TWO HORSES DOWN — Craig McMillan of Brownwood was another rider who fell with his saddle bronc during the rodeo Thursday night. But McMillan will be given another chance in the saddle bronc riding event due to technicalities. McMillan is shown here on Rocky Butte.

Rodeo fans will pay tribute to Toots Mansfield

By CAROL HART
The second night of local rodeo competition, Centennial night at the rodeo bowl, saw a large crowd assembled to watch cowboys from across the nation compete to hold on to their standings.
Prior to the actual rodeo events, Don Endsley, announcer, narrated a special program celebrating the history of Texas.
Spectators who attend the rodeo tonight will join in a tribute to Big Spring's own Toots Mansfield, seven time world's champion in calf roping.

Mansfield is to be inducted in the National Cowboy's Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City.
Top competitors in the Thursday night competition were:

But the hours are really good

Clowning around is dangerous

By CAROL HART
On the job as a rodeo clown, Leon Coffee has suffered a broken jaw and cheekbone. Mike Moore has broken his foot, torn ligaments in his knee, and shattered his collar bone.
And Quail Dobbs, a veteran rodeo clown who hails from Coahoma, has broken a leg, an arm, and been hit in the eye by an angry bull.
Why do they put up with it?
"The hours are good," jokes Moore. "We get to sleep late."
But, seriously, he adds, "It's a challenge. It's a profession that the average person couldn't do well. It's quite a thrill to do it right."
All three men are in Big Spring at the 48th Annual Rodeo and Cowboy Reunion. Most of the time, they parade around the arena, making people laugh. But when a cowboy gets in trouble with a bull he is riding, their jobs turn deadly serious.

PROFESSIONAL CLOWNS — Mike Moore, Quail Dobbs and Leon Coffee are professional rodeo clowns, working this week at the Big Spring Rodeo and Cowboy Reunion. Dobbs is a Coahoma resident, and Moore and Coffee, who cord to Coffee. Dobbs is one of only two clowns ever to work at the National Finals Rodeo as both a barrel man and a bull fighter.

Moore and Coffee, who call themselves Salt and Pepper, and Dobbs, are professional clowns, which means they hold cards with the Professional Rodeo Cowboy's Association.
Dobbs has been a rodeo clown for more than 17 years. Coffee and Moore, who have families in Austin, have been clowning as a team since 1976.
"I used to ride," on the rodeo circuit, said Dobbs. "I was always fascinated with the clowns."
"One time, a guy didn't show up at a Rodeo Cowboy's Association rodeo in Buffalo, Minn. He was the barrel man. I said I'd do it." Dobbs has been a professional rodeo clown ever since.
Coffee and Moore were also rodeo riders. Moore recalled "I wasn't too handy at it. A bull threw me, stepped on my face, and broke my jaw. That ended my career."
Moore talked his friend Coffee into becoming a clown with him.
Clowning is something "you have to work at," said Dobbs. "Some people never make a living at it."
But Dobbs, Moore and Coffee aren't having that problem now.
"Salt and Pepper are in demand," said Dobbs. "They could be anywhere. These guys have made a name for themselves."
Dobbs also has quite a reputation on the professional rodeo circuit, ac-ording to Coffee. Dobbs is one of only two clowns ever to work at the National Finals Rodeo as both a barrel man and a bull fighter.

A turning point in Dobbs' career came in 1968, he recalled. Prior to that time, "I kept telling myself I was going to quit."
In 1968, he acquired his car act, a favorite at rodeos across the nation. That year, he also teamed with Jerry Olson, and the two billed themselves as "Mutt and Jeff." Although they decided not to travel as a pair in 1969, Quail kept the car act in his repertoire, and considers the 1968-69 year when his career made a turn for the better.
Now, all three men face grueling schedules on the circuit, traveling for up to 11 months of the year.

Being on the circuit that much of the time "can be hard on a marriage," said Moore, who recently re-wed his wife after a divorce he says was caused by rodeo.
"It takes an understanding woman to be married to a rodeo clown," Moore said.
All three men are married. Dobbs and his wife Judy have two children, Stephanie, 14, and Coley, 9. Dobbs said that he tries to have his family with him on the road as much as possible.
Coffee has two children, ages 3 and 1, and said he was in St. Louis, Missouri, when the second baby was born. He expressed some regrets at not being at home when the baby was born.

Moore and his wife have a daughter, 3.
All three men expressed pleasure at being at the Big Spring rodeo. "Nothing in the world is more satisfying than to be wanted by hometown people," said Dobbs. "I used to always miss the Big Spring rodeo, because this is the busy time of the year."
He added "I was afraid I would mess up in front of home folks. Now, I just have fun."
Coffee and Moore added "A small rodeo, you get to know the people better. We look forward to coming back."

Homeowner's insurance rate hike voted

By JACKIE CALMES
(Harte-Hanks Austin Bureau)
AUSTIN — Homeowner property insurance rates for the Big Spring area can go up 1.8 percent after Sept. 1, the State Insurance Board ruled Thursday.
That is 4.3 percentage points lower than the 6.1 percent statewide average hike. The state figure includes a North-Northwest Region of which Big Spring is a part, and two others — the Seacoast and Central regions.
Also Thursday, the board increased rates for other categories of building insurance.

Renters' insurance could increase 25 percent throughout the state. Farm and ranch insurance can go up 16.4 percent in the northern area, compared with a statewide average of 13.6 percent.
Fire insurance rates generally can go up 5 percent statewide but those for residences and farms will decrease 18.9 percent and 1.4 percent, respectively.
Average rates for extended coverage will increase in the northern region 7.8 percent.
Board Chairman Bill Davis defended the hikes in maximum rates — the first in five years — after acknowledging that 80 percent of Texas' building insurers set rates lower than the board's limit.

"The record clearly shows that rising costs indicate a need ... to increase the maximum rate," Daves said.
He noted that some companies' rates are 35 to 40 percent below the ceiling, adding that "may raise serious concerns about the adequacy of this industry's underwriting."
The potential of some companies having inadequate assets to meet obligations also drew unfavorable comment from board member Lyndon Olson. Olson said the general public should be made aware of companies with such drastic "downward deviations."

He and Daves, in voting for the increases, directed their staff to study the deviations and to require that companies better substantiate lower-than-allowable rates in the future.
The third board member, Durwood Manford, was absent.
In a first for property insurance rate-making, the board considered companies' investment income in deciding how great an increase to allow. Investment income is a company's profit on such things as stocks and bonds that have been purchased with money from policyholders.

Q. What publications are available on auto safety for children? My daughter lets my lovely little granddaughter stand up in the car seat, to hang out the window and even to sit on her lap while she drives.
I've pleaded with her time after time but she just doesn't seem to care about the fact that her own laxness could someday kill her little girl. I'm going to force her to read the publications you are going to refer me to.

Words of Freedom

The American flag represents all facets of our country — what is good and also what needs to be changed. It belongs to all groups — not only to maturity, but also to youth. It symbolizes both the inalienable rights of each individual and his equally inalienable responsibilities.
The history of our flag and its development is a dramatic part of our heritage.

AT&T plans rate hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of an interstate long-distance telephone call will rise 16 percent Sunday under a notice the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. says it will file with the Federal Communications Commission today.

The FCC late Thursday authorized AT&T to implement a series of rate changes once the notice is filed, with the understanding that the Bell System will refund any overcharges to its customers if an in-depth investigation shows that the new rates are not justified.

The commission's decision also will allow the Bell System to raise its private-line business rates 16 percent and its charges for a WATS — Wide Area Telephone Service — line 10.5 percent.

At the same time, rates for international phone calls will drop 35 percent at 12:01 a.m. Sunday, when AT&T says it will implement the changes.

"Certainly we are pleased that we're finally able to put in new rates to earn what the FCC decided on April 6 was needed," AT&T spokesman Pic Wagner said Thursday. "As it stands right now, we think we'll be able to file the tariff tomorrow, meaning the increases will take effect Sunday morning."

Altogether, the steps will produce an estimated $725 million in additional earnings annually for the company.

The FCC said the two-day delay in implementing the rates would allow it to impose a so-called accounting order on AT&T, enabling the agency to launch a more in-depth investigation into the legality of the rate increases.

AT&T has been struggling to raise its rates ever since the commission ruled April 6 that the company was entitled to an overall profit margin of 12.75 percent instead of the 10.5 percent previously allowed.

The various rate changes will have no effect on the local phone bills of consumers or on the rates charged for long-distance calls within the boundaries of a single state.

Lillian faces surgery

AMERICUS, Ga. (AP) — Lillian Carter, mother of former President Jimmy Carter, will enter a hospital here on Sunday for surgery to remove a small tumor near her left breast, her doctor said today.

Dr. John H. Robinson said a preliminary examination indicated the tumor may be malignant, but the prospects for full recovery from the operation are good.

Robinson said Mrs. Carter, 82, a registered nurse known to her friends and family as "Miss Lillian," discovered the tumor during an examination she did herself.

The operation is scheduled for Monday.

"She is in good spirits and has full confidence in the success of her treatment, and has asked friends to pray for her, not to send flowers and not to worry," Robinson said.

Mitchell residents to learn market value of property

COLORADO CITY (SC) — With the County-wide re-evaluation by Southwestern Appraisal Co. having been completed, it won't be long until Mitchell County residents will learn the market value of their property.

According to County Tax Collector-Assessor Mike Burt, "After talking to Mr. D.C. Hamilton in Austin, we find Mitchell County has 8,900 pieces of property. We should have our cards here by Monday and, hopefully, get them in the mail by July 1. Our tentative date for the Board of Review meeting will be July 20-24." Hamilton is president of Southwestern Appraisal Co.

Additional, Burt added, "These 20-day notices which will be mailed out will reflect the market value only. Until the individual taxing agencies meet, no real rate will be set on taxes. For example, last year, the County rate was 95 cents per $100 evaluation. As a rough estimate, it probably will drop down to between 17 and 20 cents per $100 evaluation this year."

Burt summed up the situation by stating, "The 20 day notices will show a great

Solon sees 'confusion' in future of education

By PETER VANDEVANTER

WASHINGTON — Rep. Henry Gonzalez, of San Antonio, told a meeting of South Texas school officials Thursday that never before has there been "greater confusion" about the future of education.

Gonzalez, in a speech to about 100 educators questioned the federal government's commitment to education in light of Reagan's recommendations to cut impact aid to schools.

"In all the years of the conference, this one has to mark the year of the real crisis," the democrat said. "There has never been a time when there was greater confusion over what is happening with educational finance."

The fourth annual conference brings together San Antonio school board superintendents and Texas Board of Education officials to discuss tuition tax credits, bilingual education and impact aid.

In the Reagan budget, which was debated on the House floor Thursday, impact aid would be cut from $800 million to $400 million for the upcoming school year. Texas schools would be cut from last year's total of $32.6 million statewide in aid to $9.6 million.

Impact aid is federal assistance to school districts where more than 20 percent of the children are dependents of military personnel. The funding also makes up

Radio owner clears up 'gifts'

Winston Wrinkle, owner of KBST radio, said that someone is calling Big Spring residents in the evenings and misrepresenting himself as a KBST employee.

"Someone is calling people and telling them they have won an album," said Wrinkle. He said that his radio station never calls out of the station to make awards. Albums and other prizes are given away only through on-air broadcasts, he stressed.

"The calls are a harassment to adults," Wrinkle said. "We regret the inconvenience" they are causing.

Being a full-time professional rodeo rider puts quite a demand on Cody Lambert's time.

Lambert is a student at Sul Ross University, majoring in Range and Animal Science. He said prior to his performances at the rodeo here Thursday that he was considering not returning to school in the fall.

"I didn't get to as many rodeos as I would have liked," Lambert said, talking about combining rodeo and college. "It was hard during the winter," he added, saying that he did well at winter rodeos in Fort Worth and San Antonio. Good scores at those events, plus several others he managed to squeeze in between studies, has him in the top 15 in the nation for the events he participates in.

Cody estimates that he attended 15 rodeos so far this year, as compared to 40 or so attended by his competitors. "I'm trying to beat them out," he said.

Hometown for Lambert is El Paso. Last year, he was a student at Howard College in Big Spring, and was a member of the Howard College rodeo team.

This is his second year as a professional rodeo rider. Before becoming a pro, he was a member of the American Junior Rodeo Association.

Lambert did well in saddle bronc riding and bull riding here Thursday. In saddle bronc riding, he took the second highest score, with a TESTING GEAR — Cody Lambert, a top contender on the rodeo circuit, tests out his gear prior to a performance at the Big Spring rodeo. Lambert is a student at Sul Ross University, but says that rodeo has put a heavy demand on his time. Lambert was a high scorer in bull riding and in saddle bronc busting Thursday.

73. In bull riding he took the high score of 76 points.

This summer, Lambert has attended the college rodeo finals in Bozeman, Montana. On his way to Montana, he attended and competed in five rodeos. He's going to a rodeo in Reno Saturday, then on to Cody, Wyoming. He also plans to go to Canada to attend the Calgary Stampede rodeo.

