RIOTING FOLLOWS SANDS DEATH — A hooded youth uses a slingshot to hurl stones at British soldiers, while manning a barricade in the Falls Road area of Belfast Tuesday morning. Rioting, arson and gunfire, followed the announcement in the early hours of the morning, that IRA hunger striker Bobby Sands had died in the Maze Prison.

400 plan hunger strike

Sands' death sets off Belfast riots

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — British troops and police fired live ammunition and plastic bullets to quell rioters in Belfast's Roman Catholic districts today hours after jailed IRA guerrilla Bobby Sands died in the 66th day of his hunger strike. At least 10 people were injured, authorities said.

Renewed violence flared in Catholic strongholds of Belfast as word came that up to 100 of the 440 Irish Republican Army guerrillas might join the hunger strike by three of their comrades at the Maze Prison outside Belfast.

Early today, Catholic housewives banged out a requiem for Sands with the lids of their garbage cans as the death of the IRA hunger striker elected to the British Parliament set off several more hours of violence in Catholic districts of Belfast and Londonderry.

"This is about what we expected," a police spokesman said. "We are prepared for it."

The 27-year-old IRA guerrilla died at 1:17 a.m. in the 66th day of his fast demanding that the British government give imprisoned IRA members the special political-prisoner privileges it took away from them in 1976.

Sands had been an unknown prisoner for most of his nine years in the Irish Republican Army's Provisional wing, with no notable military exploits to his credit. But when he died on a prison hospital waterbed with a golden crucifix from Pope John Paul II in his emaciated hand, he became for supporters of the IRA and many other Catholics the newest martyr in their cause — the unification of the Protestant-dominated British province of Northern Ireland with the mostly Catholic Irish Republic.

Meanwhile, the IRA's fight for the special privileges Sands did not win was carried on by three other hunger strikers in the Maze. Visitors said one of them, Francis Hughes, 25, was within days of death after 52 days without food. Two other guerrillas in the 45th day of their fast were in less serious condition.

Despite pleas for calm from Catholic leaders and Sands' family, three days of mourning ordered by the IRA began with rioting by roving bands rampaging through the dark streets of Belfast and Londonderry, the province's two biggest cities.

Sands' death was announced by the government's Northern Ireland Office in a brief statement saying he "took his own life by refusing food and medical intervention for 66 days."

Colorado School District pays tribute to employees

COLORADO CITY (SC) — The Colorado School District paid tribute to its employees Monday night with a banquet held in the Middle School Cafeteria.

School board president Mac Morris presented plaques to the retiring teachers Mrs. Clarice Fowler, who has taught for 42 years, 18 of which were in the Colorado City system; T.T. Fowler, a member of the teaching profession for 35 years as coach, teacher, principal and visiting teacher; and school nurse for 31 years, Mrs. Allie Hammans.

Special recognition was given to Mrs. Dovie Brownfield, who resigned for reasons of health.

Additionally, 23 persons were introduced as having from five to 30 years service with the school district and included Mrs. Allene Hamner, who received a 25-year pin and Coy Adams, a 30-year pin.

Speaker for the event was Tom Rees, former school board president. Entertainment was provided by Mrs. Trina Taylor, Mrs. Chris Hubbard, Glyndol Dunn, Eugene Merket, Chris Hubbard and Ronald Conner.

Closing remarks were given by school board vice-president Eddie Piland.

IRS figures show inflation creating new millionaires

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inflation may be pinching pocketbooks of many Americans, but it's also creating new millionaires.

New tax figures released Monday by the Internal Revenue Service show the millionaires' club isn't all that exclusive anymore.

Figures for 1978, the most recent available, show that 2,041 Americans filed individual federal tax returns with adjusted gross incomes of more than $1 million.

The number is undoubtedly higher by now, with rising prices and income from the last two years of double-digit inflation pushing more people into the millionaire bracket designating the wealthiest of the wealthy.

The 1978 figure was actually a bit less than the 2,092 estimated by the IRS last June, but it was still well above the 1,776 reported for 1977.

While those taxpayers were reporting incomes averaging just over $2 million, 524,071 other Americans filed forms showing that they either earned no income or their losses exceeded what money they did make.

Appeals for restraint

Reagan sending emissary to reduce Middle East tensions

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is sending former Undersecretary of State Philip C. Habib to the Middle East as his personal emissary to try to reduce tensions building there, a White House spokesman said today.

Reagan, who personally appealed to Israel to refrain from attacking Syrian surface-to-air missile batteries in Lebanon, is thus stepping up his involvement in efforts to give international diplomacy a chance to defuse the explosive situation.

Deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said this morning that Habib would consult with the leaders of Lebanon, Syria and Israel on his mission, which is likely to begin later this week.

"He will be exploring ways to reduce tensions produced by recent developments surrounding the situation in Lebanon," Speakes said.

Speakes said the leaders of the three nations on Habib's itinerary had agreed to receive the envoy.

Reagan scheduled a meeting with Habib for shortly before noon in the Oval Office.

Speakes said Habib's departure plans remained uncertain. He said the envoy would meet with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., who is returning from Europe today, either late in the day or Wednesday morning.

The spokesman said Habib's mission will be "to explore ways to defuse the situation. He will want to hear what the leaders say before advancing ideas."

Asked whether Habib would have sufficient time to get to work, given the tense situation in the Middle East, Speakes said: "The condition this morning remains essentially the same as yesterday, relatively quiet. The United States welcomes the restraint being exercised and it's our hope it will continue."

Habib resigned from government service in April 1978. As a career foreign service officer, he had risen to the position of under secretary of state for political affairs.

Habib, 61, has served both Democratic and Republican presidents. He was a senior adviser to the U.S. delegation at the Vietnam peace talks in Paris from 1969 to 1971. He was also ambassador to South Korea from 1971 until 1974, when he became assistant secretary of state for East Asian and Pacific affairs.

Construction dive recorded

Construction in the city dropped sharply in April, compared to the same month last year.

Construction totaled $260,822.60 for the month, compared to $474,700 for April of 1980. The total for the year-to-date, however, still tops that of last year: $3,815,787.60 compared to $2,314,289.

A commercial renovation and three new homes accounted for most of the building during the last month. Renovation of the business building at 1206 11th to house the Choate Company was the largest project, costing $70,000.

Signal Mountain Builders put up two new homes at 2512 and 2610 Central at a cost of $45,000 apiece. Another new residence was constructed at 2207 Lynn by Echo Builders at a cost of $29,000.

No other projects during the month topped $10,000.

ETHICS COMMITTEE — The Senate Select Committee on Ethics met in closed session today and decided to step up the probe into the ABSCAM charges of Sen. Harrison HORNED RARITY — Lancelot, a one-year-old unicorn produced from Angora goat stock, is being heralded as the first medieval unicorn in 500 years, according to naturalists Morning Glory, 33, and her 36-year-old husband Otter G'zelle, who bred the animal in rural Mendocino County, Calif. Lancelot, with a single 10-inch horn in the middle of his forehead, is presently an attraction at Marine World near San Francisco.

