university, applauds. Muskie returned late Friday night from Vienna where he attended ceremonies marking Austria's independence and met with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

Syrian sent to Iran in hostage crisis

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim will send Syrian diplomat Adib Daoudy to Iran "shortly" to discuss completing the work of a U.N. commission seeking settlement of the Iranian-American hostage crises, a U.N. spokesman said Saturday.

The spokesman, Rudolf Stajduhar, said Waldheim was acting "with the agreement of all concerned" after talks with Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh and Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie.

He said Daoudy, who is the adviser to Syrian President Hafez Assad, would leave for Tehran "shortly" but did not specify when. He said Waldheim hoped to get a personal report before the secretary-general returns here from Europe on May 26 or soon after.

Iranian militants have held 53 Americans hostage since last Nov. 4. In exchange for the hostages' freedom, the militants demand the return of exiled Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, now living in exile in Egypt, to stand trial on murder and corruption charges. Both the United States and the U.N. Security Council have demanded the hostages' unconditional release.

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Sondra McCarty said Daoudy had no authority to negotiate for the release of the U.S. hostages and his job was "entirely exploratory at this stage."

"We hope that he (Daoudy) will be able to determine if the Iranian authorities are ready to go ahead on the basis of the agreed mandate," she said. "But there's no indication of

Secretary of state home from Europe

Muskie 'exhilarated' by new job

BANGOR, Maine (AP) — After three decades in politics, Ed Muskie finds the diplomatic life a bit like taking his springtime swim in the chill Atlantic off the shores of Maine. "It's horrible until I get out," he says, "and then I feel stimulated and exhilarated."

The new secretary of state is home from Europe, his inaugural trip, betraying no second thoughts whatever over spurning a long and secure Senate career. His first eight days on the job, he repeated, were "very exhilarating."

It's a fast pace, especially at age 66, and Muskie showed it at times. He stumbled over a word, here and there, in public. And he fell fast asleep Thursday at ceremonies in Vienna marking Austria's independence.

Mostly, Muskie was stimulated. His most bracing hours were the three he spent in the Austrian capital Friday, one-on-one with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko. Only translators were present.

It was a blunt discussion about the Red Army's occupation of Afghanistan and the slide in U.S.-Soviet relations. In a way, it was what Muskie calls "a diplomatic minuet," with the two men getting to know each other — carefully.

At lunch, before they got down to business, Gromyko confided that the Kremlin had no sure line on the new American secretary of state. Muskie chuckled aboard his Air Force jet as he flew home to Maine: "He said we've been trying to find out who Muskie is. We read some stories that he's tough, hard, has a horrible temper. We've got some stories that he's calm, relaxed and patient. We don't know who he is."

Muskie said he told the cagey Russian: "I hope you never resolve that doubt in your mind."

Actually, Muskie's pleased with his temperamental reputation, earned by bellowing at Senate aides and tossing towels and ashtrays in frustration.

"I've always found it useful for others to think of me as an intimidating sort of fellow," he told the press corps on the flight to Europe last week.

He didn't have to talk about his political instincts. They became obvious, and put him in sharp contrast to his predecessor, Cyrus Vance, a careful former Wall Street lawyer who hedged what he had to say and said very little.

Muskie gave several on-the-record interviews and dealt with most issues directly, although he barely discussed the most intriguing event — the talks with Gromyko.

Past midnight, in Brussels, Muskie stopped his car in the Grand Place after a stylized dinner with West European foreign ministers to have some ice cream.

Muskie ran into tourists from Connecticut and they chatted before he headed to his hotel.

LeBaron directed assassination squad, ex-follower and son say

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A former follower and a son of Ervil LeBaron say the polygamist leader sent an assassination squad drawn from his Church of the Lamb of God to execute "false prophets" — or be executed themselves.

LeBaron, a tall, gaunt man of 55, went on trial in state court last week on murder charges in the slaying of a former follower, a son of the slain man, in the MVAH. — SLAYING VLLRED, ONCE LEADER ON ABOUT 3,?? POLYGAMISTS.

LeBaron calls himself the "legal patriarch of Israel," saying he has sole authority to separate good people from evil. He has ordered the killings of rival polygamist leaders.

Many Utah polygamists say LeBaron and his followers have given polygamy a bad name. Most polygamist groups are fundamentalist Mormons who broke with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, which excommunicates members for plural marriages.

LeBaron is also charged with directing an unsuccessful plot to kill his brother, Verlan LeBaron, a polygamist leader who is expected to testify at the trial. Ervil was convicted in Mexico of masterminding the 1972 slaying of another brother, Joel, but the conviction was later reversed.

Former LeBaron follower Don Sullivan — who traded a guilty plea and testimony for a reduced charge and probation — told the court of meetings in three cities where he said Ervil plotted the murders of his brother Verlan and Allred.

He said Ervil ordered two female followers to "walk calmly" into Allred's office and "shoot him until he's dead." Ervil also wanted several male followers to attend Allred's funeral in disguise, Sullivan said, where they were to shoot Verlan.

"We were to use automatic weapons and to have a backup pistol and if anybody got in our way, we were to shoot them down, whether it was a man or a woman," Sullivan testified.

If the mission failed, members of the assassination team would be killed, Sullivan said. "We were under a death penalty if we backed out or didn't kill Verlan or left the church."

Sullivan told the 12 jurors security was too tight at Allred's funeral and the assassination team called off the attempt on his life and fled in fear of their own lives.

Ervil's 17-year-old son,

Isaac, on Friday corroborated much of Sullivan's testimony. His voice faltering, seemingly searching for words, the youth described a meeting in April 1977 in Dallas where he said his father convinced followers the "false prophets shouldn't live."

Defense attorney John Hill tried to halt the teen-ager's testimony, say he was not a competent witness. Third District Judge Ernest Baldwin overruled the motion.

Hill contends Sullivan was "military leader" of Ervil's sect and planned the slayings with other militant followers. Sullivan denied the allegations.

Ervil, Joel and Verlan LeBaron led rival groups, and Joel once evicted Ervil from his Church of the Firstborn of the Fullness of Time. When Joel was killed, leadership of the group went to Verlan.

Severe storm pelts Texas Panhandle

By the Associated Press

A severe thunderstorm driven by high gusty winds drenched parts of the Panhandle on Saturday and pelted it with large hail while most of Texas basked under sunny skies.

