MONUMENT TO DISASTER — A grim monument sits amid twisted steel which was once part of the Sunshine Skyway bridge in Tampa Bay and serves as a pointer in the early morning hours to the "Summit Venture" which sits anchored in the background. The "Summit Venture" collided with the bridge Friday morning, carrying 32 persons to their deaths as they sat in their cars and a Greyhound bus on the bridge.

Officials fear death toll will rise

Sharks shadow divers

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Divers shadowed by sharks attracted by blood called off their search for victims of the Sunshine Skyway bridge collapse late Saturday and said they'd try to lift the wreckage with salvage barges. At least 30 people died in the accident.

"We made the decision to use the barges because of the dangerous situation with the vehicles twisted up," said Hillsborough County Sheriff Walter Heinrich.

"It's not just a matter of going in to get the victims out, some of them apparently are twisted in the steel," the sheriff said.

He said divers may have to cut the vehicles apart before they're lifted to the surface.

The Coast Guard, meanwhile, announced that the pilot who was steering the ship that hit the bridge Friday had been the pilot aboard another ship when it hit the structure in March.

Divers discovered the bumper of a car that was not among the three known to have plunged into Tampa Bay on Friday, but authorities said they were not sure how long the bumper had been in the water.

The discovery of the bumper fueled fears of a rising death toll from the accident that occurred when a Liberian-registered phosphate ship knocked out 1,400 feet of the bridge's southbound span in a blinding storm during the morning rush hour. A Greyhound bus with 23 people aboard, three cars, and a pickup truck were known to have plummeted 140 feet into the murky green waters.

Late Saturday afternoon, the Coast

Guard and Hillsborough County deputies announced they were unsure of exactly how many people died.

The Coast Guard said Friday 32 people had died. But Capt. Marshall Gilbert said Saturday that the Coast Guard was revising its death toll to 31 because of possible confusion in the body count. Hillsborough sheriff's spokesman said police divers who had searched the area could account for only 30 bodies.

Eighteen bodies — seven men, 10 women and an infant girl — had been recovered by midday Saturday and taken to the Hillsborough County medical examiner's office in nearby Tampa. Dr. Peter Lardizabal said autopsies showed the victims suffered extensive impact injuries.

"I tried not to look at their faces," diver Mike Rossette said of the scene he found in the bus, which was upside down, perched on chunks of concrete and twisted metal. "Judging from the condition of the bodies, I would say most of them died on impact."

Coast Guard officials said blood from the bodies had attracted several sharks to the area, but they said the sharks had not caused any problems.

The 606-foot Summit Venture, a 34,000-ton bulk carrier, sustained extensive damage when a large chunk of roadway from the 15-mile-long bridge fell onto the vessel's bow. The ship was towed by tugboats Saturday to Egmont Key, four miles west of the crash, with its Chinese crew of 35 still aboard.

The wreckage of steel and concrete blocked busy Tampa Bay, bottling up 30 ships in Tampa port. Officials said the port averages 20 ships in or out each day. The bridge, designed with twin-spans to connect St. Petersburg with Terra Ceia, has been closed to all traffic indefinitely, forcing people to drive around the bay to get to the lower Florida west coast.

It was the third time the bridge had been rammed this year. Coast Guard officials said pilot John Lerro, who was steering the Summit Venture, also was at the helm when the 720-foot Liberian freighter Jonna Dan slammed into the bridge on March 8, causing $40,000 damage to the structure. Lerro could not be reached for comment.

Authorities said an investigation board would convene this week to study the tragedy.

Police capture three in wild bank robbery

FONTANA, Calif. (AP) — A daring bank holdup followed by a Wild West-style chase marked by gunplay, explosions and three deaths, ended in slow-motion Saturday as three tired, dirty and wounded men were taken into custody without a shot fired.

A fourth fugitive was later found dead in a remote ravine. Police in a helicopter using a heat detector used in the Vietnam war to detect human body heat spotted the body Saturday afternoon, hours after the other three had been taken into custody.

The body was lying face down in a rugged area high in the San Gabriel Mountains. Sheriff's deputies said the last man, not immediately identified, appeared to have died of wounds suffered in a fierce gun battle late Friday.

A tracking team that moved up the craggy, brush-covered slopes spotted one of the men Saturday morning. Within a half-hour they surrounded and captured him and then saw two others, who gave up without resistance.

The three men each had a handgun, said sheriff's deputies. Two of the men, described as long-haired, with beards and mustaches and in their 30s and 40s, were wounded, authorities said.

The three were not identified. Five bandits in ski masks, believed to be members of the "Two-Minute Gang," burst into the Security Pacific National Bank in Norco on Friday just before closing time. They ordered bank workers and patrons to lie face down on the floor and scooped up $19,000 from teller's cash drawers, stocked full to handle the cashing of end-of-week paychecks.

The gang acquired its nickname because it times its robberies with a stopwatch and leaves within two minutes. An FBI agent said the gang is believed to have made off with about $80,000 in four San Diego robberies.

As the gunmen — armed with M-16 rifles — ran from the bank, they were met with a burst of gunfire from Riverside County sheriff's deputies. A small battle raged as the bandits piled into a waiting van.

The getaway driver, tentatively identified as Jerry D. Ivan, was shot to death a short distance from the bank and his companions abandoned the bullet-riddled vehicle and got into a pickup truck.

The four remaining bandits then led pursuers on a wild chase through Riverside and San Bernardino counties.

The gang tossed homemade explosives at officers pursuing them up mountain roads in the San Bernardino National Forest. A sheriff's deputy, James B. Evans of Riverside, was killed by a shot in the head.

A sheriff's helicopter following overhead was struck by gunfire but was able to land safely.

Dawson labeled swing country

Shaw reflects on big victory

By STEVE HERSHBERGER
On a chilly May Thursday after he denied re-election to one of the powers in the Texas Legislature, Larry Don Shaw, the victor in the 63rd State Legislative race, sat down with this writer and another to speak of his successful campaign.

"My opponent was a very powerful member of the House," Shaw remarked, adding that his defeat of incumbent Mike Ezzell of Snyder ranks second only to 31-year-old Kent Caperton unseating State Sen. Bill Moore in far-reaching impact.

The formula for effecting this upset was combining support from all sectors of the vast six-county 63rd District. He said it was farmers, union men, Mexican-Americans, young people and those disgruntled with the incumbent that gave him his slim win.

"Each county there was a different story," he said.

To make a point, Shaw added, "We won big in the rural areas of Dawson County. Yet in this county (Howard) we didn't do as well in the rural areas."

The powers of the incumbency were not overwhelming to his challenge of Ezzell.

"I didn't feel it as a strong current," Shaw said. "I'd hear Mike Ezzell has done us a good job, he is a pretty good ol' boy. Then we'd hear 'we haven't seen him in six years.'"

Shaw artfully constructed his victory around winning Dawson and Howard counties and neutralizing Ezzell's stronghold of Scurry County.

Shaw beat Ezzell by less than 400 of the 13,000 votes cast. The totals were 6,774 for Shaw and 6,387 for Ezzell.

Dawson County provided the newly-elected representative with his biggest margin, almost 500 votes. The totals in that county were 1,520 for Shaw and 1,076 for Ezzell.

"Dawson County was a swing county," Shaw said. "It was the only county without a hometown candidate."

He added, "We made sure we had someone in the county (Dawson) everyday. We worked it pretty hard."

The biggest surprise in the upset win came from Ezzell's stomping grounds, Scurry County. Ezzell was able to beat Shaw by only 335 of 3300 plus votes cast in the county catty-corner to Big Spring.

"We tried to hit Scurry County early on and then back off," Shaw said. His campaign used an early radio blitz in Snyder and then did not advertise until late in the campaign.

"We didn't do much advertising in Snyder," Shaw said. "We backed off and didn't do anything until the last three days."

Shaw steered his campaign to where momentum would be to his advantage right up to the polling.

"Our campaign peaked after absentee voting," Shaw said. "We lost absentee ballots."

He added, "People two days before the election changed their minds (who to vote for)."

Reflecting on the night of May 3, Shaw alluded to his feelings being divided.

"That night the greatest joy was the people in my campaign who worked so hard to help did not have to go through a defeat," Shaw said.

He added, "I felt very sorry for my opponent and the people who worked in his campaign."

Shaw is 27 years old. He was born in Big Spring and reared in the Knott and Ackerly area. He is a graduate of Sands High School.

He added Texas Tech University and graduated there in 1975 with a degree in agricultural communications.

He had previously been active with the American Agriculture Movement and was in 1976-77 on the Young Democrats State Executive Committee.

The Howard County native started to think about running for the statehouse in November 1978.

"The initial stages were before Christmas," Shaw said. "In '78 some people had asked me to run. The seed was planted then."

He made his decision in January and filed on Feb. 2, 1980.

Shaw did not have the total agreement from his family to run.

"I made this decision really without their consent," he added.

Shaw added, "I can still remember the words of my relatives who said my opponent just couldn't be beat."

Shaw maintains the two major issues confronting the district are water and education.

"Looking at reality the main issue we are facing is water," Shaw said. "It is one that really scares me."

According to him, San Angelo is the only town prepared to meet a substantially larger water demand.

"Many other cities are not prepared to meet the population growth," he added.

Education is also a major issue, according to the newly-elected representative.

"If we don't meet those challenges we will have some problems," he said. He is not making any promises for wide-reaching solutions.

"It is something our leaders need to make the people aware of," Shaw said.

He said he will be an attentive listener and articulate on the issues facing the 63rd District.

"West Texas has kind of been viewed as a world part," he said. "What I think we need in West Texas is some strong new leadership."

$1,000 gift made anonymously perks up Halfway House drive

A $1,000 gift made anonymously has pushed the campaign to salvage the Halfway House here to within almost half of its $14,369 goal.

Directors of rehabilitation facility need that much money to pay off old debts incurred by the agency prior to 1978.

A total of $1,250 was given to the Halfway House Saturday, bringing the amount collected to $6,791.88.

If the campaign is not successful, and it must be completed in a short time, the directors have no choice but to file for bankruptcy, in which case the facility would be closed forever.

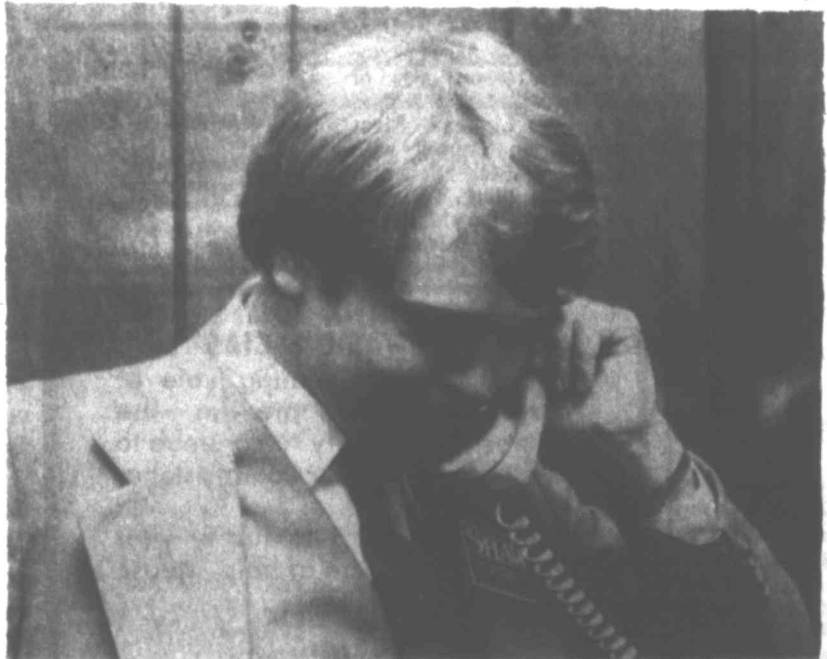

The Halfway House, it is acknowledged, fulfills one of the community's most important functions, that of accepting people who have recently undergone treatment for emotional or drinking problems and are seeking to return to their rightful places in society. At the Halfway House, they are offered counseling and take jobs in the community to help pay their own way.

Checks should be made out to The Halfway House Fund and forwarded to the Herald, Box 1431, Big Spring 79720.

Focalpoint

Action/reaction: Cosden and Russia

Q. I understand Cosden sent a man to Russia. Isn't this illegal?
A. President Jimmy Carter did issue an order on Jan. 4 stating that transfers of high technology items to the Soviet Union would cease. Under this directive the Department of Commerce uses two criteria where personnel, equipment or knowledge may not be sent. One, the transfer must not be strategic. Two, the transfer is not generally available from other sources. In order for it to get clearance to sell something to Russia, a company must gain an export license. To make a long story short, Cosden does have the okay of the Commerce Department to send men to Russia.

Valdes women waiting for something to happen

HAVANA, Cuba — Faced with a big decision they must shortly make, Lilliam and Norma Valdes are waiting here aboard the shrimp boat, "Rubber Duck," for something to happen in their dramatic bid to get relatives out of Cuba.

They paid $1,250 for the trip here from Key West, Fla., and must ante up a like amount for the kinsmen they are allowed to take back with them. A fund started back in Big Spring, Tex., by the First United Methodist Church, for the operation was over-subscribed.

Lilliam is the wife of Al Valdes of Big Spring. Norma, a former Big Spring resident who now lives in Port Everglades, Fla., is the spouse of Danny Valdes.

When the two sailed aboard the boat, "Rubber Duck," May 1, to participate in the gigantic refugee sea-lift, they had been told each would be permitted to bring back eight relatives with them.

Now, they have been informed that each can return only two persons. They are destined to start the 110-mile return trip to Key West no later than next Thursday.

Included in the group Lilliam had originally planned to bring back are 75-year-old Estrella Valdes, mother of Al and Danny; Lilliam's two sisters, Olga and Haydee; the husbands of Olga and Haydee, Manolo and Juan; Haydee's 19-year-old daughter, Madeline; Olga's son, Juan Jr., 17; and Al's brother, Louis.

Norma's list includes her mother, three sisters, two brothers plus at least two in-laws.

All that has been changed by Fidel Castro's decree, however. The Valdes women must now decide who their top two choices will be.

A man who accompanied the "Rubber Duck" to Havana returned to Key West due to illness in his family. He called Al Valdes in Big Spring one night recently to reassure him that the Valdes women were faring well. Their supplies are holding out, and they remain cheerful and optimistic. They have not set foot on the island itself. The 28 people who made the trip from Key West to Havana aboard the water craft are, of course, watched closely by Cuban guards but they are not being harassed, according to Al Valdes' informant, Lilliam was flown to Key West a couple of weeks ago in a plane furnished by Gary Turner. Mrs. Valdes was accompanied to the seaport by Jim Baum, manager of radio station KBYG in Big Spring, and Harry Spannaus, former wing commander at Webb AFB. Baum and Spannaus have since returned to Big Spring after helping the Valdes women with last minute details for the voyage.

Al and Danny Valdes have returned to their jobs. Al is employed at the Cosden refinery here. Danny is now with American Petrofina in Port Everglades.

Assuming at least some of the Cuban refugees will make it to America, they likely will be sent to new homes around the country after they are processed in a tent city in the Florida Panhandle.

The total number of refugees arriving in Florida now has topped 30,000 as the two-week-old "Freedom Flotilla" brought 3,000 arrivals Friday.

One woman and 16 men on Friday left the facility at this air base near Fort Walton Beach where more than 9,000 Cuban refugees are being processed.

Ten went to live with relatives in the Miami area, while the others went to Cuban communities under the sponsorship of friends and relatives in New York City, Boston, Oakland, Calif., and Newark and Union City, N.J., officials said.

"I feel very happy today for two reasons," beamed Juan Gregorio del Risco, 27, who said he was joining his brother in Union City, N.J. "I am entering the United States and it is my birthday."

One of the reasons for the processing and relocation facility at this sprawling military reservation was to resettle some of the refugees outside Miami, whose population already is 40 percent Cuban.

Officials from the Federal Emergency Management Agency and voluntary organizations told reporters only those Cubans with close relatives in that area would be sent to Miami.

The slow start to the relocations Friday, six days after the refugees began arriving at the 42-acre tent community, should grow to several hundred daily soon, said John McCarthy of the U.S. Catholic Conference.

McCarthy said the conference, which is the main contracting agency for the State Department in the resettlement process, said his organization has sponsorships for as many Cubans as Fidel Castro allows to come to the United States.

Federal officials also said some of the refugees now at the tent city and elsewhere on the base would be transferred to an Arkansas processing facility where they can stay longer.

"We are trying to move some people without sponsors (of jobs and homes) up to Fort Chaffee to await sponsorships," said Norman Steinlauf of the Federal Emergency Management Agency.

Florida's U.S. senators, Democrats Lawton Chiles and Richard Stone, toured overcrowded facilities in Miami and Key West. They concluded federal officials don't appear ready to assume responsibility for the potentially chaotic situation.

"The federal government has been awful slow in getting its act together," Chiles said.

Gov. Bob Graham said about 1,300 National Guard troops on duty in four south Florida counties will be deactivated at 5 p.m. today. He said the state so far has spent $300,000 on food, medicine, security and transportation for the refugees. He insisted that the federal government reimburse state and local officials for the expense.

"It is now time for the federal government to assume its total responsibility," he said.

Late on her first date

By ANDREA COHEN

Jennie Teele can tell you when a past event took place by how much rain fell that year.

She calls herself a country girl and has lived in Glasscock County since 1906 when she was 11 years old.

You can't imagine the difference between then and how it is now," she says. "There was one Baptist church and all denominations used it."

Jennie Teele is the ninth of 12 children of Jeff and Sarah Jane Cox, and their youngest daughter.

Today she lives in Garden City in the home she and her late husband Edward bought in 1928.

"We lived out in the country and went to the country school," she says. "Then we moved into town about 1909 and went to the Garden City School."

The school in the country had one room. When we went to town, it was a three-room schoolhouse. Then Garden City built a four-room schoolhouse in the same place where the school is now. There were two rooms upstairs and two downstairs," she says recalling the past.

When she was in school, she changed the pronunciation of her first name from Ginny to Jennie. "I didn't like it because the kids all called me Gin."

Her family moved into town because her sisters were in higher grades which were not taught in the country.

At 18, she took a job working at the mercantile store.

"There were no cars then, so the store had a big bill of goods. I marked up the goods myself and did the books. I guess I was dependable. I was reared to be dependable."

Recalling prices then, she remembers ready made dresses cost approximately eight dollars and shoes cost approximately $2.50.

"My first pair of high type button shoes cost four dollars. Now they wouldn't let you look inside the box for four dollars," she says laughingly.

In 1915, when she was 20, she married Edward Teele. She had dated him five years previous to her marriage.

"There were very few cars, so we used horse and buggy," she remembers. "I dated him five years and I saw him about twice a month. He lived on a ranch. If our boyfriends were in town, we'd go to church on LONGTIME RESIDENT — Jennie Teele, seen here with a neighbor's horse, stopped riding 10 years ago at the age of 75. She has been a resident of Glasscock County since 1906 and has seen many changes through the years.

Sunday night and then we went to square dancing in people's houses.

"We didn't round dance because the mothers and fathers were old-fashioned and they thought it was too much closeness."

They did not give the boys a goodnight kiss because "we didn't do things like that. That was the order of the times. If a girl kissed the boy, she got dates, but she wasn't thought that much of."

If there was no party, the girls and their dates would sit in the parlor. "My auntie wanted them to leave by 11:30. If it was a party, it was 11."

"My first date was an outdoor party and my mother wanted me home by 11. My date (who later became her husband) and I went. When he pulled out his watch later on, it was 12. My mother never asked me what time I got in and I didn't tell her because I was scared. I slipped up the steps and went to bed."

She and her new husband lived on a ranch in Glasscock County for eight years and then moved back to Garden City where they bought the mercantile store.

"We carried hardware and windmills and all that," she says. "I had to know the prices of everything. Then we all had cars. We didn't carry dresses or shoes. We carried mens workclothes. We also carried hats on consignment. Cans of red salmon cost 20 cents or two for 35 cents. Flat cans of pineapple sold for 10 cents."

When World War One began, none of her brothers went to war. "They were either too young or too old," she says. "Somebody told me we were going to go to war. And I said, 'Oh, no they won't. No way!'"

"You know, I've been reading newspapers a mighty long time," she continues. "I'm broad minded. I can talk Republican or Democrat. I'm a Democrat. One time I switched to Republican and I've lived to regret it. I voted for President Nixon."

"That's not to say all Democrats do right. They're in Washington and we're west here in Texas and they don't know our way of life."

She never reads the funny pages because "I'd be in the house and my husband and the men came in and grabbed the funny pages. I guess I just sat and pouted. I swore off them."

She adds that the first president she remembers is William McKinley. She remembers when he was assassinated in 1901, when she was six years old.

Their first car was a second-hand Model-T.

"We bought it in 19 and 20. It was four years old but it hadn't been driven very much."

The cost of the car was $400.

"The first new car we bought was in 19 and 24. We paid cash for it. I don't remember the price, but it was less than $1,000."