"I try to stay a month ahead of the schedule," he said. "I usually travel in a car, although I may have to fly to some rodeos over the Fourth of July weekend. There are more rodeos than usual on that weekend."

Lambert comes from a rodeo family. His brother, Chuck, is a team roper.

Another brother, Casey, is a bull rider in the American Junior Rodeo Association, and has held the championship four times in the AJRA.

Lambert's sister, Cheyanne, is just starting out in her rodeo career, said her brother.

Bentsen leading campaign to promote savings in U.S.

(Special to the Herald)

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen (D-Tex.), a leader in efforts to provide incentives for Americans to save, said earlier this week that an intensive campaign to promote such incentives was undertaken in the Senate this week.

Twenty-five Democratic senators appeared before the Senate to speak on the current inadequate level of savings in the U.S. and the high interest rates that result.

"We Americans at present save less than a nickel out of every dollar of income. By contrast, the West Germans save 15 percent of their income and the Japanese almost 20 percent," said Bentsen, second-ranking Democrat on the Senate Finance Committee, which has been writing a tax bill.

"One reason for our low savings rate is government tax policy. Alone among major industrial nations, we fail to give our citizens strong incentives to save. In fact, our present tax laws tend to discourage saving while promoting spending."

Bentsen authored a small saver tax incentive which went into effect this year. It exempts from federal income taxes, for the first time in U.S. history, the first $200 a saver earns on interest, the first $400 for a married couple filing a joint return.

The Bentsen small saver tax exemption was approved by Congress in 1980 on a two-year trial basis. However, the compromise tax package proposed by the Administration would make this provision permanent. Bentsen has proposed legislation this year to increase the exemption to $1,000-$2,000.

The senator has also introduced the Home Mortgage Incentive Act, which would exempt all savings interest on special accounts set up by financial institutions to provide funds for home mortgages.

"In the judgment of experts who have studied this legislation, the Home

Mortgage Incentive Act would attract billions of dollars into savings institutions. It would replenish the supply of mortgage money and drive interest rates down to where American families can afford to buy their own homes.

It would revive the housing industry, create thousands of jobs and help create a national economic renaissance," Bentsen said.

Sayers, senior deacon; Richard Knous, senior warden; Gene Dupay, worshipful master; Paul Sweatt, treasurer; Gordon Hughes, secretary; Robert K. Smith, junior deacon and Dale Olson, chaplain, kneeling.

Road improvement projects announced

A massive rehabilitation and improvement program for highways and farm-to-market roads in Texas, approved by the State Highway and Public Transportation Commission, includes several projects in Howard County.

District Engineer Roger G. Welsh of Abilene listed the following improvements in Howard County:

IS 20 — A seal coat consisting of a layer of asphalt and aggregate on the frontage roads from the West Business Route in Big Spring to FM 700.

SH 350 (Snyder Highway) — A seal coat from Wildhorse Creek to the Mitchell County line.

Lp 402 — Construction of concrete dips at various locations from Galveston Street to Birdwell Lane in Big Spring.

FM 87 — Replace the drainage structure located 0.8 mile west of IH 20.

Statewide, the program planned by the commission will cost an estimated $213.6 million, with $1.6 million held in reserve for later assignment.

The plan includes improvement and rehabilitation of 5,478.3 miles of state-maintained highways. In all, there are 898 separate projects in 218 counties of the state.

The work includes projects which will upgrade existing highways to handle heavier volumes of traffic, enhance safety, reduce the amount and kind of maintenance necessary to protect the large public investment in the highways of Texas.

Enrollment record posted at Texas Tech

LUBBOCK — Summer enrollment for the first term at Texas Tech University has set a record high, surpassing by more than 200 students the previous record set in the summer of 1973.

A total of 8,536 students enrolled for first term summer classes this year. That is 203 more than the previous record of 8,333 set in the first summer term of 1973.

The 1981 total is up 316 from the 8,220 enrollment recorded a year ago. All undergraduate colleges reported increased enrollments, said Dr. Gene W. Medley, director of admissions and records.

Pollard elected to serve on TADA board

Bill Pollard, president of Pollard Chevrolet Co. in Big Spring, has been elected to the Texas Automobile Dealers Association board of directors.

BILL POLLARD

Pollard will serve a three-year term on the TADA Board, representing a 12-county area (District 24). From 1975 through 1978, he served as a TADA director in this same region.

"The association is extremely fortunate to have a person of Bill Pollard's caliber serving on the board, and we are happy he will again take an active leadership role on behalf of his fellow dealers," TADA president Gene Horn of El Paso said.

"The TADA Board makes policy decisions affecting the new car and truck dealers in Texas. Considering the critical — and somewhat volatile — nature of our industry, these decisions are becoming more and more important," Horn explained.

A native of Avery, Texas, Pollard has been on the Chamber of Commerce board of directors, is a past president of the Shrine Club, member of the American Legion and past president of the Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center. He earned bachelor and master degrees at Sam Houston State University.

TADA represents approximately 1,500 franchised new car and truck dealers, selling almost 95 percent of all new vehicles in the state.

Cooler heads are prevailing

Maybe Americans are getting smarter. Time was when we might have gone to bat for Poland in its struggle to keep from being smothered by the Russian bear. A score of years ago, even less, we would have been straining at the leash to straighten out the fanatical Ayatollah Khomeini in Iran, who seems to be making all the wrong moves.

AT SOME POINT in time, we would have become emotionally involved in the miseries of Northern Ireland, or sent teams of military advisors into the Middle East in efforts to defuse the powder keg that is being tossed about between Israel and some of the Arab countries. A decade ago, we wouldn't have thought about censuring Israel for bombing a Syrian nuclear plant. Now, we can express disappointment in Israel's decision, realizing that Israel's rashness could very well ignite a third world war.

Our situation has taken a turn for the better. Our view, while not one that could be defined as one of isolationism, certainly has become more detached.

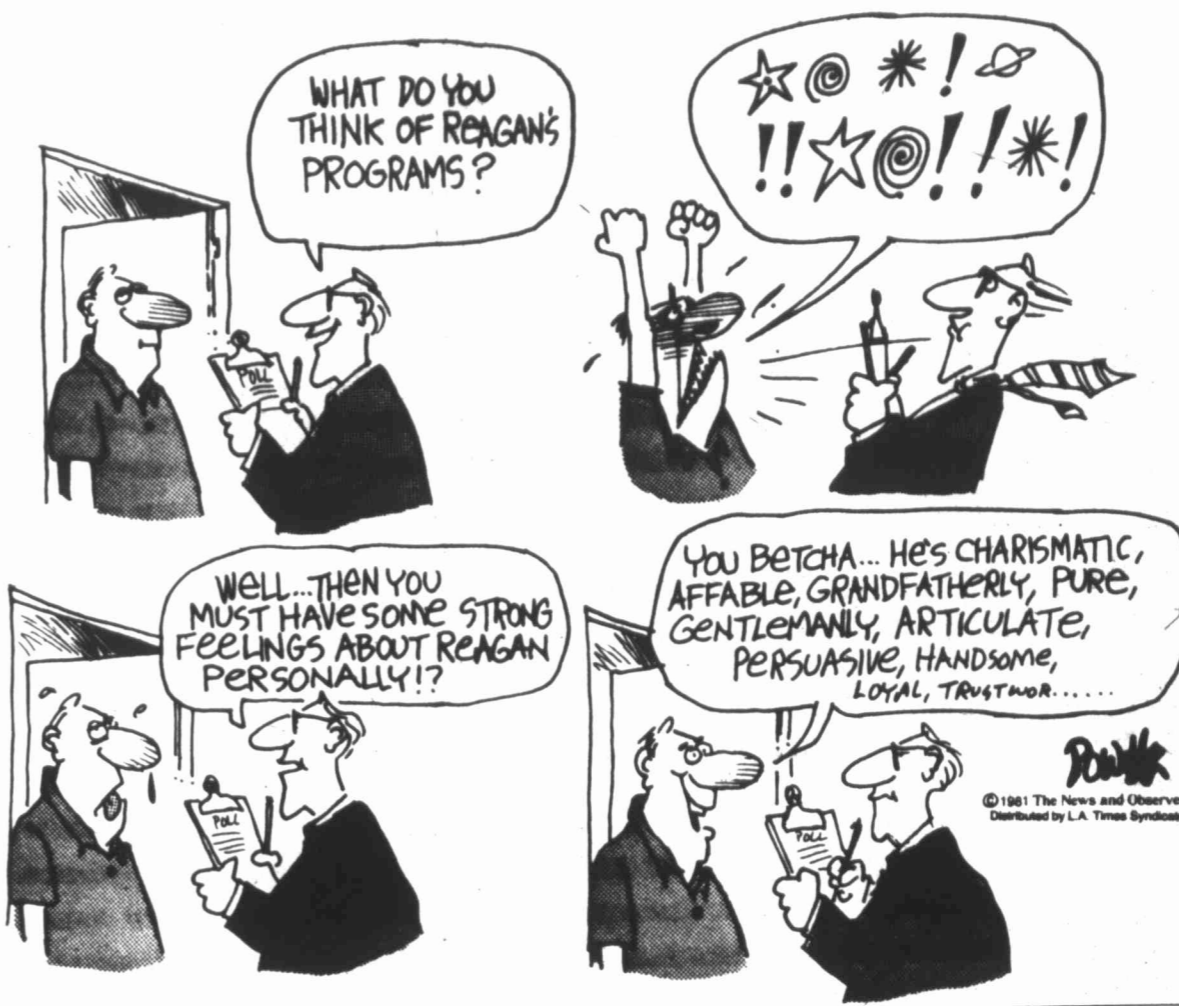

Our thinkers may have arrived at the conclusion, that we can't mediate every problem that comes along, that nations in conflict would be better off trying to work out their own differences.

Too, the men and women we have elected to high office have received a message from the young people, a message that has come through loud and clear.

THOSE IN THEIR formative years have let the world know in no uncertain terms that they have no appetite for aggression unless trouble is forced on them. And the people who can convince them to take up arms and fight in foreign lands have a selling job on their hands.

Americans are not about to spook and run if any world power makes menacing gestures in this direction. Most are as patriotic as any generation in history. It's just that the majority of them know a true crisis when they see one, having benefited from the lessons taught in the tragedies of Korea and Vietnam.

May their wisdom grow with the years.

Didn't sell out

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — Every man has his price, the cynics say, and Libya's dictator, Muammar Qaddafi, has enough petrodollars to buy just about any man he wants.

But two former CIA explosives experts resisted the temptation to make some easy money from Qaddafi. Their story is worth telling because it is apparently unique: They may be the only ones among many former CIA and Green Beret specialists approached by the Qaddafi regime who told him to get lost. And they did it on principle, refusing to let their expertise be used in Qaddafi's systematic campaign of assassination and terror.

They are named in secret government files, but I have been asked to protect their identities. So let's call them Smith and Brown.

QADDAFI'S "MASTER terrorists," ex-CIA agents Ed Wilson and Frank Terpil, had hired a former CIA ordnance expert, John Harper, to go to Libya and make tiny explosive devices that could be hidden in ashtrays, coat hangers and similar harmless-looking objects. During a demonstration of sophisticated timers, one failed to work and a Libyan officer was blown up accidentally.

Despite this mishap, Harper later wangled another contract out of Wilson — for $100,000, according to the government's star witness against Terpil and Wilson, ex-CIA man Kevin Mulcahy. Harper flew back to Libya, Mulcahy told my associate Dale Van Atta.

On the way in from the airport with a Qaddafi aide and a chauffeur, the car struck and killed a pedestrian. The two Libyans casually dumped the body into the trunk, saying they'd take care of it later.

On another occasion, Harper rashly carried two cans of explosives — "enough to blow London off the map" — through Heathrow Airport, using a diplomatic passport. This unnerved Wilson, who decided Harper needed replacing.

So Wilson went head-hunting in the Washington area, and looked up Brown in Alexandria, Va. Brown had retired from the CIA after 17 years' experience training others to fabricate, identify and disarm explosive devices used by terrorists.

THE TWO EX-SPOOKS met in the Holiday Inn at Tyson's Corner, Va., a longtime CIA hangout, on Sept. 3, 1976. According to secret Justice Department files, "Wilson appeared quite desperate to hire an explosives expert as his current man in Libyan John Harper, had fallen flat on his face." Brown had known Harper as his contact when he needed materials for his CIA work.

Wilson told (Brown) he wanted someone to train individuals in the fabrication and use of explosives in Libya," the secret files state. "Specifically, he was interested in camouflage devices such as lamps, bricks" and other objects. He pointed to his briefcase and said it contained a number of miniature timers.

Brown told Wilson he wasn't interested in the job because he "didn't want to do anything with Col. Qaddafi." Wilson persisted. He promised Brown complete authority in selecting trainees, a $90,000 tax-free salary deposited in a Swiss bank, a house, car, chauffeur, laboratory — even a percentage of the dollar value of materials used to make the explosive devices.