Late afternoon temperatures were in the 80s over most of the state, but mercury limbed into the 90s in far South Texas and eased only as high as the 70s in parts of the Panhandle.

The afternoon extremes ranged from 98 at both

Laredo and McAllen to 72 at Dalhart and Amarillo.

Forecasters called predicted skies would be partly cloudy and warm over most of the state through Monday with some morning cloudiness in South Texas and a chance of afternoon thunderstorms in the eastern half of the state Sunday.

EXTENDED FORECAST
WEST TEXAS — Chance of thunderstorms through Thursday. No important temperature changes. Highs mostly 80s except 90s Big Bend Valleys. Lows in the 50s except 60s southeast.

EPA warns of possible chromosome damages

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government expressed serious concern Saturday that persons living near the Love Canal chemical dump in upstate New York may have suffered chromosome damage that could lead to birth defects in their children.

The Environmental Protection Agency announced that a new study has shown rare chromosomal aberrations in 11 of 36 persons in the area. Chromosomes carry the genes that convey hereditary characteristics.

The Hooker Chemical Company, which owned the dump until it was closed in 1953, said the study was "inconclusive" and further tests must be made.

become necessary," Mrs. Blum told a news conference.

Mrs. Blum said federal and state officials are laying the groundwork for possible evacuation of about 700 families remaining in the Love Canal area if the new findings are upheld Wednesday.

The one-time chemical dump was bought in the 1950s by the city's board of education, and a school, playground and hundreds of homes were built near and on top of it.

In the late 1970s, toxic chemicals began seeping to the surface. In 1978, the government relocated the 239 families who lived closest to the dump site.

EPA staff members went to the Love Canal area in Niagara Falls, N.Y., on Saturday and advised the residents of their findings. They emphasized that further tests must be made to gauge the seriousness of the problem and that it is not certain the chromosome damage will lead to birth defects.

A statement issued by Hooker Chemical, a subsidiary of Occidental Petroleum Corp., on Saturday called the EPA study "preliminary and uncorroborated," and said it provides no definite medical conclusions.

Barbara Blum, assistant EPA administrator, told reporters that the new study by Biogenetics Corp., of Houston warrants immediate further investigation. She said a panel of nationally known geneticists will review the study and report their conclusions by Wednesday. A long-term investigation covering a larger population sample then will be launched.

"We do not want to unduly alarm anyone. At the same time, we must be prepared to act promptly, should it

Hostages moved in Iran

Iranian authorities executed one soldier and arrested dozens more in an attempt to quell spreading unrest in the armed forces in Kurdistan and elsewhere, according to press reports in Tehran on Saturday.

The Tehran newspaper Kayhan said 14 officers and non-commissioned officers were convicted of inciting unrest by the revolutionary military court in Isfahan, 200 miles south of Tehran. Seven soldiers also were sentenced to prison terms ranging from two years to life and one man was executed for disobeying orders and causing disturbances, it was reported.

Engheleb Islami, another Tehran daily, said 38 officers and men accused of "cooperating with the counterrevolution," the term used to mean cooperating with Kurdish rebels, were arrested in the Kurdish capital of Sanandaj and sent to Tehran.

Meanwhile, the militants who seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran said they had taken American hostages to cities outside the capital in a continuing effort to head off any new rescue attempt.

Saturday was the 196th day of captivity for the 50 Americans. Their captors, in a statement broadcast by Tehran Radio, said the prisoners were taken to Ghazvin, 90 miles northwest of Tehran, and Zanjan, 155 miles northwest of Tehran. They are said to be scattered across Iran in 17 cities.

The militants and some of Iran's fundamentalist Moslem clergy want the hostages tried as spies unless deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi is returned to Iran. He was overthrown early last year and is now in exile in Egypt.

The military crackdown followed reports of a sit-in by troops in Isfahan and claims by the Kurdish rebels that soldiers are deserting in several parts of the troubled northwest, largely in protest against the Kurdish war.

Jomhori Islami, organ of the powerful Islamic Republican Party which will control the new Parliament, printed a letter from an unidentified "very reliable and important source" claiming that the army is helping the "counterrevolution."

The letter urged the government to use only revolutionary guards and reliable army troops against the Kurds, an ethnic minority seeking autonomy from the central government. The government should not trust the air force, the writer said. Many Iranian pilots were trained in the United States.

Kurdish sources told a Western reporter that government forces executed 14 Kurds in Sanandaj. No date was given and the execution was not confirmed by the government. Pars said two Kurdish autonomists were executed in Hamadan on Friday.

Unusual city hall hanging

STRUTHERS, Ohio (AP) — Some city halls have portraits of founding fathers gracing the walls, but this industrial city southeast of Youngstown is a little more upbeat.

City Council has placed a photograph of actress Sally Struthers in a glass case in the city building lobby.

Councilmen Joe Velosich and Walter Zaluski are responsible. The two wrote to Miss Struthers and asked if her real name was the same as that of the city.

The star of the former television series "All in the Family" answered the query with a package of autographed photographs of herself; one for each of the eight council members and a ninth, larger one, for the City Hall.

Ordinary gathering-almost

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — It would have been just like any other gathering of World War II buddies, except that these veterans now in their 60s and 70s are women.

It was almost 38 years ago when the 150 young enlisted women and three officers marched off a troop train here to go on active duty at Fort Sam Houston.

Tens of thousands of women have followed them into the Army, but in late 1942 these new soldiers were a novelty.

Almost 80 showed up for the weekend convention.

Casino helps with heart

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Thanks to the help of two Las Vegas casinos and a former heart transplant patient, a 26-year-old woman has received a new heart.

Loretta Lynn Jacovino, 26, received the heart of Steven Strong, 20, of Glendale, Ariz., in an operation Friday night, officials at the University of Arizona Health Sciences Center said. Strong was killed in a traffic accident.

"There were no complications, she looks good and her condition is stable," said Dr. Jack Copeland, head of the transplant team.

Norman "Dutch" Tarr, Arizona's first heart transplant patient, raised more than $12,000 for Mrs. Jacovino.

Two Las Vegas casinos then said they would each contribute $20,000 towards the operation.