Wright: No favors to pass out Demo party is in seventh inning three runs behind

By STEVE SNIDER
(States News Service)
WASHINGTON — Two days before the expected budget vote in the House of Representatives, two Texans on two sides of the debate feel like Democrats are losing their effort to stop major cuts covered in President Reagan's budget. House Majority Leader Jim Wright said Monday his party is "in the seventh inning three runs behind" in its efforts to push a "Democratic alternative" through a House vote, expected Wednesday.

College Station Democrat Phil Gramm, whose "bipartisan substitute" contains the Reagan budget, gave the White House its strongest indication of victory to date, predicting more than 47 Democrats would join the Republican minority in the vote. Gramm began his day on the steps of the Capitol accepting thanks from the National Association of Realtors. The Realtors presented Gramm and budget co-author Delbert Latta, R-Ohio, a punful "budgetgram," applauding the pair for their package, which calls for $6.1 billion more in cuts than the President originally wanted. The Gramm-Latta measure also doubles the cuts organized in the Democratic alternative budget, the second money bill facing a House vote Tuesday or Wednesday.

Wright, a chief proponent of the Democratic packets, conceded Monday his party's budget, which restores money for a variety of social programs facing extension under Gramm-Latta, is in trouble. "It's like going into the ring and the other guy has brass knuckles and you have 15 'ounce gloves,'" Wright, a former schoolboy boxing instructor told a National Press Club luncheon crowd. "We have no favors to pass out. The Speaker (Massachusetts Democrat Thomas O'Neill) and the Majority Leader have nothing." The support of only one House Republican (Johnny Jeffords of Vermont) is seriously in question at this point. The votes of 26 Democrats are needed to give the president a victory. The Associated Press said late last week its survey of the House found 29 Democrats wanting to vote against their party's alternative, but Gramm, the only Budget Committee Democrat to side with the Republicans in a vote last month, feels the number is 10.

"We have been reining votes every day and for several days we have had enough votes (to win)," said Gramm. "We've got over 48 votes in firm commitment and once we're over the top, several people will jump on the wagon." Despite the apparent momentum toward President Reagan's first major legislative victory, administration spokesmen continued to hammer away at opponents.

Vice President George Bush, in remarks prepared for delivery to a Chicago audience of newspaper executives Monday, accused the Democratic leadership in Congress of "a kind of political amnesia as to the meaning of last November's vote," and said the opposition is attempting to "thwart the mandate of the people."

Responding to Bush, Wright reminded reporters of the vice president's statement while a presidential candidate that Reagan's proposed three-year, 32 percent tax cut was "voodoo economics. And I agree." Earlier, Wright said the election was not a mandate "in abolish the FHA or the EDA or the Summer Youth Employment Program," and cut a variety of other programs. "I don't believe anyone expected Congress in its effort to be conciliatory towards the president to be supine and submissive," Wright said.

BUSH MEETS THE PRESS — Vice President George Bush answers a reporter's question at a press conference following his speech to the American Newspaper Publishers Association Monday in Chicago.

Bentsen claims support of arming El Salvador

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen Jr., D-Texas, says sending arms to El Salvador is justified by that country's nearness to the United States. "Those people who tried to equate El Salvador with Vietnam, I think are mistaken," Bentsen said Monday at a news conference. He was in San Antonio to visit newly elected mayor Henry Cisneros. "Vietnam was on the other side of the world. Trying to interdict arms coming from China through the Ho Chi Minh Trail was almost an impossible task. "This is our back yard, and we just can't have a situation where they clone a bunch of Cubas on us. We can't put up with that. Therefore I think we should send arms to El Salvador, although I understand there is some risk." Bentsen, up for re-election in 1982, said he supports in general President Reagan's budget cuts along with Reagan's proposed $25 billion increase in military spending. He gave the Republican administration high marks in its relations with Congress and added, "I think the president is an excellent communicator." Bentsen, who has been placed on the "hit list" of the National Conservative Political Committee, reportedly already has raised $1.2 million for his 1982 re-election bid and has become more visible as the election year approaches.

Deaf Awareness Week Making phone calls easier

(Editor's Note: May 3 through 10 is Deaf Awareness Week in conjunction with the week, the staff at the Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf, and The Herald have prepared several articles concerning deafness.)
Have you ever considered how you would make a phone call if you were deaf? As difficult as it may seem, there are several ways to accomplish such a task. One way is to ask another person to make the call for you. This is not preferred by most deaf persons, because it leaves them feeling "left-out" of the process of communication. However, this tends to be the most used method in calling businesses or public service facilities. Another method is working with a sign language interpreter. The deaf can actively participate in the conversation. It is important to note that an interpreter functions as a means of communicating the voice of the hearing person and the response of the deaf person. The thoughts and words communicated are those of the deaf caller.

This explains why a female voice may identify herself as a male, and vice versa. These interpreters only assist in the communication process and do not participate actively in the conversation. This method is frequently used here in Big Spring due to the number of interpreters available for deaf citizens. This method, however, is not the best. The best method is the use of a teletype communication device, better known to those involved in the deaf community as TTY's. The TTY features a keyboard which functions much like the input terminal of a computer. The caller types the messages and this message appears on a screen, CRT or paper roll attached to the keyboard. TTY's also feature couplers. This is the device that changes the typed message into a series of machine-language tones which travel over the telephone line.

To receive a TTY message, one must have a similar device and the process is reversed. When the phone rings, the receiver answers by placing the phone into a coupler, and by typing "Hello, this is GA." This message is transmitted over the line, and printed on the machine of the caller. GA at the end of the sentence means "go ahead." The conversation continues by typing back and forth. At the conclusion of the message, there appears the letters "SK," which mean "end of conversation," or "signed with a kiss." Then, the two parties hang up. Utilization of the TTY is the preferred method because it allows for privacy, and for full participation for both the caller, and the receiver of the call. There are a few businesses in Big Spring which currently have TTY's. The Southwest Collegiate Institute for the Deaf has several for their deaf employees and students. Arcand Electronics has one for their customers and the Big Spring Education Employees Credit Union has one for deaf members. One word of caution. Businesses planning on purchasing a TTY device should have their personnel brush up on their typing skills. A typical three minute vocal conversation, for a good typist, may take five to seven minutes. For those who depend on the "hunt and peck" method, be ready for a 10 to 20 minute conversation.

This summer electricity will cost at least 50% more than last summer.

Here's why:

- All the fuels we use to make electricity are more expensive. As longstanding contracts for low-cost natural gas expire, new gas costs a lot more, and the price keeps climbing. Even lignite coal, our most economical fuel, is becoming more expensive.
- Since last summer, a rate increase has been approved and gone into effect.
- You'll see the full effect of these increases — fuel costs and the rate increase — this summer when electricity usage is at its highest level.

Here's what you can do to help hold down your bill:

- Leave your air conditioner off unless you really need it. It probably uses more electricity than your lights and all your other appliances combined.
— When you're away from home, turn it off.
— Unless it's really hot, turn it off. Try opening windows and using a fan to circulate the air.
- Turn off anything that's not in use.
- Live a little warmer. The higher you set your thermostat, the more electricity you'll save.
- Use fans to keep air moving. It feels cooler.
- When the air conditioner is on, keep your cool inside. Close windows, doors, blinds, draperies and fireplace dampers.
- If you're installing or replacing an air conditioner, be sure it's energy-efficient. Use the "Energyguide" on every new unit to compare. It may cost more, but it will help you hold down your electric bills.
- Weatherstrip, caulk and insulate. Call us for free booklets that show how to do it, or to learn when we'll have an "Operation Tighten-Up" workshop in your neighborhood.

