Despite growing criticism that he lacked authority to the run the government, Suarez had been expected to withstand the convention assault and win the party presidency again.

Suarez' resignation came four days before Spanish King Juan Carlos was to tour Spain's violence-torn northern Basque region, but there was no immediate indication of how the premier's resignation would affect the royal visit. Although the resignation caught the nation by surprise, members of the premier's party said he still could win enough support at the national convention to gain the premiership again. The premier, appointed by the king in 1976, led the nation from the dic tatorship of the late Gen. Francisco

Peru, Ecuador fighting

LIMA, Peru (AP) — An old dispute between Peru and Ecuador over access to the Amazon River erupted in bloody border fighting between the two South American neighbors.

Ecuador said two of its soldiers were killed and others injured during eight air attacks by Peruvian helicopters and planes on a remote border post Wednesday. It claimed two of the helicopters were shot down and accused Peru of trespassing on Ecuadorean territory.

Peru announced it was conducting a military operation to drive Ecuadorean forces from its territory. It said both countries suffered casualties but did not say whether any Peruvians were killed.

The political committee of the Organization of American States held an emergency meeting in Washington and urged the two countries to let an international commission try to resolve the dispute. Ecuador agreed, but Peru did not respond im-

Although border incidents in the region are commonplace, it was the most violent conflict since 1978, when two Peruvians were killed in fighting.

The region is 170 miles south of Quito, Ecuador's capital, and 785 miles north of Lima. Possession of it would give Ecuador access to the Maranon River, which a few miles downstream empties into the Amazon. It is also north of Peru's major oil fields

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Reagan administration, still suspicious of Iran, will not deliver more than $450 million in U.S. military equipment purchased by the government of the late shah, Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig says

Although Iran's revolutionary government has not requested delivery of the equipment, Haig made it clear Wednesday that the United States had no intention of honoring that purchase agreement even if Iran asks for the goods and will not enter into any future contracts for military equipment with Iran.

"Let me state categorically today there will be no military equipment provided to the government of Iran, either under earlier obligations and contractual arrangements, or as yet unstated requests," he said

As McKeel left the airport for his home, the band began playing "When Johnny Comes Marching Home Again."

Royer walked between ribbon-bedecked police barricades as he left the airport for his drive home. Thousands of people gathered along the route to wave and shout greetings to

The teacher with the U.S. International Communications Agency said, "it will be only the simple things that I want to do now and the State-run lotteries fail to 'score'

State-run lotteries were trumpeted as operations that were going to make millionaires out of every other person on the block and bail state treasuries out of the red.

It hasn't worked out either way very often. The winnings of some people are not all that big, after all the taxing agencies get their piece of the action. And the states find themselves with diminishing returns

RECENTLY, THE state of Maine decided to ax its weekly numbers game, the first brainchild of the state lottery. By a unanimous vote, the state's Lottery Commission decided to end the game, focusing attention on the fact that its revenues had declined a whopping 95 percent since it began

six and a half years ago

"The game is simply not sustaining itself," Maine's lottery director Richard J. Carey told other commissioners present. "This is a case where the head has to rule the heart."

Maine's last weekly drawing will be held Jan. 22 next year. A $50,000 'super drawing' will be held sometime in February but the commission has not yet set a date

"This is a trend," said Paul R. Nock, vice president of Systems Operations Inc., which has supplied veekly games to 11 of the 14 states in the nation that has lotteries. Systems Operations has handled Maine's weekly game since it first set up for

"It's not really a surprise," Nock continued. "I think the weekly games served a useful purpose. But, on economic logic; cost-effectively it's not worth continuing.

Nock said three other states -Delaware, New York and Vermont had also abolished weekly lottery games within the last two years

TICKET SALES to the Maine numbers game had shown a steady decline over a period of months. The 50-cent per ticket weekly game was the first introduced after Maine voters approved a state-run lottery in a November 1973 referendum.

It brought in $175,000 in ticket sales the first week. How much has interest declined in the game? For the week end Nov. 7 this year, sales were down to only $9,207. That's not even enough to pay expenses.

States which think they are buying 'pie in the sky' by giving their blessings to such operations are only deluding themselves. If they wanted to take lessons on the art of making money, they should consult the people who operate the football cards offering the yeomanry winnings by picking multiple winners with point spreads. The ranks of men who think they can beat a three-game parlay are legion — in fact, the money they've paid out in vain attempts to 'score' would go a long way toward paying off the national debt

Day to give thanks

Around the rim

Carol Hart

Today has been designated as a national day of thanksgiving in honor of the release of the American hostages. I would like to say that I'm very thankful that they are back home where they belong.

One of the freed Americans, charge d'affaires Bruce Laingen, said he "could not wait to get off the front pages and lead a normal life."

The parent of another freed American said "It's time for my son to fade out of the spotlight.'

THOSE 52 AMERICANS have been the center of the news for a long period of time. The American press kept them and their families in the limelight for the whole of the ordeal, but I think the networks and the wire services made some mistakes in covering the situation.