During the 1920's, she says "We were working the ranch. I rode horses and took care of the ranch just like a man would because I loved it. Back then when we had so little, you didn't go out a lot. Gas wasn't high, but we didn't have much money. We went as much as we wanted, but not a lot."

Talking about The Great Depression she says, "Boy, do I know! The price of cattle went down. It didn't affect us much. We had money saved and we ran our customers a year on credit. Money was real tight and interest was

Mercury soaring close to 100 mark

By the Associated Press

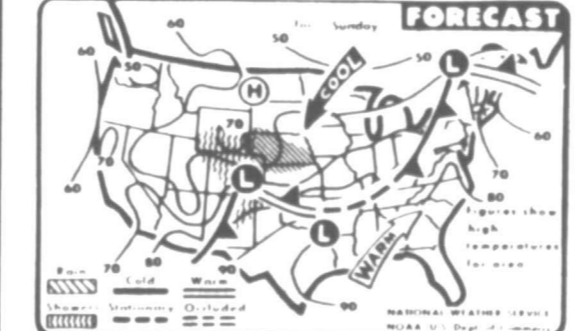

A low pressure system sent Texas temperatures soaring toward the century mark Saturday over northwest Texas Saturday, while moist air over the Gulf of Mexico brought clouds and cooler temperatures to the coastal plain and East Texas.

Wichita Falls recorded a sizzling 99 degrees Saturday and thermometers in Childress peaked at 97. Laredo, in deep South Texas, reported 96.

Skies were generally clear over northwest Texas and strong southwest winds blew at 15 to 20 mph. A slight fog was visible in the morning.

Temperatures over the remainder of the state ranged from the 70s in cloudy areas to the 80s where skies were clear.

Uganda power shakeup

KAMPALA, Uganda (AP) — Soldiers, said to be acting without government approval, on Saturday arrested the head of civilian security forces, who is regarded as a supporter of President Godfrey Binaisa. The minister's temporary detention followed the president's dismissal of the army chief of staff.

The capital appeared calm, but the developments appeared to push Uganda closer to a breakdown in civil authority. The East African nation has been a cauldron of violence and political infighting since dictator Idi Amin was overthrown a year ago.

Unconfirmed reports said two persons were shot dead at Nile Mansion, which serves as home and office to many members of the government, when soldiers took Internal Affairs Minister Barnabas Kumunka from the luxury hotel in central Kampala to an undisclosed destination.

Inmates return from Arizona

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — State Corrections officials said Saturday 26 inmates had been returned to New Mexico from the Arizona prison where they have been held since the February's devastating penitentiary riot.

The group was among the first returned from about 500 inmates transferred to out-of-state prisons after the riot, which claimed the lives of 33 prisoners. Four other inmates had been returned to New Mexico from Arizona earlier.

John Ramming, aide to Corrections Secretary Adolph Saenz, said Saturday the 26 men arrived back at the New Mexico penitentiary about midnight.

OSSIPEE, N.H. (AP) — It seems there will be no change in the halls of justice in Carroll County.

The county commissioners have rejected an attempt by Superior Court Chief Justice Richard Dunfee to put a door between a hallway and the Superior Court courtroom. The judge says the door is needed to prevent the clerk from having to walk through a hall to enter the court.

The commissioners call it "judicial arrogance."

They say a door would detract from the architecture of the building. One of the commissioners even appeared at the courthouse to prevent a contractor from beginning work.

The commissioners maintain that the judge has no right to tell them what to do with a county building.

Starters in the shorter two-mile run Saturday will begin at the softball field in Comanche Trail Park, run in the direction of the Figure-7 Tennis Center as far as US Highway 87, then come back to the original starting point by way of the hike and bike trail alongside Comanche Lake. The route will be plainly marked.

Those in the five-mile event will also start at the softball field, run up to Highway 87 via the Figure-7 courts, run along US 87 to the east entrance of Comanche Trail Park, take a right to a point past the Municipal swimming pool, circle it, return to US 87 at the East entrance of the park, travel down the highway to a point near FM 700, cut back into the park alongside Comanche Trail Lake and finish near the softball field.

Either run should be a good test for anyone who works out regularly. The runs are open to anyone.

Sarah Higgins, promotional director of the Herald, is coordinating the events with the YMCA staff.

Carter urged to engage Sen. Kennedy in debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate's Democratic leader said Saturday that "for the good of the party" it's time President Carter accepted Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's challenge to debate.

Sen. Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia made his suggestion deep in the primary campaign season with Carter far ahead of the Massachusetts senator in delegates to this summer's Democratic National Convention.

But Byrd said, "I don't write Mr. Kennedy off at this point, regardless of the delegate mathematics."

The Senate leader made his comments at his weekly news conference.

Asked for comment, a White House spokesman said that if Carter is nominated he would debate the Republican nominee but still has no plans to debate Kennedy.

Although conceding it would be unusual for an incumbent president to debate a party rival, Byrd said such a setting could call attention to overlooked Carter achievements and "his statesmanship" besides "highlighting where the shortcomings may be."

He praised Carter in relation to Republican front-runner Ronald Reagan, saying the president has "a far deeper knowledge of the issues" than Reagan, who he said gives "simplistic, patent-medicine answers" to complicated questions.

But Byrd also called Kennedy "a good Democrat... who has brought to the front the economic issues that ought to be discussed" in any debate.

Pink Puffers in process of reorganizing action

A support group for families of emphysema and other lung disease victims, is in the process of reorganizing with plans to begin meeting the first Tuesday of each month, from 7 to 8 p.m., beginning in June.

Known nationally as the Pink Puffers, the group is open to all those who have lung diseases, and their spouses. Kenneth Randall, Malone-Hogan Hospital's respiratory therapy director, is the group's chairman.

The first meeting, June 3, will focus on familiarizing the members with treatments available, and their function in treating the disease. Randall will give demonstrations of various treatments available to lung disease patients, and a tour of the hospital department.

A second meeting, always on a first Tuesday, will deal with ways of coping with lung problems when traveling. Randall will also teach this session. "We feel this topic is a timely one that needs addressing, since traveling brings with it new problems for respiratory patients."

Diet and nutrition, and the importance of controlling food volume and metabolism, affected by certain foods, will be the topic discussed at the third meeting in August.

Registered Dietician Joyce Mills, Malone-Hogan Hospital Director of Food Services, will help members to understand the role of food and nutrition, in the treatment of lung disease.

"Eventually we hope to develop supportive educational programs, using our members to act as support groups to in-patients of hospitals, and other supportive activities," Randall says.

Basically, the group wants to help each other cope with their problems, learn what treatments are available, and learn to help themselves, as well as others, the therapist says.

CONSTRUCTION MONEY AT BIG SAVINGS

Capp's low interest rate on construction loans is 14%.

You can save a bundle in interest costs, but you must order your new home before May 31, 1980, and start building before the end of the year. And with Capp's unique building and financing programs you can save more if you act now.

More home for your money. Capp originated the "Finish-It-Yourself House"™ to give you more home for your money. We design your house to your specifications. Then we erect and enclose your custom home on your lot and foundation. We also provide you with a full complement of finishing materials. You can finish it all yourself or manage the finishing process by acting as general contractor, or do parts of both. You save either way. Many customers save thousands compared to a general contractor's price for the same home on the same lot... Now you can save a bundle with our current construction loan rate.

A comprehensive construction loan. Capp's construction loan pays for all the standard materials and labor we use in putting up your home... plus the materials you need to finish it. It can even cover things Capp doesn't normally provide — like the payoff on your lot, foundation, or subcontractor labor and masonry. And you don't need a large cash down payment with Capp. For most customers, the deposit is no more than a single month's mortgage payment.

Long-term financing. Capp will also commit to provide qualified Capp home buyers with a long-term mortgage at a rate that's competitive when your construction loan expires. (Most experts predict mortgage rates will be lower by then.) And if you find a better long-term rate than Capp's, you are free to take it with no prepayment penalty from Capp.

You can't win by waiting. At a time when most other builders can't even provide construction money, come to Capp Homes. We have the solution. Our construction loan rates will remain at 14% until May 31, 1980. This rate good in Texas only.

Negro votes party, not racial lines

Today's Negro is apt to vote more along party than racial lines. The featured actors in this year's presidential races have been acting as one-tenth of the nation's population does not exist.

When the candidates have seen fit to address themselves to the problems of ethnic groups, they've been more apt to concentrate on the Mexican-Americans than they have on the Negroes.

IT COULD BE that some of the candidates have thought all along that the black vote was their's for the asking. Sen. Ted Kennedy's family ties and legislative record would seem to make him a natural contender for minority votes, but that is not necessarily true in all areas.

President Carter's incumbency and his appointment of blacks and hispanics has assured him of sizeable minority support. Gov. Jerry Brown of California had an impressive appointment record as well, but confusion about his stands on other issues diminished his lustre at the polls.

Others who commanded much respect in the black community and among the Mexican-Americans were Rep. John Anderson of Illinois, whose liberalism ultimately forced him to announce as an Independent candidate; and Sen. Howard Baker who not without friends among the minority races.

Ronald Reagan has never made any great effort to court the black vote but it's not likely the Negroes will vote against him in a bloc. Many, as a matter of fact, like what the former California governor is saying and are rallying behind him.

FOUR YEARS AGO, only 58.5 percent of eligible blacks were eligible to vote. Only 48.7 percent actually voted. These figures represented a decline from each of the three presidential elections, and a lesser percentage of registration and voting than is found among whites.

This year's selection of an American president comes at a time when:

—1.3 million black adults have no job and little prospects of finding one.

—The incidence of welfare dependency is greater among blacks than whites, although more whites receive public assistance.

—The number of poor black families showed a steady increase during the 70s, while the number of poor white families went down.

—Unemployment and income gaps between black and white families grew wider.

—The number of black male adults in the labor force decreased in the 70s, while the number of black female adults went up.

All these statistics — and the wasted and forgotten futures they represent — will worsen as the Carter anti-inflation measures fall into place.

The blacks will listen to the fiery rhetoric of their black leaders, who say they've been betrayed by party promises but they are prone to stick with the party that has given them more style than substance. The difference could be that the Democrats seem to care.

Too tired

Around the rim

Wall Finley

Christina Onassis, who divorced her Russian husband, gave him a ship.

It was her way of telling he hadn't shaped up.

"A great man admits his mistakes."

—Anonymous saying

Maybe. But it's not much consolation to be great when you're unemployed.

I HAVE A THEORY the reason we always are disappointed in our presidents is that by the time they have gone through all those primaries, they're too tired to do anything but go in the White House and as former Herald staffer Marj Carpenter frequently wrote "stop and smell the roses."

Herald word maker Amelia Rodriguez, also known as "Little Agate" in newspaper circles, overheard:

He: "Let's celebrate Spring."

She: "Okay. Go fly a kite."

NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC Delegate Delano Shaw says attendance figures tell a lot about party loyalty in Texas when political conventions are held in fishing weather.

Sitting in for the president, Fritz Mondale has attended innumerable luncheons and dinners on the campaign circuit. He's probably gained 9 to 10 pounds that were intended for Jimmy Carter.

Give Mondale credit for unassuming modesty. You don't see him running around asking people to vote for him for vice president.

LAST WEEK I received a box of candy (I'm trying to gain weight) from a Herald subscriber (who liked something I wrote), and a threat from a politician (who didn't like something I wrote).

Oh well, one out of two isn't bad, and the weather has been so nice I'm not going to let anything bother me.

I told Velma, my wife, and Moonchild, my bulldog and Baby, Velma's poodle, "Let's go out someplace and have a picnic. I know. We'll go to the Rose Garden in Comanche Trail Park."

The Rose Garden doesn't have picnic facilities as such, but four or five years ago we used to eat a picnic lunch in the car near the roses.

IT WAS SO PEACEFUL and beautiful and the very thought of the Rose Garden and the sunshine and the birds singing in the trees brought back delightful memories.

The first inkling I had that maybe things had changed a little was when we tried to park within a block of the few surviving roses. There were so many cars. The smell from "funny" cigarette smokers overpowered the scent of flowers.

"Some garden club must be here to look at the roses," I told Velma and Moonchild.

"What?" Velma asked.

"I SAID," I YELLED all over the noise of what seemed like 20 tape decks, "people must be here."

"There are people here all right," she shouted. "I thought you said this place is peaceful."

Then I remembered Backshop Boss Bob Rogers had told me about the crowd and hundreds of beer cans he had noticed in the area the Sunday before. This was shortly after he had "beat" the golf course, of course.

"So what do we do now?" Velma wanted to know.

She didn't think my answer was funny.

I TOLD HER I never promised her a rose garden. ***

Golfer Bob said he always shoots in the 70s. "If it gets any hotter, I quit," he explained.

Evans, Novak

WASHINGTON — The torrent of leaks by Carter administration officials that instantly followed the aborted rescue mission is an intelligence fiasco that may cost the U.S. dearly than the fiasco in the desert itself.

Besides jeopardizing the lives of U.S. agents in Tehran, the massive spillage of official secrets betrays to the world a government out of control. This criminal act could not have taken place if Jimmy Carter were in charge of his own administration. One well-placed specialist familiar with covert operations told us "There is no one around able to compel silence."

SUCH COMMENTS in intelligence and national security circles are the talk of the town. While Soviet propaganda seizes on the leaks to trumpet U.S. subversion against Iran, senior officials in Washington are dumbfounded and dismayed at how secrets denied to Congress are leaked to the news media. The fragile intelligence system has suffered a relapse, and tarnished U.S. credibility has been further undermined.

Who is leaking? Possibly military officers who never thought the plan would work, trying to clear their skirts. Possibly defenders of the mission who believe that the more known about it, the better it will look to critics. Senior officials claim to know. First, President Carter has ordered silence, second, neither he nor they know the origin of the leaks.

Obviously, this has endangered undercover Americans exposed by leak as having been assigned key roles in Tehran for later stages of the three-phased rescue attempt. But deeper implications stem from Moscow's eager use of the leaks.

Soviet commentators in Moscow, picking up leaked secrets from the U.S. press and television, have been systematically spilling inside information about the U.S. rescue operation across the pages of Pravda and Izvestia. "Internal counter revolutionary forces" were targeted for on-the-spot help to the U.S. rescue team. Izvestia informed its readers April 29.

On May 1, Pravda's top political writer, Yuri Zhukov, backed up his charge that the U.S. was out to destroy the Islamic republic. He cited evidence leaked in the U.S. that there was a "fifth column" of undercover Americans allegedly on the ground in Tehran.

Such alleged revelations would be expected even if Soviet opinion organs were manufacturing them. What makes these Soviet reports so damaging to the U.S. is that every intelligence service in the free world knows they were in fact picked up from reasonably accurate reports leaked from within a Carter administration helpless to prevent it.

Warnings have been informally delivered to U.S. intelligence agencies that allied foreign intelligence services are going to stop cooperating with the U.S. for a time. The reason: The U.S. has proved once again, in even more humiliating fashion than before, that it cannot protect its intelligence methods.

This same charge was made during the post-Watergate crisis of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), when secrets were sprayed around the world amidst non-stop congressional investigations of supposed excesses.

Estrogen: When, for whom, for how long?

Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I had a hysterectomy 16 years ago and have been taking hormone pills since I am wondering if I keep taking them if they will harm me. —A.R.

Your question demands a lengthy answer, so bear with me, please.

The most I can do is to offer some thoughts in this controversial area. I am making two assumptions. First, that your ovaries were removed when the hysterectomy was done; second, that this was done before your normal menopause.

Doctors have specific reasons for prescribing estrogen therapy for women. They are:

1. To prevent hardening of the arteries. If a woman's ovaries are removed before normal menopause, replacement hormones may help prevent the hardening. They do not seem to be helpful in this after a natural menopause, the kind most women go into gradually at middle age (45-50 years).

2. To prevent bone-thinning (osteoporosis). Again, estrogens seem to help retard this for women who have had their ovaries surgically removed prior to natural menopause or whose ovaries have prematurely quit producing hormones.

3. To prevent hot flashes. Estrogens will help at any age, but are usually given in decreasing dosages over a limited period. Experience shows that the flashes themselves tend to decrease in time with or without estrogen therapy, and

4. To prevent thinning of vaginal tissue. Estrogens alleviate this. For some, estrogen creams or other types of creams are sufficient.

I think you can place yourself in one or another of the above categories.

Should you continue? Again, all I can offer are some thoughts of experts.

There are negative aspects. Estrogen therapy has been associated with the development of uterine cancer and clots in the veins. With your uterus gone the one possibility is eliminated for you. If you have had vein problems (such as inflammation) or a history of that in your family, estrogen therapy should be re-evaluated. Nor should estrogen therapy be used for women who have liver problems. History of cancer in the patient or in the patient's family are other negative considerations in evaluating hormone use.

But it should be clear that estrogen replacement is seen as most valuable in women who have become menopausal at an early age, either through surgical removal of their ovaries or because their ovaries have prematurely lost the ability to produce the hormone naturally.

This does not mean that estrogen therapy has no place for women who have gone through a natural menopause. This decision rests with the individual physician based on all of these factors — a woman's age, her complaints, her own and her family history and the presence of any of the conditions dictating against it, such as phlebitis or liver disease.

I am sorry I can answer you only with such generalities, but a strict yes or no answer is impossible. Knowing these pros and cons of estrogen replacement will help you understand your doctor's reasons for prescribing or not prescribing. Whether the time has come for your doctor to think about discontinuing estrogen therapy is a matter for frank discussion.

There is nothing "poisonous" or insister about the kind of estrogen you get in pills compared to the kind your ovaries would produce naturally. They are basically the same. The controversy lies in when to use them, for whom, and for how long.

CONFIDENTIAL TO B.B. — No, I have never heard of menopause causing seizures. You must see your doctor. Take your husband with you. He can describe what you are doing during these spells. You need not worry about being any more descriptive with your doctor than you have been with me. Promise me you won't delay.

Dear Dr. Donohue: True or false. Mental stress is bad for a person with a peptic ulcer? —M.R.

True, it's bad because stress can promote glandular-caused extra secretion of gastric acids.

For a comprehensive discussion of how to cope with the change of life, write to Dr. Donohue, in care of the Big Spring Herald, for his invaluable booklet, "Make Menopause Easier." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I am in high school and thinking about what I want to do with my life. I am thinking about missionary work, but my parents say I am too young to make a decision about that. Is that true? —I.C.

DEAR I.C.: No, not necessarily, although your parents are wise to urge you to think through any decision you make. They do not want you to make a mistake, and they probably know that mission work is often difficult and demands great commitment and ability. However, if God wants you to be a missionary, you can be sure He will give you the necessary abilities.

The important thing for you to do is commit the whole question of what you will do with your life to God. God loves you, and because of that He has a perfect plan for your life. The most important thing you can do is find God's will for your life. The first step in doing that is to renounce your own desires and ambitions (even when they may seem good in themselves), and seek God's will above all else. The Bible says, "But seek first his kingdom and his righteousness" (Matthew 6:33). Jesus also tells us,

"If anyone would come after me, he must deny himself and take up his cross daily and follow me" (Luke 9:23). Have you turned your life over to Christ, asking Him to guide and direct you?

Then I certainly would encourage you to investigate missionary work. As you discover more about it, and you may sense a definite call from God. Look first of all at what the Bible commands us about your responsibility to spread the Gospel throughout the world. Jesus declared: "All authority in heaven and on earth has been given to me. Therefore go and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, and teaching them to obey everything I have commanded you" (Matthew 28:18-20).

This command of Jesus is just as valid today as it was when He first spoke it. Study also the rest of the New Testament, particularly the book of Acts, seeing how God used all kinds of Christians in various ways to spread the Gospel. You also should do all you can — by reading and personal contact — to discover more about mission opportunities today.

Records 'on ice'

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — It's no secret that the Central Intelligence Agency routinely engages in economic espionage around the world.

The CIA's economic spies are highly regarded, and sometimes give a president his first inkling about what is happening in the never-never land of dollars, yens and marks. It was from the CIA, for example, that President Carter first learned in 1973 that the United States had slipped from first to sixth place among the world's industrial nations.

This unique brand of espionage may be less romantic than the James Bond-style of spying, but it is no less important. It has become a major part of the CIA's operations since the derring-do days of World War II and the Cold War.

INDEED, ECONOMIC espionage has been a function of American spies for more than 200 years. Yet such is the absurdity of the CIA's obsession with secrecy that the very first economic espionage mission on record — in 1776 — is still apparently classified as secret by the spy agency.

The documents that detail this fledgling entry into international intelligence are contained in the CIA's Historical Intelligence Collection at Langley, Va., in suburban Washington. Despite the fact that the information could hardly compromise U.S. espionage activities in 1980, the record of America's first venture into economic espionage is still classified as confidential. The secret publication tells of the mission assigned to one William Carmichael, who was sent to Holland late in 1776 in the guise of a merchant to gain information for the Committee of Secret Correspondence, the CIA's predecessor in the Continental Congress.

Carmichael's "control" was Silas Deane, a lawyer and businessman from Wethersfield, Conn., who was sent to France by Congress to obtain military supplies for the newly independent British colonies. Deane interpreted his mandate broadly enough to recruit Carmichael to do a little economic spying.

