WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, taking a hands-off approach to South Korea's internal affairs, says the United States will keep its 39,000 combat troops on the Korean peninsula

Reagan also is offering to sell additional U.S. weapons and defense industry technology to help South Korea confront "continuing threats to peace.

A senior State Department official said it's even possible U.S. forces there will be strengthened, although probably not with more ground troops, to offset a North Korean military advantage that "could lead to an attack at almost any time.'

In a communique following talks here Monday with South Korean President Chun Doo-hwan, Reagan tried to smooth four years of rocky relations between Washington and Seoul, saying the United States will 'resume immediately'' a full range of consultations with South Korea

Contruction dips locally

Construction in the city dropped sharply during January, compared to the same month last year.

The first monthly totals for 1981 came to $261,975, compared to $1,291,465 for January of 1980

An addition to the Morehead Transfer and Storage Company at 101 Johnson was the largest project of the month. Costs were estimated at $56.000.

New residences made up the bulk of the month's total. Daryle Hohertz will build a new home at 710 E. 22nd, with costs estimated at $40,000.

John Reese will put up a new home at 2600 Central at a cost of $52,000. The fourth new residence will be constructed by Plainsmen Homes at 810 Baylor, costing $41,000.

Douglas Edward Beams will construct a new commercial facility at the College Park Shopping Center at a cost of $20,000.

grades locally, who may still need the benefits and bilingual education, Hise said that such programs are available

'We feel we are meeting the needs of the students by the third grade," said Hise, when asked if bilingual education through the third grade was enough

Hise explained the regulation that was struck down which have allowed the Department of Education to mandate the way school districts would operate their programs, a fact that disturbed many educators. A national curriculum would have been dictated out of Washington, said Hise. Such a program would have caused hardships in many school districts, Hise pointed out. He said that in San Francisco, 70 different bilingual programs would have had to have been offered through 12th grade, had the proposed federal rules been enforced

But the status of Texas bilingual education remains clouded by a cending federal court case seeking to extend the programs through the 12th grade in all Texas public school systems.

'This is but one example that the Reagan administration is trying to disembowel the Hispanic community," said Corpus Christi attorney Bonilla, president of the Ruben League of United Latin American Citizens. "This is a very steep price to

certain to propose tax cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) - Budget Director David Stockman said today that President Reagan is virtually certain to propose a 10 percent reduction this year in individual in-, come tax rates. "If I had to bet on anything I'd bet on that," Stockman told the House Ways and Means Committee.

Stockman added, however, that not all decisions on the Reagan administration's economic program have been made, including, presumably, whether the individual tax cut would be retroactive to Jan. 1.

He said the program to be recommended by Reagan later this month likely will include a proposed speedup in the ability of businesses to write off the cost of new equipment. That, like the 10 percent tax rate cut for individuals, was a major part of Reagan's campaign last year state Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi.

But in Dallas, school board vice president Jill Foster said she was glad the proposed new rules were being dumped.

'We've been working a long time . to develop a good bilingual education program and we don't need a lot of government regulations on us that are very restrictive," she said.

The rules, if adopted, would have required that children be taught in their native languages through Grade

That objective already was being sought in a Texas federal court by a Mexican-American group. Attorneys in the case have been given until March 2 to try to reach agreement.

'Secretary Bell's decision may have some impact upon the case in which we currently are involved,' said Texas Attorney General Mark White. "We are waiting for reaction and clarification from the U.S. Department of Justice before we can make any further statement.

Under the federal order, 4,000 students in grades 6 through 12 were placed in bilingual programs, said Rosales.

Action / reaction: Why is milk white?

Q. How come milk is white, not clear?

A. The color comes from the physical properties of the suspended particles-protein (cassein) fat and carbohydrate (lactose)-in the liquid. It is an emulsion and is not clear. The particles reflect the light back to your eyes. Also, calcium, casein and lactose are all white by nature.

Iran committed "an act of war" by taking the American hostages, and the U.S. government should have stood firm with a response that their release was non-negotiable, President Reagan says.

'Let me say that I just believe that we got off on the wrong tack in those negotiations to begin with," Reagan said Monday, referring to the attempts by the Carter administration to negotiate the release of the Americans who were taken hostage in Tehran on Nov. 4, 1979.

"The first reply we made was the proper reply - there would be no negotiations until the hostages were returned. And then we violated that," Reagan said.