But, since bitterness in the ordeal has turned to thankfulness and joy, let me say that the press also had its moments in telling the story of the

For one thing, the correspondents on the scene gave those of us not on the scene the chance to watch the former hostages on their way home after their joyous release from Iran.

WE GOT TO watch as the freed Americans landed in Algiers, then their arrival in Weisbaden, West Germany

For several days in Weisbaden, we got to share their thoughts of their newfound freedom through written interviews, taped speeches and small talk they made with reporters at the

Then, when the former hostages came to America, we got to share the excitement with the people who lined the streets in Washington, D.C., to welcome them back and let them know we love them. It was all pretty emotional, and something we would not be able to say we saw and knew about without the help of the media.

But, there were several times when the media seemed out of line.

THE ORDEAL WAS touchy, and events were hard to call, but at times I wished the major news services would cool it and quit trying to outguess the situation. The families of the freed Americans were really put through the wringer at times, caught between hope and no hope which sometimes seemed overplayed through the media

And, at times, like when someone's mother or wife broke into tears and turned away from the camera. I wished the press didn't have to be in the families' homes. Knowing how these families were reacting to the situation was a newsy item, but they deserved some privacy.

SOMETIMES ITS HARD for people in the media to draw the line. The situation was explosive and drawn out, and unique to the newspeople covering it. I don't think any of the media meant to manipulate the families or the freed Americans. The nation was highly interested, and we shared the grief and the happiness of all involved. Without extensive coverage, we could not have readily identified with the freed Americans.

The situation reads like the classic line about the best of times and the worst of times. A nation suffered day after day with those people held for so long, and a nation rejoiced and came closer together when they were allowed to come home.

Today is really a day to give thanks.

Ignored stories

Jack Anderson,

WASHINGTON - Potentially embarrassing information on the background of Energy Secretary James B. Edwards was available to the Senate confirmation committee but was glossed over by all but one member in the "honeymoon" spirit prevailing on Capitol Hill.

More questions should have been asked if only to give the nominee a chance to clear up any doubte about his past conduct. The failure to pursue these matters reminded me of the treatment accorded Bert Lance four years ago. There, too, information was avilable to the Senate, but Lance was never asked to explain. The questions had to be answered later, to he much greater discomfiture of UNPURSUED FORMATION on Edwards raises the possibility that he and his partners in a South Carolina land deal were spared prosecution by the Justice Department because Edwards was waging his successful campaign for governor at the time.

In July 1974, the Army Corps of Engineers discovered that Edwards' partnership had begun construction of an environmentally damaging dike on Hutchinson Island, S.C., which it owned. The purpose of the dike was to

The Corps of Engineers obtained a cease-and-desist order against the partnership, but work on the dike continues. At that point, in October 1974, the Corps turned the matter over to the U.S. attorney's office in improve duck hunting on the island.

Col. Harry Wilson of the Engineers' Charleston office explained at the time that the U.S. attorney, Ronald Hightower, didn't pursue the case because the work had already been done-he felt there was nothing to be

But a handwritten notation on the transmittal slip that accompanied a summary of the case for Wilson's boss, Gen. Carroll Le Tellier, raises another possibility: "Col. Wilson wants you to know this," the notation from an unnamed Corps official said.

"I believe (that) Mr. Edwards is a candidate for governor and the U.S. attorney did not want to get involved prior to election date.

Edwards, through a spokesman, told my associate Tony Capaccio that he knew Wilson, but knew nothing about the note. Wilson didn't remember the notation either.

HIGHTOWER. HOWEVER. RECALLED that the referral on the Hutchinson Island dike operation arrived "two or three days before the election," which led him to feel that it "stunk." The fact that he was a Republican, like Edwards, "had no bearing on me," Hightower said.

"I figured that if it was valid three days before the election, it would be valid after the election, so I sat on it,' Hightower said. He added that his suspicions about the questionable validity of the case were confirmed when the Corps withdrew its referral several days after the election.

in fact, however, the Corps continued to press its case against the partnership. After two years, the partners finally took action to clear up the problem-they asked for a retroactive permit for the dike work that would make it legal.

This request was dented, and eventually, in 1977, the partnership dynamited the dike, restoring the natural flow of the tide. 19000

Meanwhile, as governor, Edwards vetoed a bill that would have placed tidelands areas-including his partnerships Hutchinson Island-under state land-use control

And except for the cost of building and destroying its illegal dike, the partnership was never punished for its violation of the law.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, was the only member of the Energy and Natural Resources Committee who questioned Edwards about the partnership.

There's another interesting matter involving Hutchinson Island that was not mentioned at Edwards' confirmation hearing. In 1978, one of the then-governor's partners was caught using the island as a base for smuggling marijuana. He was caught with 19,000 pounds of the weed, valued at nearly $9 million.

Yet Edwards was never even questioned about the matter. It seems the federal prosecutor in charge of the case, Lionel Lofton, was an old friend of Edwards, and had been his legal adviser. Lofton told me he knew Edwards was a man of good character, so there was no need to ask if he knew anything about his partner's crooked dealings.

