not play in the Pac-10, per se, but in a conference similar. They will be in competition with UCLA, USC, Arizona, California-Berkeley, California-Los Angeles, and Cal State at Fullerton, along with San Diego State.

The name of the women's conference Arizona State will compete in is the Western Conference Athletic Association.

Zisk's dramatic homer gives Rangers win

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Richie Zisk was hitting .168 when he went to the plate in bottom of the ninth inning Wednesday night and looked liked it on the first two swings against reliever Victor Cruz. Fighting an extended slump which actually started last year, Zisk was fooled on two straight pitches from Cruz. Then he worked the count to 3-2 and lashed a two-out, three-run homer over the left center field fence into the 20 mph wind. It gave the Texas Rangers an 8-7 victory over the Cleveland Indians and first place in the American League Western Division.

The Rangers had to overcome a 7-0 lead fashioned when the Indians chased starter Ferguson Jenkins, who was seeking to become the fourth major league pitcher to win 100 games or more in both leagues.

It was the third time this season Texas had come from behind to win a game.

"I said before the game that Zisk was swinging the bat good," said Ranger Manager Pat Corrales. "His timing had been just a hair off. That sounded like a 45 going off when he hit the ball."

Zisk was mobbed at home plate like the Rangers had just won the World Series.

"That was the greatest reception I've ever received," he said. "It was nice to see. Everybody was out there. This team is getting real close."

Zisk collected only five game-winning RBIs last year as he battled a low-blood sugar count, a wrist injury and strep throat.

"I had a good spring," said Zisk. "Sure I was feeling the pressure a little bit ... I wanted to hit, but I know what I have to do."

Zisk said that Corrales' attitude on the bench refuses to let the Rangers give up, despite a large deficit.

"Pat is a fiesty guy. He won't let you roll over and play dead," said Zisk. "It used to be when this ball club was down seven runs, the game was over."

Jim Kern picked up the victory in relief for the Rangers.

For agreeing to fight Holmes

Ali says pride is the reason

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Muhammad Ali, overweight, out of shape and 38 years old, said pride is the reason he's coming out of retirement to fight Larry Holmes.

"The main reason is pride, to be the only four-time world champion after I'm already the only three-time world champion," he explained with Ali-esque logic

Wednesday after announcing an agreement to meet Holmes for the World Boxing Council heavyweight title.

The agreement calls for the $10 million fight to be held July 11 in Brazil at Rio de Janeiro's 165,000-capacity Maracana Stadium. Although nothing has been signed and there are details to be worked out, the bout appears to be relatively certain. "The money's good, but it's not just for the money. I know I can win," said Ali, who's expected to receive around $6 million. "I can whup Larry Holmes. Holmes is old. He's 31."

Ali had said earlier he was ending his retirement that began in September of 1978, but the announcement of his foe came as a surprise.

Muhammad (left), of Don King productions, announces at press conference Wednesday his challenge to fight current WBC champion Larry Holmes. The fight scheduled for Friday, July 11, 1980 in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil is expected to set a history-making $10 million bout. It will be the first world heavyweight championship fight at the Maracana Stadium in Rio de Janeiro.

Ashe retires from tennis

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "For everything there is a season," says 36-year-old Arthur Ashe, retiring after a reign as the first black to win a major men's tennis tournament.

Ashe, who has been one of the best known tennis personalities for more than a decade, said he is quitting "because it is time. Health is a factor, but that's not the only reason."

Ashe, who suffered a heart attack last July 31 and underwent quadruple bypass surgery in December, was back practicing tennis lightly within weeks after the surgery.

"My doctors say I will live to be 100, but they won't put that in writing," Ashe told reporters Wednesday before delivering a lecture at San Francisco State University.

His retirement came to light after he sent a letter to 22 friends and business associates saying, "A long time ago in my Sunday school classes, I learned that 'for everything there is a season' ... From today on, I will end my non-stop odyssey in search of the perfect serve and retire from competitive tennis."

Ashe, who won the U.S. Open at Forest Hills in 1968 as an amateur and won Wimbledon in 1975, is the only black man ever to win either competition.