Brown tried to pump Wilson. What, he asked, would he really be doing for Qaddafi? "You know, the Colonel may sometimes have some young colonels or some officers or something that are getting out of line that he wants to send a present to," Wilson replied, according to the secret files.

Rebuffed by Brown, Wilson next called on Smith, in Sterling, Va. Wilson said something about clearing all land mines in Libya, and again mentioned Harper, who, he said, was having "emotional problems."

Smith "decided as soon as he heard Qaddafi and Libya that he wasn't going to work for Wilson, but he wanted to hear Wilson's offer," the files state.

At one point, Wilson showed Smith an electronic firing device packed in a small prescription bottle with a piece of Styrofoam. Smith recognized it immediately. It was "similar in design to (one) which has been used by the Palestine Liberation Organization in terrorism actions throughout Europe... far too sophisticated" to be suitable for clearing mines. He told Wilson nothing doing.

Haig, Weinberger

Evans, Novak

WASHINGTON — Senior White House aides were fearful that another, costly round of hostility between Secretary of State Alexander Haig and Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger would break out over U.S. reaction to the Israeli sneak raid with U.S.-supplied aircraft against that Iraqi nuclear reactor.

Weinberger did not hide his strong advice to President Reagan that Israel should be punished for breaking a U.S. law excluding any offensive use of American-supplied weapons. But Haig equivocated for 36 hours and even then faced a split decision within his department before recommending that the U.S. "condemn" Israel's unprecedented raid. Weinberger wanted a stronger U.S. response: first, to make crystal clear to Israel that breaking U.S. law is intolerable; second, to show Arab allies that the U.S. really can be impartial.

WHEN TELEVISION NETWORKS started highlighting this disagreement, Haig was contacted in Hong Kong, on his way to China, to see whether the State Department was spreading anti-Weinberger rumors. Haig said certainly not — and then issued a statement denying any major differences between the two.

Finishing touches now being put on a tough, new Reagan administration Cuban policy will not please Fidel Castro. Policymakers want to tighten the economic boycott, pressure Third World countries like Argentina to share in it, and raise the costs of Cuba's Angolan adventures. Coupled with this is a possible military exercise at Guantanamo naval base, certain to anger the communist leader of Cuba.

In addition, the U.S. Air Force has been ordered to study the advisability of deploying surface-to-air missiles at Homestead Air Force Base in Florida as a defense precaution against any possible Cuban attack, no matter how unlikely. Finally, President Reagan will order the Immigration and Naturalization Service to round up all Cuban immigrants with "criminal" and "subversive" records and deport them back to Cuba. They came in during the uncontrollable, illegal movements of Cuban refugees in early 1980.

RHODES-ASHBROOK FEUD An attack on Ohio Gov. Jim Rhodes as too old to run (he is 72) by Rep. John Ashbrook, who is 52, has guaranteed that the probable senatorial primary election between old-pro Rhodes and conservative Ashbrook will be one of the most bitter in recent Ohio history.

Rhodes has spent more time as governor — 14 years — than any Ohioan in history. Although some of his friends lament his decision to run for the Senate, his closest aides say he is spoiling for the battle and very much wants to end his political career in Washington.

Ashbrook, who waged a forlorn campaign for the Republican presidential nomination in 1972, is a tough in-fighter whose campaign aides are making Rhodes' age a paramount issue. Some published polls show it is hurting Rhodes (despite President Reagan's 70 years). The enveloping Republican feud could embitter the party and make it easier for Democratic Sen. Howard Metzenbaum to win reelection.

ALLEN'S AWACS President Reagan has given Richard V. Allen, his national security assistant and a trusted friend of Israel, the top assignment in winning congressional approval of Reagan's plan to sell AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia.

The plan is heatedly attacked by Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel and many bipartisan leaders of the pro-Israel bloc in Congress. But Reagan apparently reasoned Allen's credentials as Israel's staunch friend would give him more clout with both Israel and Israel's U.S. political allies.

THE AWACS DECISION, raising a storm of protest when it was first announced, may have been helped, however, by the Israel raid against Iraq's nuclear reactor. Israel's U.S.-made planes easily crossed the Saudi border undetected. Moreover, the raid proved one private Saudi argument in seeking the planes, which are for use mainly against Iran; that Israel is indeed a military menace to the Arab states. Nevertheless, Allen will have his hands full.

Big Spring Herald Mailbag

Dear Editor:

References here is made to the letter in the "Big Spring Herald Mailbag" of June 21 by Ms. Nelda Reagan wherein she refers to Dr. Ernest Lefever as "an able man of great honor, integrity and courage" and further states that his views on human rights are morally sound and consistent with the mood of the country.

It is quite apparent that she has been reading only the comments and reports from right wing extremists and totally ignores the facts presented at the hearings on his confirmation which justly denied him the appointment. Dr. Lefever was president of the Ethics and Public Policy Center, a conservative think tank long associated with a history of collusion with foreign governments and corporations at odds with State Department rights policy.

In 1979 and 1980, Dr. Lefever's Center took $25,000 from the Nestle Corp., largest manufacturer of baby formula, which was under attack by religious groups and the World Health Organization as a detriment to health in the Third World. Dr. Lefever used the money to distribute thousands of copies of a Fortune magazine he had commissioned denouncing the campaign against the baby formula and accused others involved in the campaign not agreeing with him as Marxists marching under the banner of Christ. In regard to his responsibilities of his office Dr. Lefever said, "The United States should remove all clauses from the statute books that establish a human rights standard or condition that must be met by another government before our government transacts normal business with it."

We already have too many foxes watching the hen house in James Watt, Secretary of Interior, an opponent of protecting public lands which his office is designed to do, and Richard V. Allen, National Security advisor, whom the Wall Street Journal says leaked secrets of the International Trade Commissions proceedings to a close associate of Japan's Prime Minister, while urging Japan to establish an American based lobby with a friend at the helm to counter protectionism sentiment in the U.S. When his friend got a Japanese contract from the maker of Datsun cars Allen demanded half the fees claiming the contract was the result of his introduction. An executive of Grumman Air Craft accused Mr. Allen of demanding a million dollar illegal contribution to the Nixon campaign in exchange for the White House pressure on Japan to buy a Grumman airplane.

It looks as though America is starting to wake up and realize President Reagan did not get any mandate from the people last November even though he did receive overwhelming electoral votes. Only about 52 percent of the eligible voted and he got just over 51 percent of them which means only 26 percent of the registered voters voted for Mr. Reagan. This is further indicated in the recent special election in Maryland where Steny Hoyer, a Democrat, defeated the Republican candidate for Congress by a wide margin, even though Vice-President Bush and all the big Republican guns were active in this election supporting Hoyer's opponent.

Around the rim His all for art

Bill Elder

It was dusk and the Old Cowpoke looked wasted.

The sideburns, once trimmed to look just like the Panhandle, were uneven.

The vest, once immaculate, was rumpled and draped over knobby, rounded shoulders.

The moustache, once plastered to his upper lip like a fat croissant, looked like a mongrel's tail now.

THE PLACE WHERE the visitor really noticed the sickness was in the Old Cowpoke's eyes. If it wasn't such a trite way of describing them, the visitor would have remarked to himself that the Old Cowpoke gazed out at the world through "tombstone eyes."

The visitor made a grab for the scattered nerve-ends of his courage — you never knew what to say to the dying, because you always came off sounding like a mauldin fool or incredibly naive — and asked the Old Cowpoke if he thought he'd lived the "right life."

"No," the Old Cowpoke answered in a cold, direct voice that made the visitor wince and wish he'd never even dreamed of going to see the Old Cowpoke.

"Why not?" the visitor asked after a good pause, not daring to look the man in the eyes now. He kicked a pebble off the Old Cowpoke's front porch, as if the question had been just a stray exclamation made while he kicked the pebble, rather than the most important question the visitor felt he could ever ask.

The Old Cowpoke pulled a pack of Barclays from his vest — and lit one up, after which he immediately lapsed into a loud, spit-garbled fit of coughing.

He shook his head violently, as if to signal that his throat might give out before the visitor asked too many more questions.

WAS IT THE BIG corporations, the visitor asked gently, that came in and tried to buy out every ranch and farm between Indianapolis and Bakersfield? No, the Old Cowpoke replied emphatically. He'd been able to resist all those guys in their straw hats that didn't have a bead of sweat on the bands and their polyester suits that didn't have a speck of dust on the legs. He'd just sworn like crazy at them when they waded their contracts, promising he'd be set for life if only he sold out now during their Farmland Acquisition Bonanza.

Was it the high cost of oil and gas and tractors, or was it the government's disturbing habit of subsidizing the farmers, only to turn around and sell the wheat to the Russians? He shook his head, a faint smile forming around the edges of his mouth.

"That's college boy talk," he scoffed playfully with the only show of humor he gave during the visit. "There ain't a farmer between here and North Dakota that's so shook up over the Communists that he won't make sure the food gets on nobody's table, if it's gonna wind up at some point on some Russian table."

He coughed again, and slowly, with mounting pressure, he rubbed his long, lean, spotty arms, as if trying to soothe some hard-to-reach inner pain.

"I get these mean old stabs of pain that always feel like they're in the middle of my arm or leg," he explained.

The visitor studied the arm; it couldn't have been the arm that used to lift bales of hay. This shriveled appendage didn't look like it could lift much more than a fork. It reminded the visitor of the radiation-damaged flesh of nuclear blast survivors, and then he realized that it was radiation of a different sort that had stricken the Old Cowpoke — the deadly rays that creep out from a man's brain when he's sleep-walking.

And the Old Cowpoke had been sleep-walking — for 30 years, right up to the day his doctor told him his cancer was not likely to go into remission. That was two years ago, and the Old Cowpoke had awakened only a little since then. He now smoked a cigarette with less toxicity than the other brands, but it still was toxic.

The Old Cowpoke stood up aching and faced the sunset's spilled cauldron of fire with a mean squint that would've made Clint Eastwood edgy. Then he went into his house without formally announcing to the visitor that the chat was over. But what were manners to a dying man, anyway? He had far more important protocol on his mind, and the world was growing darker by the moment.

Food can be part of body odor

Dr. Paul G. Donohue, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: I have read two terms used when speaking of perspiration odor, and you have used both of them. They are bromhidrosis and hyperhidrosis. Can you explain each, please, and differentiate? Is diet involved at all? — Mrs. R.U.

Any perspiration odor is called bromhidrosis. I'll talk about that first. Most perspiration odor arises in areas where there are special kinds of sweat glands — in the armpit and the pubic areas. This is because the kind of perspiration made is particularly attractive to normal skin bacteria, which feast on it. That would be OK, except that after feasting the bacteria release substances that give rise to the odor. To eliminate this problem, scrub the areas with anti-bacterial soap. Your pharmacist can help you make a choice from the many kinds available. It is a good idea to shave the hair in the armpit areas. An anti-bacterial cream can be used for a short time. Yes, when an odor is coming from other skin areas, where those special sweat glands are not located, the problem can be traced to eating aromatic foods — garlic and onions, for examples.

Now to hyperhidrosis. That means excessive sweating. As you know, the function of sweat is to cool the body through evaporation. Often the presence of sweat cannot be actually sensed or seen, but such insensible sweat is there in other parts of the body besides the two key ones.

If you keep your body too warm, you will produce more sweat. So simple attention to lifestyle can alleviate hyperhidrosis. Smoking decreases the production of urine and leads to water loss through the sweat glands. It's another good reason to quit if you have this problem.

Some illnesses cause excessive sweating — infections, Hodgkins disease, Cushing's syndrome and pheochromocytoma. I only list them to cover all bases for you. I assume that you are in otherwise good health and have been examined to rule them out as the cause of your odor problem. If I am not right, then you should be examined.

For a comprehensive discussion of how to cope with the change of life, write to Dr. Donohue, in care of the Big Spring Herald, for his invaluable booklet, "Make Menopause Easier." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Dear Abby

Boss's Wife Isn't Secretary's Business

DEAR ABBY: A secretary recently wrote to say that while her boss was out of town, his wife came into his office and searched his desk. She asked if she should tell her boss about it. You replied: "I wouldn't."

What a fascinating answer! I assume you gave that response because the person who did the searching was the boss's wife. This leads to my questions:

If it were the man's mother, should the secretary have told him? What if it were his 25-year-old daughter? His 17-year-old daughter? Two men who claimed to be CIA agents, but flashed their IDs so fast the secretary couldn't read them? The boss's wife, legally separated?

I'd really like to know your thought process!

JOHN C. IN PASADENA

DEAR JOHN: The secretary asked me if I would have told the boss and I replied, "I wouldn't." My reasoning: I would not want to be responsible for the marital brouhaha that might ensue. Had the boss's privacy been violated by someone other than his wife, I would have had no hesitation about informing my boss. Was my answer correct? Not necessarily. But it was honest.

DEAR ABBY: I am an 18-year-old girl, engaged to be married. My fiance and I went for our blood tests and mine came back positive for syphilis. Abby, I knew something had to be terribly wrong because the only person I've ever been with in my life is my fiance, so if I have syphilis I would have had to get it from him. But his tests came back negative! Abby, if I have syphilis, how come he doesn't have it, too?