Deane "tasked Carmichael with a number of economic intelligence requirements," the CIA's secret history discloses. It then quotes agent Carmichael's report to the Committee of Secret Correspondence from Amsterdam on Nov. 2, 1778. It was sent through a secret mail drop on St. Eustatia Island, and told the Revolutionary CIA: "You have been threatened that the Ukraine would supply Europe with tobacco... I have seen some of its tobacco here, and the best of it is worse than the worst of our ground leaf."

WHY THIS MATERIAL is still secret is anyone's guess. It seems unlikely that the 204-year-old mail drop on St. Eustatia is in danger of being compromised.

Big Spring Herald

Dear Editor:

We have always heard of "southern hospitality," and we found it at its best in Big Spring. After we settled ourselves in the beautiful free campgrounds, we made use of the friendly stores and gas stations of Big Spring.

The Chamber of Commerce was very helpful and we just wish we could stay in this area longer.

We were especially impressed by the large, clean and beautiful City Park and golf course adjoining the convenient park for overnight visitors.

We read with interest the story of the natural spring originating in the park and saw the sparkling water running into the deep pool there. We could visualize the animals and Indian and early pioneers as they gratefully used this pure water.

The overnight park with the electric hook up and water and disposal stations is more than we usually find when we pay from $6 to $12.

Also it is clean and quiet, and usually the area reserved for overnighters in the regular R.V. parks is literally in the dog run or close by.

So, thank you, Big Spring, for two good days on our tour through many states.

We are from Wisconsin and since November we have traveled in Minn., N. Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, California, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas.

As we continue northward to our home at Webster, Wisconsin, we will go through Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa, and Minnesota. We will tell others of Comanche Trail Park at the great city of Big Spring at the crossroads of Texas. We will return! Gratefully.

Dear Editor:

In regard to your April 27 editorial, Gordon N. Johnson, Chief of Police of Minneapolis said, "Police forces were never designed to provide general personal security; that reliance has of necessity rested with the people. Who provides protection before the squad car arrives? The handgun is an equalizer against the criminal and the right to use it is often the right to life itself."

As you can see, we could duel with quotes all day. When the handguns are banned, see how many criminals stand in line to surrender theirs.

If as much time and effort spent on torpedoing the second amendment was used in dealing with criminals and maniacs, surely the crime would decline.

Fed regulations burial, coal digging favored by Clements

By JAMES WERRELL
Gov. Bill Clements would like to see more Texas coal excavated and a few federal regulations buried.

The governor was on hand, Wednesday, when the 100-millionth ton of lignite coal was mined at the Texas Utilities Generating Company plant in Mount Pleasant.

Both he and TUGCO chairman T.L. Austin, wielded shiny, stainless steel shovels to turn a ceremonial spadeful of coal.

Clements also used the ceremonies to deliver a stinging indictment of federal regulations governing the production of coal, petroleum and nuclear fuel.

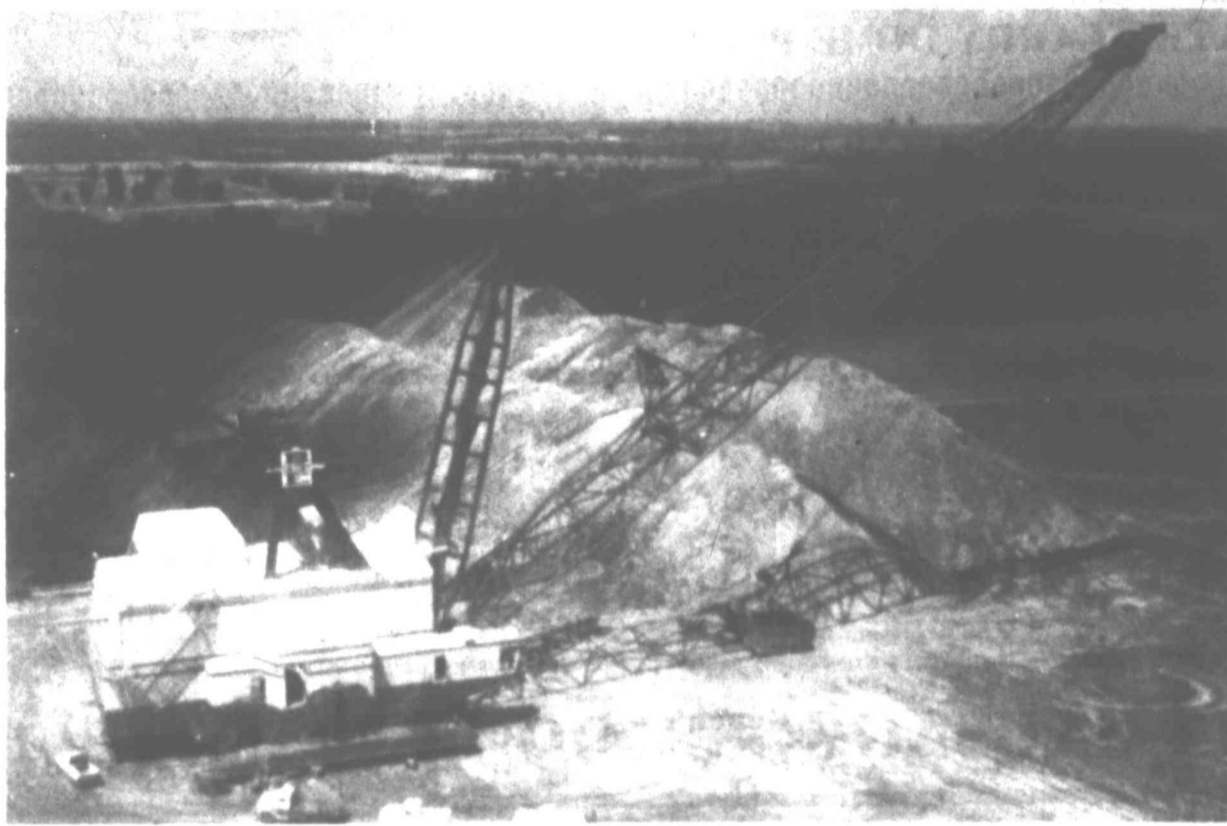

"The real issue is not finite technology, but whether we want air conditioning, heat, and gas for our cars. This environmental nonsense has gone too far, and it is time to come up with a reasonable compromise," said Clements.

In that same press conference, he called governmental regulations "disgraceful, a national scandal."

"We are mining less coal than we did 10 years ago, and there are fewer miners at work than there were five years ago," he added.

Both Clements and Austin (who also peppered his remarks with barbs aimed at the federal government) feel that lignite in general, and Texas lignite in particular, can answer a large percentage of the country's fuel needs.

According to TUGCO literature, in 1971, 100 percent of the system's electricity was generated with natural gas and some oil. By 1979, however, 50 percent of the customers' power was being generated with lignite.

As of 1980, the TU System had a total generating capacity of 5.3 million kilowatts at its three lignite plants: Monticello near Mount Pleasant; Big Brown near Fairfield and Martin Lake near Henderson. A fourth lignite plant is now under construction.

Company estimates maintain that in 1979 the average cost of lignite used at the three plants was less than half the average cost of natural gas, and less than a third of the cost of the fuel oil used.

"What is 100 million tons of lignite?" asked Austin. "For one thing, it's 1.3 trillion cubic feet of natural gas, a month's supply of imports. If this plant had run on natural gas, it would have cost our customers $1.5 billion more than lignite," he added.

The inevitable questions about environmental concerns in regard to strip mining also arose during the press conference. The governor countered with a sweeping gesture of his hand, indicating the open field on which the press conference was being held.

"This field is part of the land that was reclaimed after being mined. Now it is covered in clover, and people from Texas A&M and other agronomists say there has been no sacrifice; we have restored it to greater productivity," he said.

According to Austin, 9,000 acres of land in the TU System have been reclaimed after mining.

"This company is committed to reclamation!" he said.

Clements fielded only one political question Thursday afternoon. What did he think of the state's presidential primary results?

"I think the people of Texas are well pleased with Reagan, and I predict he will carry the state in November," he said.

Then, in a partisan aside, he added, "The significant feature of the primary was the 20 percent uncommitted vote in the Democratic primary. I guess the voters walked into the booths, held their noses, and said to themselves 'I can't stand these guys.' And I agree with them."

Following this statement, it appeared as if more political questions would be forthcoming. But the governor called an abrupt halt to the news conference, refused to answer any more questions from reporters, and walked to a large tent to join with a crowd of 600 guests in eating barbecue.

Eight dead servicemen eulogized

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's leaders and the surviving relatives of eight servicemen killed in an aborted attempt to rescue American hostages in Iran gathered in a sun-filled cemetery Friday and mourned "those who died in the dark desert night."

President Carter said they died because they valued freedom more than they valued life.

The president arrived at the white marble amphitheater of Arlington National Cemetery a minute early and told 2,000 who attended a service that he had just met privately — and with "trepidation" — with the relatives of those who died in the raid.

None was unforgiving, he said. Instead, he said, he was embraced by each and told by each that the servicemen had been honored by the chance to free their countrymen.

To onlookers, Carter appeared moved by the service. During the singing of "God of Our Father," he seemed to wipe a tear from his eye and taken a deep breath.

The amphitheater was encircled by stubby white markers of America's war dead — miles and miles of gravestones.

To the relatives, Carter said: "Every American feels your loss. Every American shares your rightful pride in the valor and the dedication to duty of those who died in the dark desert night."

Top military leaders, White House aides, members of the Supreme Court, the Senate and the House, and first lady Rosalynn Carter attended.

On the way, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy stopped at the graves of his slain brothers. For Edmund S. Muskie, attending the service was his first official act as secretary of state.

Islamic Republican Party leads election

By the Associated Press
The Islamic Republican Party, many of whose members demand spy trials for the American hostages in Iran, took a commanding lead Saturday in returns from the runoff round of the Iranian parliamentary election.

Officials in Tehran said the new Parliament, which must decide the hostages' fate, will probably convene within two weeks.

For the 53 hostages, who reportedly have been scattered among 13 Iranian cities, Saturday was the end of their 27th week in captivity.

As the election results mounted, confusion developed over when Iran will get a prime minister and Cabinet, its first full permanent government since the revolution that toppled Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi in February 1979.

The Tehran newspaper Bamdad said President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr would appoint the ministers within one week, and the new government's first duty will be to try to resolve the U.S.-Iran crisis.

But another newspaper, Ettelaat, quoted Sadegh Tabataba'i, a top official in the prime minister's office, as saying that because of "recent developments, I don't think Mr. Bani-Sadr will appoint a prime minister before the commencement of Parliament." He did not elaborate on the "developments."

The prime minister's office has been vacant since Mehdi Bazargan resigned after the seizure of the U.S. Embassy and American hostages last Nov. 4.

One man considered a top candidate for the job, Ezzatollah Sahabi, said he had been offered the prime ministry but turned it down because there would not be "enough legal protection" in taking office before Parliament met, it was reported from Tehran.

It appeared that Bani-Sadr, although empowered by Iran's new constitution to appoint the government chief, might be waiting for Parliament to convene in order to let it make a show of consent in the appointment.

Trim takes BBB post

Carl J. Trim has assumed duties as president of the Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin, Inc. This appointment becomes effective Friday, according to Grace King, Chairman of the Board.

For the past eight years, Trim has been associated with the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation as a District Manager for West Texas.

Trim, an Arkansas native, attended the University of Arkansas, the University of Maryland and the University of Texas. After college, Trim joined the Army for the start of a 22-year career, returning in 1967 as a Lt. Colonel. He is married, has three children and has lived in Midland since 1973.

Surrogate mom might give birth to twins

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A 37-year-old Illinois woman serving as a surrogate mother for a Louisville couple may give birth to twins in November, according to the physician responsible for the arrangement.

Dr. Richard Levin, an infertility specialist, said Friday that he based his "presumptive diagnosis" on blood tests taken shortly after conception, the woman's impressions and those of her gynecologist.

The Louisville couple went to Levine for help after trying for nine of their 10 married years to have a child of their own. The woman is unable to bear a child.

Under the contractual arrangement, announced in December by Levin and the couple's local attorney, the woman was inseminated with sperm from the husband.

For the birth, give the baby, or babies, to the couple and leave. "They won't see one another and will not meet in the future," Levin said. "That is the primary goal of our project, to match couples (with surrogates) and yet not have them meet one another."

The couple was "ecstatic" about the possibility of twins, Levin said.

Recount changes outcome of race

COLEMAN — A recount of votes in the May 3 Primary election changed the outcome of the race for a Coleman County Precinct 1 commissioner's post.

The recount showed that incumbent commissioner Jack Strickland won over challenger John Sprinkles by six votes. The original tally had Strickland ahead by one. The new count had Strickland ahead, 280-274.

$1.5 billion loan guarantees to 'poor' Chrysler approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government appeared likely Saturday to give final approval for a $1.5 billion package of loan guarantees to the financially plagued Chrysler Corporation.

Administration sources said the guarantees were tentatively approved by the U.S. Chrysler Loan Guarantee Board after an agreement was reached earlier Saturday in Toronto between Canadian officials and Chrysler on a separate request for loan guarantees from Canada.

Although some hitches may still develop, the board was not expected to reverse its position, the sources said. Treasury Secretary William Miller was expected to hold a news conference later in the day to announce the final decision.

In Canada, the government scheduled a news conference at 3:30 p.m. EDT on the Chrysler's request.

The American loan board, which was formed last year as part of the government's attempts to keep the automaker from going bankrupt, had been awaiting the Canadian decision before acting on the U.S. loan support program.

The board, of which Miller is chairman, met for less than half an hour Saturday after it was unable to reach a decision on the loan guarantee during a four-hour meeting Friday.

After Saturday's session, Treasury Department spokesman Joe Laitin would give no details on whether a decision was reached.

"This is a long, difficult financing," Miller had said after Friday's session. "We haven't got the final answer on the Canadian part of the financial plan."

Chrysler Chairman Lee A. Iacocca flew from Washington to Toronto late Friday to meet with Canadian officials in negotiations which lasted late into the night and continued Saturday.

Miller, chairman of the federal loan board, said despite the government assistance, Chrysler would probably lose about $1 billion this year, about the same as it lost last year.

But the Treasury secretary said with the loan guarantees, which will allow the company to obtain additional financing, Chrysler is expected to begin making a profit in 1982.

"We're now at a point where Chrysler can turn more of its attention to producing automobiles," Miller said at a news conference.

An essential part of the Chrysler plan for recovery, he said, is increased production of small, fuel-efficient automobiles. He said Chrysler, with the federal aid, will be able to produce 400,000 such cars this year and 900,000 next year.

"It's imperative that these small, efficient cars be available for the market and it's important that they be produced in this country," Miller said.

Culinary genius will be absent

LEWISBURG, W. Va. (AP) — World-class athletes who show up in Moscow for the summer Olympics will be deprived of something more fundamental than America's world-class competition. Many of them are going to have to make do, three times a day, without America's world-class chef.

For the first time since the 1956 games, in Melbourne, Australia, Hermann Rusch and his culinary genius will be absent from an Olympics. Sorry, world. It goes with the boycott.

"Of course I'm disappointed," he was saying the other day, browsing among a quarter century of Olympics memorabilia, "but when the president says don't go, that's that. You don't go."

True, for all those years Hermann Rusch was in charge of only the American fare. In time, though, and perhaps inevitably, his reputation vaulted one athletic kitchen after another.

He explained: "In a foreign country, it is not always easy to order food that will be pleasant and tasteful to your athletes and also provide the nutrition they need."

Lexington, wherever he crystal chandeliers upon, if they choose, plates of gold. "A chef's dream," Hermann Rusch said. "Oh, the parties I have prepared!"

Hermann Rusch retired two years ago from the Greenbrier. A grateful management presented him with one of those gold dinner plates. He prizes it among his room full of trophies.

He and his wife, Violette, now live nearby in a gracious house of their own design, where the wine cellar is kept at 57 degrees and the wit at dinner parties — 40 guests are not unusual — is as rich as Hermann's le soufflé au chocolat.

Yes, he said, he will miss the Olympics.

He had in mind for the athletes in Moscow, oh, egg with caviar for starters, perhaps some herring in wine sauce...

But, enough. After all, a boycott's a boycott.

Bush hanging tough

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Bush has a lot of reasons for staying in the Republican presidential race. Put them all together and they spell: why not.

As well as any politician, Bush knows the mathematics — the cold figures of the delegate count — are against him. But he persists: He has nothing to lose, and anything can happen.

"I can read numbers," says the former United Nations ambassador. Only an optimist — which Bush freely concedes he is — can read victory for Bush in the presidential tea leaves.

Bush is quick to say that 49 percent of the delegates going to the Republican National Convention in Detroit will not be legally bound to any candidate. He figures a final burst of Bush fervor in California and elsewhere might cause them to jump Ronald Reagan's ship and bring them to his side.

But if those already in the Reagan camp stay there, Bush would have to win 89 percent of the 927 delegates still to be chosen to get the 998 votes necessary for nomination.

Why then does Bush stay in? "If you have any character you don't quit," Bush tells his audiences.

The explanation may be that Bush simply sees no reason to get out.

"What would he do?" asks a staff member. "Go back to Texas and become chairman of the board of some company? He'd be bored in no time."

Bush says he gave up all his affiliations "to do one thing — run for president."

While his eye is on that goal, he will admit to no other. Vice president on a Reagan ticket? No. A cabinet post in a Reagan administration? No.

However, as Bush says in another context, "a bandwagon going one way, can turn around and go the other."

Member of Dallas Cowboys coaching staff to talk here

The Defensive Co-ordinator of the Dallas Cowboys, Gene Stallings, will be in Big Spring on Saturday, May 17 to speak at a banquet honoring this year's Big Spring High School graduates.

Stallings was a football coach at Texas A&M before becoming an important member of the Dallas Cowboys coaching staff. He is also a popular after dinner speaker.

"It seems to me ashame that many students cannot attend the celebrating of their completion of high Doug Morris, Youth Minister 14th and Main Church of Christ, said. After the banquet there will be a party at the Y.M.C.A. and a breakfast. Reservations may be made by contacting Doug Morris at 263-1303.

Before he was 25 he had worked at the Palace Hotel in Lausanne, the Semiramis in Cairo, the Meurice in Paris, a dozen others, and in 1939 he was chosen chef steward for the Swiss Pavilion at the New York World's Fair. He supervised 30 chefs.

Wall Street Journal story halted by judge

DALLAS (AP) — A state judge has issued a temporary restraining order telling the Wall Street Journal it cannot publish an article on Tuesday as the newspaper had planned.

The article concerns a Dallas law firm's internal investigation of OKC by the Dallas law firm of Locke, Purnell, Boren, Laney and Neely. OKC claims the Journal "wrongfully obtained" the law firm's report.

Frederick Taylor, executive editor of the Wall Street Journal, called Fish's ruling "obviously a case of prior restraint. Any newspaper is against prior restraint. We just can't take that sort of thing lying down."

However, Taylor declined to discuss what legal action would be taken or whether the newspaper would obey the judge's order.

"I can't answer that. We're obviously in a tricky situation," he said.

Fish said he signed the order after OKC attorneys told him the newspaper had researched the story over a long period of time.

"As I understood it, the paper planned to publish the story on Tuesday, so the only restraint would be delay of publication for four days. I didn't think the Wall Street Journal would be harmed by withholding it for four days," the judge said. Fish acknowledged he "didn't have time to exhaustively research the law."

Publication of the article Tuesday would coincide with a special stockholders' meeting called to vote on a proposal to dissolve the corporation, a move announced in July 1979.

The Dallas-based corporation, under investigation by the U.S. Securities & Exchange Commission, claimed irreparable damage would occur if the nationally circulated newspaper published the story.

OKC's directors commissioned the law firm to conduct an investigation of the company's financial transactions and its chairman, former Detroit Lions football player Cloyce Box.

The report has previously been quoted in several Texas publications. According to these published reports, the law firm said it found OKC's brokers were friends, relatives, former OKC employees of longtime business associates who were generally low on capital and lacked experience selling oil.

WINNER — Vivian Colson, Coordinator of the Malone-Hogan School of Radiologic Technology, congratulates Julian Gonzales on winning the Best Student Teacher Award for 1980.

Gonzales wins award established in 1976

Julian Gonzales who became interested in nuclear medicine as a student in high school, is the winner of the Lila Brewster-Elizabeth Harrison Best Student Teacher Award, 1980, an award given yearly by the Malone-Hogan Hospital School of Radiologic Technology. Presentation of the award took place at the fifth Annual Faculty Appreciation Party, held in the home of Dr. and Mrs. Buerk Williams, Saturday, May 3.

The award is given yearly.

The school pays tribute to its 55 faculty members, 48 of whom are guest members from outside the radiology department. "This is a time that we express our appreciation for our faculty, most of whom provide their teaching services without honorarium," Dr. Williams, Chief Radiologist, says.

The Award was established in 1976. Established to honor two retired school teachers, Mrs. Lila Brewster and Elizabeth Harrison, who were instrumental in the development of a course on the fundamentals of teaching for the school, the award is determined by the first year class, and given to the outstanding second year student, according to teaching performance.

