Willing to discuss Afghanistan

Brezhnev wants summit with Reagan

MOSCOW (AP) — President Leonid I. Brezhnev made a major overture to the new U.S. administration today, calling for a summit meeting between President Reagan and himself and a resumption of U.S.-Soviet negotiations to limit nuclear arms.

He also proposed that the two superpowers limit their submarine fleets and the deployment of submarine missiles. And for the first time he said that the Soviet Union would discuss Afghanistan with the United States although only as part of talks about the demilitarization of the Persian Gulf region.

Opening the 26th congress of the Soviet Communist Party, the 74-year-old chief of the party said in a keynote address that the state of relations between the United States and the Soviet Union "and the sharpness of world problems demanding resolution ... dictate the necessity of a dialogue on all levels, an active one."

"Experience shows that the decisive element here is meetings on the highest level," he added. "That was true yesterday and remains true today."

Referring to SALT II, the second Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty which the U.S. Senate refused to consider after the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and which Reagan says favors the Soviet Union, Brezhnev declared:

"For our part, we are prepared to continue the relevant negotiations with the United States without delay, preserving all the positive elements that have so far been achieved in this area. It goes without saying that negotiations can be conducted only on the basis of equality and equal security."

After a 90-second standing ovation from the 4,994 delegates in the Kremlin Palace of Congresses, Brezhnev asserted that the Soviet Union is working to "preserve and deepen detente" despite "acutely" more aggressive policies of the United States.

"When thunder clouds gathered on the international horizon by the beginning of the 1980s," he said, "the Soviet Union continued to persevere in efforts to remove the threat of war and to preserve and deepen detente and acted to expand mutually beneficial cooperation with most countries of the world."

He charged that the West, not the Soviet Union, is "slowing the detente process."

Brezhnev said any talks with the United States about Afghanistan could only deal with international aspects of the situation. This apparently meant he was not prepared to discuss the legitimacy of the communist regime there.

Otherwise, he reiterated the Kremlin's previous position on Afghanistan.

EXHAUSTED PONTIFF — Head in hand, Pope John Paul II appears exhausted as he sits in St. Mary's Cathedral today in Tokyo at the start of a four day visit to Japan. A grueling schedule in the Philippines and Guam, which the pontiff visited before Japan, appeared to sap

John Paul's strength. He flew from steamy tropical heat into wintry, rainy weather in Japan. At left is Japanese Cardinal Asajiro Satowaki, and at right is Vatican Secretary of State Agostino Casaroli, also a Cardinal.

Clayton predicts 'good floor fight' on job-quitters compensation bill

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Speaker Bill Clayton says the House will dig into a major controversy this week, taking up a bill denying unemployment compensation for people who quit their jobs or are fired for misconduct.

He said he expects the Senatepassed measure — which Gov. Bill Clements has designated emergency legislation — to be on Wednesday's or Thursday's calendar.

Meanwhile, Sen. Ray Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, has served notice he might ask senators to vote today on his bill setting up a statewide system of competency testing for would-be school teachers.

Clayton said the unemployment compensation bill needed "a couple of amendments" to make it satisfactory to him.

"If your company transfers you from Houston to El Paso with a week's notice and your spouse has to go with you, that puts her in a difficult position," Clayton said.

He also said he did not like the additional bureaucracy the bill would create at the Texas Employment Commission, which estimates it would need 145 new employees — at a cost of $2.9 million — to enforce the measure.

"There is no need to get in such a big hurry with it, but the sponsors wanted to move," Clayton said.

The bill says an employee who quits, is fired for misconduct or refuses "suitable employment" could not draw unemployment benefits until he or she has worked at another job for six weeks.

Several business organizations support the bill, but the AFL-CIO is fighting it.

TEC Chairman Nolan Ward says the measure would hurt workers and would not help employers.

Witnesses for the bill at a House committee hearing last week said it was wrong to pay benefits to people who leave their jobs voluntarily.

"These people frankly don't want to work," said a spokesman for Texas contractors.

ARRIVE FROM TURKEY — Four Americans are greeted on their arrival Sunday at New York's Kennedy Airport after their release from a Turkish jail where they had spent more than eight years for drug smuggling. The four, who face an uncertain future in the United States, are, clockwise: Robert E. Hubbard, bearded, of San Antonio, Tex.; Michael Ray, of Little Rock, Ark.; Kathryn Zenz, right, of Lancaster, Wis., and Jo Ann McDaniel of Coos Bay, Ore.

Documents show Soviet-bloc arms sent to El Salvador leftists

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration took the unusual step today of releasing captured documents and other materials to support its claim that Soviet-bloc nations have sent tons of weapons to leftist guerrillas in El Salvador.

The 178 pages of evidence depict what appears to be a major effort last year by communist countries on four continents to convert El Salvador into the first unambiguously communist state on the American continent.

The release of the document, entitled "Communist Interference in El Salvador," is an attempt by the administration to lay the groundwork for unspecified retaliatory action by the United States to counter the Soviet bloc effort.

The documents outline the huge quantities of assistance pledged by Vietnam, Ethiopia and other communist countries for shipment to El Salvador through Cuba and Nicaragua.

On Nov. 1, 1980, a Salvadoran logistics representative in Nicaragua, identified only as "Vladimir," describes the magnitude of the operation in a letter to his comrades in El Salvador.

"Here, as regards the shipments, they have been packing the bundles day and night," the letter said.

"In fact, these people from Lago (the code name for Nicaragua) have stepped things up. It's in a backlog because more shipments will be arriving this week in Esmeralda reaching between 300 and 400 tons."

At another point, Vladimir said it was impressive "how all countries in the socialist bloc fully committed themselves to meet our every request and some have even doubled their promised aid."

"This is the first revolution in Latin America to which they have unconditionally turned to assist, before the taking of power."

President Reagan told reporters Sunday as he ended a vacation in California that he is "very concerned" about political instability in El Salvador. But he refused to say whether he could conceive of ever sending U.S. military advisers or arms because "I think too often in the past we told what we might or might not do."

Presidential counselor Edwin Meese III said Sunday the administration is exploring diplomatic, economic and military options to stop the arms traffic. Direct action to punish Cuba is "entirely possible," he said.

"I think it's to Cuba's own self-interest to halt them (arms shipments) right now and end this transmittal of subversion into Central America," Meese said on ABC's "Issues and Answers" program.

President Reagan told reporters Sunday as he ended a vacation in California that he is "very concerned" about political instability in El Salvador. But he refused to say whether he could conceive of ever sending U.S. military advisers or arms because "I think too often in the past we told what we might or might not do."

Meese, asked if the United States would send troops to El Salvador, replied, "I don't rule out anything, but it is highly unlikely we will move military forces."

He said evidence of Soviet-bloc complicity with leftist Salvadoran guerrilla is incontrovertible.

Administration officials hoped that releasing the evidence today would buttress their contention that the Soviet Union and its allies are committed to converting the country into the first Marxist state on the American continent.

The administration also decided to release its findings to build public support for actions to ensure that El Salvador remains friendly toward western interests, U.S. officials said.

The information, much of which already has been revealed, has been condensed into a "special report" several thousand words long.

The basic message of the report is that, directly or indirectly, the Soviet Union, Cuba, Ethiopia, Vietnam, Nicaragua and some Eastern European countries have undertaken a major effort to supply the Salvadoran guerrillas with tons of weaponry and other equipment over the past year. Much of it is believed to flow through Cuba.

ABC quoted State Department sources Sunday night as saying Cuba "has heard directly from the U.S. government" that the Reagan administration won't tolerate further arms shipments. State Department spokeswoman Sondra McCarty refused comment on the report.

Meese said the administration has developed contingency plans for dealing with developments in El Salvador, but he added, "We're not going to say what they are nor are we precluding anything."

"We're not necessarily limited to military force," he said. "There are economic steps that can be taken. There are intermediate actions that can be taken which have to do with informing the peoples of other countries about what's happening."

Civil guards open fire in parliament

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Paramilitary civil guards led by an army officer opened fire in Spain's parliament on Monday during a crucial leadership debate, then took over the building and held off other police trying to enter.

An officer at the parliament session pulled a gun, shouted "everybody down!" and fired, the agency Europa Press said. There was no immediate indication of any injuries and it was not clear what sparked the violence.

Parliament was to vote on approval of caretaker Premier Leopoldo Calvo Sotelo to replace Adolfo Suarez. Suarez, who resigned three weeks ago, was in the room as the shooting began.

A lieutenant colonel in a civil guard uniform seized the speaker's microphone before the shooting broke out. He warned everyone to get down on the floor, including Suarez.

The civil guard is under command of the Defense Ministry and has about 65,000 men commanded by Maj. Gen. Jose Aramburu Topete.

The major responsibility of the guard is police work, but they consider themselves a military body and have fought efforts in parliament to put them under police control.

An automatic camera of Spanish state television was filming for later broadcast and continued running. Monitors at the central station said the civil guards with submachine guns and clubs in hand had the Parliament members at gunpoint.

Dallas policeman shot

DALLAS (AP) — A 24-year-old Dallas police officer remained hospitalized in serious condition today after undergoing surgery for a gunshot wound he received during a routine check of a parked car. Doctors said John McCarthy suffered a "very serious wound" to the right side of the head. A police spokesman said McCarthy was shot about 2:05 a.m. when he and his partner, officer Philip Brown, stopped to check the car. The spokesman said McCarthy and Brown warned the occupants of the vehicle, a 20-year-old man and a woman, that they were subject to arrest because they were unclothed in a public place. The couple reportedly had agreed to dress and leave the area when one or more shots were fired from the vehicle as McCarthy and Brown returned to their patrol car. McCarthy was struck once in the head by a bullet that broke into fragments, the spokesman said. A charge of attempted capital murder is pending against the male occupant of the car, who fled to nearby White Rock Lake after the shots were fired. He later was subdued and arrested by Brown. Police said the man was on probation for a burglary conviction. Police said a search of the woman's purse turned up a small amount of narcotics and that drug possession charges would be filed against her. McCarthy staggered about 125 feet from the scene of the shooting, then collapsed. He emerged from surgery about 5:30 a.m.

God, Martians blamed

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Bond was increased from $30,000 to $50,000 today in the case of a teen-ager who allegedly told police that "God and some Martians" told him to shoot six people. Ruben Gonzales Estrada, 19, was taken into custody Sunday and charged with the shooting death of Gloria Gonzales, 14, who lived at nearby Poteet, Texas. Sheriff's officers said Miss Gonzales was gunned down by a man firing a 22-caliber rifle Sunday outside a tavern while visiting her aunt and uncle in San Antonio. Witnesses told investigators they saw a man carrying two rifles run from the scene of the shooting. Lt. Ray Paez said the suspect told officers that "he was ordered by God to this work" and that he had "five more to go" to complete his assignment. Paez also quoted the suspect as saying, "The Martians made me do it."