Footnote: A relatively minor matter bears mentioning, as it gives a clue to Edwards' imperial view of high office: His wife ran up $17,000 worth of taxpayer-funded air travel in 1977-78. Once, a pilot complained to me, she flew from the capital to Charleston and back to spend 30 minutes purchasing meat on sale at the Buy-Low supermarket.

SOMETHING TO HIDE?: While the CIA and the FBI may have legitimate reasons of national security for denying requests under the Freedom of Information Act, it's almost laughable to contemplate what excuse the National Endowments for the Arts and the Humanities have for clamping a lid on their operations.

But the House subcommittee on government information got so many complaints about the two endowments that the General Accounting Office was asked to look into the situation.

The still-secret GAO investigation concluded that the Arts endowment was slightly more forthcoming than the Humanities endowment, which issued numerous rejections of FOIA requests, often without even condescending to give a reason.

One congressional observer suggested that the people at both endowments are simply so intent on their self-imposed mission to "spread the arts" among the elite that they can't be bothered with such mundane tasks as telling the common folks what they're doing.

Carter vs. Haig

Évans, Novak

WASHINGTON - In his last days as president, Jimmy Carter summoned Gen. Robert Huyser for a White House chat that quickly turned out to be an attempted though un. successful-ploy against Alexander Haig's confirmation as sevetary of

As Gen. Haig's deputy at NATO, Huyser was sent by President Carter to Tehran in January 1979, with orders to prevent any military coup by Iranian army forces loyal to the beleagured shah. Haig, then NATO's supreme commander, contended the "Huyser mission facilitated the shah's overthrow by Islamic revolutaionaries. Haig later disclosed that the mission was conducted over his and Huyser's objections.

HUYSER, NOW COMMANDER of the U.S. Military Airlift Command, was all but invited by Jimmy Carter during their White House chat to reveal inside information that could be used in the Senate against Haig. An intimate of both Huyser and Haig told us Huyser was "unshakable" in lauding Haig and fending off Carter's thrust. A few days earlier, Carter explosed his animosity to Haig in an off-the-record session at Plains, Ga.: the former president said Haig as NATO commander never lost an opportunity to criticize him.

Having presided over one of the most chaotic inaugural weeks of modern times has not dislodged Los Angeles millionaire Charles Z. Wick, a member of the Reagan "kitchen "cabinet," as front-runner to become director of the International Communications Agency (ICA)

Reagan advisers who want to build ICA (the former USIA) into a potent global informational weapon have felt that Wick, a semi-retired nursing homes entrepreneur, simply does not have the background. Nevertheless, President Reagan has put his close friend on top of the list. Wick's record as president of the inaugural committee does not seem to have changed

The confusion was such that thousands of Reagan supporters traveled from all over the country to Washington only to learn that their prepaid tickets for the gala, the inaugural balls and other events were nowhere to be found. Many of the lucky few who received the tickets they had purchased could not gain admittance to the balls. The blame was put on Wick, who was booed when introduced at one of the balls.

President Reagan has had second thoughts about dumping Gen. David 'Jones as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff (CS) and may well keep him to the end of his term, in June 1982, thanks to advice from one of the new president's most admiring military supporters retired Adm. Thomas Moorer

Moorer, a Vietnam-era JCS chairman, backed Reagan for president and was offended by Jones' rigid support for President Carter's national security positions. But he has advised Reagan that to fire Jones would continue the politicization of the military that Moorer contends began under Carter Moorer has advised Reagan that there would be no question of politicization if Jones were removed after he actually has served under Reagan. More likely, Jones will be kept on in a figurehead role and given little responsibility in hopes that he will quit before his term ends.

Don't take concussion lightly

Dear Dr. Donohue: Our son had two concussions 17 years ago when he was in high school. Since then my wife has coddled him. She says he tires easily because of the concussion. I say bunk-Athletes and others have concussions and live normal lives. I would like to get him out of the house and on his own. I don't feel it is good for him or for us to have him pampered. - M.C. Concussion results from a head niury. We usually think of it as implying a loss of consciousness. And that is true if we define consciousness as the ability to recall ongoing or past events. The person does not have to be out cold. Loss of memory and headache are the hallmarks of concussion. The brain has suffered injury: there's no doubt about that. But the seriousness of injury depends on how much damage was done. No concussion should be taken lightly, but most people recover from one without difficulty. (In athletics, two concussions in any one season should certainly call for a professional decision as to whether the person should continue in contact sports. That again depends on the seriousness of the concussions and the damage done. Repeated injuries to the brain

As for your son, I agree with you. Your wife may be being far too protective. Any permanent damage to the brain can be detected by a good examination, perhaps a brain wave test. So first see that your son does not have permanent damage. If none is found, he won't need this great protection. He is not in danger of sudden death from another concussion. His tiredness and lack of ambition are difficult to relate to a concussion 17 years ago if there were no permanent damage

Can you please advise? - Mrs. G.G. It is probably not a good idea for her to use the mineral oil. That can interfere with the absorption of the very important vitamins A, DE and K. It is doubtful, anyway, that the mineral oil will have any beneficial effect on her constipation. She should be examined to attempt to learn the source of that problem

Dear Dr. Donohue: Can smoking cigarettes cause sleeplessness?