His comments came Monday in an interview in Washington with reporters for five publications: The Chicago Tribune. The New York Times, The Wall Street Journal, The

Maybe he never heard of beer drinking music

 $RALEIGH,\,N.C.\,(AP)-Singers such as Kenny Rogers, Waylon Jennings and Hank Williams may drive you to$ drink-or so says a University of Minnesota anthropologist.

When the singers are doing their bit, the tempo of drinking in bars that specialize in country and western music seems to speed up, James H. Schaefer said recently.

'The slower the beat, the faster the drinking," said Schaefer, who was in Raleigh for an alcoholism research conference. He said he and some of his graduate students checked out scores of bars in Montana and Minnesota to learn what factors constituted the highest risks for problem drinkers.

He said the sipping rate was certain to increase when drinkers hear melancholy numbers such as Rogers "Lucille" and Williams' "I'm So Lonesome I Could Cry.

In general, Schaefer said, the current country and western fad represents "a proliferation of a lifestyle that says it's OK to go out and get drunk every night.

Big Spring (Texas) Herald, Tues., Feb. 3, 1981 Chrysler crisis creates stress in New Castle

Pride and anxiety in a `company town'

NEW CASTLE, Ind. (AP) - With a statue of a Civil War soldier on the courthouse square and the 1932 state basketball championship banner in the new high school gym, New Castle seems the very embodiment of middle America.

A city of 18,884 people living amid corn and soybean fields 46 miles from Indianapolis, it is a place of unfailing courtesy and deep pride — and deep anxiety.

Here is what people in New Castle are saying, in their own words, as their major employer - Chrysler Corp. - struggles for life.

'My children are growing up the greatest people in the world because of this place. . If they say they're going to play basketball at 10 o'clock at night in the school gym. that's where you'll find them." - Dick Gross, who was manager of Chrysler's forge and machining plant here from 1974 to Jan. 23 of this year.

'The Ninety Dav Mistress," currently onstage at the Country Squire Dinner Theatre in Odessa, is an amusing play which serves to keep the audience interested in the action.

Starring in the play is June Wilkinson, a former Playboy centerfold who has gone on to star in several Broadway productions and is a popular Las Vegas attraction.

Miss Wilkinson, born in England, is married to Dan Pastorini. The couple has a daughter, Brahna, 4.

Dav 'The Ninety Mistress" is the story of a woman who seeks revenge on men because of the way her father abandoned her before she was born. Miss Wilkinson handles the role of Leona Hastings very well and keeps the audience believing she is out to get men for what her father did to her

In business, things look up for women

The remaining years of the Twentieth Century may belong to the women. In the business world, things are looking up for them. And what a radical change that would be from the first two decades of the century

Working women have had quite a hill to climb, trying to narrow the discrepancy between their salaries and those of men in comparable positions. Today's woman, if she has the right kind of education, is in a position to take full advantage of the good job opportunities.

Fashion

capital

Art Buchwald,

SUCH INFORMATION COMES from the second annual survey of pay scales conducted by Working Woman Magazine. The study covered professional positions from the top end of the pay scale (lawyers, for instance, earn up to $33,000 a year) on down to executive retail trainees, who make about $10,000 annually.

Particularly promising for the ambitious woman is the rapidly expanding computing field, where a beginning specialist can expect a salary of from $19,100 to $20,700. A woman with a master's degree in business administration can practically dictate her salary. All this comes as doubly good news for women because the earnings gap between males and females at professional and management levels has been greater than in lower paying, non-status positions.

Not so good, however, is another development which suggests that women's increased earning power may be hazardous to their independence

THE MAGAZINE DETECTS an upturn in the numbers of men tracking successful, high-salaried women. In short, professional females are being married because they can provide a high standard of living for their mates.

Well, nobody ever promised you a rose garden.

On the other hand, considering the situation from the viewpoint of some of the parties involved, maybe it is possible to have everything.

MANERY THERE IN NON NEWS LEADER. CO MBIL BY CHICAGO TRADME.

WASHINGTON - You can say what you will about the Reagan administration, but you can't deny it has turned Washington into the fashion capital of the world. All it took was a rich First Lady from California, and her richer California friends and suddenly this dusty, peanut-farming, Amaretto-drinking town turned into a land of lynx and sable.

The new California "laid-back look" has affected everyone.