Lyndon Johnson supported

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — A Coe College student, who says he thinks it is wrong to place so much blame for the Vietnam war on the late President Lyndon Johnson, has received an autographed book and letter from Lady Bird Johnson.

After doing research on the Southeast Asian war, student Mark Jeffrey Klohn recently wrote Mrs. Johnson a letter.

"I'm sorry people blame your husband for the Vietnam war. In time, I hope people will realize they're wrong," Klohn wrote. He signed the letter with a prized souvenir he had received — a gold LBJ pen with the presidential seal.

Air smuggling on the Gulf Coast

Bad guys may be winning battle

HOUSTON (AP) — An air battle is being waged along the Gulf Coast, and U.S. Customs officials say the bad guys are probably winning.

"The beauty of smuggling by airplane," says Don Ackerman, head of the Houston area U.S. Customs Air Patrol Division, "is that there are only two times when you can catch him — on pickup and on landing."

"We don't," he says, "shoot them down in the air and you can't fly up beside a guy and put handcuffs on him."

Ackerman says air smuggling has increased drastically over the past 10 years and frankly admits that his air patrol division has neither the men nor money to keep up with the well-financed smugglers.

Air smuggling — primarily narcotics, but also guns, electronic gear and pearls — "is a big business," says Ackerman.

"In the cheapest venture, someone has a lot of money up front."

But that money can be quickly recovered, Ackerman says. A small aircraft capable of hauling 200 pounds of quality marijuana valued at $500 a pound may take in $100,000 for one trip.

"A lot of banks are robbed for less money," he says.

Money — and the lack of it — is the primary reason Ackerman and other Customs pilots feel the smugglers are ahead in the game.

"In pilot skill, we can match them," says one Customs pilot based at an airport near Houston. "In every other category, they've got us beat."

The pilot, who asked not to be named, looked out a window toward a small airplane tied down next to a taxi strip. "That plane came to us in a box," he says. "It's military surplus."

He points to a map on the wall that covers a large portion of South Texas, including Houston, and says, "and that's the area we have to cover with it."

"There are about 15,000 pilots in the Houston area alone," he says, "and another 35,000 in Dallas-Fort Worth. This whole damn area is one big airstrip. We can't watch the airports, much less the country roads."

The Customs aircraft he flies has a top speed of about 140 knots. Watching a Cessna Citation jet thunder down the runway, the pilot sighs and says, "There's no way we can even touch him."

The Houston base is one of three in the five-state Region Six Customs area. There are five planes based in San Antonio and a like number in El Paso.

"Half of these," says Ackerman, "are planes we have seized after arrests." The aircraft range from surplus jet trainers to single-engine planes.

"Standardization has been one of our difficulties," says Ackerman, adding that some of the highly sophisticated tracking gear used by Customs pilots cannot be adapted to all planes in the fleet.

Infra-red sensors, airborne radar and electronic surveillance equipment help the Customs pilots sniff out the smugglers, but the percentage of planes caught is pitifully low.

"We get less than one percent of the planes that land," says the pilot.

Ackerman refused to give an estimate, but said he had heard as many as 300 planes a day landed in the Region Six area, which includes Texas, two parishes in Louisiana, New Mexico, Colorado and Oklahoma.

Compounding the problem of a vast area to patrol and a lack of money is the type of pilot. "Customs agents must deal with."

"First, he is a good pilot," says Ackerman. "The good ones survive and the bad ones don't. He's been in the business for a long time, maybe been flying since World War II and he's smuggled a lot of things both ways."

"He has to fly an aircraft at maximum load in the dark and land on a dirt strip. He is generally older. We don't have many young squirts flying these airplanes."

Many of the pilots are ex-military, some fly com-mercially and most have a long history of flying.

To make matters worse, the smuggler may even be audacious enough to file a routine flight plan. This gives him the look of a legitimate pilot in a business where Customs agents look for the unusual.

Ackerman says more and more air smugglers are bringing in hard drugs, as well as marijuana. For example, a pilot may contract for a 1,000-pound load of Colombian marijuana, then buy two pounds of cocaine on the side.

The marijuana would be worth about $639,000 and the cocaine worth around $500,000. And, as Ackerman points out, "the complications of acquiring coke (cocaine) and getting rid of coke are much less than grass."

Two such loads of cocaine would make up almost half of the yearly budget for the Region Six air patrol operation. Ackerman says about $1 million is spent on the airplanes and another $1.5 million on salaries.

Ackerman says that the air smuggling of hard drugs is also on the increase. He notes the seizure last year in

Magic led Lakers take NBA title

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Man was 3,000 miles away, nursing a sprained ankle in Los Angeles, but the Lakers still found the Magic touch they needed to win the National Basketball Association championship.

"Kareem Abdul-Jabbar is the Man on this team," said Lakers rookie Earvin "Magic" Johnson. "He wasn't able to be here, so I knew I had to take over."

And take over he did, just as he took over last winter in leading Michigan State to the NCAA championship.

With the 7-foot-2 Abdul-Jabbar nursing a sprained ankle in Los Angeles, Johnson took over center stage and shone in the spotlight. He scored a career-high 42 points, grabbed 15 rebounds and handed out 7 assists to lead the Lakers to a 123-107 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers Friday night and a 4-2 win in the best-of-seven championship series.

"Magic played like Houdini out there tonight," said Lakers Coach Paul Westhead. "He was Mr. Opportunity himself."

It was an opportunity Johnson relished. "I love pressure," said the 6-foot-8 Johnson, a babe in the NBA redwoods at the tender age of 21. "Without Kareem, I knew I had to score, run things and get the job done. I'm glad I was in this situation. I think I proved a few things."

One thing Johnson and the rest of the Lakers proved, in winning their first title since 1972 and only the second in the 30 years since the franchise moved from Minneapolis to Los Angeles, is that they are far more than a one-man show.

Westhead likened them to a diamond surrounded by rubies, and Friday night they proved that even without the diamond, the rubies could shine.

"That was the best basketball played against us all year," said Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham, who escorted his entire team to the Laker locker room to congratulate the new champions.

"They had a lot to prove," added Cunningham. "Everyone said they were 'Jabbar's team,' and they had nothing to lose, since they always had a seventh game to fall back on. But they proved they were not a one-man team. They put on the greatest performance I've ever seen."

Westhead moved Johnson from guard to center in place of Abdul-Jabbar, but really the Magic Man played all over the court.