Apparently so. In one study it was shown that non-smokers placed in pleasant quarters fell asleep about 30 minutes after lying down, while smokers took an average of 48 minutes. Some insomniacs get up and smoke a cigarette, hoping that will help them. On the basis of such studies, they may actually be worsening their plight. Dear Dr. Donohue: Why is finding considered so important in genetic counseling? - L.B.

It's important because some genetic

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I have recently become a Christian, but I worry all the time about falling back into my old sins and habits. How can I avoid being defeated spiritually? - K.B.J.

DEAR K.B.J.: Remember that Satan wants you to be defeated spritually, and he is very clever. If he cannot defeat you by causing you to commit some sin, he will try to defeat you by making you worry all the time concentrating on the pitfalls you may face - concentrate instead on Christ.

There is a very important passage of Scripture in James 4:7-8 which will help you: "Submit yourselves, then, to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you. Come near to God and he will come near to you." Now notice carefully what he says. First, he tells us to submit ourselves to God. Now that you are a Christian, you have trusted Jesus Christ as your personal Savior from sin. But you also are to follow him as Lord of your life. You are to submit to him, the same way a person might submit to the authority of a king. No longer are you to rule your own life - Christ is to rule. Have him that you are putting your life in his hands, and you want him to the Lord? The first step in resisting the temptations of Satan is a commitment

Finally, notice that we are to draw near to God. If Christ fills your heart, there will no longer be room for many of the things which used to fill your life. Through studying and memorizing the Bible — through prayer, through fellowship - we draw closer to Christ. And when we do. Satan will flee and God will draw us closer to himself and his protection.

you submitted your life to Christ, as best you know how? Have you told to do God's will.

Then notice that we are to resist the devil. That means we avoid temptation wherever possible. There may be some habits from your past that you know are wrong, and you know that they will become particularly strong in certain situations. If so, avoid those situations as if they were poison! Never believe that you can compromise with Satan. Often Christian friends can be helpful in giving us the strength we need to resist temptations.

Physician, Heal Thyself!

DEAR ABBY: Yesterday I took my 16-year-old daughter, whom I'll call Sally, for her first visit to a gynecologist, and I am still in shock at what happened in his office

Sally had a very painful lump in her abdomen, and it took me three days to convince her that doctors were nice guys, concerned with helping people feel better, and that she must trust me and get help.

Well, the nurse led Sally into the examining room to prepare her for the examination. Sally was scared to death and had big tears in her eyes when she went in. The doctor came in, looked Sally in the eye, registered disgust and impatience, then he turned around and walked out. He then came to the front office and told the receptionist within my hearing to cancel the appointment! Hearing this, I approached him and asked for an explanation. The doctor replied, "I am not about to see a grown girl who is crying! I couldn't believe my ears. The doctor stalked out and I asked the receptionist if I had heard right. She said, "Yes, he is the boss and can do anything he wants." I stood there, stunned. The doctor then returned and told me to get another doctor for "the child," then abruptly walked away. This same doctor is supposed to perform surgery on me in the near future for a female problem. I had met him only once before, but was not aware that he is a man of so little patience and compassion. He has been practicing for many years, and certainly should have had experience with frightened young girls. Now Sally is more afraid than ever to trust doctors, or my word, and I am equally afraid to have this doctor treat me. Suppose a tear or two should stain my face? Will he also walk out on me?

When I ask a man what he would do if he caught his wife in bed with another man, he invariably says, "I'd kill him." Abby, why does the guy always get the blame when it takes two to tango?

Interest rates confusion abounds

By CHET CURRIER

NEW YORK (AP) — If you want to know where interest rates are headed right now, don't look for some kind of consensus judgment from the experts.

Some say it won't be long before rates resume their decline of December, which nudged the prime rate charged by banks down from a record 2112 percent to 20.

Others warn that the widely heralded "peak" of a month or so ago may have been just a way station on the road to even higher levels.

In other words, confusion

"There are no benchmarks any more by which we can judge how high interest rates can go," said Henry Kaufman, the well-known economist at the investment banking firm of Salomon Brothers, in a recent television appearance.

But whether the prime rate is headed for 15 percent rates, that affect just about or 25 percent, almost everyone. everyone agrees that rates high levels for some time to

Thus, just as individuals and businesses have had to learn to cope with persistent inflation, it is evident that they must adapt to living in a climate of high interest

Some of the effects of skyhigh rates are plain to see Mortgages at 14 percent or 15 percent, or more, make housing a less appealing investment than it was for most of the 1970s.

Auto manufacturers have found that is hard to sell cars whether they are small or large, fuel-efficient or not when the cost of an auto loan is as high as it is right now.

Alert savers have been quick to find the best places to put their money in times of high rates. Assets of money market mutual funds, now yielding 16 percent to 19 percent, have climbed to new highs above $80 billion this month.

Less apparent perhaps, but just as important, are the subsurface economic forces, set in motion by high interest

The apparent cause: will remain at historically Falling prices of bonds, in which many of the funds have invested heavily.