I went to buy a hot pretzel the other day from my favorite stand on K Street, when I noticed that Mary had a new look. Her frayed sweater had been patched all over with ultrasuede, her muffler was thrown back across her shoulder, her wool Redskin hat was perched on top of her head like a pillbox, and she was wearing white gloves as she made change. Dr. Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My doctor had me collect my urine over a whole 24hour period. I have gout. I presume this check was to evaluate that. But I was under the impression that uric acid is found in the blood of gout patients, and that uric acid is what is looked for. Why didn't he just do blood tests? - G.L.

You're right. Elevated uric said in the blood is the hallmark of gout. But the blood level rises either because a person's body makes too much of the acid or because the kidneys do not filter enough of it into the urine. It's important to learn which factor is

Few people today would doubt that communism is a failure. If Lenin or Marx returned to the Soviet Union to preach that workers should arise and take control of the means of production, they would be rounded up swiftly and sent to the north country. Furthermore, the world's two largest countries with a communist government, far from being happy socialists, are virtually at war. Oh Karl, if only you were alive today.

In so many ways, the Soviets have conceded their failure. They're better capitalists than we are. They have their troops massed at the border of a country, ready to put down a workers' revolt. That's not in the Manifesto, is

THE FIRST THING a Westerner notices on a visit to Russia is the zombi-like appearance of the people. Part of that is due to the lack of incentive built into the economy, but another part is due to the culture. The Russians, despite their apparent world strength, have something of an inferiority complex. Throughout history, they have been on the top of every ruler's list of "Things to Invade." To say that Russia is insecure is an understatement.

If there is nationalism, it is because of their heritage, not because of their economic system. Krokodil, which is the Soviet humor magazine, is full of cartoons depicting the economy as a joke, and making fun of the faults of their centralized government (for the last few years, there have been no shower curtains in the Soviet Union because they were not put in the five

Although the Soviets do not hide the fact that they intend to spread their influence (to them there will be no peace until the whole world is under Soviet power, so yes, they want peace), they are largely motivated by fear. They invaded Afghanistan, not so much because they wanted the country, but because they feared that the Islamic nationalism sweeping Iran would spill over into Afghanistan, and then foster anti-Moscow feelings (of which there are already plenty) in the Islamic people in the southern Soviet Union. It was another desperate move

The 'get tough' attitude of the Reagan administration's Soviet policy is necessary, but it should be pointed out that threatening Russia and building up massive military hardware pointed at Moscow will not insure peace. No matter how much we talk about our desire for good relations with Russia, the Russian people are convinced that they are once again on the "Things to Invade" list. Far from being a mighty country with a passion for world domination, the Soviet Union is a weak country with a whole lot of guns. There's a frightening difference.

WASHINGTON — The audacity of political and economic strategy taking shape in the Reagan adminis-tration is glimpsed in budget director David Stockman's rejection of conservative orthodoxy and opposition to broad cutbacks in Social Security benefits

Politically, Stockman is seeking to protect the Republican Party from its incorrigible desire to throw widows and orphans to the wolves and thereby embellish a villainous reputation that has helped lose elections for a halfcentury. The new Office Management and Budget (OMB) director is saying that there are methods less painful, both for Republicans and the old, to cut the budget.

His economic justifications are equally intriguing. They are based on saving over $3.5 billion a year. That includes eliminating aid to college students and restructuring disability payments.

Stockman always doubted budge tary benefits from throwing widows and orphans to the wolves. To make sure, he called for advice from an astute supply-side economic analyst: Alan Reynolds, vice president of Chicago's First National Bank.

Reynolds' eight-page memo, now circulating at OMB, asserts "there is no clear evidence that the existing Consumer Price Index (CPI) as a basis for Social Security cost-of-living adjustments exaggerates living costs at all." In fact, he said, "retired people usually spend a larger share of their budgets on food and fuel than the CPI assumes, and these prices have Urine testing happening - whether too much uric acid is being made or if too little is being filtered. If too much is being made, there will be a high level in the urine, if too little is being filtered. there will be a low level in the urine. A high blood uric acid level would be expected in either case.

There is another reason for the urine testing; the results help determine the proper medication to use. For example, allopurinol stops the body from making the acid, so it is good for those whose bodies make too much of it.

Another reason for the test stems from the fact that gout sufferers may develop kidney stones (when the accumulated uric acid crystallizes). This is more likely to happen if the urine's uric acid is high. Thus the test of how much uric acid there is in urine helps predict the likelihood of one forming kidney stones. Dear Dr. Donohue: Please answer a few questions about trichomonas infection. An examination a couple of months ago revealed that I had this. Although I filled the doctor's prescription promptly, my husband and I still have not used the medication. Is it possible for the infection to go away on its own? We have had no symptoms whatsoever.