Goode to succeed DeBerry in key state highway job

AUSTIN — Marquis G. Goode, a 33 year veteran with the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation, will become its chief administrative officer July 1.

Chairman A. Sam Waldrop of the State Highway and Public Transportation Commission said the commission had chosen Goode to succeed Luther DeBerry as the department's engineering director. DeBerry announced April 25 that he will retire effective June 30 after a 44 year career with the department.

Goode has been a top aide of DeBerry's as assistant engineering director for operations. In that capacity, he has coordinated the department's engineering and technical programs.

Waldrop said Goode was chosen "from the ranks of many qualified professionals in the department." He said the appointment recognizes his "proven ability and administrative leadership."

A native of Hunt County, Goode (pronounced "good") attended public schools in Dallas and graduated from Texas A&M University in 1947.

He joined the department immediately after graduation as a field engineer in the Dallas district. He became an associate resident engineer in 1950, resident engineer in the following year and senior resident engineer in 1956.

To help educate handicapped $60 million year plea voiced by state board

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The State Board of Education agreed Saturday to ask the federal government for $60 million a year to help educate handicapped students in Texas public schools.

The three-year plan approved unanimously by the board extends to June 30, 1983. Currently about $55 million has been spent for the year ending this June 30.

State support for education of the handicapped students during the same three-year period is expected to reach $330 million.

"Our efforts are keyed to meeting the educational needs of all handicapped students," said Don Partridge, Texas Education Agency associate commissioner for special education. "For this reason we work closely with the school districts and the regional education service centers... at the same time parent counseling and family involvement programs are continuing to play an increasing role."

Partridge said there are approximately 335,000 handicapped students now attending class either as part-time or full-time students.

The programs to receive help from the federal grants include instructional materials designed for handicapped students.

continued stress on the need to locate and enroll handicapped students and training for both special education and regular classroom teachers.

The state board also approved 15 public schoolteachers and administrators for the 1980 Textbook Committee, which will begin selection of $29.7 million in textbooks for the school year beginning Sept. 1, 1981.

The first meeting of the committee will be May 16. The final selection of the textbooks will be made Nov. 6 by the State Board of Education.

Copies of all textbook material submitted by publishers for consideration are available for public review now at the 20 regional service centers in the state.

Members of the new textbook committee include Jim Fowler of Carthage, Pamela Kaye Landrum of Garland, Dr. Wesley K. Summers of Bryan, Dr. Donald Collins of Klein, Christine White of Beaumont-South Park, Mary Joyce Kasting of Coppas Cove, Emerson Joyce Williams of Fort Worth, Lois L. Whitson of Wichita Falls, Jerome Samuelson of Corpus Christi, Amparo R. Quintanilla of Kingsville, Enrique Perez of El Paso, John W. Carroll Jr. of Houston.

Field testing of chemical to control fire ants begins

(Special to The Herald)

AUSTIN — Field testing on a new chemical for imported fire ant control has begun on 26,700 acres in five East Texas counties, Agriculture Commissioner Reagan V. Brown has announced. It will continue for two weeks.

Much of the land is Texas Department of Corrections property covering 8,000 acres in Madison and Houston counties, 5,000 acres in Brazoria and 1,200 acres in Fort Bend counties. Other locations are 500 acres in Jefferson County and 12,000 acres of privately owned land in Madison County.

The field testing will allow proper evaluation of the chemical. It begins after weeks of surveying to determine the rate of infestation.

"We have had crews working in various locations to establish the number of mounds per acre so that we can have an accurate assessment of the success of the new chemical," Brown said.

"Treatment will be done in areas where there are at least 20 mounds per acre. TDA employees walking the quarter-acre circles counting mounds will testify that in many places there were many more than 20 per acre, some averaging 250 mounds per acre. I'm sure the crews are glad that they won't be walking in circles much longer.

This new chemical is Amdro, developed by American Cyanamid Co., and is different from Mirex, which was used extensively in the South for fire ant control before the Environmental Protection Agency cancelled permission for application," Brown said.

"We have an experimental-use permit and hope that there will not be a problem in getting label approved by Sept. 1. So far, EPA has responded favorably to it. Amdro is an amino hydrozone and breaks down in 12 hours in bright sunlight," Brown said.

The chemical is not cumulative, thus should not pose a problem to other wildlife. USDA personnel will perform an extensive environmental study following the applications.

On the Brazoria and Fort Bend counties' test, five different formulations of Amdro will be used.

Crews from TDA will return in eight weeks and in 22 weeks to evaluate the rate of control.

"The chemical looks good, but we are going to wait until after all studies are complete before we purchase any for state use," Brown said.

Trucker finds $1 million in bogus bills

DES PLAINES, Ill. (AP) — A truck driver found $1 million in bogus bills in his load of landfill and sped through town joyously tossing some of it to passersby, police said.

"You can't say he was stung," said an officer who curbed the man Thursday night. The man's identity was withheld.

Sources said the money was discovered after a truck carrying remains of a demolished house dumped the load at a landfill site.

The driver correctly assumed the money was counterfeit and called police, authorities said.

Coast Guard sends its women to sea

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) — Push finally came to shove, but Cadet Katherine Hamblett chuckles today about the first time she served aboard the Coast Guard training ship, Eagle.

"I was hauling on a line when a guy just came up and pushed me aside," she recalled. She chalked the incident up to misguided concern on his part — and dished out a few shoves herself. The problem disappeared.

That was four years ago. On May 21, Miss Hamblett — who hails from the landlocked town of Millington, Tenn. — and 13 other female cadets will become the first women to graduate from an American military academy as the Coast Guard sends its first women to sea.

The Air Force, Army and Navy academies will be duplicating the process soon as their first mixed classes graduate.

Miss Hamblett's shipboard experience symbolizes the inevitable adjustment that was necessary when the Coast Guard Academy broke a 100-year-old tradition by admitting female cadets in 1976.

Of the class's original 38 women, 24 dropped out. Lt. George Whiting, public relations officer, said the percentage — 63 percent — was only slightly higher than that for men and the reasons were the same: mostly disenchantment and academic trouble.

Looking back now, the 14 who stayed the distance say they felt considerable pressure as "swabs," as new cadets are called.

"The first week was probably the worst week of my life," said Cadet Susan Donner of Longmeadow, Mass. It meant waiting in long lines, wondering where to go next: the same dilemmas faced by most college freshmen — except for the cropped hair and ill-fitting dungarees.

Miss Donner, who completes her final year as battalion commander of her class, said some academy regulations had to be changed that first year.

The women arrived to find a rule prohibiting new cadets, both men and women, from socializing with upperclassmen. It was enforced against the women, but their male classmates were allowed to mix with older cadets on sports teams and elsewhere, she said.

"We (women) had a sex education lesson, which I thought was misplaced," she added. "It should have involved the entire class, not just the women."

Cadet Kenneth Wilson of Cabot, Ark., said men in that first mixed class were ranked by publicity focusing on the women. Some fumed over a photograph of the Coast Guard commandant signing a female cadet's leg cast, he said.

"As more women came in and people stopped goggling at us," said Miss Hamblett, "the novelty just wore off. It was a gradual process."

"I think people stopped looking at women as a stereotype and started accepting us as we are," Miss Donner added.

She quickly made her mark by winning a letter on the sailing team, the first woman in any service academy to win a varsity letter. She and Miss Hamblett said they had no problems meeting the academy's rigorous physical fitness demands, but complained about always being in the spotlight.

"A lot of the girls went to the front of the line to prove themselves," Miss Donner said.

Friction over outside publicity brought the entire class closer together, its members say. The men and women eventually appointed class public relations officers to coordinate news interviews.

The opposite sexes within the Class of '80 generally have a brother-sister relationship, although some have developed a different tie. Three couples will marry right after graduation, Wilson said.

The Coast Guard doesn't allow married couples to serve on the same duty station unless it's big enough so each reports to a different superior officer. However, the couples have been kept fairly close in their duty assignments, Whiting said.

"Everybody thought that when we dropped the restrictions (against women) we would have women at sea overnight. It doesn't work that way," Lt.

FIRST MIXED CLASS — The U.S. Coast Guard Academy will graduate its first class of both men and women later in the month. Among the graduates will be Susan Donner, left, Katherine Hamblett, center, and Kenneth Wilson.

Ford ups layoffs

DETROIT (AP) — In a surprise announcement of more bad news for Ford Motor Co. employees, the company is boosting next week's blue collar layoffs by 10,000 and ending merit raises and stock contributions for salaried workers.

Ford said Friday it would stop three more assembly lines next week, making 11 such suspensions — more than half its U.S. assembly capacity.

On June 1, the company will stop making contributions to the white-collar stock and savings plan, on which it spent $77.9 million last year. No date was announced for a resumption.

Ford said merit raises will not be given through December, when it will decide about 1981. No figures were available on the raises.

Last year, 67,398 employees, 79 percent of those eligible, contributed $140 million of their own to the savings plan.

Cmdr. Art Shires, who is on the staff of the Enlisted Personnel Division, said in a telephone interview from Washington.

"Our approach has been: don't make restrictions, don't make quotas. We're not converting our ships to accommodate a certain number of women. It really causes problems for the Coast Guard if we try that."

The Coast Guard maintains buoys and enforces navigational laws on the high seas and inland waterways. The 14 graduating women will be assigned sea duty ranging from 18 to 24 months.

Miss Hamblett has been assigned to the CGC Woodrush, a buoy tender based in Sitka, Alaska. Miss Donner will be on the buoy tender Spar out of Portland, Maine. Both said the duty pleased them — the buoy tenders spend only two or three days at sea at a time, women, account for about 1 percent of all officers in the Coast Guard. About 4 percent of the enlisted personnel are women.

Transportation Week Waldrop will keynote joint civic luncheon

Under the auspices of the Transportation Committee of the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce, the Big Spring Downtown Lions Club will host a joint civic club luncheon at noon, Wednesday, at the Cactus Room of Howard College, in observance of National Transportation Week.

Few things are more important to the economic welfare of an area than transportation and the special emphasis being placed on transportation this year will be highlighted by a speech at the luncheon by A. Sam Waldrop, chairman of the State Highway and Public Transportation Commission, the policy-making body for the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation of the State of Texas.

The program is being arranged by Joe Pickle, chairman, and other Transportation Committee members. Response thus far promises an overflow crowd. Reservations can be made by calling the Chamber of Commerce Office (263-7641). Tickets are $3.50 each and can be purchased at the door.

A. Sam Waldrop is chairman of the State Highway and Public Transportation Commission, policy-making body for the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation of the State of Texas.

He is active in Abilene civic affairs, having served as a city councilman and mayor pro tem. He is a past president of the Abilene Kiwanis Club and served as president of the Abilene Philharmonic Association.

He was president and campaign director for Abilene Business AID for all three colleges in Abilene and also serves on the board of trustees of Hardin-Simmons University.

Waldrop is a member of the Salvation Army Advisory Board in Abilene and is a former Trustee of the Hendrick Medical Center. He headed the financial campaign for the center in 1977.

He is a member and deacon of the First Baptist Church of Abilene and former member of the human welfare coordinating board of the Baptist Convention of Texas.

He served as president of the Southwest Home Furnishings Association in 1961 and vice-president of the National Home Furnishings Association from 1962 to 1966.

O'Hair's son repents role in atheist drive

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Madalyn Murray O'Hair's 33-year-old son, the schoolboy plaintiff in a 1963 suit that ended prayer in the public schools, says he feels responsible for the "destruction of the moral fiber" of American youth.

"Looking back on the 33 years of life I wasted without faith and without God, I pray that I may be able to correct just some of the wrong I have created," William Murray of Houston said in a letter published Friday in the Austin American-Statesman.

Murray was 16 when named as the plaintiff in the school prayer suit.

"The part I played as a teenager in removing prayer from public schools was criminal," he said.

"I removed from our future generations that short time each day which should rightly be reserved for God. In as much as the suit to destroy the tradition of prayer in school was brought in my name, I feel gravely responsible for the resulting destruction of the moral fiber of our youth that it has caused," he said.

Murray apologized to the people of Austin for helping build his mother's "personal empire."

"My efforts to that end were an affront to the people of Austin, the people of this nation and to God," he said.

"My crime was two-fold in that I was aware of the wrong of my actions at the time and continued them for the purpose of my financial profit. I was continuing to practice the hateful and antimoral way of life I had learned from birth in an atheist home," Murray said.

He said he felt deep regret for "streamlining Madalyn Murray O'Hair's society and moving it from a falling-down three-room house to a modern, staffed office complex."

"I loathe the idea that I lowered myself to editing her anti-God magazine," Murray said.

Ms. O'Hair would not talk to reporters about her son's letter, but her Society of Separationists issued a release.

"We note in the news that William Murray has retired early. We are happy to see an atheist getting religious dollars and wish him the best. We anticipate that he will tithe to the American Atheist Center," the statement said.

A spokesman said there had been little contact between Murray and his mother in the past three years.

The statement was issued on behalf of Ms. O'Hair, her son Jon Murray, and Robin Murray O'Hair.

Harris-Hanks Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Texas Republicans are acting like gamblers betting on a sure win.

Saturday's primary victories by moderate and liberal Democrats over more conservative party members will make GOP wins easier in November, they say.

"Races that had been considered longshots are now considered possibles and possibles are now considered probables," Republican state Rep. Bob McFarland of Arlington said Tuesday.

McFarland was one of six Republican House members who met Gov. Bill Clements for lunch Tuesday to discuss GOP chances for winning more legislative seats in the November general election.

Before the primary, McFarland said, state Republicans had targeted 10 House and three Senate races considered vulnerable to an all-out beat-the-Democrat effort.

Now, those estimates have been increased by five in the House and by one or two in the Senate.

"These are possibles, not probables, possibles," McFarland emphasized.

Making the Democrats more vulnerable, he said, is the belief that voters will have a more clear-cut choice in November — a moderate to liberal Democrat versus a conservative Republican.

In the past in Texas, McFarland said, voters usually have had to choose

'She's just Mama' and 'She's my best friend'

Mothers and daughters talk about each other

ANGEL AND SELENA JONES

"We have a close relationship with each other," says Angel Jones of her 19-year-old daughter, Selena. "She's my daughter and also my friend. We're partners. We have a good understanding of each other. She's a good girl. We really enjoy each other's company and I miss her now that she's at college."

Angel, along with her husband Pete, is owner of Nu-Way Janitorial Service. She is also active in the Thousand N.W. Third Church of Christ. Selena is a freshman at Texas Tech University in Lubbock studying accounting.

"Since I've gone away to college, I respect her even more," says Selena. "Everything I do — when I talk to her, we're closer. Time will tell how close we'll eventually be."

"Love says it all. She's just Mama."

LOUISE AND HELEN SHIVE

"The girls have been an awful lot of pleasure to us," says Helen Shive of her daughters, Suzanne, 19 and Louise, 16.

"We feel like we've grown a lot with them. We've enjoyed them so much. They've accomplished a lot. Their values are high. We've been a real close family."

"They've been very special to me. They fill my life. They've been good girls. It's been easy to raise them, so far," she says laughingly.

Residents of Coahoma, Helen is an Elder at the First Presbyterian Church of Coahoma. She is a member of the board of directors of the West Texas Telephone Co-op and she is a former schoolteacher.

Suzanne is a freshman at Texas Tech University studying math. Louise is a secretary on the Coahoma High School student council. She is a pianist and plays the saxophone. She has also won several twirling contests.

"When I don't know what to think about something, she gives me the facts and then I'm supposed to decide," says Louise. "She gives me encouragement."

"I'm very proud of her and I appreciate everything she does, like being a good mother. She's respected."

KRISTI AND NITA TARBET

"The greatest joy of being a mother is watching the kids' personalities develop from the moment they are born," says Nita Tarbet.

"Kristi is a very unique person and has been ladylike even when she was a little girl. She's not only my daughter, she's my best friend. I know if I talk to her about something, I know it won't go any further. Even if we disagree, we still understand each other's feelings."

"She's sweet and giving and gentle and someone I truly would like, even if she weren't my daughter," she continues. "I'd consider myself lucky to have her as a friend. Knowing her has been one of the greatest privileges of my life."

Deaf since birth, Nita is an instructor of sign language and lip reading at the Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center and the Church of Christ, Eleventh Place and Birdwell. She also teaches 16 students privately. She is involved with community awareness for the Southwestern Institution for the Deaf and is an aid at Elbow School for the Hawaiian Language Program. She has also won awards for her art work.

Kristi is a junior at Forsan High School. She is a member of the band, the student council and the golf team. Like her mother, she has also won awards for her art.

"We know each other better," says Kristi. "She's a lot easier to talk to because I know she won't laugh at me. She understands. She's easy to talk to."

"She's always doing stuff and people are always saying that my mother is nice. They say they wish they could talk to their moms the way I talk to mine."

"She's always doing things like speeches," she continues. "I went to one and I was real proud. Everybody was saying how neat it was. And everybody's always talking about how young she looks."

BARBARA RATLIFF AND LAURA MAUD HUIT

"She's the greatest joy of my life. I don't have to think twice about that," says Barbara Ratliff about her daughter, Laura Maud Huit.

The Garden City resident says "she's real proud of her. She's everything I want her to be. She's kind, sensitive to others' needs and intelligent. Even though she's an only child, Maud is not selfish. She's the least selfish of anyone I know. I'm trying to take that stigma away."

"She's more than just a daughter. I think she's my best friend."

This year, Barbara is president of the 1953 Hyperion Club and taught Sunday School at the First Methodist Church for 15 years. She was Republican chairman in 1964. She reigned as Miss Texas Tech in 1964 and taught third grade in the mid-1960's.

"My mother is a lovely person," says Laura Maud. "She exemplifies the kind of unselfish love that makes her an ideal mother as well as a very dear friend. She established a Christian foundation in our home and has been a great inspiration to me. If I am able to make my son feel as loved and secure as my mother has made me feel, I will consider my life a tremendous success."

JULIE, JENNIFER AND BRENDA SHIREY

"I can talk to her about everything. She's the first one I go to," says Jennifer Shirey of her mother, Julie.

A junior at Big Spring High School, she added that her mother helps her with her music.

"She's been through everything I'm going to go through," says 13-year-old Brenda. "She can tell me about it, the advantages and the disadvantages."

Julie is a pianist and a full-time piano instructor. She is the choir director at the First Christian Church and the Federal Prison Camp Church. A member of the Traffic Commission and former member of the Parks and Recreation Board, she was also the chairman of the Heart Fund Turkey Walk, held in November, 1979.

Her daughters are also pianists and both were in the recent high school production of "The King and I." Jennifer is a member of the Meister Singers, and was co-chairman of the Homecoming float. She is also the co-chairman of the prom.

Brenda, a seventh grade student at Goliad Middle School is a member of the choir and the pep squad.

"They're mine," says Julie. "We're like three sisters. They're sisters and best friends."

"We share everything — music, art — and we like to dance. They belong to me. They're my blood," she continues. "They're children and best friends and sisters all wrapped up in one. They also keep me young."

JONI AND JOHNNIE LOU AVERY

Joni Avery says her mother "is always there when I need her even though she works."

Joni's mother is Johnnie Lou Avery, president of Avery & Co., specializing in personal and corporate development.

"My friends get along real well with her," she says. "They all think of her as a teenager. I don't, but I like that they get along with her so well."

The sophomore at Big Spring High School says her mother will never hold an "I told you so" over her head if something goes wrong.

"If I'm hurt, she'll help me back on my feet again. She spends a lot more time with me in comparison to other mothers. She always encourages me to stand out and be a leader."

Joni plans on attending Texas Christian University but is undecided about what she wants to study.

"The joy of watching her grow and develop and blossom has been one of the greatest joys of my life," says her mother. "And that Jerry and I have helped her be a secure woman. She is someone I fully expect to make a contribution to society by the use of her talents. She's been a delight since the beginning. We have a real close relationship. We don't ever have problems discussing points we differ on."

Johnnie Lou Avery's other accomplishments include her 13 years as an administrator at Howard College, and her two-year chairmanship of the Bicentennial Commission. She is also a certified instructor in sex education and served as president of the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce in 1979.

"I'm most proud of her sunny disposition," she says. "She's a gentle soul and kind. In her whole life, she's never been impertinent. She's very level headed. Sometimes I think she's too kind and gentle with everybody."

"She's not always like a mother, but like a girlfriend."

"You're able to share your feelings with your daughters," says Sherry Wegner. "There are things women go through that men can't relate to."

Sherry is an art collector and for four years owned and managed Ye Old Pottery Shop. In 1977-78 she served as the president of the PTA City Council. She has two daughters, Jana, 18 and Toni, 12.

"Jana's a friend," she says. "She goes to art shows with me and we travel together. Toni is well adjusted to life, pretty helpful and easy to get along with."

They're both pretty independent.

"I'm a woman too, and I can relate to them — all the little female things, like dating and school life."

"I can go to her with anything," Jana says talking about her mother. "I can go to her with my deepest darkest secret. If I tell her not to tell my dad, she won't. She's interested in me. She wants me to be intelligent. She teaches me how to appreciate things."