Cigarettes now ranked by carbon monoxide

WASHINGTON (AP) — Smokers switching to low tar and nicotine brands also are likely to inhale less carbon monoxide, a contributor to heart and lung diseases and a possible threat to unborn babies, the government's latest cigarette rankings show.

The Federal Trade Commission, for the first time, is rating cigarettes according to the carbon monoxide they produce, in addition to publishing figures on tar and nicotine levels.

The results, published Monday, show that 11 of the 20 brands lowest in tar and nicotine also rank among the bottom 20 in carbon monoxide, a product of incomplete combustion that reduces the ability of the blood to carry oxygen.

Six of the 20 brands with the highest concentrations of tar and nicotine also produced the largest amounts of carbon monoxide.

"The three most recent surgeon general's reports have suggested that carbon monoxide in cigarette smoke may be related to some of the most serious health consequences of smoking," the FTC said in a statement listing this year's test results for 187 American cigarette brands.

The report quoted the surgeon general's office as concluding that "carbon monoxide may interfere with fetal development, increase symptoms in patients with heart and lung disease and contribute to hardening of the arteries."

The surgeon general's office said carbon monoxide is particularly harmful to smokers because their nicotine intake is increasing the heart's oxygen needs at the same time that the blood's ability to carry oxygen to the heart is reduced.

The FTC began testing for carbon monoxide last year in what the commission's former chairman, Michael Pertschuk, called another step aimed at "stimulating the development of progressively less hazardous cigarettes."

Cigarette companies, under FTC pressure, have listed the tar and nicotine content of their products in advertisements since 1971. Whether they will do the same for carbon monoxide is not yet known.

Small car fees raised by Senate

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Small car owners may save on gas but it will cost them more for license plates, if the Texas Senate has its way.

The Senate passed on voice vote and sent to the House Monday a bill that would increase registration fees for cars up to 3,500 pounds from $12 to $17.

Sen. John Traeger, D-Seguin, said county road and bridge funds would benefit from the increase by receiving up to $350,000 in each county, compared to a top of $175,000 that counties receive now for selling motor vehicle license plates.

Traeger said the bill would give Texas counties an extra $22 million in 1982, plus adding $900,000 to the state general revenue fund. By 1986, Traeger said local governments would be getting a revenue gain of $48.1 million while the state would gain $10 million.

Five dollars is not going to make any difference to drivers of small cars, Traeger said. They can pay this and still save money from gasoline bills.

Selected for the two positions for the month of June were Leslie Ann Barr of Coleman, 20, and Kenneth Hawari, 22, Cisco. Miss Barr is a sophomore at Texas A&M University, working toward a major in Agriculture and Journalism. The winners were selected after meeting with the Selection Committee in Abilene. The winners spoke briefly with Cong. Stenholm following their selection. After extending his congratulations, he said he was "looking forward to their arrival in Washington and would be eager to put you to work."

Spring rains cut CRMWD deliveries

Weather and water consumption track each other in West Texas, and this was borne out again during April in Colorado River Municipal Water District reports.

Bountiful spring rains cut deliveries by a quarter of a billion gallons to cities, but through the first four months of 1981, deliveries continued ahead of last year.

Total deliveries for April stood at 1,257,688,340 gallons, down 10.04 percent from the first four months of 1980. However, cumulative deliveries through April amounted to 4,472,833,680 gallons, up 1.17 percent.

In April, the cities took 1,043,567,000 gallons, down 16.36 percent from April 1980, and for the four months the figures were 3,716,672,500 gallons, down 2.69 percent.

Buying clothing is joint effort

COLLEGE STATION — Children like often-worn garments because they feel secure in them. This factor can be a source of frustration for parents as some children keep selecting the same items which may be worn out or unattractive, but familiar.

Conformity — Children like to dress as their friends do. At the age of three or four, children are aware of sex differences, so they may like to dress like their father, older brother or older sister.

New clothes — When children do like new clothes, a major reason is the attention that new clothes bring. At this age, they are not always aware of differences between clothing bought or made new. When new to them, the clothes are "new."

Parents have a different view of their children's clothing, the researchers say. Here's how parents look at the subject: Number-one factor — durability.

Other factors — cost, comfort, ease of care, color, child's attitude, and finally, attractiveness — in that order.

Most children are not aware of many of these factors — especially durability, cost or ease of care, of course, the specialist says. But it is possible to combine the preferences of both parent and child when it comes to shopping for children's clothing, she concludes.

Dear Abby

Reluctant Bride Thinks Two Is a Crowd

DEAR ABBY: I am a minister who has been married since last December, but our marriage has not as yet been consummated.

We spent our wedding night in a very nice motel in Salisbury, N.C., where I thought surely we would consummate our marriage, but she said, "Let's wait a night or two in case I get pregnant. I don't want people counting the days and saying we had premarital intercourse."

She put me off that way for a whole month. Then she said, "Plenty of babies are born in the seventh month — let's wait a little longer."

Abby, after putting up with her stalling for three months, I demanded my rights. She refused to go on the pill and rejected my offer to take all the responsibility of precautions. To this day, she continues to hold me off with one ridiculous excuse after another.

I am growing very impatient. What do you suggest?

GREENSBORO, N.C.

DEAR GREENSBORO: Insist that your reluctant bride see a gynecologist. She is obviously unimformed, frightened and totally unprepared for the physical part of marriage.

DEAR ABBY: My very efficient secretary, who had been with me for 12 years, retired recently.

After I tried several applicants who were brainless, our daughter sent a 26-year-old former college friend of hers to apply for the position. She was personable, qualified and eager to work, so I hired her. In the past months, she has shown promise of developing into a top-notch secretary. Meanwhile, my wife is furious with my daughter for sending this girl to me and she's angry with me for hiring her. The reason: The girl is well-endowed and she always goes braless.

Good secretaries are hard to find, and I mean to keep this one, short of breaking up my home. Her going braless doesn't bother me, and besides, I feel it is her business and nobody else's. What do you think?

NO HANKY PANKY

DEAR NO HANKY: Tell your wife to run the house and let you run your office. Better a braless secretary than one who's braless.

CONFIDENTIAL TO YOU: This Sunday is Mother's Day. Send her a gift. Take her out and show her a good time. Send her flowers. And don't forget to tell her you love her.

The district competition was held in Pecos a short time later.

The two winners from this area, who also won at Pecos and went on to Temple Jan. 31, were Alice Lopez, in the 12-13 age group, and Katrina Thompson, in the 10-11 age bracket. Alice is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Felipe Lopez and Katrina's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Dickie Thompson.

Lee Young, chairman of the local Hoop Shoot contest, reported that over 200 youngsters competed to advance to the district competition. Winners from the Temple competition participated in the regional competition held Feb. 13 at Lawton, Okla. The Elks National Finals were held in Indianapolis, Indiana, March 14, where nearly one million dollars in scholarship prizes were awarded to the winners. The Big Spring lodge contributes over $3,000 annually to various youth activities in Big Spring, with nearly half of that amount going to the Hoop Shoot contest.