Reagan worth $4 million

NEW YORK (AP) — A financial disclosure statement filed with the Office of Government Ethics shows President Reagan has a net worth estimated at $4 million. The New York Times reported today. It was the second time Reagan disclosed his finances. The first was in 1976 when he sought the Republican presidential nomination and placed his worth at $1,455,571. The Times said that at the time there were suggestions that he had under-estimated the value of some of his real estate. His home in Pacific Palisades, for instance, was listed then at $200,000. Now it has been put on the market for $1.9 million. Reagan's new disclosure statement covers the year 1980 and up to last Jan. 20, the day he assumed office. The newspaper says that during that period, his gross income was reported at more than $230,000. It said that Reagan's other assets now include cash of $740,000, from the sale of stocks, which was placed in a blind trust last month; mortgages worth $600,000 from a 771-acre ranch in Riverside County, Calif., and a 688-acre ranch northwest of Santa Barbara, Calif., which he bought in November 1974 for $526,000 and is now valued at $1 million.

Iran contacted Red Adair, competitor for assistance

HOUSTON (AP) — Oil well firefighter Red Adair and his chief competitor were approached by the government of Iran last fall and asked to help that nation defeat U.S. economic sanctions, a Dallas newspaper reported. Iran sent Telex messages to Adair and Boots and Coots, another Houston-based well-firefighting team, to seek help in repairing damage done to Iranian oil fields by the war with Iraq, the Dallas Morning News reported Sunday. The two companies passed the messages on to Washington for advice and the Carter administration "told us to sit back and see which way the wind blows," Adair told the newspaper. President Carter had banned shipments of oilfield equipment and technology to Iran, hoping the sanctions would speed release of the 52 hostages seized from the U.S. embassy in Tehran. Adair's company had just finished a firefighting job in Iranian oilfields shortly before the hostage seizure and embassy takeover in November 1979. At the time, Carter had imposed an embargo and trade with or travel to Iran, but after the messages from the National Iranian Oil Co. in Tehran, the administration told the firefighters they could deal with the hostages were freed, the News reported. The newspaper quoted oil industry sources in London as saying the Iranian oil company is now anxious to start repairing oil field equipment damaged in the war, but the current Reagan administration has yet to say whether high-level technological help should be given Iran. "There's no easy answer, and I don't know what it will be once they evaluate the situation," said Pat Campbell, firefighter and administrative coordinator for Boots and Coots. "But I know that we and Red have never turned anyone down out of hand."

Commissioner questions need

Does county need 2 trappers?

By CAROL HART
County Commissioners questioned the practice of employing two trappers during their meeting this morning. Larry Tubbs appeared before the commissioners to explain his duties as trapper. Orville R. Starrit, who is paid in part through the state, is also trapper for Howard County. Commissioner Paul Allen, precinct 2, asked whether Howard County needed two trappers when most Texas counties had only one. He questioned the amount of money the county was paying to have two trappers work the area. "I've trained two years for the job (of trapper) said Tubbs. "I spent $13,500 getting rigged up for the job." He added that he had to attend a school to obtain a license to work as trapper. Commissioners advised Tubbs that they did not question that he was doing his job, but said they questioned whether money should be spent on two trappers. Tubbs said Starrit has plans to retire in the near future, but commissioners said they did not know of any plans for the state trapper to retire. "Will you lay me off until then?" Tubbs wondered. Commissioners agreed to talk to Starrit about any retirement plans, and to see if the county needs two trappers. Ivan Collins, a distributor for Shackle Products, met with commissioners to discuss a product which he says may ease flooding problems on county land. Basic H, billed as a concentrated soil conditioner which "promotes the penetration of water in soils," was the product which Collins said may aid the county with its overflow problem. "I've talked to people who have used it, and they say it will work," said Collins. Commissioners said they plan to experiment with the solution. Flooding in the county brought several angry property owners to the commissioners meeting this morning to discuss roads in the Silver Heels and Tubbs additions of the county. Debbie Cauley, a spokesperson for several residents on Angela Road, said that the county has been responsible for Angela Road for over a year. There is very little caliche on the road, said Mrs. Cauley, and heavy rains have made for bad driving conditions along the road. "We can't get in and out" in some areas, she said. Mrs. Cauley and several other representatives of the area said that they had been advised that if the road was not improved, mail service would be discontinued because postal employees were having trouble driving the road. "We've talked to Commissioner Allen three times," about the road, said Mrs. Cauley, adding that "we'd appreciate if something could get done." Allen explained that "We're going to get back on it," and added that road crews were faced with a road based on shallow soil. "We have to haul everything in" to fix the road. "We've done considerable work on that road," Allen said. Bill Mims, county engineer, said that "With the type of weather we had this year, caliche's not going to stand up." The road has been patched in many places, Mims said, and added that many people were getting stuck along bar ditches at the side of the road. David Barr, commissioner precinct 4, said rules specified that roads have eight inches of caliche on them before they can be taken over by the county. The road in question did not have the required eight inches, but county officials voted to take and maintain the roads, anyway. "We really shouldn't have accepted those roads," Barr said. "We'll do all we can," he added. It was explained that road maintenance equipment must be shared by all four precincts in Howard County, which will present a delay to the Angela Road.

Israeli troops raid Palestinian base

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli claims its troops killed about 10 Palestinian guerrillas in a helicopter raid on a Palestinian base in southern Lebanon used as a staging center for attacks on Israel. The Israeli military command said there were no Israeli casualties in the raid Sunday night. But the guerrilla command of Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization in Beirut, the Lebanese capital, said there were 16 casualties among the 200 raiders. It acknowledged three guerrillas killed and one wounded. An Israeli military spokesman said the helicopters lifted the commandos out safely after they destroyed an Arab Liberation Front base at Kfour, about two miles north of the guerrilla-controlled town of Nabatieh and eight miles from the Israeli frontier. The Israeli-backed front is one of eight guerrilla factions in the PLO. The attackers blew up the main structure on the base, a two-story building on a hill that was used as an observation post and arsenal for guerrilla attacks into northern Israel, the spokesman said. Lt. Gen. Raphael Eytan, Israel's military chief of staff, said the base was the headquarters of the guerrilla group responsible for an attack on the Israeli collective farm of Misgav Am in April 1980, in which an Israeli infant and a soldier were killed. "We settled our account with the Misgav Am cell," Eytan told reporters. "We achieved our aims completely." It was Israel's fifth strike into southern Lebanon within a month in what the Israeli government says is a continuing campaign to keep the guerrillas on the defensive and head off their raids. The last previous raid into southern Lebanon was on Feb. 3. A Palestinian account of the raid Sunday night said three Palestinians were killed and one wounded and three houses were destroyed at Kfour.

PRE-PLANNING A LOVED ONE'S FUNERAL...AN EXPRESSION OF LOVE

Just like buying life insurance and making a will, prearranging the funeral is expressing love for your family in a very special way. It's doing something now that will mean so much later. Those left behind will know that everything is being done exactly as you wanted it. And that's truly a blessing.

Visit Larry D. Sheppard Funeral Home this week for complete information on prearranging the funeral. No charge, or obligation, of course.

Interpreter is added to staff

Robin Byers, 27, has been hired as an interpreter for the Communications Division at the Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf at Howard College, according to Executive Director Dr. Doug Burke.

Byers previously worked as a sign language instructor at Pima Community College in Arizona.

"I'm quite impressed all the way around with the program offered here at SWCID," she said. "It's going to mean great opportunities for the deaf, especially with the specialization and allied health-type fields SWCID will be offering. These fields are very much limited in access for the hearing-impaired population."

Miss Byers has six years of professional experience in working with the deaf. She currently holds professional memberships in the Registry of Interpreters for the Deaf, Arizona Registry of Interpreters for the Deaf, where she was Chairman, State Evaluation Board, Grand Canyon Registry of Interpreters for the Deaf, where she was corresponding secretary, and the Arizona Association of the Deaf.

She has three certifications: Comprehensive Skills Certificate, Provisional Specialist Certificate, and Arizona Community Teacher's Certificate, State of Arizona.

"I like the total environment that is provided here at SWCID," she said, comparing SWCID's programs to others. "There are some other college programs which have the same type of environment, Gallaudet and NTID. However, those are on the east coast. And, I know myself, from working in Tucson, that quite a few of the students from Arizona go through quite a severe culture-shock, when suddenly they go from Tucson to Washington, D.C. or New York."

"Having an accessible college out in the west, I think, is just tremendous. It was desperately needed."

Clements, White trade barbs on prison issue

Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau
AUSTIN — Last week was enough to give a political reporter a case of the nerves. This is supposed to be a nice, quiet in-between-elections year when all you have to worry about are the antics of the Texas Legislature.

But Gov. Bill Clements and Attorney General Mark White are carrying on as though they were locked in a mighty political battle. The Republican governor and Democratic attorney general exchanged criticisms through reporters with nary a civil communication between themselves.

The current flap involves the prison system and its failings as seen through the eyes of U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice.

To recount briefly: Justice said mucho changes are needed to make the prison system suitable for human habitation. Clements is the chief executive of the state; White, the state's attorney in the suit against the prison system.

White last week announced a partial settlement of the suit and said things would have been better if Clements hadn't vetoed a prison construction appropriation last year.

Clements shot back — through reporters — that the state may need to hire outside counsel, thus implying that White isn't doing an adequate job.

So, the two top officials who are supposed to be trying to work out things in the prison suit are spending most of their time at political ego-jousting.

Some legislators now use money from their private officeholder accounts for personal expenses; others, don't.

Legislative reform groups, such as Common Cause, say that the present system is open to abuse and, at the very least, brings bad publicity to the legislature as a whole when questionable expenditures are made publicly.

White is a willing participant when Democratic senators plotted a challenge to Clements' grip on the $20 million Criminal Justice Division Fund.

The idea was for the comptroller and attorney general to share in these budgetary duties. Clements threatened a veto. A compromise substituted the lieutenant governor for the attorney general.

Clements obviously sees Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby as less of a political threat than White. Hobby has announced for re-election and, despite his quick mind, comes across as slow and plodding on television.

White is more the accomplished politician in this TV age. And the last attorney general found the job a good launching pad for a challenge of an incumbent governor in the 1978 Democratic primary.

So, maybe we're off and running in the 1982 gubernatorial campaign. Or, maybe White and Clements just can't stand each other personally.

If it's the former, one will knock off the other in the election, or both could lose and go home. If the latter is true and both win re-election, we may be seeing only the beginning of what could be a long, long feud.