Ashe said he will continue working for ABC-TV, Aetna Insurance and the Le Coq Sportif clothing firm.

Munny Tournament this week

The deadline for entering the Big Spring Munny Golf Partnership is nearing, as prospective golfers have only until tomorrow at 6:00 p.m. to do so.

The affair is a two-day, 36 holes of medal play event beginning Saturday. The first days scores will go to determine the flight seedings for the second and final round of competition on Sunday.

The entry fee for the tourney is $50 per team. Prizes will be awarded in the form of merchandise and gift certificates.

There is a 120-team limit in the two-day tournament. A shotgun start will initiate the golfers on each day at 9:00 a.m. and 2:00 p.m.

Anyone wishing to enter should contact Munny Club Pro Bobby Maxwell at the pro shop, or by calling 263-7271.

Country Club accepting entries

Entries for the annual Big Spring Country Club Invitational Golf Tournament scheduled April 26-27 are now being accepted at the pro shop by C.G. Griffin.

The entry fee is $30 and players will be shooting for some unusually high stakes. First prize in each of two flights will be $350 in merchandise and the size of the field will dictate the amount of money to be given away.

Last year, 120 competed for the awards and tournament officials hope to top the turnout this year.

Play will be over 18 holes on each of two days. Deadline for entry is Thursday, April 24.

Serving as co-directors of this year's tournament will be Wally State and R.P. Nicholson.

Girl Scout Track Meet reset

The Area Four Girl Scout Track and Field Meet, originally scheduled for last Saturday, will be held on Saturday, April 19 at Blankenship Field.

The meet, which will have girls participating from Big Spring, Lamesa, Coahoma, Forsan, Stanton, Garden City and Sterling City, will begin at 8:30 a.m. and run through 4:00 p.m.

At least 324 girls are expected to enter the one-day affair, which was cancelled last weekend due to poor weather.

Last Chance for girls softball

Saturday, April 19 will be the last day for girls wishing to play in the United Girls Softball Association summer league to register.

Girls aged 9-19 are eligible to play, and the registration will take place at the Howard College Student Union Building from one to five in the afternoon.

Tell the truth about false teeth

By Robert Wallace, Ed. D

Dr. Wallace: A year ago (one day after I got my driver's license), I was involved in a really stupid automobile accident. I hit the dashboard with my mouth and shattered several of my upper teeth. These were surgically removed and replaced with a partial bridge.

I recovered so quickly that none of my friends knew about my false teeth. I never thought I would ever date a boy again, that was, until I met Gregg. I haven't told him either, but every time I plan to kiss him, I leave the room to make sure my plate is still tightly in place. I think that he is getting a little suspicious.

Should I continue my disappearing act before I kiss him or should I be honest and tell him about my false teeth? — Sally, Santa Barbara, Calif.

Barbara: You will feel much better if you tell Gregg about your accident and that you have a false plate.

When you can afford it, see your dentist and see if he can place a permanent bridge in your mouth. I had two teeth knocked out when playing football in college and the permanent bridge has made me forget the teeth are false.

Dr. Wallace: I'm 17 and had been dating a boy for two years.

About three months ago, my girlfriend and I ran away to London (Ontario, not England) and we were gone about two weeks and told no one where we were. When we came back home to Windsor, I discovered that I had really hurt my boyfriend. In fact, he said that he didn't want to see me anymore.

At the time, I didn't care but now I realize that I love him and want him back. Can you help me? — Clare, Windsor, Ontario, Canada

Clare: Hopefully, you are now much more mature than you were three months ago.

Call him on the phone and ask him to come by because you would like to talk to him personally. When he does, be honest and tell him exactly how you feel.

Don't be too surprised if he doesn't "jump for joy" over your change of heart.

Dr. Wallace: I'm a seventh grade boy who has a problem. All of my friends like to say bad words. I say them, too, but I really don't want to.

I tried telling them that I don't like to swear, but if I don't, they call me a queer and a sissy.

I do love God, go to church on Sundays and read the Bible every night before I go to bed. I'm confused. Please help. — R.T., Wakefield, N.D.