"We moved him between center and point guard on offense, and on defense he played some forward, too," said Westhead.

Cunningham put it more succinctly, saying, "Johnson completely dominated the game."

The Sixers came out flat and the Lakers reeled off the first seven points. Los Angeles led 32-29 after the first quarter, fell behind by as many as eight but climbed back to a 60-60 halftime tie.

Then the Sixers came out flat once again, and this time the Lakers scored 14 straight — six by forward Jamaal Wilkes, whose 37-point night was overshadowed by Johnson's heroics, and four each by Johnson and Michael Cooper. The Sixers, led by Julius Erving, closed the gap to two on four occasions during the final period but could never pull even.

Instead, it was the Lakers who pulled away. "It was too much for us to come back," said Cunningham. "When we got close, Wilkes and Johnson beat us."

Amazingly, the Lakers outrebounded the Sixers 32-36, nullifying Philadelphia's inside game and forcing the Sixers to shoot from the perimeter. As a result, they outscored Philadelphia 33-13 from the foul line.

"They had everyone under the basket and we had to go to a perimeter game," said Erving. "We lost patience and discipline. They beat us in every phase of the game. They anticipated our strategy, took away our inside game and took us out of our rhythm."

"Rebounding was the difference in the whole series," said Johnson.

"We controlled the boards and played good defense. And we had to keep offensive pressure on them. We had to push it up quickly, go in and keep coming."

Johnson made sure the Lakers did just that with a performance that earned him the series' Most Valuable Player award by a 4-3 vote over Abdul-

Jabbar. But Johnson's play came as no surprise to Westhead.

"I knew E.J. was going to be there," said Westhead, who a year ago coached at LaSalle College, went to the Lakers as an assistant last summer and became head coach when Jack McKinney was hurt in a bicycle accident early in the season. "I didn't know about the rest, but I knew that whenever we needed it, he'd give it to us."

How? "A few months ago we went on a road trip to Kansas City and Milwaukee and he just cleaned house," said Westhead. "He had a couple of great games. Our guys stepped back and said, 'Young Buck has arrived.'"

He certainly has, joining Henry Bibby and Bill Russell as the only players to win NCAA and NBA titles in consecutive years. How do the two compare?

"This is it!" replied the ebullient Johnson. "This is the climax. There's no better championship than the NBA world championship."

Then his thoughts turned to the teammate who wasn't there, who could only watch on television at his Bel Air, Calif., home as the Lakers completed the title quest that began on Oct. 12, 98 games and more than seven months ago.

"We did it for him," Johnson said of Abdul-Jabbar. "He carried us this far. I'm just sorry he couldn't be here. I want to send my thanks and my love to him."

Kareem lauds Lakers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kareem Abdul-Jabbar was at home Friday night, watching the rest of his teammates on the Los Angeles Lakers beat the Philadelphia 76ers 123-107 to win the National Basketball Association championship.

The Lakers' victory didn't surprise the slightly injured Abdul-Jabbar, but he said it still was "incredible."

"Wasn't that 'Magic' (Johnson) something?" he said, referring to the rookie who replaced him at center. "He just took over the game at both ends of the court. The whole Laker team outplayed them in general, but Magic was fantastic, just fantastic."

Abdul-Jabbar was out of action for the big game, having sprained an ankle in Wednesday night's Lakers' victory in Game Five. But Abdul-Jabbar said he would have been ready for a seventh game Sunday — if it had been necessary.

"You bet I'd have played, but the way 'Magic' and the team played, they took care of things," he said.

Quebec federalists seek end to separatist option

MONTREAL (AP) — Quebec's "federalists," confident they will win this week's referendum and keep the French-speaking province within Canada, focused their efforts Saturday on making their victory big enough to bury the separatist option for years to come.

In Tuesday's referendum, Quebecers will vote "yes" or "no" on whether to give their provincial government, controlled by the separatist Parti Quebecois, a mandate to negotiate a form of secession from the rest of English-speaking Canada.

The 80-percent French majority in Quebec, a province of 6 million people, has complained for generations that it has been held down culturally and economically by Canada's English-speaking majority.

The historic debate has engrossed an entire society, even overshadowing interest in the Stanley Cup hockey playoffs. Families have become debate halls. "Oui" and "Non" banners flap from balconies everywhere in Montreal's crisp spring breeze.

The latest opinion poll gives the pro-Canada federalists 49 percent of the vote and the separatist side 37 percent, with the remaining 14 percent either undecided or refusing to answer.

But it also shows that among French speakers, 45 percent would vote "yes" and 40 percent "no." In other words, the road to Quebec independence would be blocked by the province's English-speaking minority, which is voting "no" almost solidly.

Many in Quebec are concerned that this ethnic split will arouse new French bitterness, potentially violent, against the "Angloes" and in favor of separation at any price. A relatively narrow "no" victory would leave separatism a live option on the Quebec scene.

Analysts estimate that an overall "no" vote of more than 60 percent would be needed Tuesday to signify that a majority of French speakers had also rejected the independence plan.

In a search for more French votes, Claude Ryan, chief of the province's major opposition party, the Liberals, and leader of the "no" forces, plunged into the French heartland Saturday, campaigning in Quebec City, the provincial capital 165 miles northeast of here.

"We're aiming at a much higher total (vote) ... because we want to avoid the kind of equivocal interpretation which is being suggested," Ryan told reporters Friday.

Tens of thousands of "oui" and "non" volunteer workers, meanwhile, were canvassing city neighborhoods and rural villages across the vast province, Canada's largest.

South Korean military consolidates power

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea's military command consolidated its power today, extending martial law, banning all political activity, arresting the leader of the largest party and several prominent dissident leaders, and closing universities throughout the country.

The announcement followed a week of violent anti-government demonstrations for democratic reform in the pro-Western nation that has been under autocratic rule for nearly two decades.

A spokesman for the civilian government announced shortly after midnight that martial law had been extended throughout the country, and minutes later, the martial law command issued its first proclamation, closing schools and banning all political gatherings, apparently including the National Assembly session scheduled for Tuesday.

The proclamation also said that "any slanderous remarks against former and present chiefs of staff will be strictly punished."