One would think that a proposal to increase legislators' salaries would draw unanimous praise from legislators. But that's not the way things work in Texas.

Sen. grant Jones, a Democrat from Abilene, is proposing a hike from the present $7,200 annual salary to a still-modest $12,000.

In its first attempt to fly last week, the proposal — which would require voter approval — received little enthusiasm from a Senate committee.

There are two basic explanations for this. One is the notion that the state is served best by volunteer part-time public servants rather than professional politicians. The other is the legislators' fear that voters will react negatively to a pay raise.

Sen. Chet Brooks of Pasadena defended Jones' proposal, saying it would help relieve the need for outside contributions to pay for expenses not reimbursed by the state.

A few clouds were reported early today over the Lower Rio Grande Valley, but the remainder of the state had clear skies.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 40s over the eastern half of the state and in the 30s over the western half. Extremes ranged from 28 at both El Paso and Wink to 50 at Palacios.

Rain and wet snow dampened the nation's eastern third early today, bringing more relief to the parched Northeast but missing much of the drought-plagued Midwest.

Cunningham makes formal statement as candidate

Grady L. Cunningham has issued the following statement in connection with his candidacy for the Big Spring school board:

"If elected, I feel I will be able to offer support to the teachers of the Big Spring system in the difficult task of educating youth at a time when many social forces make the education profession a difficult one.

"At the same time, I will try to make sure that tax money is spent effectively and wisely. I will make service on the board a first priority.

"I offer my services because I have a continuing interest in education and community affairs."

Cunningham has been very active in community activities in recent years. He has served as executive regional director for the American Diabetes Association of West Texas, is a member of the American Cancer Society board and is its campaign chairman for 1981.

He is currently president of the West Side Community Day Care Center and is financial advisor for Immaculate Heart of Mary School.

While living in Midland briefly before returning to Big Spring in 1976, Cunningham served on several civic boards. Cunningham, 28, is a graduate of the local high school. After completing his studies there, he enrolled in and graduated from Howard College where he was a member of the Phi Theta Kappa honor society and then did upper level and graduate studies at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin in Odessa. His company, Cunningham Oil, has provided scholarships at Howard College.

He and his wife, the former Iris Ann Tollett, reside at No. 10 Glenwick Cove.

Three-year-old claims world push-up record

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Henry Marshall Jr., son of the world's push-up champion, reportedly has broken one world mark himself and is intent on kicking his father out of the record book. He's got plenty of time — he's only 3 years old.

Young Henry was introduced to push-ups by his father, Henry Marshall of San Antonio, who is listed in the Guinness Book of World Records as holding the world record in 10 push-up categories and once doing 2,800 push-ups using only one arm.

"Ever since he was a small baby he lay next to me during my four-hour workout," Marshall, 35, said recently while in El Paso visiting friends. "He started doing girls' push-ups on his knees and was up to 100 by the time he was 1. I got him a swimming pool when he reached 1,000 push-ups."

Henry Jr., who completed a record 3,078 push-ups in two hours during a trip to Japan, where the other contestants were 5 to 12 years old, boasted, "I'm going to take all my dad's titles away."

Who else but Americans get blamed?

It doesn't take a genius to figure out who is taking the rap in Russia for the unrest of the Polish working masses? Who else but the Americans?

No matter where the Russians run into problems — be it in Afghanistan, Africa or Europe — the Americans take the blame. Judged from the number of such claims made against us, our undercover army may outnumber our uniformed troops by several hundred thousand.

OF COURSE, the Soviets use such allegations as reasons to become involved in the internal affairs of nations like Poland. As the strife in Poland worsens, the Russians point the accusing finger at the United States and step up their war maneuvers just outside the country.

According to the Soviet press, American labor and espionage elements have been funneling money to the Polish dissidents while trying to keep the burr under the saddle, so to speak.

There are other nations a lot closer to Poland than the United States, each of which has reason to be afraid if Russian troops move into the country to restore the Soviet idea of tranquility, but America is the nation which absorbs the blame for the Poles' restlessness. If we didn't invent the word "interference," we certainly have it down to a fine art, so say the Muscovites.

Countries the world over may or may not believe the Russian tales of American intrigue but one thing is for sure — other nations know where to turn in times of national disaster, whether it be an earthquake in Ecuador, a flood in India or famine in Africa. Invariably, they look in the direction of the United States because that is where help invariably comes from.

THE RUSSIANS grasp such opportunities to make propaganda hay. It is quite a responsibility to be regarded by the world's people as the one country which can bring order out of chaos but, whether we like it or not, we have inherited that role. May we always deserve the reputation as a people who care enough about what happens to the rest of mankind to lend a helping hand. We don't always measure up to our aims as a super power but, on occasions, we succeed gloriously.

It would be nice, though, if the Soviet Union and other nations gave us a little credit if we rescue a stricken nation.

Ike praised

Joseph Kraft

WASHINGTON — "Let us talk of the Emperor," Victor Hugo used to say of Napoleon on French holidays. "It will do us good."

In similar vein, during observance of the President's Day, it may do us good to talk of the last occupant of the White House to serve out two terms — Dwight Eisenhower. For there has emerged a treasure trove of new materials showing that Eisenhower governed by art and skill and self-discipline, and not — as some imagined — by merely doing nothing.

Delegation of authority, to be sure, was a cardinal practice with Eisenhower, not out of laziness or lack of interest, but on principle. Prof. Fred Greenstein of Princeton, who has been working with the private papers, cites a letter written in August, 1960, to Henry Luce. "The government of the U.S.," Eisenhower wrote, "has become too big and too complex... for one individual to pretend to direct the details of its important and critical programming."

HAVING DELEGATED authority, Eisenhower was prepared to stand by his advisers. In a fine new book, "Eisenhower the President," his former aide William Bragg Ewald shows that time after time Eisenhower subordinated his own views to those of his associates. He let Atty. Gen. Herbert Brownell commit him into naming Earl Warren Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. He let Interior Secretary Fred Seaton jolly him into backing statehood for Alaska. "Dwight D. Eisenhower, more than any President in recent history," Ewald writes, "was an organization man."

When top advisers clashed, Eisenhower could let the fight drag on. Witness the waiting game played before finally going to the mat with Sen. Joseph McCarthy on the issue of Communist influence in the Army. But he could also settle matters at once. Thus in 1955 he came down against Treasury Secretary George Humphrey and the tax cut on the theory, advanced by Arthur Burns of the Council of Economic Advisers, that it would be inflationary.

In holding himself above his advisers, Eisenhower was at great pains to avoid being mired by the circumstances that play on most leaders. He scrupulously avoided ideological commitment. He exoriated his brother Edgar for his right-wing leanings and once said of Lincoln: "He was the greatest compromiser and the most astute master of expediency we have ever known."

HIS LANGUAGE was designed to keep options open. Ewald shows that tortured syntax was often used to avoid commitments on "detail." The comment he made on the famous Checkers speech Richard Nixon gave during the 1952 campaign was eloquent in its (almost cynical) detachment. "Your presentation," Eisenhower said, "was magnificent."

When dirty work had to be done, Eisenhower hung back and let others take the lead. He had Meade Alcorn, the Republican Party Chairman, inform Sherman Adams, the top White House aide, that Adams would have to resign because of involvement in the Goldfine scandal. He had former Party Chairman Leonard Hall sound out Nixon on the possibility of not running for re-election as Vice President in 1956.

Unless feeling himself wounded, Eisenhower avoided going public with personal dislikes. He mistrusted House Speaker Sam Rayburn and Senate Majority Leader Lyndon Johnson but worked well with them. He thought Franklin Roosevelt "cruel," but never said so publicly.

On matters that counted, Eisenhower followed the developments closely. He knew what was afoot almost minute-by-minute during the counter-coup in which the U.S. helped to restore the Shah of Iran to his throne.

From joint to joint

Dr. Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Please write about traveling arthritis. I have a cousin who is 77 and says that is what she has. She will not go to a doctor, so please tell me what you can. I have never heard of this before. — Mrs. C.M.O.

Let's see if I understand what your cousin means: One joint swells and pains for awhile, then this goes away, only to be followed by the same symptoms in another joint, and so on. In the truest sense, this is not "traveling arthritis," because there is no condition in which joint pain actually "travels." In the early stages arthritis, symptoms often may jump from joint to joint. Eventually the discomfort settles more or less permanently in all the affected joints. I doubt that your cousin has at 77 been encountering early arthritis. It usually sets in at an earlier age.

There is another joint situation in which the term "traveling" might be used. In older people with arthritis, one joint may feel stiff for a while, then limber up. The person forgets about that joint and shifts attention to a different joint, which is not limber. Again, there is no actual "traveling" involved.

Finally, there is a real condition called "migratory polyarthritis," which can be a symptom of many diseases; rheumatic fever, primarily a disease of children, is a classic one. The knees of a child with rheumatic fever may suddenly swell and pain; when they return to normal, the elbows or the wrists may flare up the same way. In this sense the pain "migrates." Of course, at 77, it is unlikely that your cousin has rheumatic fever.

Having said all the above, I still would try to get your cousin examined on the outside chance that some of the problems associated with migratory polyarthritis are involved here.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Will you please discuss peripheral neuropathy? My case has been diagnosed as idiopathic Charcot-Marie-Tooth syndrome. — N.J.H.

The peripheral nervous system is a widespread network of nerves that relay messages between the spinal cord-brain and muscles and bones. It's the same system that takes back the message of pain to your brain when you stub your toe, for example.

A disturbance anywhere along this network outside of the brain and spinal cord is called peripheral neuropathy. The symptoms vary depending on the area of the network affected — loss of feeling from the foot, for example. The list of causes is wide: infections, diabetes, arteriosclerosis and certain vitamin deficiencies.

For many such nerve problems, no cause can be found. They are called "idiopathic," which means of unknown origin. CMT disease is known to be hereditary, however. The nerves to muscles and feet are affected. The lower leg muscles become thin and walking becomes difficult. The illness progresses very slowly, and while there is little to do to halt it, it has been known to arrest itself at any stage.

Charcot-Marie-Tooth disease (one of the idiopathic neuropathies) is named for the doctors who first recognized the problem.

There is an excellent neurology department in the medical school in your city. Your case should be evaluated to find what serves are available.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Please tell me what a pyrospasm is? It was on my medical record, and since I have never been able to find anything about it anywhere I would like to know what it means. I like the thorough and humorous way you explain things. I wish you were my doctor. If this word is misspelled, it is the doctor's error. I have spelled it exactly the way he had written it. — D.F.

My answer

Billy Graham

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: How can I get rid of feelings of bitterness? My son has neglected me now that he is older, and I find it hard to be anything but bitter. — Mrs. L.A.T.