What are the consequences if it is left untreated? How long will the medicine (Flagyl) remain effective and active? — M.S.

About 25 percent of women who have trichomonas may not experience symptoms. Usually, though, the woman will have vaginal discharge, feel irritation or have pain on urination.

Dear Dr. Donohue: A member of our family has been diagnosed as having Alzheimer's disease. Could you please explain in detail what this is and what can be done to help? -A.M.

With advancing age, there is a shrinkage of the brain, just as there is of the muscle and bone. That sounds terrible, but it is inevitable, although the degree and progress of it varies widely among individuals. In fact, most people undergo this natural change without noticeable mental impairment

When this shrinkage occurs prematurely, along with mental impairment, it is called Alzheimer's disease. The cause is unknown. It often begins with loss of memory for recent events and there may be peculiar behavior.

There is no specific treatment for this illness, but relatives should be understanding and realize that the changes of personality, mood and memory are no fault of the person. It is also important to look for illnesses that resemble Alzheimer's disease, but which are treatable. One to especially consider is an obstruction to the flow of cerebrospinal fluid. That is called "normal pressure hydro-cephalus." It is diagnosed by brain scans and special X-rays of the brain.

Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

UN gets another chance to win one

Our troubles in the Middle East didn't go away after the embassy hostages were released.

There's still a war going on between Iraq and Iran. Americans might not have reason to feel concerned but for the fact that the world's supply of oil will be cut back if peace is not reached soon

A United Nations representative looked in on the problem and later reported both parties appear interested "in continuing to see whether one could find a peaceful process to end the war."

The UN representative, Olof Palme, a Swede, sees "so many possibilities for a fair and equitable solution safeguarding the interests of both countries." That statement alone must put him in a diplomatic class by himself as far as acuity of vision is concerned.

Palme is planning a third trip to the combat area, which would indicate the United Nations maintains hope it can settle this one. Perhaps it can, but don't bet on it.

his confidence that President Reagan's supply-side economics will transform inflationary contraction of the economy to non-inflationary growth. If indexing of Social Security payments (which is designed to keep pace with inflation) is reduced, it would be tacit admission that Reagan's policy will fail SPECIFICALLY AT ISSUE is an idea to save billions in Social Security payments by recalculating cost-ofliving allowances. When Stockman visited Wall Street after his selection by Reagan, he found stalwarts of the nation's great financial houses obsessed by the idea of cutting the budget by clipping away at old-age pension checks.

On Capitol Hill, Republicans were equally enchanted by the notion, perpetuating the party's image crystalized when President Herbert Hoover dispatched the U.S. Army against the bonus marchers. Many Democrats were also interested, including House Budget Committee Chairman James Jones. Even Jimmy Carter, who campaigned for reelection as the pensioner's best friend, proposed scaled-down cost-of-living allowances in his last budget.

Stockman was opposed from the start and said so publicly to the National Press Club in his first speech as OMB director, a position given surprisingly little publicity. Long before that speech, Stockman had determined that the politically feasible way to reduce federal spending is to pull out a few goats from the herd, not shear all the sheep.

Cutting back cost-of-living adjustments for all Social Security beneficiaries certainly would be shearing sheep. Stockman prefers less politically sensitive goats: reducing special categories of Social Security, savings.

risen faster than the CPI...

The Reynolds memo also points to a pitfall inherent in the Carter budget proposal to switch the indexing for mula away from purchased housing to rental housing: declining mortgage rates would then not cause reduced costs, because the decline would not be reflected in the index. Indeed, OMB tables show that if inflation is subdued and interest rates fall, the Carter change would step up Social Security outlays by fiscal 1984

Thus, tinkering with Social Security indexing would be a sign of retreat for Reagan's bold economic policy 'Undue political concern with the budgetary cost of adjusting benefits for inflation does not give a helpful signal," Reynolds writes. "If political and monetary authorities are serious about getting inflation down why would they express alarm over minor changes in the way federal spending is adjusted for inflation?'

Supply-siders Stockman and Reynolds clearly would not. They have bigger dreams on their horizon. They are less concerned by vagaries of indexation on Social Security than in using tax reduction for inflation-free growth.