Presidio ambulance fund

drive nearing its goal

PRESIDIO, Texas (AP) — Citizens raising funds to buy has its eye on a $22,500 an ambulance for this remote Southwest Texas border town say they have raised $18,000 since last fall, with about another $4,500 needed

Residents here launched the fund drive after a teenager hurt in a traffic accident bled to death last September while waiting for an ambulance to arrive from Marfa, 60 miles away.

The victim, Martin Manriquez, 16, was the latest of a string of victims who died before an ambulance could arrive from a distant city

Another was Rojelio Brito. who held out for an hour and 45 minutes before his heart stopped beating Thanksgiving Day, 1979. His widow is vice president of the fund drive

The group's president, Mary Louisa Spencer, said the first $15,000 was collected by mid-November, but since then, "It's been very slow.

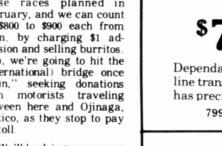

She said her committee ambulance offered by a Duncanville, Texas, dealer, but she said the price is valid only until March 1.

must raise $4,500 during the next five weeks to take advantage of the offer. Mrs. Spencer said Wednesday she was not worried.

It means the committee

"We have three quarterhorse races planned in February, and we can count on $800 to $900 each from them, by charging $1 admission and selling burritos. Also, we're going to hit the (international) bridge once again," seeking donations from motorists traveling between here and Ojinaga, Mexico, as they stop to pay

"We'll be doing some more door-to-door work, and we have other activities planned too," she said. "Besides if we don't make it by March 1. that's not the only company that sells ambulances

Carter's last hours on tape

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jimmy Carter took off the gray cardigan, put it back on and took it off again. He called his wife and asked her to bring over a suit jacket, a handkerchief, pocketknife and the cross he likes to keep in a pocket.

In his last hours in the Oval Office, Carter watched his presidency tick away, tense minute by tense minute to the beat of the grandfather clock on the wall, as he waited for the telephone call that would tell him the 52 hostages in Iran were free.

Carter never took the call. It came only after Ronald Reagan, his successor, was sworn in as the nation's 40th president.

The painful wait was recorded on videotage, from 6:30 a.m. EST Jan. 20 until 10:19 a.m., minutes before Carter left the Oval Office to escort Reagan to the Capitol for the inauguration ceremony.

The tape, edited to delete sections that might compromise national security and made available to television networks Wednesday evening, shows scenes of a presidency and its biggest crisis coming to an end at the same time.

It is 6:30 a.m. It is still dark outside. Carter has been at work for almost 48 hours with no more than 11/2 hours' sleep. His eyes are slits. Vice President Walter F. Mondale, who is in and out of the Oval Office during the four-hour period on tape, looks just as tired, deep puffy circles forming under

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) -East Texas lawmakers, backed by constituents opposed to nuclear waste storage in their counties, want the State Health Department to stop issuing permits until the Legislature looks at bills to tighten state

Television personality John Henry Faulk of Madiscrville, "moderator" for the Wednesday news conference, said companies hat "obviously don't have the foggiest idea of what the devil to do with" radioactive wastes are seeking permits

Faulk said his top concern is the groundwater East rexans depend on for farming and household use. Leon County residents are trying to prevent a company from storing nuclear waste on a 400-acre tract it recently purchased.

'We must at all costs protect this precious natural resource that is threatened on all levels," said Faulk Rick Lowerre, Sierra Club lobbyist, said Nuclear Sources and Services, which bought the land, has mishandled radioactive waste at other sites.

'You can't trust these birds that are asking for these permits," Faulk said. Sen. Kent Caperton, Dlegislation that would give the state more control of nuclear waste sites and where they are placed. Present law, said Caperton, is "inadequate at best."

"One extremely important new part of the law allows for citizen input in the process. Current law does not require any kind of public hearings to be held, Caperton said at the news conference.

"We are not trying to hinder the necessary and beneficial use of radioactive materials, but the health, safety and protection of citizens from the potential long-term hazards of nuclear materials must go hand in hand with its use," he said.

West was won, not only with gun, but also with the camera

Smithsonian News Service Picture this scene. Burdened with a large camera, unwidely tripod and fragile glass plates, a daring young man scrambles down a 200foot cliff-determined to capture the beauty of a plunging waterfall.

The year was 1871; the place, a natural wonderland of boiling pools, tumbling falls, rainbow springs and exploding geysers. In 1871 the area had been seen by very few.

Dubbed "Roche Jaune" or "Yellow Rock" by French trappers and avoided as spirit-haunted by Indians, this magical terrain with its snow-capped peaks and winding yellow canyons is known today as Yellowstone National Park. It was the first of America's national parks.

Our intrepid photographer played a significant role in struggle. The great trans-bringing Yellowstone to the continental railroad was American public. His name was William Henry Jackson, and he was the great-great nephew of one Samuel Wilson, the model for America's best-known symbol, Uncle Sam. And a fitting nephew he was.

In his day, Jackson had across the plains, an artist and an author. He would become one of America's most famous early Western photographers.