We both took our blood tests over, thinking there might have been a mix-up at the lab, but mine came back positive again, and his came back negative.

How can this be? Help me, please.

WORRIED SICK IN W. VA.

DEAR WORRIED: It is possible that you do not have syphilis, but that other factors are causing your tests to show a positive reaction.

Those who at some time in their lives have had malaria, scarlet fever, infectious mononucleosis, lupus erythematosus (and many other diseases) are apt to show false-positive for syphilis.

See a dermatologist or hematologist for a more thorough blood study. You will be given tests to rule out the false diagnosis of syphilis. Don't panic. Your case is not unusual.

DEAR ABBY: What does one do in an air-conditioned office when someone says: "It's a little chilly — please turn down the air conditioner." (He turns it down.) Then a while later, someone else says, "Will you kindly turn up the air conditioner? It's too warm in here."

There are several people in this office and you can't please everybody.

COLD SHOULDERS IN VA.

DEAR COLD: Compromise and try to strike a happy medium, bearing in mind that no matter what you do, somebody is going to complain.

DEAR ABBY: I cannot understand why the grandparents of James Conklin-Campbell are so opposed to hyphenated names. Ancestors on both sides of my family tree have been adding their wives' maiden names to their children's surnames for generations and there has never been any confusion.

WHERE DO WE START TO MAKE A SHELTER — Seems to be the question Jenny Moore, left, is asking Girl Scout Camp Director Glenda Anderson as Elizabeth Anderson and Mande Walling, right, ponder the same question concerning the tent they are holding. This is just one of the lessons the girls were learning at Girl Scout Camp in the Boy Scout Camp Groups in Silver Heels Addition this week.

Know what messages colors send

COLLEGE STATION — Color your wardrobe "you" by knowing the special meanings of colors, says Ann Vanderpoorten, a clothing specialist.

Ms. Vanderpoorten is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Color is important in fashion — and in other aspects of life, she says.

"Colors cause physical and psychological reactions in people.

"In fact, clothing colors send emotional 'messages' about the wearer," the specialist says.

Light colors are generally seen as more cheerful, active and feminine than dark colors.

Dark colors, on the other hand, are viewed as sophisticated, reserved and "business-like."

True colors are more exciting and cheerful than subdued or grayed colors.

Warm colors, such as red, orange and yellow, are lively.

Cool colors — such as blues and greens, and neutral colors are restful and soothing. Cool colors have a receding effect.

Greetings sent Rook Club

Mrs. Fannie Kent, 1608 E. 5th, won high score at the Rook Club meeting in her home June 19.

Mrs. Merrett Jordan, a former member, sent greetings to the club from Shreveport, La. where she is in a retirement home.

Salad, dessert and coffee were served by the hostess at the end of play.

The next meeting will be July 17 in the home of Twila Lomax, 1306 Runnels.

Stenholm criticizes Demos for rewriting GOP spending bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic leadership might have been successful in forcing a separate vote on various spending cuts requested by President Reagan if they had preserved the bill's original wording, says the chairman of the conservative coalition that provided the swing votes.

"I think it was a tactical error. I don't think there's any doubt that it cost them the decision," said Rep. Charles Stenholm of Stamford.

"The decision of the Rules Committee to rewrite the Gramm-Latta II amendments, I thought, was a costly decision."

Hoping to embarrass Republicans and conservative Democrats who had supported the president on the original spending bill, the House Democratic leadership tried to force a record vote on individual segments of Reagan's economic package.

But instead of forcing a vote against Social Security benefits, for example, as contained in the original bill, the Democratic leadership changed the wording.

"I think it was a mistake," House Majority Leader Jim Wright agreed later. "I understood it was going to be simply broken up into packages and offered for separate votes. As it was, it allowed a kind of side issue to develop as to whether the majority was trying to be fair and give the minority a fair shot on their issue."

Texans accounted for almost a third of the 29 Democrats who rebuffed their leadership again and gave the president another major victory on his economic recovery program.

The Texas delegation voted 14-10 — including nine Democrats and all five of the state's Republicans — against an effort by the Democratic leadership to force a series of potentially embarrassing "yes or no" vote on segments of the administration proposal.

The final vote, which set the stage for the Reagan proposal to be considered in one package, was 217-210. On the initial budget vote several weeks ago, the president won 63 Democratic votes, including 38 from the Conservative Democratic Forum and 25 others.

Thursday, that dropped to 24 CDF members and four others, but Texas' total of defections remained intact. There was little gloating among the Texas Democrats, however.

"It's not a pleasant time for any of us," said Stenholm, whose 47-member conservative coalition provided 24 of the 29 Democratic votes in support of Reagan's position. "It's difficult to go against the leadership of your party."

Rep. Charles Wilson of Lufkin, not a member of the CDF, again supported the president's program. He said he and Rep. Jack Hightower of Vernon, both former members of the Texas Legislature, agreed "that this was the toughest vote either of us had had to make since we voted to confirm Bob Bullock for the state insurance board in 1972."

For Wright, it was the second straight time he had seen mass Texas defections. He said he was "more than mildly disappointed."

As to the effect it will have on his hopes to eventually succeed Speaker of the House Tip O'Neill, Wright said: "I'm not sure how much it hurts, but obviously it doesn't help. But, that isn't important anyway."

Stenholm added, "If there's anything that's sincerely regretted by a number of us, it's that our vote will be perceived as a slap at IM. It's not intended to be."

Wilson said it was particularly painful for him to vote against the leadership.

Abilene pathologist performed autopsies in alligator cage

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — A private pathologist says the lack of county medical facilities has forced him to store bodies and perform autopsies at the local zoo's alligator pen, and is urging county officials to build a morgue.

Dr. B.B. Trotter of Clinical Pathology Associates said a wertyog County officials that "the zoo has recently refused the transfer of these bodies to their location for autopsy," and urged officials to consider appropriation money for a morgue and a medical examiner.

Trotter said Wednesday he has performed two autopsies at the zoo in the past three years, and calls that a step up from one occasion when he had to perform an autopsy on the garage floor of a funeral home.

He said Hendrick Medicalcenter, a private hospital, "has allowed its facilities to be used in the past for autopsies, but that several "incidents" involving corpses have dampened hospital officials' enthusiasm for providing the service.

Taylor County Sheriff John Middleton said in one instance, two bodies in an advanced stage of deterioration were kept outside Hendrick while officials were deciding what to do with them.

Middleton said the rotting corpses fell into a street drain and gave off a rancid odor that permeated the area.

There are no public hospitals in Taylor County where autopsies could be performed, and the county employs no full-time medical examiners.

"It is becoming apparent that our city and county are in dire need of a morgue," Trotter wrote county officials in "urging them" to spend $100,000 for a morgue and full-time medical examiner.

"All too often foul-smelling bodies are brought to the morgue at Hendrick Medical Center without prior permission. The time has come to construct a morgue on city or county property in which these and other types of bodies might be held," he wrote.

Zoo director Jack Joy says he favors any action that would keep the corpses away from the zoo.

No bodies have been kept at the zoo since Joy became director in November, but he recently refused to accept the decomposing body of a Fort Worth man who was found slain last month near Abilene.

"It's totally inappropriate," Joy said. "This is a public park and they want to bring rotting bodies in here."

"There are children in this park every day, and I've got to think of the (zoo) keepers' well-being," Joy said.

"Those bodies may have some infectious disease, and their smell...it would come wafting over that wall (that separates outdoor alligator and bird habitats from their indoor shelters)."

Joy said autopsies were performed in the alligator enclosure because it has a drain.

Rep. Hance will speak at seminar in Lubbock

LUBBOCK — Cong. Kent Hance (D-Tex.) will be the keynote speaker for an international trade seminar Monday, July 6, in the Coronado Room at Texas Tech University here. Hance will address a noon luncheon and give a congressional overview of international trade.

The program, scheduled for 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., will be co-sponsored by the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, the U.S. Department of Commerce, the U.S. Small Business Administration and Texas Tech.

The speakers from banking, government and business will review workable approaches to marketing products internationally and examine the problems encountered in doing so.

Pre-registration for the limited attendance event is $15 through 5 p.m., next Wednesday. The registration fee after July 1 will be $20. Those desiring additional information can contact Jim Crider at the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce — (806) 763-4666.

City slicker at first Rodeo

'Sort of a barnyard ballet'

By BILLELDER
The assignment might have been something like this: city slicker attends his first rodeo, gets grit in his eye.

The truth of the matter is that I had been living in the big city for the past two years, but I grew up in a small Midwestern town. So I wasn't stepping into totally alien territory.

I mean, I was enough versed in cowboy culture to know the difference between throwing a rope at a cow and lassoing a steer.

But there still was a lot more for me to learn about the world of pro rodeo during Wednesday night's Big Spring rodeo opener.

The first thing I learned was that there's a lot more to bronc riding than just holding on. I had no idea that what the cowboy and the bronc do is sort of a barnyard ballet. The maneuvers the bareback and saddle bronc riders execute are almost as exquisitely choreographed as anything Nureyev does. Of course, Nureyev has a willing partner, so what the cowboys will be doing at the fairgrounds through Saturday night isn't really a collaboration performance in the name of art.

But it is an art. Each category of pro rodeo has a strict set of rules laid down by the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association, which means the cowboys have to do far more than just hang on like they're gripping a tree in the midst of Hurricane Betty.

For example, in bareback riding, the judges study how each cowboy uses his legs; he's got to bring his feet back to touch the bronc's neck each time the bronc kicks his heels. And he's got to come out of the chute with his spurs over the break of the bronc's shoulders when the bronc's front feet hit the ground in the first jump after leaving the chute.

Dilly-dally on the timing for one second and you can find yourself out of the money.

Bull riding — which struck me as the sport of calm, cool and collected madmen — turned out to be similar to what I envisioned: you just hold on for a certain amount of time. There are qualifications, however, such as the one which says the cowboy can't touch the bull, the equipment or himself with his free hand during the ride.

The fact that one of the clowns deliberately baited a full to distract it from a fallen rider, and wound up getting tossed in the air by the bull's horns for his efforts, and then scampered away from the fall unhurt, didn't make bull riding seem any less dangerous or crazy.

Would I have attended the rodeo if I hadn't been assigned to cover it for this newspaper? Well, rodeo fans, I guess I'll have to get an unlisted phone number, because the truth of the matter is I probably wouldn't have gone. Although I probably would have gotten around to seeing my first rodeo at some point in my life.

But I doubt if I would ever become a rodeo fanatic. I admire the cowboys for what they do — they truly are the last vestiges of the old West, of an era when men defined themselves by their relationships to animals — but for me, when it's a warm summer night and the bugs are thick and the beer's cold, well, I'll take a baseball doubleheader over a rodeo any time.

U.S. reported preparing deport case against Moon

NEW YORK (AP) — Federal officials are preparing a deportation case against the Rev. Sun Myung Moon, leader of the Unification Church, checking into allegations that he bribed his way into the country, the Daily News reported today.

The News quoted "a Justice Department source" as saying officials "do not have it put together yet, but a case is being prepared." Thursday night, ABC News reported the United States would try to deport Moon for "improperly" obtaining residential status in the United States.

The News quoted another source as saying investigators are trying to determine whether Moon and other church members bribed officials at the New York office of the Immigration and Naturalization Service to gain entry into the United States.

Town of 30 population

One-room schoolrooms still exist in northern Michigan

COPPER HARBOR, Mich. (AP) — In this village, if you leave a tip, the waitress calls after you, "Hey, mister, you forgot your change." It is that sort of village.

It is at the northernmost point of a finger of murmuring pines and hemlock jutting into Lake Superior. About 30 people live here year round, far fewer than reside in the town graveyard. If you look at a map, Copper Harbor is the dot at the tip of Michigan's Upper Peninsula's upper peninsula.

Spring arrives late this far up the global tilt. At the end-of-school picnic the other day, the kids played softball amid lilac blossoms. Lilacs in June.

Miss Howe played shortstop. She had to, and parents and friends and recent graduates played other positions, as ringers, because the kids actually celebrating the end of school barely numbered enough to make a team, let alone a team to play against.

Bobbi, Natasha, Johanna, Forest, Aaron, Darren, Jeff, Kristen and Danny constitute the Copper Harbor

School student body. Miss Howe is the teacher.

One-room schoolhouses with one teacher once were commonplace in this country but that was before the nation traded remoteness and innocence for pavement.

All three yet survive — one-room schoolhouses, remoteness and waitresses who remind you to collect your change — though you might have to go to the end of the road to find them.

The road ends here. Education does not.

"My pupils take the same standardized tests as all the other pupils in the state," Miss Howe said, with pride. "They do well."

"I want them to excel. When they go on from here, to high school, the social adjustments will be hard enough for them without having to worry about their studies. I don't want anyone to fall behind."

When they do go on to high school they will climb into a bus and ride 35 miles, to Calumet, and 35 miles back, through winter snows that do cumulate 200 to 400 inches. That's snow enough to cover the schoolyard flagpole. People here dig tunnels in order to shovel less.