DEAR MRS. L. A. T.: Bitterness, resentment and hatred are closely related, and each is contrary to God's will for us. Yes, it is wrong for your son to be indifferent to you, but it also is wrong for you to harbor bitterness in your heart. I am thankful you want to do something about it. The Bible says, "Get rid of all bitterness, rage and anger, brawling and slander, along with every form of malice. Be kind and compassionate to one another, forgiving each other, just as in Christ God forgave you" (Ephesians 4:31-32).

I hope you will look very carefully at those verses I just quoted. I tell you that God has forgiven us in Jesus Christ. Think about that a moment. Think of all the sins you have committed during your life. Think of all the times you have neglected God and gone your own way in life acting as if

Read it again. Doesn't it read "pylorospasm"? The pylorus is the very end of the lower stomach, where it joins the small intestine. It is given a special name because it is extra muscular and because it governs the flow of food from the stomach into the small intestine. It derives from the Latin word for "gate."

If the muscular pylorus clamps down too tightly, the stomach takes longer to empty. That may cause bloating, belching or no symptom at all. Often, there is no apparent cause for pylorospasm. Sometimes, medicines to help prevent the pylorus muscles from clamping down are used.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My cat died from leukemia. Is there any danger to me? — N.R.

There is no evidence that the virus that causes leukemia in cats can be transmitted to humans. Neither do humans with leukemia transmit their illness to others.

Arthritis sufferers can be helped. For a copy of the booklet, "How You Can Control Arthritis," which discusses many types of arthritis and related joint diseases as well as effective treatments and medications, write to Dr. Donohue in care of the Big Spring Herald. Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

he did not even exist. You have been greatly concerned because your son has forgotten you, but God is much more concerned about us and the way we try to live life without him. But how does God react? Not with bitterness and hatred, but with love and forgiveness. That is why he sent his Son into the world — to demonstrate his love and make forgiveness possible. Christ loves you so much that he was willing to die on the cross as a complete sacrifice for your sins. You do not deserve his love and forgiveness, but he offers it to you anyway if you will open your heart to Christ and let him be your Savior and Lord.

God loves your son, just as much as he loves you. Your bitterness toward him does nothing to reconcile you to him; it only destroys you. Ask Christ to come in to your life, and then pray that he will take away your feelings. Then pray for your son, that he too will realize his need of a Savior and will turn to Christ. As you pray for him, you will find that God will begin to replace your bitterness with love.

Farrah's house

Around the rim

Andrea Cohen

For once the magazine didn't feature her photograph on the cover, but they did feature her name. Farrah Fawcett's house is being shown in a decorating magazine this month.

We've all been through numerous stories about her hair, her diets, her exercises, her skin, her marriage and her affairs. Not to say anything about her acting (or nonacting) ability.

WELL, I SUPPOSE we can all try her tips on hair and figure. Girls, if you want her ex-husband or her latest boyfriend for the day, just keep dreaming. But this is her house we're talking about.

Now, we've seen celebrity homes before in magazines, but after all, this is Farrah Fawcett we're talking about. So I calmly picked up the magazine and ran right out to the furniture store. The salesman cornered me.

SALESMAN: May I help you?
ME: Yes sir. This is Farrah Fawcett's home. I want one just like hers.

SALESMAN: You mean you want to decorate your home just like hers.
ME: Something like that.

SALESMAN: Well, that's good. We always like to help customers who have a lot of money to spend — er uh — who want to do a whole new redecorating job. How much do you have to spend?

ME: Well, I went into my piggy bank and dug out all my savings.
SALESMAN: Great. And how much does it add up to?

ME: $74.28.
SALESMAN: $74.28?
ME: Uh huh. Now let's get started.
SALESMAN: Lady, how big is her living room?

ME: I think this says it's 80 by 100 feet.

SALESMAN: And how big is your living room?

ME: I measured it before I came. All the notes are right here. It's seven feet wide and 14 feet long.

SALESMAN: Lady, the size of your living room seems about the size of your budget. How do you expect to get what she already has?

ME: You mean Ryan O'Neal?

SALESMAN: No, her furniture!

ME: I don't really want the same furniture she has. I just figured if I did, and Ryan O'Neal walked in, he wouldn't know the difference.

SALESMAN: He'd know the difference.

ME: How?

SALESMAN: He'd get his first suspicion when he walked into your seven by 14 foot living room.

ME: But that's what decorators are for, to hide the flaws.

SALESMAN: Forget the room for a minute. He'd get his second suspicion he wasn't in the right house as soon as he saw your — uh — hair. You don't have as much as she does.

ME: You don't think so?

SALESMAN: NO. But don't get discouraged. I hear Lee Majors is looking for someone who doesn't have blonde hair and doesn't decorate her house this way.

ME: But he's not Ryan O'Neal.

SALESMAN: Who is?

ME: That's true and you're right. I guess I'll just have to go for second best.

SALESMAN: Good.

ME: Now, let's get started.

SALESMAN: How much did you say you have to spend?

ME: $74.28.

SALESMAN: Over here, in our sofa line we have this wonderful flowery number

Quashed bomb

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's recent announcement that the Reagan administration would "very probably" decide to produce the neutron bomb and deploy it in Western Europe created an international furor.

World leaders had thought the neutron bomb issue was defused for good back in April 1978, when Jimmy Carter made the surprising decision to "delay" its deployment. At the time, Carter's turnaround was thought to be based largely on West Germany's reluctance to support the bomb's deployment there.

ANOTHER POSSIBILITY, though, was that Carter backed down on the neutron bomb — which kills people but leaves inanimate objects unscathed and has relatively short-lived radiation effects — because of concern that it would cause the Soviets to break off SALT II negotiations.

A secret message to Carter from Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev lends support to the latter theory. A copy of the Brezhnev letter has been obtained by my associate Dale Van Atta. It was sent on Jan. 5, 1978 — three months before Carter's announced decision to put the neutron bomb in the deep-freezer.

It is a remarkable document, sharply worded and pointedly addressed to Carter personally because, as Brezhnev wrote, "it is no secret that the decision whether to start production and deployment of neutron weapons depends now above all upon the U.S. government, upon you personally, Mr. President."

Noting that the matter was one of "significant acuteness," the Kremlin boss said bluntly: "The seriousness of the subject demands that talk be candid."

He said the Soviet Union's position on deployment of the neutron bomb in Western Europe was "sharply negative." The deployment would not be responsive "to the spirit of the times, to the interest of strengthening peace and detente, to peoples' aspirations."

IN A TYPICAL BURST of Kremlin propaganda style, Brezhnev purported to be moved by the terrible potential for destruction posed by the weapon.

"By their nature and their destructive characteristics, neutron weapons can strike not only people wearing military uniforms, but also huge masses of the population," the future attacker of Afghanistan protested. "These are inhuman weapons of mass destruction; they are directed against people. Their appearance will not diminish the likelihood of nuclear conflict but enhance it.

"The reality is that if neutron weapons are ever used, a devastating scythe will sweep across the territories of entire countries, probably not leaving a single inch untouched."

Then the Soviet president issued a not-so-veiled threat: Americans could not expect to escape the "devastating scythe" simply by being thousands of miles away.

"Perhaps some entertain the hope to stay on the sidelines if and when the point is reached that neutron weapons are killing Europeans," Brezhnev wrote. "This calculation is illusory in substance. Today neutron weapons are thought of in connection with one means of delivery, but tomorrow, or the day after, they may be attached to other vehicles of a completely different range — not of hundreds but of thousands of kilometers. Today these weapons have one yield. But tomorrow — it could be ten or a hundred times greater. Such is the law of the arms race..."

Then Brezhnev got around to SALT II.

"In what light would the negotiations currently underway... appear if simultaneously the deployment of neutron weapons was forced?" he asked. He answered: "Not much would be left of people's trust in solving the problem of disarmament, and in the success of ongoing negotiations. Moreover, the negotiations themselves, at least in some cases, would face the threat of being broken off."

Finally, Brezhnev warned that the United States could not hope to maintain its monopoly on the neutron bomb. He wrote that "if the choice of the United States is in favor of the neutron bomb, this will put the Soviet Union before the necessity to meet the challenge, that is to act in the same way as we were forced to act when atomic weapons came into being."

The letter was signed, "Sincerely, L. Brezhnev." Three months later, after West Germany had reluctantly agreed to deploy the weapon, Carter surprisingly reversed himself and called off the neutron bomb. The SALT II negotiations continued, and a treaty was signed in June 1979.

The Reagan administration has shown no inclination to revive the SALT II talks, and is now proposing to go ahead with the neutron bomb.

WATCH ON WASTE: As newcomers to government budget-cutting, the Reagan administration could do worse than heed the advice of an oldtimer in the game — the General Accounting Office. For example, the GAO's sleuths uncovered 2,493 unused public school buildings in 19 states.

Dear Editor: I am writing to ask you to help me and my school get the armadillo to be the official state mammal of Texas. We think the armadillo would be good because most people like them, they are interesting, they build good homes, and they eat fire ants. They have a tough hide — like a cowboy's boot.

Resolution HCR 53 is in Austin now and we need help to get it passed. Would you please ask your readers to write to their Representative and Senator and ask them to vote for it.

In banking, shop for best interest

With NOW accounts, automatic teller machines, "no-bounce" checking plans and more ways to compute interest than there are pennies in piggy banks, choosing the right bank presents problems for many consumers, especially to women. The February 10th issue of WOMAN'S WORLD offers a number of practical hints that will pay dividends by using a bank that saves time, money and effort.

Start by considering your personal needs, the magazine advises, as a guide to choosing its location. Are you a lunch-hour depositor? Do you need checks on Saturday when you are twenty miles from work? "Don't forget the bank's hours, the article continues, even if the bank has automatic teller machines. The bigger banks that often have this service are likely to have longer lines and more red tape.

In fine-tuning the process for opening a checking account, other questions besides the fees per check and per month should be raised. Will the bank cash payroll checks without delay? Will it insist on a 1-day clearance time or your having sufficient funds on hand to cover the check? And if you depend on income from afar to boost your cash flow, what's the policy on cashing or depositing out-of-state checks?

The bank may also have services that offer protection against bounced checks or it may provide NOW accounts, which allow you to write Negotiable Orders of Withdrawal on money in an interest-bearing savings account.

Passbook savings accounts offer ready access to your money, WOMAN'S WORLD points out, but the highest interest you can receive is 5 1/2 percent. Time deposits earn up to 7 percent, but you cannot withdraw money whenever you like.

Speaking of interest, the magazine notes that there are about 40 ways to calculate interest. The best is day of deposit to day of withdrawal and is based on the actual number of days the money is in your account.