Five tips to improve work habits

NEW YORK, N.Y. — If you've ever had trouble keeping your mind on your work, you might benefit from these five tips to improve your concentration, from a recent issue of Seventeen Magazine.

Create the right environment and mood. Don't try to work immediately following strong emotional stimulation, like having been angry, because you'll have trouble focusing your attention. If you're listening to music, play it softly. Make sure you don't have too much or too little light, because either extreme can cause strain or fatigue. The room should be well-ventilated and slightly on the cool side.

Budget time for your work. Doing everything at the last minute can lead to worry and fatigue. Schedule a regular time and place for work and stick to this routine.

Structure your work period. Work in 30-minute blocks, taking a 5- or 10-minute break in between. Allocate the amount of time you want to spend on each task, and work only up to your allotted time.

Stay physically fit. Getting enough sleep and exercise will help you to be mentally alert. A good time to work is right after light exercise, such as a brisk walk.

Eat properly. Both overeating and hunger can impair concentration.

Cinco de Mayo is a celebration of victory

Mexican troops under the leadership of General Ignacio Zaragoza defeated the French army at Puebla May 5, 1862. Because of this victory, Mexicans celebrate it as a national holiday. This holiday does not commemorate Mexico's Independence from France, for France had not conquered Mexico, but had invaded it.

After the French were defeated, they retreated to the coast awaiting further orders from Napoleon III. Napoleon invaded Mexico to collect debts that Mexico owed to France.

President Benito Juarez had inherited an empty treasury and a country in ruins in early 1861. The country was devastated from the Reform War of 1858-1860 which the Liberals won against the conservatives. The war had been costly, so Juarez decreed suspension of all payments on foreign debts for two years. This measure affected Spain, England and France, and they reacted by sending troops to Mexico. As soon as the Spanish and English realized Napoleon's intentions in violating Mexico's sovereignty, they withdrew their forces.

Meanwhile, Mexican monarchists saw an opportunity to set up a monarchy. They assured Napoleon and the French a monarchy would be welcomed. With the aid of these few Mexicans and his dream of building a French Empire in Latin America, Napoleon had made the arrangements to conquer Mexico.

A new French army, commanded by Gen. Laurencez, arrived in Veracruz. They marched toward Mexico City, advancing upon Puebla where they found a Mexican army commanded by Ignacio Zaragoza. On May 5, 1862, the Mexicans defeated the French in Mexico's best known battle. The French retreated back to the coast where they received reinforcements.

Zaragoza died of typhoid that same year, and Gen. Gonzalez Ortega assumed leadership. The French attacked Puebla again and after two months of siege the city fell, one year after the victorious battle. The defense of the city showed the world that Mexico was opposing foreign invasion and that the spirit of resistance was alive.

Juarez first declared he would defend Mexico City, but the bulk of the Mexican army had been defeated at Puebla, and the army consisted of only 14,000 men.

Juarez, his cabinet and with the remnants of the Mexican army, left the Mexican capital, on May 3, 1863, and the French arrived a week later. By March 1864 Juarez controlled only the far north of Mexico. The French set up a monarchy with Archduke Maximilian of Austria selected as Emperor of Mexico.

Maximilian and his Empress Carlota added a colorful, yet tragic chapter to the history of Mexico. Maximilian was a liberal, professing a vague and romantic faith in progress, democracy and liberalism. He was also weak and irresolute.

The clergy and the conservatives, who had promoted a monarchy, realized their grave mistake.

Maximilian was unable to bring order out of the chaos that confronted him. Napoleon then recalled his army and Maximilian. By March of 1867 the French troops had left for Europe and the Emperor was faced with abdication.

Juarista's troops reconquered their country, executing Maximilian before a firing squad in June, 1867.

Again, Juarez returned to the capital in triumph. The country had proven to the world it could defend its independence.

Juarez made Cinco de Mayo a national holiday upon his return, and Ignacio Zaragoza a hero. The importance of the battle of Cinco de Mayo was mainly psychological. Mexico felt the exhilaration of victory and with that feeling, Cinco de Mayo is remembered.

Daingerfield: Another look

Gunman's attack on church draws town closer together

DAINGERFIELD, Texas (AP) — On the main street of this tiny community nestled among the tapering pines of East Texas, sits a plain, brick Baptist church — a grim reminder and yet a source of comfort to those who survived a gunman's savage attack last summer.

No one is still sure why a former high school math teacher would don combat gear, arm himself with automatic weapons and storm a Sunday worship service killing five people and wounding 11 others. Perhaps not even the killer himself.

Regardless of the reason, Alvin Lee King III burst into the church, shouting "This is war!" and opened fire on men, women and children.

Townpeople say the events on the morning of June 22, 1980, have altered the course of their lives forever.

"There's been a drastic change in the community," says Police Chief J.R. Keene. "I hesitate to use the word paranoid ... let's just say they are highly suspicious — very wary."

But the very place where their sorrow began also has been a place of solace. Since the shootings, the First Baptist Church, which had 300 in attendance that fatal morning, has increased its membership 20 percent and become a close-knit "family."

"The biggest thing is how much the church has touched so many lives," said Jana Truitt, daughter-in-law of Ken Truitt, one of the five killed.

Church members have "drawn closer together" and their faith in God has sustained them, she added.

"That's the only thing that has made this bearable. If it weren't for us believing in God, that he's (Ken Truitt) in a better place, I just don't know how people could handle it," she said.

And, although no one can say they really believe the horror could happen a second time, there are two men who sit outside the church now, and another two inside the foyer — just in case.

And as a precaution, the children have separate services in another building so that another child, such as 7-year old Gina Linam, would not be killed.

"It is not a town gripped in fear, but a town continually coping with fear," Keene says.

King has been found incompetent to stand trial and still is under treatment at Rusk State Hospital. Physicians have said King performed well on several of the psychological tests but suffered "brain trauma" as the result of a self-inflicted gunshot wound.

His lawyer says King will plead insanity if he ever comes to trial.

But most of the people here don't think King was insane at the time of the shooting.

"Al King is not crazy," Keene said. "He was very meticulous in planning the whole thing." And the self-inflicted wound the gunman received immediately after the shootings "was no more than a frontal lobotomy."

"He's far from being crazy ... and he's intelligent enough to fool a lot of people," Keene added.

Chris Hall, the young man who wrested one of King's weapons away, says he believes the gunman "was totally possessed by Satan."

There were several reports that some church members

BSHS trying to get city in world records book

Students at Big Spring Senior High School will be trying to put Big Spring in the Guinness Book of World Records with a float entry in the centennial parade set for Monday, May 25. The local youths will be trying to break the old record set by the 150-foot-long, 22-foot-wide "Agree" float used in the Orange bowl parade in Miami, Fla., on Dec. 29, 1977.

The local group, which hopes to establish the new record, will be entering a train in the parade made from cotton trailers. But building the train won't be the only work involved; the group will also have to use very accurate records when submitting the entry for consideration.