Among those reported arrested were Kim Jong-pil, head of the Democratic Republican Party, the nation's largest party, which had been led by longtime President Park Chung-hee, who was assassinated last October; Kim Dae-jung, a former presidential candidate and Park's best known opponent, and other dissidents including four Protestant ministers and two professors.

It was believed the military still would technically report to President Choi Kyu-hah, who replaced Park on an interim basis after the assassination last Oct. 26, but that it had superseded the rest of the civilian government. The developments seemed to place Lt. Gen. Chun Doo-hwan, the nation's military strongman, in control.

The military said it acted because of the "escalating disturbances" and because of alleged North Korean troop movements. No such movements were confirmed by U.S. forces stationed in the country.

Student demonstrators had demanded the resignation of Chun, head of the Defense Security Command and of the powerful KCIA, the lifting of martial law and free elections, and on Saturday, the Democratic Republicans said they would push Choi to lift martial law and hold elections.

The party, previously led by Park, thus joined the major opposition party, the New Democrats, in backing the students' demands.

Kim Jong-pil had been expected to make the case for reform during a meeting with President Choi sometime this weekend and at Tuesday's Assembly session, the New Democratic Party had been expected to introduce a resolution to end martial law and hold elections.

The developments early today came hours after about 300 riot police, acting on orders of the martial law command, raided a university and arrested 25 student leaders discussing ways to press their campaign for democratic reform.

Another 2,000 riot police surrounded Ewha University, where student representatives from 55 Korean universities were meeting, and several other students were detained briefly.

More suspects in Alabama bombings

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — An avowed racist has been convicted of bombing a black church, but a prosecuting attorney says there still are other suspects who may never be brought to trial in connection with the more than 50 bombings that occurred during Birmingham's bloody years of racial violence.

That fear-ridden era was resurrected last week when J.B. Stoner was sentenced to 10 years in prison for a June 1958 dynamite blast that shattered windows at the Bethel Baptist church.

Although more than 50 bombing attempts of churches and synagogues in Birmingham were recorded during the late 1950s and early 60s, only two suspects have been brought to trial — Stoner and Robert Edward Chambliss.

Chambliss, a 73-year-old former Ku Klux Klansman, was convicted of murder in November 1977 in connection with the 1963 bombing of the Sixteenth Street Baptist Church, in which four young black girls were killed.

The Stoner conviction Wednesday closed the book on the 1958 bombing of the Bethel Baptist Church, according to Deputy Jefferson County District Attorney Burton Dunn, coprosecutor in the three-day trial.

But there are at least two other suspects in the Sixteenth Street church bombing who remain at large because of a lack of evidence, Dunn said. The investigation remains open, he said.

No prosecutions were brought in the Birmingham

Principal John Smith to be honored today

A public reception is being held today from 3 to 5 p.m. to honor John F. Smith, principal of Big Spring High School at Fellowship Hall of the First Christian Church, Tenth and Goliad.

The public is invited to celebrate Smith's 20th year at the school and his promotion to the position of Director of Special Administrative Services.

The reception is being hosted by members of the High School faculty.

Born March 25, 1923 in Grapeland, he graduated from Grapeland High School. He received his BS degree in June 1947 from North Texas State Teachers College (NTSU). He also received his masters degree August, 1955 from NTSU.

From 1947 to 1950 he served as teacher and coach at Aqua Dulce ISD and Alice ISD. After two years of military service he became principal of Hebronville High School. In 1959-60 he served as principal of Devine High School and then moved to Big Spring High School as principal.

He served with the United States Marine Corps from 1943-46 during World War Two and again from June 1951-52 during the Korean War. He attained the rank of First Lieutenant.

Large brass cowbell donated to museum

Two school groups visited the museum last week. Bauer Elementary, with 48 first and second graders with their teachers, Karen Helton and Esther Hernandez. Bauer has another group scheduled to tour the museum next week accompanied by their teacher, Mary Helen Garcia.

Coahoma elementary with 81 fifth graders and their teachers and sponsors: Cliff Ferguson, Pat Blackwell, Sue Tindol, Jo Nell Daniels and Wilma Dorsey.

Tourists from Oklahoma and New Mexico were among last week's museum visitors. Also, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Powell of San Angelo, former Big Spring residents.

Recent new and renewal museum members include Mrs. L.C. Madison and Mr. and Mrs. George T. Thomas.

A large brass cowbell, a prize won by Mr. Clay Bedell in an early day bronc riding contest, was recently donated to Heritage Museum, by Mrs. Helen Miller, daughter of Clayton Stewart, early day rancher, for whom Bedell worked during the early 1900's.

Clay Bedell was a typical early day bronc buster and cowhand. He came to Howard County with his father, I.E. Bedell when he was five years old. He worked as a cowhand and breaking wild horses for early day ranchers, among whom were W.R. Settles and Clayton Stewart.

Clay Bedell is one of the folks left around who has seen the world change from horseback, buggy, and train travel to fast cars and fast planes — even traveling to the moon! But he says, "If I live I'll be 87 years old June 24, and I sure don't expect to go to the moon!"

Registration for classes at BSHS scheduled June 6

Registration for summer classes at Big Spring High School will take place between the hours of 8 a.m. and 4 p.m., June 6 at the high school.

Coahoma program is for gifted students

"Awake" sharpens sharpies

By MICKIE DICKSON
 Awake means not sleeping? True, but "AWAKE" also is an acronym for a program for gifted children of Coahoma Independent School District. The name stands for "Awareness of the World Around Us Through Knowledge and Education," a program established in the fall of 1978. AWAKE served 66 students in grades kindergarten through eight in the 1979-80 school year.

Students come to the AWAKE classroom one-half day each week and spend the remainder of their time in regular classroom work. AWAKE students are taught by Alleen (Mrs. J.O.) Bohannon and Marilyn (Mrs. Bob) Read, who attended a summer institute on gifted and talented students the summer of 1978 in the University of Connecticut at Storrs, Conn., the only Texans among 300 teachers from all over the world.

Students for the program are identified through testing and teacher recommendation as having outstanding abilities in the following areas, singly or in combination: intellectual ability, specific academic aptitude, creative or productive thinking and leadership ability. AWAKE students must maintain high grade averages in all other classroom work. Because these students acquire basic skills in less time than average, they need to spend more of their school time in the higher skills of the application of knowledge.