R.T.: Peer pressure is very great at your age but have the conviction to live up to your moral standards. Never be coerced into anything you don't believe in.

Stop swearing immediately. Believe me, you will feel much better and the name-calling will cease if you silently overlook it.

Write to Dr. Robert Wallace, TwEEN 12 and 20, in care of this newspaper. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Abby

"Dirty Old Man" Merely Cheap

DEAR ABBY: Recently to celebrate a 70th birthday (mine), a group of couples went to a very fine restaurant. Our middle-aged waitress was wearing a tight black skirt slit up to her waist. Each time she came down the short stairway she showed a very shapely leg. We all remarked about it during dinner.

Upon leaving — meaning to compliment her — I said quietly, "That's a pretty decent exposure," whereupon she shouted so all could hear, "Why, you dirty old man!"

My wife, coming up behind me, demanded, "Did you pinch her?" Everyone in our party and most of the people in the restaurant had a good laugh — at my expense.

I quickly went back and pocketed the generous tip I had left for her. Abby, if they flaunt it, shouldn't they be complimented? And was I wrong to have pocketed the tip? TIPPED OFF IN TACOMA

DEAR TIPPED: When they flaunt it, even if you enjoy it, ignore it. You shouldn't have pocketed the tip. If the waitress served your party well, she earned it — even if she does have a big mouth.

DEAR ABBY: When my mother-in-law handed me my Christmas gift last year she said, "You don't seem like the type who would like this, so if you don't want it, please give it back to me because I love it!"

Abby, I was in a no-win situation. As I unwrapped it, I was hurt to think that she would give me a gift she knew I wouldn't like. Well, she was right. It was a gaudily decorated trinket box, in terrible taste and about as useless as anything could be. It was obvious that she wanted me to give it back to her. Well, I'm not in the habit of telling people I don't like their gifts, so I told her I thought it was "interesting" and kept it. She seemed surprised and disappointed.

As time went by, every time I looked at that ugly, useless box I became angry, so I donated it to a charity for a white elephant sale just to get it out of my sight.

What should I say if one day my mother-in-law asks to see that box? GAVE UP ON FORGIVING

DEAR GAVE UP: Tell her the truth. She had it coming. (The truth, not the box.)

Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How To Write Letters for All Occasions." Send $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Abby, Letter Booklet, 132 Lasky Drive, Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

1953 Hyperions have art appreciation program

The 1953 Hyperion Club met in the home of Mrs. Bill Pollard, 1606 Osage Rd. for its April meeting. Co-hostess was Mrs. Harry Spannaus.

Dolly Wilkins, elementary counselor in the Big Spring schools, presented the program. Her subject, art, was demonstrated by placing six different paintings in various locations in the entertaining area and guests were invited to choose their favorite one and indicate five reasons for their choice.

During the discussion which followed Ms. Wilkins pointed out that art is very individualistic. Art is purchased for both enjoyment and investment for balance, rhythm, emphasis, focal point, design, and color. The shapes involved in a painting are important, as well as the spaces which are left. This is true for sculpture as well as art.

Mrs. Arliss Ratliff, president, presided at the business meeting, during which officers for the new year were elected, including Mrs. Stanley Haney, president; Mrs. Spencer Wolfe, vice president; Mrs. Louis Stallings, secretary; and Mrs. Bob Brock, treasurer. The new officers will be installed at the next regular meeting which will be a salad luncheon on May 7.

Students take part in Private Property Week

Home ownership valuable U.S. privilege

By ROBBIE CROW
Family News Editor

Only a year and a half ago, the monthly payments were $156. Today, the owner must scrap up $648 each month.

This was just some of the hard-to-swallow news high school consumer education students learned as they toured several area homes during Private Property Week.

Although much of the story given to consumer ed students seemed dim and discouraging, Realtors did leave the future prospective homebuyers with suitable alternatives to new home buying.

The touring project was the brainstorm of Dorothy Jones, chairman of this year's Private Property Week. Mrs. Jones is a Realtor with Marie Rowland Real Estate.

"The purpose of Private Property Week," explained the chairman, "is to make people more knowledgeable of home buying and especially make them realize how privileged we are in America to own property. Many countries don't allow home ownership by their citizens."