Young Jackson caputured that Yellowstone waterfall and, over the years, many hundreds of other virgin images of the American wilderness. His list of photographic conquests is a History, says. "when it was

Old Faithful, Mammoth Hot Springs, Yellowstone's Grand Canyon, the Grand Tetons, Yosemite Valley, the Mount of the Holy Cross in the Colorado Rockies and the Mesa Verde cliff dwellings were all recorded by his camera in the 1870s.

Jackson was not alone in his efforts to bring in-controvertible proof of the glories of the Western landscape to a doubting American public east of the Mississippi. A handful of other photographers, including Carleton Watkins and Timothy O'Sullivan, would mesmerize this country with views of the Ostroff conceived and organized an exhibition of 180 early photographs and accompanying paintings, drawings and prints for the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Survey, which had William Henry Jackson as a photographer when it was established in 1879.

The exhibit, "Western Views and Eastern Visions,' documents the beauty and grandeur of a lightly touched American West and salutes the photographers who preserved those unique and unspoiled images.

These photographers were men who became restless doing portrait work in studios. They wanted to work in the field. They had quite a field. Four major scientific and surveying expenditions were carried out during the vears 1867-1879 into the present-day states of Arizona, California, Colorado, the Dakotas, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, Utah and Wyoming.

Ferdinand Hayden and John Wesley Powell, three keenly intelligent and publicity conscious men, each survey had its own photographer. The expedition leaders agreed with the Chinese proverb that a picture is worth 10,000 words. In this case, the opening up of a continent was at stake "their" pictures would be worth 3,000 miles.

EXOTIC VISIONS — In the late 1800s, a number of photographers opened America's eyes to exotic new visions of the western United States. Among the daring young men was William Henry Jackson, shown at right in this self-portrait in the 1800s photographing Yosemite Valley from Overhanging Rock at 3,214 feet. The photo was composed by Jackson although an assistant actually snapped the shutter. "Stereo' views provided the Western landscape photographer with his main source of income. Shops all over America, such as D. Appleton & Co.'s Stereoscopic Emporium in New York, shown above in the 1870s, sold these double photos. When the side-by-side images were seen through a double lens viewer, called a stereoscope, a threedimensional picture was produced.

In order to make them keep on wanting to, Jackson climbed a 200-foot cliff "four or five times" in a single day to get one set of pictures of that Yello stone waterfall. He wanted a view of the falls from the gorge below but could not get his cumbersome portable darkroom down into the canvon. So he set up his camera at the bottom and traveled back and forth between the two.

There were gains, and there were losses. Timothy O'Sullivan, who had been with Mathew Brady, the famous Civil War photographer, once had a Ostroff notes. "Photopiece of bad luck, or rather, graphers did not zero 15 pieces of bad luck. On this occasion, he was struggling to save a boatload of his photographic equipment from the rocky rapids of the Truckee River, which runs across the northern California and Nevada border. They did not, however, turn a blind eve to economic opportunity. For these men of pictures, opportunity literally had two eyes. One of Victorian America's most popular entertainments was looking at stereographs, or double photographs. When seen through a double-lens viewer called a stereoscope, the side-by-side images produced dimensional picture.

Anti-crime bill would seek changes in Texas' pardon and parole system

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Administration of Texas' much-criticized pardons and paroles system would be reorganized under a bill approved by committee and ready for Senate debate.

Quick approval, by a 9-1 vote, was given Wednesday afternoon by the Senate State Affairs Committee to a measure by Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, to reorganize the State Pardons and Parole Board system.

Also cleared for floor debate, 10-1, was a measure by Sen. Bill Meier, D-Euless. that would have the state take over funding of criminal justice grants now coming from the U.S. Law Enforcement Assistance Administration. The LEAA is being phased out by the federal government. Both proposals had been declared emergency measures by Gov Bill Clements

Farabee and Meier said it would be at least next week before either bill is offered for Senate floor debate. If approved by the Senate, the measures would go to the House.

Farabee's bill reorganizes the state parole system. Currently there are three Pardons and Parole Board members, plus six parole commissioners appointed by the governor, chief justice and presiding judge of the Court of Criminal Appeals.

"Today's commissioners are often not answerable to anyone," said David Dean, Clements. "This bill makes clear they (commissioners) would be state employees under the board and serve at the board's pleasure.

Big Spring Athletic Director Ron Logback said the main reason for the changed time is the lack of a girl's JV team. As a result, all of the remaining girls home basketball games will be played beginning at seven

In tonight's game, the Steer fems of Coach Sandy Brown will be seeking their initial 5-AAAAA win. The BSHS girls have suffered through some hard times this year, but much of this is due to the lack of experience.

Those bouts were "not yet finalized," according to Goodman. He said, however, that the Holmes-Berbick match was definite.

Shortly after arriving at his home in Easton, Pa., from Las Vegas, Holmes said by telephone that the fight against Spinks would be "around May 20."