According to Norris D. McWhirter, general editor of the Guinness Book of World Records, changes in previous records have been so numerous that the 19th American edition has long since moved from the status of an annual to that of a perennial publication. He said about a quarter of the many thousands of records listed in the publication have to be changed from one edition to the next. As a result, McWhirter said the publishers do not normally supply personnel to invigilate record attempts but reserve the right to do so.

McWhirter went on to say that claimants should send independent corroboration in the form of local or national newspaper cuttings, radio or TV coverage reports and signed authentication by independent adult witnesses or representatives of organizations of standing in the community.

Being included in the book, which is being published in 23 languages and has sales in excess of 40 million, would not only draw attention to the efforts of the local high school students, but would also bring recognition to both the community and the centennial celebration.

The longest float used in any street carnival is the 200-foot-long dragon Sun Loon used in Bendigo, Victoria, Australia. It had 65,000 mirror scales and six men were needed to carry its head alone.

had refused King's request to have them testify as witnesses in an upcoming trial on charges of incest filed by his daughter, now 21. King also was a vowed atheist.

For those who lived through the nightmarish ordeal, the memories have both scarred and strengthened them.

"Even though I had been a Christian all these years, I didn't realize how much Christ had already done for me," said Hall, who miraculously was not hurt after King fired at him point-blank and missed.

But Hall, who was awarded numerous citations for bravery for wrestling a weapon away from the gunman, says he still feels uncomfortable sitting with his back to the sanctuary doors.

"I don't feel that what I did was that great," said the former captain of the Daingerfield high school football team. "What Red (McDaniel) and Ken (Truitt) did was true heroism."

After Hall has managed to get one gun away from King, McDaniel grabbed the gunman and physically forced him from the church while King fired into McDaniel's stomach again and again.

Truitt was fatally shot in the chest while keeping the gunman from re-entering the church.

It hasn't been easy, but the families of Thelma Richardson, Ken Truitt, "Red" McDaniel, Gina Linam and Gene Gandy have learned to accept death, cling to memories, and go on with their lives.

The church where Truitt was killed is visible through the windows of Truitt Electric Company, a business run by father and sons before the elder man's death.

A blurred snapshot of Truitt shows a big bear of a man, smiling proudly, with three of his grandsons. His tanned face is crinkled around his eyes. It is the face of a man who loved to laugh.

"It's hard to come in here and not see him at his desk," his daughter-in-law said. "Not a day goes by that someone doesn't come in and mention him. Everybody loved him."

The Sunday after their daughter was buried, the parents of Gina Linam visited another church to testify of their faith in God and have been doing it ever since.

Jack Dean, an usher who was shot in the hand, admits he still has nightmares about the incident which left his right arm scarred and partially useless as the result of a bullet fired point-blank into his hand.

Rock Island Railroad deal approved

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Oklahoma's participation in a three-state deal to buy a 760-mile section of the old Rock Island Railroad line to provide continued rail service between the Texas Panhandle and Memphis, Tenn., has been approved by the Oklahoma Transportation Commission.

Gov. George Nigh has pledged to seek a $10 million legislative appropriation to finance the state's participation in a proposed joint project with Texas and Arkansas.

Jim Townsend, state rail plan coordinator, said he understands Arkansas officials are ready to sign the agreement, and negotiations are proceeding with Texas officials.

The commission voted Monday to authorize state Transportation Director R.A. Ward to sign an agreement with Arkansas and Texas officials and the president of the Santa Fe Railway Co., which would operate the east-west main line of the bankrupt Rock Island from Memphis to Amarillo, Texas.

The Santa Fe would have an option to buy the line as part of its agreement to operate it.

Townsend and Jerry Chambers, state rail planner, said 368 miles of the 760-mile section are in Oklahoma. They estimate it would cost about $36 million for the three states to buy the 760 miles of track and right of way, with Oklahoma's share costing about $22 million.

The state already has $12 million available that was appropriated by the 1980 Legislature to help preserve rail service in Oklahoma.

Nigh said the acquisition is vital to Oklahoma because rail service is essential to its continued agricultural and industrial development.

"I don't know of any more critical need of the state of Oklahoma than saving the railroads," the governor said.

State officials have estimated that bringing the 760 miles of track up to 40-mph standards will bring the total cost of the three-state project to $100 million.

NRA leader Carter once convicted of murder

LAREDO, Texas (AP) — The executive vice president of the National Rifle Association says he has "nothing to hide" and refuses to discuss his 1931 murder conviction stemming from the shooting of a Mexican-American teenager.

Harlan D. Carter's conviction on a charge of murder without malice was reported by the Laredo Times' Monday editions.

The paper cited district court records that showed the conviction came in connection with the March 3, 1931 shotgun shooting death of Ramon Cassiano, 15. Carter was sentenced to three years in prison.

The 67-year-old former U.S. Border Patrol chief was re-elected to his post with the NRA at that group's 110th annual meeting of the group in Denver this weekend.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ruled later in 1931 that Carter's self-defense plea had been unfairly disallowed and remanded the case to Laredo for retrial. The next mention of the case in court records or news accounts came in 1933 when the murder indictment was ordered dismissed. The ruling was signed by the judge who originally tried the case, 49th District Judge J.F. Mullally.

The dismissal stated that "several of the material witnesses for the state have been discredited, having been convicted of infamous crimes."

Carter could not be reached for comment in his Denver hotel room Monday night.

But in a story in the New York Times' Monday editions, he declined to talk about the incident when asked about it.

Carter said he was "not going to rehash that case or any other that does not relate to the NRA at this time."

According to accounts of the shooting that appeared in the Laredo paper in 1931, Carter had just returned from school when his mother told him she had seen three or four youngsters hanging around a shed behind the house.

The Carters' car had recently been stolen, and Mrs. Carter said she was afraid the youths were trying to steal a cow.

During the three-day trial in 49th District Court, Carter testified that he left the house carrying a single-barrel shotgun.

He said he found Cassiano and three friends about a block from the Carter house as they were returning from a nearby swimming area.

Carter said he tried to march the four boys home to be interrogated by his mother. The 15-year-old Cassiano refused and drew a knife, the paper said.

According to testimony at the trial, Carter said, "You think I won't use this?" and fired the gun at point-blank range.

Cassiano was hit below the right shoulder.

As he lay on the ground, he extended his hand to Carter, saying, "You are my friend." Carter spurned the hand, according to testimony.

When Mrs. Carter arrived, Carter told her Cassiano was not badly hurt "because I aimed at the shoulder."

Cassiano was pronounced dead at a local hospital.

Carter, the son of a Border Patrol officer, left Laredo in 1933 and enrolled at the University of Texas. He later joined the Border Patrol and headed the agency.

He was elected executive vice-president of the NRA in 1977 in a coup in Cincinnati that resulted in the ouster of four of the association's five officers. He has been re-elected by the NRA membership annually since then.

Three-year-old considered for experimental treatment

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Three-year-old Matt Van Geest, his stomach bloated and his joints sore from an often-terminal bone disease, will undergo tests to see if he is eligible for an experimental treatment to replace the enzyme that his body lacks.