Private Property Week occurs approximately this time each year. Over 700,000 National Association of Realtors members nationwide are celebrating the event this week.

PRIVATE PROPERTY TOURED — Consumer Education students took part in Private Property Week, touring area homes. Following the tours, Realtors visited consumer ed classrooms and explained the process of home buying to the students.

"Our main aim," Mrs. Jones continued, "is making people aware of how important it is to be a home owner."

"It is true," she continued, "that the majority of young people just starting out won't be able to buy a new home with the interest rate as high as it is now."

As a segment of her consumer ed project, Mrs. Jones took several classes on a before and after tour.

"I showed them an untouched old house and then had them tour one that had been renovated."

Mrs. Claudene Floyd, an associate with Home Realtors, pointed out several older homes for sale in the community "that just need a little work" for less than what many new homes require for a down payment.

"It has been a trend since the middle 70's," revealed Mrs. Jones, "that younger generations are demanding older home characteristics like high ceilings and hardwood floors."

wood floors."

One Big Spring High School Consumer Ed class, taught by Billye Grisham, toured homes in the Kentwood Addition. Tour guides were Home Real Estate associates Maria Faulkner and Mrs. Floyd.

One home with 4 bedrooms and two baths, was typical of homes built in the 60's because it featured an isolated living room.

"Nowadays, not many homes are built with isolated living rooms because our lifestyle is more casual," Mrs. Faulkner pointed out.

The house with approximately 1900 square feet is selling for $47,000.

Mrs. Faulkner revealed that monthly payments would run right at $600 a month.

"Why so high?" questioned curious Consumer Ed student Larry Valverde.

"Because interest is so high," replied Mrs. Faulkner.

But the tour guides also explained the advantage of buying a home, not because of what it is now, but because of its possibilities.

"There's a lot you can do with a house, even if it's not exactly what you want," revealed Mrs. Floyd.

"With a good carpenter, you can add on and give character to a home, making it what you want."

Highlighting Private Property Week in Big Spring was the appearance Tuesday of David Stirton, state president of the Texas Association of Realtors, who spoke at a luncheon held at Howard College.

TAR Executive Vice-president Jim Sawyer was also a special guest at the luncheon.

Attending this event were representatives from each real estate member of the Big Spring Board of Realtors, including Area One, Home, Reeder, Rowland Castle, McDonald, Shaffer, La Casa, Century 21-Spring City and Best.

Other Realtors from Abilene, San Angelo, Midland and Odessa were present.

Those attending the luncheon were welcomed by Pat Medley, president of the Big Spring board.

Regional Vice President Fred Gage, Odessa, introduced the guest of honor and featured speaker, President Stirton.

Stirton touched on several major issues facing the NAR in the upcoming elections.

He encouraged Realtors to contact their US congressmen and find out how they feel about free enterprise as well as private property ownership.

"It's time we got serious with our candidates and incumbents," Stirton stressed.

"Make it a point to see that everyone you know is registered to vote. We're not asking for much," Stirton concluded, "just the survival of democracy."

Also welcomed at the luncheon was past state president Wallace Moritz.

Another focus of Private Property Week, according to Mrs. Jones, is property clean up.

"We're trying to get all private property owners to clean up their property and alleys. Property value increases when the area is cleaned up," she explained.

As a motivator, the Big Spring Board of Realtors is offering $50 for the person who brings in the most pounds of aluminum cans by Friday.

Second and third place winners will be given $25 each.

A Realtor's aim is to help someone acquire property that they can afford.

"During this week," Mrs. Jones stated, "we want private property owners to learn to take pride in their property."

"It doesn't take much more than 15 minutes a week to rack up and clean up," she concluded.