The worst is the low-balance method, since it is based on the lowest balance in your account during the interest paid.

Dear Abby

Love and Respect Best Shown Now, Not Later

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Congratulations on your 25th anniversary as "Dear Abby." I have a very special reason for wanting to wish you well.

Twelve years ago you had a letter in your column signed TOO LATE, Abby, that letter motivated me to visit my aging and ailing mother every day during her last two years in a nursing home. I am ashamed to admit that until that time I thought I was doing quite well to visit her every Sunday for an hour.

I will always be indebted to you, Abby, for selecting that letter for your column. It motivated me to change my ways, and now I can live with a clear conscience.

Please run that letter again, Abby. It might do for someone else what it did for me.

GRATEFUL IN LONG ISLAND

DEAR GRATEFUL: I am grateful to you for reminding me to run it again. I have printed it three times, and each time I have heard from readers expressing appreciation. With pleasure I give it a much deserved re-run.

DEAR ABBY: I am the most heartbroken person on earth. I always found time to go everywhere else but to see my old, gray-haired parents. They sat at home alone, loving me just the same. It is too late now to give them those few hours of happiness I was too selfish and too busy to give, and now when I go to visit their graves and look at the green grass above them, I wonder if God will ever forgive me for the heartaches I must have caused them. I pray that you will print this, Abby, to tell those who still have parents to visit them and show their love and respect while there is still time. For it is later than you think.

TOO LATE

DEAR ABBY: I am a recent college graduate engaged to be married this summer. I became engaged while I was in college last year, and asked one of my school chums to be a bridesmaid. At the time we were good friends. However, we grew apart gradually, until now when we meet, she hardly gives me the time of day. In fact, the last few times we met there seemed to be tension between us. Now I don't even consider her a friend.

Must I include her in my wedding party? If not, how can I gracefully exclude her?

STUCK OR NOT

DEAR STUCK: Tell her candidly that your friendship has faded, and therefore it isn't appropriate for her to be a bridesmaid. It may not be very "graceful," but it beats getting stuck with a bridesmaid who is no longer a friend.

DEAR ABBY: I can't forget that survey you took after having received the letter from TIRED IN NEBRASKA. There must be something wrong with women who are 50 and tired of sex.

I am a woman of 59, and I enjoy my 61-year-old husband more now than I ever have. With our children grown and gone, the setting is ideal for romance. I still race home from the office to bathe and meet him at the door in a lace coat (the type one wears over a bathing suit). There's more to life than cooking, laundry and making beds!

I no longer have to worry about pregnancy or having the children hear us. These are the best years of our lives. I'm saving up for a mirrored bedroom ceiling!

Amount of social activity influences life expectancy

To live a longer, healthier life, here's what leading medical researchers recommend in a recent Family Circle magazine, "Here's To Your Health":

Keep socially active. After studying the ages and socialization habits of 7,000 people, Dr. Lisa Berkman, of the University of California at Berkeley, concluded that people who take an active role in socializing are more likely to live longer. Those who stay at home are more apt to be overweight and to drink and smoke excessively, says Family Circle.

Reduce two emotional aging factors, loneliness and repressed anger, and you can add up to 15 years to your life. So says Dr. Samuel Silverman associate clinical professor of psychiatry at Harvard University.

Make sure you get sufficient protein. "Protein deficiency after 50," says longevity researcher Dr. Lillian Troll in the magazine, "can cause weight loss, fatigue and premature old age, as the body responds by consuming its protein reserves and loses valuable muscle." One-third of the older men and women surveyed in her University of Wisconsin nutritional study were found to have protein deficiencies.

Keeping warm is essential as we age. "Many older people lose the ability to sense cold," says Nicholas Rango of Columbia University, "and become victims of accidental hypothermia because the body's mechanism for conserving heat works less efficiently with the passing years."

Swim for your life. "Swimming is the closest thing we have to an anti-aging pill," notes Dr. Paul Huttering of Western Illinois University.

Sunkist Growers, Inc. deny 'Today' Show information

Some people have contacted Sunkist Growers, Inc., Van Nuys, Calif., regarding the segment of the "Today" Show telling about the sale of navel oranges as cattle feed or the dumping of them. To provide information on this subject Sunkist says the following:

The navel orange crop this year is the largest in California-Arizona history, nearly 20 percent larger than last year's record crop. Despite published reports, no oranges are being plowed under or dumped by Sunkist-affiliated packinghouses, though we cannot speak for the rest of the industry.

Sunkist shippers are selling some low-grade fruit to dairies and feed lots for cattle feed. This fruit is generally of very small size, with many oranges the size of golf balls, and is unmarketable through fresh channels. Usually all fruit that is not of fresh market quality is processed. But navel juice does not freeze well, even when frozen and cannot be used in the same ways Valencia juice is used. Therefore, if all of this fruit were to be sent to processing plants, it would cost more to squeeze the navel juice than the juice is worth. By using some of this fruit as cattle feed, it still returns indirect benefit to consumers in the form of dairy products and beef.

The point to be emphasized, which has not been appearing in published reports, is that shipments

Open Forum will meet on March 2

A new public education project of the Howard County Division of the American Heart Association, the Open Forum, will have its first meeting on March 2 at 7:30 p.m. in the Malone-Hogan Hospital Classroom.

"The concept for the Open Forum was developed by a subcommittee of our local Board of Directors," Clint Holloman, program chairman, said. "Several board members perceived a need for a public program and meeting on cardiovascular diseases. The board assigned the subcommittee the task of developing the program and the Open Forum is the result," Holloman continued.

At the March 2 meeting a film on cardiovascular disease titled "Better Odds for a Longer Life" will be shown. Bruce Cox M.D. of Cowper Clinic and Hospital will answer audience questions following the film.

Future meeting dates, times, locations, and program topics for the Heart Association's Open Forum will be determined by those in attendance.

Holloman emphasized that the meeting is open to the public. "That's why we chose the name Open Forum," he said. "I urge everyone with a cardiovascular problem and anyone having cardiovascular problems to attend the first meeting of the Open Forum."

Should adoption secret be kept?

By ROBERT WALLACE, Ed.D. Copley News Service

Several months ago an adopted teen-age girl sought to find her natural mother and wanted to know how to find her. My answer encouraged her and gave her several starting points.

I also advised her to discuss her concern with her adoptive parents before starting the search.

My response to this girl brought forth many letters from teens and parents throughout the United States and Canada.

Interestingly, almost all the parents did not agree with my advice, while the teens did. I feel this topic is very important and I'd like to share some of the readers' responses.

You have advocated that adopted children should seek out their birth parents. As the father of an 11-year-old girl whom we have had since she was five days old, I wish to take exception to your position. Our daughter's natural mother was very young and single when our daughter was born. As soon as it came up, we told our daughter all she has asked to know about her origin.

The identity of the natural parents does not seem to be a matter of much concern to our daughter, who has accepted all her adoptive ancestors. To intrude into the lives of the natural mother and her husband and children at this time would not seem to me to promise much more than guilt, confusion and uncertainty.

Incidentally, I find the vast majority of your advice most sound, honest and non-pontifical. — Mr. M. R., San Luis Obispo, Calif.

I'm a 17-year-old girl who is adopted. I love my adoptive parents very much, but I want to find out who my natural mother is and where she lives. I want to know if I have any natural brothers or sisters. I want to know about this.

It is important to me. It doesn't mean that I will love my adoptive parents less.

No one except an adoptive child knows how it feels. Thanks a million for your stand on this matter. I appreciate it and I know many adopted kids do also. — Ellen, Galesburg, Ill.

My parents adopted my older brother because they thought they could never have children. Three years later I came along.

My mother worked hard to raise us because my father became an alcoholic and couldn't hold a job. In his late teens my brother found his real mother who by that time had married into wealth. When he married, his children called his real mother "Grandmother" and my mother "Mrs."

Please remember my little story when you encourage adopted children to find their real mothers. — Mrs. R. S. Huntsville, Ala.

"So a person is adopted — big deal. Does this give the person the right to make other people unhappy?"

Instead of encouraging this type of day-dreaming, why don't you tell adopted children to be happy that he or she has two loving parents? — Mrs. G. L., Colorado Springs, Colo.

I'm 18 and adopted. Two years ago I desperately wanted to know who my natural mother was. I discussed the problem with my adoptive parents (I love them dearly) and they both agreed that considering the way I felt, it would be best for me to meet my natural mother.

It took some time and a little money, but it all came about six months ago. Now my mind is at ease. I've met my natural mother. I don't ever plan to see her again and I love my adoptive parents even more for helping me during a very traumatic time in my life.

I'm sure if they would have discouraged me, I would still today have been in a traumatic state of mind, wondering about my natural mother. — Karen, Wheeling, W. Va.

"Magic" gives Cooper a knee up

If there has been a silver lining to the dark cloud that was Earvin "Magic" Johnson's knee injury, it has been the rapid development of Michael Cooper of the Los Angeles Lakers.

The slender, 6-foot-6 Cooper, Los Angeles' sixth man in its run to the National Basketball Association championship last season, inherited Johnson's guard spot in the starting lineup after the Magic man got hurt Nov. 18 and has helped the Lakers to a 27-16 record since then.

Cooper had two steals and one blocked shot in the final two minutes Sunday, and fed a perfect pass to Kareem Abdul-Jabbar for the go-ahead basket with 58 seconds to play as the Lakers edged the New York Knicks 96-93. The Lakers expect Johnson to return to action

Friday night, but will be able to bring him along slowly because Cooper is playing so well. At New York he had 12 points (on 6-for-9 shooting), nine rebounds, seven assists, four steals and one blocked shot.

Abdul-Jabbar led the Lakers with 32 points and Jamaal Wilkes and Norm Nixon added 19 apiece. Reserve guard Mike Glenn was New York's high scorer with 19.

The victory kept the Lakers within 4½ games of first-place Phoenix in the Pacific Division race. The Suns beat Philadelphia 116-110.

In other NBA games, the Dallas Mavericks beat the New Jersey Nets 132-109; the Golden State Warriors downed the Kansas City Kings 104-96; the Atlanta Hawks defeated the Chicago Bulls 121-116; the Milwaukee

Bucks topped the Washington Bullets 112-103; the Houston Rockets outscored the Seattle SuperSonics 111-96; the Portland Trail Blazers edged the Indiana Pacers 113-109 in overtime; the San Antonio Spurs nipped the Denver Nuggets 133-129 in overtime, and the San Diego Clippers beat the Utah Jazz 108-93.

Suns 116, 76ers 110.

Walter Davis scored eight of his 20 points in the final period as Phoenix beat Philadelphia in a matchup of conference leaders. Davis got six points in a 10-2 spurt that gave the Suns a 94-84 lead with 7:33 to play and the 76ers never caught up.