We felt like a couple of fools. Velma laughed and said she thought it was funny. I was very upset to have been made the butt of her joke, so I got myself a glass of punch and spilled it on her gown. Then I laughed and told her I thought it was funny. However, she

I've been married for 21 years to a man I'll call Bob. (No children.) Fourteen months ago was the last time we had sex. I've never been very interested in sex, but I enjoyed the intimacy of it. As I look back on our marriage, Bob never was overly sexy, but he performed. I thought we had a good

About the time our sex life stopped, Bob developed a friendship with a man. Their friendship grew from getting together, just the two of them, one evening a week, to spending weekends together. Last summer Bob spent his entire vacation with this man, excluding me. That's when I strongly suspected that he was gay. When I confronted him with my suspicions, he flatly denied it. I begged him to go with me to a counselor. He refused. I offered him divorce or separation. He wanted neither. He says he "cares for me," but he no longer "loves" me.

Abby, I still love him and don't want to give him up even if he is gay. I'm too embarrassed to discuss this with anyone I know. My heart is broken and I am desperate. Please help

DEAR HOUSEWIFE: It's unfortunate that you don't want to "give him up," because it appears that he has already given you up. You both need counseling, but you can't force it on Bob if he refuses to accept it. Please go for counseling without him. You desperately need to learn how to cope with a painful situation that is more common than you know.

Henderson interrupts your televsion program with news that 50 percent of the children in the country yesterday didn't get their 'recommended' amount of vitamin C, don't be too alarmed.

Chances are that 90 percent of them probably didn't require it, according to Dr. George Kerr, nutrition professor at The University of Texas School of Public Health.

The public shares a misunderstanding about the Recommended Dietary Allowance, which provides estimated amounts of the essential nutrients and minerals people need to maintain good, nutritional health, explained Kerr.

What confuses people is the word "recommended." They think it means "required," Kerr said, noting that's what happens when television viewers hear Florence Henderson's commer-

Nothing could be more wrong. If people met their RDA each day, chances are that they would consume more nutrients than they actually need.

There are RDAs for various groups of people. They are specified for two groups of children under one vear of age, three groups of children 1-10 years of age. five groups each of males and females 11 to over 50 years of age, and pregnant and lactating women. According to Kerr, RDAs provide allowances for energy (calories), protein, 10 vitamins and six minerals nutrients, and acceptable ranges of intakes of an additional three vitamins and nine minerals for which less definitive information is available.

RDAs were established in 1939. "That was during the war years," Kerr noted, "when the government needed data on these nutrients to stock hospitals, life-boats and other emergency facilities with the proper foods.

Because no two people are alike, the RDA chart was founded on what the most needy person required to stay healthy, Kerr said, So. only a low percentage of the population needs the full, recommended amount of nutrients suggested by the Food and Nutrition Board.

Operating under the National Academy Sciences in Washington, D.C., the Board revises the RDA chart every four years to include new information. Four steps are taken to collect new data for the RDAs.

healthy members of each group, are studied to determine what nutrients each contain. Then, people with documented nutrient deficiencies are examined. and biochemical studies are made to learn how the body compensates for different levels of nutrient intakes

Final experiments disclose how study animals react when they're fed different amounts of the nutrients. This information is then modified for humans, who cannot participate in most experiments because of uncertain health risks.

Once the RDA established for the average person in each of the RDA goups, it is increased twice: once to meet requirements of all healthy members of the groups, and ten again for those who may have problems in absorption and utilization. The final result is the Recommended (not required) Dietary (not Diets, representative of daily) Allowance.

> Recent national nutritional surveys indicate the one nutrient most likely to be marginally low in our national diet is iron," Kerr said. Women, especially, tend to be low since an appreciable amount of iron is lost during menstruation.

Cross-filing bill may prevent party line balloting

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau AUSTIN - A bumper sticker commonly seen on cars parked around the Capitol reads "Texas Democrat—Always Have Been. Always Will Be!" But not all Democrats inside the pink granite building share that sentiment.

Sens. Grant Jones of Abilene and Roy Blake of Nacogdoches-two who 'always have been' Democrats-apparently aren't sure they "always will

Last week, the two conservatives filed a bill that would allow a candidate to be named on more than one party's ballot, and also as an independent, in primary, runoff and general elections.

The bill is given little chance of passage. Even so, its filing by two influential senators rekindles talk of Democratic officeholders bolting to the Republican

Jones, for one, denied he is considering such a move. He said the cross-filing bill is an attempt to head off what he sees as the imminent result of Texas becoming a twoparty state: legislators

BSSH patients

The local Montgomery Ward store was a bee hive of activity last Friday night. The firm's staff hosted approximately 150 patients from the Big Spring State Hospital.

The patients were allowed to shop from 7 to 9 p.m. Refreshments and door prizes were given out as the demonstrated microwave cooking, popcorn making and cake decorating. Also, a fashion show took place at which time the latest clothing styles were displayed.

'This type trip is good for the patients for many reasons," said Elma Martinez, Coordinator of Volunteer Services. "The patients are given an opportunity to shop in a relaxed enviroment and demonstration all fill an educational capacity.'

Martinez said store manager Ruth Gee and her staff should be commended for their cooperation in creating such an opportunity for the patients.

civic groups

The 52 American flags displayed at the Veterans Administration Medical Center Wednesday were donated by families of deceased veterans' and civic groups, said Lupe Dominguez, voluntary service specialist at VAMC.