"My mother is very neat," she continues. "The Big Spring High School senior who wants to study law says,

"She's not always like a mother, but like a girlfriend. I like to travel with her. I've met a lot of interesting people through her."

Her younger daughter Toni, is a sixth grade student at Goliad Middle School. She says some day she wants to be a doctor like Dr. Worthy. (Louise Ann Bennett Worthy, pediatrician at Hall-Bennett Hospital.)

"She participates in things and helps me with stuff," she says. "She helps me with problems and stuff. She's just a good mother."

Sen. Moore feels sting 'Killer Bees' flying high in '80 elections

Herald-Examiner Staff Bureau

AUSTIN — When the now-famous Killer Bee episode halted Texas Senate business last year, furious conservatives predicted the participants were committing political suicide. But so far, the bees have been flying high in the 1980 elections.

In contrast, various circumstances have cut into the ranks — and power — of the rural and business-oriented conservatives going into the important 1981 legislative session.

Twelve senators captured the nation's imagination last year by hiding out to deny the 31-member Senate a required two-thirds quorum and thus defeat a proposed separate presidential primary.

They took this unorthodox action because the split primary plan would have allowed conservative Democrats to support their favorite Republican presidential candidate in March and come back in the May Democratic primary to vote for state and local offices.

In defeating the proposal by their absence, they denied former Texas Gov. John Connally the early Texas primary he wanted for his presidential ambitions and made conservatives choose between the same-day Republican and Democratic primaries.

The result: Seven of the dozen faced re-election this year, but five drew no Democratic opposition. And one, Carl Parker of Port Arthur, doesn't even have a Republican opponent in November.

The only two Killer Bees with Democratic opponents, A.R. "Babe" Schwartz of Galveston and Carlos Truan of Corpus Christi, won relatively easy victories last Saturday — undoubtedly helped by some conservatives moving to the GOP primary to support Ronald Reagan's presidential campaign.

The only possible casualty so far is Sen. Bill Patman of Ganado. State Rep. John Wilson of LaGrange announced against Patman early this year, saying a poll showed voters in the senatorial district disapproved of Patman's Killer Bee tag.

Patman then instead ran for an open congressional seat in a district that runs southward into Truan's territory, where the 1979 episode was more popular.

He now faces a tough runoff with Nueces County Judge Robert Barnes. The conservatives have lost two of their most powerful members this year, Sens. Tom Creighton of Mineral Wells and Bill Moore of Bryan.

Creighton retired, and Moore lost Saturday to Kent Caperton, a Bryan attorney who was born a year after Moore first entered the Senate 31 years ago. Caperton is considered a moderate and was backed by labor and the trial lawyers, while Moore is super conservative and a favorite of the business lobby.

Creighton and Moore are chairmen of two of the Senate's most powerful committees, Economic Development and State Affairs, respectively. Each used his powers to push or protect bills favored by conservative business interests.

One Austin attorney active on the Capitol scene said before the election that Moore's defeat would be a psychological blow to the business lobby.

If Caperton and the five Killer Bees who have Republican opponents also win the November election, a coalition of moderates and liberals could have considerable clout in the 1981 Senate.

That could be particularly important next year when the legislature redistricts legislative and congressional seats. How district boundaries are drawn can affect elections throughout the 1980s. With Moore's departure, Schwartz's 20 years in the Senate will make him dean of that body if he wins in November. The title is mostly honorary but carries some extra leadership power.

In fact, four Killer Bees — Schwartz, Chet Brooks of Houston, Glenn Kothmann of San Antonio and Oscar Mauzy of Dallas — will be among the top six senators in seniority.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who has total power over the all-important committee assignments and chairmanships, says seniority is one factor he considers but not the controlling one.

Asked what other factors would be involved, Hobby said, "Personal judgment is about all I can say."

That could be important in the 1981 session because Hobby severely criticized the Killer Bees last year and questioned their judgment in delaying Senate business to block the split primary bill.

Apparently referring to Caperton, he said, "The basic thing to remember is although faces change, districts elect people that represent the dominant political philosophy of the districts." Moore's district is considered basically conservative.

County sales tax measure to get attention in 1981

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A bill allowing counties to levy sales taxes of up to 1 percent will get more serious legislative attention in 1981 than it did last year, a Bexar County Commissioner predicts.

For one thing, E. Jeff Wentworth said Friday, Gov. Bill Clements has "endorsed" the proposal. Wentworth, a Republican, also suggested that the House Ways and Means Committee might be more receptive than it has been.

He made his remarks during a meeting of the Texas Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations, of which he is a member.

Clements was asked about a county sales tax during a March 14 meeting of the West Texas County Judges and Commissioners Association at San Angelo. "I would be for that," he said. "The key to this would be local option. If the people of your county are going to vote on this and vote it up or down, that would be fine."

Clements said he would oppose allowing county commissioners to levy a sales tax without a vote of the people.

Jon Ford, the governor's press secretary, said he doubted Clements would "assign any great priority" to a county sales tax as part of his legislative program.

Prison director declined to answer just one question

RIO GRANDE CITY, Texas (AP) — State prison director Jim Estelle had anticipated almost every question during a meeting Friday with local residents about a possible prison here.

Then he got one he refused to answer. "Is there any way we can stop the building of the penitentiary here?" asked local businessman Pete Diaz.

"Yes," Estelle said. "Can you tell us how?" "No," he answered, and the group broke out in laughter.

Estelle said he came to this border town after being invited Wednesday to explain what a maximum security facility would mean to the community and its economy.

He took an hour answering questions from the local Rotary Club and afterward many members said they still oppose the proposal.

"I've heard in phone calls and letters that more than 95 percent of the people in Starr County do not want a prison," County Judge Bias Chapa said. "There's a lot of places where they want it. Why bring it to our county where the majority of people don't want it?"

Citizens of this mostly rural and poor county will get a chance to speak out at hearings later this month.

The State Board of Corrections agreed to purchase the 5,293-acre La Casita farms for $7.8 million. However, Gov. Bill Clements and Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong blocked the deal until local residents could learn more — about it.

Estelle said he wanted to apologize to Chapa and other citizens for the secrecy surrounding negotiations for the site.

"The way this thing developed was not the way I would have chosen," he said. "The seller bound the Board of Corrections so that they would not make public the negotiations until the point of closure."

Estelle offered to take Chapa and others in a state airplane to visit other correctional institutes in East Texas and see how communities there feel about prisons.

"I don't think it would do any good for me to go to Huntsville. I'm opposed to a prison personally and as county judge," Chapa said. "If I go, I would like to take the humble people, the workers. Those people are the ones who have to be convinced about it."

Local worries are that the schools will lose $25,000 in taxes with the farm off the rolls; industry will shy away from a town with a prison; and sale of the land will take away one-sixth of the county's productive acreage.

Estelle said temporary setbacks will be more than outweighed by benefits such as an additional $10 million to the local economy and the 300 jobs created. The Starr County facility would be a regional prison for South Texas inmates and would save families from going to East Texas for visits.

He said relations with Mexico will not sour if inmates escape and flee across the nearby border. The prison director, who flew from Huntsville just to meet with the Rotary Club, said the state will need to build a second new prison even if the La Casita site is bought.

He said he would ask for land acquisition funds for the 1981-1982 budget regardless of what happens in Starr County.

Ann Couvillion named instructor of Reading Enrichment course

The Adult and Continuing Education Department of Howard College announces a two-week Reading Enrichment course for students in the sixth grade through high school level. The class will begin June 9 and end June 19. Class will be held from 1:00-3:00, Monday through Thursday afternoons. The class will meet in the Reading Lab, Room 203, located in the Howard College Administration Building.

The curriculum of the two-week course is designed to help those students who need to brush-up some skills which will improve their reading ability or who want to increase their reading speed and comprehension.

Some administrators complaining

Aliens driving up hospital costs

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Some hospital administrators are complaining that illegal aliens are driving up their operating costs, a state agency reports.

The Texas Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations issued a report Friday on the cost of medical treatment of indigents, including undocumented persons.

Hospitals must provide emergency care without regard to residence or ability to pay. Several attorneys general have held that counties must pay medical costs of indigents.

"Over the past years, a number of public hospital administrators have complained about the added indigent costs incurred by their hospitals as a result of serving undocumented persons," the report said.

It cited as examples: — A San Antonio hospital ran up costs totaling $2.6 million last year providing free treatment to undocumented persons on 5,236 occasions. — An illegal alien cost Ben Taub and Jefferson Davis hospitals in Houston $70,000 for a 14-month stay.

— Hudspeth County spent $7,550 on treatment of an illegal alien who was injured when he fell off a train.

The report said one administrator "noted that undocumented persons served by his hospital paid their complete bills immediately after receiving treatment because they appeared to fear detection by deportation authorities."

State law lacks a legal definition of indigent and provides no way to make a county pay when an indigent resident obtains treatment in another county.

"The Legislature has rejected several bills in the past that would have authorized provider counties to sue for services rendered and the ensuing court costs," the report noted.

The report said some public hospitals have had to reduce services because of the cost of indigent care.

"Some hospital administrators ... have noted their hospitals' inability to attract needed physicians and other hospital personnel because of revenue shortages resulting partly from increasing indigent costs," it said.

Without making recommendations, the report outlined several suggestions that have been made for reducing the impact of non-paying patients on hospital budgets:

— A pending congressional bill providing federal payment of hospital bills on behalf of needy children and pregnant women.

— Better investigation of patients claiming to be indigent.

— State assistance to teaching hospitals, which now must pay the salaries of residents.

— Legislation allowing counties to levy sales taxes, part of which could be used for hospital expenses.

JUST YOU AND ME — Bertina DeLeon faces the job of day-to-day parenting alone. She and her husband divorced when their daughter, Stacie, was only 9 months old. Someday, Ms. DeLeon hopes to remarry, but for now, "we like our set up. It's just Stacie and me and that makes us closer," commented the single mom.

Extraordinary moms tell it like it is

By ROBBI CROW
Family News Editor

Mothers of America, today is your day!

...A day that has been set aside to honor you for always being there for those 2 and 4 a.m. feedings, even though dad was just pretending to be asleep.

...A day to recognize you for coming to the rescue to kiss bumped heads, doctor cut knees and pamper scraped elbows.

...It's a day to thank you for all the many times you tended us your shoulder to cry on in hours of disappointment, hurt or anger.

...But most of all, it's a day to pay tribute to you for your never-ending prayers for us; your continuous faith and confidence in us; and your insurmountable love to us.

Mother's Day is a holiday for special ladies. Every mother is special.

But this article was written by pay special tribute to those mothers not of the ordinary. It will recognize unique mothers living in unique situations, making their roles in motherhood extra-special.

There is no love quite like the love a mother has for her child. Whether the maternal bondage a woman experiences with her child begins from birth, or grows day by day as she takes on the role of motherhood, a mother's love for her child is an incomparable love all of its own.

"I wouldn't trade her for anything in this whole wide world," said Bertina DeLeon of her almost 3-year-old daughter, Stacie.

Ms. DeLeon experiences the day-to-day life of parenthood alone. She and her husband divorced when Stacie was only 9 months old. She was left alone with a tiny baby girl and the tremendous responsibility of raising her.

Ms. DeLeon is a single parent, making her role as a mom special and unique, but not always easy.

"If I didn't have Stacie," Ms. DeLeon stated, "I would go crazy. We help each other, but mainly she helps me."

The single mom said holidays are often lonely and depressing times for her and her daughter.

"I don't have anyone to take me out to dinner or send me flowers or cards," explained Ms. DeLeon, "so Stacie's presence really brightens my life."

Raising her child and making her the best she possibly can is what motherhood means to Ms. DeLeon.

"I don't have someone else to share the responsibility with me. There's no one there to disagree with my way of raising Stacie. I just have to go on my own instinct," she pointed out.

When asked if she thought being a single parent added to or took away from her relationship with her daughter, Ms. DeLeon said the situation affected their relationship both ways.

"Being a single parent, I can't afford to stay at home with her when she's sick. Even though I'd rather be with her and take care of her myself, I have to leave her with a relative."

"But because I am a single parent,"

Ms. DeLeon continued, "I try harder to be a good parent. I try to meet Stacie's needs both as a mother and a father. I have to."

As Ms. DeLeon related her feelings and emotions of motherhood, she stressed that it was difficult for her to realize that only yesterday her daughter was a brand new baby.

"Now she's almost three. She's walking, talking and doing everything by herself."

Being a mom, and being a good mom, is the most important role in the life of Ms. DeLeon.

"Stacie comes before anything else, even before the need of a husband and father in our lives. Before I will ever remarry, I'll have to know beyond a shadow of a doubt that he loves Stacie as much as he loves me. Stacie will play a big part in my decision to marry again."

For now, though, Ms. DeLeon and her daughter are satisfied with their present set up.

"It's just me and her and that makes us closer."

And as for Mother's Day...

"I'm just thankful that I have her. That's my Mother's Day present right there."

When one observes Laurie Webb in the backyard of her residence on a beautiful sun-filled afternoon, laughing, joking and playing with her two children, Christy, 4 and Johnny, 7, it's more than obvious that mothering just comes natural to her.

And even though she's played the active role for the past four years from a wheelchair, her magnetism and vivacity is undaunted.

"My mother told me to raise hamsters," said Mrs. Webb laughing. "I should have listened to her."

Such a statement is a perfect example of this young mother's philosophy of parenting.

"The best recipe for any parent," she continued, "is to have a good attitude, a good sense of humor and a willingness to try and accept new things."

The fact that she performs her motherly duties from a wheelchair is unimportant to Mrs. Webb.

"Good mothering can come from anywhere," she pointed out.

If someone were to ask Mrs. Webb for advice on good mothering, she would encourage that person to read Herb Gardner's play, "1,000 Clowns"

MOM AND MEMORIES — Mrs. Truett Thomas' only child, Lewis McCoy (Coy) Thomas, was killed in Vietnam on Easter Sunday in 1966. He was only 25 years old. Although her active role in motherhood was brief, this Gold Star Mother still has many fond memories of her "very special son."

'I SHOULD HAVE RAISED HAMSTERS' — Mrs. John (Laurie) Webb, pictured here with her two children, Christy and Johnny, said her mom told her to raise hamsters. "I should have listened to her," laughed Mrs. Webb, who performs her duties as a mother from a wheelchair. But as Mrs. Webb says, "That's unimportant. Good mothering can come from anywhere."

Gold Star Mother relives memories

at least once a year.
"It's an excellent story on priorities," she stated as she pulled a copy from one of her home library shelves.

"It portrays the main character, Murray, who wants his nephew to stay with him long enough to learn who all the phonies in life are, as well as know the subtle reason why he was born a human being and not a chair."

Quoting Kahill Gibran, Mrs. Webb reinforced her belief that a mother should let her child grow up as an individual, separate from her.

"You may give them your love, but not your thoughts,
"You may house their bodies, but not their souls,

"For their souls dwell in the house of tomorrow, which you cannot visit, not even in your dreams.

"You may strive to be like them, but seek not to make them like you.
"For life goes not backward nor tarries with yesterday."

Mrs. Webb said her husband, John, "is what makes mothering fun."
In summing up her feelings for her children, she said "I like them. I'm glad I met them. I'm glad they're my friends."

Mrs. Truett Thomas is another one of those extra-special moms who was chosen for a role in motherhood most never experience.

But all she has left are many memories of her son and the relationship they shared.

Lewis McCoy Thomas gave his life for his country in Vietnam on Easter Sunday in April of 1966. He was 25 years old and the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Truett Thomas.

As Mrs. Thomas' eyes focused on her son's picture, her train of thought drifted back to several months prior to his death.

"Coy had been stationed in Hawaii for 2 years," recalled the soldier's mother. "In the past, he always came home for visits.

"But this one time, Coy wrote a letter telling us to come visit him in Hawaii, so we went," she recollected.

But it wasn't until Mr. and Mrs. Thomas boarded a plane to return home that their son informed them he was being sent to Vietnam.

Only three short months after his arrival, Coy was killed in the line of duty. He was the second Big Spring boy to die in Vietnam.

Call it a mother's intuition, call it a premonition, or call it a coincidence, but the day her son was killed, miles and miles away, Mrs. Thomas sensed all wasn't right.

"That Easter morning," Mrs. Thomas remembered, "Truett and I went to the Sunrise Services at the park, just the same as we did every year, but both of us were unusually depressed."

As the day progressed, both Mrs. Thomas and her husband continued to become restless and after watching the 5 o'clock news and observing the most recent war casualties on the television screen, the couple decided to get out of the house for a breath of fresh air.

Only moments after returning home from their drive at approximately 9:30 or 10 p.m., the doorbell rang.

"Truett and I just looked at each other," said Mrs. Thomas. "Somehow we knew what the news was."

The following years of learning to live and cope with the death of their son were almost unbearable for the couple, and even 14 years later, "It seems like yesterday," stated the mother.

Although the vacancy left in the life of this Gold Star Mother and her husband will never be completely filled, they have dedicated themselves to helping other children.

They own and operate the Windy Hill Gun Club where approximately 15 teenagers, boys and girls, learn the proper way to handle a gun. They are also taught how to become accurate marksmen.

"Truett has always liked to shoot," commented Mrs. Thomas, "and he always looked forward to Coy returning from Vietnam so they could enjoy the sport together."

Looking up at a wall decorated with numerous medals and honor certificates, Mrs. Thomas said, "Coy was an expert marksman, too."

Much of Mrs. Thomas' time, since the death of her only child, has been spent at the Veteran's Administration Medical Center where she, along with other Gold Star Mothers, aid and serve the living victims of war.

"The motto of Gold Star Mothers, Incorporated, an organization of mothers whose sons or daughters were killed in the line of duty, is 'We honor the dead by serving the living,'" she quoted.

In concluding, Mrs. Thomas said "Coy was just an ordinary boy, but to us, he was very, very special."

A mother in any situation, circumstance or role is someone to be loved, honored, respected and above all, treasured.

Happy Mother's Day!

Doctor sues hospital over abortion issue

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State District Judge Peter Lowry has issued a temporary restraining order prohibiting a Roman Catholic hospital from denying staff privileges to a doctor because he performs abortions elsewhere.

Lowry issued the order against Seton Medical Center and set a May 15 hearing on whether he should continue it with a temporary injunction.

The Texas Civil Liberties Union filed the suit on behalf of Dr. Michael Seitzinger, an obstetrician-gynecologist who said he was informed by the hospital administrator on July 11, 1979, he could no longer practice at Seton.

John Duncan, TCLU executive director, said the suit is the first of its kind in Texas. Sister Mary Rose, the hospital administrator, informed Seitzinger his association with a local clinic that performs abortions made it impossible for Seton to allow him to practice there, the suit alleges.

says the hospital will not "materially cooperate with a physician who is openly and publicly identified with a 'convenience abortion clinic' by admitting him to the medical staff as to do so is opposition to our Christian witness."

The statement cites the "Ethical and Religious Directives for Catholic Health Facilities" published by the United States Catholic Conference.

The TCLU contends Seton's denial of staff privileges to Seitzinger violated a state law that says "No physician, nurse, staff person or employee shall be discriminated against for their willingness to participate in abortion procedures at other facilities."

The suit says Seitzinger was giving emergency care to a patient with a tubal ovarian abscess at Seton when told to leave within the hour. He said he called in another doctor and left.

Seton, the lawsuit says, is designated by the Texas Health Systems Agency as having the highest degree of specialization for perinatal care in this area.

"Because Seton has refused to extend him hospital privileges, Dr. Seitzinger has suffered financial loss because potential identifiable patients have chosen to receive obstetric and gynecological care from other physicians who have been extended hospital privileges at Seton," the suit said.

Besides the injunction, the suit also asks Lowry to declare the hospital's policy unconstitutional.

Focus on family living

Do habits control you?

Do you really control your food choices — or do your habits control you?
If changes are needed, only you can decide to make them — and that depends on four things:
A specific goal.
Learning nutrition basics.
"Unlearning" misinformation, and Changing traditions.
Few of us eat foods because we're told they're "good for us."
In fact, health may be one of the least-effective motivations for change.
On the other hand, most of us will respond to a specific goal — weight reduction or diabetes control, for example.
We see that health relates to any other specific goals, but just "health" alone isn't specific enough to make a majority of us change the way we eat.
Most of us don't think in such long-range terms as eating "right" today to prevent health problems later in life.
So having a specific goal is a "must" for many of us, but it's just the first step. If we can see health itself as our specific goal, this first step will be a stronger one.