AWAKE seeks to enrich the two areas of self-concept and the thinking ability of each student's life. Complex thinking and feeling processes are developed through individual and group activities in the areas of problem solving, creative thinking, divergent thinking, logic, research, communication, self-understanding and awareness development.

Self-confidence is developed as each child is encouraged to achieve his or her potential, and to develop satisfying relationships with others. Students then become self-motivated, task-oriented producers and life-long learners.

These goals were realized in part by the production of the Shakespearean Festival last night at Coahoma Elementary School which grew out of a study of the middle ages. AWAKE students in grades 1-6 presented three of Shakespeare's plays, "Hamlet," "The Taming of the Shrew" and "Julius Caesar" to an enthusiastic audience. Publishers of "Wide Awake," the Coahoma school magazine, seventh and eighth grade girls, served as ushers, and older students served as the stage crew.

The curriculum of AWAKE is decided on in part by the interests of students themselves. Since thinking skills can be developed in any setting through carefully planned activities, the AWAKE curriculum is based on studies and skills students WANT to learn, but which are not necessarily a part of the regular school curriculum. Emphasis is placed on the development of skills in investigative methods and the strategies for exploration and inquiry in their fields of interest.

One way this is achieved in the AWAKE room is through mini-studies. These are short term, in depth studies designed to explore specific learning objectives in a field of interest. Through mini-studies, AWAKE students have explored such areas as speleology (the study of caves), archaeology, oceanography, growing crystals and the cardiovascular system.

In the spring grades 1-6 began a study of the Middle Ages which will be expanded in the fall because of its popularity and the many things students have found they want to learn about that time in history. The students learned about feudalism, knighthood, armor, heraldry, how vassals paid homage to their lords, the minstrels and the stories they sang in court, the monasteries and the monks who handcopied books. The AWAKE classroom was decorated like a medieval castle by teachers and parents, including a seven-foot gatehouse and a suit of armor. Included for interest is the study of calligraphy lettering).

Students visited the First United Methodist Church in Big Spring, to see stained glass windows and to hear a program of medieval music played on a pipe organ. Through simulation, independent inquiry, creative problem solving and dramatic improvisation, AWAKE students are exploring some of the values and feelings of the times. Through this they can see how life changes and how it remains the same over the centuries.

The AWAKE resource room is set up to accommodate small group and

DEATH OF HAMLET'S FATHER — First and second grade AWAKE students of Coahoma Elementary School re-enacting the death scene in "Hamlet." individual activities. Learning and interest centers on topics are developed and research materials gathered by teachers and parent volunteers for each study. The cardboard castle in the AWAKE room now holds reading materials and learning centers about the Middle Ages. Students can enter through the seven-foot gate house created by two parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. Ball, who just believed they needed it.

Seventh and eighth graders interested in writing for publication produce a school-community magazine, WIDE AWAKE. Through this publication these students learn the skills of interviewing, journalistic writing, typing, the taking and developing of printable photographs, darkroom techniques, design, lay-out, record keeping and organizing information. Students are responsible for sales and business records also in this real-life learning situation. WIDE AWAKE has as its goal promoting interaction between Coahoma schools and the community. The Spring issue of WIDE AWAKE will be on sale the week of May 19.

As a spin-off from AWAKE curriculum studies, opportunities are given to students to explore topics of their own choice, subject to teacher-parent approval. In independent studies they develop questions to be answered or problems to be solved plus an outline and timeline for organizing their information. Topics are researched by the students using as many resources as possible, such as books, periodicals, interviews, tapes, films, filmstrips, visits to museums, planetariums, libraries, etc. Students then pull together their information and organize it in a logical manner to answer their questions. By this time the questions have been refined to higher levels and pupils are ready to design a product to show what they have learned. Each student is asked to create something which is new to him. The product should be appropriate to the study and to the audience who shares in it.

The teachers and student then evaluate the study and practice presenting it. The last step is the most exciting of all and is really fun when the student shares his or her learning with an interested audience.

Several civic, professional and service organizations in Big Spring and Coahoma have invited AWAKE students to share their independent studies with them.

Alleen Bohannon was coordinator of the Shakespearean Festival and co-director with Dale Ferguson, fourth grade teacher, of "Julius Caesar." "Hamlet" was directed by Martha Spell, sixth grade Junior High teacher. "The Taming of the Shrew" was directed by Enola Bailard, mother of Kent who played Petruchio in the play Mrs. Ballard has a degree in drama Gingerbread and lemonade were served at the festival just like they were in Shakespeare's time.

The support of the community is the backbone of the AWAKE program," said Alleen Bohannon. "Last year 96 people were directly involved, working directly with teachers and students in the program, in addition to other classroom teachers, who come to the AWAKE room to teach something they are skilled in while AWAKE teachers look after their classrooms for them."

The school board has funded the program locally and principals and administrators have helped with planning and implementing it.

The state of Texas is beginning to support nominally a few exemplary gifted programs in the state. Coahoma AWAKE received some state funding. Teachers of the Coahoma program were invited to the State Convention on Gifted Education March 28-29 in San Antonio to present the program to 600 teachers.

The Coahoma Historical Society helped with financing by making a school history quilt, selling memberships to the society and donating some of the proceeds to the AWAKE program. The society is also helping to gather a school history which is being published in sections in "WIDE AWAKE." The publishers hope to publish a school history book someday.

Publisher Tom Watson of the Herald along with Carla Walker, Marg Carpenter, Bob Rogers and Robbi Crow helped teachers and AWAKE students in the process of learning how to make a newspaper magazine. The Herald prints WIDE AWAKE, and the whole class goes to the Herald to watch it being printed.

Ten students and the two teachers attended a photography class twice a week at Howard College to learn photography and dark room procedures in 1978.

Howard College personnel from Dr. Charles Hays, president and Steve Lacey, journalism instructor and head of publications to the librarian.

have assisted AWAKE and opened HC facilities to them for their use.

Jim Baum of KBYG radio shared his interviewing skills with students and supplied publicity.

Joe Reed, Helen Gladden and other Big Spring Independent School District personnel, helped with the Science Fair through judging entries and encouraging the students.

Coahoma Lions Club and Downtown Lions Club of Big Spring provided outlets for student presentations of independent study.

Many Coahoma School alumni were resource persons for instruction and contributed to science and publication studies.