The flags were flown Wednesday in honor of the returning former hostages, held in Iran for 444 days.

VAMC has 75 flags which they plan to display on national holidays, said Ms. Dominguez. The flags were dedicated Nov. 11, 1980.

"This is an appropriate way of utilizing next of kin flags," said Ms. Dominguez. The flags are those which are draped across veteran's coffins, and are then given to families of veterans. Many families then donate the flags to facilities for display, said Ms. Dominguez.

Service organizations also donate a few of the flags for display, added Ms. display, added Dominguez.

Harte-Hanke Austin Bureau MUSLIN - Consumer advocates who fought hard for creation of the Texas Public Utility Commission during the 1975 Legislature are back for the 1981 session, unhappy with the agency and armed to make major changes Utility lobbyists also have returned, but apparently so satisfied with the commission they opposed six years ago that they want to expand its powers.

Electric companies will try again, as they did during the 1979 session, to give the complete authority PUC over their rates. Currently, city councils have original jurisdiction over companies requests, while the PUC sets rates after the utilities ap-

A bill to change the present two-tier arrangement has not been filed yet: company spokespersons promise one be. Ready to fight it — again — will be an alliance of consumer groups and the Texas Municipal lobbyists and legislators. League.

Consumer groups have two major proposals: one to establish an independent office of general counsel to represent utility customers in rate cases, and another to increase the present three commission seats to six or

Both proposals here included in consumers' original draft of the 1975 Public Utility Regulatory Act, but were lost in compromise with pro-utility missioners say an independent consumer office is unnecessary, that it would duplicate the work of the PUC staff.

But consumer advocates say the staff, at the direction of the commissioners, acts as a neutral arbiter between company and customers, which is unfair to customers since companies have batteries of attorneys and

'Utility customers

The present three com- terests equally represented." Sen. Lloyd Doggett of Austin said in introducing his bill to create a counsel's office. Tony Polumbo, Rep. sponsor of a similar bill, said, "We need someone to get out the data for consumers. As it is now, the PUC merely sits as a judge."

Under Doggett's bill, the governor would appoint the counsel, with the consent of the senate, for a two-year term. Polumbo's bill

Doggett proposes that the represent only counsel residential customers in rate cases at the PUC, whereas Polumbo wants the office to represent municipal and corporate customers also, and not just at the PUC, but at the Railroad Commission and federal regulatory agencies. The PUC regulates telephone, electric, water and sewer companies: the PUC General Counsel Allen King opposes the bills: "The consumers are wellrepresented here by private attorneys, and from time-totime we on the staff do side with the consumer.

One such private attorney, Geoffrey Gay of West Texas Services in Fort Worth, told a Senate subthat he and other consumer advocates are too overworked and underfunded to

Calling the PUC "the worst commission in this country with regard to protecting the interests of residential consumers," he urged creation of an independent advocate's office. Austin attorney Don Butler, who frequently intervenes at the PUC for the Texas Municipal League, agrees that consumers are ill-represented but disagrees with the proposed remedy.

"We don't need to create a new office," he says. "Just free up the staff that exists to exercise professional independence. Right now they're so gun-shy because (PUC Chairman George Cowden) takes it as an act of disloyalty if they oppose his position.

That position, critics contend, is pro-utility. To diversify opinions on the commission, they want to double or triple its membership.

Polumbo also will carry a bill providing for six members. Rep. Reby Cary of Fort Worth wants nine. Under both men's bills, the governor still would appoint the commissioners, subject to senate approval, for sixyear terms.

A more proposal, by a coalition of comsumer groups, would divide the state into six regions, with voters in each electing one commissioner In contrast, the three Railroad Commissioners are elected statewide.

So far, no legislator has agreed to sponsor the idea. and consumer groups admit it would have little chance of

"I wonder what they would accomplish," the PUC's King says of electing commissioners. "What has it accomplished at the Railroad Commission?"

Among other utilityrelated bills that have been filed so far, all by Doggett, are proposals to:

Allow the PUC to seek a court-appointed receiver for utilities violating commission orders. The commissioners want the extra enforcement power, which primarily would be used against errant water companies

Set the interest that customers earn on utility deposits at the existing 6 percent or at the rate of the company's total cost of capital, whichever greater. The latter rate has about 10 percent lately a PUC spokesperson said.

Two of seven are charged

COLORADO CITY (SC) -Official charges have been filed against two of the seven persons arrested Monday evening after the pickup truck in which they were traveling left Big Spring without paying for gasoline. Seventeen-year-old James Allen Baker of Phoenix, Ariz., and 20-year-old Terrace Elliott of Lith. Ill. have been charged with possession of stolen property, the pickup truck.

In addition, Big Spring authorities want the two for theft of service. Three hitch hikers were released along with their dog, without any charges being filed.

Still in custody are a 15year-old runaway girl from Arizona, and a man with whom she was reportedly traveling. The father of the girl was to leave Arizona Tuesday for Colorado City to pick up his daughter. Her reported traveling companion is being held pending further investigation.

Law enforcement officers in Arizona have refrained from extraditing the two against whom charges have been filed due to the expense of the procedure to the state.