Matt and his parents, Joanne and Terry Van Geest, traveled Monday from their Blodgett, Ore., home to the National Institutes of Health in the Washington suburb of Bethesda, Md., where doctors have agreed to look at the child's case.

"Now, finally, we have some hope," Van Geest said Monday as the family boarded a plane at Portland International Airport.

Matt suffers from Gaucher's disease, a hereditary illness that prevents the bone marrow from producing an enzyme that breaks down fats in the blood. His doctors say he might die within 10 years.

"We're going to take a look at the case," said Dr. Roscoe Brady, an NIH researcher who pioneered the enzyme replacement technique. "But at this point we can't guarantee that the boy will be accepted for experimental treatment."

"Others are lined up for the enzyme and there's not enough for everyone," Brady said. "In view of the publicity, we offered to do what we could."

NIH paid to bring the boy and his mother to its clinical center after nationwide publicity drew attention to his problem. The father took time off from his $16,000-a-year job in a lumber mill and paid his own expenses to accompany them.

Doctors say they also are considering a more risky procedure used to treat certain types of blood cancer but which has never been used for Gaucher's disease.

Numerous people have volunteered to donate

Citation had best not be ignored

Persons failing to appear after receiving a moving violation or intoxication citation from the Big Spring Police Department will be charged with failure to appear, effective today, according to Warrant Officer Lonnie Smith.

"When a person signs their ticket, they are giving their written consent that they will pay the ticket or make a date to appeal it in municipal court," he said.

The additional fine will cost between $1 and $200 depending on the judge's decision.

"It's a good idea," said Judge Bobby West. "This system is used in J.P. court. People are showing respect for the court system. The officer gives them 10 days to appear. If they don't, they should be given an additional fine."

bone marrow for a possible transplant after they learned that 30 of Matt's relatives tested as donors proved unsatisfactory.

Doctors told the boy's parents that only one person in a million outside the family is likely to have matching tissue.

The inherited condition, which generally inflicts an estimated one person in 40,000, occurs most frequently in Jews of eastern European origin, NIH researchers say.

While symptoms may appear at any age, the progressive disease normally becomes noticeable in late adolescence, experts say. And while it can be fatal, some sufferers live to old age, they add.

While waiting for the transplant to "take," the patient is highly vulnerable to infection, bleeding disorders and deficiency of oxygen-carrying red cells — all of which could prove fatal, Barranger said.

"We don't want to have a situation where the treatment is more dangerous than the disease," he said.

Gallegos gains

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. (AP) — Former hostage Billy Gallegos has been eating more than the two meals a day he got from his Iranian captors — and it shows.

Marine Sgt. Gallegos has added 50 pounds in the months since his release from the Iranian embassy.

"I've put it all on in the wrong places," said Gallegos. "I haven't had much time to exercise."

Gallegos, 22, is one of the 52 Americans held hostage for 443 days in Iran until he was freed Jan. 20. He is a Marine recruiter in Denver and visited here last week to speak to families of Marine recruits and to deliver speeches about his experience.

Gallegos said he was well fed by his Iranian captors. "We were fed twice a day," he said.

Plots to meet Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — John Young and Robert Crippen, who flew the space shuttle Columbia on its successful maiden flight, will meet with President Reagan at the White House May 19.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration announced Monday that they also would spend several days next month at the Paris Air Show. Today they were scheduled to speak at an American Newspaper Publishers Association dinner in Chicago.

Granville risks it

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Joseph Granville, a stock market analyst whose "sell everything" advice wreaked havoc on the market in January, has married a 40-year-old commercial artist.

Monday's marriage was the third for Granville, 57, and the first for his bride, Karen Erickson.

A local stockbroker introduced the couple in March when Granville was in town to give a lecture sponsored by a local brokerage firm.

O'Brien is co-host

WASHINGTON (AP) — Actor Pat O'Brien, an old Hollywood colleague of Ronald Reagan, was the co-host at a reception given by first lady Nancy Reagan for 185 foster grandparents.

O'Brien, 81, starred with President Reagan in a movie about Knute Rockne, the legendary football coach at the University of Notre Dame.

"The only thing missing from this room now is the Gipper," Mrs. Reagan said Monday at the White House party. The president, who played Notre Dame football player George Gipp in the movie, was upstairs in the living quarters.

ARRIVES FOR TREATMENT — Joanne Van Geest holds her three-year-old son Matt upon their arrival at Washington National Airport Monday. Matt was flown to Washington to receive treatment at the National Institute of Health in Bethesda, Maryland, for a bone marrow disease.

Bill allows $2.5 million for health spa

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texas lawmakers are under so much pressure they need their own Capitol spa where they can "let off steam," and $2.5 million of tax money is not too much to pay, a representative says.

The bill by Rep. Sam Hudson, D-Dallas, would create a Capitol area "health facility," including a weight room, indoor track, massage parlor and sauna.

Hudson told the House State Affairs Committee Monday the facility is needed to "protect the taxpayers' investment in the health of their state officials." Use of the facility would be limited to lawmakers and state employees who work in the Capitol complex.

"It would make for a happier Legislature and everything else," he said.

Proposal for St. Louis

Free tuition offered for free desegregation

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Local educators are clearly intrigued, but state officials are balking at a novel federal proposal to give free college tuition to students willing to help desegregate city and suburban public schools here.

"That's an interesting proposal," said Gary Wright, superintendent of the suburban Lindbergh School District. "I haven't seen any incentive like it."

"It's creative," said Earl Hobbs, superintendent of the Clayton School District just west of the city limits.

But state officials accused their city and federal counterparts of being "willing to freely spend the state's money," and wondered if the proposal would discriminate against students from other Missouri towns.

The proposal — the first indication of the Reagan administration's position on forced busing — is aimed at making voluntary metropolitan desegregation appealing to parents.

It would offer free college tuition to white suburban students who agree to enroll full-time in city schools and to black city students who enroll full-time in suburban schools.

The plan was submitted Monday to U.S. District Judge Edward L. Hungate, who is overseeing the court-ordered integration plan which last September saw the busing of 6,700 St. Louis students.

That left about 28,000 of the city's 63,000 students in overwhelmingly black schools. Seventy-eight percent of city students are black.

"This voluntary plan could substantially eliminate the racial isolation remaining in the city schools," U.S. Attorney General William French Smith said in a statement.

"No student would be required to attend any school but that to which he or she would normally be assigned," he said.

Juniors top award winners as BSBS honors athletes at Spring Banquet

By NATHAN POSS
Sports Editor
A pair of juniors emerged as the big winners in the Big Spring Booster Club's Spring Sports Banquet held Monday night at the Howard County Fair Barns, as Bobby Earl Williams and Elise Wheat were honored with the Obie Bristow and Wanda Ferguson Awards, respectively, for the efforts during the past school year.

distinction by making First Team All-District 5-AAAAA in both football and basketball. He led the league in rushing and was undoubtedly the top breakaway threat, as well as pacing the Steers in interceptions.
On the basketball court, Williams was the leading scorer on the team in district, as well as being among the leaders in 5-AAAAA in both rebounding and shot blocking. The 6'3" junior also participated in track at times.
Wheat, like Williams, is a most versatile performer. She was a First Team All-District player in volleyball, an Honorable Mention 5-AAAAA player in basketball, and has achieved notable success in track this year. She qualified for the Region I-AAAAA Track and Field Meet in three events (discus, shot put and 1600-relay) At the regionals, she copped a second place in the discus, and will represent BSBS at the girls state track and field meet this weekend in Austin.