Anita Ball organized a community talent mining search along with several AWAKE parent volunteers to go into churches, service organizations and Senior Citizen groups to discover and catalogue people with talents they were willing to share with AWAKE students.

The AWAKE Parent-Association Organization, composed of parents, classroom teachers and friends of the AWAKE program have provided assistance with money-raising projects such as their Fall Book Round-up and by sponsoring field trip studies, also helping stage the Shakespearean Festival.

Field trips taken this year by AWAKE students include a trip to the Odessa College production of "The Hobbit" Nov. 17 at the Globe Theater and the Shakespearean Festival presentation of "Julius Caesar" Feb. 28 by New York actors. The Petroleum Museum at Odessa to visit the Permian Sea display and extend their learning about ancient sea life was made by three different groups in March and April.

Grades 1-2 continued their study of entomology with a trip to Comanche Trail Park May 8. This group visited the Ceramics Center in December 1979.

All AWAKE students visited the Blakemore Planetarium in Midland building interest for next year's study of astronomy.

Trips in 1978 included a visit to Sonora Caverns after a study of speleology in November. The Genealogy Library in Odessa was visited by the sixth grade following a study of genealogy. Seventh and eighth grades visited a special exhibit from the Smithsonian Institute at the Presidential Museum in Odessa.

AWAKE students visited the photography, publications, science and nursing departments at Howard College, and used some of the facilities. In addition research was done in the HC Library.

During the study of Oceanography, the students corresponded with oceanographer Dr. Larry Don McKinney, son of Mr. Mrs. Don McKinney, Big Spring District. Kinney sent photographs and answered student's questions. Samples of ocean water were obtained from Lake Jackson and Corpus Christi for comparison and analysis.

Sea Grant materials were obtained from Texas A&M University entitled "Investigating the Marine Environment and Its Resources."

In addition, the AWAKE program sponsored Coahoma's first Science Fair which had 175 entries.

A few West Texas towns have limited gifted programs such as Ft. Stockton, Kermit, Monahans, Snyder and Odessa. Malone-Hogan has Kindergarten Days

Small beings invade hospital

DOCTORS JUDGE — Kid's doctors (pediatricians) judged the pre-school children's posters, aided by their wives. The Dr.'s Mrs.' go through the hundreds of posters, narrowing the selection down to 20. Dr. Bernard Zilberg, Dr. Ray Owen and Dr. Mark Schwarz made the final selection in the classroom between office hours at hospital rounds. An-Binh Chau, Lakeview Kindergarten, pictured between them won first prize.

You can expect 534 Kindergarteners not to be unanimous, right? Four, five and some six year olds hopped, skipped, or inched into Malone-Hogan Hospital this week as the Kindergarten days, an annual event. One came reluctantly, saying he wished he hadn't come.

Mrs. Heith says that it now requires two full days and part of another to accommodate area Kindergarten schools, who count the field trip to the hospital as one of their best. The days are scheduled in May of each year, a time when children are becoming restless at being confined to the classroom. It provides pre-school children a chance to get out, and teachers with a unique teaching tool.

Like all good stories, it has a happy ending. The child wakes up in the hospital room, with loving parents standing by, and ice cream for his sore throat. The doctor comes in to check the patient, and sends the family home.

award of $50 for Lakeview School. Second Place winner is Lakeview's Lorenzo Yanez, son of Arturo and Rosa Yanez, for an additional cash prize of $30. Third Place went to St. Mary's Episcopal School. Ricky Reimen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Reimen, earned the third place prize of $20 for the school.

Members of the cast were Letha Duke, R.N., Tim Salazar, Dene Anderson, Brenda Randall, Margaret Gamble, L.V.N., Knack Cox, E.M.T., Craig Shipman, Ken Randall, Kelly Gross, Melissa Brown, Roz Carlton, Cheryl Newton, Bobby Baker, Joyce Mills, R.N., Rosa Alvarez, Juanita Muniz, Jo Ann Permenter, Valerie Richardson, and Ishmael Bihl. Carmen Phillips, R.N., operating room volunteer in charge of the poster contest, says. The winning posters are framed in colorful frames, and given to the student at the close of Kindergarten Days.

"I always enjoy hearing their comments as they stream into the hospital," Mrs. R.L. Heith, volunteer, says. And this year's prize quote came from a stoic 5-year-old, who said upon entering the hospital, "I wish I hadn't come."

In a "play-like" experience, staff members who ordinarily see the children when they come for a tonsillectomy, perform before 75 to 80 wide-eyed kindergarteners at a time. The skit, "Let's Pretend a Tonsillectomy," takes the child through each step of being hospitalized, from being admitted to lab and X-ray, the operating room, and going home.

To make it a total learning experience, the volunteers sponsor pre-Kindergarten Days poster competition among the schools. This year's theme, "We are America's Health Team," had its usual doctors, nurses, and operating room scenes crayoned into posters, but for the first time kindergarteners imagined dentists, bone doctors, nursing homes, and veterinarians as part of the health team.

The posters were judged by three pediatricians, Drs. Ray Owen, Mark Schwarz, and Bernard Zilberg, and their wives. The Malone and Hogan Clinic physicians chose the poster drawn by An-Binh Chau, son of Thi Chau, as first place winner, and an

Mary Janes end year

The Mary Jane Club of Coahoma met Thursday at 9 a.m. in the home of Mrs. Don McKinney for their final meeting of the club year.

A breakfast was given and guests were Senior Citizens from the area.

Guests were seated at quartet tables in the garden room. Each table was covered with a light blue cloth and centered with a basket of daisies. Place markers were spice cans filled with dried arrangements.

Co-hostesses were Mrs. Mitchell, Earnestine Day and Frances Mason. The club adjourned until September.

Following the meal, a tour was taken of Mrs. McKinney's unique home and garden area. The group then traveled to Big Spring for a tour through the Potton House.

He stayed. Along with most of them, he became excited about "their" day at the hospital. "They begin waving and calling to us from the moment the bus pulls onto the emergency room parking area," Mrs. Heith says.

"We take your temperature to find out if you're too hot, too cold, or just right." The narrator uses a children's story approach, as the cast acts out the story. Even the part that explains the operating room nurse's face mask, and the roles of day at a time, every day. In addition to medication, physicians often advise patients with high blood pressure to stop smoking, lose weight, reduce salt in their diet, and exercise more.