Mavericks 132, Nets 109. Dallas broke a 15-game losing streak as guard Oliver Mack scored 28 points. Mack helped the Mavs to a 27-13 lead in the first 8½ minutes and the Nets never caught up. Dallas' record is now 9-55, and the expansion club needs just one more win in its last 18 games to avoid matching the 9-73 record of the 1973 Philadelphia 76ers, the NBA's losingest team.

Warriors 104, Kings 96. Bernard King scored 17 of his 30 points in the final period as the Warriors beat Kansas City despite the absence of guard John Lucas, who was AWOL for the fifth time this season.

Guards Lloyd Free of Golden State and Phil Ford of Kansas City were both hurt in a first-quarter collision. Free suffered a dislocated right thumb, which should sideline him at least two weeks, and Ford is expected to be out about a week because of a scratched iris on his left eye.

Bucks 102, Bullets 93. Milwaukee built a 56-40 halftime lead and held off the Bullets, who pulled as close as one point in the fourth quarter. Guards Sidney Moncrief and Quinn Buckner and forward Marques Johnson had big baskets for the Bucks down the stretch. Moncrief led all scorers with 25 points.

Hawks 121, Bulls 116. Dan Roundfield scored 29 points as Atlanta built a 15-point lead after three quarters and held off a Chicago comeback bid.

Rockets 111, Sonics 96. Houston took command by outscoring Seattle 27-10 in a 10-minute stretch of the second half. Calvin Murphy scored 13 of his game-high 27 points in the fourth quarter as the Rockets pulled away.

Blazers 113, Pacers 109. Calvin Nat's three-point play with m2 seconds left in overtime clinched Portland's victory over Indiana.

Hawks, Queens play tonight

Both Howard College basketball teams play host to Clarendon College clubs in important Western Conference games this evening.

The girls square off at 6 p.m., the boys at 8 o'clock. Don Stevens' girls need a victory to climb into a four-way tie for first place in the standings. The Hawk Queens are currently 7-3. Amarillo, Odessa and Western Texas are now tied for the top spot in the standings with 8-3 records.

The Howard College boys are 12-4 in the race, good enough for a tie for second place in the standings. Clarendon upset the Hawks, 68-65, in an earlier game at Clarendon.

The local teams are in their final week of regular season play. They go to Amarillo Thursday.

Czech wins Avon tourney

HOUSTON (AP) — For Czechoslovakia's Hana Mandlikova, the third time finally proved to be the charm.

The 19-year-old Mandlikova, hampered at times by a lingering wrist injury, twice rallied from 4-3 deficits Sunday to beat a determined but inexperienced Bettina Bunge 6-4, 6-4 in the title match of the $100,000 Avon Championships of Houston.

Earlier this year, Mandlikova dropped championship matches to Martina Navratilova in Chicago and Leslie Allen in Detroit.

"I'm very happy to win my first Avon championship," said a relieved Mandlikova, the world's 5th-ranked women's tennis player and the No. 2 seed. "The winter circuit is tough. I had other chances in Chicago and Detroit and lost."

The 19-year-old Czech received the $22,000 first prize. Bunge, who captured the Peruvian national championship at age 13, got $11,800 for her efforts.

In other matches,

Yugoslavia's Mima Jausovec overcame knee and foot injuries to upset third-seeded Kathy Jordan 6-4 in the single-set consolation match.

Sue Barker of England and Ann Kiyomura defeated Regina Marsikova of Czechoslovakia and Mary Lou Piatek 5-7, 6-3, 6-4 to capture the doubles title.

Mandlikova, favored after No. 1 seed Tracy Austin withdrew because of a back injury, trailed 4-3 in both sets but bounced back each time to overpower Bunge, who debuted Sunday in her first finals match of a major tennis tournament since joining the pro circuit in 1979.

But Bunge — a 17-year-old Swiss-born West German citizen who lives in Florida — refused to bow to Mandlikova's fiery aces and tricky drop shots.

"I had problems with my first serve the whole match. I just had two aces. I usually have more," said the 19-year-old Czech. "My second serve was too short a lot of times and she was coming in too quick. I couldn't do anything."

Mandlikova was down one game in the opener but rallied from a 40-15 deficit to break Bunge's serve and tie the set at 4-4. She served her only two aces to win the ninth game and broke Bunge again to take the set.

The second set was a carbon copy, with Mandlikova again trailing 4-3. Mandlikova tied the set, held serve in the ninth and then broke Bunge to clinch the victory and extend her winning streak over Bunge to eight.

Both are scheduled to compete in the Avon tournament at Seattle this week.

"I saw my chance but I lost my serve and the last three games," Bunge said.

In the consolation match, Jordan tried to capitalize on Jausovec's injured right knee and swollen left foot by running the No. 4 seed.

Relief ace signs with Royals

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Dan Quisenberry, as it turns out, will not become the first spring training holdout in the history of the Kansas City Royals, American League 1980 baseball champions.

The side-armed sinkerball specialist was on the field when the Royals began their official workouts Sunday, after he and club player John Schuerholz shook hands on a one-year contract.

Quisenberry, the team's bullpen ace and the American League's Fireman of the Year in 1980 with a 12-7 record and 33 saves, is believed to have signed for a little more than $100,000.

Last year, Quisenberry made a little more than the $31,000 major league minimum. The incentive package in the new pact is expected to include extra money for bettering a prescribed number of appearances, saves and awards.

Although the new contract puts him in a different salary league from other top relievers — Chicago White Sox reliever Ed Farmer was awarded $600,000 last week by an arbitrator — he's happy just the same.

"I'm a couple of states away from some of those people," said Quisenberry, also noted for his witty onliners. "Probably a couple of southern states. Maybe once you consider incentives it's only the difference of a couple of counties."

"I can't hide the fact I lied the major leagues in saves (actually tied with New York's Rich Gossage)," said Quisenberry. "But also, there's that little thing called 'enure,' plus the salary structure of the Royals."

"The way that is set up among the Royals, I understand why I got the contract. I did. I also understand why my peers get more. I see no problem if I can have another good year. Meanwhile, I'm happy with what I got. I'll never think what I should or shouldn't have gotten. I'm just pleased the whole thing is over."

A FOOT SHORTER — Anthony "Spud" Webb (front) stands a foot shorter than teammate Gil Williams at Wilmer-Hutchins High School in Hutchins, a small suburban town on the south edge of Dallas County. Webb is a small package for a basketball player at 5-4 and 125 pounds but the 17-year-old senior averages 25 points per game and can dunk the ball.

"Spud" proves size isn't everything

HUTCHINS, Texas (AP) — Anthony "Spud" Webb, a senior guard for Wilmer-Hutchins High School's basketball squad, can shoot, pass, handle the ball, move well through a crowd and block shots. He can also dunk the ball.

He's 5-foot, 4-inches tall. "He's the talk," says Wilmer-Hutchins coach Homer Smith. "Spud's the talk around here."

Webb went through a growing spurt over the summer. He was only 4-11 at the end of his junior year but grew five inches, learned to "stuff" a basketball and play with the big boys.

Smith remembers the end of that growing spell.

"I was sitting at home one night and somebody called me up and said, 'You gotta come on down here to the gym and take a look at Spud.' So I went on over and there he was on the court in a pickup game with (former LSU star) DeWayne Scales and (Texa A&M senior starter) Vernon Smith. And, believe it or not, Spud was throwing a few moves and scoring points. I almost fell over."

As a senior, Webb averages 25 points and four assists per game, but his biggest asset is his incredible jumping ability.

In the fourth game of the season, in Fort Worth, forward Willie Ashley scored on a dunk shot for the state-ranked Dunbar Wildcats. Standing at mid-court, Webb took the ensuing Wilmer-Hutchins inbound pass, drove to his own basket, leaped into the air and responded with a stuff shot of his own, just five seconds later.

"The place went crazy,"

Smith said. "I knew then that we had a special player."

Last week, in a home game, North Garland's 6-foot-8 center, Joe Walters, was headed for a breakthrough layup — a cinch two points. Webb caught him from behind, went up with Walters — 1-foot, 4-inches taller — and blocked the shot.

"Unbelievable," said Smith. Players often ask Webb how such a little guy can get so high in the air. "I tell them it's a secret," said "Spud" with a grin.

"Sometimes they just stare at me. I can tell they're surprised by the way they holler."

"I've put a lot of hard work into this," he continued. "I run a mile each day, go up and down the bleachers 20 or 25 times and practice jumping after I run."

"Some coaches asked me last year why I was keeping that little kid around in my program," Smith said. "I told them he has more heart than anyone on our team. 'You just know something will happen when he gets his hands on the ball.'"

Stress can tackle strongest athletes

EDITOR'S NOTE: A little stress can be healthy, but too much can play havoc with an athlete's work and life. In a five-part series, doctors, counselors, athletes and coaches explain the physical and emotional effects of stress and how athletes cope. Part 1 is an overview.

By FRED ROTHENBERG

Part of being an athlete is being a hero, a Superman. And for a long time the culture has assumed that athletes, because they were steely physically, were naturally strong emotionally.

Tradition taught athletes that's what they were supposed to be. Tradition taught fans they could expect it.

But today some athletes and coaches are acknowledging they're mortal.

Baseball players like Darrell Porter, Bob Welch and Reggie Jackson, football players like Jim Plunkett and Lynn Swann, and even the young Olympic hockey star, Jim Craig, are casting aside the old cloak of stoicism. They're saying that like most of us, they suffer stress that affects physical and mental well-being, their home lives and their performances.

"It isn't easy being an athlete," said Dr. Bruce Ogilvie, a prominent sports consultant to many amateur and professional teams. "You can't imagine the stresses weighing down on them. They're asked to be excellent every time they put on their uniforms. When we place human beings in front of audiences requiring excellence everytime, it's no wonder they sometimes turn to drugs and alcohol and have a high incidence of psychosomatic disorders."

The lifestyle can be glamorous, the money wonderful.

But pro sports careers are short. While most of us have a few decades in which to make our marks, the athlete is driven to make it big quickly. What he's going to do when the cheering stops is another matter. Job security, the nomadic lifestyle, striving for approval from coaches, teammates and a fickle public all intensify the day-to-day stress of his job.

Sports physicians, teams and leagues are beginning to acknowledge the stresses. And some are trying to help athletes cope. In the area of alcohol and drug abuse, the sports leagues generally see their roles as disciplinary, yet some are helping troubled athletes get into drug and alcohol rehabilitation centers.

Some teams are offering psychological counseling for other problems. Some are trying to help athletes make the transition when their sports careers end and it's time for a second career.