Texas farm rates high
 AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - A sprawling Starr County farm - the only site state prison officials have asked for a report on - has been given high marks by a pair of Texas A&M instructors who visited the border tract.
 The Texas Board of Corrections is set to meet here Tuesday to hear the site selection committee report and to "consider land acquisitions," according to prison spokesman Rick Hartley.
 Dr. J. Rod Martin of the Texas A&M agriculture economics department confirmed Wednesday he and another instructor inspected La Casita Farm last week.
 "We found many favorable aspects, including very productive land and an extremely valuable irrigation system," Martin told the Associated Press.
 Prison officials were unavailable for comment on the La Casita site. Calls to TDC Director W.J. Estelle were routed to Hartley.
 La Casita officials were also unavailable Wednesday.
 The farm, which covers more than 5,000 acres, is about 30 miles from the Hidalgo County site prison officials wanted to buy in 1978. That deal fell through, and some area officials said they did not want a prison in their county.
 Martin was a member of the A&M team that conducted a general site selection study for the prison system in January. That report listed the Rio Grande Valley as one of the best areas in the state for a 3,000-inmate prison.

Grain prices plunge USDA'S actions probed

A task force to explore the government's efforts to protect farmers from the effects of the Soviet grain embargo has been formed recently and I have been asked to be a member.

The Government Operations Subcommittee on Intergovernmental Relations and Human Resources, which oversees the Department of Agriculture, requested the investigation, which will be headed by Congressman Glenn English of Oklahoma.

Our primary concern will be to look into actions by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, following assurances that farmers would be protected from the kind of market slump which we are experiencing following the embargo.

Wheat producers were told recently that USDA has been instructed by the President to "do whatever was necessary to protect farmers in the probe of USDA's actions.

It is important that the commitment that the Administration made to American farmers be met and I hope that our efforts will contribute to a swift solution to the drop in market prices.

You might be interested to know that Texas ranks high on the list of states receiving the most Federal funds — third, in fact. But, when compared on a per capita basis, our ranking in the share of tax monies drops drastically, to the 29th position.

According to the Federal Information Exchange System, Texas received $26.2 million in Federal funds during fiscal year 1979, 5.6 percent of the national total. Only heavily populated California and New York received more.

But on a per capita basis, the District of Columbia received the lion's share — 22 percent of the total, or almost $23,000 per individual.

Texas ranks 41st in the nation in the amount of Federal funds spent for education per student, primarily because our strong state tax base — supported by oil and gas production — carries the burden for education.

But when we look at Federal expenditures in the energy-related area, we find Texas receives only 1.1 percent of the national total, placing us in 22nd position.

Trustees delay vote on teachers pay hikes

MIDLAND — Midland school trustees have delayed a vote on teacher salary increases after receiving a request from Kerry Davis, an English teacher, to top the state salary schedule by 35 percent.

Currently, the Midland school district pays 25 percent above the state base. School Supt. Dr. James Mailey recently recommended that trustees stay with that figure.

Mailey said the 25 percent supplement makes the MISD

"reasonably competitive" with the larger school districts in Texas.

Starting salary for Midland teachers with bachelor degrees is $11,788, of which $8,970 is paid by the state. That increases to $21,613 with 20 years teaching experience, discounting merit pay and other district-added incentives.

Midland ranks 26th in the state in teacher salaries, compared to seventh in 1970-71 and 65th in 1977-78.

Locals lose civil rights immunities

WASHINGTON (AP) — Persons whose civil rights are violated by a local government always have the right to sue, the Supreme Court says.

After Wednesday's ruling, the nation's cities and counties no longer enjoy any immunity from such suits, even when their policies were carried out in "good faith" that no rights guaranteed by the Constitution or federal law were being abridged.

The 5-4 decision completed a dramatic, two-year turn-around from the high court's rulings that until 1978 gave cities and counties absolute immunity from such civil rights suits.

In 1961, the justices ruled that local governments could not be sued under a civil rights law passed by Congress in 1871. That changed two years ago when the court reversed itself and said no such absolute immunity from the 1871 law existed.

But until Wednesday, the court had left unanswered whether local governments themselves are entitled to the same "good faith" immunity their individual employees enjoy.

The answer now is "no."

That means plaintiffs who prove a local government's official policy actions violated some federally-guaranteed civil right can collect money from city or county treasuries even when the public officials who created or carried out those policies cannot be made to pay.

The decision does not affect laws in 44 states and the District of Columbia which give local governments qualified immunity from lawsuits based on violations of state or District law.