It was Copper Harbor's isolation and severity that lured Marsha Howe, the schoolmarm, here a year ago.

She is a backpacker, a climber, a skier. She is 30. She is a fine shortstop and also, apparently, a fine teacher. After only one year the members of the school board — who are also the parents of most of her pupils — granted her tenure.

"You can imagine how personal teaching is here," she said. "I don't prepare a year's study program for a grade. I prepare individual study programs for individual pupils."

"Next fall we get a new kindergarten, Amber Meadowcroft, and I will have 10 pupils," she said. In a nation of interstate highways, resource centers and peer-group relationships, there remains, it would seem, something to be said for one-room schoolhouses, closeness and clean snow.

Not to mention lilacs in June.

FRESH WATER FROM AN OLD WELL

When Jesus started His church, the Pastor (Jesus Himself) was being executed. The chairman of the board (Peter) was out cursing and swearing that he had never even been a part of the church. The treasurer (Judas) was committing suicide. Most of the rest of the board members (The Apostles) had run away. A few ladies from the Women's Fellowship were about the only ones who showed much faithfulness. Your church can't be in that bad a shape ... so pitch in and help it keep growing!

Problems... Problems

People chuckle when they see a baby who seems to have the weight of the world on his shoulders. What can he possibly be thinking about that makes him seem so pensive?

His thoughts probably aren't very serious, for babies often strike delightful and comical poses that enliven the family photo album.

But babies grow up and become adults, with real problems and difficult decisions to make.

Don't forget, as your baby matures, to emphasize those things that will enable him to cope with his future. Don't forget love, discipline, understanding... and especially, don't forget his spiritual training.

Baptist youth camp begins Monday

Circle Six Youth Ranch will be held this year at Permian Basin Baptist Encampment. This encampment is located six miles north of Stanton on the Lamesa highway. The camp begins at 10 a.m. June 29 and concludes at 1 p.m. July 2.

This year, the featured camp pastor will be Jay Breland. Jay is 35 years old. His wife and two children reside in Garland, Texas. Breland was licensed to the Gospel Ministry in 1964 by Jacinto City Baptist Church of Houston. He was ordained in 1970 by the Orchard Hills Baptist Church of Garland.

Breland has served on various church staffs, and is now serving as full-time evangelist of Gateway Baptist Church of Dallas. He graduated from Galena Park High School of Houston. He is a graduate of East Texas State University with a bachelor of science, sociology, and psychology. Breland graduated from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary with a masters of divinity degree. He is also serving as a Reserve Chaplain.

Breland will head the camp staff and be camp pastor. "Picker" Brown, pastor of First Baptist Church of Ira, Texas, will direct the music. David and Pat McNary, well-known in Big Spring as the former pastor of Airport Baptist, will serve as pastoral counselors. They will serve as "wranglers" in charge of discipline. Foreman Steve Hillhouse, pastor of First Baptist Church of Gall, is in charge of personnel.

The theme of the camp is life in the spirit.

The Bible Study will be centered upon the Book of Acts. The Book Study will be on "The Three Fold Secret of The Holy Spirit" by James McConkey and copywritten in 1896. "Principal" Herb Mims of First Baptist Church of Crane will direct the studies. Mike Patrick, pastor of Baptist Temple Church of Big Spring, will teach a curriculum to pastors staff and youth workers on the "God Called Persons."

A full recreation program will feature volleyball, swimming, obstacle course, softball, basketball, tug of war, archery, shooting rifles, pool, and ping pong, under the direction of Jerry Bob Taylor and Donnie Smith.

The camp is open to the public. Any church groups which desire to come should contact David Womack at Emmanuel Baptist Church. His phone number is 267-2304 or 263-6407. The fee is $32.00.

Catholic school successful

The summer school of religion at Immaculate Heart of Mary Church in Big Spring was held recently with an enrollment of 136 pupils. The school was directed by Sr. Ann Benat and Mrs. Ruth Salazar. Father Bernard Gully is pastor.

A highlight of the school was a daily visit from the puppet Methuselah who appeared during the morning worship assembly. He delighted the children and spoke a message from God during each visit.

Marriage Enrichment Seminar to begin here next week

There are eight films in the series. Beginning Tuesday, June 30, and Wednesday, July 1, the films will be shown on consecutive Tuesday and Wednesday evenings through August 19. The film shown on Tuesday will be repeated on Wednesday. The films are 45 minutes in length and will be shown at 7:30 p.m.

Dr. Carl Brecheen and Dr. Paul Faulkner, presented the Marriage Enrichment Seminars throughout the U.S. Since its beginning more than 40,000 have attended.

The seminars broad base of appeal is shown by the wide range of ages among registrants. Attendees include engaged and newly married couples, as well as those who have been married for many years. The average registrant has been married more than 10 years. Although it was instituted as a divorce preventative, the Marriage Enrichment Seminar is designed primarily for stable marriages. Its main thrust lies in strengthening marriages to withstand the pressures of modern society.

The Seminars are now produced on high quality sound and color films thus making it possible for thousands more to profit from the enrichment series.

The public is invited. A staffed nursery will be provided.

Constitution doesn't prevent Congress from arms control

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Baptist constitutional lawyer says the U.S. Constitution does not prohibit Congress from controlling the right to keep and bear arms.

James W. Baker, general counsel to the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs, notes that his view runs contrary to that of the gun lobby.

He says the Second Amendment as originally drafted emphasized the relationship of the militia to the bearing of arms rather than guaranteeing every citizen the constitutional right to own and use guns, as maintained by the National Rifle Association.

The amendment reads: "A well regulated militia being necessary to the security of a free state, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed."

Charge dropped by professor

NEW YORK (AP) — A retired seminary professor who had accused the United Presbyterian Church of betraying its faith says he is withdrawing the charge now that the denomination has clarified its stand.

The Rev. John Gerstner of Pittsburgh commended the denomination for its general assembly action in Houston in May, affirming the deity and humanity of Jesus and tightening up its ordination vows.

"Most encouraging," Gerstner wrote in a letter to a former student, James A. Gittings, now an editor of the church magazine, A.D.

Gerstner had raised his apostasy charge after the denomination's top court upheld admission of a clergyman, the Rev. Mansfield Kaseman, whom some felt had refused to affirm Jesus's Godhood along with his manhood.

FAST FINISH — Glenda Wiseman of Cypress heads for the finish in Thursday night's barrel race competition at the rodeo opener.

Teen rides Cokie from Colorado City

$25,000 horse dandy investment

By BILLELDER
Glenda Wiseman was a long way from home last night. The 17-year-old entrant in barrel race competition at the rodeo opener hails from Cypress, near Houston.

But Cokie, the quarterhorse she rode, wasn't so far from home. It could have been the familiar world of West Texas that gave him the confidence to bring Glenda to the second-best time recorded in barrel racing last night.

Cokie ("That's what we call him, but his real name is Lowry Dun," says Glenda) was purchased from Joe and Nancy Anderson of Colorado City. At $25,000, he must be some horse, and to hear Glenda describe Cokie, he is.

"He's won more than half of it back — and not just counting money. He's won I don't know how many buckles and saddles."

Glenda and Cokie have had a three-year winning relationship, which was evidenced by last night's performance. Although she came in second, technically Glenda didn't place at all because she's competing against others who, like her, are sponsored by Nestea in a competition for scholarship money. Glenda was the first of the Nestea entrants to compete in barrel racing, so she doesn't know yet how well she did.

Judging from her swift score — 18.16 seconds — she may not have any problem taking first place and going on to the qualification rodeo in Mesquite. If she wins there, she gets an $800 scholarship and goes on to the national finals in Oklahoma City.

Prize winners must use the money to attend a college with an intercollegiate rodeo team. A total of $47,000 worth of scholarships has been put up by Nestea for teen competitors in some 40 rodeos this year.

'Treachery on the Thames'

Summer Mummies opens season

Some call it "that summer madness," but it's Midland's oldest summer tradition. The Summer Mummies opens its 33rd season on July 3 and will run every weekend through September 5 in the newly refurbished Yucca Theatre in downtown Midland.

This year's show is entitled "Treachery on the Thames" or "Fighting a Duel For a Fair Maiden Is More Than Just Another Sworded Affair." The script was authored by melodramatist Randy Hicks. Appearing in the cast are Loree Fitz Gerald, Trudy Thomason, Jim Salners, Darrell Ward, Susie Hitchcock, Jeannine Judah, Louis Kluck, Mike Christy, Ron and Brenda Hughes, Don Stroud, Denise Jenkins, Joe Hill, Jim Hill, Karen Haskell, Bob Cunningham, Jan Swinehart, Peggy Crush, Stephen Stine, Bob Haskell, Glen Gutman, Mike Wilson, Bill Shaner, and Deanna Mutter. Midland Community Theatre Director Emeritus Art Cole is directing the melodrama Susie Hitchcock and Pat Rattan are co-producers. Stage managers are Darrell Ward and Rusty Collins. Bill Shaner is director for the olio and Cherry Jones is choreographer.

A new feature of the event this year is a group of young women who competed for the positions as the "Summertime Girls." They will sell novelties and raffle tickets for a trip to Cozumel, Mexico, during intermissions and will be introduced to the audience during a brief dance routine at the beginning of the show. Selected in recent auditions were Jill McElligott, Pat Word, Karen Evans, Karyl Davis, Brenda Woods, Charlotte Larson, Trina Olssen, Vickie Smesny, Chris Anderson, Gayle Daniel, Karen Haskell, Nancy White, Nancy Snyder, Vonda Walker, Debbie Brinson, Cindy Putman, Lael Cordes, and Geri Moore.

A variety of beverages may be brought into the theatre. Table reservations are six dollars and five dollars each, depending on the location of the table. A new floor has been constructed in the old theatre. It slopes toward the stage in tiers, and a plan of the seating arrangement may be seen at the box office in Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley. Reservations may be made by calling 682-4111.

Jacque Ward will be instructor of DWI classes in county courts

Jacque Ward, Big Spring resident, has completed the administrator-instructor development course for the education of alcohol related traffic offenders.

Tour to end with barbecue

COLORADO CITY — The 1981 tour of Mitchell County crop demonstrations that ends with a noon barbecue in the Civil Center will be held Thursday, Aug. 27.

Texas House Speaker Bill Clayton will address the group at the luncheon.

The week long training was held at the Criminal Justice Center at Sam Houston State University, Huntsville, June 15-19. During the week, attendees are trained in the use of the Texas model curriculum for drivers on probation for driving while intoxicated.

Jacque Ward will be an instructor of DWI classes sponsored by the Howard County Courts. Classes are held monthly at the Howard County Court Room for course assigned DWI offenders.

The instructor training course, in addition to educational material and techniques, includes "practice teaching" and a drinking-driving demonstration in which outside volunteers show alcohol consumption and the effect on driving ability.

The training course is conducted by representatives of Sam Houston State University, Texas Safety Association, Texas A&M University, Texas Department of Public Safety, Houston Police Department and Houston Safety Council. Funding for instructor-administrator training is provided by the traffic safety section of the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation.

Impact Aid cuts won't hurt

Tower is promised military families won't pay tuition

WASHINGTON — Reagan officials Wednesday promised Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, that no military families will pay tuition for their children to attend school this fall despite proposed cuts in impact aid.

Lawrence J. Korb, assistant secretary of defense for manpower, testified before the Senate Armed Services Committee that the Reagan administration would put $400 million back into the budget for the education programs.

"The administration is committed to making sure that no tuition can be charged military dependents," said Korb, despite budget bills pending in both houses that substantially cut this year's $799 million in impact aid.

Tower pointed out that $400 million would not cover the full cost of both A — school districts with military dependents — B — school districts with off-base federal employees — categories.

Korb would not specify where additional money could come from, but mentioned Department of Defense allocations as a possible source.

A June 12 resolution passed by the House Education and Labor Committee abolished all impact aid for Fiscal Year 1982. A budget resolution enacted the same day by the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee slashed funds to 220 million.

Estimates at the hearing were that if impact aid were cut to the Senate's $200 million level that would mean Texas school districts share would drop from $32.3 million to $9.6 million.

Hard-hit would be cities that are served by large military bases. "Imagine yourself as a serviceman earning $1,200 per month faced with annual tuition charges of $3,000 per child," Korb said. "That's what we have to prevent."

Tower, chairman of the Armed Services Committee, called the hearing because projections by state and local school officials nationwide were that military personnel would be forced to pay tuition for their children's education this fall.

"Under no circumstances should a soldier be required to pay tuition for his child to attend public school," Tower said. "We're going to explore how, one way or another, we can avoid that."

Korb said that federal funding to educate military children goes back 100 years and will not be discontinued.

"Over the years the Impact Aid program has been expanded far beyond its original scope to include dependents of federal civilian employees and civilians living in low rent housing," said Korb. "All propositions before Congress agree that a reduction in the Impact Aid is appropriate."