The medical profession has taken up sports as a specialized field of treatment. And psychiatrists and psychologists are playing a bigger role.

There is good and bad stress, according to Dr. Hans Selye of the University of Montreal, a leading authority on the subject.

And stress heightens the senses and creates or sustains energy. Good stress is part of being "up" for an event. It can improve performance.

"Stress that helps performance — arousal, getting up for an event — is healthy. It's like a violin string. Tension is good. But too little or too much isn't good nor the right note," said Dr. Kenneth Greenspan, director of the center for stress-related disorders at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center in New York.

Bad stress can hamper athletic performance, make athletes more injury-prone, cause depression and family rifts, and it drives some to excessive alcohol and drug use.

Athletes find ways to shield themselves from overdoses of stress. Some use conventional ways of relaxing, like deep-breathing or trying to ignore pressure. Others have more unusual ways of coping.

Before a game, basketball great Bill Russell used to throw up; then he knew he was ready. Chicago Black Hawks goalie Glenn Hall would lose his lunch between periods. Darrell Griffith of the Utah Jazz used hypnosis to help his defense when he played at Louisville.

Other athletes have used transcendental meditation, exercises, religion and drugs to get ready for a competition.

The examples of athletes tensing up and not playing well are legion. So are the cases when an athlete, looking for a milestone goal or victory, presses too much, disrupting his normal game patterns. The goal or victory often takes much longer to achieve.

It cannot be said with any certainty how widespread drug and alcohol use are among athletes, but many coaches and players say that both are common in sports and that some athletes use them to ease the tensions.

Hollywood Henderson, the flamboyant former Dallas Cowboy, now a free agent, recently checked into a rehabilitation center, saying he had a $1,000-a-day cocaine habit that was destroying his career. Terry Furlow of the Utah Jazz was killed in a car crash in 1980. The coroner's report disclosed traces of cocaine and valium in his blood. Last year, baseball's Porter, Welch and Dock Ellis admitted their alcoholism and enrolled in a rehabilitation center.

These are dramatic examples. But even for well-balanced athletes, stress is a fact of life.

"There's no question I don't have as much outward enthusiasm anymore," said veteran Cincinnati pitcher Tom Seaver. "I found through experience that what I enjoy is the experience of pitching itself. When it's over, it's over. I don't take things as personally as I used to. I keep baseball in perspective."

She's glad she played!

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — What began as a modest start in the $150,000 Bent Tree Ladies Golf Classic ended in a tournament worth playing for Amy Alcott.

Alcott started her last tour of the par-72, 6,088-yard Bent Tree Golf and Racquet Club course by hitting two trees and missing a 12-foot putt to bogey the 534-yard, par-5 first hole. But after wrapping up her one-stroke victory over defending champion JoAnne Carner, Alcott said she was glad she played.

Alcott wasn't feeling well last week and had planned to skip the tournament, but changed her mind. The decision paid off Sunday with a 12-under par 276 worth $22,500.

"It was the most competitive, most exciting round of golf I think I've ever played," said Alcott. "It does a lot for my confidence. I wasn't feeling good. I had planned to miss this tournament."

Alcott, who finished with a 5-under 67 on the final round, fired six birdies and a bogey to edge Carner, who led by a stroke after 54 holes but shot four bogeys and seven birdies in the final round of the Ladies Professional Golf Association event.

Carner, who shot 69, missed short putts to bogey 17 and par 18 and lose her bid for a playoff.

On the 18th hole, Carner's second shot landed in a sand trap. Her wedge shot soared 50 feet, landing four feet from the pin, but she missed the putt for a birdie.

"That's the only one I missed that irritated me," said Carner, who took home $14,700 for shooting 277. "I hit a sand wedge as high and as hard as I could hit. I play that shot very well."

Steer baseballers come out slugging

The Big Spring Steer Baseball Team looked good in two early scrimmages, Thursday and Friday.

Tough defense and solid hitting gave the Steers a 12-1 win over Andrews and an 8-3 victory over Monahans.

Outstanding performances in both games were turned in by Mark Warren, who had six hits for seven at-bats, and drove in five runs. Tommy Rodriguez went four-for-seven, and also scored five runs. Lupe Ontiveros had an impressive three-for-five in his trips to the plate.

The pitching staff, Wayne

Shipman, Tommy Rodriguez, Moe Rubio and Tony Ontiveros, also pulled it together. The hurlers limited Andrews to three hits and struck out eight batters.

Monahans was able to come up with only two hits, and 14 batters struck out.

The varsity squad will hit the road Friday in another scrimmage against Monahans. The JV squad will travel to Andrews on Thursday.

The official season will begin on March 2 with a game here against Lubbock Monterey.

Aggies charging

Despite a string of nine straight victories in the Southwest Conference that has given his team a clinch for at least a tie for the regular-season title, Arkansas' Eddie Sutton is still looking over his shoulder.

Texas A&M claimed its fifth victory in its past six outings Saturday in routing Texas 108-79, and the Aggie are claiming they're again good enough to be ranked in the nation's top 20, despite their mid-season collapse.

The Aggies, 6-8 and 13-10, won only one of eight games in the first half of the conference race, but appear back on track.

"We had our troubles, but we knew all along we had the talent to do this. We have a chance to prove we deserved to be ranked in the top 20 back when we were 7-0," A&M sophomore center Claude Riley said.

Arkansas won its first two games before dropping three in a row at the start of the season. Baylor won its first five league games before capsizing. Texas Tech was 3-1 before losing four of its next five. Houston was alone at the top of the league, but now has lost four of its last six.

"Every team has gone through it. It's just unbelievable," Sutton said of the ups-and-downs that have plagued the Southwest Conference this season.

"We were 2-3 at one time. Maybe that was a blessing in disguise," Sutton said after Arkansas defeated Rice 75-59 Saturday in Fayetteville. The win raised Arkansas' record to 20-6 and 11-3, giving the Hogs their fifth straight season with 20 or more victories.

In other games Saturday, Baylor beat Houston 70-68 in Houston, and Texas Tech beat SMU 51-48 in Reunion Arena in Dallas.

Arkansas can clinch the conference title by beating SMU in Fayetteville Tuesday.

The Aggies' win over Texas pushed them into a tie with idle TCU for the crucial sixth-place spot in the conference with a 6-8 record.

VICTORY ENSURED — Golfer Johnny Miller raises his arms after sinking a 40-foot putt on the 14th hole at the Glen Campbell Open in Los Angeles Sunday. Miller captured first place with 14 under par followed by Tom Weiskopf with 12 under.

Why can't baseball be more like real life?

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Sports Writer

You're a bricklayer who has been working for the Acme Construction Co. for 25 years. You started as an apprentice at $2.25 an hour but now get $14.50 with time-and-a-half for overtime.

It's not bad living. You've got a house in the suburbs and enough money socked away to send the kids to college. The company's been nice to you but you feel you're stuck, going nowhere.

Across town, the Titanic Builders Corp. offers you a job as superintendent with half again as much money. You take it. Acme doesn't scream. It shrugs and elevates another apprentice.

The same scenario — with more flamboyant trappings and figures multiplied many times over — is occurring now in baseball.

Simply put, that's the core of the threatened players' strike which may see the season open with empty, unlighted parks.

Whatever happens, the year 1981 may go down as another landmark in the history of the game — and for big-time pro sports generally.

It could be the year that baseball, floating giddily around the clouds for so many generations, is hurled to earth and shocked into the realization that spectator sports are no longer fun and games with their own hands-off set of rules but are an integral part of normal commercial life.

The relation between an owner and player, for instance, is no different than that between the bricklayer and his boss, or working agreements in other enterprises whether they be auto, steel, the theatre or common labor.

The free agent compensation issue, the key to the current strike threat, is complex and, to the uninvolved outsider, dead-end boring. It began with free agency in 1976 after an arbitrator and the courts had ruled against the reserve clause, which had made the ballplayer a virtual serf of the club, its property for life until traded or sold.

Free agency brought freedom. As contracts ran out, players put themselves on the open market and reaped salaries that defied belief.

The owners agonized. Some complained they couldn't afford the competitive bidding. Commissioner Bowie Kuhn saw it as a "ticking time bomb."

But the owners kept dealing out those million-dollar contracts.

Players agreed four years ago to permit a team losing a player to free-agent re-entry draft to receive as compensation an amateur draft choice. Owners argued it was inadequate.

In the newest negotiations, the owners have demanded that any club signing a free agent who was drafted by at least seven other teams must surrender one of its roster players after first protecting 15 players.

The players indicate they'd rather sit it out the season than yield any of their hard-earned free agent gains.

Catcher Bob Boone of the Philadelphia Phillies, player representative of the National League, contends such a concession would restrict a player's bargaining power. Few clubs will pick up an expensive property, the players say, if they have to sacrifice a front-line player in the bargain.

Ballplayers, once they fulfill contracts, should be permitted to sell their skills to the highest bidder without restraint. Owners can shell out as many millions as they feel their pocketbooks and shareholders will allow.

Forget compensation.

When Barbara Walters went from NBC to ABC, should ABC have been forced to throw in Howard Cosell and two draft choices?

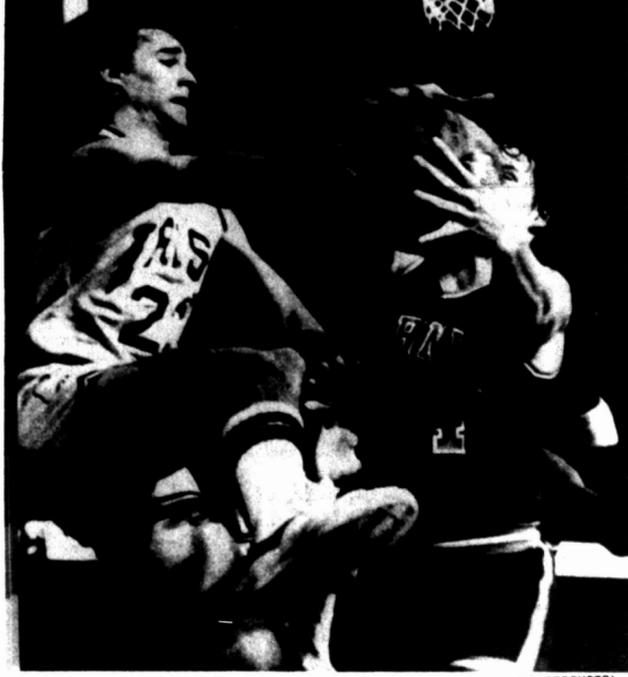

When Lee Iacocca, Ford's managerial genius, jumped to Chrysler, should Chrysler have thrown in two vice presidents and all unsold Plymouths?