BANKER REYNOLDS, ONE of the nation's most succinct writers about economics, concludes his memo by making an unrepublican, unbankish comment that economically-strapped retired people are not to blame for the runaway budget: "There is no unambiguous evidence that indexing Social Security benefits by the CPI does more than barely compensate for inflation ... even if real Social Security benefits of retired people rose during inflation, many of those same people are greatly injured by what inflation does to private pensions and lifetime think God could ever forgive me. My friends say he can, but I don't think he'll ever welcome me into the Kingdom of God. Am I right? -LLODEAR L.L.O.: No, you are not, and I hope you will realize that that should be good news to you! I do not know what you have done in your life which makes you think God does not love you. Whatever it is, realize that the real sin you have committed is turning your back on God.

I believe the fact you know you have sinned, and that you are asking this question, is encouraging. The person who is in the gravest position is the person who does not believe he has sinned and needs God. God spoke through the prophet Jeremiah to people who had become so hardened and calloused by sin that they no longer could hear the message God wanted to give them: "But they ... walked in the counsels and in the imagination of their evil heart ... they harkened not unto me, nor inclined their ear. but hardened their neck'

The Bible tells us that God loves us, and wants to forgive us our sins. I wonder if possibly you have the idea that God only saves people who are good enough. The Bible tells us that we can never be good enough, because in God's eves we are all sinners. "For there is no difference: For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God" (Romans 3:22-23). That is why Christ came - to die for sinners. "You see, at just the right time, when we were still powerless, Christ died for the ungodly ... God demonstrates his own love for us in this: While we were still sinners, Christ died for us' (Romans 5:6, 8).

The important thing is that you trust Christ and what he has promised, and not yourself. Christ died for you, and he wants you to come to him in repentance and faith. One of the greatest promises of the Bible is I John 1:9: "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. This promise is for you, if you will but reach out in simple faith right now and claim it.

"Lightning Hair" is flashing curls and waves is back into fashion for Spring-Summer 1981, according to the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association.

Permed, curled hair is a necessary fashion ingredient again, says Doris Williams Statesville, North Carolina, Styles Director for the 68.000 member professional organization.

Ms. Williams explained that fashion apparel designers are showing the most variety in fashion ever for Spring-Summer, including cowboys & Indians, hi-tech, romantic feminine and school girl designs.

'Straight, sleeked hair, which made a big return to fashion along with the preppy look, is not versatile enough to cover all the designer fashion moods now before us," says Ms. Williams. "Spring-Summer hairfashions, require curls, waves, expansion and volume for more ver-Ms. Williams satility," added

The Lightning hairfashion collection includes electrified waves and curls, bolts of fringe, wave currents, wave turbulence and wave explosions, which describes curl movement away from the head

Expanded curls and waves are perm-designed to add softness to facial structures in lengths ranging from atthe-shoulder to above the ear.

The Lightning Hair collection includes electrified curls with expanded width to the headshape, super glamour star bombshell looks, shoulder length waves with fringe on one side, super short new wave looks with accenting fringe and versatile asymmetrical mid-length cuts. All except for the super short new wave looks are struck with lightning curls and wave action.

DEAR ABBY: This is for the woman who gets lost a lot, and whose husband blames it on lack of confidence.

My husband can get lost driving out of our driveway. He is completely confused whenever he leaves the main streets of our city, although he was born and raised here. He simply has no sense of direction. And it's not because he lacks self confidence, either: He's a very successful businessman.

SECTION B

Steers host 'Cats

Game time is eight o'clock in Steer Gym in the final first half encounter for both teams.

The Bobcats 4-2 record ties them with Abilene Cooper and Odessa Permian going into the first half finale for second place, with all of them out of the race. Midland, with a mark of 6-0, has already clinched the first half.

But the Bobcats have to be considered as tough as any 5-AAAAA outfit, as their only losses have been a 44-42 loss to Cooper and an 80-78 overtime loss on the road to Midland High.

The Steers, meanwhile, are coming off their first 5-AAAAA win of the year in a bout with Odessa, and are 1-5 in the first half

San Angelo is 16-7 on the year, while the Steers are 10-14.

Big Spring Coach Ed Haller has been emphasizing the play of some of the underclassmen in recent games, so tonight's starting lineup is undecided. Those likely to see most of the playing time include seniors James, Dickie Wrightsil, Bobby Brasel and Fletcher Johnson, juniors Bobby Earl Williams, Robert Rubio and Johnny Green and sophomore Jerald Wrightsil.

San Angelo is a balanced squad led by the likes of 6'3" Hercules Miller and 6'4" leaper Paul Hayes. The rest of the 5-AAAAA slate finds the cross-town rivalries, with Cooper facing Abilene, Lee meeting Midland and Permain squaring off with Odessa.