Understanding nutrition basics is the second step. This takes learning. We need facts to point out the pathways of all our other steps — and to suggest the time and effort they'll require.
Most of us are interested in nutrition only if it means something good today.
We seek immediate results, and we're not too realistic about the time and effort needed to reach or obtain our desired goal. Learning nutrition basics is the key to effectively reaching our goal.
Learning and unlearning is a never-ending process, and nutrition education is not a simple matter.
Changes in types and forms of foods will continue at a pace which staggers the imagination. Choices we face will become even greater.
Realizing that this is a constant process which will go on throughout life is the third step in changing our

By Robert Wallace, Ed D
Dr. Wallace: I would like to commend you for your answer to Karla when you told her that sex without marriage is wrong. I'm sure you must have received many letters telling you that you are old-fashioned, but I think it's great to see someone with the guts to speak the truth about premarital sex. I'm 29 and my boyfriend is 21 and we have been dating for four years and are waiting until we finish college before we get married. We have never had sex nor will we until we are married and we have a beautiful, loving relationship. — Sandy, Anaheim, Calif.
Sandy: You are right. I did get quite a few letters telling me that my moral code was archaic, but I'm happy to say many more letters were received from teens who agreed with me, many writing to say thanks for putting it in print.
Dr. Wallace: I am a 17-

Truth about premarital sex

Developing the ability to actually change is the fourth step.
One key to success is knowing how strongly food habits become entrenched in our daily routines.
Their grip is so strong we often fail to recognize that the laws of nutrition apply to everyone — or we ignore that fact.
How do we know if we need to change? Start with self-analysis. We can ask ourselves these questions:
1) What factors are most important when I select particular foods?
2) How does my overall dietary pattern affect my lifestyle and health?
3) Or, does my lifestyle determine my eating habits?
4) Do I select foods out of impulse, or am I a rational decision-maker?
5) Do I really understand why I choose the foods I eat?
Remember, too for most people, price of food items doesn't play a central role in consumer decisions — cost limits our purchases, but it doesn't determine our eating habits.

Baptist Temple setting for spring ceremony

The Baptist Temple Church was the setting for the Friday evening wedding ceremony uniting Sonna Lee Head and Theodore Christian.

The Rev. Alen McHam, pastor, read the 7 p.m. double-ring ceremony before a traditional archway entwined with boxwood. Flanking either side of the sanctuary setting were 15-branch swirl candelabrum complemented with white tapers.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Sandra Head, 1806 Owens. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Johnny Christian, Gail Rt.

Providing wedding music for the candlelight ceremony was Bill Schaffner, organist.

The bride, given in marriage by her great uncle,

Ray McMahan, chose to wear a Friscilla gown of silk finish satin. The bodice was molded with Alencon lace and fashioned by a high neckline. Lace appliques embellished the slender sleeves. Falling gracefully from the empire waistline was an A-line skirt touched with coordinating lace which ended in a scalloped hemline and cathedral-length train.

A cluster of white silk roses adorned the bride's double-tiered fingertip-length veil of illusion. She carried a cascading bouquet of blue and white silk roses intermingled with white daisies and lilacs, Lily of the Valley and baby's breath.

Jan Hoover, attired in a floor-length dress of blue and lilac floral print, attended the bride as maid of honor. Miss Hoover's gown featured a camisole bodice and semi-circular skirt accented with a light blue cummerbund. She carried a single white silk rose tied with white satin streamers.

Candles were lit by Timmy Marshall, New Deal, cousin of the bride.

Following the rite, the newlyweds were honored at a reception in the church fellowship hall. Guests were registered by the bride's aunt, Beverly Marshall of New Deal.

White lace floor-length cloth draped the bride's table which was enhanced by a six-branch candelabrum decorated with blue and white flowers. The three-tiered cake was highlighted with light blue sweet peas. Silver and crystal appointments were used.

The groom's table was covered with light blue cloth and held a chocolate cake. Enhancing the setting as centerpiece was a brass candleholder which featured a large blue candle. Brass and china appointments were used.

Serving was Kay Shaw.

The bride is a Big Spring High School graduate and is employed as a secretary at Citizen's Federal Credit Union.

The groom attended Coahoma High School and works for Wilson Construction Co.

Upon returning from a wedding trip to an undisclosed location, Mr. and Mrs. Christian will make their home in Big Spring.

Dear Abby

"Prayer for Mamma" A Year-Round Voice

DEAR ABBY: I am a long-time reader but have never written before. I am enclosing a part of your column that I have kept in my Bible for years. As you can see, it is yellowed and shredded and half of it is missing. I don't know how many hundreds of times I have read it. It gave me such a feeling of peace and comfort. It was titled, "A Prayer for Mamma."

Will you please print it again? I would love to have another copy. Thank you.

DOROTHY L.

DEAR DOROTHY: With pleasure:

DEAR ABBY: My beloved mother passed away recently, so I called the minister and asked him for the wording of a prayer I could say for my mother, and he said, "I'm too busy — and a lot of good prayer will do her now!" You see, Mamma went to church long ago, but my father never liked to go, so Mamma finally quit going. Abby, I can't believe that heaven is open only to church members.

I've called all the bookstores in town and they say there aren't any prayers for the dead in any of the prayerbooks they have. I've heard there are places where you send a few dollars and they pray for the dead, but I don't know their addresses. Abby, I'd be so grateful if you would print a short prayer I could say for my mother before I go to sleep. Any faith is acceptable. I can't let you send it to my home because my father looks over the mail first and I'm sure I'd never get it. Please don't turn down my odd request. It means the world to me. Thank you, and God bless you, Abby. Sign me ...

A PRAYER FOR MAMMA

DEAR PRAYER: I found this prayer in my Union Prayer Book. It is the one Jews recite on Yom Kippur (the Day of Atonement) to honor the memory of a deceased mother:

In Memory of a Mother

I remember thee in this solemn hour, my dear mother. I remember the days when thou didst dwell on earth, and thy tender love watched over me like a guardian angel. Thou has gone from me, but the bond which unites our souls can never be severed; thine image lives within my heart. May the merciful Father reward thee for the faithfulness and kindness thou hast ever shown me; may He lift up the light of His countenance upon thee, and grant thee eternal peace! Amen.

DEAR ABBY: I can't believe it's Mother's Day again. With every passing year the holidays seem to come closer together.

Abby, I wish you'd find space in your column to remind young married women to remember their mothers-in-law — even if it's only a card. There were so many years when I should have remembered my mother-in-law on Mother's Day, but I never did.

This year I sent her flowers — to the cemetery, bitterly regretting that I had never sent her flowers while was able to enjoy them.

I should have been more attentive to her, written her more about her grandchildren whom she loved so much. And most of all, I should have let her know how much I had grown to love her.

I hope others will not commit the same sins of omission as I, Abby, please print this. Next year might be too late for some.

La Leche League organizes

The newly organized Big Spring Group of La Leche League will hold its first meeting Monday at 7 p.m. in the private dining room of Furr's Cafeteria.

A non sectarian, non profit organization, the league's purpose is to help encourage good mothering through breast feeding.

The group will meet the second Monday of each month. A series of four meetings will discuss, informally, different phases of breast feeding.

All women who are interested in nursing babies are invited.

La Leche League began in a Chicago suburb over 20 years ago when one mother who had successfully nursed her baby helped another who wanted to breastfeed.

This is still the basic approach, although the league is now international in scope, with more than 3,000 groups helping thousands of women in the United States, Canada and over 40 foreign countries.

For more information about the local organization, contact Debbie Galbreath at 263-2680.

Denita's Beauty Basics

Q: What can be done to camouflage dark circles under the eyes.

A: One of the most amazing beauty products available to you is a "cover stick" or under eye concealer. These type of cosmetics are patted directly under the eye area as to cover the dark circles and tiny fatigue lines or wrinkles. The consistency is slightly heavier than your regular make-up foundation and should be worn a few shades lighter.

This product not only aids in camouflaging your dark circles but also gives your face a pleasing "lift" — we can use that!

Here at Accent Shoppe, we've often asked the proper method for cleaning the various types of flatware and holloware we sell. Do wash all metals in hot, soapy water; dry promptly with a soft cloth. Anything but ceramic or wood-handled flatware and pewter can go in your dishwasher. (Pewter is too soft a metal for high temperatures; it also tends to darken.) To prevent spotting, remove silver before your dishwasher reaches the dry cycle and dry your pieces by hand. ELBOWS — Sixers Darryl Dawkins uses an elbow to work over Los Angeles Lakers Kareem Abdul-Jabbar Saturday afternoon during third game of NBA championship playoff game at Philadelphia. Dawkins fouled out of the game and Jabbar scored 33 points as Lakers won, 111-101.

Lakers take big road win

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 35 points and helped dominate both backboards as the Los Angeles Lakers ripped the Philadelphia 76ers 111-101 Saturday to take a 2-1 lead in their National Basketball Association championship series.

The victory was the first for the Lakers in Philadelphia after nine losses since 1975 and regained the home-court edge for the Western Division champions.

The fourth game in the best-of-seven series will be played here Sunday afternoon (3 p.m. EDT). The Lakers won the first game of the series but were beaten by the 76ers on Wednesday and came here seeking to regain their home-court advantage.

The Lakers turned this nationally televised game into a rout in the final 4:29 of the second quarter when they outscored Philadelphia 16-4 to assume a 58-44 halftime advantage.

In the third period, the closest the 76ers could get was 12, the last time at 60-48 with 9:32 remaining.

Los Angeles led by at least 15 points through the balance of the quarter and started the final period with an 84-65 lead.

In the final period, the 76ers started several runs in an effort to cut down the huge deficit, but each time Abdul-Jabbar and Earvin "Magic" Johnson retaliated for the Lakers and maintained a handy lead. The closest Philadelphia could come was 11 points at 94-83.

Abdul-Jabbar scored 12 of his game-leading total in the final period and now has 106 points in the three games of the series.

Julius "Dr. J." Erving scored 24 points to lead the Eastern Division champions, while Darryl Dawkins had 21. Another big contributor for the Lakers was Norm Nixon, who had 22 points.

The Lakers opened a 12-4 lead with 8:05 left in the first quarter with Jabbar and Jamaal Wilkes each contributing a pair of field goals in the quick getaway.

The 76ers were cold, and the aggressive Lakers took advantage to increase their lead to 13 on a layup by Wilkes with 1:07 remaining. The lead soared to 15 on a 20-foot jumper by Mike Cooper, but the Lakers settled for a 31-18 advantage starting the second quarter.

The 76ers made their only charge of the game in the second period with Erving scoring eight points as they three times reduced the Los Angeles lead to just two points.

It was 38-36 on a 20-foot jumper by Henry Bibby with 7:32 left in the half, and 40-38 on a six-foot banker by Bobby Jones. The last time the 76ers got as close as two was at 42-40 after an 18-foot jumper by Lionel Hollins.

After that it was all downhill for Philadelphia before a home sellout crowd of 18,276. The Lakers went on their 16-4 tear, and it was all over.

The trend of the game was set in the first half when the Lakers outrebounded Philadelphia 35-21, with Jabbar collecting 11 and Wilkes eight for the Lakers. Philadelphia's best rebounder, Caldwell Jones, had just four.

Red hot Amy Alcott leads Atlanta LPGA

ATLANTA (AP) — Amy Alcott, who has one victory and two second-place finishes in her last three starts, fired her second straight 4-under-par 69 Saturday and moved into a tie with first-round leader Pam Higgins after 36 holes of the $100,000 Atlanta Ladies Professional Golf Association event.

Higgins, who had a one-shot lead entering the round, shot a 71 to match Alcott's 138 total, eight under par on the hilly 6,270-yard, par-73 Brookfield West Country Club course.

The two leaders had a four-stroke advantage over Barbara Barrow, who rallied from that deficit in the final round two weeks ago to capture the Birmingham Classic, her first tour victory.

"It was kind of a carbon copy round of yesterday," said Alcott, who lost in a playoff last week to Hollis Stacy in the Women's International.

"At times I was spectacular," said Alcott, who registered consecutive birdies with a 20-foot downhill putt on No. 6 and a 30-foot uphill putt on No. 7.

At state boys track meet

Killeen wins AAAA title again

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Dennis Brantley of Houston Worthing and Mark McNeil of San Antonio Houston used the wind Saturday to run the fastest times ever recorded by Texas schoolboys in two events at the state track and field championships.

Brantley ripped to a time of 13.1 seconds in the 110-meter high hurdles, breaking his own state record of 13.5, which had been matched by two others.

McNeil had a hand-timed 10.0 in the 100 meters, and automatic clock caught McNeil in 10.21, which is the second fastest ever run by any high school runner in the nation.

McNeil, however, was pushed by wind of 2.8 meters per second. The national record time of 10.16 by Houston's McNeil of Baker High, in 1976, was not wind-aided.

National records are based on automatic times with a wind allowable of two meters per second, or about four and one-half miles per hour. The wind at Brantley's back was 4.08 meters per second. His and McNeil's times are state records because the wind is not considered.

In team competition, Killeen got strong performances from John Walker, Gerald McNeil and Harris Houston, all headed to college on athletic scholarships, to win the Class 4A championship for the third consecutive year. Killeen scored 69 points, more than double the total of runner-up Tyler's 34.

Canado won the final event — the 1,600-meter relay — to take the Class A title with 42 points, four more than Falls City, which finished fourth in that race.

Snook defended its B title with the Kerr brothers — Larry and Jerry — winning all three sprints. The Kerrs are the younger brothers of Leslie Kerr, the premier 400-meter runner in the Southwest Conference from Texas A&M. Snook piled up 80 points, and Amherst was a distance second with 30.

Killeen's third straight 4A championship made it the first team since Abilene in 1960-61 to accomplish that feat.

Walker, a Texas Longhorn football recruit, anchored Killeen's winning 400 meter relay team and ran on the 1,600 relay, which finished second. Gerald McNeil, a relays. Walker and Mouton also tied for second in the 4A high jump with leaps of six feet six inches.

Baylor football recruit, and Mouton, reportedly headed for Texas on a track scholarship, ran legs on both

Brantley, a lean speedster who will run track at Southern Methodist, became a double winner when he took the 300 meter hurdles in 36.8 seconds. Mark McNeil followed his 100 meter triumph by winning the 200 meters in a relatively slow 21.7. McNeil's time in the 100 was a state record because the 100 meters is a new event here.

Area athletes have tough time at state track meet

AUSTIN — Big Spring area athletes suffered a tough time in the Texas Boys State Track and Field Meet here Saturday, with only Klondike's James Martin emerging with a medal.

Martin finished second in both the discus and the shot put. He hurled the discus 163'3", and heaved the shot put 53'.

Big Spring's Joe Willie Jones did not place in the rugged Class AAAA 400-meter competition. Jones' best time coming into the state meet was a 48.8, and the sixth place finisher, Michael Bacam of Richardson, ran that time.

Jerry Nichols won the 400-meter in the AAAA field as expected, blazing to a time of 47.5.

The Stanton 400-meter relay quartet of Freddie Silva, Lewis Henry, Curtis Williams and Ernie Byrd finished sixth in the Class A competition. They ran a time of 43.5. Henry was also entered Friday in the long jump, but did not place.

final round

That series will mark the first time in five years one of the finalists has not been coached by Scotty Bowman. Bowman, who guided the Montreal Canadiens to four consecutive Stanley Cups before joining the Sabres as general manager-coach last June, has said he will not coach another game.

In Byron Nelson Classic Watson struggles to lead

DALLAS (AP) — Tom Watson, missing nine greens in a blustery 25-mile-an-hour wind, holed a 50-yard wedge for a birdie to shoot even par Saturday and take the early second-round lead in the Byron Nelson Golf Classic.

Defending champion Watson, who opened with a six-under par 64, posted a 134 total which gave him a one-shot lead over Curtis Strange, who bogeyed the last two holes for a one-under par 69 and a 135 total for 36 holes.

"The wind was really throwing my timing off out there and you had to hit every shot solid," said Watson. "It was three to four clubs difference from Friday when you were hitting into the wind. You had to keep the ball down there among the ants."

Watson missed six straight greens but his magic putter saved him from disaster. He saved par seven times with his chipping and putting, the longest a 20-foot putt on the 470-yard par 4 No. 10.

Watson, who holed an eight iron for an eagle duce on Friday, produced another minor miracle on the 445-yard par 4 No. 14. He hit a poor drive and his second shot was half-a-football field short of the green. Watson then knocked the ball into the hole with a perfect wedge.

"We've got 36 holes Sunday and that will be tough physically if this wind keeps up," said Watson. "Psychologically, it helps if you have a real good first 18 holes. However, anybody in the field can come from behind easily."

Strange, fresh off his victory in the Houston Open last week when he defeated Lee Trevino in a playoff, three-putted the final hole to give Watson the lead after the morning round.

"I hate to play a good 16 holes then throw it away, but that's what I did," said Strange. "All I know is the wind was blowing like hell at 8 a.m. this morning and it never let up. Well, I got Trevino last week and it looks like I'll have to get Watson tomorrow."

Strange said "I don't feel 36 holes will bother me, if anything, I ought to last longer than some of the older fellows. I'm still confident and I'm not tired at all."

The 6,993-yard par 35-35 Preston Trail Golf Club dried out rapidly Saturday from Thursday's rains which forced a first-round postponement and Sunday's 36 holes.

Roadrunner Classic a race for everyone

Time is running out to register for the Roadrunner Classic in the Comanche Trail Park on Saturday, May 17.

The Roadrunner Classic is sponsored by the Big Spring Herald, YMCA and Sportsworld, and consists of many different age groups and two different races which may be entered.

There will be both a two-mile run and a five-mile run for the participants, with the track being around parts of the Comanche Trail Park and Highway 87.

There are many different age groups. It starts at 12-and-under, 13-19, 20-29, 30-39, and a plus 40 group. Prizes will be awarded for both the outstanding male and female in each age group and in each distance event.

Entry fee for the affair is three dollars, and those wishing to do so may enter at the local YMCA. A t-shirt is included in the entry fee.

The affair, which will have refreshments and doctors on duty for the running, will begin at 8:30 a.m.

YMCA Women's Director Nadine Teague has scheduled a week full of speakers to put the prospective participants in the proper frame for next weekend's race. Teague said that over 85 people have already entered.

Numerous locals will be competing. The most noteworthy is Sherrill Easterling, who is a well-known marathoner in Texas, and good enough to qualify for last month's Boston Marathon.

BRANTLEY WINS FOR HOUSTON WORTHING — Dennis Brantley clears the final hurdle on the way to finish first in the 300-meter intermediate hurdles at the schoolboy track meet at Austin Saturday. Winning time for Brantley, of Houston Worthing, was 36.8. Others are Roger Coleman, 2nd, of Beaumont Beaumont-Charlton-Pollard and Charles Campbell of LBJ High of Austin, finishing third.

In AA high hurdles Gee finishes sixth

AUSTIN — Coahoma's Gary Gee finished sixth in the Class AA 110-high hurdles at the Texas State Track and Field Meet in action Friday night.

Gee ran a time of 14.6 for the sixth place finish, with Craig Moody of Clarksville winning the event with a time of 14.1.

Gee, who had run a 14.3 at regionals two weeks ago, hit the second hurdle, which he felt cost him some very valuable time.

On Saturday morning, Gee admitted a slight bit of disappointment, but was not dwelling on it. "I was disappointed after the race last night," the Coahoma senior said. "But I'm really just happy to be back at the state meet."

This was the second straight year that Gee has competed in the high hurdles at the prestigious state affair.

Islanders finally advance into NHL final round

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Mike Bossy and Bob Lorimer scored second-period goals Saturday night, capping a comeback that sparked New York to a 5-3 triumph over the Buffalo Sabres and sent the Islanders into the National Hockey League finals for the first time in the team's eight-year history. Bob Bourne set up both of those goals and scored an empty-net goal to cap the victory as the Islanders rallied from a 3-0 deficit after Gil Perreault had scored first-period goals 3:41 apart for Buffalo. The Islanders won the semifinal clash four games to two.

On Tuesday night, they will open the Stanley Cup championship series in Philadelphia against the Flyers, with Game Two scheduled at The Spectrum Thursday night and Games Three and Four at the Nassau Coliseum next Saturday and Monday nights.

After signing with Houston Oilers

Choate happy for chance to play in Texas

By NATHAN POSS
Sports Editor

With the possibility of landing in any of the 28 NFL training camps around the United States in July in pursuit of his lifelong dream, former Coahoma and SMU gridiron great Punt Choate will report to training camp 87 miles from home.

Choate recently signed a free agent contract with the Houston Oilers, and he naturally is thrilled with the prospect.

"I'm elated to be with Houston, and so happy to have a chance to play for a team in Texas again," said Choate in a Saturday morning telephone conversation from his current residence in Atlanta, Georgia.

The former All-Southwest Conference linebacker signed with the Atlanta Falcons last year, playing through much of the rugged training camp before sustaining a broken leg during an exhibition tilt. At the time of the injury, Choate felt that he had a very good chance at making the Falcons squad.

Choate stayed at the property of the Atlanta team after the injury, and began working out with the team in the early part of the regular season as his leg healed. But midway through the Falcons disappointing year, Choate was released in what was a type of economic move on the part of that NFL team.

Choate had originally felt that he would be back in the Falcons camp this July, but a couple of months ago felt different vibes from the Atlanta brass and decided he should look elsewhere. (See today's Hangin Out column on "Choate used brain instead of agent.")

Houston, Denver, Miami and Chicago showed considerable interest in the 6', 233-pound musclemann, with the Oilers impressing Choate in more ways than one.

"Houston was real, real nice and up front all the time," Choate explained. "Atlanta wasn't up front."