Korb said, in fact, the Department of Defense was prepared to legally fight moves nationwide to require off-base military citizens to pay tuition for dependents.

He said the governor of Texas has recently signed a law to permit tuitions up to the per capita amount of local district funds used to educate a dependent living on base.

"The Department of Defense views these actions by states and localities as an attempt to hold military personnel hostage in their efforts to resist the proposed reductions in impact aid," said Korb.

Only six school districts out of 240 in Texas — three in San Antonio, Killeen, Del Valley and Franklin — would receive money under the Senate $200 million impact aid program.

Rangers dominate Tigers, Devils nip Hawks in semifinal action

All National League city championship set

By NATHAN POSS
Sports Editor

The Big Spring Little League City Tournament title will be crowned on a National League team after their representatives in the semifinal round posted wins in Thursday evening action. It will be the first time for an NL team to be the city champion since 1975, when the now defunct Cardinals were the champions.

Tonight's game will match the NL's regular season champion, the Herald Rangers, against the Anderson Music Devils. That contest will begin at eight o'clock in the NL Park, also known as Pittman Park. In the consolation game which begins at 6:00 p.m., the Harris Lumber and Hardware Tigers of the Texas League will square off against the J and K Hawks of the American League.

The two NL teams advanced to the finals with contrasting semifinal triumphs. The Rangers exploded in the middle innings for a 13-3 romp over the Tigers, while the Devils escaped with a hairy 6-5 win over the Hawks.

The Rangers, who extended their perfect record to 17-0 in the win, jumped out for three runs in the first inning, only to see the Tigers jump back for two in their half of the first.

After failing to score in the top of the second, the Rangers, with shortstop Brant Nichols providing the key, used a major league defensive play to take control of the game.

The Tigers had loaded the bases with nobody out off Ranger hurler Mike Sparks. The next batter bloomed a Texas League into left-centerfield that looked like a sure hit that would score two Tiger runs. But Nichols raced back from his shortstop position and made a diving over the shoulder catch of the fly that would have esteemed Bucky Dent. With all the Tiger runners heading around the bases, Nichols quickly jumped to his feet and fired a perfect shot to first sacker John Moore for the second out. Moore then rifled a low throw to third baseman Dean Marriot, who scooped the ball out of the ground and tagged the Tiger runner before he got back to the bag to complete the rare triple play.

The play seemed to stun the Tigers, and from that point, the Rangers dominated the game.

Winning hurler Sparks limited the Tigers, which finished second in the regular season Texas League standings, to only three hits. He walked four and struck out only three, but had plenty of help from his teammates in the field.

Four Rangers had two hits, each in the contest off Tiger hurlers Kenneth Banks and Rocky Ramirez. Leading the charge was centerfielder Carey Fraser, who had a triple and single. Mitch Griffin had a double and single, while Marriot and Sparks both had a pair of hits.

Speedy Philip Matthews had a pair of singles to pace the Tigers, with Daniel Flores adding a double.

Losing pitcher Banks whiffed eight, but was hurt as badly by errors from his fielders as by Ranger hitting.

The Devils win over the Hawks was a spectators' delight, as the Devils squandered an early lead, seeing the visitors tie it with two out in the sixth, only to win in the bottom of the sixth on a freak throwing error by the Hawk catcher.

The loss had to be both encouraging and disheartening for the Hawks, coached by A.J. Pirkle and Jerry Robinson.

On the encouraging side was the fact that they have only two 12-year-olds on the team, and they didn't play. That means the Hawks should be more than tough next season. On the discouraging side was the fact that the Hawks left the bases loaded on three different occasions, including the final two innings.

The Devils jumped out to a 3-0 lead after two innings, and stretched it to 5-1 in four frames.

But the Hawks came back for two in the fifth, and would have had more if not for Devil leftfielder Deeg Young. With the Hawks already having scored twice and then loading the bases, Young made a diving catch on a tough play that stopped any further Hawk damage.

The Hawks then moved closer in the sixth, tying it with two outs on a bunt single by Kevin Pirkle. But the next batter flied out to deep center field to leave the game at 5-5 entering the final half inning of regulation. The Devils quickly loaded the bases on a hit, a walk and a hit batsman. The next batter had a 3-0 count when the Hawk catcher misfired to pitcher Joe Louis Paredes, allowing the winning run to score.

Todd McKimmey, in relief of starter Matt Garrett, was the winning pitcher. Paredes was the loser.

The Devils rapped out seven hits in the contest, with Lance Soles and Mike McElreath having the biggest sticks. Soles had a double and a single, while McElreath had a pair of singles. Young had a triple and David Wood a double for the winners, with Randy Odum and Russ Parks providing singles.

Terry Ward had two singles to pace the hard luck Hawks. Adding one hit each were Leslie Robinson, Burr Settles, David Kilgore and Paredes.

TONIGHT'S GAMES AT NATIONAL PARK

Will history repeat in all NL city LL finals?

If history repeats in the all-National League city Little League championship game tonight, the Anderson Music Devils will leave field as title holders.

That history goes back to the city playoffs in 1969, and the events leading up to tonight's eight o'clock battle in the National League (also known as Pittman Park), are strikingly similar.

In that year, the Dibrell's Yankees won the regular season title, going 18-

2. The Wildcats, who now are the Rangers, went 11-9 and finished in third place. In all four of their regular season games, the Yankees won handily.

Both advanced through the city playoffs and met in the final round. After the Yankees jumped to an early 5-0 lead and seemed on the way to another win over their NL adversaries, the Wildcat gradually rallied, finally winning 6-5 and taking the city title.

In 1981 in the National League, the Rangers won first place, winning 15 straight games. The Devils finished second with a record of 8-7. The two teams met five times during the regular season, and to state the obvious, the Rangers won every meeting.

Most don't think history will repeat tonight, but in the always unpredictable world of Little League baseball, nothing's for certain.

In Wimbledon action

Rematch no thrill for Borg beater

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Rolf Gehring today plays the man everyone wants to avoid in the third round of the Wimbledon men's singles.

The 25-year-old West German meets defending champion Bjorn Borg of Sweden, who is going for his sixth straight All-England title. Gehring is one of the few players to hold a victory over Borg, defeating the Swede in Brussels earlier this year. But he was far from confident that he can repeat that feat.

"I would like to play someone else, almost anyone else," Gehring said before the match.

"Although I beat Borg in Brussels, I think I have very little chance in this tournament. Borg is a different player in the major tournaments. In the big events he concentrates so much.

Certainly I do not expect to win. He is a much better player than I am."

John McEnroe, who figures to be the main obstacle to another championship for Borg, faced Bob Lutz, best known as Stan Smith's doubles partner, in the third round. McEnroe scorns the idea that he has an easy draw, despite the fact that Balasz Taroczy of Hungary is the only other seeded player left in his half.

"Look at my games. I don't think they have been that easy," said the New York left-hander.

McEnroe, 22, defeated Raul Ramirez of Mexico in the second round.

"Raul played better against me than ever before," he said.

Third-seeded Jimmy Connors played young Tony Giammalva in an all-American third-round match.

Police, Firemen set for charity battle

All those sports fans that love to hate authority will have that opportunity Sunday afternoon when the Police Association Smokies meet the Fire Department Firefighters in slow-pitch softball charity game.

The newly created but already bitter rivalry will begin at four in the afternoon at Johnny Stone Park.

There will be no admission to the game, but there will be a donation box for a variety of Big Spring charities. As well as the donation box, all proceeds from the concession stand will go toward local charities. The goodies that will be placed in the concession stand will be donated by numerous Big Spring merchants.

Jim Ryals will coach the Firefighters, while Eddie Almon will be in charge of the Smokies troops.

As well as playing the Police Association on Sunday, the Fire Department has also set up a game with Midland's KMID-TV, Channel 2, on July 11. Any other teams wanting to play the Firefighters in a charity game should contact Chief Ryals.

Rockets will match offer for Murphy

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Rockets will match any offer made to National Basketball Association free-throw leader Calvin Murphy in his free agent negotiations, says General Manager Ray Patterson.

Sunny relaxes during strike

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Just because there's a baseball strike doesn't mean Texas Ranger catcher Jim Sundberg isn't staying busy.

First, there's business to take care of: Sundberg owns a travel agency, promotes Nike shoes, speaks on the lecture circuit and, of course, continues to work out informally with his teammates.

But that's only half of it. His wife, Janet, has plenty for him to do the rest of the time — like cleaning the garage, mowing the lawn and painting the lakehouse.

Playing baseball might be a welcome break from that schedule, but his wife said he's enjoying spending more time at home — at least so far.

"I think it's fun for him to spend time with the kids," she said. "Even though he's home during the day during baseball season, he often doesn't get to see the kids a lot."

Something he's really been enjoying, Mrs. Sundberg says, is going to his 9-year-old son Aaron's baseball games. Before the strike, he couldn't do that.

"That's been the best thing about the strike," Mrs. Sundberg said. "Aaron had been disappointed that his dad hadn't seen any of his games."

Mrs. Sundberg said Jim hasn't gotten restless yet, but if the strike goes on much longer he might.

"He won't sit around doing nothing for long," she said. "It would be boring and demeaning for him. I'm sure he'd want to find some kind of employment."

Murphy's agent, Bob Woolf of Boston, said six other NBA teams have expressed interest in obtaining the 11-year veteran. But under the league rules, Murphy can sign an offer from another team but the Rockets have 15 days to match it.

"Whatever he does, I've still got 15 days," Patterson said. "I think Calvin will be here next season. I think he's still more valuable to us than anyone else."

Woolf declined to identify the other six teams but the Houston Post reported Thursday that San Diego, where Murphy began his profession, apparently has the inside track.

Talk noise quickly about September title bout

Leonard, Hearns topple hurdles

HOUSTON (AP) — Council welterweight king, Thomas Hearns and Sugar Ray Leonard marched through a pair of potential minefields in the Astrodome and after they reached the other side, they began heaving verbal hand grenades at each other.

Hearns knocked out Pablo Baez in the fourth round to defend the World Boxing Association welterweight championship. Then Leonard, the World Boxing Association welterweight king, had to go nine grueling rounds before stopping Ayub Kalule to win the WBA super middleweight title.

If either man had lost, it would have taken much of the gloss — and probably some of the money — off their Sept. 16 date in Las Vegas, a welterweight unification fight that is fast developing into a grudge match.

"I think he will try to pull the same stunt that (Roberto) Duran did the second time (against him)," Hearns said. "I say Leonard will quit and I say he will have a good reason to quit. You will know why."

Sugar Ray had an answer for that.

"I can't wait for September," he said. "I hope some day they can do a medical examination of Hearns and look in the top of his head. They'll find no brains.

"Tommy Hearns is a perfect physical specimen of an athlete. He has speed, power, reach and height. And he has no brains."

Both men did workmanlike jobs in Thursday night's stage-setters, Hearns stopping Baez in 2:10 of the fourth round and Leonard finishing Kalule with just one second left in the ninth round of their fight.

"I was very surprised the fight ended that fast," said Hearns, who posted his 30th knockout in 32 professional fights. "I thought the fight would go much longer. Baez seemed like a good opponent for me."

Baez took some of Hearns' best shots early and kept coming back for more.

"He started well and I had a little trouble figuring him out," Hearns said. "Only my left jab was working and I wanted to use more left hooks. I had to work the jab to the body. It helped set up the shot I wanted to get in."

Leonard didn't exactly have a cakewalk either. Kalule, making his American debut, showed that his 36 straight victories were no fluke. He slugged it out with Leonard, making a determined defense of his crown.

The two men put on a slugfest in several rounds and after taunting Kalule early, Leonard seemed to gain respect for the Ugandan who now lives in Denmark.

"Early in the fight, I tried to work on his head but I found out he was durable upstairs," Leonard said. "I switched to a body attack and it took its toll as the fight went on."

Kalule absorbed some brutal body shots but never backed up, whaling away at Leonard and seeming on at least a couple of occasions to sting Sugar Ray.

"I was not hurt," Leonard said. "I think the crowd was misled a couple of times. He has stiff punches and that tends to knock opponents back. That's what he did to me."

By the ninth round, it was obvious that this bout would be a test of endurance. Both men were landing punches in bunches at that stage and then late in the round, Leonard caught Kalule with a left-right combination that dropped the challenger to the deck.

Referee Carlos Berrocal counted over him and when Kalule got up, the referee asked him if he could continue. When Kalule did not answer, Berrocal stopped the bout. The time was 2:59 — one second left in the round.

"I didn't know the round was over," Kalule said. "If I knew the round was over, I would have continued. But I have no complaints. I wanted to go out of the ring safely."

Leonard laughed off the suggestion of controversy because of the fight being stopped with just one second left in the round.

"If there was another half hour left in the round, then he could have continued," Sugar Ray said.

The victory pushed Leonard's career record to 30-1 and made him the first man to simultaneously carry two world championships in two divisions since Henry Armstrong held the featherweight, lightweight and welterweight titles at the same time in 1938.

Now Sugar Ray has a definite timetable in mind. It calls for the September welterweight unification bout against Hearns and then a junior middleweight unification match against the division's WBA champion, Wilfred Benitez, and eventually, a fight against middleweight king Marvin Hagler.