Another big winner during the night was Carla Jackson. Like the other two notable award winners, she is also a junior. Jackson, who won the Ferguson Award last year, was named the Outstanding Track Performer, the outstanding jumper and the outstanding sprinter.
Jackson was the top point getter at the girls 5-AAAAA Track Meet for the third straight year, qualifying for the regionals in four events. At regionals, she set a new jump record in winning that event, and also placed second in both the triple jump and 100-meter dash, as well as anchoring the 800-meter relay team to a fifth place finish.
Jackson will compete in the state girls meet in an outstanding three events this weekend.

It was simply, "There is no reason not to be successful." He gave many illustrations aimed at the young people on overcoming adversity in life, from personal experience to those concerning such people as Glenn Cunningham, Bill Russell and Mickey Mantle.
All overcame major adversity, whether it be physical defects or late blooming.
Following Evans' talk, each coach presented their teams in the winter and spring sports, giving awards to deserving individuals.
Frank Ibarra presented the baseball team. Copping awards from that team were Mark Warren and Lupe Ontiveros.
Girls Basketball Coach Sandy Brown presented her young squad, and gave special honors to Sissy Doss, Monet Wise, Shirley Dixon and Elise Wheat.
The boys basketball team was presented by Coach Ed Haller. Sharing the MVP for that sport were Williams and James Doss. Jerald Wrightsil was honored as the Sophomore of the Year in District 5-AAAAA, and Robert Rubio was given the Effort Award. Williams was also given an All-District certificate.
Howard Stewart presented both the girls golf and boys golf teams, of which he handled simultaneously. Garnering the MVP girls golf award was Lisa Bumgarner, while John Basden was named the outstanding boy golfer. Basden, yet another junior, was All-District with a stroke average of 77.

Harlan Smith introduced the girls and boys swimming team, which he tutors twice a day beginning at 8 a.m. Copping the girls swimming honor was Cathy Miller, while the outstanding boys swimmer was Todd Loyd, who finished fourth in the Region I-AAAAA Meet.
The tennis teams were introduced by Coach Allan Holliday. Kim Madry was named the recipient of the girls tennis award, while the outstanding boys tennis player was Kip McLaughlin. McLaughlin was All-District in that sport.
Vicki Fitzgugh presented the girls track team which finished second in the District 5-AAAAA Meet and an outstanding fifth in the Region I-AAAAA Meet. That fifth place finish included 41 teams in the region, with many more not even qualifying for that meet.
Besides the honors bestowed upon Williams and Jackson, Fitzgugh named Paula Harrison as the outstanding distance runner.
Boys Track Coach Randy Britton introduced his team, honoring Greg Jones with the MVP in that sport, as well as reaping special praise on Joe Hicks.
The cheerleaders of the past year were introduced by sponsor Medina Thomas. Those ladies included Charlotte Bell, Debbie Fulcher, Shana Siefert, Brenda Trevino and Laura Warren.
Tom Koger, the sponsor of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes, talked in behalf of that organization. He presented the Boy's FCA Award to Russell Stuber and the Girls FCA Award to Shana Koger.
Athletic Trainer Sir Everett Blackburn then introduced the trainers and managers that play the unsung, yet key roles in the past year. Copping the Trainer-Manager Award, which was presented to Dr. James Cowan, was Dean Restelli.
Logback then introduced Wheat as the Ferguson Award winner, with the ball Coach Ralph presents presenting Williams with the Bristow Award.

It was simply, "There is no reason not to be successful." He gave many illustrations aimed at the young people on overcoming adversity in life, from personal experience to those concerning such people as Glenn Cunningham, Bill Russell and Mickey Mantle.
All overcame major adversity, whether it be physical defects or late blooming.

Rockets heavy underdog

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics were the pick here to win the championship series in five games when the playoffs began March 31, and there's no reason to change now. Of course, there was no picking the Houston Rockets to reach the finals, but that's another story.

The Rockets dethroned Los Angeles, surprised San Antonio and then beat the National Basketball Association's other Cinderella club, Kansas City, to earn their berth in the finals after a lackluster 40-42 regular season.
"This team has defied all the odds so far," said Rockets General Manager Ray Patterson. "It has been a great achievement to get where we are. But when you get this close, you want the whole pie even more."

But the Rockets' chances of getting the whole pie appear slim. They do have a brilliant center in Moses Malone, the indefatigable rebounder who is capable of dominating any game. And they do have explosive Calvin Murphy, who can come off the bench for 30 or 40 points just about any night out. But they don't appear to have enough else to stay with the poised, talented and psyched-up Celtics.
Boston had every chance to pack it in after falling behind 3-1 in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference finals against Philadelphia, then falling behind by

Astros batter hapless Cubs

CHICAGO (AP) — The Houston Astros used the Chicago Cubs as a stepping stone last year towards their National League West championship by winning 11 games in their 12 meetings.
"We did all right against them last year," said Astro manager Bill Virdon. "But this is another year and just because they're off to a bad start doesn't mean they're going to roll over and play Virdon was right. Although the Cubs dropped a 5-4 decision Monday for their 16th loss against only three victories, they forced a test of the Houston bullpen and found it wasn't lacking.
"We've got the best bullpen in the league," said Joe Sambito.
"It would have been an awful tough game to lose," said Frank LaCorte.
The two relief acts made sure it wasn't a lost cause, although the Cubs rallied for three runs in the ninth inning before LaCorte and Sambito closed the door.

Jose Cruz hit a three-run homer in the first inning and the Astros added a pair on singles by Alan Ashby and Kiko Garcia in the sixth.
Hector Cruz, Jose's brother, hit a solo homer for the Cubs in the bottom of the 2d.

Company drops Billie Jean from commercial

NEW YORK (AP) — E.R. Squibb Co. has dropped Billie Jean King from its advertising, but other companies whose products Mrs. King endorses are sticking with the tennis star for now, a newspaper reported today.
The New York Daily News

Steer baseball home finale vs. OHS today

It will continue to be a must win situation for the Big Spring Steers as they play host to the Odessa Bronchos this afternoon at four o'clock, and even then, they'll be hoping for some help from the Abilene Eagles.
While the Steers, currently 3-1 in the second half, battle Odessa High, Midland Lee will be traveling to play the Eagles. If Lee manages to win, it would sew up the District 5-AAAAA title for the Rebels.
Big Spring remains one of the two teams with a decent second half shot at the Rebels, but they must win their final three games this week and hope for a pair of Lee losses.
Lee shared the first half title with Abilene Cooper and Abilene, and if they gain a share in the second half without those above teams, the title would be theirs.

Company drops Billie Jean from commercial denied the company's action resulted from Mrs. King's surprise announcement.