The clubs' complaint that they should be compensated for years and money spent in developing a player holds little water. In industry, big companies steal off bright, young executives all the time.

And let's shut the door on talk that ballplayers are spoiled and are ruining the game with their demands. Why begrudge Reggie Jackson his $2.9 million for five years and Pete Rose his $3.2 million for four when actor Paul Newman gets $5 million for a single picture?

Nobody's fleeing anybody in baseball. Let the guys put their talent on the shelf and let owners bid away. That's the way big business is played.

Irish break streak with Hail-Mary basket

It's getting to be old hat for Digger Phelps.

"It's never the same the second time around," says the Notre Dame basketball coach.

Or the third, fourth or fifth, etc.

For still another time, the Fighting Irish pulled off one of their patented, headline-making victories Sunday. They beat top-ranked Virginia this time, 57-56, on a last-gasp jump shot by Orlando Woolridge, who claimed: "I never made a bigger basket."

The triumph by the 11th-ranked Irish broke the nation's longest streak by a Division I college basketball team, 28 games dating back to last year. But you can understand why Phelps has become so nonchalant about such things — for the Irish, these high-profile triumphs have become traditional.

The biggest one of all, of course, was on Jan. 19, 1974, when they stopped UCLA's record 88-game winning streak 71-70 at South Bend. On other occasions, the Irish ended UCLA's 115-game nonconference streak at home in 1976, ended San Francisco's 29-game streak in 1977 when the Dons were

No. 1 and beat DePaul in 1980 when the Blue Demons brought a 25-0 record and No. 1 ranking into Notre Dame's Athletic and Convocation Center.

With the end of the Cavaliers' string, Louisiana State emerged with the nation's longest Division I streak at 25 games — including Sunday's 67-57 triumph over Texas A&M. The fourth-ranked Tigers clinched the Southeastern Conference championship by beating No. 8 Tennessee 66-65 Saturday.

In other action Saturday, No. 2 Oregon State routed Washington State 81-53; No. 3 DePaul stopped Marquette 78-71; fifth-ranked Wake Forest was upset by 20th-ranked Maryland 94-80; No. 6 UCLA lost a 74-72 decision to Stanford; No. 7 Arizona State turned back Arizona 71-66; ninth-rated Utah downed Texas-El Paso 69-59 and No. 10 Kentucky defeated Vanderbilt 80-48.

Also, No. 12 Iowa trimmed Purdue 67-62; 13th-ranked North Carolina whipped Clemson 75-61; 14th-rated Wichita State beat Creighton 83-70; 15th-ranked Illinois downed Michigan State 82-62; No. 16 Indiana tripped Minnesota 74-63; 17th-ranked Brigham Young stopped New Mexico 78-72; Northwestern upset No. 18 Michigan 74-70 and No. 19 Lamar turned back Arkansas State 69-66.

Notre Dame came out on top with the help of a Cavalier blunder. With 10 seconds left and Virginia leading 56-55, the Cavs' Lee Raker failed to get the ball in play within five seconds, turning it over to the Irish. After a timeout, Tracy Jackson missed a jumper and Kelly Tripucka was stripped of the ball before he could shoot. Woolridge then grabbed the ball and hit the winning shot from about 16 feet.

"I grabbed the ball, turned and shot and I didn't think about it until I saw it went through the hoop," noted Woolridge, who said he didn't realize the impact of what he had done "until about 800 people jumped on me."

Jeff Jones had made one of two free throws to give Virginia a 56-53 lead with 35 seconds left. Then Notre Dame's John Paxson cut the lead to 56-55 with two free throws before the frantic windup. The loss left Virginia's record at 23-1 this year, while the Irish improved to 20-4, marking the sixth straight 20-win season under Phelps.

Howard Carter was the key figure for LSU Sunday. He scored nine of his team-leading 21 points during a 15-2 burst that carried the Tigers from five-point deficit to an eight-point lead midway through the first half. The Tigers were on their way to their 26th victory in 27 games.

LSU's leading scorer, forward Rudy Macklin, was held to just four points — well below his 17.2 average — but it didn't seem to bother the Tigers.

"We just eliminated Macklin from the offense and used him as a decoy," said LSU Coach Dale Brown. "When Macklin isn't scoring, Carter will. If Carter isn't getting his, then somebody else will."

On Saturday, Macklin had 19 points against Tennessee and Leonard Mitchell delivered two free throws with seven seconds left to clinch LSU's second SEC title in three years.

"Thank goodness we made our clutch free throws when we had to," said Brown. "These kids have given me a whole new outlook on coaching. It's just been a fine year."

Oregon State had no problem at all in beating Pacific-10 colleague Washington State as Steve Johnson scored 21 points and Ray Blume 19. The Beavers, only unbeaten Division I team left in the country, led by no less than 12 points in the second half en route to their 22nd triumph.

DePaul beat Marquette behind a 24-point performance by Mark Aguirre and rolled to its 23rd victory in 24 games.

Softball meeting slated tonight

An organizational meeting for those interested in forming a team in the Big Spring Slow-Pitch Softball League will be held 7 p.m. today, in the Flame Room of the Pioneer Natural Gas Company building.

All those wishing to play, manage or sponsor are urged to attend this important meeting, at which time numerous items will be talked about.

Diverse futures for former hostages

The past is Iran. The future is all over the world. For the 52 Americans held hostage in Iran for 444 days, tomorrow means new assignments, new ideas and, in some cases, new jobs. Some of the servicemen plan to stay in the military; others envision civilian careers. There are books to be written, appearances to be made and offers to consider. Few of the former hostages plan major changes in their lives as a result of their ordeal, but all are making adjustments.

Kathryn Koob of Jessup, Iowa, plans to keep her job as a cultural officer with the International Communications Agency. She says she wouldn't mind going overseas again — but she also says she would be very careful about picking the country. Miss Koob wants to write a book about her experiences in Iran, but has not made any firm plans.

Robert Ode, 65, retired from the State Department in 1976, but he accepted a temporary assignment that put him in the U.S. Embassy on Nov. 4, 1979. Ode's wife moved to the retirement community of Sun City West, Ariz., during his captivity and he says, "Since ... I have a lovely home here and the golf course right in front of me, I don't think I will probably take any (assignments), at least not in the foreseeable future."

Marine Sgt. Steven Kirtley, 23, of Little Rock, Ark., will stay in the service until his enlistment runs out Dec. 29. "Then I'll go to school," he says, probably at the University of Arkansas. He hasn't decided what he'll study.

Richard Morefield, 51, who was consul-general in Iran, says he is "ready to get back to Washington and get back to work." He expects he will be stationed in the United States for a year. "After that," Morefield says, "I'll go wherever the president want me to go."

Michael Metrinko of Olyphant, Pa., also will keep his job with the government. "I'm going back to work with the foreign service ... I have no idea where they will assign me, but ... I like the work. It's what I want to keep on doing."

Woman's suicide kills children

MESQUITE, Texas (AP) — A policeman's wife wrote a note for her husband and two kids that said, in part, "I wasn't the best Mom."

She then committed suicide by breathing automobile exhaust fumes and her children died in their sleep when those fumes leaked from the garage into the house, investigators said.

Jackie Marie Heerd, 33, was found lying on the kitchen floor of her home in this Dallas suburb. Her automobile, gasoline tank empty, was in the garage and the door from the garage into the kitchen was open — carbon monoxide filled the house, police said.

She apparently was returning to the house when she collapsed, leaving the door open to the fatal fumes.

"She may have changed her mind about committing suicide, she may have remembered one last thing to do. We don't know," said field investigator Tony Badger of the Dallas County Medical Examiner's office.

"We think it happened sometime in the morning because the car had run out of gas, the kids were still in bed and it looked as if they had all been dead about six hours," Badger said.

The children — Richard Lawrence Heerd, 5, and Sheryl Lynn Heerd, 10 — were found dead in their beds, clad in their pajamas, he added.

The grim discovery was made by Mrs. Heerd's estranged husband, Mesquite Police Sgt. Richard Heerd, between 5 p.m. and 6 p.m. Saturday, police said.

Badger issued a preliminary ruling of accidental asphyxiation by carbon monoxide in the children's deaths.

"It didn't look like she meant to kill the kids," he said. "She left a note to her children and husband."

Your Daily HOROSCOPE

from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, FEB. 24, 1981

GENERAL TENDENCIES: New beginnings of all kinds are of interest to you now, but it's best to study them from all aspects before putting them in effect. Take positive steps to gain your goals.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Make detailed plans to gain your most cherished aims in the future. Allow time to engage in creative activity.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Good day to be with a close adviser and plan exactly what you want to do. Express happiness with loved ones.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Your friends are busy with their own concerns, so don't rely on them today or tonight. Take no risks in motion.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) You know how to gain a desired goal, so stop wasting time. Don't gripe. Be thankful for your blessings.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Set a greater goal for yourself so that you can achieve more in the days ahead. Be sure business affairs are running smoothly.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Be more willing to listen to ideas of loved ones who can be helpful now. Strive to be more efficient in your line of endeavor.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Show more cooperation with associates and increase benefits. Engage in new venture and make a big impression on others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make sure you finish work at hand before you go off to some new interest. Show others that you are sincere.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Perfecting a talent you have is wise now. You are able to have a good time during spare hours with congenials today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Contact allies who can give you the support you need in a new project. Handle business matters wisely.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't neglect important work in the morning. Postpone going ahead with a new interest you have in mind.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You need more money, so find the right outlet that could give you added income. Take no chances with your health.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY... he or she will be one who can easily solve difficult problems. Teach to finish whatever has been started, since your progeny is likely to be a dabbler. Send to college and give good ethical and religious training.

"The Stars impel, they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Ford says Reagan should hold off on part of tax cut

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) - Former President Ford says President Reagan should hold off on a part of his tax cut program until there is "visible evidence" Congress will reduce the growth of federal spending, Ford says.

In an interview with The Associated Press at his home in the California desert, Ford said efforts to reduce federal spending always tend to generate formidable coalitions which ban together to protect their own appropriations.

"My own experience in Congress would lead me to the conclusion that the House and Senate would be more amenable to a reduction in taxes than they will be to an effort to reduce expenditures," the former president said.

Nevertheless, Ford said "the public basically needs and is sympathetic to a tax reduction" and Reagan should push for a one-year, 10 percent tax cut.

And he said Congress probably will eventually approve 75 percent to 85 percent of Reagan's economic package, which includes cutting 4.4 billion from the fiscal 1982 budget proposed by former President Carter.

Ford also voiced support for the Reagan administration's refusal to rule out any options in striving Central America.

Issue and given under my hand and seal of said Court at Big Spring, Howard County, Texas, this 20th day of February, 1981.