Somewhere in that scenario, Sugar Ray may have to find room for ex-WBA welter champion Pipino Cuevas, who destroyed Jorgen Hansen,

After escaping with win over rugged Ugandan

Sugar Ray ranks Kalule high

HOUSTON (AP) — Sugar Ray Leonard rated it in his top five. His manager said it was Sugar Ray's second best fight.

But no matter where Thursday night's knockout of previously unbeaten Ugandan Ayub Kalule in the World Boxing Association Junior Middleweight Championship ranked in Leonard's career, it marked a page for the history books.

Leonard, the World Boxing Council welterweight champion, became the first boxer since Henry Armstrong in 1938 to own more than one title simultaneously.

The 25-year-old Leonard's dream is to add yet a third title, the one now belonging to WBA middleweight champion Marvin Hagler.

Armstrong owned the featherweight, welterweight, and lightweight titles at the same time.

"Ayub rated in the top five fights I have had as far as toughness is concerned," said Leonard, who took out the 27-year-old Ugandan with one second remaining in the ninth round on a deadly left-right combination.

"It was Sugar Ray's second best fight," said manager Angelo Dundee. "His victory over Roberto Duran was No. 1. This was a real tough cookie he beat tonight. He'd (Kalule) never even been knocked down."

"We found out early he had a good chin and went downstairs. We knew we wouldn't get him out early."

Leonard, who will fight WBA welterweight champion Thomas Hearns in September, said "my ultimate dream is to take Hagler's title. I want to emulate Armstrong."

"I think Hagler is the greatest champion in the world and I'm not in that big of a hurry to take him on. He's really big and strong. I think I'll let him get older. I'll have my best chance then."

Right now Hagler holds the only title recognized by both the WBA and WBC.

Leonard had his problems discouraging the rugged Kalule, hitting him with three straight rights in the fourth round only to see the Ugandan come back for more.

Early in the fight Leonard was taunting Kalule but quit doing it after the left-hander caught Sugar Ray with a solid punch in the seventh round.

"Magic is a bright kid and I plan to make him my protegee, teach him the business aspect of sports," said Buss. "I realize this is a very unusual contract because we're talking about a kid whose college class just graduated. But what it really comes down to is that Magic is part of the family."

The Lakers won the National Basketball

Association title in 1979-80, Johnson's rookie year, as he scored 42 points in the clinching game against the Philadelphia 76ers.

The 6-foot-9 Johnson started at center in that contest in place of the injured Abdul-Jabbar. Last season, however, Johnson was sidelined by a knee injury for 45 games and missed a do-or-die shot as the Lakers lost to Houston

25 years at 1 million per Magic Johnson signs unbelievable pact

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Earvin "Magic" Johnson is the owner of the longest-running and richest contract ever in sports, but a self-satisfied Los Angeles Laker owner Jerry Buss sounds almost as if he'd purchased a Rembrandt at a rummage sale.

Buss said the pact, which will go into effect when Johnson's current agreement expires in 1984, will pay him $1 million a year for 25 years. That would extend some 15 or 20 years beyond the anticipated length of the 21-year-old Johnson's playing career with the Lakers.

"How much would he get right now?" Buss asked. "A million and a half? Two million? Somewhere in there. So the $1 million a year I'm paying covers all his basketball playing.

"I know that $1 million a year past basketball sounds exorbitant," Buss was quoted as saying in today's Los Angeles Times. "But consider this: 14 years from now, the average secretary — not good ones, mind you, but average — will be making $60,000 a year. So Magic's services as coach or GM or whichever direction we mutually choose to take are worth $1 million a year to me."

All the $1 million annually will be paid in cash, Buss said. Until 1984, Johnson will have to do with the $500,000 a year called for in his present contract.

Dave Winfield is the highest paid baseball player after signing a reported 10-year, $24 million contract with the New York Yankees. In pro basketball, Laker center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Houston's Moses Malone are believed to be the only other players with contracts for $1 million a year, but for shorter terms than Johnson's pact. In pro football, no player reportedly makes more than $400,000 annually.

The new contract came about, Buss said, when Magic expressed a desire to remain with the Lakers permanently.

Shula defends NFL philosophy in Raiderer trial

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The "beauty" of the National Football League is its competitive balance, and that would be destroyed if an owner could buy a Super Bowl championship, Miami Dolphins Coach Don Shula testified at the Oakland Raiders-NFL trial.

Shula, testifying Thursday as part of the league's defense in the antitrust suit brought against it by the Raiders and the Los Angeles

Coliseum Commission, implied that going against the NFL's rules could lead to an imbalance.

"The beauty of our game is that it gives a Green Bay chance to compete," Shula said. "I would hate to think that an owner could come into the league with a lot of money and win a Super Bowl. All franchises have an opportunity to get to the top."

Oakland Raiders

Managing General Partner Al Davis, saying that he needs more income to make certain that his Super Bowl champion Raiders remain competitive, is attempting to shift the team to the Los Angeles Coliseum, a move voted down by team owners.

Shula, who coached winning Super Bowl teams in 1973 and 1974, said that football teams will lose fan support if one team becomes more dominant than the others. Attendance in Miami dropped off after the Dolphins won two Super Bowls in a row.

Shula testified that the league does various things to insure that football teams remain competitive. The college draft is designed so teams with poor records draft earliest.

Under questioning by Raiders' attorney Joseph L. Alioto, Shula did agree that "players are going to ask for more of the pie," in noting that players' salaries are increasing.

Alioto pointed out that just this week, David Overstreet, the Dolphins' top draft choice, had decided to play in Canada. Alioto brought that up in an attempt to point out that money has become more and more important to football team owners.

Also called Thursday as a witness for the defense was economist and former New York Republican congressman Bruce Caputo, who testified that the league was a partnership. The NFL has attempted throughout the trial to convince the 10 members of the federal jury of that viewpoint.

"I believe the NFL is a single business in the nature of a partnership," Caputo said. He noted that it hires income, and helps expansion teams get started. He also noted that football teams own property jointly and contract with network television for the broadcast rights to football games.

Leonard laughed off the suggestion of controversy because of the fight being stopped with just one second left in the round.

"If there was another half hour left in the round, then he could have continued," Sugar Ray said.

The victory pushed Leonard's career record to 30-1 and made him the first man to simultaneously carry two world championships in two divisions since Henry Armstrong held the featherweight, lightweight and welterweight titles at the same time in 1938.

Now Sugar Ray has a definite timetable in mind. It calls for the September welterweight unification bout against Hearns and then a junior middleweight unification match against the division's WBA champion, Wilfred Benitez, and eventually, a fight against middleweight king Marvin Hagler.

Somewhere in that scenario, Sugar Ray may have to find room for ex-WBA welter champion Pipino Cuevas, who destroyed Jorgen Hansen,

WBA Champ Weaver to be stripped of title

Unless Weaver's next defense of the crown he won from John Tate on March 31, 1980, is against Tillis, the WBA will strip him of the title, presumably setting up a Page-Tillis bout. "I'm ready any way the wind blows," Tillis said Thursday. "I'll beat Weaver, Page, any of those boys."

Tillis is now ranked the No. 3 contender by the WBA, behind No. 1-ranked Gerry Cooney and second-ranked Len Spinks. Page is ranked fourth. Weaver has signed for a guaranteed $3 million to fight Cooney in October — and Don Manuel, Weaver's manager, said that fight will go on whether or not the WBA sanctions it.

The WBA's executive council ruled Wednesday that Tillis must be Weaver's next opponent because Tillis was the highest-rated opponent available last March when he was due for a mandatory defense. Cooney was signed to fight Ken Norton (he knocked out Norton in the first round) and Spinks was signed to fight World Boxing Council champ Larry Holmes (Spinks was knocked out in the third round).

"Mike expected it,"

Manuel said of the WBA's ruling. "He had already accepted it. He already had made the statement that he was the heavyweight champion and he is going to fight the No. 1 contender. That is Gerry Cooney."

Dennis Rappaport, Cooney's co-manager, said in New York that the WBA action "will go down in history as Black Wednesday. It's the worst scandal in sports since the Black Sox."

Rappaport also called it a power play by promoter Bob Arum and called the WBA "puppets manipulated by Arum." After Weaver won the title, Arum had options on his next three fights. He announced Weaver-Tillis last Feb. 28, but Weaver was unable to fight then because of what was called an arthritic right hand.

Like Tillis, Page is ready to challenge for the crown right now. "It's not a case of me wanting Mike out of there," he said, "but if they strip him, I want to be there to fight for the title."

Kite stays hot in Memphis Classic

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Tom Kite took a swipe at the sweat streaming from his face, and pointed to Lee Trevino as a likely challenger in the $300,000 Danny Thomas-Memphis Golf Classic.

"You're really got to look at Trevino," Kite said after shooting a 5-under-par 67 Thursday for the first round lead.

"He says he plays good when it's hot, and, boy, it is really hot!"

It was, with temperatures reaching into the mid-90s and humidity at 50 percent — normally ideal conditions for Trevino.

But he was having no part of Kite's prediction.

"My short game's not good enough to win," said Trevino, the defending champion and a three-time winner of this title.

"I haven't had time to practice it."

"I'm hitting the ball pretty good, but I'm making bogey every time I miss the green and you can't win doing that."

Trevino, suffering from poison oak he picked up last week in the U.S. Open, made five birdies and bogeyed the only three greens he missed for a 70 that left him three shots back.

Larry Ziegler put together an eagle-par-birdie finish for a 68 that left him alone in second in this chase for a $54,000 first prize.

The group at 69 included former U.S. Open champ Jerry Pate, Curtis Strange, Scott Simpson and Jon Chaffee.

Of the leaders, only

Chaffee and Pate played in an afternoon wind. The other five toured the 7,249-yard Colonial Country Club course in still conditions during the morning.

Bruce Lietzke, a three-time winner this year, was at 71. George Burns and Bill Rogers, who tied for second in last week's American national championship, shot 74 and 75, respectively, and must improve today to make the cut for the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Murder plot as tangled as mystery novel

People of Chile rocked by bank scandal

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — What began as Chile's biggest bank robbery and exploded into a case involving two grisly murders, a questioned suicide and the complicity of secret police agents has shaken the country's vast intelligence network.

It has also kept Chileans spellbound while they watch a real-life mystery as tangled as the plot of a good Agatha Christie novel unravel on the front pages of their daily newspapers.

Police say that on the night of March 10, in the desert town of Calama north of Santiago, a cashier and a guard in the local branch of the State Bank disappeared along with the equivalent of $1.15 million in pesos.

An all-points bulletin went out for Guillermo Martinez, 41, the guard, and Sergio Yanez, 24, the cashier. Capture seemed only a matter of time in heavily policed Chile, which stops drivers at numerous highway checkpoints and closely scrutinizes travel documents before citizens may leave the country.

But weeks passed and neither man nor money turned up. As the search went on, detectives realized certain aspects of the case didn't mesh.

For one thing, there was no evidence either man planned a getaway. Both left distraught families, and Yanez was said to adore his young wife and 3-year-old son.

Another factor was the loot. Chile's largest bill is 1,000 pesos, worth about $25; police estimated that $1.15 million worth of pesos would weigh 176 pounds.

On June 12 the case took a startling twist. Chile's secret police — known as The National Information Center (CNI) — issued a terse statement saying that two CNI agents had abducted the bank employees and stolen the money.

The announcement said the guard and cashier were taken into the desert east of town and shot to death. Dynamite was then exploded against the bodies. The remaining identifiable body parts were buried.

The announcement identified the agents as Eduardo Villanueva and Gabriel Hernandez, CNI chief in Calama. Police said Villanueva described leading the men into the desert on orders from Hernandez.

"First I shot Martinez in the head. Then I moved in closer and aimed at the teller. He asked me not to do it," police said Villanueva told them in his confession.

"He said, 'Please don't kill me,' then he started praying and I shot him. My major said they had to be eliminated," Villanueva told police, according to officers.

The CNI said the two agents led investigators into the desert where bits of bodies and clothing were recovered. A bale of money wrapped in plastic was found at the bottom of a ravine near the town of Arica.

"This double homicide has been completely cleared up," police pathologist Dr. Alberto Teke told the newspaper El Mercurio. Teke said all evidence dovetailed with the confessions made by the two CNI agents.

But threads of the mystery continued to unravel. Newspapers quoted police sources as saying the two agents had implicated CNI officials in Arica, including the head of the office there, Maj. Juan Delmas.

Police later confirmed Delmas disappeared just as they began looking for him. On June 16, the 36-year-old officer's body was found in a car nine miles south of Arica, a bullet hole in his right temple.

Officers said $333,000 of the missing money was found in the car.

But reporters in Arica created new headlines with some stunning details: They said that no bullet was found in Delmas' body or in the car and that he was lefthanded, making it unlikely he would have shot himself in the right side of the head.

Speculation grew that Delmas had been murdered. Then his body disappeared from the morgue. Officials first had no comment, then announced the body had been buried in Arica's cemetery. Reporters found the gravesite empty.