Efforts to achieve good health and a longer life reflect a current trend among Americans today. People are exercising more, improving their eating habits, and giving up smoking. As a result, they feel better and are helping themselves to a healthier life.

Treatment on a daily basis, often with medication, sometimes by diet — usually for the rest of their lives — is what's required for people with high blood pressure.

There is usually no cure for the disease. But, medication is only effective each day it's taken. If patients do not understand this aspect of the treatment regimen, they may think that a lowered blood pressure means it's been cured. That's not true.

For some persons, one way to achieve a long and healthy life is to take medication regularly. That's one of the things a doctor might prescribe if a patient has high blood pressure.

When high blood pressure is not detected and treated, it makes a person especially

State PTA likes local traffic safety project

College Heights PTA's traffic safety project has been named one of the top two winners in Project Participate of the Texas Parents' and Teachers' Association.

Martha Bres, president of the Big Spring City Council PTA, reported that College Heights won the contest's projects division, while a Houston PTA won the contest's membership division.

College Heights' traffic safety project involved working with the city and school district to begin a program of adult crossing guards for three Big Spring schools which are on busy streets.

The project also involved modifications in traffic management on Goliad and in the College Heights' parking lot as well as distribution of free safety bumper stickers and a carpool matching service to help reduce congestion.

Project Participate is sponsored by Grollier Educational Services as a means of recognizing outstanding endeavors of local schools and circulating ideas which other PTA units may try.

For being a monthly winner in Project Participate, College Heights Elementary is being awarded a set of Grollier Study Skills books. The school will also receive a booklet which presents the best ideas submitted to Project Participate by PTAs across the state.

Grand prize for the two winners of the annual contest is an expense paid trip as voting delegates to the 1980 National PTA Convention in Honolulu, Hawaii. This trip has been awarded to Carol Owen who submitted College Heights' winning entry.

"We are excited that the city's school crossing guard program actually began at College Heights Monday," reported Mrs. Owen. "We feel that not just our PTA, but the whole city deserves recognition for this honor."

"All Big Spring is a winner in Project Participate," insisted Mrs. Owen, who will be attending the National PTA Convention June 12-19 as a voting delegate.

"City Manager Don Davis was the man who worked through the complexities of obtaining a grant from the Senior Texas Employment Program to fund the three crossing guards for College Heights, Goliad and Washington Schools. We are especially grateful to him for his hours spent on the crossing guard program," Mrs. Owen said.

"Not just College Heights won this honor. It was Big Spring — its city officials and legislative bodies, its school district and administrators, the local news media which covered the project, and persons from other PTAs who contributed their support to this safety undertaking," Ms. Owen emphasized.

Don't let father ruin your life

By Robert Wallace, Ed D

Dr. Wallace: I'm almost 18, a senior but I don't know if I will graduate because of my father. I do want to join the Navy and will if I can survive my home life. I hope so because last year I failed in my attempt to commit suicide.

My father is constantly yelling at me and calling me names. He refuses to allow me to go anywhere and tells me how to spend the money I earn working. I am harshly punished for the smallest things and now he is starting to hit me with his fists. He even refuses to allow me attend church.

I'm sure he needs counseling, but he won't go. Please help me. I think I'm losing my mind. — Pam, Springfield, Ohio

Pam: It's only five or six weeks until commencement. Do everything you can to keep cool, graduate and then get out. If your father even makes a fist, don't wait, move out of the house immediately. Move in with a relative or a good friend.

Don't do anything rash. Don't allow your father to ruin your life. He has already ruined his.

Dr. Wallace: I'm 14 and really like a boy but all he wants to do is have sex. I always say no and he always gets mad.

Last week I went into the hospital and he came to visit me. Instead of asking how I was, he asked me if we could have sex when I feel better.

We had a big fight and he left very angry. Do you think I'm doing the right thing by telling him so? — Kelly, Merced, Calif.

Kelly: Yes, but don't allow him to continue hounding you with his monotonous question. If he persists, tell him to "buzz-off" and mean it.

Are you sure this boy really likes you? It appears he only wants you for one thing.

The new EXTRA learning activities undertaken by Kentwood PTA this year will be program topic at College Heights' PTA meeting 7:30 p.m. Monday.

Speaker will be Shelene Roberts, president of Kentwood's PTA. She will tell how Kentwood parents have gone into action helping with extra learning experiences teachers wanted to include in their curriculums.

One activity of the EXTRA program which Mrs. Roberts will be describing is the four-week study of the law she conducted for a group of third graders who completed their course with a field trip to a trial.

An old fashioned wood watering tank planter and some spring plants will be given away to several lucky persons attending the meeting.

PTA will meet in the College Heights Cafeteria, and there will be a free baby-sitter for pre-school children.

Officers for 1980-81 will be installed. They are Brenda Powers, president; Kay Roberts, vice president; Gretchen Hatcher, secretary; and Rebecca Pierce, treasurer.

Betty Pitts is the Chamber of Commerce Artist of the Month for May.

Mrs. Pitts first studied art seriously at the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque where she studied abstract art in connection with dress design.

After marriage and raising a family on a cotton farm in Ackerly, she resumed studying with Virginia Whitten about five years ago. Mrs. Whitten taught her visual perspective and abstract fine art in all mediums, pencil, pen and ink, acrylic, oil and water color. Oil painting is the medium in which she is most comfortable.

Mrs. Pitts takes numerous photographs when traveling which serve as subject matter for original visual paintings and some abstracts.

Art museums which she has visited in various cities inspire her, as they do all amateurs, to work toward higher plateaus.

Mrs. Pitts feels that she needs to do some studying and work with life drawings. She paints and draws for her own satisfaction and has no desire to compete, show or sell her work.

Denita's Beauty Basics
Q: My complexion is clear of blemishes, but I have large pores on my nose and cheeks. Is there anything I can do to correct this?
A: Your problem indicates to me that you have oily skin, or have had at one time. Cosmetic surgery, which is a lengthy process as well as a costly one, is the only permanent means of correction. A more practical method would be daily treatment. By treating the skin with a good astringent once or twice a day depending on the condition of your skin, the size of the pores can temporarily be reduced or minimized. The tingly feeling experienced when applying astringent is the pores contracting.
Remember that the results are only temporary so it is important that the treatment be used daily.