What Choate meant by 'up front' is that he felt that Atlanta was trying to avoid talking to him, or so it seemed that way.

Choate thereby signed a two-year contract with the Oilers, which of course is contingent on his making the final 43-man NFL roster.

"I'll be ready. I'll guarantee that," said the workaholic Choate, who is a good lesson to young athletes in what work is necessary to compete on such a high level.

"I've been running, but I'll really pick it up in the next two months," Choate said. "My weightlifting is excellent right now, better than it ever has been."

An avid weightlifter throughout his football career, Choate is now bench pressing 420 pounds on a free bar.

The Oiler training camp is in nearby San Angelo, and Choate stated that he would be moving back to his parents home in Sand Springs in the month before he reports in order to get used to the hot and dry weather conditions in this area. Choate is scheduled to report to camp on July 14.

Choate plans a self-inflicted month of torturous work in order to prepare for the Oilers camp, but he sometimes seems like a masochist in regard to his training habits.

"I can't wait to start working out twice a day," he said. His personal workouts include tiring agility drills in the morning, with two hours of weightlifting four afternoons a week, finished by 50 sprints of distances ranging from 20-100 yards.

While strength is no problem for the physically impressive Choate, he realizes that his best chance at making an early impression on Coach Bum Phillips staff will be on the specialty teams.

"The one thing most important for me right now is the special teams," Choate stated. "They will be looking for two things — hitting and speed downfield. That (speed downfield) will weigh heavily on my success."

The Oilers have currently picked up four new linebacking prospects, including Choate. They are fourth round draft choice John Coker of Oklahoma State, Sammie Green, who played for Seattle last season, and David Maxwell. "Coker and Green both have good speed and good quickness," Choate analyzed. "But naturally, I think I'm better," he said with an air of self-belief.

As the conversation drifted toward playing again in Texas, the former Coahoma fullback-linebacker great in the 72-74 seasons sounded excited.

"I knew I'd be somewhere, but being in San Angelo at the Oilers training camp is a big help," Choate observed. "I have a lot of friends and my family back in that area, and that helps break the monotony of camp."

And the rugged six consecutive weeks of two-a-days will determine whether the rugged linebacker from Coahoma will make the Oilers regular season roster.

For this reason, one must be in fantastic physical shape in order to be able to think quickly, as Choate explained.

"There are so many great athletes in the NFL. And as you know, Nate, a lot of great ones in college that don't have it inside," Choate said.

"It is so hard mentally in training camp," Choate explained. "They hand you a 400-page book, and you've got to learn 200 defenses in your room at night after going through two-a-days."

"You've got to be in such good shape when you report, so you won't get tired and can totally concentrate every minute you're on the field and at night while you're studying."

"But I'm not afraid to work and work hard to prepare for that," he continued. "This is all I've ever wanted to be."

"I'm totally confident I can make their team."

Hangin' Out with Nathan Poss

Choate used brain instead of agent

AGENTS FOR PROFESSIONAL ATHLETES have in many instances been known to be a controversial breed.

They no doubt are a thorn in the side for the owners of many professional sports franchises, as they make demands for the lucrative salaries of their athletic clients.

In many cases, the agents have been known to help their unfinancially minded clients receive contracts that they in no way would have been able to manage by themselves.

But in other cases, as many pro athletes have made public lately, the agents are not worth the amount of money that their clients are paying them.

And for any prospective athlete that might want to represent himself in working out a contract with a prospective team, or finding a team, for that matter, take the case of Punt Choate.

CHOATE, THE FORMER COAHOOMA HIGH and SMU football stalwart, used an agent to help him sign on last year with the Atlanta Falcons.

Choate reported to the Falcon camp, and was performing well, until a broken leg barred his chances of making that NFL club's regular season roster. But Choate stayed around Atlanta after being released during the regular season last fall, and expected to be back in the Falcons camp for the pre-season drills, which will begin in July.

But the Falcons, as Choate explained yesterday, were not being overly enthusiastic toward the former All-Southwest Conference linebacker who set an SMU season record for tackling points in his senior season of 1978.

"About two months ago," Choate related to this writer, "I tried to set up with the ~~Atlanta Falcons~~ since I knew all of them it wouldn't be much of a problem."

"I went and talked to the player-personnel guy, and he said for me to go talk to the head coach (Leeman Bennett)," Choate explained.

"But they were all kind of dragging their feet," Choate continued. "They said they wanted to sign me, but they wanted to wait until after the draft to do so."

Frustrated, Choate related that he had the feeling that they were trying to avoid him.

"But I got tired of them telling me to wait and decided to go elsewhere," an anxious Choate stated.

LAST YEAR, CHOATE HAD USED AN AGENT. But after considering what needed to be done, the Coahoma High ex decided he could do it on his own.

"If you are intelligent, you can do it yourself," Choate said, and then revealed how he ended up signing with the Houston Oilers recently. Of course, you also have to have professional football abilities, too.

"I simply made a football resume," Choate said. "I got a list of player personnel directors in the NFL for all 28 teams."

"On the resume, I went through my football career, giving every award, statistic and any other impressive item. I made 27 copies (for every team but Atlanta), and then the next day went to a photographer and had 27 pictures made," the massive, 6', 230-pound linebacker explained.

"I sent the football resume out to all of the teams, and everybody ended up calling back. About 10 of them were 'Thanks, but no thanks,' but at least they responded."

"But Houston, Denver and Chicago all got back within the week after I had sent it out, and all of them sounded like they really wanted me," Choate continued.

"About five other teams wanted to bring me into a mini-camp, too."

"BUT HOUSTON WANTED TO SIGN ME THEN," the Coahoma ex stated, "and they told me that they had followed my career through the high school all-star, through my career at SMU and last year at Atlanta."

"I told them I would think about it," Choate said with a hint of a laugh in his breath. "I thought about it for about two hours," he said, now obviously enjoying his brief holiday, "called back and worked out a deal."

"I got as much as could be expected for someone in their second year that was injured in his first," Choate explained.

"It was a base contract, with incentive bonus' for such things as a certain amount of plays, performance while I'm playing, and of course, making the team," Choate stated. To state the obvious, making the Oilers regular season roster supercedes anything that Choate is to collect.

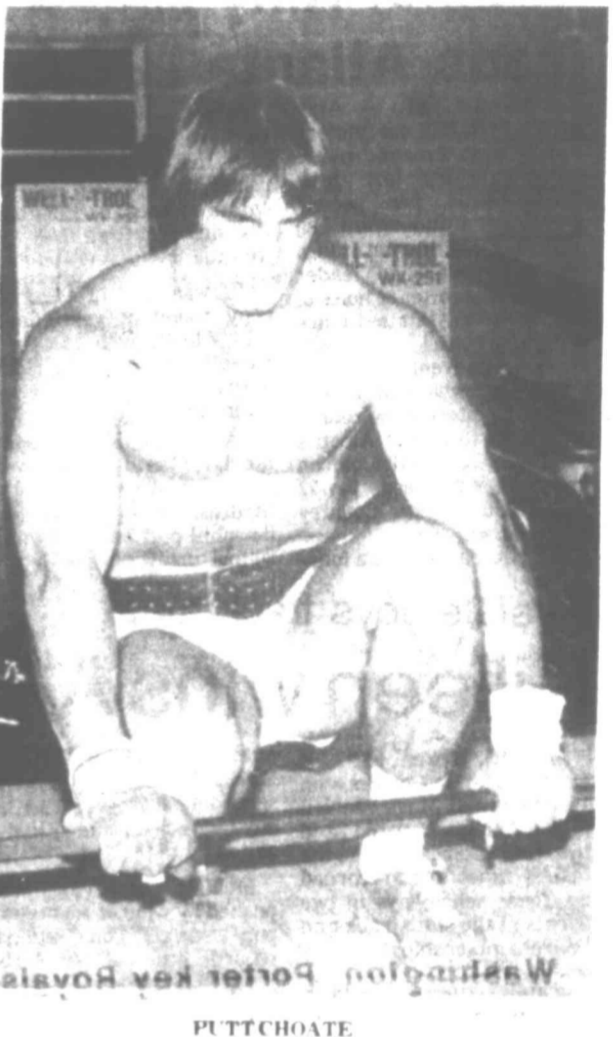

"I was not in a bargaining position," Choate continued, "but if I end up making the Houston team, it will be a decent contract."

"It's a short term, two-year pact with no option," Choate explained, not delving into any numbers. "If I'm doing good after those two years, we can talk again."

Choate, obviously pleased with his ability to negotiate for himself, saved himself a chunk of money by doing so, also.

"I got as much as I could for my experience," the SMU grad said. "What an agent would have done would be to cost me $1500 for two days work."

"I proved that you don't have to have an agent. I did as much as any agent would do."

Genuine Risk faces Preakness challenge

BALTIMORE (AP) — Genuine Risk, the first filly to win the Derby in 65 years, will try to become the first to win the Preakness in 56 years when she battles the boys again next Saturday at Pimlico.

because of her clear-cut victory in the Derby, she is entitled to run in the Preakness," said trainer LeRoy Jolley.

Only one of her rivals in the Derby, Jaklin Klugman who finished third, is expected to test the chestnut sweetheart of American racing in the 105th Preakness.

Jaklin Klugman, a gray colt co-owned by actor Jack Klugman, will get a lot of betting support in the Preakness, which at 13-16 miles is a sixteenth of a mile shorter than the Derby. But Genuine Risk's chief rival at Pimlico could be Codex.

McEnroe, Gerulaitis advance to Forest Hills TC finals

NEW YORK (AP) — Top-seeded John McEnroe eliminated Mexico's Raul Ramirez 6-3, 6-4 and third-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis stopped Vijay Amritraj of India 7-6, 4-6, 6-3 Saturday, advancing to Sunday's finals in the $500,000 Tournament of Champions at Forest Hills.

The matchup pairs the same two men who met in last year's U.S. Open finals, which McEnroe won 7-5, 6-3, 6-3.

It was McEnroe's toughest match in the 28-player

Errors costly to Rangers

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — A muffed double play allowed Chicago to score two runs in the eighth inning, and Jim Morrison, who doubled home two runs in the third inning, added a three-run homer in the ninth as the White Sox defeated the Texas Rangers 10-4 Saturday night.

Ed Farmer, 3-0, the fifth Chicago pitcher, put down a Texas rally in the seventh and held on for the victory. Chicago scored five runs on two walks and four consecutive hits in the second inning off Gaylord Perry, but the Rangers scored single runs in five different innings to tie the game.

Morrison and Harold Baines singled with one out in the eighth and Jim Kern relieved Danny Darwin. Thad Bosley hit an apparent double play grounder to shortstop Pepe Frias that would have ended the inning, but second baseman Bump Wills dropped the throw as Morrison scored the go-ahead run. Mike Squires' RBI single made it 7-5.

Wills walked, stole second and scored on Al Oliver's double in the bottom of the eighth, but Morrison's ninth-inning homer wrapped it up.

Oliver's double was his fifth hit in five trips. He had four singles earlier in the game.

Oakland continues winning ways

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Tony Armas, who tied the game with a two-run homer in the seventh inning, singled home the winning run in the bottom of the ninth Saturday to give the Oakland A's a 4-3 victory over Toronto that ended the Blue Jays' club record six-game winning streak.

Dave Revering singled to open the ninth, and Mike Edwards ran for him. Wayne Gross sacrificed Edwards to second, and Jeff Newman was walked intentionally before Armas delivered his game-winning hit off Tom Buskey, who relieved loser Jerry Garvin, 0-2, after Gross' sacrifice.

Twins ease by Yankees in 11th

NEW YORK (AP) — Ken Landreaux's 11th-inning single drove in Butch Wynegar from second base to give the Minnesota Twins and Darrell Jackson a 1-0 victory over the New York Yankees Saturday night.

Jackson, 1-1, snapped New York's six-game winning streak by scattering five hits in 10 innings before giving way to Doug Corbett to start the 11th.

Wynegar opened the 11th with a single off reliever Rudy May, 1-1, and was sacrificed to second by Jesus Vega. Landreaux followed with his RBI single, his second hit of the game and Minnesota's sixth, giving the Twins their first triumph over a left-handed pitcher in 12 decisions this season.

Cubs win high scoring affair

CHICAGO (AP) — Three-run homers by Jerry Martin and Mike Vail and solo blasts by Barry Foote and Bill Buckner powered the Chicago Cubs to a 15-9 victory over the San Francisco Giants Saturday in a slugfest featuring eight home runs, four by each team.

The Cubs had 17 hits, 10 for extra bases, including a pair of doubles by Buckner and a triple and double by Lenny Randle, who extended his hitting streak to 11 games.

Lynn McGlothen, making his first start of the season, picked up his first decision and aided his own cause with a pair of singles and a double and scored twice. Bob Knepper, 2-4, was the loser.

Washington, Porter key Royals

BOSTON (AP) — U.L. Washington drove in four runs and Darrell Porter three, including his first home run since returning to action a week ago, as the Kansas City Royals packed 12 runs in the first four innings for a 13-8 victory over the Boston Red Sox Saturday.

Washington drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single in the first and then doubled home two more in the third. Porter, recently returned from several weeks of treatment at an alcohol and drug rehabilitation center, keyed a five-run first inning against Boston starter Dennis Eckersley, 1-5, with a two-run homer. He also singled home a run in a four-run fourth against relievers Keith MacWhorter and Steve Renko.

Remie Martin, 2-1, picked up the victory.

Astros walk by Braves

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta reliever Al Hrabosky walked in the winning run with two out and the bases loaded in the 11th inning Saturday night, giving the Houston Astros a 3-2 victory over the Braves.

Loser Gene Garber, 1-2, who followed Rick Matula and Larry Bradford to the mound, came on to start the 11th and the Astros loaded the bases on an infield hit by Jose Cruz, a walk to Enos Cabell and, after a sacrifice, an intentional walk to Alan Ashby.

Pinch hitter Rafael Landestoy forced Cruz at the plate. Hrabosky then replaced Garber and walked Terry Puhl to force home Cabell with the winning run.

Joe Sambito recorded his third save by retiring the Braves in order in the bottom of the 11th, keeping the Astros atop the National League West by 12 percentage points over Cincinnati.

The Astros took a 1-0 lead with an unearned run in the second inning when second baseman Jerry Royster erred Cruz' grounder with one out. Cruz stole second, moved to third as Cabell grounded out and scored when Ashby bounced the game's first hit over the head of first baseman Chris Chambliss.

The Braves went ahead 2-1 in the fourth. Larvell Blanks singled, Dale Murphy doubled and Chambliss rapped an RBI single to tie it and Murphy scored on Brian Aselstine's grounder. Singles by Puhl and Craig Reynolds plus Denny Walling's grounder produced Houston's tying run in the fifth.

Hooton snaps Dodger loss skell

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Burt Hooton and Jerry Reuss combined to cool off St. Louis on nine hits, and Ron Cey drove in two runs to pace the Los Angeles Dodgers to a 5-3 triumph over the Cardinals Saturday night.

It was the second time this season Hooton, 3-2, snapped a three-game Dodgers losing streak. The Cardinals had won four in a row.

Pete Vuckovich, 5-2, who was bidding to become the National League's first six-game winner, took the loss.

Spaceman flies Expos past Mets

MONTREAL (AP) — Bill Lee collected a pair of hits and scored the go-ahead run to record his first victory of the season with clutch relief from Elias Sosa as the Montreal Expos downed the New York Mets 5-3 Saturday.

Lee, 1-3, got off to a shaky start as the Mets took a 2-0 lead in the first inning. Lee Mazzilli led off with a single and Frank Taveras beat out a bunt. After a double steal, Joel Youngblood singled both runners across.

The Expos got one run back when Gary Carter clubbed his 100th career home run and third of the season in the second inning. They tied the score with two out in the third when Larry Parrish singled and scored on a double by Carter.

Kevin Kobel, 0-3, was the loser.

Driessen, Seaver survive Philly

CINCINNATI (AP) — Dan Driessen hit a two-run homer and Tom Seaver survived three Philadelphia home runs as the Cincinnati Reds defeated the Phillies 5-3 Saturday.

The game was highlighted by an early pitching duel between Seaver, 2-1, and loser Steve Carlton, 5-2. Neither gave up a hit until the fourth inning.

Philadelphia's Bake McBride hit his first home run of the season in the fourth, Larry Bowa got an inside-the-park homer in the fifth inning when Cincinnati outfielders Dave Collins and Sam Mejias collided in left-center trying to snare his liner and Mike Schmidt hit a towering shot in the sixth for his ninth homer, tops in the majors.

Brewers take win over Birds

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Hot-hitting Dick Davis lined an RBI double in the second inning and scored the go-ahead run after a single in the fifth, leading the Milwaukee Brewers to a 5-3 victory over the Baltimore Orioles Saturday.

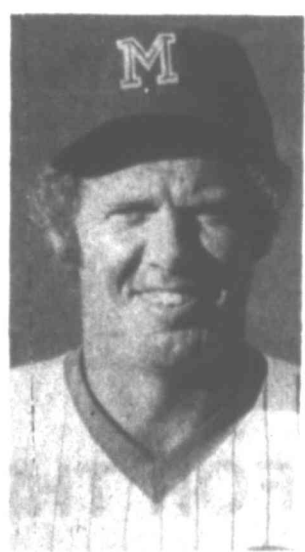

Former big league star sees baseball as changing science

By STEVE HERSHBERGER

For Randy Hundley, baseball is more than the game the boys of summer play.

"Baseball is a science," Hundley said. "Every pitch changes the situation."

Hundley manages the Midland Cubs of the Texas League. His team is currently in third place in the four-team Western Division of the Texas League.

RANDY HUNDLEY

He is a former major league catcher, having played most of his years with the Chicago Cubs.

Hundley plays a key role in the Chicago Cubs franchise, for he brings along future prospects for the parent club. For the most part he is a teacher; a man who has perfected a knowledge of the game of baseball and is trying to impart that knowledge to men with little or no experience in professional baseball.

"I'd say the biggest difference between a big league player and a minor league player is experience," Hundley said. "The minor leagues are for you to play and get the experience. That is the only way you learn."

Hundley points out that there is more involved in the game than what the fans see and is not as simple as Tony Kubek and Joe Gargariola say on television.

To make this point, Hundley made this example. Take a situation where a man is on second base and the batter hits the ball into left field for a single. What should the left fielder do? Try to throw the runner out at home if he is attempting to round third? Relay the ball to the second baseman? A lot depends on the batter's runners speed, the inning, the number of outs, the score and a host of other things.

"You have to be able to analyze the game," Hundley said. In time, a player develops a feeling for each situation and each pitch.

"In the big leagues," the manager said, "they just don't make the mistakes."

He added, "It is easier to manage in the big leagues. They (players) have learned how to play the game."

This is precisely Hundley's job — to guide young players through professional baseball, lending his expertise.

Hundley gained this knowledge through long years in the majors. In 1960, he signed with the San Francisco Giants reportedly for a $110,000 bonus. He started in the Giants farm system.

"I got all my minor league play with San Francisco," Hundley said.

In 1966 the Giants traded him and pitcher Bill Hands to the Chicago Cubs for pitcher Lindy McDaniel and outfielder Don Landrum.

In 1966, Hundley started his first 11 seasons with the Cubs. He set a record for the most home runs hit by a catcher in his rookie season. He hit 19 round trippers that year and had 63 runs batted in.

He had a good season in 1969 when he hit 18 home runs and went to the all-star game. He was a part of the first-place team that was overtaken by the New York Mets on their way to the World Series.

"I saw the movie 'Oh God!' and the last miracle he (George Burns portraying God) did was the '69 Mets," Hundley grinned.

During his career, he developed the reputation of a take-charge type of player. In 1968 he set a record for the most games caught with 160. This is considerable for the major league season is 162 games.

"I have always taken pride in myself for being a team player," Hundley added.

When he was playing, other people in the game thought Hundley would be an excellent coach or manager.

"They would say 'Randy you would be a good manager,'" Hundley added.

Hundley quit baseball four years ago and decided to manage baseball.

"I feel like I have a lot to offer," Hundley said. "I have had good days and bad days and have played hurt."

He started out managing in rookie ball in Florida. Last year, he was named the skipper of the Midland club.

Last year, Hundley led the Cubs to first place in their division.

Hundley's job is strictly a one-man operation. He does have instructors come in periodically to help the players. He does have an advantage, though. He was a catcher; therefore, he has a deep background in the two most difficult positions in the game.

"Pitching and catching are the toughest positions in baseball," he said.

He works with his pitcher both during the game and at practice sessions. But, he adds, that game instruction is kept to the most pressing, for a pitcher has enough to concentrate during the contest.

Most of the work with the players is at the 4 p.m. practice sessions on the day of the game.

The minor leagues have problems that are separate from the big leagues. Hundley pointed out that the percentages are against most of his players making it to the big leagues.

"We had only three guys on my double-A team make to the big leagues," he said, adding that his minor league club was strong.