"Frankly, it was phased out because she was too strong a figure — she was overpowering the product," Anderson said. "The controversy had nothing to do with our decision."
There was no immediate comment from Mrs. King.
Several other companies said they had no immediate plans to drop Mrs. King's ads. Mrs. King also promotes Nike athletic shoes, Yonex tennis rackets and a resin substance called Power Grip.
Nike is "impressed by her candor, forthrightness and courage to respond as she had," said promotions director Ladd Loungquist.
U.S. Sports Equipment, national distributors for the Japanese tennis racket Yonex, thinks the brouhaha will boost Mrs. King's effectiveness.
"What she did is very typical of her open personality," said a Yonex executive.

Yankees Davis ties AL strikeout

Footie seems to hit them...out of the park.
That combination — along with Lou Piniella and rookie pitcher Gene Nelson — bedeviled the California Angels 4-2 Monday night.
Davis tied an American League record with eight consecutive strikeouts and, added to the five batters he fanned to conclude a Yankee victory in Oakland Sunday, he's struck out 13 of the last 14 men to face him.
Footie, acquired from the Chicago Cubs last week as a fill-in for injured catcher Rick Cerone, hit his fourth homer as a Yankee in the sixth inning after Piniella had homered earlier in the inning to put the Yanks on top 3-2.

ACTOR O'BRIEN AT WHITE HOUSE — Actor Pat O'Brien acted as Master of Ceremonies Monday at The White House during a reception for the Foster Grandparents of the Washington D.C. metropolitan area. Members of The Peabody Senior Citizens Choral Group of Memphis, Tenn., who entertained, are seated behind O'Brien.

Wright quick with one-liners at speech

WASHINGTON (AP) — The name of the villainous J.R. Ewing came up during a speech at the National Press Club Monday.

Rep. Jim Wright, D-Texas, pointed out they'd worked together before.

An official introduced Wright to about 150 luncheon guests as a man who will probably become Speaker of the House within the next few years and said he would share a place in history with actress-singer Mary Martin as people from Weatherford, Texas who have made good.

The Fort Worth Democrat said the competition is even stiffer since Larry Hagman, the star of the TV series "Dallas," is from Weatherford also.

"But lest you think I no longer have any clout, when J.R. lived in Weatherford his senior year with his father, I was his coach!" Wright said gleefully.

Wright, in his fifth term as House Majority Leader, told his audience the Democrats have their hands full in trying to overtake the lead Reagan's forces appear to have in the fight for approval of the president's proposed economic recovery plan.

Trying to pull out a victory in the current battle, "is a little like going into a ring where the other guy has brass knuckles and you've got 16-ounce gloves. We don't have any favors to withhold or punishment to mete out. All we can give toward our cause is logic," Wright said.

"In all candor, we're going into the seventh inning about three runs behind," he added.

The Democrats have suggested an alternative that includes less severe cuts to social programs and recommends a smaller tax cut.

His speech before about 150 people was broadcast live by a public service radio network and telecast on a delayed basis nationally by a cable television company.

Wright had been introduced as a congressman with the reputation of being the best orator in the House of Representatives. Speaker of the House Tip O'Neill once said of all the House members, "his is the only voice that actually changes votes."

During a question-and-answer session that followed his talk, Wright had one-liners ready.

Question—"What is your feeling toward the Democrats, particularly those from his own state of Texas, who have committed to vote for the president's budget proposal?"

Answer—"Sorrow."

Q—"Why was President Carter defeated so badly by Reagan?"

A—"Well, he didn't get nearly enough votes."

Q—"Earlier, you described the president as 'winsome.' Does that mean he will win some and lose some?"

A—"I hope so, if for no other reason than to preserve his becoming humility."

In his opening remarks, Wright pointed out he was wearing a tie, adorned with the National Press Club insignia, given him after a previous speech. He added, "and if I'd been given National Press Club pajamas, I'd have worn them too!"

That was a reference to President Reagan's address before a joint session of Congress last week in which the president read a letter from an 8-year-old boy who had told him he hoped he got well soon because if he didn't he might have to make a speech in his pajamas.

When Wright finished his talk, he was presented a National Press Club jacket, with the promise that next time, he'd get the pajamas.

Although his talk attacked the president's budget proposal, Wright was respectful toward the president himself and was highly complimentary of Reagan's address last week before a joint session of Congress.

"I can't match the zeal of the president's speech. What a lesson and example he gave to the whole world of the way a human being should behave under periods of great stress. He called forth the best that is in us."

But Wright said Congress can't be expected to give rubber-stamp approval to everything President Reagan calls for, despite his big victory and his popularity with the people.

Another president asked for total compliance with his plan for an economic recovery program 50 years ago, Wright said.

"That was Herbert Hoover, and the year was 1931. He promised us two cars in every garage and two chickens in every pot. By the time he was through, we were lucky we had a pot to put a chicken in," Wright said.

Rural home ransacked

The residence of Mrs. Ethel Weatherman, 193 Route 143, was ransacked Saturday afternoon.

According to a report filed in the Howard County Sheriff's Department, a 19 inch portable color TV was stolen from the residence. It was reported that someone kicked in the front door of the house, went through closets and drawers, and turned over mattresses before taking the television.

Sears catalogue goes video

By PETER J. BOYER
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Theoretically, there is a point in any revolution beyond which progress yields to disorder and revolution becomes its own end. As far as I'm concerned, the video revolution is right now dancing at the edge of that boundary.

I refer to the news out of Chicago last week that the venerable Sears, Roebuck and Co. is testing a home video catalogue.

For the moment, Sears is merely testing a videodisc version of its seasonal catalogues in Cincinnati and Washington, D.C. The seasonal catalogues are those "summer sale" numbers, which, lacking the physical and spiritual weight of the big Sears catalogues, would fit perfectly onto a videodisc.

The implications of the Sears test are clear. The summer sales catalogue now, the beloved Sears catalogue tomorrow. I do not like to imagine a Louisiana rice farmer perusing a videodisc picture for a new part for the combine or some material for Ma's new dress.

And if the Sears catalogue goes electronic, can other catalogue merchandisers be far behind? What if, heaven forbid, L.L. Bean of Freeport, Maine, should go electronic? Bean's inventory of knives, hiking boots, tents, fishing gear and such could be purchased just as well through a videodisc, I suppose, but the Bean catalogue is an institution unto itself.

Happily, Bean isn't talking such nonsense for the moment, so let's get back to Sears. One of the few known consequences of the video revolution is the tendency of video rebels to stay at home. (You've seen the TV commercial, I'm sure, showing a happy family cancelling the babysitter because the parents discover that, through the miracle of video games, they can stand spending an evening in the same house with their kids. I suspect, though, that family time spent playing electronic games isn't necessarily quality time.)

Anyway, Sears spokesman Ernest Arms says that Sears' current videodisc experiment is "a step in the direction" of complete stay-at-home shopping. That's some years away, he says, but you know what the video revolutionaries have in mind.

A Saturday afternoon with Pop at Sears, with its popcorn-and-floorwax ambience and its mind-boggling array of stuff that fathers are interested in, may become a lost ritual in a video revolutionized society.

It occurs to me that television has been pervasive, if not intrusive, enough without benefit of a revolution. Who knows, the cautious video reactionary might ask, what other pillars of the old order might be swept aside by thundering technology?

Down with the revolution.