On Monday the CNI announced Delmas had committed suicide, that a .38-caliber bullet had been found in his head and that the body was indeed in the Arica cemetery.

Officials have also reported the arrests of Delmas' deputy in Arica, Juan Arenas Cortes; Hernandez' brother, Gerardo; Villanueva's cousin, Daniel, and Francisco Javier Diaz, a taxi driver. Police said the arrests turned up stolen pesos worth $765,956, but refused to say why they had made the arrests.

Officers said the break in the case came when Villanueva and Hernandez were stopped at a checkpoint near the Peruvian border; driving a Pontiac listed on a "hot sheet." Police say a search of the car turned up $10,926 worth of stolen pesos.

This case has touched off a public outcry not seen in Chile since the 1973 coup that toppled President Salvador

Allende and brought Augusto Pinochet to power.

One group of lawyers has called for disbanding the CNI, created in 1976 to replace the intelligence agency that was implicated in the 1976 bomb slaying in Washington, D.C., of Orlando Letelier, an Allende loyalist.

The newspaper Ultimas Noticias, in an unusual front-page editorial, called for closer supervision of the agency, saying the affair shows "there is no doubt that CNI personnel should be examined and their pasts checked with a microscope."

Justice Minister Monica Madariaga said she hoped the two agents who confessed to the killings receive the severest penalty possible, "and if that means the death penalty, that would be fine."

President Pinochet said that if Hernandez and Villanueva get the death penalty they could expect no mercy from him.

The State Bank is looking for the rest of its missing money.

Secrets of pyramid power revealed

By MADELEINE JACOBS

A scientist at the Smithsonian Institution may have solved at least one of the mysteries of the Pyramids of Giza — why they, unlike the other Seven Wonders of the Ancient World, are still standing for all to admire.

The answer, Dr. Farouk El-Baz says, lies in the engineering and scientific acumen of the ancient Egyptians. These clever builders, he believes, constructed the towering monuments in the image of natural landforms that were already resistant to wind-erosion.

"Had the ancients built their monuments in the shape of a cube, a high-rise building like those of our cities, a pentagon or even a stadium, they would have been eroded by the ravages of wind erosion long ago," El-Baz writes in the current issue of Smithsonian magazine.

"Instead, they chose the pyramid shape, which evades destruction by leading the wind up slope and funneling its erosive power to the peak where its energy dissipates into the air."

NATURAL PYRAMIDS — The Pyramids of Giza? Not quite. These monumental look-alikes in the Western Desert of Egypt were created not by man but rather by natural geological processes. Towering 200 feet high, the natural pyramids are exceptionally resistant to wind erosion, according to Farouk El-Baz of the Smithsonian Institution. El-Baz believes that the ancient Egyptians constructed their towering structures in the image of such natural landforms, which explains why the Pyramids of Giza have withstood the ravages of wind.

DISCOVERY — This 4-foot high, sphinx-like natural landform was discovered by the Smithsonian's Farouk El-Baz in the Western Desert of Egypt. The Sphinx of ancient Egypt, he believes, may have originated as a wind-stable landform, "dressed up" by the Egyptian builders.

El-Baz, a geologist and director of the Center for Earth and Planetary Studies at the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum in Washington, D.C., came to this conclusion after a number of years of exploration in the Egyptian deserts.

In the Western Desert of Egypt — part of the driest tract of land on Earth — El-Baz has seen numerous landforms that are startling in their resemblance to the pyramids in the Nile Valley, startlingly particularly because these forms have been created not by man but rather by natural geological processes. Moreover, these natural pyramids have been exposed to and withstood the action of the wind for hundreds of thousands of years.

El-Baz believes it is not surprising that apparently no one has made the connection between natural and man-made pyramids until now.

"An expert looks at nature and thinks immediately how to modify it for the benefit of man, rather than trying to learn a lesson from it," the geologist explains.

"This idea has certainly been cooking in my head for a long time. I looked at some of these structures over and over again before I made the connection. But it now seems obvious to me that the ancient Egyptians must have studied such natural desert structures before deciding on the form of their towering monuments."

The first and largest true pyramid, the so-called Great Pyramid, was built by the Pharaoh Khufu (Cheops) about 4,500 years ago. An awesome engineering achievement, its four-sided plan covers 13 acres. At a height of 482 feet, it is one of the largest buildings ever erected by man and, until the Eiffel Tower was constructed in 1889, it was the highest man-made structure in the world.

Despite their age, the pyramids are still shrouded in mystery, and many scholars disagree about their original function and how they were actually built.

"Whatever else they may be, the pyramids are a tribute to the ancients' keen knowledge of their environment and resources, El-Baz maintains.

"The Egyptians of the past appear to have learned more about the desert than their modern counterparts," he writes. "They mastered desert exploration and exploitation of building materials. They combed the Eastern Desert and the Sinai for precious metals... (they) roamed the Western Desert terrain and left their mark."

During these explorations, he believes, they must have seen many natural pyramidal and conical landforms, as El-Baz himself did on several journeys in the late 1970s into the Egyptian deserts. On one such trip, he saw firsthand how nature's pyramids resist the wind.

In March and April, he explains, the wind in Egypt's deserts shifts direction. Normally, the winds blow in the general direction of north to south, but during the windy season, the winds blow generally from south to north.

This spring wind carries enormous quantities of debris and redistributes the sand even as it erodes obstacles in its way, El-Baz says. A strong gust of wind lifts fine dust from the pebbles and sand grains on the desert surface and hurls it upward toward existing conical and pyramidal hills. The velocity of the dust cloud increases as it approaches the hill, releasing its energy into the air at the apex.

The existence of these natural landforms may also help explain some of the mysteries surrounding the unprecedented magnitude of the pyramids' construction and the manner in which they were built, El-Baz says.

French native turns into American cowboy

MESQUITE, Texas (AP) — Charles Beyssier dresses like a cowboy, rides like a cowboy and, like all good cowboys, has a rodeo championship to his credit. But he still has a hard time convincing some people that he's a cowboy.

"I had to show one guy my (Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association membership) card this morning before he believed I was a bronc rider," Beyssier said.

What's the problem? It's his French accent — something not often heard in rodeo circles.

His nationality has set him apart from other cowboys ever since he earned his full-time professional status in 1976 — four years after he came to America.

Before that, when he was growing up in France, his only exposure to cowboys was on the television.

"I would see as many cowboy movies as I could," he said. "In France, Thursday used to be an off day in school. So all the theaters in town would show cowboy movies for the kids. Some would have French subtitles; others would be translated into French."

When he was 22, Beyssier hitchhiked to Les Saintes Marie De La Mer in Southern France, where rodeos were held. It was there that he rode his first bull.

In 1969, he got a chance to study the riding techniques of American cowboys when Buster Ivory, a rodeo producer from Pampa, Texas, brought a touring company to Paris.

Ivory was unable to continue a European tour as he had planned and ended up selling all his horses to the rodeo in Beyssier's hometown.

For the next three years, Beyssier rode continually in the French rodeo.

In June 1972, he set out for America and went to El Paso, Texas, where he saw his first rodeo in the States.

"I got to talk to a lot of cowboys," he said. "I asked a lot of questions. It was just great."

He competed in rodeos part time, holding down other jobs, until 1976, when he won $1,000, qualifying him for full-time status.

In 1977 he won the season bronc riding championship at Mesquite, Texas, but the next year, after getting bucked off his first rodeo at the first major rodeo of the season, he started having doubts about continuing.

"I was riding terrible," he said. "I was doing nothing right. Mainly, I think I was just homesick. I hadn't been home about six years."

Go home, he did. But home wasn't as he had remembered.

"Nothing was the same in my hometown. The rodeo was gone. And mostly I found people not to be as friendly as I had become accustomed to in Texas," he said.

So in January of this year, Beyssier came back to Mesquite and began working at rodeo champion Don Gay's rodeo school.

He says he likes the work but has the same problem he's had all along: getting people to believe he's a real cowboy.

"Just the other day one of his students walked up to Beyssier with a dubious look on his face.

"You mean you're a bronc rider?" he asked me. I think with my French accent I really had the guy confused," Beyssier said. "So I just had to prove it to him."

NATO's nuke plans inspire peace movement

BONN, West Germany (AP) — NATO's plans to station U.S. nuclear missiles in Europe has given birth to the Peace Movement in West Germany.

It has never organized formally, and its loosely knit ranks include clergymen, students, housewives and soldiers whose politics range from right to far left. Its name evolved from its aim — to kill the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's plan to deploy 572 medium-range American nuclear missiles in Western Europe, starting in 1983, as a counter force to Soviet missiles already in place in the East.

The Peace Movement also has begun to question West Germany's alliance with the United States and its role as NATO's main forward base.

It threatens to undermine Chancellor Helmut Schmidt's government as well as the Western alliance's plans for increasing military strength in Western Europe.

Supporters of the NATO plan claim the U.S. weapons are necessary to offset Soviet SS-20 missiles, which can deliver nuclear warheads to targets throughout Western Europe.

According to the Western plan, NATO would try to negotiate an arms-control agreement with the Soviet Union before the missiles are deployed.

But members of the Peace Movement claim that the Reagan administration's harsh criticism of the Soviet Union casts doubt on U.S. willingness to negotiate. Therefore the U.S. missiles, they maintain, would be a dangerous escalation of the arms race and could make Germany a nuclear battleground if the Soviets make a pre-emptive strike.

Pacifism in West Germany can be traced back to the end of World War II, when many Germans were revolted by

Controller's settlement may crash

WASHINGTON (AP) - The tentative settlement that averted a strike by the nation's air traffic controllers may never get off the ground, some controllers say.

If the proposed contract fails to win ratification, the government and the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization would have to resume negotiating, and the threat of a walkout that could ground half the country's commercial air traffic might loom again.

The PATCO executive board was reported meeting today at an undisclosed location. At the top of the agenda was the question of whether to endorse the tentative agreement, scheduled to be mailed out for ratification next week, and whether to try to sell it to the union's nearly 15,000 members.

Results of ratification voting were not expected before mid-July. Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis told a congressional hearing Thursday that the government will not budge from its contract package, saying "that's all we have to offer."

Union president Robert E. Poli agreed to the $40 million wage and benefits package after a lengthy bargaining session that began last Sunday and stretched into Monday. He later called it "a good package for us," considering present economic conditions.

The government said the package would give controllers a 6.6 percent increase in wages and benefits above the 4.8 percent pay increase that all government employees will get this year.

Union officials say a major reason Poli accepted the government's offer was the union's failure to get strike approval from 80 percent of its membership. The union sought such a majority to make sure it had enough backing for a strike that would have been illegal.

Air controllers, as government employees, are barred by law from striking. In the voting late Sunday and early Monday, while negotiations were still under way, about 75 percent approved a strike.

Some leaders of union locals around the country have been quick to blast the tentative contract.

"We have been in communication with other controllers around the country, and the indication is that not one controller in New York, Washington or anywhere else will ratify this contract," declared regional strike benefits coordinator Dennis Partridge in Los Angeles.

All of the controllers would not receive the 6.6 percent increase since that figure includes increases in the premium pay for night and weekend work as well as money provided for controllers who are medically disqualified.

The union had wanted $10,000 across-the-board annual pay raise and a reduction in the work week from 40 hours to 32 hours, a reduction it did not win. Controllers now average about $34,000 a year.

Brooke Shields defends her anti-smoking campaign

WASHINGTON (AP) — Teen star Brooke Shields, who had cigarettes sticking out of her ears in a $68,000 anti-smoking ad campaign which the Reagan administration aborted, told Congress today that "I feel the commercials are very good."

She added: "You really can't say anything about them except that they do get their point across."

"Unlike roles where I portray others under the instructions of directors, doing the smoking commercials was not really portraying a role. That was me saying it."

"I don't smoke and I never have, except once when I had one cigarette when I was 9. I hated it. I told my mother immediately that I felt terrible."

Miss Shields testified before the House Energy and Commerce Committee's subcommittee on oversight and investigations, which is looking into the cancellation of the ad campaign.

She also told the subcommittee: "I think I am a very effective spokesperson to teenagers."

She added that "I am a teenager myself and not only can I relate to other teenagers, but I think they can relate to me. It is certainly worth a try to give me a chance to relay a message as important as this one."

Richard Schweiker, secretary of Health and Human Services, has said his agency canceled the ad campaign because it was thought to be ineffective.

The decision last month by the Department of Health and Human Services to drop its sponsorship of the ads has made the 16-year-old Miss Shields, best known for her role as a child prostitute in the movie "Pretty Baby" and her provocative ads for jeans, a cause celebre in smoking circles.

Because of a dispute between Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., the chairman, and Schweiker, no one was scheduled to appear for the government.

Dingell wanted to privately interview the Schweiker aides who scuttled the ads, but Schweiker insisted that an observer from his legislative office sit in on any interviews. Dingell rejected that arrangement, saying it "would impede the ability of the Congress to carry out its investigatory responsibilities."