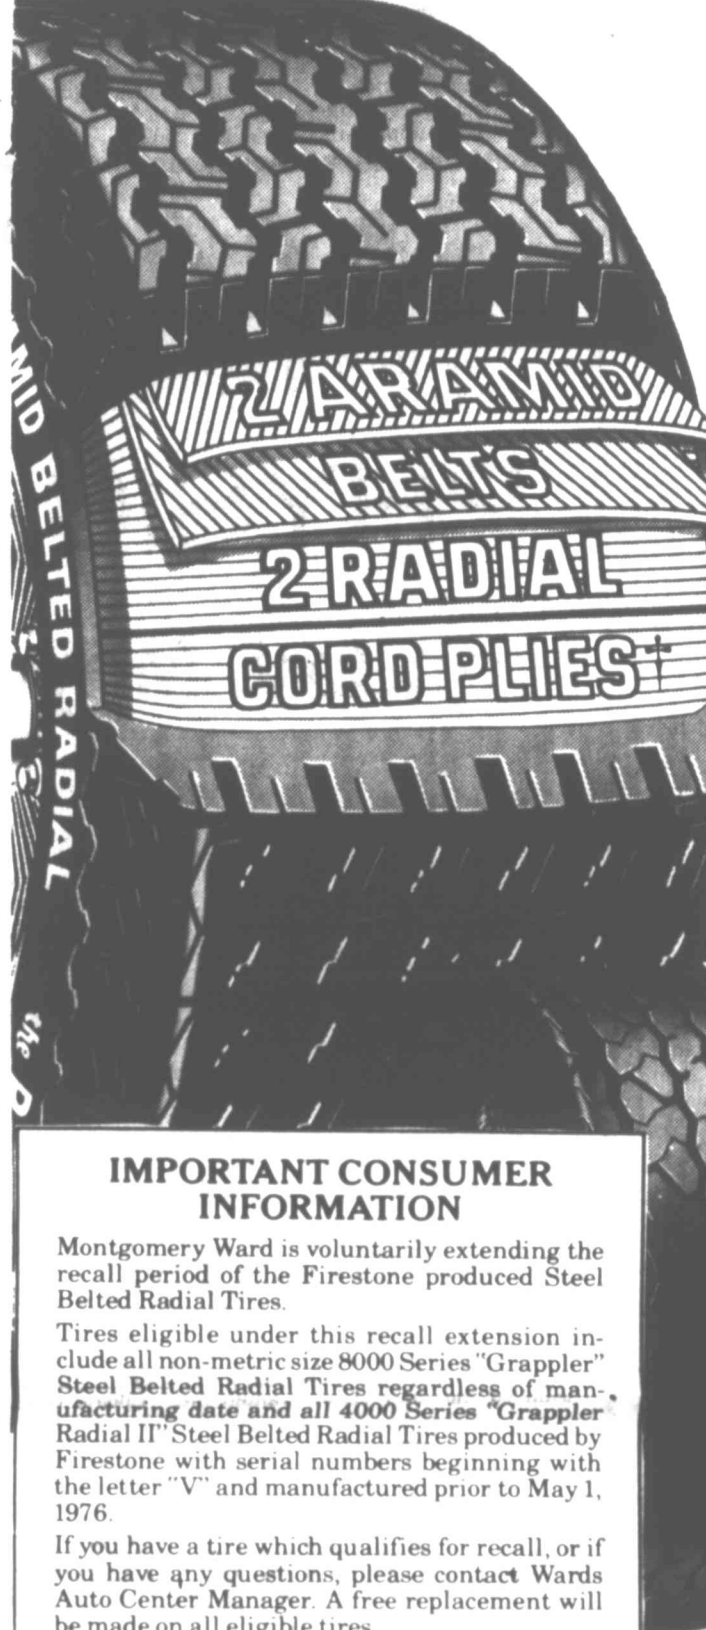

On top of that, Hundley mentioned another problem, "Here you have to deal with guys being away from home who are not used to it."

The Midland manager said he would like to stay in baseball, even though he has been preparing himself for the day he no longer associated with the game.

"I want to get to the big leagues as a coach or manager," he said.

Action in area lakes showing improvement

Tempo of fishing has picked up at Lakes J.B. Thomas and E.V. Spence, with the former being the hot spot.

Crappie fishing set the pace at Lake Thomas with one couple stringing 70 on one junket and returning to add 50 more. There were numerous strings of 20-40 crappie mostly in the 1 to 1 1/2 lb range with some up to 2 1/2 lbs. There were reports of good results in both shallow and deeper water. The main spawn period appears to be approaching, according to Richard Halfmann, lake superintendent. The same is true for black bass, and Bill Rollins and Buddy Hathaway of Snyder hooked a 5 lb 4-oz specimen. Another fisherman landed a 5 1/2 lb bass in shallower water. White bass were beginning to bite, and so were the catfish, Jones, R.K. McCoy, Jack although at a lesser clip. Several good channel cat have been taken as the water warms, and one 21 1/2 lb strip-yellow catfish was reported. Weldon Brooks, Snyder, caught a 16-lb. yellow cat. At Lake Spence stripers were returning in force along with some white bass and crappie. Among the results reported were:

Triangle Grocery — Cliff Brewer, Seminole, 16 3/4-lb. striped bass; Gary Gillihan, Big Spring, 16 3/4-lb. yellow catfish.

Skinney's — Dair and Y.J. Sherrill, Robert Lee, 151 crappie to 2 lbs., and four black bass to 4 lbs.

Wildcat Fish A Rama — James McClure, Robert Lee, 40 white bass; Bryan Tinsley, Ozona, 11 1/2-lb. stripers; Rayford Gillihan, Big Spring, seven stripers to 16 1/2-lbs.; Bill Emerson, and Carl Wyrick, Big Spring, four stripers to 8 lbs.; Coy bite, and so were the catfish, Jones, R.K. Howell Martin resigns as Steer baseball coach

Howell Martin, Big Spring Steer baseball coach the past year, made his resignation official during the past week. The decision was known earlier in the year by the inside coaching staff and the players, as a mild controversy stimulated the end result.

Martin was in his first year as the Steer baseball coach, and had taken a team with only two seniors.

During March, Big Spring Athletic Director Ron Logback hired Ralph Harris to take over the Steer football program.

Harris began a series of two-a-day meetings with the local coaches upon his arrival on the BSHS campus, in a much needed effort to upgrade the local grid program in every facet from the high school level throughout the junior highs.

Martin served as a ninth grade football coach during the past grid season. This is where the problem began. All coaches that tutored football as any level were expected to be in attendance at the learning sessions, which occurred for two hours in the morning before school and two-to-three hours in the evening.

Martin, whose Steer baseball team was beginning their District 5-AAAA schedule, balked. As he explained at that time, "in the spring, I am totally dedicated to baseball and the players," Martin said.

"Their argument (athletic department)," Martin explained, "was that I was not being taken out of baseball time. The first thing that happened was a communication breakdown, and this led to worse feelings."

"I just felt that my job was not to coach football in the spring," the resigned Steer baseball mentor philosophized.

Martin, who in the meantime has applied to the Austin Presbyterian Seminary, helped develop a baseball team this year that in most games didn't start a senior, relying on sophomores and juniors.

The Steers finished 10-16 for the year. "I regret not being able to stay with these kids," said Martin. "They came along way without many seniors."

"I think they'll be successful next year," he continued, "regardless of who they have coaching them."

"But in respect for the baseball players, I hope they get a baseball coach and don't just stick a football coach out there," he stated.

But Martin did emphasize that he leaves with no hard feelings, and does hope that the Big Spring football program does get turned around.

"Once my wife and I decided to apply in Austin, we never looked back," Martin said.

"If I receive acceptance from the seminary, I'll be there three years," Martin explained. "I will be working toward my Master of Divinity, which would qualify me to be a minister."

"It's something I've always wanted to do."

Hardin-Simmons honors President Richardson

"Considering the response, it would have been better if I were as old as Methuselah instead of just 89 years old," Dr. Rupert N. Richardson said Monday night.

Hardin-Simmons University dedicated its first ever national phonathon to President Emeritus Richardson and called approximately 12,000 HSU exes between March 24 and April 25 asking "for at least $89—a dollar for each of Dr. Richardson's years."

But the goal of $89,000 was easily surpassed. James Teel, assistant vice president for development, reported that $97,447.44 had been pledged as a result of the phone calls and another $39,982.11 given before the actual phoning got underway—for a total of $137,429.55.

The money is "unrestricted" which allows it to support the general operating budget of Hardin-Simmons.

Dr. Richardson, who was born the same year HSU was founded (1891) and began his lifelong association with the university as a 16-year-old freshman in 1907, expressed gratitude for the response to the phonathon and to the approximately 400 Big Country residents and HSU students, staff and faculty that met in HSU's Mabee Complex arena for a victory celebration and a birthday party.

"I thank God for giving me more years than is normally allotted to man, but I don't think my name had anything to do with the success of this phonathon," he said. He noted that Cecil Rhodes, the founder of Rhodesia, died in his 40's—"and I often wonder what a man like that could have accomplished if he had lived as long as I have."

But the crowd, which included Abilene Christian University president Dr. Paul Stevens, State Senator Grant Jones, State Representative Gary Thompson, Taylor County Commissioner Bert Chapman, Texas Highway Commission chairman Sam Waldrop (who is also chairman of the HSU Board of Trustees), Col. James Bennington, commander of the 96th Combat Support Wing at Dyess Air Force Base, and Ed Wishcamper and Kathryn Duff, representing the Abilene Reporter-News, didn't agree with Dr. Richardson's assessment of his "not accomplishing much."

Twelve other callers raised over $1,000 in pledges each.

Slide rule competition ends at state meet

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — As the closed-door competition ended, one of the coaches peered in through a slit in the curtains.

"This time," he said to no one in particular, "there is no next year."

The slide rule was buried Saturday.

For 46 years, high school math wizards have gathered here for the University Interscholastic League slide rules competition. This year's meet was the final one.

The slide rule — the hand-powered dinosaur of mathematics — gives way next year to state competition using the microchip; marvels of the hand-held calculator.

Several coaches and officials agreed the slide rule is doomed to antique stores.

"Once you go to a calculator, you never go back to a slide rule," said Dr. John Cogdell, a University of Texas professor of electrical engineering who ran the contest.

Cogdell is designing next year's initial statewide calculator contest.

"It's more fun, it's quicker and it's more accurate," he said.

"If you want to go to London, would you rather swim or fly?"

But Ford Roberson of the pro-slide rule forces also was ready to play analogies. Roberson, 1968 state slide rule champ, now coaches the Andrews team.

"What's the point in throwing the javelin? Does anyone throw the spear anymore?" he said.

Apparently, however, javelins are easier to find than slide rules.

"You can hardly buy them anymore, except for the cheap little plastic jobs," said Jack Sell, coach of the Port Arthur-Jefferson team.

At one time slide rules were so popular in Texas that one of the largest manufacturers made a model designed especially for the state contest. The Texas Speed Rule was a scaled down, quicker-to-use model, the Ferrari of slide rules.

"They quit making them," said Cogdell. "They shipped the dies to Mexico and they were inadvertently destroyed. That's the end of it."

Sixty-one regional winners came here for the last state meet. It's a 30-minute race with 75 problems.

The last winners: Frances Robinson, Longview, Class 4A; Laurie Stephenson, Edcouch, 3A; Scott Sayre, Hayes Consolidated, 2A; Trang Pham, Tatum, A; and Lendi Linvgson, Lefors, B.

Some of the contestants practice up to four hours a day. Many already are preparing for next year's calculator contest.

Slide rule training is rigorous. Sell said some coaches make the students practice with two radios blaring — each tuned to a different station — to teach the value of concentration. Others practice near busy windows on busy streets.

Sell said slide rule recruiting begins in junior high school.

"You have to get to them before anyone else gets to them, especially band," he said.

Sell initially resisted the coming of the computer age. He said he feared a calculator contest "would not be anything but a typing contest."

The kindergarten and first grades went on their end of school trip Thursday also.

The fifth and sixth grades went on their end of school trip on Friday.

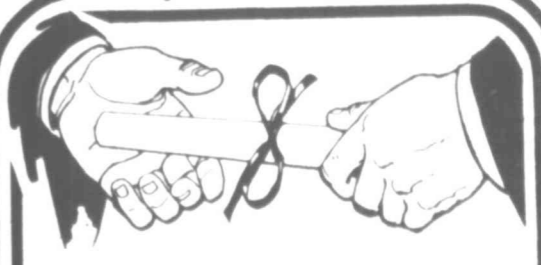

Friday, practice for Baccalaureate will be held at 8:00 p.m. Sunday, May 11.

The Awards Banquet will be held Monday, May 12, graduation will be held at 8:15 p.m., Friday, May 16.

Wind ensemble organization plans under way

LUBBOCK — Professor Dean Killion, Director of Bands at Texas Tech University, has announced plans to establish a Wind Ensemble as a new performing organization at Tech next year.

The Wind Ensemble, to be conducted by Professor Keith McCarty, will consist of 39 performers and will perform locally and regionally throughout Texas. A BIT SUBMERGED — Jose Feliciano, blind guitarist, practices under the California sunshine in Los Angeles recently. Feliciano has released a single called "I'm Coming Home Again," dedicated to the safe release of the American hostages in Iran.

Feliciano coming home

LOS ANGELES — The statistics paint a rosy picture: More than 86 million records sold over the last 15 years, 32 gold albums, two Grammys and numerous awards from such magazines as Playboy and Guitar Player.

But the reality is a bit less glowing for Jose Feliciano these days. While he continues to fill concert halls worldwide, he's a record star without a big name label and hasn't put out an album since his last record company failed two years ago.

And in pop music's current

Brave New Wave World, Feliciano's unique blend of jazz, rock and blues has been more or less submerged.

But the blind guitarist didn't sing himself out of New York's Puerto Rican ghetto by sitting around and moping, and he's taking matters into his own hands this time, too.

While his managers talk album deals with major companies, Feliciano has released a single on an independent label and is taking it around to every disc jockey and talk show host who'll listen.

More than a few are listening, in part because there's a news hook to the record. It's called "I'm Coming Home Again," and Feliciano has dedicated it to the safe release of the American hostages in Iran.

"The song was given to me at a time when I was going through a lot of turmoil in my life. I was going through the same thing as Lee Marvin," Feliciano says, referring to a difficult divorce from his wife which was complicated by the fact that she had also been his manager.

It also more or less coincided with the debacle of his association with Private Stock Records, the label that failed.

But Feliciano is obviously happier discussing music than the vagaries of his career and personal life. So talk turns to his predilection for what people in the record industry call covers — songs that have been popularized by others.

At 34, Feliciano is confident that he'll be able to put his career back on track despite the record industry's current fascination with early '60s-style rock 'n' roll, which he jokingly calls "New Ripple."

Maxwell Smart in own movie

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The huge billboard overlooking the Sunset Strip trumpets: "Would you believe Don Adams as Maxwell Smart in his first motion picture?"

Don Adams believes. "The Nude Bomb," which Universal is releasing this month, is indeed his first movie — ironically, since he is one of the world's greatest film fans and got his start in show business imitating the stars. Anyone starring in his first feature would be delighted with the billboard. Being a comedian, Adams found something to complain about.

"The picture," he grumbled. "It doesn't look like me. My friends call me up and say, 'Is that you on the billboard?' I think it's me. But why did they have to make me look like Quasimodo?"

As for "The Nude Bomb," he also has reservations.

"I hope it's good," he said. "I can't really tell anymore. I didn't go to any of the sneak previews, which I'm told went very well. I saw it cold in a projection room — not a good way to see a comedy. There were a lot of things taken out that I would like to see put back in."

Lest his comments sound entirely downbeat, it should be added that he is admittedly not the best judge of his own work.

"I've never thought that anything I did was good. Including 'Get Smart.' At the time I was dissatisfied with the shows. Now that I see them in reruns, I find that 70 percent of them are very funny."

"The Nude Bomb" (working title: "The Return of Maxwell Smart") was a curious project from the start. Why would a studio invest $10 million in recreating a television series that ended its first run 10 years ago?

In depth cancer data available at library

By REBECCA TAYLOR
Reference Librarian

Death is a word which strikes a deep note of fear in every person. Like 'leprosy' in past ages, the word 'cancer' gives one a particularly gut wrenching sensation of horror. Although cancer is second to cardiovascular disease as a cause of death, more individuals react with a hopeless revulsion to cancer. The fear of cancer is so fundamental as to be almost superstition. The fear causes many individuals to refuse to consider a possibility of cancer until it is too late, even if there are recognizable symptoms.

As with most superstitions, knowledge is the key to dealing with the fear. Of every six cancer victims, two are saved and of the four who die, one could have been saved with early detection and treatment. Regular checkups and prompt attention to unexplained physical changes are vital to cancer detection and cure.

What if you do get cancer? Some persons try to ignore the diagnosis, hoping it will go away. Most victims will eventually develop a voracious appetite for information; a need to know. Whether you are a victim or relative of a victim, the Howard County Library attempts to provide current and supportive information.

Perhaps the most vital book to a cancer patient and his family is the "Cancer Care: A Personal Guide," by Drs. Singer and Glucksberg. This important guide tells you what you need to know about the type cancer you have; how it is treated, how it progresses, related symptoms and prognosis.

"What You Should Know About Medical Lab Tests," by Kliman, Vermette, and Kolowrat, is not exclusively about cancer. It gives a lay person an idea of what the many tests are for and what the results can mean. Often a patient is afraid to ask questions and the physician doesn't recognize the patient's lack of understanding.

Most cancer victims feel a need to know that others have faced the same problem and how they have handled it. There a number of personal narrative books on cancer.

Among women, the greatest killer is breast cancer. This is tragic because early detection is simple and recovery rate upon early detection is 80 percent. Three excellent books on the ordeal of breast cancer are available: "Breast Cancer," by Rose Kushner; "Three Weeks in Spring," by Joan and Robert Parker; and the best seller by Betty Rollin, "First, You Cry." The first book gives an in depth look at breast cancer; diagnosis, trauma and treatment. The books by Parker and Rollin are personal accounts of different individual experiences.

Some reactions of men to a cancer diagnosis are given in: "Stay of Execution," by Stewart Alsop; Cornelius Ryan's best seller, "A Private Battle," and a unique book just published, "A Physician Faces Cancer in Himself," by Dr. Samuel Sanes. Dr. Sanes, a teaching pathologist, emphasizes the things friends and physicians don't see or understand in dealing with a cancer victim.

The Righteous Apples' No comedy, no drama

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "The Righteous Apples" is not exactly comedy and not exactly a drama, but whatever it is, it's a first.

The half-hour show is the first American-made situation comedy — or dramatic comedy — for public television. The first of 10 will be aired by many Public Broadcasting Service stations Thursday night.

The Righteous Apples is a high school rock group with three black members and two white members. The show centers on the band members' involvement in real-life situations that affect minority people.

In the premiere episode, they help rescue a once-famous blind blues guitarist — marvelously played by Vernon Washington — from a seedy old-age home that preys on the elderly. They also spirit out his ladyfriend and get them to the altar.

"The Righteous Apples" got its start when the Corporation for Public Broadcasting awarded its first fellowship three years ago to Topper Carew. Carew, who'd just received his Ph.D., had created "Rebob" and produced "Say Brother" for public TV.

Carew used the fellowship to study television at the BBC in London, then with Universal Studios and Tandem Productions in Hollywood.

"They thought Topper Carew could be a person who could be very resourceful to the system," he said. "So they gave me money for research and development and out of that came 'The Righteous Apples.'"

The CPB was so impressed with the pilot that it advanced $1.3 million for the production of 10 episodes.

If "The Righteous Apples" seems more situation than comedy and more enlightening than entertaining, that's part of the plan.

WAACs now eligible for few VA benefits

Thousands of women who were members of the World War II Women's Army Auxiliary Corps will be eligible for certain Veterans Administration benefits as a result of recent Department of Defense recognition for their WWII military service.

VA chief Max Cleland said the potential eligibility includes medical treatment, home loan guarantees, pension and payment of some burial expenses.

The change in status was granted to former WAACs whose names were on the newly-created Women's Army Corps when it was established as a part of the Army in 1943.

About 75 percent of the WAAC force went into the new military unit so they have had veteran status since leaving military service.

The Defense Department action confers the same status on the 25 percent of the WAACs who remained civilians when the Women's Army Corps was founded.

Cleland said regulations covering applications for former WAACs for VA benefits are now being written and will be forwarded to VA field offices as soon as possible.

He said former WAACs wishing to establish their eligibility for VA benefits must first apply to the Army for an honorable discharge. Application must be made to Department of the Army, U.S. Army Reserve Component and Administrative Center, Attention: AGU Z, PNA P, 4700 Page Blvd., St. Louis, MO 63132.

Following receipt of a discharge, the women should contact a benefits counselor at the nearest VA regional office. Regional offices are located in each state and toll free numbers are available.

to each office. They may be found under the U.S. Government listing in telephone directories.

Cleland said VA cannot pay benefits to the former WAACs for periods prior to Nov. 23, 1977, the date of the legislation that paved the way for their veteran status.

This precludes payment for such World War II programs as the GI Bill education benefits which have expired for other veterans of that period.
